If war could settle anthing, the Europeans ought to be living like lambs in the fold. Since the first Punic War of 260 B.C., Europe has had 2,200 years of war. As for Germany and France, Julius Caesar found that in 72 B.C., the Germans had crossed the Rhine and were attacking Alsace. Since then this territory has been swinging back and forth between the two. Some now living has seen it changed three times: in 1871, 1918, 1940, with most likely a fourth in 1944.

SOME LEFT-HAND BENEFITS OF WAR

However, there are certain left-hand benefits of war. For instance, when two rival gangs of hoodlums start cancelling one another, as did Murder, Inc., of New York, the citizens, their common victims, do benefit. The same is true when rival economic systems start destroying one another as in this war. In such a case, the victims, the darker races and the smaller white nations do benefit.

RISE OF COLOR

However, Northern Europe which as late as 1200 A. D., was not as far advanced as say the Basutos of South Africa are now, began slowly to take the lead. Note that this was destiny. Civilization had been working its way westward for 3,000 years and Northern Europe's time had come to plague the world as Rome and the rest had done. Note, too, that by this time, the dark-skinned elements in Northern Europe had been almost bred out, leaving it so-called white.

IT WAS THIS color of humanity that rose to power soon after the discovery of the New World, at which time the present world development really began. Since most of the rest of humanity was dark, the white skin could be used as a symbol to exploit the rest. It was actually a gift from God because in lands, as say Russia and Poland, where a people like the Jews were also white, some mark had to be worn on the clothes to distinguish them. On the other hand, the black man's color was fixed. In the natural process it would take a hundred thousand years to change. Yes, it was a gift.

NOTHING TO GAIN FROM RACE WAR

And so a color caste, which had all the fanaticism of any religion you could name, arose to plague dark humanity. But just as there was a time when the white man was nothing at all and darker-skinned man was everything, so now the pendulum is swinging back again.

AND HOW IS this being brought about? White superiority, breaker of the moral law, is cancelling itself just as common gangsters do. The last war was the result of rivalry between England and Germany for world markets, chiefly the untapped resources of Africa. The issues of this war are too many to be thus summarized, but here again we find the big white powers engaged in cancelling their own power. And already there is even talk of a third war to settle the race problem. But, for my part, I do hope that the wiser heads of England and the United States, the chief promoters of a color line—because Hitler will be soon out of the way—will see that they have nothing to gain and everything to lose by continuing thus.

SLAVES ROSE TO TO BE EMPERORS

In any case, we are slowly but surely getting back to the days of ancient Rome, Greece and Islam, when a man was a man, and worth, not color, counted most. In Rome, while a slave was hardly better than a dog, slaves sometimes rose to be emperors. In Catholic Spain and Portugal, a Moslem or a Jew could change his religion and get an opportunity. But white civilization insists you must change your color, which is impossible.

SURELY, THE color-line, the world's greatest idiocy, cannot survive, but must fall sooner or later.

AWARDS OF THE DISTINGUISHED SERVICE CROSS

Awarded for extraordinary heroism in action under the provisions of the act of Congress approved July 9. 1918)

ALL OF THE FOREGOING AWARDS WERE GIVEN IN 1918

NAME	ORGANIZATION	PLACE OF ACHIEVEMENT
Pfc. Robert M. Breckenridge	Co. H. 365th Inf.	Ferme de Bel-Air, France
Cpl. Russell Pollard	Co. H. 365th Inf.	Bois-Frehault, France
Pvt. George Bell	Co. E. 366th Inf.	Lesseau, France
Sgt. Roy A. Brown	Co. E. 366th Inf.	Lesseau, France
Pfc. Will Clincy	Co. F. 366th Inf.	Frapelle, France
Pvt. Alex Hammond	Co. E. 366th Inf.	Lesseau, France
Cpl. Van Horton	Co. E. 366th Inf.	Lesseau, France
Pvt Edward L. Merrifield	Co. E. 366th Inf.	Lesseau, France
Pvt. Tom Rivers	Co. G. 366th Inf.	Bois-de-la-Voivrotte, France
Pvt. Joe Williams	Co. E. 366th Inf.	Lesseau, France
Pvt. John Baker	Co. I. 368th Inf.	Binarville, France
Pfc. Thomas H. Davis	San. Det. 368th Inf.	Binarville, France
Pfc. Edward H. Handy	Co. B. 368th Inf.	Binarville, France
Pvt. Joseph James	Hq. Co. 368th Inf.	Binarville, France
Pvt. Bernard Lewis	Co. A. 368th Inf.	Binarville, France
Pfc. Lewis Watkins	Co. A. 350th M. G. Bat.	Eply, France
Sgt. William Butler	Co. L. 369th Inf.	Maison-de-Champagne, France
Cpl. Elmer Earl	Co. K. 369th Inf.	Ripont Swamp, France
Pvt. Elmer McCowin	Co. K. 369th Inf.	Ripont Swamp, France
Pvt. William Sandford	Med. Det. 369th Inf.	Ripont River, France
Sgt. Robert Barnes	Co. L. 370th Inf.	Mont de Singes, France
Pvt. William Cuff	2nd M. G. Co., 370th Inf.	Mont-de-Sanges, France
Pvt. Leroy Davis	Co. L. 370th Inf.	Mont-de-Sanges, France
Sgt. Lester Fossie	Co. M. 370th Inf.	Ferme-de-la Riviere, France
Pvt. James Fuquay	Co. H. 370th Inf.	Guillimet Farm, France
Sgt. Ralph Gibson	Co. H. 370th Inf.	Beaume, France
Pvt. Willie G. Hurdle	3rd M. G. Co. 370th Inf.	Ferme La Folie, France
Pvt. Spirley E. Irby	Co. H. 370th Inf.	Beaume, France
Sgt. Matthew Jenkins	Co. F. 370th Inf.	Vauxaillon, France
Pvt. Arthur Johnson	Hq. Co. 370th Inf.	Mont des Singes, France
Pvt. Andy McCall	M. G. Co. 370th Inf.	Ferme de la Riviere, France
Pvt. Charles T. Monroe	Hq. Co. 370th Inf.	Mont-de-Sanges, France
Pvt. Harry L. Pearson	M. G. Co. 370th Inf.	Ferme La Folie, France
Pvt. Tom Powell	Co. H. 370th Inf.	Beaume, France
Cpl. Emmett Thompson	Co. L. 370th Inf.	Mont-de-Sanges, France
Cpl. Isaac Valley	Co. M. 370th Inf.	Vraincourt, France
Pvt. Alonzo Wal[illegible]	3rd M. G. Co. 370th Inf.	Rue Larcher and Pont-d'Any, France
Pfc. Nathaniel C. White	Co. F. 370th Inf.	Vauxaillon, France
Pfc. Alfred Williamson	Med. Det. 370th Inf.	Beaume, France
Pvt. Willie Boston	M. G. Co. 371st Inf.	Ardeuil, France
Pvt. Reuben Burrell	M. G. Co. 371st Inf.	Champagne sector, France
Pvt. Charles Butler	M. G. Co. 371st Inf.	Ardeuil, France
Sgt. Thomas Cooper	Co. K. 371st Inf.	Trieres Farm, France
Pvt. Junius Diggs	Co. G. 371st Inf.	Ardeuil, France
Pvt. Burton Holmes	Co. C 371st Inf.	Near Hill 188, France
Cpl. Sandy E. Jones	Co. C. 371st Inf.	Near Champagne, France
Sgt. Lee R. McClelland	Med. Det. 371st Inf.	Ardeuil, France
Pvt. Ellison Moses	Co. G. 371st Inf.	Ardeuil, France
Pvt. Malley Stewart	Hq. Co. 371st Inf.	Near Bussy Farm, France
Pvt. Bruce Stoney	Med. Det. 371st Inf.	Ardeuil, France
Pvt. Tillman Webster	M. G Co. 371st Inf.	Ardeuil, France
Pvt. Clifford Crawford	Hq. Co. 372nd Inf.	Near Bussy Farm, France
Pvt. George Gross	Co. D. 372nd Inf.	Near Sechault, France
Pvt. Samuel H. Johns	Co. L. 372nd Inf.	Near Bussy Farm, France
Pvt. Clifton Merrimon	Col. L. 372nd Inf.	Near Bussy Farm, France
Sgt. Ira M. Payne	Co. A. 372nd Inf.	Near Sechault, France
Pvt. Clarence R. Van Allen	Col. L. 372nd Inf.	Near Bussy Farm, France

DEC 4 1943
DEC 11 1943
470

471-1943
Kansas City Call
Kansas City, Mo.
MAY 21 1943

Camp Housing Project Named for Dr. Carver

MAY 21 1943

ARRABELLE, Fla.—(ANP) —Named in honor of Tuskegee institute's late eminent scientist Dr. George Washington Carver, Camp Gordon Johnston's new brick housing project for colored military and civilian personnel is located on the Gulf of Mexico in a spot of scenic beauty five miles from this town and is scheduled for occupancy May 15.

The project consists of 20 buildings comprising 134 dwelling units; 30 war efficiency units of a kitchenette and combined living-bedroom, 42 one-bedroom units, 42 two-bedroom units, and 20 three-bedroom units. In addition, there will be a commercial center composed of a dry cleaning establishment, tailor shop, shoe repair shop, barber and beauty shop, and a drug store together with ample parking facilities. There will also be a community building with a portable stage and cooking facilities for recreational purposes.

Post Commanding Officer Col Walter E. Smith, in officially naming it the Carver apartments, stated "I know of no man who has been greater credit to his race than Dr. George Washington Carver. The world of agriculture and chemistiry has received inestimable benefit from this man's scientific achievements."

Representing the FPHA is project manager William C. Owens; contractor is Paul Smith Construction Co., of Tampa, Fla.; and Young and Hart, Pensacola, Fla., are the architects.

Conversion Of Negro Units Is Requested

Courier-Journal

Dalton Says Need For Housing Is Acute

Louisville, Ky.

AUG 5 1943

A special appeal to owners of property for Negro housing to consult federal agencies with the idea of converting the housing into multiple units, was made yesterday by Roscoe R. Dalton, state director of the Federal Housing Administration, in a talk over radio station WAVE.

He pointed out that need for war-worker housing still is acute in the Louisville area and explained the plan by which the Federal Government leases property, converts it to multiple units and pays the cost returning to the owner an agreed rental. The property reverts to the owner after the war.

The War Housing Center, 506 W. Jefferson, is a clearing agency for war housing in this area and will route to the proper authorities or deal with any inquiry about the present plans for producing more housing units.

Thus far, 217 applications have been submitted to this agency; fifty-five involving about 475 units have gone to the architects and plans have been completed for nineteen applications involving about seventy-five units.

AUG 5 1943

Lanham Act Aids Many Communities

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia
MAY 12 1943

MAY 12 1943

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(SNS)—Forty-four war nurseries and child care centers to care for more than 1,800 children of Negro war workers' mothers were among those approved last week by the President, according to an announcement by Major General Phillip B. Fleming, Federal Works Administrator. These nurseries and child care centers are made available under the Lanham Act to communities where mothers must work in order to meet the manpower needs in direct and indirect war industries.

MAY 12 1943

Approximately half of the operating cost of these facilities is defrayed by the sponsors and parents and the Federal government provides the balance.

In order to be certain that the needs of all war working mothers are being considered Mrs. Florence Kerr, FWA Director of War Public Services issued instructions to all regional directors calling their attention to the non-discrimination clause in the Lanham Act and also to the general policy of the Federal Works Agency. It is required that specific information on the needs of the Negro population be presented in all applications from those sections of the country where separate facilities are required by law.

MORE IN SOUTHEAST

The latest allotments went to communities in Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Maryland, Mississippi, North Carolina, Tennessee, Virginia and West Virginia. Details follow:

Birmingham, Alabama, two war nurseries for 60 children; Florence, Alabama, one war nursery for 30 children; Jasper, Alabama, one war nursery for 30 children. Montgomery, Alabama, four war nurseries for 120 children; Tallahassee, Florida, three war nurseries and two child care centers for approximately 200 children.

MAY 12 1943

Columbus, Georgia, two combination war nurseries and child care centers for 150 children; Savannah, Georgia, four war nurseries and two child care centers for 200 children; Elizabethtown, Kentucky, one war nursery for 30 children; Baltimore County, Maryland, Two war nurseries for 60 children; Bay St. Louis, Mississippi, one war nursery and one child care center for 120 children; Charlotte, North Carolina, two war nurseries for 60 children.

MAY 12 1943

Elizabeth City, North Carolina, two war nurseries for 60 children. Raleigh, North Carolina, three war nurseries for 120 children; Clarksville, Tennessee, two war nurseries for 60 children; Cleveland, Tennessee, one war nursery and one child care center for 200 children; Kingsport, Tennessee, two war industries for 60 children; Newport News, Virginia, two war nurseries for 60 children; Huntington, West Virginia, two combination war nurseries and child care centers for 200 children.

REALTOR OF NEW YORK PLANS TO BUILD FOR NEGRO

Monroe, N. C. Journal
1943

Will Soon Break Ground in Baltimore For Two and Half Million Project

PRIVATE ENTERPRISE

On the theory that proper housing is basic to the education and general uplift of the Negro race and provides a plausible answer to post-war Negro problems, Joseph P. Day, realty operator of New York City, has launched private capital into large-scale Negro housing for the first time on the outskirts of Baltimore, Md.

Through the organization of a private construction corporation, the Day interests will break ground soon on a $2,500,000 housing venture to be known as "Day Village", a community that will provide for four and a half room units for 500 families of Negroes now working at the Sparrows Point plant of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation.

National Implications

The plan, itself, is local in character, but it has broad national implications in the fact that for the first time private investors will take Negro housing out of the cold, institutional atmosphere which Mr. Day says necessarily goes with Federally operated projects.

Rather than being a "fly-by-night" venture dropped into the housing picture by a wartime emergency only, "Day Village" will prove the culmination of exhaustive studies designed to disprove the ancient financial bugaboo that Negro housing cannot be conducted by private enterprise on a reasonable profit basis.

At the same time, Mr. Day expressed the humanitarian motive in turning to Negro housing in these words: "My feeling is that the Negro should first be properly housed, and then be educated how to live and conduct himself in accordance with his improved surroundings. In the light of critical housing shortages, and because of the increasing unrest of Negroes, there is need for the development of a community or communities for this race which offers all the facilities and accommodations found in the average white community."

"Day Village" will depart from the general procedure of building houses for Negroes simply to provide shelter. That procedure has resulted, according to the Day interests, in the substandard housing in which thousands of Negroes are living today. Many of them, because of their lack of economic opportunities, have had to live in antiquated buildings passed down to them by the whites. Mr. Day reasons that these conditions simply indicate lack of planning for the Negroes.

These conditions will be reversed under the housing program contemplated by Mr. Day. The Negroes will be housed in new communities with a new sense of freedom and elimination from regimentation, he said. They will be housed, presumably, on a higher plane in most instances than their economic opportunities justify. But home to them will become a new inspiration, encouraging the Negro to strive to attain higher esonomic levels. In this way, housing becomes part of the Negroes' education for better things, Mr. Day affirmed.

No Crowding

At "Day Village" there will be no crowding, Buildings will be landscaped and maintained. There will be ample parking space for automobiles, numerous playgrounds, a bathing beach restricted to tenants of the community, boating, handball courts, tennis courts, motion picture theater, and community house, thus operating as a self-contained garden community. Buildings will be of masonry construction, as good or better than prewar housing for the middle class.

Something more than the profit-motive was demanded by this venture. There had to be the will to do a job thoroughly for the welfare of the prospective tenants. There had to be farsighted vision and faith in the potential talents of the Negro to fit himself into the general pattern of American living standards. This faith is possessed by Mr. Day, who volunteered the opinion: "This is only the beginning of better things to come for these people."

Washington Post
Washington, D. C.

Appeal for More Negro Housing Bearing Fruit

Immediate response to a city-wide appeal by Marvin Wire, War Housing Center director, for the opening of more rooms and homes to Negro warworkers here came Friday when H. G. Anderson of 1301 [illegible] Street Northeast walked into the Center at Pennsylvania Avenue and Fourteenth Street to give proof of his desire to help remedy what is fast becoming a dangerous situation.

JUN 13 1943

Anderson told attendants that he had read the story in yesterday's Post describing the plight of hundreds of Negroes for whom virtually no living space was available in Washington, and decided to act at once to "do my share."

As a result, additional accommodations for eight Negro persons are now listed with the center.

Meanwhile, The Post learned that Wire has met with principals and superintendents of all Negro schools in the Washington area, in an effort to enlist their aid in alleviating the severe shortage of homes for Negro workers and their families.

JUN 19 1943

ARMY TO CURB DISCRIMINATION

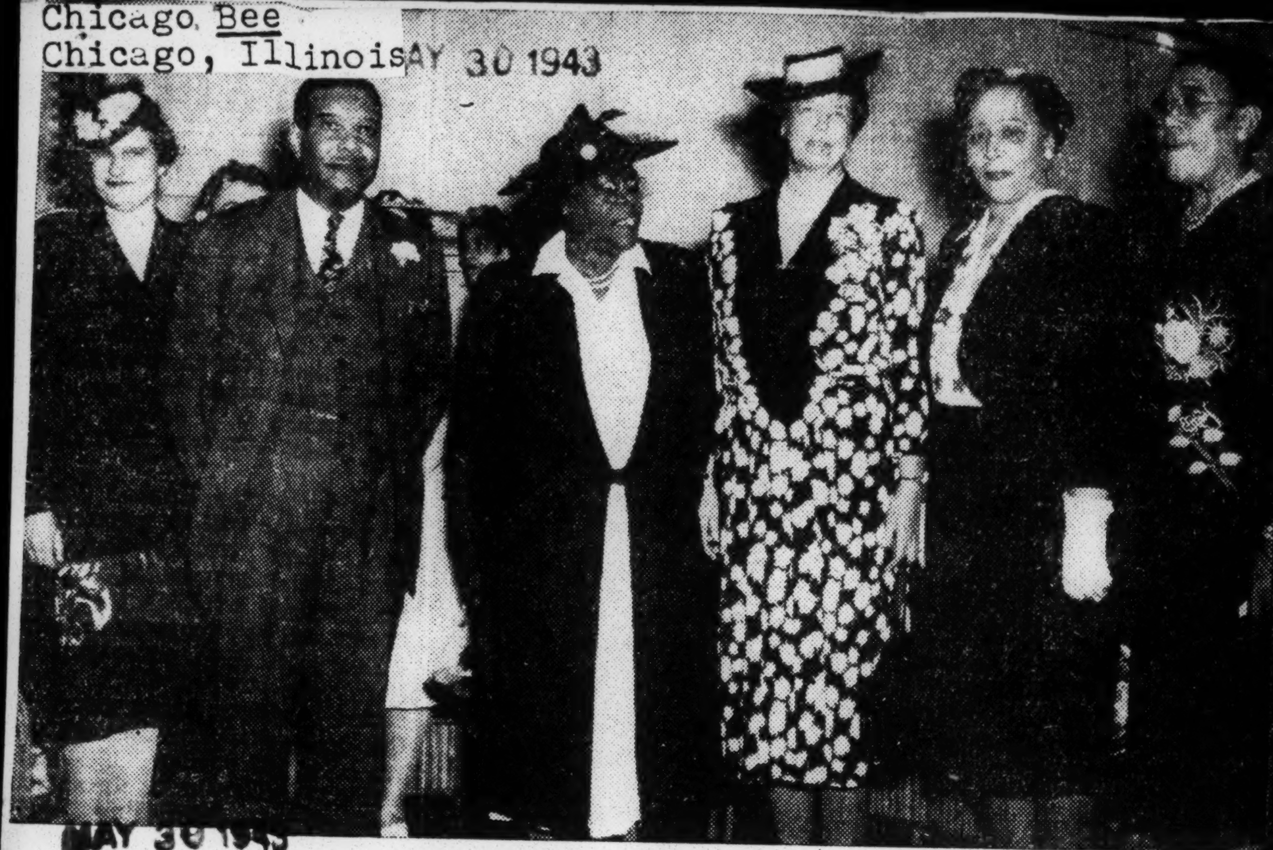
Pittsburgh, Pa. Courier

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 1—As a result of the complaints concerning discrimination against Negro soldiers on trains, Truman K. Gibson, Jr., Acting Civilian Aide to Secretary of War, announced this week that the whole problem of transportation is now being studied by the Assistant Secretary of War.

The NAACP had protested to the War Department that many places of public resorts near army camps discriminate against Negro soldiers by refusing to serve them.

Gibson has advised the NAACP that he has requested Commanders to change the conditions and that while places of public accommodations in civilian communities are not within the jurisdiction of the Army, the Department of War will make an effort to change the conditions "by persuasion."

Chicago Bee
Chicago, Illinois MAY 30 1943



MAY 30 1943

AT DEDICATION OF WAKE AND MIDWAY HALLS, federal dormitories for war workers in Washington, D. C., Mrs. Roosevelt addressed a large audience and met the builder of the project, Samuel Plato. Shown (left to right) are Mrs. Elnora Plato and her husband, Samuel Plato; Dr. Mary McLeod Bethune, head of NYA War Training Work for Negroes; Mrs. Roosevelt, Mrs. Robert G. McGuire, former member of the Board of Education of the District of Columbia, and Miss Gertrude Brown, resident manager of Wake Hall.—(Official OWI Photo).

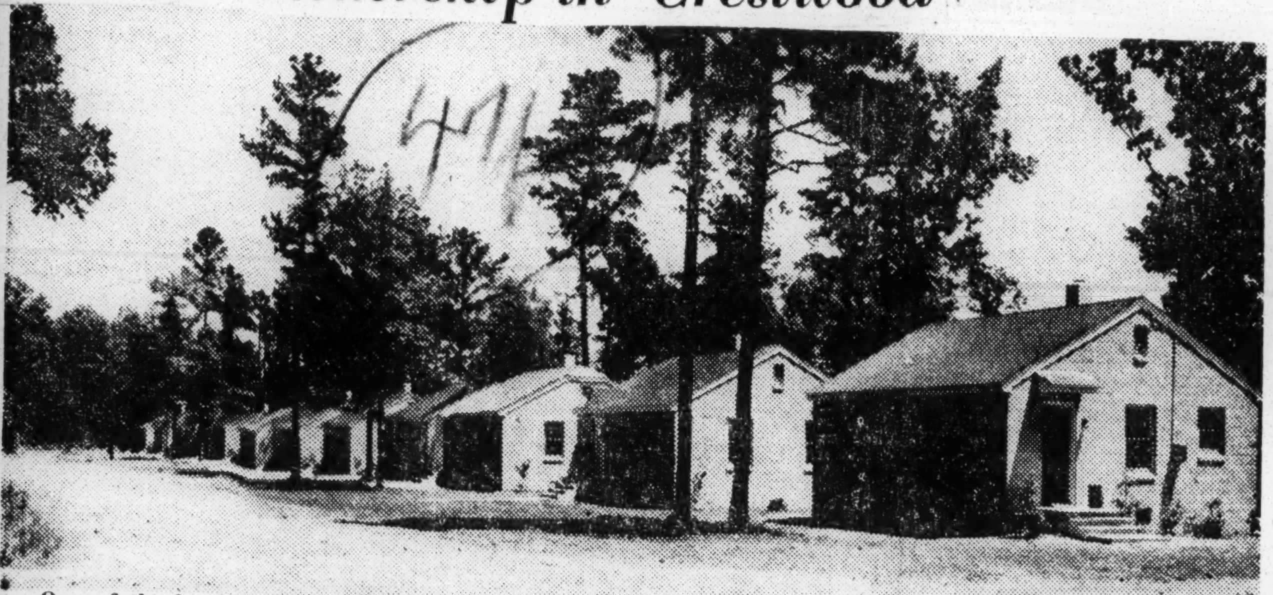
474

MAY 30 1943

CONGRATULATED ON THE NEATNESS of her home by America's first lady, Miss Thelma Ball, formerly of Philadelphia, but now employed by the Selective Service National headquarters, smiles broadly as Mrs. Roosevelt claps her hand. Miss Ball is a resident of the Lucy D. Slowe Hall.

474

Pride of Ownership in 'Crestwood'



474

474

One of the largest housing developments in the United States provided by private capital for Negro occupancy is Crestwood, situated in the fork of Southern Branch and Great Bridge roads, Norfolk County. Crestwood was started in 1937 with 53 small homes, more than half of which are owned now by the occupants. Beginning today, The Crestwood Company, Inc., is showing 225 new cinder block homes, each equipped with built-in kitchen, hot water, bath and coal heater. These houses may be rented or purchased by Negro war workers. Shown above are some of the new houses, and one of the old ones, whose owner has exemplified the community's civic pride with lawn plantings and a productive vegetable garden. (Photos by Borjes, Virginian-Pilot staff photographer.)

Houses Shown In 'Crestwood' For Negroes

Development Is Result of Six Years of Successful Experiment

After six years of successful experiment, "Crestwood," Norfolk's only large housing development in which Negroes are offered the opportunity of home ownership, has just been quadrupled in size, and the showing of new houses for rent or for purchase is being started today.

474

"Crestwood," which is situated on 118 acres of land in the forks of the Southern Branch and Great Bridge Roads, Norfolk County, has been developed since 1937 as a personal enterprise of Oscar F. Smith, partner of Smith-Douglas Company, Inc., fertilizer manufacturers, whose principal plant is on the Southern Branch not far from the village.

Spirit of Civic Pride

In the beginning, "Crestwood" was provided with 53 well-built small houses, each put on a lot of 50 by 100 feet, but so placed that additional lots were available for any tenants or purchasers who might want more land for gardens or beautification. These were constructed in 1937, and at the present time more than half of them have been purchased by their occupants, most of whom are old employes of the Smith-Douglass Company. A spirit of civic pride was grown among the neighborhood people, and some of the lawns and gardens now compare favorably with any to be found in the best new housing developments around Norfolk.

Following the beginning of the war boom, Mr. Smith opened his settlement for all Negro war workers, whether they worked for his company or not, and provided rental accommodations for 84 more families in 42 two-family duplex houses. Since then, many of the occupants of these houses have learned to like the community and have applied for detached houses which they might buy on terms as easy as any offered through FHA financing.

225 New Small Homes

Several months ago, the Crestwood Company, Inc., started the construction of 225 new small homes, built of cinder block, fully insulated, with built-in kitchens, baths, hot water and coal heaters. The contract was left to the Fairlawn Realty Company, of Roanoke, for building the houses, providing sewerage outfalls, building streets, etc.

These are the houses which will be on view at the opening of the new project today. Some of the houses have been completely furnished as models. Already the company has received many applications for rental and from persons interested in purchase, but assignments will not begin until tomorrow morning.

L. W. Simmons, secretary-manager of the project, said yesterday he has been assured by the Norfolk County school authorities that an elementary school has been approved for the "Crestwood" neighborhood, and construction of a building will be started shortly as an FWA project. He added that plans are being made to provide the community with a church and recreation hall. The company already has provided the building in which a privately owned store is being operated.

474

Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Virginia

FEDERAL WORKERS GET RECREATION CENTER

WASHINGTON (ANP) — The building adjoining and belonging to Lincoln Temple Congregational Church at the corner of 11th and R streets, N.W., has been leased by the government as a recreation center for government employes and soon will be thrown open to the public for use.

JUN 12 1943

47f-1943

New York Times
New York, N. Y.

FIRST LADY VIEWS HOUSING

MAY 19 1943

Takes Part in the Dedication of Residence for Negro Women

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, May 18 — Mrs. Roosevelt, after spending the afternoon in visits Federal housing facilities for government workers, spoke tonight at dedicatory exercises opening Midway, new residence hall at Twenty-fourth Street and Oklahoma Avenue, N. E., which, with Wake Hall, already open, comprises the Langston project for Negro women employed in the government.

Baird Snyder, Assistant Federal Works Administrator, was on the program, as were W. E. Reynolds, Commissioner of Public Buildings Administration, FWA; Herbert Emmerich, commissioner of the Federal Public Housing Authority, and Dr. Mary Bethune, director of Negro Affairs of the National Youth Administration, founder and president-emeritus of the Bethune Cookman College at Daytona Beach, Fla., and founder and president of the National Council of Negro Women. Roland Hayes sang.

MAY 19 1943

Mrs. Roosevelt was honored at a tea in Idaho, one of the Arlington Farms residence halls for women workers located near the Pentagon Building.

450-Unit Housing Job Awarded to Gadsden

A war housing program of 450 family dwelling units for construction by private enterprise in Gadsden, Ala., was approved yesterday by John B. Blandford Jr., National Housing Administrator.

Robert K. Creighton, regional representative, said the program provided units for 300 families of white workers and 150 families of Negro war workers to be brought into the Gadsden area.

Knoxville, Tenn. Journal
July 7, 1943

Building Permit Not Required By TVA

PHILADELPHIA, July 6 (AP)—U. S. District Judge J. Cullen Ganey ruled today that the Federal Housing Administration does not have to comply with local building regulations in the construction of either "permanent" or "temporary" houses.

The decision was handed down in a suit filed by Chester (Pa.) municipal authorities who arrested Renato D'Avito, New York, superintendent for the contractor, Domenico Lecascio, Pleasantville, N. Y., because the contractor had not obtained a building permit for the construction of 150 "temporary" homes for Negro workers.

Brunswick Gets 2,060 Family Housing Units

Approval of a private and public housing program for Brunswick by John B. Blandford Jr., administrator of the National Housing Agency, was announced here Thursday by Robert K. Creighton, regional NHA representative.

The program includes 2,060 family dwelling units to be occupied by in-migrant civilian workers at the J. A. Jones Construction Company shipyard, the Navy flying school, the lighter-than-air base and other war industries Creighton said.

A total of 300 family dwelling units are included in the private program, 200 of them for white occupancy in the $30-$40-a-month rent scale, and 100 for Negro occupancy at less than $30 per month.

The remaining 1,760 units will be developed by the U. S. Maritime Commission, Creighton said. One hundred and sixty of these will be for Negro occupancy.

Name Housing Project After Educator

Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Virginia

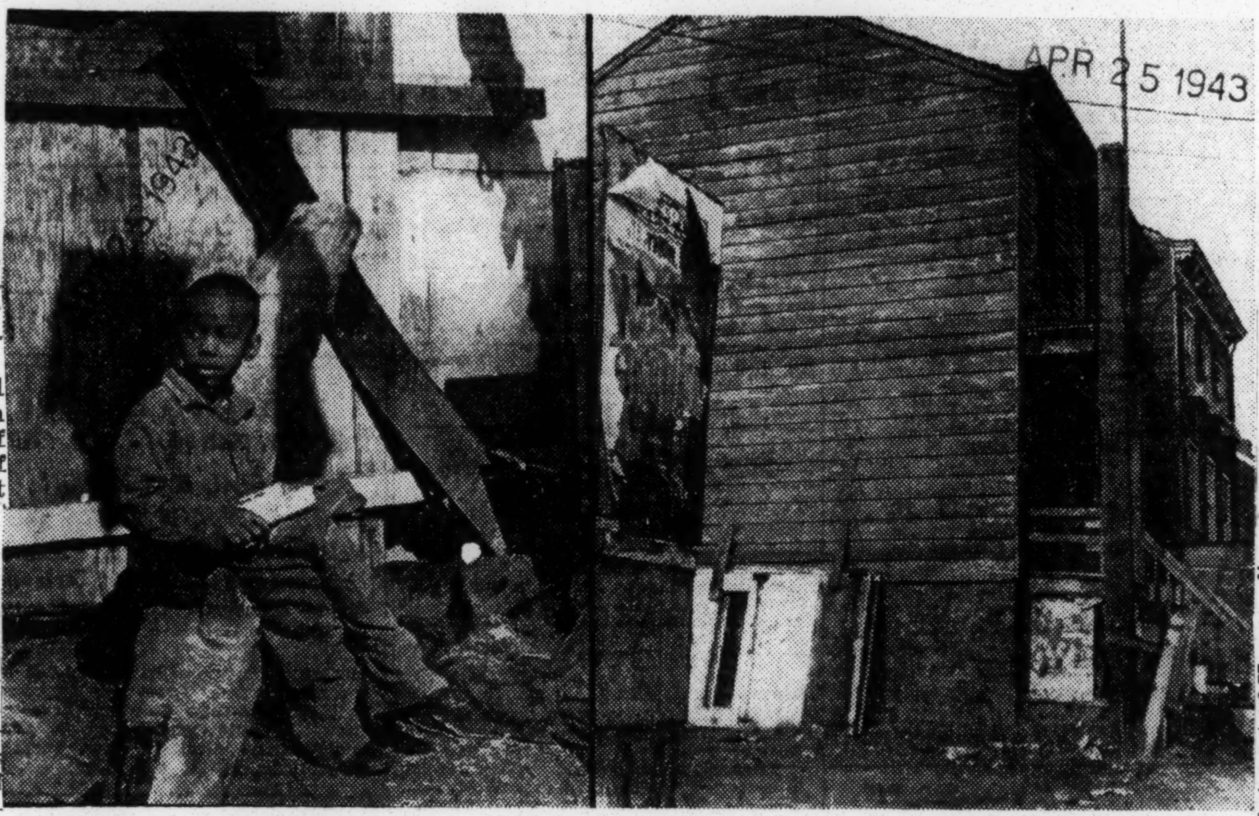
APR 3 1943

HUNTSVILLE, Ala.—(ANP)—Housing Authorities last week announced that the new housing subdivision for Negro employees of the Huntsville and Redstone arsenals, has been named Binford Court in honor of the memory of the late Prof. Henry C. Binford, who was superintendent of the Huntsville Negro public schools for 20 years.

APR 3 1943

The project houses are located on the western edge of Huntsville, and will consist of 38 houses with 220 dwelling units. They are scheduled to be completed in May at a cost of $352. 810.

Hundreds of Play-Yards Like This—and Hundreds of Homes Like This



APR 25 1943

"This is my place, mister, where I play," Junior Wiggins (left above) told The Worker photographer outside 133-36 41st Ave., Flushing, Queens. Junior sat on a log in the little "yard" on one side of the house. Another typical Negro war worker's home on the same street is shown (right). Here workers who make guns for democracy are Jim-Crowed into slums and hovels.

Queens War Workers Jim Crowed Into Slums

The Worker
New York, N. Y.

By Oakley Johnson

Flushing is one of the war industry centers of Queens, and Queens is the war center of Greater New York.

Flushing's Main Street is a crowded and bustling thoroughfare any day of the week. But the Negro war workers of Queens, whose slum dwellings are a stone's throw from Main Street, are jim-crowed into quarters ill-befitting those who produce weapons for the fighting fronts.

APR 25 1943

Walk along 40th Road or along 41st Ave., and you'll see a factory at the end of the block or the one nearby on Lawrence Ave., with a sign ordering workers to "Show your yellow pass," or a sign saying "Prohibited Military Zone." And in the very same block or the block adjoining you'll find dwelling houses that were condemned long ago by the housing authorities but are still rented for money.

Some of the houses have no gas, some no light. Many have no furnace heat but must be warmed by stoves. Most of them need painting and repairing.

To make it worse, there are desirable but empty apartments—even empty houses—a little distance away. But they're "restricted." Negro war workers can't live there. It's an old Queens custom.

Center of the Negro neighborhood here is "The Church of God in Christ" at 133-37 41st Ave. The sign is crudely lettered in white on a black-painted board. The church is an ordinary two-story frame building, the paint long since worn off, small windows, no porch. The front gable is rounded in a fashion suggesting an earnest effort to make the structure look distinguished. The building, clearly enough, is a firetrap.

Across from the church lives Mrs. Elizabeth Wiggins, a grandmother, who is thinking of moving back to North Carolina, things are so bad here.

APR 25 1943

Grandmother Wiggins is the mother of war worker James Wiggins, who pays $25 a month for the downstairs part of the house at 133-36 41st Ave., typical of many houses in this community. His wife and two small children—Junior and James, aged four and five—share the downstairs.

James Wiggins and his wife both work during the day, and were not at home when The Worker representative called, but Grandmother Wiggins was home, cooking and doing a washing and looking after James and Junior.

To understand just how things are, you have to get a close look at the house from the outside. It's a wooden frame affair, sitting flat on the ground, and rotting into the ground as the years go by. The basement often has standing water in it.

"The walls stayed wet all winter," Grandmother Wiggins said. "The whole house is damp. I'm sick myself, and I'm thinking of moving back to North Carolina. Junior here has bad tonsils and no appetite."

Grandmother Wiggins' washtub was mounted on a couple of wooden boxes. An arms length away was the old-fashioned cookstove, only source of heat during the winter except for the oil heater used when necessary in the bedroom.

The owner of this house, neighbors say, "lives in Florida." About a year ago progressive forces saw to it that the family occupying the house at that time was moved into the Jamaica government housing project, on the ground that this old rotting shack was condemned. But no sooner was the old tenant moved out than a new tenant was moved in—at $25 per.

It looks as if we need some wartime "conversion" in the Queens housing situation — in more senses than one.

APR 25 1943

FRAHN NAMED ARCHITECT ON U. S. HOUSING PROJECT

Federal Public Housing Authority announces the appointment of Harry J. Frahn, Sheffield, as architect for Project Ala-1213 War Housing consisting of 200 family units, community and commercial buildings, at Muscle Shoals for negro occupancy.

The project will be built across the Sparkman boulevard from the Reynolds Metals company's plants, and is for negro employees of both the Reynolds Metals company and the Reynolds Alloys company.

The plans call for a most modern and attractive village, which will fill a dire necessity for housing needed for the war production plants and will be a credit to the Muscle Shoals district. Plans will be ready for bids the latter part of the month.

Chicago Bee
Chicago, Illinois

CITY'S NEWEST HOMES HONOR NEGRO HERO

MAR 28 1943

Chicago's largest war housing project, the 834-unit Robert H. Brooks homes, opened its doors to the first war worker families Saturday. More than 3,500 persons, mostly Negro war worker families, will eventually be housed in the new homes located at 1233-45 So. Throop street.

The new development is named in honor of a Negro private of the U.S. armed forces who was killed on the first day of war in the Philippine Islands.

The first 18 war workers include employes of Chicago aircraft, iron and steel ordnance, and food processing industries, as well as a few civilian employes of the U.S. Army quartermaster and Signal Corps depots.

MAR 28 1943

Applications Still Received

Although the first dwellings opened Saturday morning, Elizabeth Wood, executive secretary of the Chicago Housing authority, revealed that applications are still being received for the remaining apartments at the authority's application and rental office. Only war workers families in need of housing whose incomes are $2,100 a year or less are eligible to move into these publicly operated war homes.

MAR 28 1943

In addition to the Robert H. Brooks Homes, which is the Chicago Housing Authority's third war housing and seventh public housing project to be opened in Chicago, war workers are still moving into the Frances Cabrini homes on the near north side.

MAR 28 1943

The dwellings at the Robert H. Brooks homes are a combination of one and two-story apartments built in 90 modern two-story row house type buildings. All buildings are of permanent construction and completely fire-proof. The apartments range in size from 2½ to 5½ rooms, with four bedrooms in the largest dwellings. Each unit is equipped with steam heat, hot and cold running water, a kitchen with an electric refrigerator and gas range, a modern bath; and each apartment has double exposure with windows in each room.

Rents Based on Income.

The rents for these new war homes have been graded from $20 to $38 a month so that the rate for each apartment depends upon the family's income. All rentals include heat, gas, and electricity.

MAR 28 1943

For example: war worker families whose incomes are between $1,800 and $2,100 a year will pay from $35 to $38 a month for the various size homes; those who earn between $1,500 and $1,600 a year will pay from $31 to $34 per month; those earning between $1,200 and $1,600 a year pay from $25 to $28 per month; and those who earn less than $1,200 a year will pay from $20.50 to $25 per month.

MAR 28 1943

Chicago Defender
Chicago, Illinois

Miss Mae C. Hawes of Washington, D. C., and Miss W. Gertrude Brown of Daytona Beach, Fla., have been appointed directors of Wake and Midway Halls, two residence halls for Negro women war workers in Washington, D. C., William J. Bissell, manager of Residence Halls of the Public Buildings Administration, Federal Works Agency, has announced. Both women have had wide experience in community organization and also have been directors of residence halls before.

MAR 27 1943
Mae C. Hawes

MISS W. GERTRUDE BROWN

Age-Herald
Birmingham, Ala.

TUSKEGEE HOUSING CONTRACT IS LET

ATLANTA, Aug. 3—(AP)—Awarding of a contract for construction of 40 housing units and community facilities at Tuskegee, Ala., to Contractor Algernon Blair, Montgomery, Ala., was announced Tuesday by J. P. Broome, regional director of the Federal Public Housing Authority.

AUG 4 1943

Broome said the cost of the war housing project, which must be completed within 60 days after Aug. 5, would be $86,000.

Atlanta, Ga., Constitution
September 3, 1943

Regional Director John P. Broome, of the Federal Public Housing Authority, yesterday announced award of a contract for the construction of 550 dwelling units and community facilities for Negro war workers in Charleston, S. C., at a cost of $1,012,700, to Henry C. Beck Company, of Atlanta.

First Lady Dedicates D.C. Hotels For War Workers

MAY 29 1943

Chicago Defender
Chicago, Illinois

WASHINGTON. — Climaxing a tour of war housing projects in the nation's capital, Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt officially dedicated Wake and Midway halls, new residence hotels for Negro women war workers here last week.

Earlier the First Lady inspected Lucy D. Slowe hall residence hotel for Negro women and George Washington Carver hall, residence hotel for Negro men. Both halls are located in the northwest section of the city.

Addressing several hundred war workers already living in Wake and Midway halls, and a representative audience of visitors, Mrs. Roosevelt declared:

"The difference between a democracy and a totalitarian state is that a democracy serves the people while the people serve the state in countries where a dictator rules. The erection of these war-time housing projects is evidence of democracy serving the people. We need more such projects but we are making a step in the right direction."

The dedication program included a group of songs by Roland Hayes, noted tenor, and several musical selections by the Women's Glee club of Howard university.

W. E. Reynolds, public works administrator for the District of Columbia, served as master of ceremonies.

MAY 29 1943

Speakers at the dedication included Congressman J. Harry McGregor, Republican, of Ohio; Baird Snyder, assistant Federal Works administrator; Herbert Emmerich, commissioner of the Federal Public Housing authority, and Samuel Plato, builder of Wake and Midway halls. Plato called attention to increasing opportunities for Negroes in industry and government and declared that Negroes were succeeding in many new fields.

Following the dedication, Miss Mae G. Hawes and Miss W. Gertrude Brown, resident managers of Wake and Midway halls respectively, serverd as hostesses at an informal reception.

More than 700 women war workers will be housed in Wake and Midway halls when all accommodations are filled. The Lucy D. Slowe hall houses 322 Negro women war workers, and the George Washington Carver hall has accommodations for 205 Negro male war workers.

MAY 29 1943

One of the interesting factors about the buildings is that they contain no critical war materials. They are two-story buildings of eight wings, of temporary dormitory appearance from the outside, but very beautifully finished and furnished inside.

The majority of the rooms, renting for $24.50 a month, are single rooms. There are sitting rooms for entertaining company, recreation rooms, snack kitchens, service shop, beauty shop, cafeteria, and an infirmary operated in conjunction with the U.S. Public Health Service. Workers who have come to Washington since July 1941, are eligible for residence in the halls, provided their salaries are less than a basic $1800 a year.

MAY 29 1943

Miss Hawes, who left a position as director of the Southeast Settlement House here to assume her present duties, was formerly head of the department of mathematics at Tenn. A. and I. State college, a member of the national board of the Y.W.C.A., and has conducted community experiments in Atlanta for the Rosenwald and Carnegie foundations.

MAY 29 1943

Miss Brown was formerly administrative assistant to the president of Cookman college in Daytona Beach, Fla.; a member of the Housing Authority in Minneapolis; head resident of Phyllis Wheatley in Minneapolis for 13 years; and executive secretary of the Federation of Social Service for Negroes in Dayton, Ohio, for five years.

Alexandria, Va. Gazette
July 15, 1943

Sewer Ordered For Negro Trailer Camp

A fourth and final step to crush the city's opposition to the establishment of two trailer camps for the families of white and Negro Fort Belvoir workers within Alexandria's boundaries was taken by the Federal Public Housing Authority when condemnation proceedings to secure sewer connections for the Negro camp on North Patrick Street were filed in Norfolk yesterday.

The papers, including the petition for condemnation, notice of condemnation and order of immediate possession, were received at the United States District Court for the eastern district of Virginia in Alexandria today.

As the government has the right of way under the Second War Powers Act, permitting the executive branch to do whatever it believes necessary for the war effort, city objections are over-ruled.

City Manager Carl Budwesky had been instructed by the City Council not to voluntarily give the FPHA sewer connections for the two camps. Condemnation proceedings in both cases have now opened the way for the agency to make use of the Alexandria disposal system.

47f-1943

First 50 War Workers Move Into Carver Hall

"The Call" Kansas City Mo.

APR 23 1943

Hilyard Robinson, Negro Architect, Designed Building for Government

APR 23 1943

WASHINGTON. — While the first 50 war workers are moving into George W. Carver hall here in Washington, final touches are being put on this unique residential hotel, first of its kind to be built by the government for Negro men. It is expected that the building will be fully occupied by May 1.

Built by the Defense Homes corporation of the Federal Housing Authority, the hall is named for the late scientist, George Washington Carver of Tuskegee institute. It will provide accommodations for 205 tenants in 159 single and 23 double rooms.

The rooms have individual color schemes and the vari-colored pastel walls create an effect of spaciousness and provide maximum illumination. All rooms have running water. Shower and bath units are provided for every four persons.

APR 23 1943

Large, fully-equipped recreation rooms and attractive lounges will add to the comfort of the guests at this new residential hotel.

Rentals are $7 per week for single rooms and $6.50 per week per person for double rooms. Tenants must have arrived in Washington within the past 12 months and must be war workers.

Hilyard Robinson, Negro architect, designed the hall along modern, functional lines. Robinson has designed buildings at Howard university, two dormitory projects at Ypsilanti, Mich., near Detroit, and the $4,500 flying school and cantonment for the 99th Pursuit squadron in Alabama.

Persons who have visited the George W. Carver hall have been particularly impressed by the glass brick treatment of the facade.

APR 23 1943

The war workers who have already moved in and those whose applications for admittance are being considered represent a cross-section of federal employment. Among the many federal agencies, in which they work, are the War and Navy departments, the Adjustment General's office, Treasury department, Social Security board, Department of Agriculture, Office of Price Administration, Bureau of Printing and Engraving, War Production board, and the Veteran's Administration.

New York Times
New York, N. Y.

NEGROES TO OCCUPY 12% OF U. S. HOUSING

APR 28 1943

Their Tenancy Ratio Is Based on 744,000 Dwellings in Current Program

APR 28 1943

WASHINGTON, April 27— Negro tenants will occupy about 88,000 public housing units, representing 12 per cent of a total of 744,000 dwellings, and developed at a cost of more than $360,000,000 when the current public housing program is completed, Herbert Emmerich, Commissioner of the Federal Public Housing Authority, announced.

According to recent estimates, about 42,000 of these dwellings will be provided by the War Housing Program which reached a total of 612,000 units on March 15. Provision for Negro tenants is 7 per cent of this program.

Under the low-rent, non-war program, which made available 132,000 homes, about 46,000 are finished and occupied by Negro tenants. Many of these low-rent dwellings, in war-production centers, now house Negro war workers. The scarcity of critical materials and labor has necessitated the suspension of building under the low-rent program for the duration of the war. Consequently, almost 3,500 of the low-rent dwellings authorized and planned for tenancy by Negroes are now temporarily suspended.

APR 28 194

$33,000,000 Earned by Negroes

In the development of the total housing program, Negro construction workers had earned more than $33,000,000 by the end of 1942. This represented 12 per cent of total payroll expenditures. Negro craftsmen had received $7,000,000 or 4 per cent of the total paid to skilled workers.

About 16,000 of the war dwellings for Negro workers brought into war-production areas have been finished, and 18,000 are under way. All are scheduled for occupation by June.

APR 28 1943

Although detailed estimates are not available, a large number of war workers are included among the 150,000 Negro occupants of the 46,000 low-rent homes developed by the PWA housing division and the United States Housing Authority under FPHA auspices. These developments were constructed at a cost of $220,000,000.

In addition to Negro construction workers, Negro manpower has been utilized in the management and maintenance of public housing projects. More than 1,000 Negroes are currently employed in various capacities such as managers, engineers, clerical assistants and custodial workers. One hundred and thirty Negroes are now in charge of projects.

140 on Headquarters Staff

Approximately 140 Negroes are employed on the departmental staff of the EPHA in Washington, and forty are working in FPHA regional offices. Among these are three lawyers, three architects, an area management supervisor, a project planner and a junior management assistant recruited from the ranks of housing apprentices trained in the agency. Negroes comprise approximately one-tenth of the total employes of the agency.

APR 28 1943

Discussing the relation between Negro war housing and Negro war production employment, Mr. Emmerich, speaking for himself and John B. Blandford Jr., administrator of the National Housing Agency of which the EPHA is a constituent unit, declared:

"We realize fully that public housing is essential to the efforts of American industry to comply with the President's Executive Order 8802, reaffirming the non-discrimination policy of the United States Government. For us, accepting the responsibility of meeting the housing needs of Negro war workers, in so far as is possible under the limitations of the war housing program, means only continuing racial policies which have been in effect throughout the history of public housing.

"Since it is the policy of the National Housing Agency and the Federal Public Housing Authority to provide war housing to meet the proportionate needs of essential Negro in-migrant war workers, the percentage of Negro participation in the war housing program tends to reflect the percentage of their employment in essential war work."

APR 28 1943

Washington Tribune
Washington, D. C.

War Workers Moving Into Carver Hall

APR 17 1943

While the first fifty war workers are moving into George W. Carver Hall in Washington, D.C., final touches are being put on this unique residential hotel, first of its kind to be built by the Government for Negro men. It is expected that the building will be fully occupied by May 1.

Built by the Defense Homes Corporation of the Federal Public Housing Authority, the Hall is named for the late Negro scientist, George Washington Carver of Tuskegee Institute. It will provide accommodations for 205 tenants in 159 single and 23 double rooms.

APR 17 1943

The rooms have individual color schemes and the vari-colored pastel walls create an effect of spaciousness and provide maximum illumination. All rooms have running water. Shower and bath units are provided for every four persons.

Large, fully-equipped recreation rooms and attractive lounges will add to the comfort of the guests at this new residential hotel.

APR 17 1943

Rentals are $7 per week for single rooms and $6.50 per week per person for double rooms. Tenants must have arrived in Washington within the past twelve months and must be war workers.

APR 17 1943

Hilyard Robinson, architect, designed the Hall along modern, functional lines. Robinson has designed buildings at Howard University, two dormitory projects at Ypsilanti, Mich., near Detroit, and the $4,500,000 Flying School and Cantonment for the 99th Pursuit, Squadron in Alabama.

Washington Tribune
Washington, D. C.

Carver Hall Opens Here For Men War Workers

APR 3 1943

George W. Carver Hall, a resident hotel in Washington, D. C., for Negro men employed in government war work, and the first of its type to be constructed in this country, will open Thursday, April 1, the National Housing Agency announced today.

The project was built by the Defense Homes Corporation of the Federal Public Housing Authority and was named for the eminent Negro scientist, the late George Washington Carver, of Tuskegee Institute.

APR 3 1943

Located at Second and Elm Streets, Northwest, the project will accommodate 205 men in 159 single and 23 double rooms. Occupancy is restricted to government workers who have come to Washington within the last 12 months, and who are certified as war workers by their employing agencies. Rentals are $7 per week for single rooms and $6.50 per week per person for double rooms. Meals will be served at Lucy Slowe Hall, one block away, a similar type project for women workers.

APR 3 1943

Facilities in the new project include running water in each room with shower and bath units provided for every four persons. Reading and writing rooms and reception and recreation areas are also available.

LaGuardia Present at Opening Of Harlem's New Health Center

People's Voice New York N.Y.

JAN 30 1943

Designed to serve mothers who are working in defense industry and worried about the care of their young ones, Harlem's first information and counselling center was opened at 2238 Fifth ave Monday, by Mayor LaGuardia who headed a list of outstanding speakers.

Dedicating the Harlem Health Center, the Mayor said "The worst nursery is better than the best nursery. We are opening this council center for the mothers of Harlem. You show us the need and anything that will be helpful to the child, and your city will not be found wanting."

Evidently smarting under the tremendous pressure which has been brought against him and other city officials on the issue of child care, the Mayor added acrimoniously that "if there is agitation, designed just to put people on the pay roll without the necessity for it, your Mayor will speak out, I await the findings of this center."

Executive Director Helen H. Harris of the Mayor's Committee on War-Time Care of Children, said that the center's directors will interview mothers who seek information on child-care agencies and keep a record of the numbers who apply and their particular problems. JAN 30 1943

Other speakers were Louis L. Bennett, Regional Director of the War Manpower Commission; the Rev. John H. Johnson, rector, St. Martin's Church; Lester Granger, Assistant Executive Secretary, National Urban League; Walter White, executive secretary, NAACP and Leon Arnstein, Acting Commissioner of Welfare. JAN 30 1943

Charleston S. C. News & Courier
February 25, 1943

APPROVAL GIVEN NEGRO PROJECTS

Housing Development for 750 War Workers' Families Planned

Authorization of construction of 600 dwelling units and 150 efficiency apartments for negro defense workers in Charleston was announced yesterday by Robert K. Creighton, regional representative of the national housing agency. Mr. Creighton said the location has not been chosen yet and that details will be announced later.

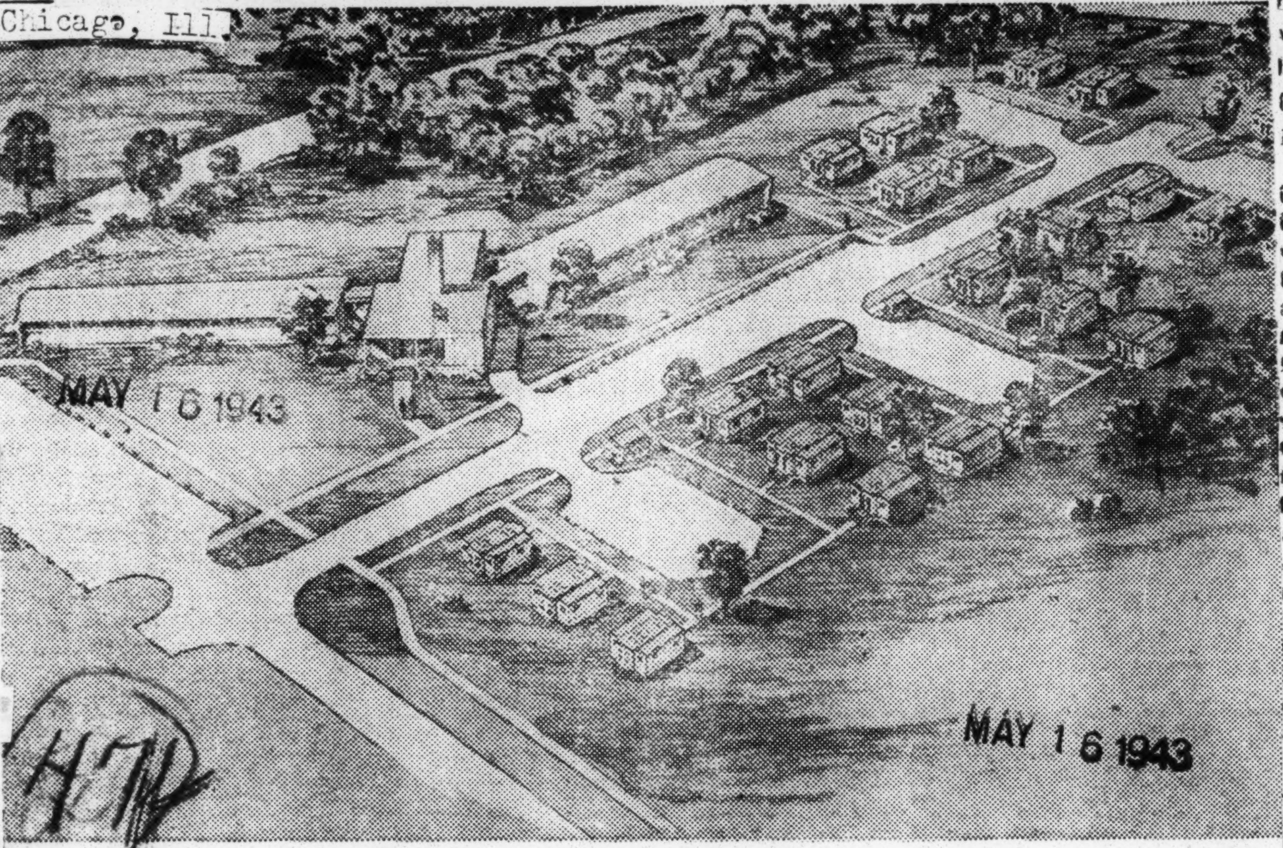
He said that to qualify for occupancy of one of the new units a civilian negro war worker must now or most recently have lived beyond practicable commuting distance from his work, must be the head of a family now housed away from Charleston and find it necessary to bring his family here to live in Charleston, or must have moved to Charleston as a war worker and now be living under temporary or makeshift conditions which are so intolerable as to impair his efficiency. It must also have been absolutely necessary that such worker be brought to Charleston to further the war effort.

Edward D. Clement, executive director for the Housing Authority of the City of Charleston, said yesterday that 2,000 units of the Liberty Homes, demountable housing project at Liberty Hill, near North Charleston, will be ready for occupancy the latter part of this week.

He added that the 410 units at Maryville, in St. Andrew's parish will be available to workers at the Charleston Shipbuilding and Drydock company the early part of next week.

HOUSING PROJECT FOR WILLOW RUN WORKERS

Bee
Chicago, Ill.



MAY 16 1943

Architect Hilyard R. Robinson's drawing for one of two Federal war housing projects at Ypsilanti, Mich. This project, located 5 miles from the Henry Ford Willow Run bomber plant, is expected to relieve an acute housing shortage and furnish homes for several thousand war workers. Mr. Robinson has designed public-housing projects costing more than $10,000,000.

MAY 16 1943

City Housing Authority Surveys Its Activities On Five Projects In '42

Schedule Of Tenant Income Eligibility Has Been Revised Upward

Surveying the record of low-cost housing in the first war year, the 1942 report of the Housing Authority of the Birmingham district was presented to the City Commission Tuesday morning, by J. C. deHoll, executive director of the city's five big housing communities.

Detailed items of the report were highlighted by deHoll, with stress placed upon the lease agreement entered into with the federal government for local operation of Eastwood, defense housing project; revised schedule of rents in all projects based upon income to prevent wholesale evictions of tenants due to increased wages, and purchase by the authority of $168,500 in War Bonds from reserves set aside for repairs, maintenance and replacements.

Principal improvement of 1942 consisted of renovation of the community center building in Central City to accommodate a nursery school for working mothers and installation of the Northside Health Center. Activity rooms for tenants occupy the top floor of the structure.

Due to the housing shortage in the Birmingham area, the equivalent elimination agreement with the city was set forward to June 6, 1943, with further extension probable. There remain 439 sub-standard dwelling units to be demolished under this agreement, as of Dec. 31, 1942.

The authority abandoned plans for its projected Negro housing community to be built with funds saved from construction of Elyton, Central City and Southtown, but asked the federal government to earmark these funds for future use in postwar planning.

The annual report revealed that total white applications for dwelling unit were 7,728, with Negro applications numbering 2,024. There are 3,068 families now living in the five projects.

The financial statement of the authority shows that $214,000 was paid on bonded indebtedness, with $9,640,000 outstanding on bonds, as of Dec. 31, 1942, due over a period of 58 years. Total assets of the authority were listed at $10,359,664.17. Payment of $30,159.93 was made to the city for municipal services or in lieu of taxes at Elyton Village, Central City, Smithfield Court and Southtown.

Bee
Chicago, Ill

NAMED CHIEF OF ORTHOPEDIC AT TAAF

MAY 23 1943

TUSKEGEE ARMY AIR FIELD, Ala., May 20. (ANP)—The most recent addition to the ever-increasing medical staff at the Tuskegee Army Air field is Capt. Theodore R. Pinckney. A former clinical instructor in general surgery at Howard university, Capt. Pinckney also has been a practicing physician in the nation's capital for the last 10 years.

Volunteering his service to the army, the former Washington physician and social leader, was commissioned a captain in the medical corps and called to active duty June 15, 1942. His first experience was at Fort Huachuca, Ariz., where he served as a member of the department of orthopedics. Recently Capt. Pinckney was transferred to his present post here at Tuskegee. He has been assigned as assistant chief of surgical service and chief of orthopedic service.

MAY 23 1943

A native of Albany, N. Y., Capt. Pinckney received his high school education at the Dunbar High school, and his bachelor of science degree in 1929. During the interval between graduation from Bates college and his entrance to Indiana university, Capt. Pinckney was an instructor of biology at Morehouse college, Atlanta.

MAY 23 1943

At the Kansas City General Hospital No. 2, he took his internship and residency during 1929-'32. It was after leaving Kansas City in 1932, that Capt. Pinckney married the former Miss Hermena M. Clay. Mrs. Pinckney and son, Theodore, age seven, reside in Washington.

In the same year, he became an assistant in pharmacology at the Howard school of medicine until 1934 when he became clinical assistant and clinic instructor in general surgery. This position he held until called to active service, during which time he was also a member of the Freedmen's hospital staff.

Charleston, S. C., News-Courier
July 25, 1943

Plans Prepared For 550 Negro Housing Units

The Housing Authority of the City of Charleston will issue plans Tuesday for the construction of some 550 housing units for negro war workers on Virginia-Carolina Chemical company property located north of the city, Edward D. Clement, executive director of the authority, said yesterday.

A petition objecting to the use of the site for this purpose, sent to Washington by about 300 residents of the area, was returned recently, he said. Among those who protested the move were residents of Windsor, a subdivision directly across the highway, and the Charleston suburban Junior chamber of Commerce.

A committee of negroes issued a statement that the protests were "seriously interfering with the war effort" June 26. Some 200 units for negroes on the Read Phosphate company property already are well under construction, Mr. Clement said.

Several months have been spent by housing officials here in search of a site, but in each case protests have been filed with the Federal Housing authority.

Bars Job Bias

WASHINGTON — The Federal Public Housing authority announced this week that its non-discrimination construction labor policy had been clarified to make all contractors understand that the agency is adhering strictly to the President's latest executive order on fair employment practice.

FPHA Commissioner Herbert Emmerich declared that the agency's regulations were amended on July 6 to include subcontracts as well as direct contracts for construction of publicly-financed war housing projects.

AUG

Housing Head

47f-1943

New York Age

New York, N. Y.

1st Government Constructed Hotel For Negro Women War Workers Is Opened In D. C.; Cost $760,000

JAN 2 - 1943

WASHINGON, D. C.—The $760,000 Lucy D. Slowe Residence Hall, first government constructed hotel for Negro women, is helping to relieve the crowded housing conditions occasioned by the influx of war workers to the Nations' capital. Opened less than 10 months after ground-breaking ceremonies, it is in one of Washington's quietest residential sections at Third and U streets, N.W.

Built by the Defense Homes Corporation and named for the first Negro dean of women at Howard University, the Lucy D. Slowe Residence Hall offers modern and comfortable accommodations to 322 Negro women. Within ten days of its opening on December 5 more than two score war workers had already taken up residence there and more were moving in daily.

JAN 2 1943

Occupancy of the 299 outside rooms, 22 of which are double, is confined to Negro women war workers who have come to Washington since July 1, 1941. Each room is completely furnished and maid service is provided once a week.

Included in the rates of $7.00 per week for a single room and $6.00 and $6.50 per person for a double room, are many facilities for war workers and their guests. These include a fully-equipped recreation room, a spacious lounge, a comfortable lobby, a fountain room for leisure-hour snacks, and a cafeteria which will soon furnish a well-balanced nourishing meals at nominal costs.

In addition, the three-story brick building has basement laundry facilities with ironing rooms on each floor and a valet shop and beauty salon for the residents.

Managing director of the Lucy D. Slow, Residence Hall is W. Spurgeon Burke, former business manager of the U. S. Veterans Hospital at Tuskegee, Ala. Mr. Burke will also serve as managing director of LeDroit Halli, a residence building for male war workers now under construction in the same neighborhood. When completed, early in 1943, this new construction, similar in design and appointments, will accommodate 199 men. Construction costs and equipment will exceed $500,000.

As managing director for the two projects, Mr. Burke will supervise a staff of approximately sixty employees. Present administrative staff members of the Lucy D. Slowe Residence Hall includes Miss Nettie M. Brooker, resident manager; Mrs. E. V. Johns, assistant resident manager; Miss Mary H. Dowling, finance officer; Welexton Langon, office manager; Miss Ernestine M. Dupuy, secrestary; Henry A. Sparks, cashier; Miss Beulah Burke, housekeeper; Mrs. Marie Willson, assistant housekeeper; Mrs. Mamie V. Stokes, cafeteria manager; Daniel W. Miles, Karl Benjamin, Isaac Johnson and William Thomas, engineers, and Eugene Roberson, storekeeper.

JAN 2 1943

The Lucy D. Slowe Residence Hall is one of a number of homes for war workers built recently by the Defense Homes Corporaion in Washington, D. C.; Portmouth, N. H.; Niagara, N. Y.; Charleston, S. C.; Newport News, Portsmouth; and Radford, Va.; Jacksonville, Fla.; Sheffield and Mobile, Ala.; Boulder, Nev.; Joliet, Ill.; Massillon and Columbus, O. Bremerton, Wash.; Morgantown, W. Va.; Nashville, Tenn.; and Orange and Corpus Christi, Texas.

News

Birmingham, Ala.

Huntsville Will Get Negro Housing Project

MAR 2 - 1943

HUNTSVILLE, Ala.—A contract for construction of a 220-unit housing project on the western edge of Huntsville, for accommodation of Negro families having members at work in the Huntsville Arsenal or the Redstone Ordnance Plant, has been awarded to the Ray M. Lee Construction Company. This is a federal housing project and bids for construction were opened in Atlanta. The cost is estimated at $352,810 and the work is to be completed in 60 days. The location is between West Clinton Street and Fifth Avenue.

MAR 2 - 1943

Memphis, Tenn., Commercial Appeal

February 2, 1943

NEGRO WAR WORKERS TO GET NEW HOMES

Part Of LeMoyne Gardens Project Nearly Ready

The Memphis Housing Authority announced yesterday that a part of the 342-unit development of the LeMoyne Gardens Extension Housing Project would be ready for occupancy April 1. About 100 apartments will be available on that date, with another 100 available the first of May and the remaining 142 units being completed in June. The development was built for war workers, and occupancy will be confined to negroes engaged in war industries of Memphis.

Joseph A. Fowler, executive director of the housing authority, said that all recent surveys made of vacancies for negroes within the city showed that practically no vacancies existed.

Applications will be taken at the office of LeMoyne Gardens, 830 Williams. Rents have not been set, but will be established on the basis of the rents in the other M. H. A. projects where rent is determined by income of tenants.

Pittsburgh Courier

Pittsburgh, PA.

FEW GIRLS WANT FEDERAL LODGING

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 21—(ANP)—With much fanfare and trumpeting, the Lucy D. Slowe Hall was recently opened for colored war workers, female. With a normal capacity of 322 persons, the spacious building is only half filled. And the powers that be are beginning to worry over why this is true.

JAN 23 1943

Charging prices few can pay for rooms alone and with restrictions similar to boarding schools, the girls are not flocking to the institution because they feel it is just that, an institution.

Seven dollars per week for a single room without a private bath and $6.50 each for two in a room, also with no private bath is considered a little steep for the girls who are coming in town. Then, they must conform to certain residence regulations, not having lived in Washington for a certain length of time, and so on.

Daily World

Atlanta, Georgia

Race Stirred Over Rumor About People From Other States

FEB 17 1943

DETROIT, Mich.—(SNS)—A demand that John B. Blanford federal housing administrator investigate charges that "the Hamtramck Housing Commission is importing people from Pittsburgh and other sections of the country to occupy the Colonel Hamtramck Homes" was made Sunday in a resolution drawn up at a mass meeting, sponsored by the Citizens Committee For Jobs in War Industries at the Corinthian Baptist Church. Charges were made in an open meeting of the City Council by Councilman Joseph F. Sawicki when Sawicki demanded to know why Negroes were being excluded from the Hamtramck project while people from other sections of the country were occupying the project.

Councilman Sawicki then offered a resolution that the Council investigate the occupancy of the project. The resolution was supported by Councilman Walter J. Serement. However, due to opposition from Councilmen John Anger Frank Sosnowski and John E. Wojtyle, the resolution was defeated.

The text of the resolution sent to the Federal Housing Administration is as follows:

Whereas: It has been called to the attention of the Citizens Committee that Councilman Joseph F. Sawicki has charged that the Hamtramck Housing Commission is importing families from Pittsburgh and other sections of the country to fill up the Colonel Hamtramck Homes Project.

"Whereas: The Hamtramck Housing Commission has denied Negro residents of Hamtramck the right to live in this project;

"Whereas: We are under the impression that this project was built for the use of local defense workers;

FEB 17 1943

"And whereas it is a known fact that there are Negroes in large numbers who reside in Hamtramck and who are war workers and who are thus eligible to occupy the project;

"Be it therefore resolved: that we the Citizens of Hamtramck assembled in mass meeting at the Corinthian Baptist Church, Caniff at Dyar, do hereby call upon Mr. John B. Blanford, administrator of the Federal Housing Authority to investigate Councilmen Sawicki's charges.

FEB 17 1943

"Be it further resolved that the attorneys who are in charge of the case of LeRoy G. White vs the City of Hamtramck Housing Commission be requested to advise the Circuit Court of Wayne County of the charges.

"Be it further resolved that a copy of this resolution be sent to Mr. John B. Blandford, Federal Housing Administrator, to the Hamtramck City Council, to the Mayor of the City of Hamtramck, and to Mr. Sharpe, Regional Director of the Federal Housing Administration."

Birmingham Post

Birmingham, Alabama

HOUSING UNIT NAMED FOR NEGRO EDUCATOR

HUNTSVILLE, March 18.—(Special)—Officials who are in charge of the new housing subdivision for Negro employes of the Huntsville and Redstone Arsenals, have announced that the project has been named Binford Court in honor of the late Prof. Henry C. Binford, who was for 20 years superintendent of the Huntsville Negro public schools.

MAR 18 1943

Binford Court, located on the western edge of Huntsville, will consist of 38 houses containing 220 dwelling units and will be completed early in May. It will cost $352,810.

The Union

Cincinnati, Ohic

CARVER HALL

APR 8 1943

OWI—George W. Carver Hall, a resident hotel in Washington, D. C., for Negro men employed in government war work, and the first of its type to be constructed in this country, will open Thursday, April 1, the National Housing Agency announced today.

APR 8 1943

The project was built by the Defense Homes Corporation of the Federal Public Housing Authority and was named for the eminent Negro scientist, the late George Washington Carver of Tuskegee Institute.

Located at Second and Elm Streets N.W., the project will accommodate 205 Negro men in 159 single and 23 double rooms. Occupancy is restricted to government workers who have come to Washington within the last 18 months and who are certified as war workers by their employing agencies.

APR 8 1943

Pittsburgh Courier

Pittsburgh, Pa.

TO BUILD SEPARATE TOWN FOR RACE

June 5, 1943

PASCO, Wash., June 3—According to reports being circulated in eastern Washington, two towns—one for Negroes and the other for white residents—will be built on the Army's 400,000-acre Hanford engineering project in Benton County. It is said that the two towns will house an estimated 15,000 workers. The section assertedly to be built for the race will be located a few miles north of Ashland, Wash., now being evacuated under Army orders.

Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Virginia

First Women's Hotel Helping Housing Problem In Capital

JAN 2 - 1943

WASHINGTON, D. C. — The $760,000 Lucy D. Slowe Residence Hall, first-government constructed hotel for colored women, this week was helping to relieve the crowded housing conditions occasioned by the influx of war workers to the nation's capital.

Opened less than 10 months after ground-breaking ceremonies, it is in one of Washington's quietest residential sections at Third and U streets, N. W.

NAMED FOR HOWARD DEAN

Built by the Defense Homes Corporation and named for the first Negro dean of women at Howard University, the Lucy D. Slowe Residence Hall offers modern and comfortable accommodations to 233 Negro women.

Within ten days of its opening on December 5, more than two score war workers had already taken up residence there and more were moving in daily.

Occupancy of the 209 outside rooms, 22 of which are double, is confined to Negro women war workers who have come to Washington since July 1, 1941. Each room is competely furnished and maid service is provided once a week.

JAN 2 - 1943

WEEKLY RATES

Included in the rates of $7 per week for a single room and $6 and $6.50 per person for a double room are many facilities for war workers and their guests.

These include a fully-equipped recreation room, a spacious lounge, a comfortable lobby, a fountain room for leisure-hour snacks, and a cafeteria which will soon furnish a well-balanced nourishing meal at nominal costs.

In addition, the three-story brick building has basement laundry facilities with ironing rooms on each floor and a valet shop and beauty salon for the residents.

JAN 2 - 1943

BURKE MANAGER

Managing director of the Lucy D. Slowe Residence Hall is W. Spurgeon Burke, former business manager of the U. S. Veterans Hospital at Tuskegee, Ala. Mr Burke will also serve as managing director of LeDroit Hall, a residence building for male war workers now under construction in the same neighborhood.

When complete early in 1943, this new construction, similar in design and appointments, will accommodate 199 men. Construction costs and equipment will exceed $500,000.

As managing director for the two projects, Mr. Burke will supervise a staff of approximately sixty employees.

JAN 2 - 1943

Present administrative staff members of the Lucy D. Slowe Residence Hall include Miss Nettie M. Brooker, resident manager; Mrs. E. V. Johns, assistant resident manager; Miss Mary H. Dowling, finance officer; Wellexton Iangon, office manager; Miss Ernestine M. Dupuy, secretary; Henry A. Sparks, cashier; Miss Beulah Burke, housekeeper; Mrs Marie Willson, assistant housekeeper; Mrs. Mamie V. Stokes, cafeteria manager; Daniel W. Miles, Karl Benjamin, Isaac Johnson and William Thomas, engineers, and Eugene Roberson, storekeeper.

OTHER HOMES

JAN 2 - 1943

The Lucy D. Slowe Residence Hall is one of a number of homes for war workers built recently by the Defense Homes Corporation in Washington, D. C.; Portsmouth, N. H.; Niagara, N. Y.; Charleston, S. C.; Newport News Portsmouth and Radford, Va.; Jacksonville, Fla.; Sheffield and Moblie, Ala.; Boulder, Nev.; Joliet, Ill.; Massillon and Columbus, O.; Bremerton, Wash.; Morgantown, W. Va.; Nashville, Tenn.; and Orange and Corpus Christi, Texas.

Opens Carver Hall As Residence Hotel

Peoples Voice
New York N.Y.

WASHINGTON—Carver Hall, first residence hotel in the US for Negro men in war work, was officially opened here April 1, by officials of the Defense Homes Corp (DHC) of the Federal Public Housing Authority.

APR 10 1943

The first tenant, James Murphy of New York City, moved in the night before it "opened" and for a short time had to himself the three-story structure which includes recreation, reception and writing rooms, as well as a sun roof and garden terrace.

APR 10 1943

The hotel, located at Second and Elm sts, NW, will accommodate 205 men in 159 single and 23 double rooms. Fifteen rooms are reserved by District ruling for transients. It is constructed so as to catch all possible sunlight. Hilliard Robinson, Negro architect, was the designer of this "strictly functional and livable" project. A dining hall and kitchen are provided altho residents will take their meals in nearby Lucy Slowe Hall, a corresponding home for women workers.

Carver Hall, takes its name from the late scientist, Dr. George Washington Carver of Tuskegee Institute.

APR 10 1943

Bystander
Des Moines, Iowa

Citizens Appeal to FDR To Rescind Band Against Negroes at Willow Lodge

MAR 17 1943

Detroit, Mich.—Refusal of Herbert Emmerich, FPHA, to rescind the ban against Negroes at Willow Lodge Housing project brought from 20 leading citizens here this week a telegram to President Roosevelt asking that he review and correct Emmerich's decision.

MAR 17 1943

The telegram was sent after a conference with Emmerich at which Gloster Current, Detroit branch executive secretary, Leslie Pery, NAACP Washington Bureau and Lous Martin of the Michigan Chronicle were chief spokesmen.

The conference lasted two hours and Emmerich who had stated that housing in defense areas would follow established community patterns refused to lift the ban against Negro applicants. This in spite of the fact that these same Negro applicants worked side by side daily with white workers in the nearby war production centers. Mixed occupancy has been unanimously approved by whites in this area. The next move in the housing fight is now up to John Blandford, chief of the National Housing Administration.

A highlight of the housing conferenece was the statement of one of the delegates, an elderly Negro who stood before Emmerich's desk and said simply: "I am sixty days older than the President, and I believe I am doing as much for the war. I have one boy in North Africa with the Army, another in Australia, and one here who will be sent I don't know where. I don't want those boys to come back to have someone tell them where they cannot live."

The Story Behind the Fight

The fight for the Negro's right to occupy homes in the Willow Lodge project looms as the most important item on the agenda of militant Negroes, for upon its outcome depends the future pattern of government housing throughout the country. If a pattern of segregation is enforced at Willow Lodge, Negroes will find it almost impossible to secure homes near defense plants, not only in Michigan but in all defense areas. For the same southern congressmen who were instrumental in designating the war project for white only are also working diligently to establish a policy of segregated war housing in other states where Negroes and whites occupy the same projects without incident.

MAR 11 1943

Here is a brief background of the fight:

Since the Ford bomber plant began turning out planes, approximately 10,000 men and women have been employed, but one-half that number has left because of the housing shortage. First attempt to alleviate this shortage was plans for a railer homes project in the city of Ypsilanti. However, the Ypsilanti city council objected to the establishment of a trailer camp, in the city and the constuction of 3,000 homes project got under way. When the question of housing Negroes came up, feelers were put out among the workers to ascertain their position on integration. However, Allan Straughm, assistant administrator for bomber plant local 50, reporter recently that workers have never indicated that they were interested in who occupied the projec and that efforts to call them together to discuss the matter have been unsuccessful. However, interest in designating the project for whites was inspired by other than union sources and when Negroes continued to make application for homes, they were told applications should be filed for Ypsilanti Negro project or a project in Inkster.

MAR 11 1943

In the meantime plans were made for the construction of a permanent homes project in the Negro community of Ypsilanti, and additional plans called for the establishment of a trailer camp project in the same community. However, the city council voted no objections to trailer homes in the Negro community. But ctiizens of Ypsilanti, aroused by Detroiters, joined in the fight, formed a citizens' committee in Ypsilanti; encouraged white people to support their cause, raised funds to support the fight and sent the Rev. H. G. Simmonds to Washington with the delegation.

Midway Hall, First Negro Government Dormitory, Opens

Washington Post

Midway Hall, first residence dormitory for Negro Government girls, was officially opened yesterday, and by nightfall more than 75 girls had moved in. Midway, and its companion dormitory, Wake Hall, will house 848 girls. Wake will be opened within a month.

The halls, constructed by the public works division of the FWA, are located at Oklahoma Avenue and Twenty-fourth Street Northeast.

May 3, 43

Alcott Hall, for white Government girls, will be opened with a reception for Congressmen and officials of the National Housing Agency, FWA, from 3 to 5 p. m.

Washington D. C.

NHA WILL AID NEGRO HOUSING

Pittsburgh, Pa. Courier

CHICAGO, July 1—(ANP)—"The National Housing agency is determined that the need for housing of Negro workers and their families can and must be met promptly," Joseph P. Tufts, new Midwest regional representative of the National Housing agency, declared Thursday at a luncheon of the Metropolitan Housing council in the Palmer house.

"Particular attention," he said, "is being given to the needs of Negro workers and families. It is recognized by the National Housing agency that the critical Negro housing shortage is potentially one of the greatest handicaps of the war production effort in the Chicago district."

JUL 3 1943

47f-1943

N. African Wounded Treated at Valley Forge, Pa., Hospital

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

100 of 1400 Patients Colored; Wounded Tell Afro All War Is Not at the Front

By LEON M. SNEAD

PHOENIXVILLE, Pa.—If you are an old campaigner like 45-year-old Master Sgt. Levy McNeill, rounding out [illegible] twenty-seven-year hitch in khaki that dates back to the Pancho Villa expedition in 1916—

Or if like Pvt. Claudius Wright, 26, you have a 5-month-old daughter back in Waco, Texas, that you have yet to fondle—

Then you don't want any trucking out of hospitals, not even if it's a place like Uncle Sam's Valley Forge General where you get the best of everything without worrying about the bills; where every effort is made to see that you get well quick and have a good time doing so.

In the case of Sgt. McNeill, you feel sort of chagrined that a recurrent attack of arthritis, complicated by "40-below" weather near the Russian border, has you hobbling about a hospital when the Mexican conflict or fourteen months abroad in World War I (including the hell that was the Meuse-Argonne and the Marne) couldn't put you under. Heck, you're a professional fighting man. You want action.

Injured by Tool Chest

As for Pvt. Wright, well, this business of war isn't a career for you but you want action, too—for another reason. You want the Axis squelched just as soon as possible so that you can get home to the wife and kids—three of them now, counting that youngster you've never seen.

Of all the places to drop, why would that 600-pound tool chest you were unloading in Casablanca have to pick on your back? A guy can't help win the war in a wheel cheer with a fractured spine, can he?

Wright's attitude was more or less typical of the colored soldiers with whom the writer talked during a recent visit to Valley Forge General Hospital which the army opened four months ago.

Spread over some 180 acres in a country area about two miles outside of the small town of Phoenixville, the hospital is a group of red brick, two-story buildings with a generous expanse of evenly-cut lawn on which the soldiers sun themselves, play croquet and other not-too-strenuous outdoor games.

No Prejudice at Hospital

Commanded by Col. Henry Beeuwkes of the medical corps, who was personal physician to General Pershing during the last war, Valley Forge General Hospital is an excellent refutation of the army's pet theory that mixing colored and white troops is bad business.

Here, colored and white soldiers sleep in cots side by side (or if their injuries are more serious, have private rooms next to each other), attend movies together, use the same post exchange, play together in the large Red Cross clubroom-auditorium.

There have been no "incidents" to speak of, I was told. There have been times, colored patients said, when some Southern-born white soldiers, unused to decent human relations, have tried to bring their Dixie prejudices into the hospital with them.

With the help of white soldiers and officers who know what the word "democracy" means, the Southerners who want to be different sooner or later fall into line whether they like it or not.

Of course, some of them never like it, but they lump it.

Some Haters Around

We got a taste of this when AFRO Photographer Marshall Wilson asked two white soldiers to pose by a bed with two colored soldiers. One [illegible] white soldiers with a Georgia accent said "No" as though he had been requested to slap his mother.

The other soldier, who was from Brooklyn, was glad to oblige.

But that Southerner's attitude was apparently not typical, we later found out. In the Red Cross club room were scenes that would have made Hitler very ill.

Races Play Together

At one of the ping-pong tables, a colored and white soldier were matching shots in a spirited game that held the interest of a mixed audience. Black and blonde heads were bent over checker boards, card games with partners of different races were in progress.

Over in one corner of the room was a wheel chair huddle with experiences and stories of the war being shared by colored and white patrons, some of the latter being from the South.

Other than not getting enough mail (and what soldier does), the men that I talked to had no complaints, except that they just wanted to get out. There are about 100 colored soldiers here out of a total of 1400 patients.

Staff All White

The hospital handles all types of cases, and patients receive the benefit of all the new scientific and medical discoveries that will speed their recovery. All of the staff, from physicians to cooks, is white.

The men who are able can rove about the grounds for three hours a day while convalescing, can get furloughs up to thirty-one days. Free, up-to-date movies are shown once a week by the Red Cross. In addition, there are card parties and other types of entertainment given regularly.

The men whom I met can tell you that all of this war is not in the front-line trenches. Members of quartermaster, ordnance, or engineer outfits, most of them were injured behind the lines, some very seriously.

They weren't doing the actual fighting, but as one put it, "We were making it possible for our guys to carry on."

Chi Man Injured

There was, for instance, Corp. Daltin Martin, 34, of Chicago. Employed by an Illinois refining company before he was inducted a year ago, Martin had several bones in his back broken when he was struck by a falling boom on a ship he was helping to unload at Casablanca three months ago.

Then there was Pvt. James Williams, 25, of Champagne, Ill., who hauled gasoline to the front in Africa for several weeks without mishap, only to have his hip shattered by a bullet in comparatively quiet Oran.

Philadelphian in Group

Williams said Oran was supposed to be out of the battle zone, but he knows he didn't shoot himself.

Suffering a similar wound under equally mysterious circumstances was Pvt. George W. Curtis, 27, who was shot near Bizerte in February when that town was twenty-six miles behind the lines according to military leaders.

A mechanic by trade, Curtis lived at 1610 Catharine Street, Philadelphia, before joining the army two years ago, [illegible] employed by an auto repair shop near the AFRO office at Broad and Bainbridge Streets.

Attached to an ordnance unit, Curtis was with the invasion party that landed in North Africa. He said he enjoyed the show although the deafening roar of the booming guns made him think "the end of the world was near."

He'd liked to go along on the "big" invasion said Curtis, who has a brother, Cater, at Camp Stewart, and a sister, Mrs. Almeter Cook, with the WAAC outfit at Fort Devens.

Private Loses Eye

Not a front line casualty either was Pvt. Jack H. Bankhead, 25, of El Dorado, Ark., but he has already given his right eye in this war and would like to rejoin his old engineer outfit soon "because my left eye is O.K."

The eye was injured by a glove while he was training to participate in his first boxing bout at Camp Edwards in November. Three months later, in Oran, a passing truck displaced some granite on the road. A piece flew up, struck the injured eye. It had to be removed in Africa.

Sgt. McNeill has seen service in Iran, Egypt, Palestine, Bagdad, and Iraq. Sniper trouble bothered them a bit in Iran, he said, adding that the natives "hadn't surrendered from the last war."

To be near him, the sergeant's wife, Mrs. Teole McNeill, is now living in Philadelphia at 2024 N. Woodstock Street. They have one son, John L. McNeill, 23, at Fort Benning, Ga., who is a master sergeant like his dad.

JUL 3 1943

Afro-American
Baltimore, Maryland

Site for 550 Homes Okeyed

BALTIMORE

Oliver K. Winston, FPHA regional representative, announced from Washington today (Friday) that his office has approved construction of 550 war housing units in the Belle Grove Road area, adjacent to Patapsco Park.

With 250 additional units now under construction in Fairfield, Md., this new project takes care of 800 of the 2,000 such homes for which eight million dollars was appropriated by the National Housing Agency on February 26.

Meet with Mayor Set

The site proposed in Southeast Baltimore for the remaining 1200 units is the one now causing so much controversy.

The new interracial commission appointed to study the situation and Mr. Winston will meet with Mayor McKeldin on Saturday to consider locations for this project.

Primarily suggested for this project are the Cherry Hill Road area, the Northpoint Road site, and the Philadelphia Road area, all of which have been vigorously protested by white residents in each neighborhood.

Protest Called "Narrow"

The newly selected Belle Grove Road area is being protested by white Anne Arundel County property owners who maintain that the site is not close to war plants and that transportation facilities are already too heavily taxed.

This attitude, as publicly expressed by Senator Wilbur R. Dulin (Dem., Anne Arundel), was criticized as being "narrow and sectionalistic" by Leon A. Rubenstein, member of the House of Delegates from the Fourth District.

Mr. Rubenstein stated that the housing proposal for colored war workers is being made a "political football," and that "there is no reason in logic nor in justice to deny to a particular racial group their right to decent living conditions."

JUN 25 1943

Highlights

Courier
Pittsburgh Pa.

By STANLEY ROBERTS

CAMBRIDGE, Ohio, July 22—Lt. Col. John P. Fletcher, after whom the Fletcher General Hospital, here, was named, died two years ago. He devoted an Army life time to the healing of the wounded and sick. He was a distinguished member of the Army Medical Corps. He developed much field equipment still in use.

* * *

Yes, there is a guard house here too . . . just in case some of the lads get out of line. The "brig" confirms to the same architectural plans as the other buildings and is unnoticeable.

* * *

The WAC will play an important part at Fletcher. Three WAC officers and 150 auxiliaries will be stationed here to release men for other duties. Duties will include cooking, typing, baking, cabinet making, etc.

* * *

It took only four months to build the immense hospital, a remarkable achievement. Constructed during the winter months, much of the work was done under tents to prevent the materials from freezing, and many of the men in the U. S. Engineers Corps, who did the work were Negroes. It is a job well done!

* * *

Three buildings have been set aside for recreation. An adequate program of recreation is important for the recuperation of the men. Morale building is the term used by the recreation directors.

* * *

The hospital is entirely steam-heated. There are two plants, each capable of heating the entire plant, in case something goes wrong with the other. Installation of the heating plant was a gigantic task, involving miles of pipe laying.

* * *

Construction of the "life line," the hospital's water main, required 45 working days. It is pumped all the way from the town out to the plant. It will require a half million gallons a day.

* * *

Major O. E. Nadeau, Medical Corps, chief of the Surgical Service, realizes that surgery will play an important part in reconstructing the shattered bones of men. He is a 30 year veteran in the field. Approximately two-thirds of the staff at Fletcher will be surgeons. Each will be a specialist in his own field. All types of surgery, including general, orthopedic, chest, urological, plastic, ear, eye, nose and throat, and many others will be under the Major's supervision.

The nursing staff will eventually be composed of 168 members of the United States Army Nurse Corps. The nurses will all be commissioned and will enjoy the privileges of their rank.

* * *

There is an airport near the hospital and it is not beyond possibility that it may be used for transporting patients. At the present time the railroad companies have erected and built a special track and loading platform for the incoming patients.

* * *

Several Ohio cities were competing for the hospital. Senator

JUL 24 1943

Harold Burton, Cleveland, played a major role in locating it here.

* * *

Casualties in World War II will be far greater than those of the last war and no doubt, Fletcher Hospital will be a permanent institution.

JUL 24 1943

Various buildings in the hospital have large red crosses painted on their roofs so that they are plainly visible to airplanes for miles around. In case of a U. S. bombing, Fletcher should be undisturbed, according to International law.

* * *

There is a small chapel on the grounds. And provisions have been for all men to worship according to their own particular faith.

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

Federal Housing Project For Ala.

John P. Broome, regional Federal Public Housing Authority director, announced Wednesday the award of a War Housing Project for construction of 40 family housing units and community facilities, estimated to cost $86,000, at Tuskegee, Ala. The contract was awarded to Algernon Blair, Montgomery.

AUG 5 1943

Renting Shortage In Long Island Reaches Its Peak; Negroes Find It Difficult To Find Apartments

New York Age

New York, N. Y.

JAMAICA, N. Y. — For the past year or two Harlemites and others seeking rentals on Long Island experienced no difficulty in securing houses, usually on lease, and a number of apartments, but today it is an entirely different story. The peak has been reached and finding houses and apartments is like finding the proverbial needle in a haystack.

The result is that quite a number of colored families have seen the feasibility of investing in small homes, especially in Jamaica, which, unlike Corona, has shown a steady growth in home-ownerhsip because of the improvements which have come to the five distinct sections making up this part of Queens

Merrick Park, St. Albans, Cedar Manor and Jamaica have drawn a full quota, and today the Dunton section, with the same facilities in bus and other transportation, is making its bid to prospective home-owners.

JUL 3 1943

Unlike South Jamaica proper, with its main throughfare on New York boulevard, which has drawn all the good and evil of business, the Dunton section for colored people remains a most desirable residential part of Queens with everyhing that is fine in a restricted locality of solid homes, all boasting modern improvements, to say nothing of its large schools churches, etc.

While many of those wise in the ways of realty values are looking forward to a post-war boom, it is very apparent that Dunton will enjoy its own little boom this year, for defense work has made it possible for many families to cherish the idea of securing a home while the time is ripe and Dunton is virtually untapped thus far. Only one real estate firm has been able thus far to break in in certain sections where Negroes have been unable to secure homes previously, and despite the rumblings of dissatisfaction on the part of a few white families because of the entrance of one or two pioneer Negro families, a better type of Negro residents from the other burroughs will be able to secure many more homes in the section.

Washington Tribune
Washington, D. C.

Group Seeks War Housing Projects For Workers

A delegation led by the Baltimore branches of the NAACP and the Urban League held conferences this week with Jonathan Daniels, administrative assistant to the President and Herbert Emmerich, commissioner of the Federal Public Housing Authority to protest the failure of the Federal government to erect a housing project for Negro workers who have migrated to the city to work in vital war industries.

The group told Daniels that Negro war workers have moved into Baltimore at the rate of 2,000 a month for the past year. It was pointed out that while Negroes constitute 20 per cent of the city's population, they are crowded into less than 7 per cent of its living space.

---

4 Homes in D.C. Available for War Workers, Families

Afro-American
Baltimore, Maryland

Only four homes are available in the capital area for colored war workers with families, it was revealed by the War Housing Center figures on Thursday.

JUN 24 1943

The paucity of homes for one of the largest groups in the capital's population was exposed when Marvin Wire, director of the housing center, appealed to "every colored family in this territory to go over his household and see if he can 'double up a bit' and take in a paying war guest or his family."

Shortage at Dangerous Point

"A dangerous point" was the phrase with which Wire described the housing shortage, and explained that the war housing centers in Alexandria and Arlington, Va., and in the capital have almost exhausted their rosters of homes, although many colored families have been evicted from unsanitary or condemned quarters in recent weeks.

"Just where these people can be sent is more than we can answer," he said.

Register Exhausted

A total of 87 rooms are listed with the War Housing Center and 941 family quarters, 937 of which are under construction to be ready by about August 1. But in one day, 15 people apply for dwellings or rooms, and if four of them were placed in family units, the register would be completely exhausted.

JUN 26 1943

A total of 3,853 dwellings, or 11.4 per cent of the new residences planned by the National Housing Association for the District will be alloted to colored, while 837 rooms will be available in government dormitories when they are completed.

Award Contract for War Workers' Apts.

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

BALTIMORE

Conversion of St. Joseph Seminary at 607 Pennsylvania Avenue into forty-two apartments for war workers is expected to get under way "almost immediately", L. H. Denton, white, director of the War Housing Center, said on Tuesday.

The contract was awarded this week to Charles R. Scriver, white, of 606 Chaving Cross Road. The amount was not announced, Mr. Denton said, because there are still a few adjustments to be made in the contract.

Homes for New Residents

The apartments will be available only to war workers who have come to the city since July 1, 1941. They may apply to Mr. Denton at the War Housing Center, 3 St. Paul Place.

JUL 3 1943

The building unused for eight years since the Josephite Fathers transferred their school to Catholic University in Washington, will be converted into two and three-room apartments.

Rents $37.50 to $57.50

The baths will contain built-in tubs and in some cases, showers. A complete new heating plant will be installed to provide radiator heat. The four-story building will have no elevator.

JUL 3 1943

Tentative rents as submitted for approval of the OPA range from $37.50 a month for fourth-story apartments to $57.50 for first-floor apartments.

These rents include heat, light, hot water, gas and full-time janitor service.

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

Sites Selected for War Homes

WASHINGTON

Sites for erection of 300 of the 740 temporary war housing units to be constructed for colored occupants have been selected near Alabama Avenue, and Stanton Road, Southeast, it was announced Saturday by John Ihder, NCHA executive officer.

While two sites have been selected for construction of the remaining 440 units, location of these sites cannot be disclosed prior to acquisition of the land by the Housing Authority, Mr. Ihlder stated.

Only in-migrant war workers and persons moved from their homes as a result of government action will be eligible as tenants of the new houses, it was stated.

First Lady Dedicates War Workers Hotels In D. C.

Argus St. Louis, Missouri

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 25 —Climaxing a tour of war housing projects in the nation's capital, Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt officially dedicated Wake and Midway Halls, new residence hotels for Negro women war workers in the northeast section of Washington, D. C., Tuesday evening, May 18, 1943.

JUN 1943

Earlier in the evening, the First Lady inspected Lucy D. Slowe Hall residence hotel for Negro women and George Washington Carver Hall, residence hotel for Negro men. Both halls are located in the northwest section of the city.

Addressing several hundred war workers already living in Wake and Midway Halls, and a representative audience of visitors, Mrs. Roosevelt declared:

"The difference between a democracy and a totalitarian state is that a democracy serves the people while the people serve the state in countries where a dictator rules. The erection of these war-time housing projects is evidence of democracy serving the people. We need more such projects but we are making a step in the right direction."

JUN 4 1943

The dedication program included a group of songs by Roland Hayes, noted tenor, and several musical selections by the Women's Glee Club of Howard University. W. E. Reynolds, Public Works Administrator for the District of Columbia, served as master of ceremonies.

47f-1943

Housing is Delayed Again; City Council to Pass on Sites

JUL 31 1943

Afro-American
-Baltimore, Md.

Mayor Allows 15 Days for Final Decision on Herring Run Substitute; Special Council Session Today

JUL 31 1943

BALTIMORE

Construction of a 1200-unit war housing project was delayed again this week when Mayor McKeldin announced that he will call a special session of the City Council at 5 p.m. today (Friday), giving the body fifteen days in which to decide on a location for the project.

The matter was referred to the council after whites protesting against the Herring Run Park site challenged the authority of the City Plan Commission and the mayor's interracial commission, which recommended this site, to make such a selection.

City Solicitor Agrees

This opinion was substantiated by F. Murray Benson, city solicitor. The mayor further said that if the council fails to select a site which meets Federal requirements within the fifteen-day period, the recommendations of the other agencies will be submitted to the Federal housing officials.

4 Councilmen on Record

Four city councilmen, John F. Arthur, John Mullin, George Fallon, all 3rd District, and Medio Waldt, 2nd District, indicated their disapproval of the Herring Run site during a public demonstration last week at the War Memorial Building.

[EDITOR'S NOTE: The City Council is a legislative body with no administrative functions such as selecting housing sites.]

Two weeks ago, a delegation visiting Washington to complain about the five-month delay in choosing a project site was told by Oliver C. Winston, Federal Public Housing Authority regional director, that the FPHA approved the Herring Run site as recommended by the plan commission and interracial committee.

47f

Both Sides Heard

The later groups granted hearings to both opponents and proponents of the Herring Run site on Tuesday and Wednesday, respectively, in the City Hall board room.

After hearing both groups, the plan commission passed a resolution reaffirming its recommendation of the Herring Run location.

While both groups were asked to limit their delegation, the white protestants headed by the Northeastern Civic Groups, Harry Thursby, president, numbered 400.

White Foes Disorderly

Because of shouts of disapproval or bursts of applause as the various speeches were being made, this delegation was rapped to order several times.

The interracial delegation which expressed favor of the site Wednesday included 100 persons representing various organizations.

This group was led by the Citizens' Planning and Housing Committee, headed by Judge T. J. S. Waxter; and the Urban League, J. Harvey Kerns, secretary.

At this time the map which appeared in last Friday's AFRO, was presented to the plan commission by Mrs. B. M. Phillips, city editor, who pointed out that the speakers who protested the site at the War Memorial Building last week, live for the most part, a mile away from the site.

Steele Explains Stand

Joseph D. Steele, who presided at both meetings as chairman of the plan commission, read a statement to the protest delegation explaining that the commission recommended the Herring Run location as "the most logical spot within the city limits and a site ideal for its purpose."

At the same time, Francis A. Davis, white, chairman of the nine-man interracial commission, explained why this committee recommended Herring Run, "which in our opinion was the best place in the Eastern section of the city for the location of these houses."

Congressman Among Foes

Speakers for the protest delegation were John B. Gontrum, State insurance commission; Robert E. Lee Marshall, attorney and former city solicitor, and Congressman H. Street Baldwin, (D., 2nd.).

During their talks, the proposed project was referred to as a "camp for colored recruits" intended for a "foreign invasion from the South."

The twenty speakers favoring the site implored the plan commission to stick by its recommendation, pointing out the urgent need for the project to house vital war workers and to relive the already existing housing congestion.

Funds Available Since Feb.

The location for this largest war housing project has been debated since February 26, when the National Housing Agency allotted eight million dollars for the construction of 2,000 war housing units for colored tenants.

Since that time two projects which will accommodate only 800 of these units have been approved. The Benjamin Banneker Project wih 250 units is under construction at Fairfield, Md.; and preliminary work has begun on a site at Bellegrove Road, adjacent to Patapsco Park, for 550 units.

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

TENNESSEEAN HOUSING MANAGER AT TUSKEGEE

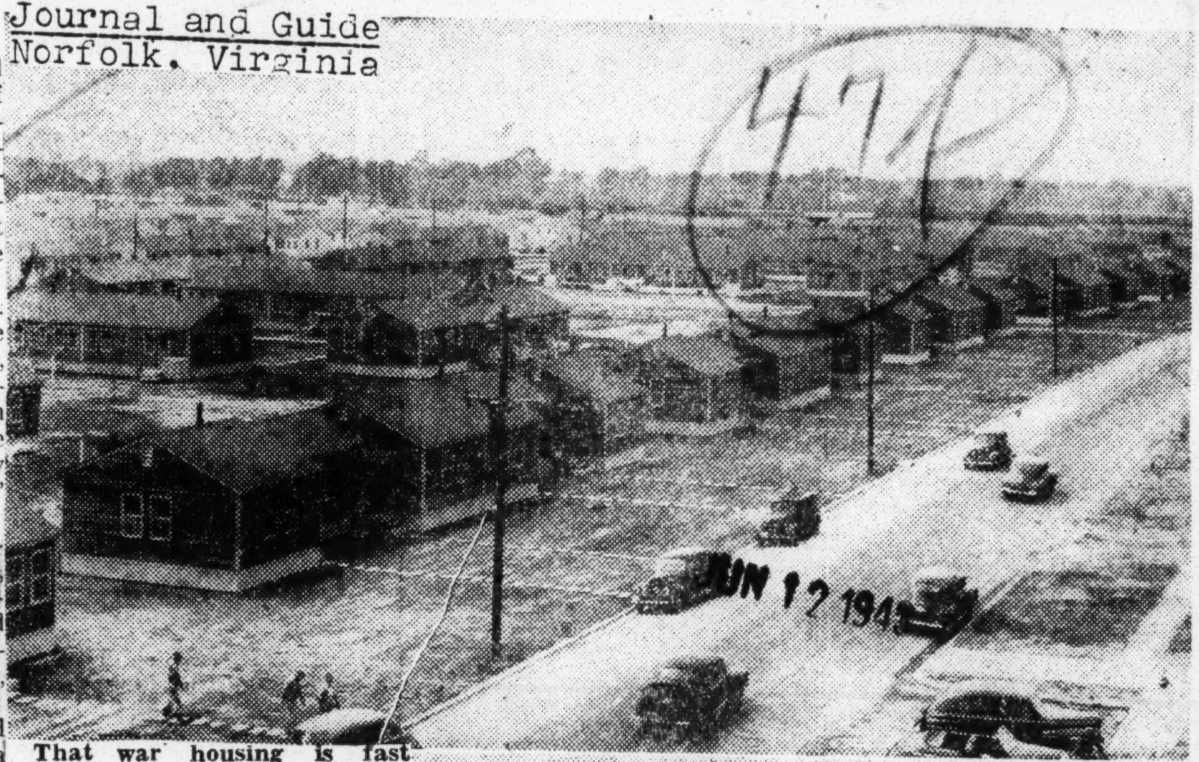
SEP 18 1943

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16—The Federal Public Housing Authority announced this week that [illegible]nce L. Benton, a native of Tennessee and formerly cashier-bookkeeper of College Hill Courts, Chattanooga, Tenn., has been appointed housing manager of the J. H. Washington Homes at Tuskegee, Alabama.

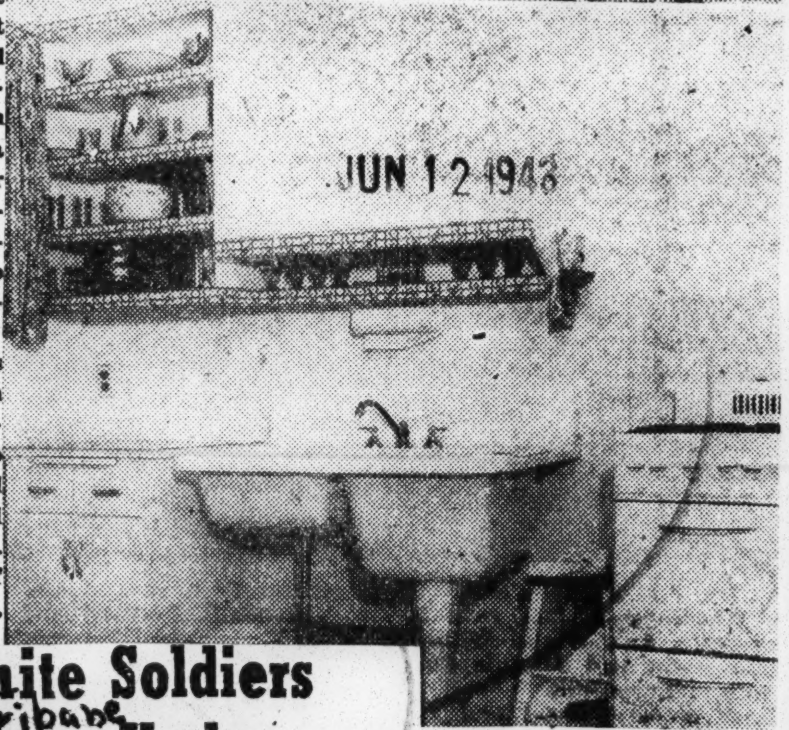
Housing Problem Fast Being Licked

Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Virginia

47f



JUN 12 1943



JUN 12 1943

That war housing is fast catching up with war plant expansion in the war-vital Hampton Roads area in Virginia is aptly demonstrated in the layout above representing a typical housing project for war workers in this area. The Government is putting on an intensive recruiting campaign to bring 8,000 badly needed workers into Norfolk's shipyards.

Some 9,000 new housing units are immediately available, with thousands more nearing completion. War Workers who come into the state will find houses such as those pictured above, available for occupancy. The highly modern kitchen of one of the homes is pictured, at right.

Colored and White Soldiers Recuperating Here Under Ideal Conditions at Forest Glen

Washington, D.C. Tribune

By GARLAND MACKEY

It was my privilege to see real democracy at work last Wednesday when along with several other representatives of the press I spent [illegible]day at the Forest Glen Annex, Walter Reed Hospital in Forest Glen, Md., as the guest of the commanding officer, Lieut. Col. Carl W. Tempel.

JUN 12 1943

[illegible] some 427 soldier patients are recuperating from various illnesses and are being reconditioned so as to return to active service. When asked the number of colored patients at the Annex Col. Tempel remarked that he not only did not know but no attempt is made to designate the patients as to race and my guess would be about as good as his. My guess would be about 100 Negroes are here for the reconditioning period which takes about three weeks.

Here one may see colored and white soldiers, drilling, eating, sleeping and playing together. There is no attempt at segregaion. At drill time those who are able and feel like it "fall in" at the command without regard to color. At meal time the men merely get in line, receive their meals and sit at any one of the many tables in the dining room.

47f

The Forest Glen Annex was formerly the National Park College, an exclusive school for rich girls. It was acquired by the Army on September 3, 1942, at a cost of $855,000. The War Department has made certain improvements costing about a million dollars.

It was acquired as an essential annex to Walter Reed Hospital, where the return of casualties from overseas, plus special cases, from our growing Army in this country, had begun to tax facilities at Walter Reed. The Annex is used only for ambulatory patients. Nurses and WAAC's are sent there as well as soldiers.

JUN 12 1943

Recreational facilities, both indoors and outdoors, are unlimited. Athletic fields used by the girl students are utilized for drilling, and sport events. There is a gymnasium, bowling alleys, shuffle board courts, basketball courts, swimming pool, recreational hall and theatre. The former grand ballroom of the school is the main recreational hall. The Annex is a city within itself with its own power and lighting system and is a natural spot of beauty of some 182 acres.

The entire command volunteered 100 percent to donate blood to the Red Cross. Even the civilian personnel volunteered for this purpose.

There were several soldiers recuperating here who had recently returned from overseas. All were suffering from minor ailments and are expected to return to active duty in the near future.

One of the most interesting men I talked with was Cpl. James Saunders, 22, of Chicago, Ill Before entering the Army Saunders was a student at Xavia University. He was in North Africa and saw President Roosevel when he visited that country Saunders' big moment in th Army was when the Presiden spoke to him and asked him wher he lived in the States. Saunders was with a Security Battalion. He liked Africa, but did not care for the climate. He expects to complete his college education when the war is over.

Christopher Harrison, of Etowah, Tenn., was in India and was attached to a Quartermaster outfit. He was overseas 9 months and hopes to get back into action.

Elabee Casteel, of Vero, Florida, spent his time abroad in London. He is fond of the English people and liked the country. Casteel was in the Christmas Day bombing of London by the Germans and said he would like nothing better than getting a chance to ('get even" with the enemy.

Sergeant Booker T. Braxton, of Chicago, was also in London on that Christmas Day when the Germans came over in planes to drop bombs on the city. Sergeant Braxton was attached to a Motor Pool. He is now assigned to limited duty.

Ura Bowers, of Cleveland, Ohio, was in England and North Africa. He was with a unit of Combat Engineers. He saw service in Tunis and is hoping to get back with his buddies.

All of the boys had nothing but the highest praise for the Red Cross and all said that it was this organization which gave them many "a lift" when paydays were few and far between. Some said at one time they went seven months without pay. The Red Cross came to their aid and furnished them with funds until their pay came through.

JUN 12 1943

The extremes in climate in North Africa seemed to affect the men more than the enemy. The blazing hot days and bitter cold nights were foes many of the men could not overcome.

At Forest Glen the men are richly being paid and deserve the excellent treatment they are getting there. The best of food, every recreational facility, comfortable rooms and surroundings are doing much to speed them to recovery. There is nothing at Forest Glen to resemble a hospital. The beds are four-poster mahogany, and all of the luxurious furnishings of the former school remains intact. The entire building reminds one more of an expensive summer club than a convalescent home for soldiers.

Chicago Defender

Baltimore Finally To Get War Housing Project After Five Months Of Stalling

Chicago, Illinois—

(Defender Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON—The Federal Public Housing Authority announced last week that a site has been selected for erection of a housing project for Negro war workers of Baltimore, Md. Selection of a site has been a matter of controversy for the past five months.

Lack of adequate housing has been one of the contributing factors to the rising racial tensions in this teeming center of war production. Last February $8,000,000 was earmarked for the construction of a project for Negroes. Objections were raised to each of three recommended sites.

The most suitable site appeared to be one known as Herring Run Park. But the real estate interests of Baltimore objected t this site being utilized for the housing of Negroes. The influence was brought to bear on the Baltimore Housing Authority and upon the Baltimore city Council. Organized protests were made to the FPHA.

AUG 7 1943

Delay Decision

Following an unfortunate tradition of vacillation, the FPHA hedged on making a decision, even though delay in constructing the project was a definite set-back to the war production program in the Baltimore area. Despite the authority of the FPHA to choose sites on its own decisions, after consultation with local housing authorities and communities, the agency failed to act in the urgent emergency.

This procrastination gave courage to the organized opposition. Negroes and liberal whites of Baltimore began exerting pressure on the FPHA to exercise its authority and meet its obligations.

To counteract this effort of the community, the Baltimore city council has just recently passed a city ordinance forbidding the federal government establishing any housing project for in-migrant workers unless the site upon which it is to be located shall have been finally approved and authorized by ordinance of the mayor and city council of Baltimore.

Under this ordinance, the city council threatens to take the matter to court. John B. Gontrum, state insurance commissioner and one of three attorneys representing the opposition to the site said the decision of the FPHA to select the Herring Run Park site was in violation and defiance of local laws and an overriding of local government. Acting Mayor Thomas E. Conlon, during absence of Mayor McKeldin who is on vacation in Maine, said last week he had requested the city solicitor to make a study of the legal aspects of the housing problem looking toward possible court action "to protect the city's interest."

AUG 7 1943

Federal Responsibility

The FPHA has taken the position that there is no provision in the federal law requiring the federal government to obtain city approval of a site of a housing development.

"As a matter of fact," the government maintains, "there is an express provision in the Lanham Act that these projects may be constructed without any regard to any municipal laws, ordinances, rules, or regulations, and this provision is merely declaratory of the law that is applicable to all war housing projects of the federal government.

"The duty and responsibility for the selection of the site for these war housing projects rests with the federal government."

The FPHA maintains, however that it is its policy and that it has always sought and given full consideration to local views and recommendations, as is evidenced on this particular project by the long and extended discussions with various public officials.

Permanent Homes

Despite the opposition of the city council and the real estate board the location of the project has been approved by an interracial commission appointed by the mayor. In this connection, the FPHA declared in a communication to the mayor:

"In the development of the Negro housing project on the Herring Run site, we are accepting virtually all of the suggestions made by the commission on city plan and the interracial commission which are summarized in your letter of July 23....

"Moreover, we are acceding to the overwhelming sentiment in the city of Baltimore that these houses be made permanent so that after the war they can help to alleviate the unsafe, insanitary and overcrowded housing conditions under which so many Negroes are living."

Negro and liberal white citizens of Baltimore made a strong appeal for this type of action through a delegation which waited on the FPHA and National Housing Agency officials last month.

Washington Tribune

Washington, D. C.

To Build 3,200 Units for War Workers Here

SEP 4 1943

According to an announcement made public this week by the National Housing Agency war workers can now have their fears of additional housing allayed. A total of 3,200 units for Negroes was approved by the Washington Housing Association early this week.

Some 1,000 of these units will be constructed by the government and the remaining 2,200 are to be built by private funds.

A statement by NHA Administrator John B. Biandford, Jr., revealed that with these units, scheduled to be started in the very near future, there are all indications that war housing now available for occupancy, plus the large number of projects under discussion or scheduled for early starting, will meet the backlog needs of Washington war workers and accommodate further immigration of war labor anticipated up to 1944.

More Houses For Los Angeles

Courier

Pittsburgh, Pa.

SEP 18 1943

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 16—Additional housing facilities for the Los Angeles area were definitely promised by Howard [illegible] Holtzendorff, executive director [illegible] city Housing Authority, following his return from Washington. Holtzendorff held several conferences there with John B. Blandford, Jr., administrator of the National Housing Agency whom he stated was deeply impressed with the need for war worker housing here.

One thousand units have thus far been programed for this area. Five hundred of these will be constructed and managed by the city authority and the like number by the [illegible], will be made available f[illegible] employees of the navy. The units to [illegible]andled by the city authority [illegible] be built as soon as possible, will be located probably in the Southwestern part of the city and are to be open to all races, on the basis of need.

A survey by the NHA shows that the demands in this area are for two and three-bedroom units. Private housing groups have previously adhered to the one-bed-room type but due to the growing demand for the former the local FHA office has requested that plans be changed to meet the existing circumstances.

According to Milton Fischer, National Housing Agency regional representative, "Negro war workers already employed here are living under clearly intolerable conditions. Additional Negro workers will be needed for war jobs in the coming months."

The Bureau of Labor Statistics has revealed that there is desperate need for colored housing here.

47f-1943

Hart Fights Housing for War Workers and Negroes

PM
New York, N. Y.

U. S. Officials Say He's Issued Thousands of Pamphlets

By ELIZABETH DONAHUE
PM's Bureau

JUL 21 1943

WASHINGTON, July 21.—Merwin K. Hart, pro-Franco propagandist and veteran critic of the Administration, is now circulating a booklet calling upon taxpayers to revolt against a Federal housing program for war workers—especially Negroes.

Officials of the National Housing Agency—chief target of Hart's attack—say that "thousands" have received the pamphlet entitled The Bureaucrats Come to Town.

Merwin K. Hart

The booklet is intended to counsel home-owners that the Federal Government will condemn their property as a preliminary to providing quarters for Negro war workers.

Hart's essay describes how a purely "residential" Illinois town is invaded by a national housing official who warns the people to convert their homes into "tenements," 10 per cent of which are to be occupied by Negroes.

JUL 21 1943

47

The booklet depicts a mass meeting at which a heroic taxpayer comes to the aid of the beleaguered townspeople. Hart puts these words into the hero's mouth: "The proposition is just one more attempt of the Federal Bureaucracy to control state and local Governments."

Then the hero asks: "Does the list (of tenants) include white and colored?"

Taxpayers 'Rebel'

The NHA official is described as growling this reply: "Certainly. We have the power, if we choose to exercise it."

At this point, Hart reports, the "taxpayers" rebel. The "bureaucrat" flees.

JUL 21 1943

Presumably everyone (except Negro war workers) lives happily ever after.

Apart from the propaganda contained in the pamphlet, the document distorts these recorded facts about the NHA's home-conversion program:

¶ The NHA plan provides that a home owner cannot lease his home to the Government unless "it is within a specific critical area"—not a residential section as described by Hart.

¶ The home must also be "accessible to war plants."

JUL 21 1943

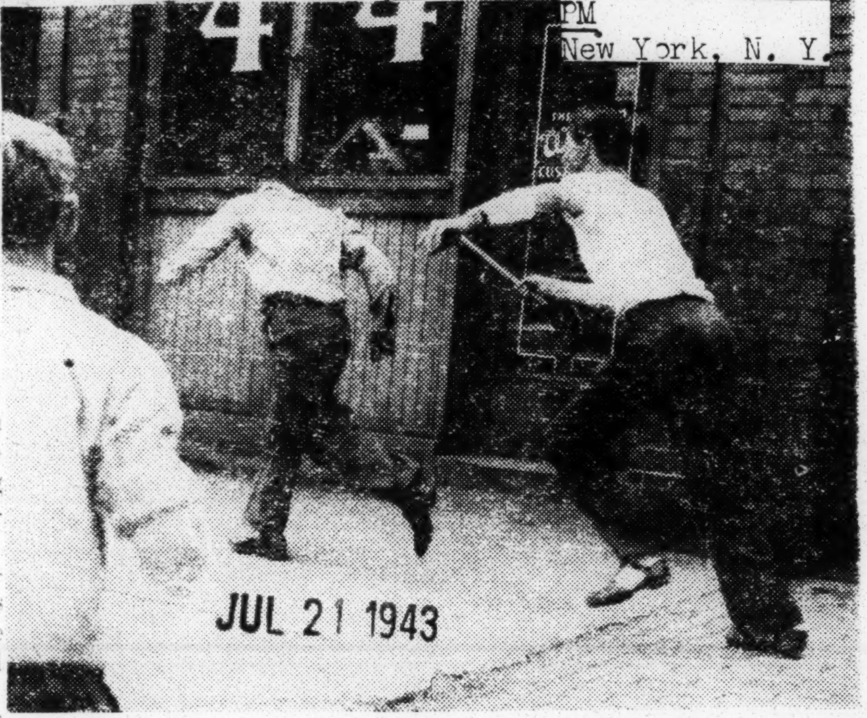
¶ The arrangement cannot violate zoning ordinances; the home owners can choose tenants from a long list of war-workers; and the house must be returned to the owner at the end of the war.

Before Pearl Harbor Hart was Franco's chief U. S. promoter. In the foreword to his latest pamphlet he says:

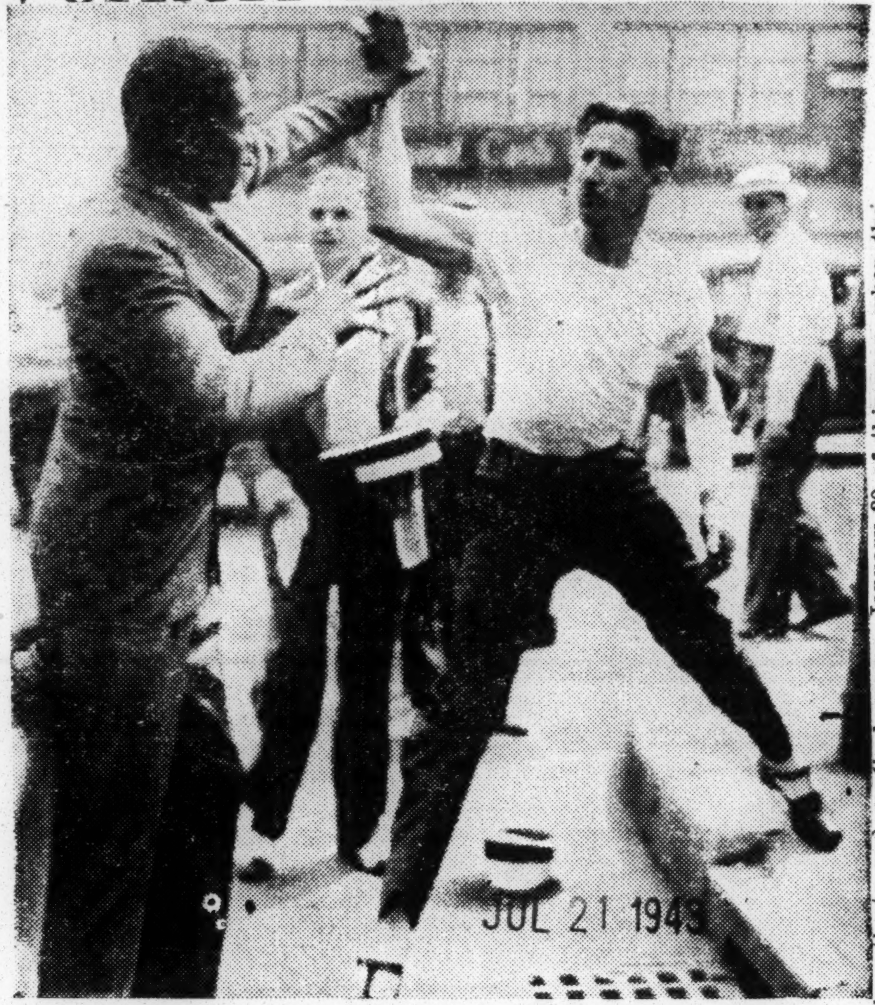
47

"This story is a true account of what happened in a town not more than a thousand miles from the city of Chicago. It might happen anywhere—only in many instances, we fear no citizen spoke up."

Commenting on Hart's narrative, housing officials here assert that any resemblance to real characters—either living or dead—is purely accidental. They have no record of the incident.



JUL 21 1943



JUL 21 1943

Although nearly a month late, Detroit police are combing the city for Robert Morgan as one of the rioters in the recent riots. Morgan is the white man in the two pictures above, reprinted from PM's editions for June 23. Detroit police officials told PM by telephone that Morgan has served time in Federal and state prisons and that he was taken into custody two weeks ago, but was released since there was no complainant. The police were goaded into action after the Detroit Free Press, whose photographers took the pictures, republished the pictures Sunday, asking why the police hadn't done anything about arresting Morgan. Monday, Isaac Green, a Packard Motor Car Co. worker, signed a complaint, charging that one blow given him by Morgan with a steel pipe will mean permanent facial disfigurement. Green says also that police held him for five days for "investigation" merely because he had gone to police headquarters to help a friend, after his own injuries were treated.

JUL 21 1943

All Men 'Yanks,' Regardless Of Race, Davis Finds

Pittsburgh, Pa. Courier

By JOHN P. DAVIS
(Staff Correspondent)

JUN 19 1943

WASHINGTON, June 17—They are all just "Yanks" at the Forest Glenn annex of Walter Reed hospital—a new Army convalescent home for wounded soldiers back from overseas and from Army camps in this area—all Yanks, regardless of race, creed or color. Negro and white wounded soldiers eat together, march together—and they get well together and return to their units ready to fight Hitler and fascism with a new high morale.

"The boys are all patients, all handled as one army. We just have a job to do and we are all doing it together." That's the way Lt. Col. Carl W. Tempel, medical officer in charge of the Annex, stated the case.

GRAND FACILITIES

Roughly, 450 soldiers are now convalescent at this 1,100-bed hospital annex, under the general command of Brig. Gen. Shelley U. Marietta, who is in charge of the entire hospital facilities of Walter Reed hospital.

The Forest Glenn annex is unique in many respects. It was formerly a famous girls' school, acquired by the Army for hospital purposes, at a cost of 850,000.

EVERYTHING IS ULTRA-MODERN

The treatment given patients is different, too. Here, the soldier is given the most modern medical treatments, but he is, at the same time, made to feel that his job at the Annex is to get into condition as quickly as possible to return to his Army unit. Thus, morning drill, led by officer patients' hikes, setting-up exercises and an abundance of good Army chow, aid in quick recovery (usually three weeks) of the sick and wounded soldiers.

SMALL "CITY"

The Forest Glen annex is a city in itself—a city with its own power and heating plant, a chapel and gymnasium, 182 acres of rolling land, with drill field, victory gardens and spacious quarters for both patients and medical personnel. Maintenance of the facility is under the direct supervision of Capt. H. H. Yanz, who has a Negro medical detachment of 146 soldiers, whose record for co-operation was highly praised both by Captain Yanz and Lieutenant Colonel Tempel.

JUN 19 1943

The Negro medical detachment volunteered 100 per cent as blood donors to the Red Cross. It has a perfect record of discipline since January 20 of this year, when the facility was first opened. Relations between patients and soldiers are excellent. M/Sgt. James Baker, former administrator of a New York City home relief bureau, is the ranking Negro non-commissioned officer.

CONSTANT NEW FACES STIMULATE

But, perhaps, the most interesting feature of the Annex is the steady stream of wounded soldiers, returned from overseas, who pass through the convalescent treatments afforded at Forest Glen. Last week, Negro boys who had been in India, West Africa, North Africa, England and other war theatres, were hospital patients. Five of them talked with newspapermen who visited the Annex. They were: Cpl. James Saunders, a former student at Xavier university, New Orleans, La., whose home is in Chicago. Saunders is back from Casablanca, where he was attached to an air base security unit. Sgt. Booker T. Braxton, also of Chicago, is back from his station in Liverpool England. Pvt. Ura Bowers, a Cleveland boy, is back from North Africa; and coming the longest distance was Pvt. Christopher Harrison, of Etawah, Tenn., whom the Army flew back from India, by way of West Africa, after nine months in India.

All of the men were in fine spirits, despite their illnesses. One of them, Corporal Saunders, was at Casablanca at the time of the arrival of President Roosevelt for the historic "unconditional surrender conference" with Churchill. "What did F.D.R. do on arrival?" Saunders was asked. "He came through our ranks, shook hands with us and asked us where our hometown was; if we were getting enough to eat. He shook hands with me and wanted to know how I liked the food. He was swell," Saunders replied.

TELLS OF CASABLANCA

Saunders—as well as a number of other Negro and white soldiers—was returned because he developed asthma. Asked about the reason for this, the 22-year-old corporal put it this way: "You get up in the morning and you want your overcoat; it's so cold. Then the sun comes up, and from 12 to 5 o'clock you want to pull off everything you've got on. Then after five, you want a field jacket. And after nine, it's blankets, overcoats and everything you can find for cover."

He had many amusing reactions to things he saw at Casablanca. He laughingly told of his experience with little Arab shoeshine boys who would speak up to the soldiers and say, "Sing a song, Yank?" When the soldiers pitched them a coin, said Saunders, the shrill little boy voices would break out in the chorus of "Deep in the Heart of Texas."

PRAISE FOR RED CROSS

"What about the Red Cross?" Answer: "Fine. They have a fine Negro servicemen's club at Casablanca. We got our smokes, our papers, books everything from the Red Cross.

Other men told the same story of treatment by the Red Cross and the French and British people in North Africa and England.

The boys from North Africa had warm praise for their commanding officer, General Patton. They called him "Old Blood and Guts."

Scores of ther Negro soldiers—not from overseas, but sent for special treatment—seemed to be having the finest care. The large ballroom of the Annex has been converted into a recreation room. There the men play cards, ping-pong, lounge in comfortable chairs and read letters from home or their favorite papers.

Namesake Of Slave--Artisan Has Built U. S. Projects Valued At $2,800,000

Tribune
Philadelphia, Pa.

JUN 5 1943

Down in Montgomery, Ala., there is a fine old colonial mansion which has been preserved as an outstanding example of early American architecture. Visitors to the historic site are told that the mansion was constructed by Samuel Carter, one of the most famous of the many Negro slave-artisans of the old South. Today, a namesake of Samuel Carter—the son of one of his most apt appretences—is carrying on the tradition of the early Negro artisan, and on a scale which the slave-builder scarcely have imagined.

Within the last 18 months this namesage, Samuel Plato, has completed Federal projects costing more than $2,800,000. In his 35 years as a building contractor he has constructed 28 U. S. Post Offices. He has erected armory buildings for the State of Ohio at Zanesville and Senia.

The contractor has just completed Wake and Midway Halls, residence buildings in Washington, D. C., for the Federal Works Agency. These temporary buildings will house 1,123 women war workers, with facilities for an infirmary, cafeteria, recreation hall, laundry, beauty parlor, and other community accommodations.

497

It is a long step from Samuel Carter to Samuel Plato, but it is a direct step. When the old slave-builder obtained his freedom, he set out to perpetuate his tradition by apprenticing several promising young Negroes in his native Alabama. One of his favorite apprentices was James Plato, an ambitious young resident of Waugh, Ala., near Tuskegee.

So pleased was Carter at young Plato's aptitude that he bequeathed him his tools at his death. And so grateful was Plato, to his benefactor that, when his first son was born, he christened him Samuel in honor of his esteemed instructor.

Young Samuel lived up to his name—early. At eight, he had learned to use the tools of his trade. At 17, he received his first big job as a builder—on the construction of a country store. At 18, his skill as a carpenter had attracted so much attention that a white neighbor, Mr. Grant, urged him to set up business as a building contractor and assisted him in his early efforts.

His first contract was for the erection of a residence for the director of the Indiana Business College. The director, who had seen few skilled Negroes in Marion, was so pleased with the job that he became friendly with the contractor and discussed his problems. As a result, Mr. Plato was able to induce the educator to admit Negroes to his school for the first time, after outlining the need for more trained Negro business men and technicians.

Since then, Plato has aided and employed many trained Negro technicians, in his own business. His project manager and purchasing agent, Charles L. Christian, who has been with him for 25 years, is a graduate of Indiana University His cost accountant, Milton Wilson, comes from the same school. His chief engineer, James Braxton, is a Stevens Institute of Technology graduate and a former instructor in engineering at Atianta University. His staff also includes his wife, Mrs. Elnora Plato, his chief accountant, and his brother(William Plato, a civil engineer.

The Samuel Plato organization is not an all-Negro outfit, however... The superintendent of production, Charles T. Milder, is white, as are three of the general foremen, William Schultz, William Netherton, and Albert Pederson. A majority of the mechanics who built Wake and Midway Halls are white also, although a large number of Negro carpenters were brought into the local union through Mr. Plato's efforts. The project employed an average of 600 persons, but peak employment reached more than 1,500.

The Washington job was not his first or largest venture in war housing construction. Last year he built a $1,400,000 defense homes project for war workers in Baltimore. Earlier the Plato organization erected a $350,000 Federal housing project in Louisville. Ky. A Post Office which he built at Phillipsburg, N. J., attracted national attention because of the variety of brick and native stone used in its construction.

2,300 More Worker Homes Set As Goal

Courier-Journal

Welfare Director Says Influx Continues Here

Louisville, Ky.

There is no noticeable decrease in the number of people being brought here for war work, and within the next six months some 2,300 housing units will be needed to accommodate vital war workers, Miss Louise Diecks, acting director of welfare for the City, said in a radio address yesterday over station WAVE.

The talk was a part of the promotional program being carried forward by the War Housing Committee here to see to it that all war workers who must be brought into this area find a place to live.

Shortage Still Acute.

Miss Diecks said that the Federal Public Housing Authority's releasing to Louisville war workers 435 of the housing units in the new Pleasant Ridge Homes project near Charlestown, Ind., was "very encouraging," but she said these units "will not begin to meet the great and continuing demand for housing."

The speaker declared the War Housing Committee still considers the situation here acute in regard both to homes for white and Negro war workers. She pointed out that Louisville is one of the most important of the 170 war production centers in the United States and has not reached its full degree of expansion.

The War Housing Center, 506 W. Jefferson, can furnish information on any of the three programs now going on here looking toward supplying increased housing, Miss Diecks pointed out. She stressed particularly the programs of public financing of conversion of housing units, private financing, and sharing idle home space.

Group Is Formed to Assist Negro War Workers' Housing

Courier-Journal
Louisville, Ky.

SEP 2 1943

A Negro subcommittee yesterday went into action to help the War Housing Center obtain housing accommodations for Negro war workers.

Appointment of the committee was announced by Housing Chairman Nicholas H. Dosker, who pointed out the group would help promote for Negro war workers the housing center's various programs. These include the share-the-home program, the Government conversion of housing to multiple units and the clearing of available housing through the activities of the housing center.

The subcommittee is composed of Earle E. Pruitt, Beecher Terrace manager, chairman; J. R. Ray, insurance firm president; J. H. Humes, realty man; Robert E. Black, executive secretary of the Louisville Urban League; I. Willis Cole, publisher; F. L. Stanley, newspaper executive; McKay Bonner, realty man, and J. L. Leake, insurance company manager.

Dosker explained that Negro war worker housing programs have lagged and the committee felt that a Negro subcommittee could help increase their effectiveness.

47f-1943

Washington Post
Washington, D. C

Loan Sought For D.C. Slum Redemption

JUN 29 1943

Following recent disclosures on the health and morale menace to the Nation's Capital from extensive slum areas here, the advisory committee of the ~~War Housing~~ Center yesterday adopted a resolution, pointed at Congress, asking that $5,000,000 be made available at once as a loan to the National Capital Housing Authority, "to acquire and demolish unfit and insanitary dwellings" and to erect "proper dwellings" in their place.

The newly built homes, the resolution specified, should be for occupancy by "low-income families, equal in number to those who are displaced by the demolition, irrespective of whether these families are warworkers; provided that critical materials can be made available without impeding the war effort."

For Low-Income Families

47f

The recommendation that slum areas be rebuilt for low-income families "irrespective of whether these families are warworkers," highlights the stand Washington social agencies have taken in opposition to National Housing Administrator John B. Blandford's order that all war housing be restricted solely to the use of "indispensable" warworkers. Civic groups like the Washington Housing Association have long pointed to the fact that thousands of families here are living under unbearable conditions or have been dispossessed to make way for Federal buildings without provision for their housing from Government funds.

Further prompting the advisory committee's action has been recent information that listings at the War Housing Center reveal seriously inadequate housing for Negro families.

Dangerously Overcrowded

The resolution points out that "the low-income population of the District of Columbia, especially the low-income Negro population, is dangerously overcrowded and that their present dwellings constitute a "hazard to our war effort." All new housing is now restricted "not only to warworkers but even more narrowly to inmigrant warworkers," the statement asserts.

JUN 29 1943

The five-million-dollar appropriation requested for the National Capital Housing Authority was authorized by Congress some five years ago when it was known as the Alley Dwelling Authority, but actual funds were never appropriated.

New York Times
New York, N. Y

BALTIMORE SEEKS NEW NEGRO HOMES

Influx of War Workers Has Sharpened Racial Ferment in That City

JUL 23 1943

CROWDING IS ASSAILED

Authorities Concede That 'Jim Crow' Conditions Are a Principal Problem

JUL 23 1943

By TURNER CATLEDGE

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BALTIMORE, July 22—Public officials and civic leaders here are trying desperately to relieve a critical housing condition among the local Negro population as the first and longest step toward relieving a racial problem that has advanced to a new degree of acuteness with each month since 1940.

An estimated 200,000 Negroes, or about 20 per cent of the city's total population, live today in "three-ringed" districts whose total area comprises less than four square miles of the city's total 78.6. They are huddled there under sanitary conditions which are conceded to be virtual mockery of this great capital of medical science. Crime and dissension are said to be mounting among the colored people in direct ratio to their deprivation, and agitation is finding a fertile field in unrest and irritation.

JUL 23 1943

2,000 a Month Arriving

Additional Negroes are still coming to Baltimore at an estimated rate of 2,000 a month to work in defense factories. Where are they going to live? That is the question facing this community—facing it under the realization of its highest officials that unless something is done to relieve the congestion, overt trouble may not be avoided.

The race situation in Baltimore is not as dynamic on its face as it is in Detroit, Chicago and other metropolitan centers. This is due, in the opinion of local observers, largely to the Southlike pattern by which the races have lived for almost eighty years in this predominantly Southern community.

But the city of Baltimore itself has undergone, and is undergoing today, one of the most striking conversions from peacetime to wartime conditions to be found anywhere among the country's larger cities. With this conversion have developed fundamentals in the race problem that have caused sociologists who deal with it on a national scale to classify Baltimore as one of the greatest areas of potential race tension in the United States.

Exploratory Commission Set Up

Fortunately, the underlying conditions are well known to local leaders. Long before the outbreak in Detroit Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor set up a commission to study the Negro problem in Maryland. His action followed a near-explosion of racial wrath when a Baltimore policeman shot and killed a Negro soldier in February, 1942.

It was largely from the statistics assembled by the Governor's commission and from facts developed by Thomas O'Neill, a painstaking reporter, in a series in The Baltimore Evening Sun, that the national sociologists reached their conclusions relative to Baltimore.

Mayor Theodore R. McKeldin, in office only since May, is now actively engaged with Federal housing officials in trying to locate a defense housing project which would furnish 1,200 new home units for Baltimore's Negroes. A site already has been selected on Philadelphia Road but the Mayor and housing officials are running into strong opposition, led by Representative H. Street Baldwin of the Second Congressional District, and egged on by other politicians and certain members of the Catholic, Protestant and Jewish clergy.

JUL 23 1943

Problem Not Pressing Before 1940

The acuteness of Baltimore's racial problem is traceable largely to the war. Long before the preparedness drive started in 1940 Baltimore had an extraordinarily large Negro population. But Baltimoreans saw no particular problem growing out of it. The Negroes lived in a section in the northwest, another in the northeast and another in the southern part of the city. Those sections then, as now, were little "rings" of Negro dwellers, living mostly in houses abandoned by whites and confined to these areas by air-tight landlord covenants which prevented them from buying or renting property elsewhere. Out of more than 15,000 houses in which Negroes live today, it is estimated that less than 200 were built originally for Negroes.

The Negro population is distributed about 58,000 a square mile, compared with the density among whites of slightly more than 9,000 the square mile. There are hardly more than 100 dwellings, of all descriptions, for each 1,000 Negroes, compared with more than 200 for each 1,000 whites. Negroes who in war work make as high as $10 and $15 a day and are willing to pay $20 to $30 a week for housing are compelled, in hundreds of cases, to live in veritable pens, with outside toilets, renting, under the "ceilings," for less than $5 a week.

Specific Crowding Cited

The case which he discovered today of thirty-six Negroes living in a six-room house was described by Thomas J. S. Waxter, former judge of the Children's Court, and now head of the Bureau of Public Welfare. He told us of another case in which two Negro married couples shared a single room with a single woman. J. Harvey Kernes, executive secretary of the Urban League, told of finding a house, suitable for not more than five families in which more than fifty Negroes were huddled.

JUL 23 1943

Figures on death and crime are offered by officials as telling their own story of such conditions. More than half of all deaths from tuberculosis and pneumonia in Baltimore, according to the Governor's commission, occur among the Negroes, comprising only one-fifth of the population. A meningitis epidemic in 1942 was traced directly to crowded conditions in the Negro section, from which 33 per cent of all cases were reported. The general death rate among Negroes in Baltimore in 1942 was 17.2 per thousand of population; among whites, 12.

Every hour for twenty-four hours a day, 365 days a year—on the average, of course—a Negro is taken into a police station charged with some infraction of the law, according to Mr. O'Neill's findings. The Governor's commission found that 54 per cent of all arrests for common assault were among Negroes, as were 65 per cent of arrests for burglary; 83 per cent of arrests for assault with intent to kill; 82 per cent of all arrests for unlawful homicide; 60 per cent of all arrests for assaults on police—a crime for which Negroes were hardly ever accused in Baltimore until a few years ago.

JUL 23 1943

School Accommodation Inadequate

Negro school facilities in Baltimore are even smaller today than in 1940, according to city authorities. There are forty-five Negro schools of all categories to serve a total of more than 30,000 school children.

Under the Southern "Jim Crow" pattern, as followed here, Negroes and whites attend separate schools. They also use separate recreational facilities, public and private. Negro leaders contend that there are only five tennis courts, four baseball diamonds and one first-rate swimming pool that the Negroes may use in Baltimore.

The chief source and place of recreation for Negroes in Baltimore is the "Avenoo"—a stretch of Pennsylvania Avenue hardly more than six blocks long where, on Saturday nights, as many as 25,000 to 30,000 are on the sidewalks and in the streets.

JUL 23 1943

Realizing their plight, officials and civic leaders of Baltimore are devoting themselves earnestly to the task of reducing the tensions. A new citizens' group, known as the "Unity for Victory Committee," has been formed under the chairmanship of Harold Buchman, young white lawyer, to work in conjunction with the Urban League. The league is headed by the Rev. Bruce McDonald, pastor of the Westminster Presbyterian Church, a white congregation. The committee and the Urban League have undertaken the job of planning the general strategy for bringing about better race relations on all fronts. All heads agree, however, that the first and foremost factor in th erace problem in Baltimore is the matter of housing and that, in the final analysis, is up to the public authorities.

Chicago Defender
Chicago, Illinois

8 CHICAGOANS IN N. AFRICA HOSPITAL UNIT

Staff Headed By Dr. West, Formerly Provident Medical Chief

MAR 13 1943

ALGIERS.— Eight Chicago doctors and nurses were among the first party of colored hospital personnel to take up posts here since American occupation.

Marching through the streets on their arrival the party stopped traffic as American soldiers halted to extend their greetings to the group of 30 nurses and nine doctors.

Heading the doctors is Major John B. West, formerly medical director of Provident hospital in Chicago.

The nurses were headed by First Lieut. Susan E. Freeman of Washington, who also has seen service in Chicago's Provident hospital.

MAR 13 1943

Greets Cousin

The other Chicago doctor was Lieut. Samuel Matthews a graduate of the University of Illinois.

The nurses from Provident were Lieuts. Alma Favors, Alberta Holt, Jewell Patterson, Esther Stewart and Rosemary Vinson.

Lieutenant Favors on her arrival met her cousin, Staff Sergeant Paul Favors of Detroit, former sparring partner for Joe Louis.

Others in the hospital party were Capt. Harry P. Williams, Martinsville, W. Va., Howard U.; Capt. John B. Falconer, Lincoln university; Chaplain Lieut. E. H. Nickens, Washington Howard U.; Lieut. Watson Fowler of Cincinnati, Meharry; Lieutenant Claytor of Roanoke, Va. Meharry; Lieut. William A. Cleveland of Durham, N. C., Howard U.; Lieut. Harry S. Davis of Washington, Howard U.

The nurses include: Lieuts. Mattie Aikens, Macon City hospital; Maria August, Spelman U.; Eva Boggers, Homer Phillips hospital, S. Louis, Durham; Thelma Calloway, Lincoln hospital, New York;

Lieuts. Daryle Forster, Mercy hospital, Philadelphia; Philoy Frierson, North Carolina State Sanitorium; Roby Gill, Kansas City General; Lela Green, Kansas City General; Norma Greene, St. Philip, Richmond;

MAR 13 1943

Lieuts. Susan Harris, Provident hospital, Baltimore; Clara A. Henry, Los Angeles County hospital; Winona Hibbler, Kansas City General hospital; Gertrude Ivory, of Brewster hospital, Jacksonville, Fla.; Louise Jacobs, Lincoln, New York.

MAR 13 1943

Lieuts. Parfeania Jones, John Andrew Memorial hospital, Tuskegee; Margaret Kendrick; Zola Lang, Freedmen's hospital, Washington; Chrystalee Maxwell, Kansas City General hospital; Sammie Rice, St. Agnes hospital, Raleigh;

Lieuts. Ellen Robinson, Homer Phillips hospital, St. Louis; Dolores Smith, Hot Springs; Sarah Thomas, Dixie hospital, Hampton; and Idell Webb, Kansas City General hospital.

Birmingham, Ala., Age-Herald
October 21, 1943

GRENADA PROJECT OKEHED

ATLANTA, Oct. 20—(AP)—The regional office of Federal Public Housing Authority announced Wednesday approval of a contract for construction of war housing in Grenada, Miss., including factory fabrication and erection of 60 dwelling units on a site being prepared by another contractor. Algernon Blair, Montgomery, Ala., is the contractor, the amount $86,000 with 75 days to complete, beginning Oct. 20.

47f

Atlanta Rental Vacancy Is Lowest in History

Atlanta, Ga. Journal

Shortage Can Only Be Met by Maximum Use of Accommodations, Creighton Says

Atlanta today probably has the lowest habitable rental vacancy rate in its history, it was indicated Saturday as Robert K. Creighton, regional representative of the National Housing Agency, made public the results of a dwelling unit vacancy survey conducted here by the Bureau of the Census.

The total number of units for white occupancy for rent in a habitable condition amounts to only 1 per cent, and of the total number of units for Negroes, only .4 per cent were found to be for rent and in a habitable condition, the survey disclosed.

Almost nine-tenths of the total vacancies have an average monthly rental of only $20.

With the disclosure of the alarming housing shortage, Mr. Creighton declared that the war housing program here can meet the need "only by maximum use of existing household accommodations."

"A stringent policy of complete utilization of available dwelling units is designed to save utilities, transportation and labor, as well as materials," he said.

Atlanta's gross vacancy rate during the latter part of August was only 1.1 per cent, figures from the sample survey released to Mr Creighton by Director J. J. Capt of the Bureau of the Census shows.

The vacancy rate here now is tighter than it was last February when a similar survey was made. At that time the gross vacancy rate was 1.6 per cent. The gross vacancy rate in August was 1.2 per cent for dwellings for whites and .7 per cent for dwellings for Negroes.

The recent survey represented an enumeration of more than 8,200 dwelling units in a sample carefully selected to represent all types of structures in all sections of the city, exclusive of public housing developments.

The estimated total number of dwelling units in Atlanta is 90,000—60,000 for white residents and 30,000 for Negroes. Of the total units for whites, 98.9 per cent are occupied, and of the total for Negroes, 99.3 per cent are occupied. Of the total unoccupied dwellings, .2 per cent are classed as unfit for use.

The average size of the habitable vacancies was two rooms and more than three-fifths were equipped with all the standard facilities, including installed heating, gas or electric lights, running water, flush toilet and bathing unit.

Of the habitable non-rental vacancies, which amounted to .1 per cent, more than one-fourth were for sale and the remainder were held off the rental market at the choice of the owners.

In addition to the vacant dwellings, it was estimated from interviews with household members that about 1,600 rooms in occupied dwellings were available for rent. These rooms were expected to be adequate for accommodating about 2,700 roomers. Of these rooms, seven-eighths were in dwellings occupied by white families.

These figures, Mr. Creighton said, emphasize the importance of the "Share-Your Home" campaign which is being sponsored for the War Housing Center here by the Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Post
Washington, D. C.

99 Families To Be Placed In New Homes

New homes for 99 of the 112 Negro families to be evicted by construction of the military highway from Bolling Field to Camp Springs, Md., have been assured by the National Capital Housing Authority, and the other 13 families have located new quarters "on their own hook," John Ihlder, executive officer of NCHA, said yesterday.

Because they are being evicted by the War Department, the families will be allowed to occupy housing projects constructed for in-migrant war workers, Ihlder said.

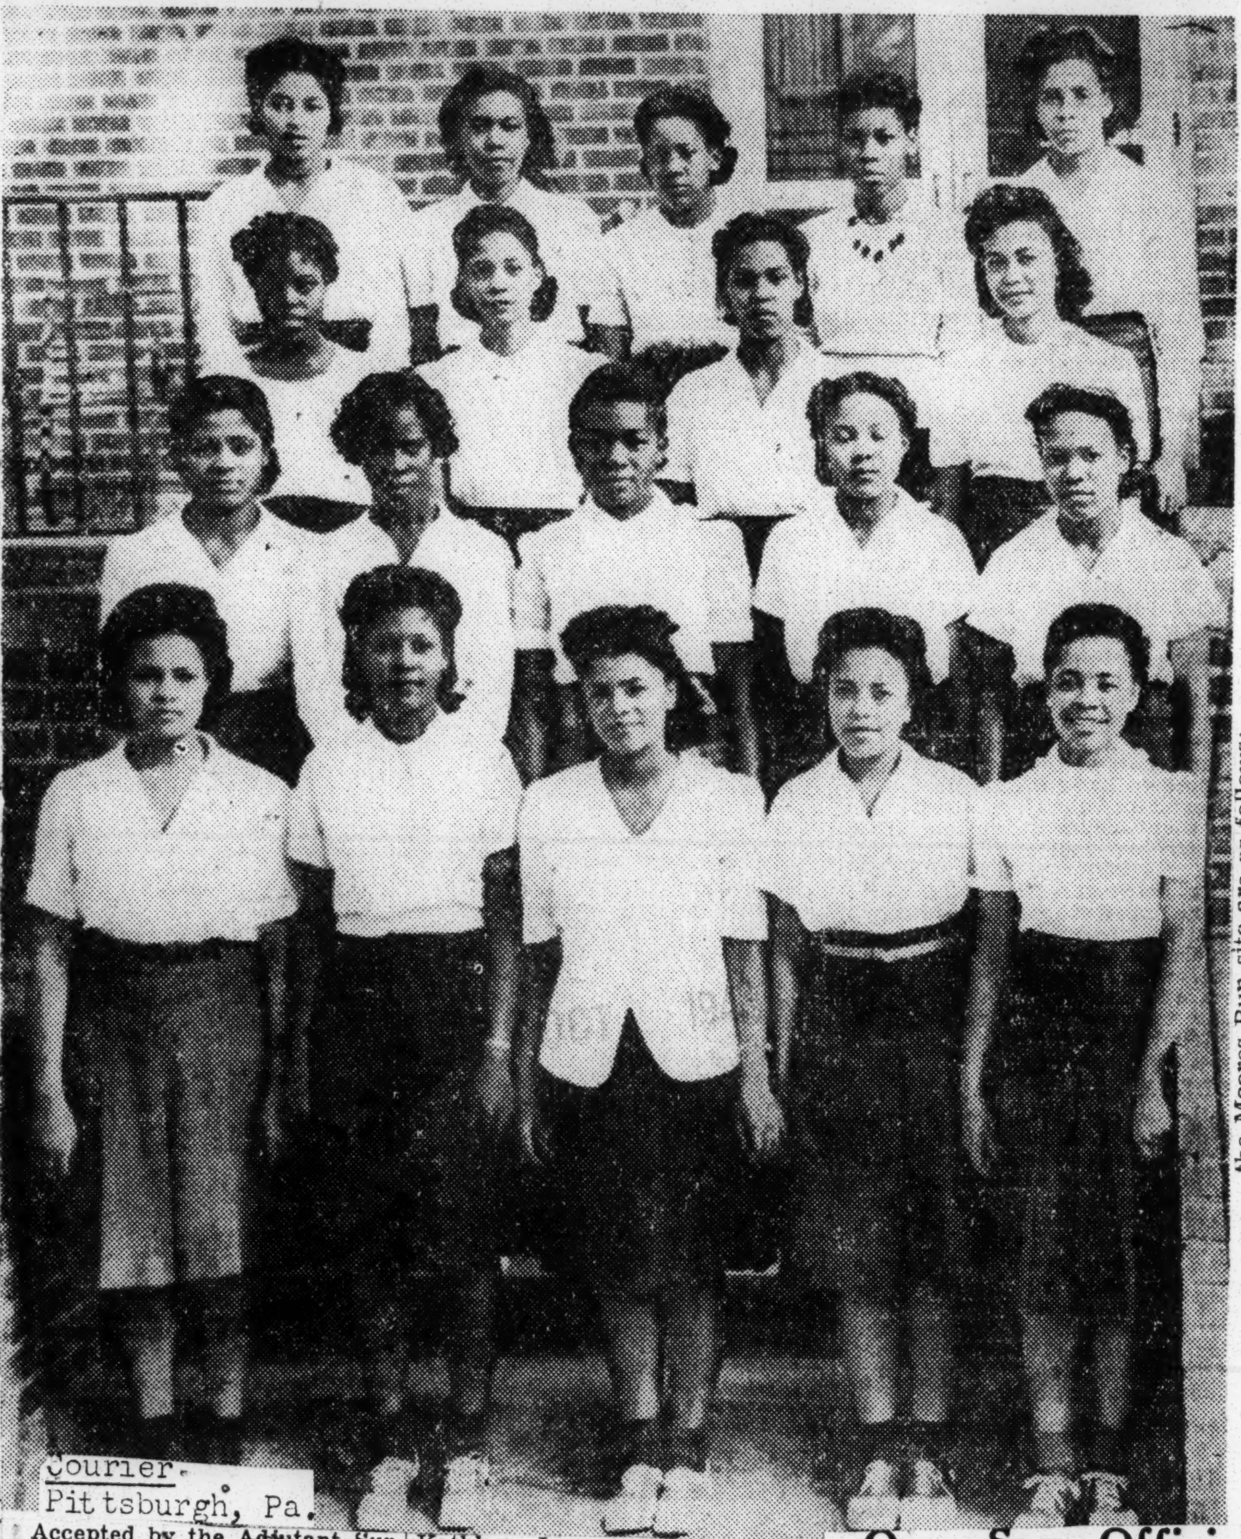
Twenty-two of the families will be put in the Nichols Avenue Project, and the other 77 will be divided among the Barry Farm Dwellings Project, Anthony Bowen Houses and Parkside Dwellings.

All of the units have not been completed, Ihlder said.

"The families have been ordered to move out the last of the month, and in case we don't have the new places completed by then we'll ask the War Department to hold off a week or two," he said.

Some of the warworker families for which the project houses had been constructed must now wait until the first of next year when 740 more NCHA Negro units will be completed, Ihlder said.

NORTH CAROLINA HOSPITAL TAKES OVER ARMY DUTIES



Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

Accepted by the Adjutant Surgeon General of the U. S. Public Health Service to participate in the U. S. Cadet Nurse Corps program of the United States, St. Agnes hospital of Raleigh, N. C., was allocated a fund for the period ending June, 1944. Above is a picture of the Pre-Cadet Nurses who will start training immediately.

The Pre-Cadet Nurses are, reading from left to right, Misses Clara Smith, Crystal, W. Va.; Sandra Shaw, Faison, N. C.; Florence Hodges, Winston-Salem, N. C.; Scottie O'Neal, Birmingham, Ala.; Virginia Liles, Hazard, Ky.; Manice Armstrong, Candor, N. C.; Minnie Halsey, Creswell, N. C.; Bernice Boddie, Scotland Neck, N. C.; Marie Todd, Elm City, N. C.; Erma Morgan, Comfort, N. C.; Geneva Kidd, Albuquerque, N. Mex.; Kathleen Lawrence, New York City, N. Y.; Daisy Campbell, Wilmington, N. C.; Marie Smith, Washington, D. C.; Pecola Wilson, Gastonburg, Ala.; Lucy Pugh, Ayden, N. C.; Maxine Williams, Vicco, Ky., missing from the picture.

Atlanta, Georgia
Daily World

Project To Be One Of 1,400 Unit Residences

Construction To Get Underway At Once Says Official

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(SNS) — Selection of a 200-acre tract north of Philadelphia Road and west of Moores Run in Baltimore, Md., as the site of 1,200 to 1,400 temporary family units programmed for Negro war workers in the Baltimore area was announced Saturday by Oliver C. Winston, regional director of the Federal Public Housing Authority.

SEP 5 1943

"This site was selected," Mr. Winston said "after full consideration of all factors involved in providing a satisfactory residential community for Negro war workers employed in industries in the eastern Baltimore area.

"In making the selection the FPHA also has given full consideration to the advisory opinions received during the many and lengthy consultations which it has had with various citizens groups. The FPHA has weighed carefully the comparative advantages and disadvantages of the alternate site possibilities after having studied the entire problem for months."

Plans are now being drawn for the project Mr. Winston stated and it is hoped that construction of these badly needed houses can be started within a very short time. Plans for the project will include the necessary schools shopping centers, playgrounds, and other community facilities.

The approximate boundaries of the Moores Run site are as follows: North by Susquehanna Power Transmission lines; east, city line and 62nd street; south by Philadelphit Road; and west by Scheeler Street, Mikro Kodesh Cemetery, Bowlyes Lane and Franklin Ave.

47f-1943

Democracy Real to Wounded Soldiers at U.S. Hospital

Men of Both Races Eat, Sleep and Play Together at Army Rehabilitation Center at Forest Glen, Md.

By DOUGLASS HALL

FOREST GLEN, Md. — Activities at the convalescent home for wounded soldiers from overseas and in this country, present to the nation a striking illustration of harmonious interracial cooperation in the U.S. army.

"There is no segregation or discrimination because of race, creed or color in this home," stated Lt. Col. Carl W. Temple, executive officer, who personally conducted newsmen on a recent tour of the grounds and buildings.

While the mortality rate among battle casualties averaged 15 to 18 per cent in World War I, the rate among battle casualties at evacuation hospitals in the present war averages 2½ to 3½ per cent.

Located in the midst of trees and housed by, what was once an exclusive girls' finishing school, white and colored soldiers, eat, sleep and lounge around together in perfect naturalness.

"Let's play a game of ping-pong," Pvt. Thomas C. Brace, white, of Panama Beach, Fla., suggested to Harry Greer of Pittsburgh. In a few minutes the game was under way.

Not Forced to Mingle

Soldiers here are not forced to mingle together. They can draw to one side of the big campus and associate with their own group. But they do not.

They get in the chow-line when their time comes and usually sit at the first convenient table after the food is served.

The food is served cafeteria style but patients who are recuperating from injuries which make it difficult to walk or hold a tray, are served prior to each meal.

Here's Typical Dinner

A typical midday dinner has a menu of roast veal, kale, dried lima beans, bread and butter, milk and coffee and orange sherbet. All kitchen help, most yard men, and some clerks in canteens are colored civilians.

All modern medical methods and equipment essential to the convalescence of soldiers, WAACs, and nurses are in use at the Forest Glen Annex of Walter Reed Hospital, as it is officially named. There are facilities for physical therapy in exercise rooms, hydro-therapy rooms, ultra-violet treatments, heat treatments and masages.

Use Occupational Therapy

Occupational therapy is provided in facilities for woodworking, weaving, leather work, drawing and clay modeling.

There's the rustic old chapel which is used for religious services. Outdoor and indoor sports are provided for.

The main recreation hall, formerly the ballroom of the school, still equipped with fine furniture and other decorations, is fully prepared for games.

A beauty spot of 182 acres, with hills and valleys, picturesque bridges, and tall shady trees, Forest Glen is an ideal spot for convalescents.

The Home is serviced by a medical detachment of 200 soldiers, housed in barracks.

JUN 12 1943

AIDS RECOVERY OF WOUNDED

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

Defender
Chicago, Ill.
June 5, 1943

JUN 5 1943

William R. Carter, government pharmacist for 40 years, has an important war job on the home front. As laboratory aide in the food and drug administration of Federal Security board, he is entrusted with the job of preparing media for testing the sterility of bandage material. This work is vital to wounded soldiers because they are not only dependent for their recovery upon the skill of physicians, nurses and hospital attendants, but also upon the reliability of drugs and bandages.

START BUILDING NOV. 1; TENANTS IN BY SPRING

Chicago Bee

Chicago, Illinois

The controversial South Side war homes in the Calumet area will be built and ready for occupancy sometime in the Spring, it was disclosed Wednesday following announcement by the Chicago Housing Authority that condemnation was made early this week of the 157 acres where the city's largest federally-financed and operated war housing development will be located.

The homes will be built at an approximate cost of 9 million dollars, CHA announced Tuesday. One thousand five hundred families will be accommodated, with rentals under $40 per month. Construction will start the early part of November, it was stated.

The first tenants are expected to move in sometime in the Spring, with completion of the entire project scheduled for August 1, 1944.

Community - wide enthusiasm greeted CHA's announcement that construction will begin almost immediately. Last week The BEE exposed "big-monied" real estate interests which had employed vicious pressure and propaganda methods to halt the construction of the homes if Negroes were to be admitted as tenants.

Citizens Protest Move.

A storm of protests followed this disclosure with the community's civic and social welfare organizations and individuals, joining with labor and other liberal groups to combat the subversive methods of the South End Chamber of Commerce and the South Side Real Estate board. These organizations had appealed to Washington to stop the war homes "for Negro families."

The tract is bounded by 130th street on the north, by Champlain and Langley avenues on the west, by 133rd street on the south and the Beaubien forest preserve and the New York Central right-of-way on the east.

FPHA Provides Funds.

The Federal Public Housing Authority is acquiring the land and providing funds for the construction. FPHA will retain the title. The Chicago Housing Authority negotiates the contract with the architect, builders and others and supervises the construction of the project. The contracts are signed by the FPHA, with the Chicago Housing Authority acting as agent.

The programming of the homes was made by the National Housing Agency for the Calumet area after the War Manpower commission estimated the need for approximately 5400 war workers and their families in the Calumet sector. The NHA program was announced July 17 for 3,234 housing units of which 1500 were designated to be built as public housing.

The proposed plans for the 1500 homes call for two-story row house structures. Except where boiler rooms occur there will be no basement. They will be heated with forced circulation hot water systems supplied by 13 group plants, or approximately one for calh 115 homes. The site and site plan shows an attractive, modern, almost self-suffidient community.

Curved streets, and a shopping district in the center of the homes, will give an urban informality to the over-all plan for the community. Stores, and recreational and administrative buildings will be located there.

SEP 26 1943

Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Virginia

4

SEP 4 1943

FREEDMEN'S NURSE ENROLLS IN U. S. CADET NURSE CORPS — Miss Minnie Tettis of Aliquippa, Pa., has the distinction of being the first student nurse at Freedmen's Hospital, Washington, D. C., to enroll in the new U. S. Cadet Nurse Corps. Miss Tettis, a graduate of Aliquippa High School, and a student of nursing at Freedmen's since June, was immediately followed by nine fellow students who signed up with Miss Rheva Speaks, director of nurses at the hospital. They are, left to right: Laura Cook, Elouise Pleasant, Jesstine Anderson, Naomi Hicks, Murie Cuffe, Lillian Carr and Joyce Gilliam. Miss Speaks is shown seated. Each star of the service flag (background) indicates a Freedmen's nurse now serving in the U. S. Army Nurse Corps. (Official OWI Photo by Roger Smith)

SEP 4 1943

Nine Million Dollar Housing Project Wins Over Dirty Baltimore Politics

Peoples Voice
New York, N. Y.

SEP 1943

BALTIMORE—In spite of powerful pressure against the plan, the Federal Public Housing Authority has announced it will go ahead with a Negro housing project here that will cost an estimated $9,000,000.

The green light was given the project when the New York Post, in its Washington Memo column, August 27, exposed the opposition to the project stemming from Maryland politicians and real estate operators. Almost immediately, there was a behind-the-scenes huddle in Washington, and on Wednesday, September 1, it was announced the project would go thru.

Housing Needed

The increasingly serious Negro housing shortage in Baltimore, brought about by the influx of defense workers, caused the National Housing Authority a few months ago to extend an offer of "temporary housing for workers.

Baltimore authorities wouldn't hear of any temporary arrangements, so the Federal Public Housing Authority stepped in with its offer of a project.

The FPHA asked that a site be recommended, but the Baltimore City Council a few days ago adopted a measure prohibiting any local authority from recommending a site without the Council approval, then adjourned until its fall session.

New Site Named

As a result of the conferences, the announcement came out that the FPHA, in absence of recommendation from a Baltimore local authority, announced it had selected for the project a 200-acre site north of the Baltimore-Philadelphia road for from 1,200 to 1,400 temporary family units for Negro defense workers.

Plans will include schools, playgrounds, community centers, shopping centers.

SEP 11 1943

SEP 11 1943

Unsigned Court Order Holds Up Condemnation

Baltimore, Md.
Afro-American

SEP 11 1943

Vacationing Federal Judges Expected Back in Court Today

CITY THREATENS COUNTER ACTION

Well-Rounded Community Planned upon Herring Run Site

BALTIMORE—Even though the Federal Public Housing Authority has selected the 275-acre Herring Run site to build 1200 homes for colored war workers and instituted condemnations proceedings in Federal Court to obtain the vacant land, at least a two-month delay is anticipated before actual construction of the project begins.

This was indicated Saturday by Wilmer H. Driver, attorney for the Department of Justice, one of the three government attorneys who filed the proceedings, in pointing out that a court order for taking over the property had not yet been signed. It would be "improper" for Federal agencies to proceed with construction without it, he added.

Judges Return Today

Both Federal judges, W. Calvin Chesnut and William C. Coleman, have been vacationing and were expected to return to their chambers today (Tuesday).

Mr. Driver expressed the opinion, however, that it would be the end of the week, or possibly even next week, before any action would be taken on the condemnation order.

City Threatens Action

Another obstruction is the fact that city officials, including City Solicitor F. Murray (Social Pleasantry) Benson and James F. Arthur, vice president of the City Council, have already indicated that they will contest the right through court action of the FPHA to take over the property.

It is likely that they will try to block the move by invoking a city ordinance passed by a special session of the council in July prohibiting the Federal Government from constructing temporary housing for war workers without prior approval by the council, mayor and board of estimates.

Even if all legal obstacles are surmounted successfully by FPHA, it is pointed out that the building of the homes will get under way in the winter months and it may require several months before they are ready for occupancy.

Site Announced Last Week

After months of heated controversy, the FPHA last week announced the selection of the Herring Run site, located north of Philadelphia Road, for the dwelling units.

SEP 11 1943

The same agency had earlier abandoned this site as a location for permanent housing when Mayor McKeldin withheld his approval. Both the City Plan Commission and an Interracial Commission, appointed by the mayor to aid in the selection of a site, had forwarded their recommendations that the Herring Run site be chosen for permanent housing.

Plan Well-Rounded Community

Under the plans of the FPHA, necessary schools, playgrounds, and shopping centers for a well-rounded community will be erected in the development.

In February, the National Housing Agency appropriated $8,000,000 for 2,000 homes for colored war workers. Already under construction in Fairfield, Md., are 400 units, and 200 more are planned for Bellegrove Road in Anne Arundel County.

47f-1943

Defender
Chicago, Ill.

8 Million Housing Site Is Selected

WASHINGTON

Condemnation proceedings were begun in Federal Court in Baltimore Tuesday by the Federal Public Housing Authority for use of the disputed Herring Run site a 200-acre tract of vacant land north of Philadelphia Road for location of a 1200-unit temporary housing area for colored war workers.

SEP 4 1943

Announcement of the government's action was made by Oliver C. Winston, regional director of the FPHA.

This is the same site which was selected two months ago by the FPHA for a permanent development against which white citizens led by City Councilmen, Congressmen and other city and State officials, protested vigorously.

Mayor Withholds Okey

The FPHA was inclined to go ahead despite these protests if Mayor McKeldin would give his approval. This the Mayor refused to do and the plan for a permanent development was abandoned.

The fight for location of war homes has been raging in Baltimore for the past six months ever since the U.S. made available eight million dollars for 2,000 war homes. Four hundred of them are under construction in Fairfield, Md., and 250 others are planned for Bellegrove Road in Anne Arundel County.

SEP 4 1943

Plans for the project will include the necessary schools, shopping centers, playground

---

Constitution
Atlanta, Georgia

Negroes Get War Housing

Dec 15 1943

Low-[illegible] modern housing for migr[illegible] Negr[illegible] workers has been provided [illegible] with the construction of 100 two-bedroom units at Fairview Terrace, Inc., federally approved project at West Fair and Lawton streets, S. W.

Approximately 50 of the units have already been completed and rented and others are made ready for occupancy each week, W. H. Aikens, contractor, reported.

Constructed of concrete blocks with hardwood floors, full tile baths and plastered walls, all the units have 25-year Federal Housing Agency mortgages, the money being provided by private lending institutions of Atlanta. The project is adjacent to a Negro residential area.

The development was begun by W. H. Aiken, Negro contractor, after a survey made by the National Housing Administration, the War Manpower Commission, and the Federal Housing Agency disclosed the need for housing for Negro civilians engaged in war work in this area.

"NEGRO HOUSING SHORTAGE HERE IS CRITICAL"

Chicago, Ill.- Defender

"The Negro housing shortage here is now critical," Bleecker Marquette executive secretary, Better Housing League, stated Wednesday.

"For the first time in 25 years," Marquette said, "there is also a shortage of accommodations for white families in the low income brackets in the basin."

The figures are based on a survey of vacancies in the basin recently completed by the Housing Bureau of the Building Department under the direction of Charles Sagmeister.

"A normal vacancy is considered to be 5 per cent," Marquette said. "Vacancies in the basin are now one third of 1 per cent for Negroes and 2 per cent for white families. There is a waiting list of 4,000 Negro families or the Lincoln Court project located on Lincoln Park drive. Room overcrowding is at a peak and the Housing Bureau is finding it difficult to vacate unfit structures, particularly those occupied by Negro families. Attics and cellars are being pressed into use."

George Garties, director of the authority, and Marquette will go to Washington on Friday of next week to discuss the matter witih officials of the National Housing Agency.

Afro-American
Baltimore, Maryland

Ho Hum! No Site Yet for War Homes

BALTIMORE — Mayor McKeldin on Monday advised the FPHA that the city government as a whole, including the mayor and city council is opposed to use of the Herring Run site for a 1200-unit war housing project.

In answer to a letter from R. L. Cochrane, acting commissioner of the FPHA, asking what stand the municipal government took on the housing proposal, the mayor replied:

AUG 21 1943

"So far as the legal entity, the Mayor and City Council of Baltimore is concerned, Herring Run is as dead as the dodo."

He then pointed out that as mayor, he was duty bound to respect the expressed opposition of the city council against the site.

After forwarding the recommendations of the city plan commission and the interracial committee favoring the Herring Run site, the mayor last week refused to state his personal preference, stating that the responsibility for the choice of a site rested on the FPHA.

News
Birmingham, Ala

Housing Project Planned Near Panama City, Fla.

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The office of Rep. Sikes (D., Fla.) announced Tuesday that approximately $2,000,000 would be spent to house defense workers in the vicinity of Panama City, Fla.

Five hundred family dwelling units will be built for workers at the Wainwright Shipyard, near Panama City, together with 144 dormitory units, of which 108 will be for single women and 36 for single men.

At the Southern Kraft plant, of the International Paper Corporation, 80 family dwelling units, equally divided between white and colored, will be provided.

Sixty family dwelling units will be provided at Panama City for miscellaneous war activities.

Aug 11 1943

The average cost of the family dwelling units, Sikes' office said, is about $3,000 to $3,500 per unit, with an estimated cost of $1,000 per dormitory unit.

Thirty-one Nurses On Staff At Fort Clark Hospital

FORT CLARK, Tex., Aug. 26—The Second Cavalry Division, stationed at Fort Clark has a well equipped hospital of 457 beds, staffed by 19 officers and 31 nurses.

Among the Negro officers on duty at the hospital are: Major King D. Brown, Chicago Ill; Capt. Homer L. Wales, of Indianapolis, Ind., and First Lieut. Edward L. Mais, River Head, N. Y.

The nurses' staff is headed by First Lieut. Josie M. Glenn, Winnsboro, S. C., and includes women from 16 states. Another nurse from South Carolina is Second Lieut. Lee M. Aikens, Allendale. From North Carolina: Oasie Byers, K[illegible] Mountain; Rubye E. Collins, Gastonia, and Cecelia Scott, Pleasant Hill. From Pennsylvania: Mary J. Culver, Catherine L. Harris and Laura E. Smith, Philadelphia, and Caroline Schenck, Uniontown. From Texas: Anne L. Jackson and Aurelia Woodruff, Houston; Roberta Johnson, Appleby and Prinzola McFarland, Silsbee. From Virginia come Annie B. Johnson, Whitethorne; Ruth B. McCoy and Goldie M. Qinerly, Norfolk, and Jane E. Pate, Christianburg. From New Jersey come Florie E. Gantt, Pennsanken, and Alice M. McKoy, Millington. From Missouri: Mary G. Tyler, St. Louis, and Lillian B. Miller, Richmond Heights. From New York: Syble A. Lewis, Brooklyn and Lydia Pinkett, New York City.

AUG 28 1943

Nurses from other states are: Ruth E. Anderson, Omaha, Neb.; Louise Brown, Gary, Ind.; Lillie L. Emery, Knoxville, Tenn.; Inez F. Howard, Chicago, Ill.; Margaret Lipscombe, Salem, Ala.; Ora P. Maddox, LaGrange, Ga.; Mary A. Smith, Baton Rouge, La.; and Ruth Smith, Steubenville, Ohio. All these nurses are commissioned second lieutenants.

They received their training at University hospital, Augusta; Grady hospital, Atlanta, and City hospital, Columbus, Ga.; General hospital, Kansas City, Mo.; Meharry Medical college, Nashville, Tenn.; St. Agnes hospital, Raleigh, N. C.; Freedman's hospital, Washington; Mercy hospital, Philadelphia, Pa.; Prairie View college, Texas; St. Philip hospital, Richmond, Va.; Harlem School of Nursing and Lincoln hospital, N. Y.

Chief dietician is Second Lieut. Velma P. Owens, Indianapolis, Ind., who was recently transferred to Fort Clark from Camp Benning, Ga.

Amsterdam News
New York, N. Y.

Stops Near Riot In Lackawanna

By ZENOBIA A. ALEXANDER

BUFFALO, (ANP) — The real meaning of democracy was brought home to citizens of Lackawanna, N. Y., this week when Mayor Michael J. Hughes, first citizen of the steel city, reaffirmed his [illegible]-repeated stand that democracy and not lawlessnes would reign in Lackawanna.

SEP 25 1943

Standing pat that the rights of Negro people would be respected, the mayor Tuesday warned a dissatisfied element of white residents that any attempt to take the law into their own hands would be contrary to the tenets of democracy and the principles of justice, law, and order upon which his reign as mayor of the city is founded.

The Federal Housing authority has recently completed a 200-unit housing project for colored war workers. White residents in the adjacent area of the Albright courts upon learning that Negroes would occupy the project began a series of mass meetings protesting the infiltration of Negro residents in the community.

The homes are distinctly a war housing project. In the last month 43.4 per cent of all applicants filed came from Negroes. Occupancy is expected to begin immediately.

Provident Will Train Nurses For War Work

Daily World Atlanta. Ga

Students to Be Enrolled in U. S. Cadet Corps

CHICAGO—(ANP) — Provident Hospital School of Nursing in Chicago has been included among the nursing schools invited by the U. S. Public Health Service at Washington, D. C., to enroll students in the U. S. Cadet Nurse Corps now being recruited under the provisions of the Bolton Nurse Training Act passed by Congress in June.

AUG 26 1943

Through a Congressional appropriaion of $45,000,000 federal funds are available to pay all expenses and provide monthly allowances to nursing school students who enroll as members of the U. S. Cadet Nurse Corps and agree to make their serivces available in essential nursing for the duration of the war. It is emphasized, however that military service following graduation will be optional, barring adoption of a National Women's Service Act or other legislation by Congress, affecting nurses in common with other women. Applicants must be high school graduates and must meet other entrance requirements of the school in which they wish to enroll.

All members of the U. S. Cadet Nurse Corps will be provided with a distinctive outdoor uniform which will indicate that they are engaged in essential war service. This uniform is now being designed in a competition by leading fashion designers.

PAY ALL FEES

AUG 26 1943

In addition to maintenance as provided by Provident Hospital in the past the government will pay all school fees for the Cadet Nurse, provide uniforms and pay a monthly allowance. During the first nine months of Pre-Cadet training the allowance will be $20 monthly and durig the last six to 12 months Senior Cadet nurses will be assigned to the home hospital, other civilian or government hospital, or public health agency and will receive from the hospital or agency, maintenance and $30 monthly. Senior Cadet Nurses will have unusual opportunities to gain experience in special nursing fields for which they may express a preference.

Schools of nursing that participate in the Cadet Nurse training program must offer an accelerated course under which class work will be completed in 24 to 30 months, leaving the last six to 12 months for nursing service in civilian or government hospitals, or public health service in this country to meet existing shortages of graduate nurses. This service will be considered a part of the Cadet's training course and at its conclusion, she will receive her diploma from the school in which she had her basis training. She will then be eligible to take the State Board examination and on passing it becomes a registered nurse.

The fall term will begin at the Provident Hospital School of Nursing on September 10, 1943. Hence those who are interested in joining the U. S. Cadet Nurse Corps are urged to write for full information to: The Director of Nurses, Provident Hospital, 426 E. 51st Street Chicago, Illinois.

Approve Tuskegee Housing Unit

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

ATLANTA, Aug. 19 —(ANP)— The approval of funds to erect 40 family housing units and community facilities near the Tuskegee Army Air base was announced Wednesday by John P. Broome, regional Federal Public Housing Authority director here. The project will cost approximately $86,000. The contract has been awarded to Algernon Blair, of Montgomery, Ala.

D.C. Freedmen's Hospital One Of First In Nation To Get Nurses Cadet Corps

Chicago, Ill. Defender

AUG 14 1943

By HARRY McALPIN

(Defender Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON — Freedmen's hospital, the only hospital in the country under the jurisdiction of the U. S. Public Health Service that has a nursing school, is one of the first three hospitals to complete arrangements for taking part in the new United States Cadet Nurse Corps.

The plans were approved by Surgeon General Thomas Parran of the U. S. Public Health last week.

The Cadet Nurse Corps was created under the Bolton act passed by Congress in June, for the purpose of encouraging the enrollment of a needed 65,000 new students needed this year to increase the reserve of student nurses to replace graduate nurses called into military and civilian service.

Through the efforts of the Alpha Kappa Alpha Non-Partisan Council on Public Affairs, an amendment was made to the nurses bill, introduced by Sen. Warren Barbour of New Jersey, providing for no discrimination in the administration of the act because of race, creed or color.

AUG 14 1943

27 Sign Up

Twenty-seven Freedmen nurses have already signed up for the corps, and have thus become the first in the country to become members. The corps members will wear a distinctive uniform now being designed by a competitive group of designers in New York.

Under the plan, federal funds will be available to schools of nursing participating in the program, and the schools, in turn, will furnish scholarships, fees, books, maintenance, uniforms and monthly allowances to the students.

Cadet nurses will be known as precadets for nine months, as juniors for the next 15 to 21 months, and as senior cadets for six months of interneship. As senior cadets, they will relieve the current shortage of trained nurses in hospitals.

Plan To Enter Army

Freedmen's nursing school normally accommodates from 125 to 130 nurses, though officials indicated it is possible to double up on living accommodations and accommodate a considerably larger number if necessary. Enrollment periods at Freedmen's are in January and June. The qualifications for entrance are: women between the ages of 18 and 30, unmarried and in good physical condition, graduates of a four-year accredited high school with 15 prescribed units, ranking in the upper half of the graduating class, and citizens of the United States.

Practically all of the student nurses who have signed up for the cadet corps at Freedmen's are looking forward to entering the Army nurse corps upon completion of their training, despite the Army's quota system limiting the number of Negro nurses in the service. They are all looking forward to wearing the cadet corps uniform as a badge of their desire to render service to their country.

Among those who expressed these ideas in exclusive interviews with the Defender were Mary Haile, of New Alexandria, Pa.; Muriel Coffee, of Pennington, N.J., Alma Jackson, of Middletown, Conn.; Sylvia Anderson, of Algoma, W.Va.; Vera Reynolds of Baltimore, Md., and Minnie Pettis, of Aliquippa, Pa.

See Real Opportunity

According to Miss Lucile Petry, director of the division of nurse education of the U. S. Public Health Service, Negro women will have the same status in the corps as other racial groups. "It is an opportunity to enter upon a professional career that is as useful in peacetime as in war, without any cost whatever to the ambitious and patriotic students," she said.

AUG 14 1943

An official release from the Office of War Information lists the following "hospitals where nurse training is provided for Negroes which are expected to enroll under the Balton Nurse Training Act":

John A. Andrew Memorial hospital, Tuskegee Institute, Ala.; University Hospital School of Nursing (Lamar School of Nursing), Augusta, Ga.; Provident Hospital School of Nursing, Chicago; Dillard University School of Nursing, New Orleans; Homer G. Phillips School of Nursing, St. Louis; Lincoln School of Nursing and Harlem Hospital School of Nursing, New York City; Mercy Hospital School of Nursing, Philadelphia; Meharry Medical College School of Nursing, Nashville; Columbia Hospital School of Nursing, Columbia, S.C.; and St. Philip Hospital School of Nursing, Richmond, Va.

The A.K.A. Non-Partisan Council is watching the administration of the act, however, to determine whether Negroes will be restricted to these nursing schools only, and whether other nursing schools will be permitted to participate and still deny admission to Negroes despite the non-discrimination provisions of the act.

The other hospitals already approved along with Freedmen's are Providence Hospital, also of Washington, and Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore, Md.

Increase Set In Negro Dwelling Units

Washington, D. C
Post

AUG 29 1943

The National Housing Agency yesterday announced plans to build 3200 additional family dwelling units for Negro warworkers, because of the urgent needs disclosed in a resurvey of war housing here.

With the addition of this housing for eligible Negro families, the NHA studies indicate that war housing now available for occupancy, plus the large number of projects under discussion or scheduled for early starting, will meet backlog needs of Washington war-workers and [illegible] further immigration of war labor anticipated up to 1944, NHA Administrator John B. Blandford, jr., said.

AUG 29 1943

46,000 Family Units

With the completion of additional housing for Negro warworkers 'authorized yesterday, the total war housing program for the Washington metropolitan area will involve more than 46,000 family dwelling units, and over 10,000 dormitory accommodations for single workers. On June 30, 1943, construction [illegible]800 family dwelling units and 7400 dormitory units had been completed while 15,900 family units and about 2700 units were under construction.

AUG 29 1943

These totals include both privately and publicly financed construction under the NHA's war housing quota for the Washington area. They include some 32,000 additional family units produced since the spring of 1940 by private builders operating without priorities assistance in the earlier month fo the national emergency.

The resurvey of Washington war housing carried out by NHA's regional office and supplemented by a special study of housing needs of Government workers by the Bureau of Labor Statistics pointed out the desperate need for Negro housing here.

Negro war workers already employed here are living "under clearly intolerable conditions," Milton Fischer, NHA regional representative said. Additional Negro workers will be needed for war obs in the coming months, he declared.

AUG 29 1943

The program approved yesterday authorizes the construction of 2000 privately financed family units and 1000 publicly financed family units. An additional 50 family units will be provided through privately financed conversions and an additional 150 through publlicly financed conversions under Government lease.

AUG 29 1943

As a result of its survey NHA also disclosed that the majority of privately financed units coming on the market are of the one-bedroom type. The present demand is for two and three-bedroom units. So the local FHA office is requesting local builders to revamp their housing units accordingly.

Freedmen's Hospital To Take Girls For Cadet Nurse Training

AUG 21 1943

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19—Freedmen's hospital in Washington is one of the three institutions in the nation to enroll in Federal Security agency's plan to add 65,000 women to the country's nursing personnel through the new United States Cadet Nurse Corps recently provided for by the Bolton Nurse Training Act. Provident hospital and Johns Hopkins hospitals in Baltimore are the other two institutions enrolled.

By their active interest, these hospitals have made the organization of the Nurse Corps, which was announced last month by Mrs. Estelle Massey Riddle, consuultant in Negro nursing for the National Nursing Council for War Service, an actuality.

The first three institutions to complete arrangements to take part in this new plan to augment the nursing facilities, occurred at a meeting with U. S. Surgeon General Thomas Parran of the Public Health service. Under the present program for adding to the supply of emergency nurses, nurse training hospitals throughout the country may apply to the Public Health service for Federal aid in providing a nurse reserve to relieve trained nurses for emergency duties.

AUG 21 1943

Under the plan, Federal funds are made available to schools taking part in the program. The schools in turn will furnish scholarships, fees, books, maintenance, uniforms and monthly allowances for cadet nurses. Student nurses already in training may join the U. S. Cadet Nurse Corps.

Women 17 or 18, to 35 may apply for admission if they are graduates of accredited high schools with satisfactory scholastic standing.

According to Miss Lucile Petry, director of the division of nurse education of the Public Health service, Negro young women will have the same status in the U. S. Cadet Nurse Corps as other racial groups.

In addition to Freedmen's hospital, which is affiliated with the Howard university School of Medicne, the following hospitals are expected to enroll under the Bolton Nurse Training Act:

John A. Andrew Memorial hospital, Tuskegee institute, Ala.; University Hospital School of Nursing (Lamar School of Nursing), Augusta, Ga.; Provident hospital, Chicago; Dillard university, New Orleans; Homer G. Phillips school, St. Louis; Lincoln School and Harlem hospital, New York City; Mercy hospital, Philadelphia; Meharry, Nashville; Columbia school, Columbia, S. C., and St. Phillip hospital, Richmond, Va.

AUG 21 1943

The Cadet Nurse Corps is expected to complete preliminary organization by August 31. Classes are being organized now to start in September and October.

FHPA and City At Odds on Site For Negro Homes

Post
Washington, D. C

Baltimore, Aug. 31 (AP).—The U. S. Government filed condemnation proceedings in Federal court today to obtain immediate possession of a 275-acre site at Herring Run following a Federal Public Housing Authority annbuncement that temporary housing for 1200 to 1400 Negro war workers would constructed at that location.

Immediately afterward, City Solicitor F. Murray Benson announced that the municipal government will file a countermeasure to compel FPHA compliance with a new ordinance giving authority over war housing sites to the mayor, city council and board of estimates.

SEP 1943

The FPHA formerly planned to construct permanent housing on the same site but the project was abandoned when the city government failed to approve the location, the agency reported.

SEP 1943

47f-1943

Baltimore Housing Gets Okeh After Long Battle

Chicago, Ill. SEP 11 1943

Defender

(Defender Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON. — Orders to begin clearance of a 200-acre tract as the first step in the erection of a $9,000,000 housing project for colored Baltimoreans, were issued late last week by Oliver C. Winston, regional director of the Federal Public Housing Authority.

The action, taken in the face of powerful opposition by Maryland politicians and real estate interests, came after a series of articles appearing in recent issues of the Chicago Defender. One of these, a report by Harry S. McAlpin, chief of the Defender's Washington Bureau, exposed Monumental City housing as a disgrace to any modern community, and predicted that Baltimore, "a veritable powder-keg" promised at any moment to "explode with repercussions that would make Detroit, Beaumont, Mobile and Harlem seem like puny firecrackers."

Still another, a Defender editorial blasted officials of the National Housing agency and of the FPHA for their indifference toward Negro war workers and their need for decent housing. It demanded the immediate removal of certain of the key men in the two departments, on the ground their attitude toward Negro needs proved them to be unquestionably biased.

Blocked By Politicians

It is assumed here, therefore, that the series of conferences recently held between NHA and FPHA authorities may have been precipitated by the Defender criticism. For out of these conferences came the decision to proceed with the project which has long been approved but was blocked by the pressure housing officials were feeling from the opposition.

SEP 11 1943

Its attention called [illegible] deplorable state of Baltimore housing, which, already bad, had been made doubly so with the influx of colored war workers, the NHA offered to provide temporary housing for at least some of the overflow.

Immediately it was learned that a plan to erect a project for housing Negroes was under way, the Baltimore City Council raised objection. As a means of blocking it, the city council adopted a measure prohibiting any local authority from recommending a site for the project without its approval. The council then recessed.

Resort To Strategy

Race relations officials of the FPHA, however, apparently were still feeling the sting of criticism, the result being that they set into motion a plan for picking a site "without the recommendation of any local (Baltimore) authority."

During the course of the week-end conferences, they named the 200-acre plot north of Philadelphia Road and west of Moore's Run, and recommended the immediate breaking of ground for the erection of 1,200 to 1,400 temporary family units for colored war workers in the Baltimore area.

Simultaneous with his order to begin clearance, Winston made the following statement:

"This site was selected after full consideration of all factors involved in providing a satisfactory residential community for Negro war workers employed in industries in the eastern Baltimore area.

"In making the selection, the FPHA also has given full consideration to the advisory opinions received during the many and lengthy consultations which it has had with local public officials and with various citizens groups. The FPHA has weighed carefully the comprehensive advantages and disadvantages of the alternate site possibilities after having studied the entire problem for months."

Gives Overcrowding Figures

Plans are now being drawn for the project, Winston stated, and it is hoped that construction of these badly needed houses can be started within a very short time. Plans for the project will include the necessary schools, shopping centers, playgrounds, and other community facilities.

SEP 11 1943

Meanwhile, a delegation led by the Baltimore branches of the NAACP and the Urban League held conferences with Jonathan Daniels, administrative assistant to the President, and Herbert Emmerich, commissioner of the Federal Public Housing Authority, to protest the failure of the Federal government to erect the housing propect.

The group told Daniels that Negro war workers have moved into Baltimore at the rate of 2,000 a month for the past year. It was pointed out that while Negroes constitute 20 per cent of the city's population, they are crowded into less than 7 per cent of its living space.

"The Federal government," the delegation declared, "has the manifest duty, and power, to erect the necessary war housing to relieve a situation which seriously threatens the health, welfare and morale of the community, notwithstanding opposition to the project by certain local financial and political interests that are anti-Negro."

We All Walk Together

New York, N. Y.

Miss Anne K. Reilly, of 36 Bay 32d St., Brooklyn, sent in this letter from a soldier in a California Army hospital. She will receive the $5 PM pays daily for the be[illegible] [illegible]an or woman [illegible] armed services.

AUG 29 1943

PM

Have I told you of the setup here in this hospital? Relation to color line, I mean.

As you know, the Army is set up in Jim Crow fashion. Black units and white units. In the hospitals this does not always hold true—except, I think in the "Deep South." Here we have the perfect example of unity and the most conclusive refutation of the fascist claim that Negro and white cannot get along together.

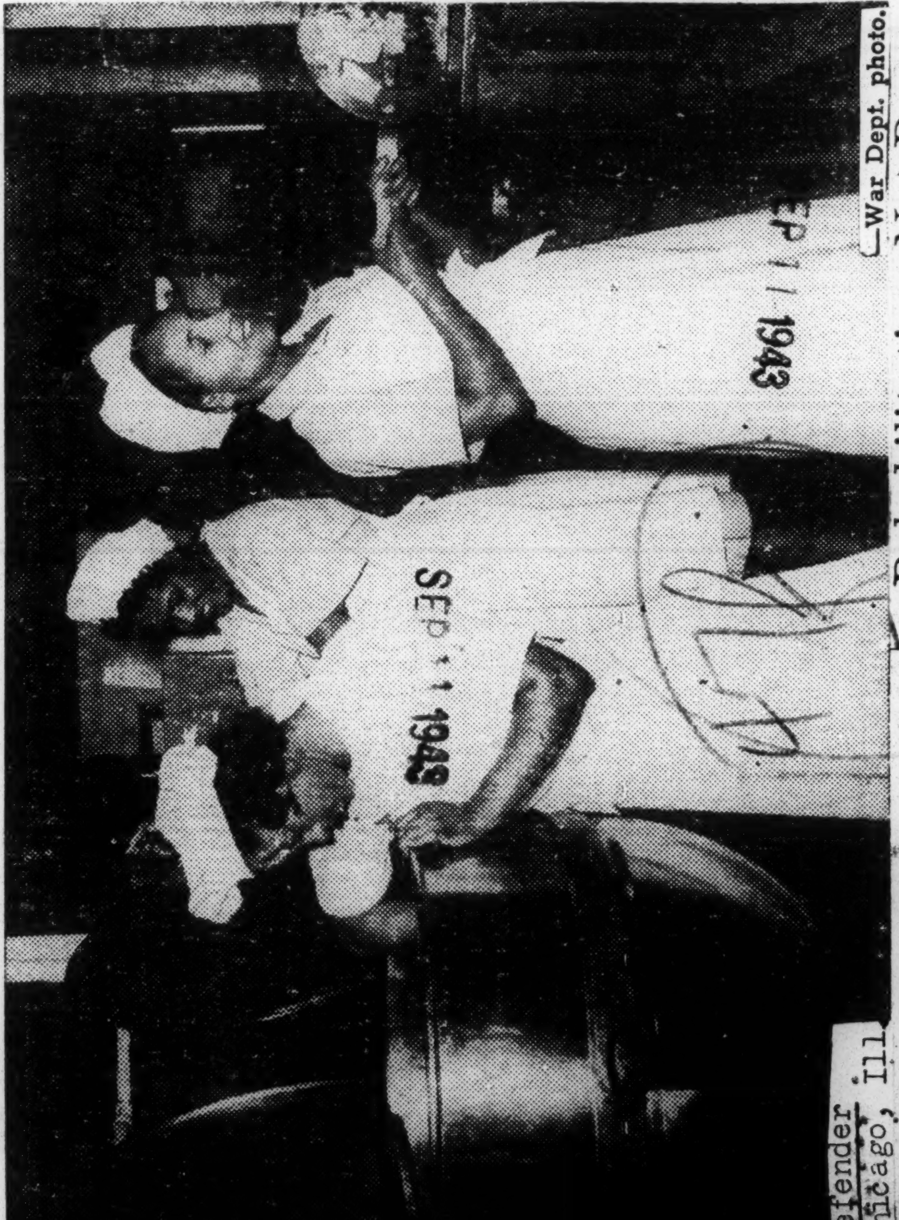
AUG 29 1943

This hospital is composed of a large number [illegible] barrack-like buildings, ea[illegible]. In all wards Negro and [illegible] sleep, and live together harmoniously. There have been no "incidents." There is no shunning of any man because of the color of his skin. Men make friends with each other on the basis of accessibility and mutual interests. It is common fo[illegible] white and black [illegible] wait on each other—those who eat in the wards. Black and white go off together in groups of two and three for mess, waiting for the particular individual each man has been accustomed to walking with.

AUG 29 1943

These men, and the picture is no doubt duplicated in many Army hospitals, are going back into the life of the Nation with an experience which will prepare them to make short with any talk of segregation. The men who have already seen action, for example, see [illegible] when, on returning to the States, the color line is drawn. We will come out of this with some good prospects for the future. R.

PREPARING FOOD FOR SICK SOLDIERS



SEP 11 1943

—War Dept. photo.

Defender
Chicago, Ill.

Auxiliaries [illegible] food [illegible] soldier patients in the Fort Knox, Ky., station hospital. Left to right are Aux. Ruby Jones, Baltimore, Md.; Aux. Ida Mae Lewis, Tacoma, Wash., and Aux. Ora L. Meador, San Antonio, Texas. All three are members of the 3564th WAC detachment.

Rehabilitation, Not Race, Paramount Consideration at Walter Reed

Afro-American

By DOUGLASS HALL

WASHINGTON

The unimportant matter of race or color is forgotten at the army's Walter Reed Hospital as its personnel goes about the task of renewing battle-broken minds and bodies of soldiers who have gone out to do what their country asked of them. The hospital is also curing men of prejudice and creating a better understanding between races.

SEP

Faces that were partially left behind on the battlefields of New Guinea, legs and other limbs that were lost in North Africa, eyes that were blasted out in Sicily are being replaced at the hospital.

The bitter discouragement that soldiers have felt about returning to civilian life has been banished in large measure by the medical miracles of this war.

Jim Crow Too Much Trouble

In addition to having their physical ailments cured, these soldiers are getting new views on the race question.

There is no JIM CROW or SEGREGATION in the hospital. It is too much trouble, officials stated.

In fact, the color or race of the patient is not entered in the hospital records.

When the AFRO-AMERICAN sought to learn about colored troops at the hospital, a public relations officer said:

"We know that there are colored soldiers here. We see them each day but we have no way of checking the records to find out the race of a patient. All we are interested in is the medical record. The color of a person does not matter."

No Friction Seen

Once you see how harmoniously the white and colored soldiers get along, you can readily see the great advantage in not keeping the records according to "color."

Not only is the Reed set-up contributing much to better racial understanding, but the soldiers themselves are doing no small share.

James Milledge, white, of Houmer, La., who lost a leg in the fighting of North Africa, summed up the race situation this way:

War Kills Prejudice

"The best way to create racial understanding between white and colored persons is to throw them on the battlefield together. Let them depend on each other for water, food, medical attention; let them depend on each other for life, and soon segregation will end.

"I read the colored papers," he stated, "and they are continually asking some high army official about the relations between white and colored troops. Did it ever occur to them to ask us little fellows? We are the ones who work, eat, live and fight with them.

"When you lie on the ground with your leg a half block away from your body, you don't care what color the person is who gives you a lift; if you have lost too much blood, what difference does it make whether the blood came out of a 'white' or 'colored' blood bank?

Pain Makes Brothers

"And another thing," Cpl. Milledge concluded, "once you get race prejudice blown out of you on the battle front, you have no desire to get it back again.

"You learn that a man is a man, regardless of his color. All blood runs red, all hearts beat the same, and all human beings become BROTHERS when pain strikes."

My assignment is to tell AFRO readers how Walter Reed Hospital is bringing men back to life. Men with injuries which would have ben fatal in any other war are saved, almost as a matter of course, by blood plasma in this war.

Plastic Surgery

Bullet-ripped and paralyzed muscles are rebuilt, veins, nerves, and flesh replaced, and artificial but mechanical and uncanny limbs are adjusted to leg and arm stumps.

Let us talk about plastic surgery. Here is a young fellow who lost half of his face in New Guinea. There was only a hole where half of his face was when he was admitted to the hospital. Borrowing a bit of bone here, a slice of flesh there, plastic surgeons, under the direction of Lieut. Col. Willard S. Schuessler, chief plastic surgeon, are rebuilding that face. His teeth will be replaced by a dentist and technicians.

Faces Deblemished

Torn and twisted limbs are repaired and straightened; flash fire burned and scarred faces and bodies are deblemished by skin grafting techniques in which healthy sections of skin on one part of the body, nearest the injury, are cut in "suitcase strap" folds and laid over the ripped, burned, torn or lacerated areas to take root and grow over the damaged areas.

The stress and strain of desperate and bloody combat wreak havoc with the minds of some soldiers.

Many Mental Cases

Thirty-three per cent of the casualties now returning from battle zones are mental or nervous breakdowns. For them, psychiatrists and neurologists, men who see each patient as an individual, probe deep into their troubled minds.

Certain to be a boom in postwar society is the little publicized Walter Reed penicillin research into gonorrhea. Tests so far made there indicate that it is effective in 20 per cent of infections that sulfa drugs do not cure.

Named after Major Walter Reed, distinguished American Army medical officer who, in 1899, verified the theory that mosquitoes carried yellow fever, Walter Reed Hospital is a working monument to the great American scientific genius. Its functions are military medicine and surgery, but achievements there are turned to the advantage of all.

Walter Reed is located on the site of the Civil War battlefield of Fort Stevens.

Disease Rates Compared

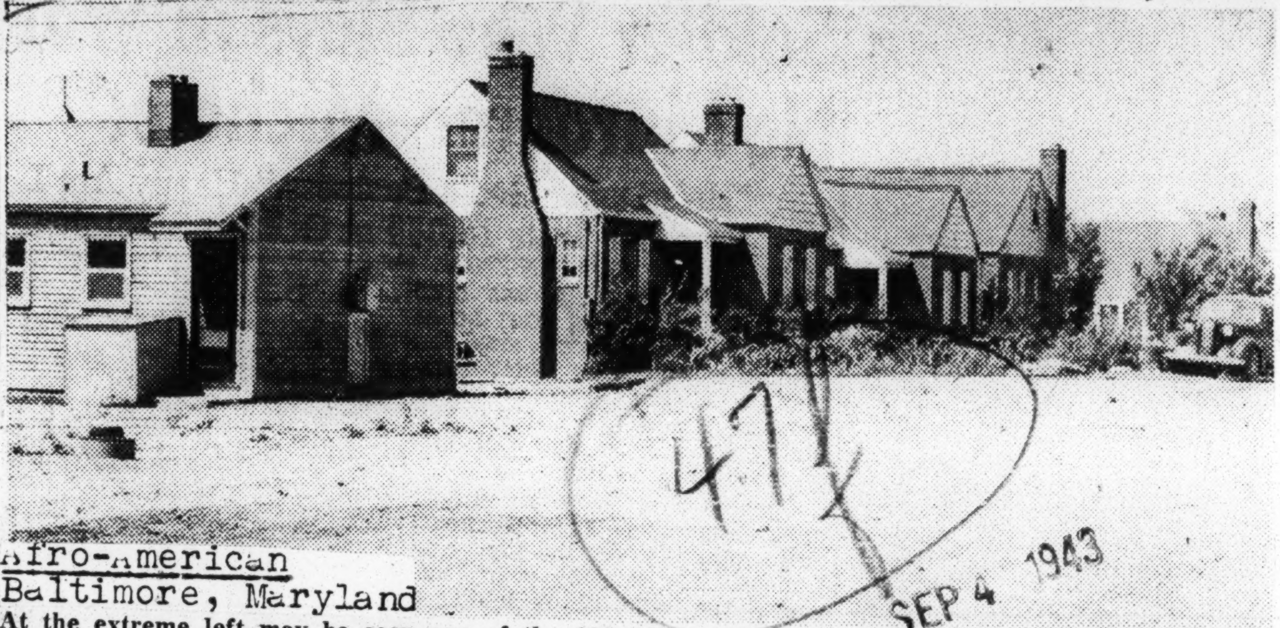
Look at the results of its attack on typhoid: In the last war there were 1115 cases. Up to 1942, with a much greater army and navy, there were only 76.

Measles was a major cause of death in the last war. In November, 1917, the death rate was 240 per 1000. In the new army the rate is 1 per 1000.

In the old army, 171 of each 100,000 soldiers died of respiratory diseases. Today, 8 per 100,000 die.

Tuberculosis hospitalized 1300 soldiers per 100,000 in 1917. In 1942, only 160 cases were reported per 100,000.

Arlington, Va., Finds that It Has a Housing Headache

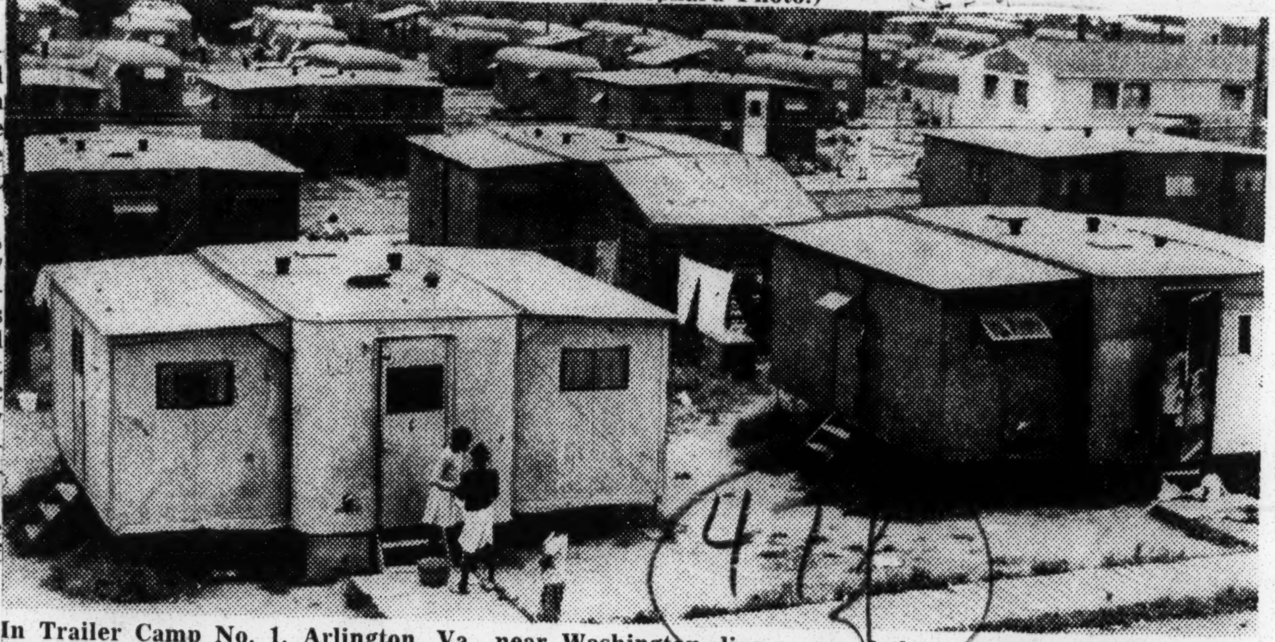


47

Afro-American
Baltimore, Maryland

SEP 4 1943

At the extreme left may be seen one of the 100 "dispersable" war housing units making up what is known as the Carver Victory Homes project. Not a true housing project in the accepted sense of the word, these dispersables were set up on vacant lots in the South Gate Vale subdivision, one of the few promising sites open to colored homebuilders. Property owners living in the subdivision, charging that the dispersables lower the value of their property, say that the project is a disgrace to the name of Carver.—(Shephard Photo.)



47

In Trailer Camp No. 1, Arlington, Va., near Washington, live many of the persons evicted from their homes to make way for Federal Highway construction. Some of the persons who live in these trailers and who have been doing so for the past 18 months, own the lots upon which the George W. Carver "dispersables" were set up. They, however, cannot move into the Carver Homes because they are not in-migrant war workers. In the background may be seen the roofs of the Pickett Homes, a temporary project designed for white in-migrants. Citizens who recommended that the Pickett Homes be turned over to colored tenants were given a cool brushoff.—(Shephard Photo.)

47f-1943

THEY TELL A SAD STORY

Washington Tribune
Washington, D. C.

SEP 25 1943

A group of young women eagerly telling Tribune reporter Woody L. Taylor how the terrible explosion occurred at the place where they reside last Sunday, in which one young woman, Mrs. Doris Callender was killed, and her sister, Miss Rosetta Gillespie, both of Columbus, Ohio, was injured. Mrs. Callender was a bride of little better than a year. Shortly after their marriage, her husband was drafted into the U.S. Army and is now overseas. Shown from left to right, standing, Misses Naomi Humphries, Monessen, Pa.; Lois McCrae, Monessen, Pa.; Martha Smith, Burkeville, Va., Olivia Baker, Charlottesville, Va.; Bessie Howell, Monessen, Pa.; Ollye McDaniels, Langston, Okla.; Francis McKissick, Asheville, N. C., and Miss Ruby Johnson of Memphis, Tenn. Seated on the arm of the chair is Miss Emma Copeland. In the chair is Miss Roxie Lee Blanks of Little Rock, Ark., talking to Mr. Taylor.

---

1 Dead and 20 Homeless When Blast Wrecks House

Washington Tribune
Washington, D. C.

One woman was killed, another injured and 20 made homeless last Sunday when a furnace blast wrecked a rooming house at 1125 Tenth Street, Northwest. The house, one of many in the District for women war workers, was crowded when the explosion occurred.

The dead woman was Mrs. Doris Callendar, 22, of Columbus, Ohio, who died [illegible] at Freedmen's Hospital. She shared a basement apartment in the house with her sister, Rosetta Gillespie, 25. Mrs. Gillespie was treated at Freedmen's Hospital for shoulder burns and a lacerated scalp, but was discharged after treatment.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald said his office would investigate the case before issuing a death certificate.

Miss Roxie Lee Blanks, a roomer in the house, said she and several of the other roomers had only a half hour before the blast complained to the woman in charge of the house about the furnace as several of the pipes were loose and a loud knocking caused uneasiness among the tenants.

Miss Blanks said she and others had tried to reach the owner of the house, Nick Basiliko, who is also the [illegible]gan Hotel which was raided several months ago and many citizens and soldiers arrested.

She said as a result of the blast all of the girls were made homeless. They went to the hotel and demanded accommodation until they could find quarters, but were refused. She stated that they told the manager that they would remain until accommodated. The manager grudgingly gave them rooms with a number of girls in each room and two in a bed. Some had to sleep two to a cot, she said.

Some of the girls were able to find rooms in [illegible] various parts of [illegible]ity. Conditions of many rooming houses in crowded Washington is being investigated by several organizations. Many unscrupulous landlords are taking advantage of the situation by leasing delapidated houses and renting rooms to war workers at high rates with several in a room.

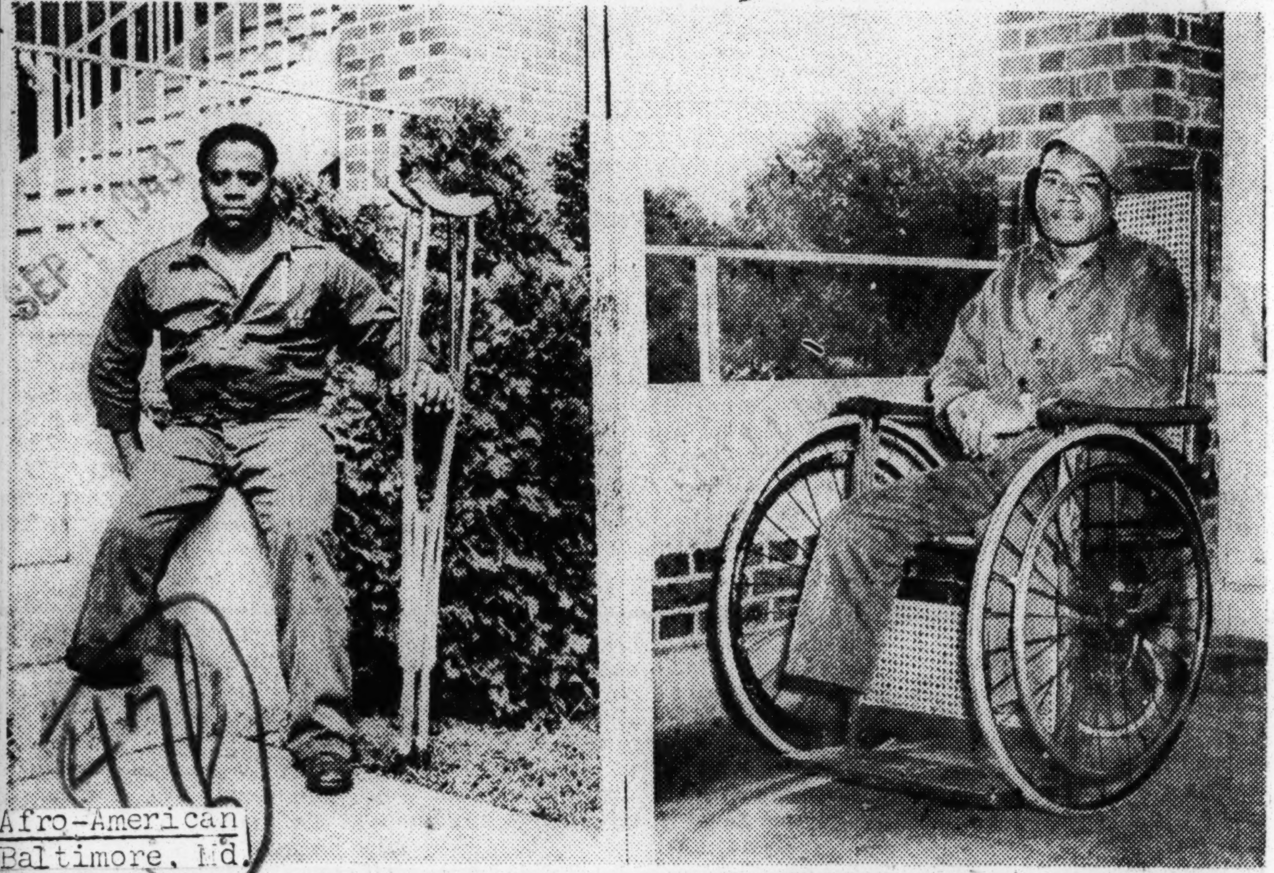
A total of thirty two girls, all government workers, were housed in the house at the time of the explosion. According to several of the young women interviewed there are usually about 40 inhabitants. These young women were charged $20 per bed with one person to a bed and usually four beds to a room. In other words, Mr. Basiliko was collecting $80 per month, in advance the girls said, for each room.

The basement in which the explosion [illegible] was a total wreck. The makeshit kitchen where the young women had to prepare food for themselves was a very small partitioned affair in the same room with the furnace. So close was the refrigerator to the furnace until it was blown about sixty-five feet, through the window, into the back yard. The one window in the kitchen thru which the refrigerator was blown, also served for the adjoining room in which three girls slept.

The bed room, hardly large enough [illegible] one bed [illegible] one occupant to live in with any degree of comfort, was crowded with three beds and three roomers.

Just opposite the kitchen was a make shift dining room with three rough tables. So terriffic was the explosion that the entire floor of this room was strewn with cement covered brick blown from th[illegible]uld almost have to see the basement of the house in order to appreciate the condition under which these young women, who are working "for "a better world in which to live," had to reside.

Color Line Vanishes as Vets Recuperate at Hospital in D.C.



SEP 11 1943

476

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

Pvt. Isaiah Walker of N.Y.C., who lost a leg at a port of embarkation, and Pvt. Travis Henry of Philadelphia, who lost both legs in N. Africa, shown at the Walter Reed Hospital in D.C., where they are waiting for artificial limbs.

47f-1943

Buck Is Passed In Making Provision For In-Migrants

Pittsburgh, Pa.
Courier

SEP 11 1943

SEP 11 1943

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9—There is a nation-wide crisis in housing facilities for Negro war workers which gravely threatens to retard war production and to limit use of Negro workers to mee the increasingly acute manpower shortage.

Information on key war centers available here indicated that the Negro population in Los Angeles had increased 138 per cent in the space of months, with Negro migrants coming into the area at the rate of 3,500 a month. In Baltimore, Negroes, constituting 20 per cent of the total population, are crowded into 2 per cent of the residential area. To Detroit, each week, are streaming 12 to 14 hundred persons, the majority of them Negro women.

600 FAMILIES MUST VACATE

Here in the Nation's capital, this week, 600 Negro families are being evicted from an area needed to complete a Naval station, while 300 other families have been living in overcrowded trailers for more than a year with no housing available. In Buffalo, N. Y., following a two and a half-year-old wrangle as to whether Negroes should be permitted to occupy sites in areas where they had not lived before, the National Housing agency has finally capitulated to local pressures and programmed a project which calls for tearing down 200 Negro dwellings and erecting 316, thus wasting vast quantities of critical war materials.

John B. Blandford, Jr., National Housing agency administrator, announced last week programming of 3,200 units of housing in Washington, 2,00 in Detroit, 12 to 14 hundred in Baltimore, and 3,200 in Los Angeles. He indicated that 7 per cent of all programmed war housing had been for Negro occupancy and that 8.4 per cent of monies spent from public funds had been put to this use.

But, despite these hopeful signs, thep roblem remains and promises to grow worse unless decisive changes of policy occur both in the NHA here and in the field.

POWER DIRECTED TO LOCAL AUTHORITIES

"In the matter of site selection and occupancy," said Blandford, "the NHA has pursued the policy of delegating to local housing authorities the power to select sites and determine who shall occupy the houses. Where no local authorities have existed we have sought to ascertain the local patterns of the community and have based our policy of site selection and occupancy on these local patterns."

It is the application of this policy which has contributed to the present crisis. In Baltimore, for example, four or five months were wasted in the attempt to over-ride local white opposition to the Negro project.

CONSTRUCTION OFTEN STYMIED

In fact, in a number of cases, where urgent immediate need for Negro housing existed, consultation with local housing authorities or attempted determination of "local patterns" by NHA has resulted in delaying construction of the needed project.

"No Negro workers will be permitted occupancy in Willow Lodge," stated Bandford, referring to the new 3,000-unit dormitory erected in connection with the Ford Willow Run Bombing plant, near Detroit. "We have programmed this project for white occupancy," he said, "and we had better stick to this program rather than vacillate. That was the trouble at Sojourner Truth."

CITES OTHER PROJECTS

Blandford justified this position on the ground that adequate housing had been programmed for the Negro in-migrant workers in projects at Inkster and Ypsilanti, Investigation of NHA figures of Negro housing made available in connection with this project indicated, however, that only about seven or eight hundred units were for Negroes, out of total of more than ten thousand.

Out of the interview with Blandford and with other housing officials, it developed that no certain method is used to determine the number of Negro migrants who need housing. The statement was made that the basis of determining need was the estimate of the War Manpower commission of the number of in-migrant workers a given community expects.

PLENTY OF ROOM FOR ERROR

Thus the War Manpower commission may and frequently does, take employers' statements to the effect that they intend to bring in no Negro workers as the basis for assuming that there is no need for Negro housing, while the fact is that thousands of Negroes will pour into the area looking for work.

The fact remains, that despite clearly evidenced good will on the part of responsible housing officials toward the problems of Negro workers, they have thus far failed to deal adequately with thep roblem. And as trains from the South carry Negroes by the thousands to war industry centers in other sections of the country, it becomes certain that the present framework of policies and practices of the National Housing agency will fail to meet the war housing needs of Negro workers.

CIO Convention To Ask 350 Billions For Correction Of War Housing Ills

Defender
Chicago. Ill

PHILADELPHIA, Pa.—Government appropriation of 350 million dollars for non-discriminatory war housing and public works, will be asked by the CIO Committee to Abolish Racial Discrimination at its meeting here, November 1.

The request will be part of a program the committee hopes to put into operation for "purposes of easing racial tension, promoting national unity, increasing war production and winning the war." Wires have already been forwarded to Sen. Carter Glass (D., Va.) and Rep. Clarence Cannon (D., Mo.), chairmen of the Senate and House Appropriations committees respectively, advising them of the plan to ask for the funds.

George L-P Weaver, director of the committee, recommended adoption of the program following a study of "the underlying causes of interracial antagonism."

"Intolerable housing and living conditions of war workers of both races," Weaver points out, "constitutes one of the basic perils to the war effort."

Cites Baltimore As Typical

In the report to be submitted to the November 1, conference Weaver declares:

"In a consultation with John B. Blanford, National Housing Agency administrator, the programming of housing throughout the nation was discussed, and the matter of neighborhood anti-racialism was gone into.

"Among the areas where a project was being held up, due to community opposition to Negroes moving in, was Baltimore. The committee has been working with various community groups in Baltimore on this problem. At a meeting in Mr. Blandford's office in July 16, it was announced by Mr. Blanford that the Federal Agency had picked a site in Baltimore and would go ahead and construct a 1,200 unit permanent housing project.

"As was to be expected, instant opposition developed to the idea, led by three ministers, two Catholic priests and a Jewish Rabbi. Philip Reno of the Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers of America, is the leader of the CIO forces in Baltimore pushing for the project and I have been working with the Federal Housing people from the Washington end.

Raps Covenant Restrictions

"The situation in Baltimore is a good illustration of most of our wartime industrial areas. An estimated 200,000 Negroes or about 20 per cent of the city's total population live today in 'three-ringed' districts whose total area comprises less than four square miles of the city's total 78.6 per cent. They are huddled there under sanitary conditions which are conceded to be virtual mockery of this capital of medical science.

"These sections are little rings of Negro dwellers, living mostly in houses abandoned by whites and confined to these areas by air-tight landlord covenants which prevent them from buying or renting property elsewhere. Out of more than 15,000 houses in which Negroes live today, it is estimated that less than 200 were built originally for Negroes.

"The Negro population is distributed about 58,000 per square mile, compared with the density among whites of slightly more than 9,000 square miles.

Willing To Pay

"Negroes in war work, and the largest percentage of them are CIO members of the United Steelworkers of America, United Electrical Radio and Machine Workers of America, and UAW locals, make as high as $10 and $15 per day and are willing to pay for decent housing but are compelled in hundreds of cases to live in inevitable pens, with outside toilets, etc.

"Additional Negroes are still coming to Baltimore at an estimated rate of 2,000 per month to work in defense factories. Where are they going to live?

"Figures on health and crime are offered by officials as telling their own story of such conditions. More than half of all deaths from tuberculosis and pneumonia in Baltimore, according to governor's commission, occur among Negroes, comprising only one-fifth of the population.

Deplores Schools

"Negro school facilities, recreational and other community facilities are in the same deplorable condition. There is a definite need to awaken the community to the benefits it is possible for a community to secure under the 'Lanaham Act.' We have made an analysis of this act and hope to activize the CIO groups in this community to secure the maximum benefits that accrue from it.

"The saddest commentary on the situation in Baltimore is the opposition to the contemplated housing project by church leaders. The following is a direct quote from the latest report received from Baltimore, written by a CIO official: 'Various ministers and a Catholic priest have also been very active in stirring up and organizing opposition to Negro housing. The Catholic priest's name is Rev. S. Vincent Fitzgerald of St. Anthony's church here. Anything that could be done nationally to quiet this priest down would be very helpful. His contribution to racial hatred in Baltimore has certainly been a large one.'"

Federal Housing On Spot, Off Again In Senate Bill

Defender
Chicago. Ill

By HARRY McALPIN
(Defender Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON.—The X marked the spot where the Federal Housing Administration's jim crow policy was to die. Senator McNary (R) of Oregon had drawn the X with a non-discrimination amendment to a bill authorizing an additional $400,000,000 to the FHA's mortagage insurance program.

Then, before formally introducing the amendment, Sen. McNary erased the X by agreeing to temporarily withhold the amendment at the request of Sen. Radcliffe (D) of Maryland.

The proposed amendment reads: "Sec. 5. In the administration of the National Housing Act, as amended, and in making benefits available under the provisions of such act, as amended, there shall be on discrimination on account of race, creed or color."

It created quite a stir in the Senate cloakroom. The Jaycees (for jim crowers, Jew cursers, justice cheaters, joy crimpers, etc.) were laying their battle plans to "junk" the amendment.

Abner H. Ferguson, commissioner of the FHA, joined the "crusade" to kill the amendment by spending full days on Capitol Hill, and by writing a letter to Sen. Radcliffe denying that the FHA discriminates against Negroes. "I can assure you that the act does not permit such discrimination and that our rules, regulations, policies, and procedures are drawn anrd administered impartially and without the slightest discrimination against any group or individuals on account of race, color or creed," he said.

But three paragraphs farther in the same letter, Ferguson says, "It is true that in neighborhoods which are well established and where the character and type of occupancy is clear, the FHA under sound underwriting procedure and general mortgage practice does not, under the insured mortgage system, take any action which will result in a change in the character of such established neighborhoods when such change would tend to introduce inharmonious elements which would cause or accelerate deterioration in property desirability or values. Our responsibilities to other property owners in the neighborhoods are clear in this regard and this is equally true whether the established character of the neighborhood is white or colored."

Ferguson and Sen. Radcliffe worked the ruse that the FHA program was at its rope's end for additional authorization, that it would have to stop operation in two or three days unless the bill were passed immediately—without controversy.

Nevertheless, the vote on the bill was put off for Sen. McKellar (D) of Tennessee, who wanted to have a tete-a-tete with Ferguson before voting. The bill had already passed the House, and because of amendments must go to conference between the House and Senate anyway.

Assurance was given Sen. McNary that his amendment would be considered when the next general housing bill comes up. Thus Congress and the administration escaped a showdown on whether FHA may continue inciting community tensions by its site approval powers and its support given to restrictive covenants.

OCT 6 1943

FHA, despite its contribution to Negro home ownership, has done more than any other agency to contribute to the ghetto trend of Negro housing. Without an amendment such as McNary intended to introduce, the postwar housing picture for Negroes—which will necessarily be primarily a private finance problem—is a black smudge.

The NAACP, the Urban League, the Fraternal Council of Negro Churches, and other organizations have indicated intention to fight for passage of the amendment. "Now," they say, "is the time. Why wait?"

In withdrawing the amendment, Sen. McNary told the Senate: "At the suggestion of Edgar G. Brown, director of the National Negro Council, a few days ago, I submitted an amendment to the bill, and intended to press for its adoption. However, I find the time is so short and the necessity for immediate action so great that I shall not do so at this time."

Disabled Servicemen Accepting War Jobs

DEC 18 1943

DEC 18 1943

Courier
—Pittsburgh, Pa

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The Of- ce of War Information this week ssued a report on the training nd employment opportunities open o discharged service men of this ar and what advantage is being aken of these opportunities. The eport, based on information obained from seven government agncies, indicates that a majority of he returning service men are acepting employment in war plants here, despite their disabilities, hey are doing a good job and are ecoming a real factor in relieving the present manpower shortge. Relatively few are taking advantage of the opportunity to obain vocational education at the ost of the Government, but the Veterans Administration expresses he belief that many of those who re now accepting employment in ndustry will request vocational raining if and when their present mployment ends.

DEC 18 1943

00,000 DISCHA

To date at least 800,000 veterans of this war have been given discharges from the Army, Navy and Marine Corps. The Army released 585,000 from Pearl Harbor through September 30, 1943. The Navy discharged 133,155 from Pearl Harbor through October 31, 1943, and the Marine Corps discharged 34,759 during the same period. Of those discharged, 370,000 were released from the Army for medical reasons and 6,961 from the Navy and Marines for medical reasons. The remainder have been discharged for a number of reasons, the most important of which is over-age.

Of the total number discharged, 26,000 have applied to the Veterans' Administration for continued hospitalization and 2,800 have applied to the same agency for vocational rehabilitation. The bulk of the remainder have either returned to their old jobs or have taken new jobs.

A discharged veteran is entitled to the following:

1. His old job if he wants it (under certain conditions).
2. Preferential consideration should he wish to work for the Federal Government.
3. Assistance in obtaining a new job.
4. Vocational rehabilitation or training.
5. Free hospitalization and medical treatment in a Veterans' Administration hospital as long and as often as he needs it for service-connected disabilities, and for non-service connected disabilities if facilities are available.
6. A pension for life or as long as the disability continues for a service-connected disability if the disability is rated at 10 per cent or more.

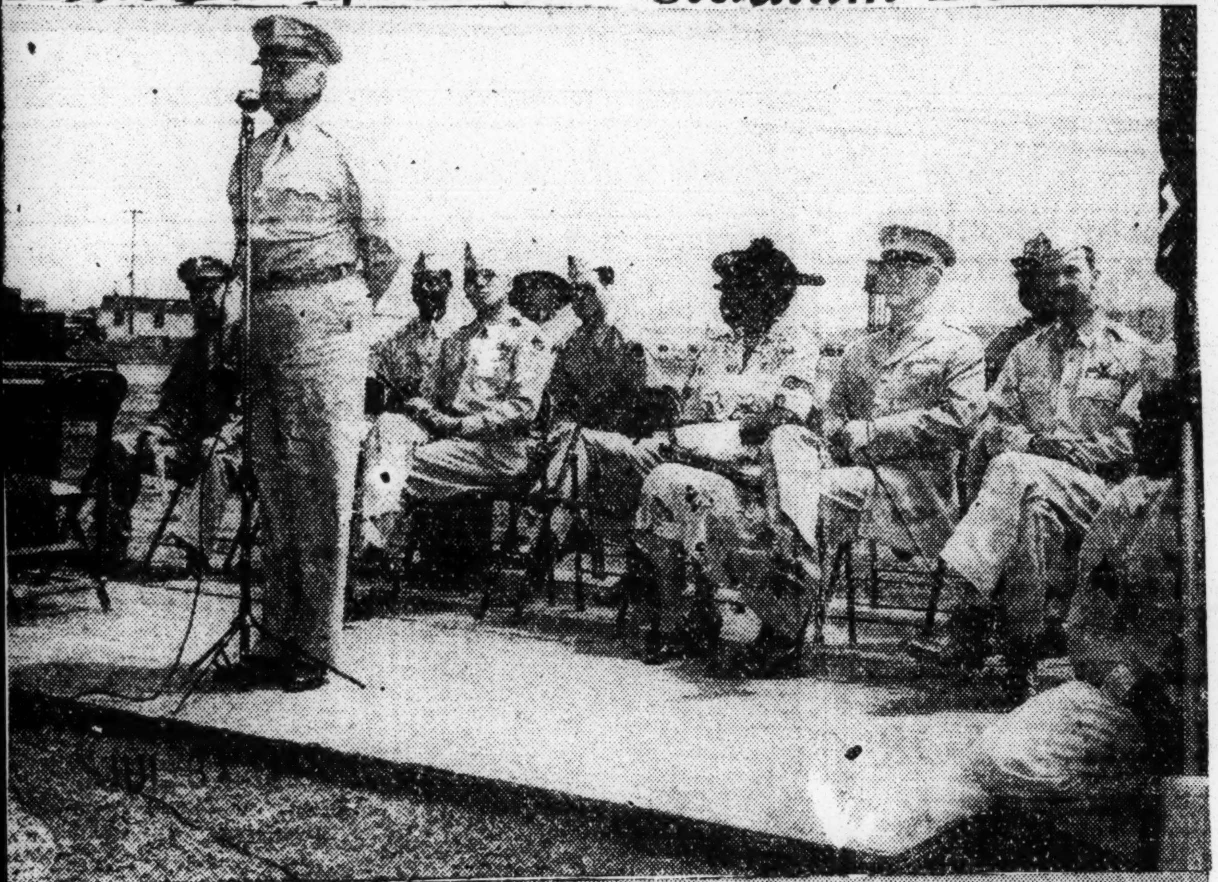
DEC 18 1943

47g-1943

Mrs. Sarah Foster, Famed Pitcher's Wife, Honored Guest At Stadium Dedication

Informer



Houston, Texas

FORT HUACHUCA, Ariz. — The $18,000 Rube Foster Memorial Baseball stadium was dedicated and presented to the 92nd Division in an impressive ceremony Sunday July 18, with Mrs. Sarah Foster widow of the great Negro pitcher and organizer of the Negro Baseball League, present as a special guest of honor.

Trying bravely to keep back the tears that welled up in her throat, an attractively gray-haired brown-skinned woman summed up the tribute that she had come 2,000 miles to hear paid to her late husband, with "After all, it pays, it pays to be good, to live clean years. After all these years if my husband had thought his trying to help train the young to be clean athletes would have ended this way . . ."

She was unable to finish the words, ". . . how happy he would have been." Yet every one in the crowd of 15,000 persons who had come to witness the dedication of the Rube Foster Baseball field, knew that Mrs. Sarah Foster, widow of the great pitcher and organizer of the National Negro Baseball League, was happy in spite of her tears.

Slender, brownskinned, her upswept hair attractively silvered, Mrs. Foster proved as much a surprise to authorities at Fort Huachuca. Her charm, her graciousness, her eager (almost girlish) enthusiasm and appreciation were so unfeigned and stimulating that Col. Edwin N. Hardy, Lt. Col. M. O. Bousfield, commanding officer, Station Hospital No. 1, and others who were responsible for her being out here were all quite in a dither about her.

She proved to be quite unaffcted about the homage that some wanted to pay to her. "It's my husband who is being honored," she quietly reminded them all. "I've always kept in the background; I think I was more in the foreground during the dedication program than at any other time that I can remember."

Among those present at the game were Brig. Gen. B. O. Davis, Sr., assistant in the Inspector General's office; Truman E. Gibson, civilian aide to the Secretary of War; Major Gen. Edward M. Almond, commander of the 92nd Infantry Division; Brig. Gen. John E. Woods, assistant division commander; and Brig. Gen. W. H. Colbern, 92nd artillery commander.

JUL 31 1943

Tribune
Philadelphia, Pa.

Athletic Field Named For Soldier

NOV 20 1943

FORT HAUCHUCA, Ariz.— The athletic field formerly known as the Old Post baseball diamond was officially named Brock Field, recently, in honor of Technical Sergeant Fred Brock, Jr., deceased, formerly of Headquarters and Headquarters Battery, 598th Field Artillery.

A native of San Antonio, Tex., Sgt. Brock was struck and killed by lightning on August 19, while performing his duties as communications chief on the Fort Hauchuca reservation.

NOV 20 1943

Trilune
Philadelphia, Pa.

PLAIN TALK

By ELMER CARTER

LAUNCHING OF THE S.S. ROBERT L. VANN

Another ship has slid down the ways bearing on its prow the name of a distinguished colored American. And now the Robert L. Vann takes its place as a harbinger of liberty and as a symbol of the American democracy. In its hold and on its decks soon there will be packed the the murderous weapons of war, tanks, and planes and shells and deadly explosives, food and clothing [illegible] soldiers on the firing line or the needy civilian populations of the countries freed from Axis oppression.

OCT 30 1943

The launching of ships bearing the name of eminent figures in the life of this nation has for us tremendous significance. For when the name of a great citizen of color is emblazoned on a ship, it is in truth more than perfunctory recognition of the man. It is recognition of his race and its place in American life. It is an attempt and a praiseworthy attempt to demonstrate the ideal of this democracy even though that ideal has not been completely achieved.

Appreciation of this circumstance is paramount in any intelligent approach to the effective betterment of the status of the Negro. In our struggle for complete integration in the life of this nation we must not forget that we are Americans: that many of our problems are essentially American problems and that alien techniques ,and methods tried and found more or less effective in foreign lands by religious, racial and national minorities whose history is far different from ours, do not guarantee success and [illegible] invite catastrophe.

We must contend for our rights as Americans, willing and able to bear the responsibilities of citizens, anxious to render the utmost service to our country, eager to give our unquestioned loyalty for its preservation and its welfare.

Ours has been slow but steady progress. And nowhere on the face of the earth has the Negro achieved so much as he has in America, not in [illegible], nor in British [illegible]ica, nor French, nor Portuguese, nor Belgian, nor in the West Indies—only in the United States of America with all its limitations and all of its pernicious prejudice, and all of its clinging to the slave tradition has there emerged among colored people a Paul Robeson, a Mary Church Terrell, an Alain Locke, a Marian Anderson, a Richard Wright, a Mary McCleod Bethune, a Roland Hayes, a William E. Duboise, a Louis Wright, a Langston Hughes, a Richard Barthe, a Jesse Owens, to name but a few in the contemporary world, nor a Booker T. Washington, a Carver, an Ernest Just, a James W[illegible]n Johnson in the more recent past.

Withal its prejudice, its racial antipathy, its Jim Crowism and God knows America should be profoundly ashamed of these perversions of Democracy and Christianity, this nation has been quick to accord honor, recognition, fame and in many cases wealth, to American Negroes of exceptional gifts and talents.

It is the progress of the American Negro that has stirred the spirit of the Negro in Africa, and awakened in him the longing for freedom. It is the example of the American Negro that has set in motion and given strength to the movement for autonomy within the Empire among the people of the West Indies.

Wherever there are men and women of Negro blood, they look to America for inspiration and for the measure of their own possibilities. Thus it can be seen that we in America have a high destiny for we act not only for ourselves but for millions all over the world.

The method which has enabled us to come thus [illegible] not be spectacular but it has been effective. It has been protest plus performance, not just protest. It has been the continuing demonstration of our faith in our country and in the ultimate sense of fairness of the American people and judged by the record, this has been the better way.

SS Paul Laurence Dunbar, Sixth Liberty Ship Named After Negro, Launched Tues.

Age
New York, N. Y.

The sixth Liberty Ship to be named for a Negro, the SS PAUL LAURENCE DUNBAR, was launched by the California Shipbuilding Corporation at Wilmington, Calif., on Tuesday. Sponsor of the vessel was Mrs. [illegible] Wil[illegible] oldest employed Negro woman in the yard. Miss Eva Stringer was maid-of-honor, and J. H. Wadsworth, manager, Public Relations Department, was master of ceremonies at the launching.

The ss. Booker T. Washington, first Liberty Ship named for a Negro, was also built in this yard. The Dunbar has been assigned as a tanker—the 18th Liberty tanker and the 274th ship built by the California Shipbuilding Corporation since Pearl Harbor.

Four of the first five Liberty Ships nmed for Negroes are now in service, two of them with Negro captains and mixed crews. The five ships named for outstanding Negro Americans included the ss. Booker T. Washington, the ss. George Washington Carver, the ss. Frederick Douglass, the ss. John Merrick, and the [illegible]bert L. Vann. A naval vessel, the destroyer escort Leonard Roy Harmon, was named in honor of a Negro naval hero.

Paul Laurence Dunbar, a native of Dayton, Ohio, was born June 27, 172. When he was graduated from high school he was president of the literary society and editor of the student publication. He also composed the song of his graduation class of 1891. While working as an elevator operator at $4 per week, he started writing the poetry that was to make him famous. In 1893, he published a booklet of his poems at a cost of $125 and defrayed expenses by personal sale of the booklet at $1.00 a copy.

Through the encouragement of influential friends, he published his second book of poems, "Majors and Minors," and this attracted the attention of William Dean Howells, then editor of Harpers Magazine, who gave the book a full-page review. After this review, demands for his poems increased. In 1896, Dodd, Mead and Company published Dunbar's best-known collection, "Lyrics of Lowly Life." From that time on, Dunbar was a success. He wrote four novels and in 1897, lectured in England. Returning to this country [illegible] following year, he [illegible]ed in the Library of Congress, continuing at the same time his literary work. The confining work in the library, in addition to the demands on his time for writing, ruined his health, and he went to Colorado in 1899 in a vain effort to regain it. During this period, he wrote the school song of Tuskegee Institute, in which he was very much interested.

Dunbar died February 9, 1906 at Dayton, Ohio.

OCT 30 1943
NOV 13 1943

47h-1943

The Daily Worker
New York, N. Y.

Unity for Production

Eunice Tunnard and Eula Mae Simpson, white and Negro Youth Administration students, study assembly-line work at Brooklyn's NYA Youth Training Center. Similar scenes may be duplicated in such NYA centers throughout Greater New York.

NYA Shows Way to Train Negro Youth for War Work

MAY 17 1943

By Eugene Gordon

The kid machinists in Harlem's NYA training center get a kick out of knowing they are actually producing for victory. They tell you so.

Not that the center pretends to be a full time, regularly producing machine shop. It doesn't, as Harold May, supervising foreman and superintendent of the shop, makes clear:

"We don't emphasize production as such. It is chiefly a matter of work experience. We put emphasis on learning production methods — machine shop fundamentals—that can be applied when these boys and girls get regular jobs."

In the act of learning how to operate lathes, grinders, drill presses, shapers, planers, band and power hack saws, and buffing machines these 70-odd youngsters turn out actual products. They have the satisfaction of knowing that these bolts, flanges and other articles go to the Navy Department for use.

While the Daily Worker reporter was interviewing Mr. May and his financial clerk, a youngster named Hubert Dilworth, a pretty Negro girl sat at the desk where applicants fill out forms. I asked her:

WANT TO HELP WIN

"Why do you want to learn how to operate a machine? Why do you think you'd like to do this sort of work?"

Her name, she said, was Sarah Hall, 20, of 1858 Seventh Ave. Machine shop work wasn't new to her, she having had a job in a New Jersey arsenal. She now wants to learn welding.

"Frankly, I want the job so I can help win the war. I want to hurry the war up and get it over with as soon as possible. Of course I'd like to earn a little more money, too, but my main reason is to help win the war."

Mr. Dilworth sent her to the NYA's welding shop, 98 Atlantic Ave., Brooklyn.

Mr. May said the girls show as much proficiency as boys in the handling of machines. Most of the girls have special aptitude. There was, for instance, Miss Madge Taylor, "the best mechanic in this shop."

Miss Taylor, was working on a lathe. She was enveloped from head to foot in overalls. A transparent shield covered her small brown face. She was 18, she said, and had been in the shop six weeks. She hadn't had any previous training. But she rattled off the names of the articles the machines turned out and knew precisely how the Navy would use them.

WELL EQUIPPED

Many youngsters come into the shop for application blanks from having been enticed by what they saw through the huge plate glass window. The place, at 317 W. 125th St., used to be sewing machine store. The large room is now filled with rows of another kind of machine. The inside of the shop and the workers are as visible from the sidewalk as the interior of a glass beehive. And as interesting.

The exact number of students enrolled there last week was 79. Negro learners outnumbered white about six to one. Boys seemed to outnumber girls in approximately the same ratio. But everybody worked with everybody else, in beautiful harmony. Mr. May, in charge is a Negro. He is a graduate of Tuskegee Institute and of the Newark College of Engineering. He has had years of industrial experience.

Young Dilworth, a musician by profession, personable, affable and efficient, is also a Negro.

The shop was opened Dec. 1st, 1942. It is officially known as the War Manpower Commission - National Youth Administration Victory Training Center. There are similar centers elsewhere in the city.

Work is carried on in two shifts, beginning at 7:45 A. M. and ending at midnight. Workers are assigned five days', with an option of six if time was lost during the week. The shop has a quota of 60 workers, though 79 was on the job last week. The training course runs from eight to 10 weeks. It is longer for those who need more time.

"Some applicants have had a little training when they come here," Dilworth said. "they having had small machine jobs in some industry. They come here because they feel they can get better jobs when they've had a little more training."

16 TO 24

Ages range from 16 to 24 year.

A group of white youths, presumably bunched together about the same machine because they are neighborhood buddies in the Bronx, averaged 16½ years. They were trying to adjust the machine. A Negro youth came over and helped them. They dispersed to their places and carried on.

"What happens when these kids finish here? Where do they go?"

They get a certificate when the course is completed, Mr. Dilworth said. Then they report to Miss Irma Nickerson, United States Employment Service agent, NYA Brooklyn shop. She sends them out immediately—that is, if calls for jobs are on tap. Workers may also leave the shop to look for jobs, first signing in, as usual.

They are not paid for the time they are out looking for work. Their regular pay, as learners, however, at the rate of 160 hours a month, is 25 cents an hour or $40 a month. Boys and girls get the same wage.

"We have an understanding with the Sperry Gyroscope Co. who have asked us to send them boys and girls for tests," Dilworth said.

He named about a dozen other plants, of varying sizes, which employ these youths regularly.

Washington Post
Washington, D. C.

Negro War Jobs Grow Slowly

JUN 22 1943

The War Manpower Commission reported yesterday a "slow but steady increase in the use of Negro workers in war plants throughout the country" but added that there still is "not an adequate utilization of Negroes in some areas and some plants."

The WMC said Negroes comprised 5.8 per cent of 12 million workers employed in some 16,000 plants reporting to its employment service in July, 1942, but their number, after a month-to-month increase, had risen to 6.7 per cent of 14,673,000 workers in the same plants by the end of last April.

Nevertheless, although Negroes make up about 10 per cent of the Nation's population, they comprise "only about 7 per cent of the employment in war industries," the WMC said, explaining as the reasons:

1. "The Negro labor force is concentrated in that part of the country where a relatively small proportion of war contracts are being executed. Those areas and a large proportion of the Negro working force in them are engaged in essential agriculture." (The report observed that "two-thirds of the country's Negro labor supply is confirmed to 14 southern States, whereas only 13.5 per cent of total war contracts have been awarded in those States.")

2. "Limited occupational and training opportunities heretofore afforded Negro workers" and "employer, union and worker prejudice" even in some areas of concentrated Negro population where war contracts have created a stringent labor market."

Gadsden, Ala., Times
August 16, 1943

Negroes To Help Fight Idleness

Ministers Talk With Mayor On Absenteeism

Promises of aid in carrying on the war against the absenteeism that is crippling Gadsden industries were made by a number of Negro pastors of the city at a conference held in the office of Mayor J. H. Meighan today, and the latter expressed the belief that this aid would be very effective.

In explaining to the ministers that the purpose of the conference was to urge putting forth of the greatest effort toward winning the war, the mayor said: "You men are leaders among your people and have much influence with them, but that influence depends entirely upon your efforts. I want you to plead with your congregations to do their part in this war, and there is a job for every man and woman to fill and work at regularly."

Home Front Failure

The mayor pointed out that July was the month of greatest Allied war successes, but had also brought the greatest concern over the failure of the home front to keep step.

He said further that the recent placing of Gadsden in a "labor shortage area" classification would mean that the city could not get any more war contracts unless this situation is changed, and he declared that it was absenteeism that had caused the War Manpower Commission to put Gadsden in that classification.

"Every man on a job must keep at his work full time," Mr. Meighan went on, "for it is easy to see that a plant employing 4,000 persons who work only half or three-fourths of the time is greatly handicapped."

He pointed out also that sickness is the cause of some absenteeism, with venereal diseases almost heading the list causing absence from work. He asked for and was promised help along in combatting this menace, and suggested that the plants make some provision for treatment of employes having the disease.

Other causes of absenteeism he cited were that some persons were making so much money that they took time off to spend it, and at one plant here, he declared, 46 colored men were off from work one day after a payday to indulge in a "crap game". The absence of these men caused loss of a day's work for 300 others, he said.

Mayor Meighan assured the ministers that he was not singling out the Negro workers alone, for white workers were also guilty of absenteeism, and added that highly organized groups had promised to take care of the situation insofar as these latter employes were concerned.

"You men can do much to help on the home front," he concluded, "and you can render your country a great service by working among your people through preaching to them how important it is that they put in every hour of work they can in order to win this war."

Colored Women Make History In Steel Industry

Daily World

Take Over Big Jobs In Buffalo Area

Atlanta, Georgia

NEW YORK — (ANP) — Standing staunchly behind the men behind the guns, Negro women are making history in the steel industry in the Buffalo area. Aided by the Niagara frontier's acute manpower shortage and with the help of the New York regional office of the Fair Employment Practice committee, Negro women have broken into fields of employment hitherto traditionally barred to them.

The situation, promising in terms of the integration of Negro women into war industry, is still confronted with a number of internal problems but FEPC representatives are assisting the companies in solving these problems as they arise.

According to Edward Lawson, acting examiner in charge of the New York regional FEPC office, one of the outstanding examples of the introduction of Negro women to new types of jobs is at the Bethlehem Steel company's Lackawanna plant, just outside Buffalo. In this plant, Negro women may be found in a number of departments, performing duties which have always before been delegated to men — and doing them well.

JUL 16 1943

COKE OVEN WORKERS

They are working in the coke oven department, at the blast furnaces, at the open hearth furnaces, as bricklayer helpers, in the storage yard-machine shop, and in the general yard department.

Negro women comprise about one third of the total number of women employed at the plant. The company started hiring women earlier this year and from the outset, at the insistence of FEPC representatives, a program of integration was launched.

According to the plant officials, the use of Negro and white women workers on heavy steel mill work has not been all sweetness and light. There have been a few minor clashes, they revealed, but none that was serious.

The task of securing acceptance of Negro women in some of the departments where they have not yet been put to work still remains, according to Lawson. As yet there are no Negro women working in the machine shop, electrical shop or highway specialty shop. The reason for this, say plant officials, is that no Negro women who are qualified for this work have as yet been found. The qualifications for these jobs are somewhat above those for some of the other types of work.

WHITES ON JOBS

Although white women are working in the forge shop, the general billet yard, the power mills, the laboratory, the storehouse, the accounting department, the garage and as janitresses, there are no non-whites in any of these departments.

Attempts have recently been made by the company to use women as gang leaders, both Negro and white. This venture has not yet met with any too great success, however, because the women, Negro and white, semed to resent working under the leadership of other women. In most cases those promoted have been returned to their original positions within the gangs.

All of the women are provided with the regulation safety clothing and equipment required by plant rules. In addition, the plant's safety department personnel maintains a schedule of frequent inspections. These precautions, together with the natural aptitude displayed by the workers themselves, have resulted in a very low accident record.

Most of the women are housewives, with husbands, sons or other relatives in the armed force. They were secured through the United States Employment service of the War Manpower commission and through the plant's own employment office. Many of them, in addition to working their regular shifts at the plant, manage to continue to take care of their homes and families without outside help.

Their enthusiasm for this new kind of work is pretty general. Some of them have gone to work because of the need of more money by the family, others because they wanted to get into the war effort themselves, but almost without exception, regardless of the individual reasons for seeking the job, they have proved themselves quick and willing to learn and dependable.

"These women," said Lawson, "have made an excellent beginning. Their success in filling war jobs in heavy industry offers first-hand indication of what can be accomplished when the undemocratic hiring restrictions based on race, creed, color or natural origin are discarded.

"It is hoped that this company will continue along the lines it is now moving and work toward the full integration of Negro and white female workers in every department. By doing this, it can sidestep the Niagara frontier's manpower shortage and continue to turn out the badly needed war material with which we will whip the axis."

JUL 16 1943

Blame Booklet On Negroes For OWI Opposition

Daily World

Davis Threatens To Quit Should Senate Act

Atlanta, Georgia

WASHINGTON—(SNS) —Elmer Davis, director of the Office of War Information, said Saturday that he would quit his job if its domestic branch is abolished, as the house voted to do Friday.

"If the senate concurs with the opinion of the house, there will be no OWI, and that is that." He added that it would also be the end of me as director. This was a combination overseas and domestic job that I was called down to do. If the senate concurs in the house view, that job is ended. It will be the job of somebody else to take care of whatever they choose to do in foreign information."

Davis has been the target of many members of the house, especially southern representatives, since the issue of a pamphlet showing the part Negroes are playing to win the war. Circulation of the pamphlet in the South was called an attempt by the OWI to "shove the Negroes down our throats."

JUN 20 1943

Replying to accusations made by Alabama Representative Starnes who told the house that this country needed no Joseph Goebbels or Virginia Gayda, Davis said:

"There is quite a difference between me and Goebbels as Mr. Starnes would discover if he read the order by which President Roosevelt created OWI, or followed our activities. For one thing, Dr Goebbels doesn't have to go to the Reichstag for his appropriation."

Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones ordered Reconstruction Finance Corporation (RFC) to underwrite immediately any financing which meat packers may need pending federal subsidy payments, in a move to stop a threatened shutdown by scores of small slaughterers.

Amsterdam Star-News
New York, N. Y.

Soldier Wants Chance To Use His Training

To the Editor:

Sir: On October 24, 1942, I enlisted in the Army of the United States of America. At that time the Army was encouraging the enlistments of eighteen and nineteen years olds, so they could pick their branch of service they desired.

I chose the ordnance department with high hopes of getting into their "Welding Ship," which at the time I was training for in civil life.

I was sent to the Aberdeen Proving Ground, Maryland. I was told that welding was given to these, who had acquired the skill for so many years.

However, I was sent to a Light Artillery Mechanics School to learn how to repair all types of Light Artillery pieces. I passed the course of eight weeks with over the average in marks.

But I was sent to this Ammunition Company which, in reality, is nothing more than a Service or Labor company.

I attended the DeWitt Clinton High School. I have two hundred and forty hours in welding to my credit. In the Army General Classification test I received a grade of one hundred and five.

If I were placed in the position that I was trained for at Aberdeen Proving Ground, Maryland, it would be an asset to the government as I would have the opportunity to display the training that the United States government spent time and money in training me.

Pvt. Henry L. Moore,
1902nd Ordnance Ann.,
Duncan Field,
San Antonio, Texas.

JUN 12 1943

Hampton Ceramic Models Used For Naval Training

Informer
Houston, Texas

HAMPTON, Va.—Models that serve as training aids throughout the schools ofe the Navy are being produced in the ceramics laboratory at the Naval Training School, Hampton, Va.

A group of the 555 Negro youths in training at the school assists a man of their own race who is in charge of the laboratory, Joseph W. Gillard, former ceramics professor now in Navy uniform.

There is no Navy rating for the art of pottery, so Gillard is carried on the rolls as a metalsmith. He was a professor at Hampton Institute before the Navy set up a tarining school on the historic campus.

The models of injection chambers of diesel engines are examples of the work. The bit of machinery may be scarcely larger than a thimble, its complicated interior hidden by the metal casing. Gilliard makes a pottery reproduction that is many times enlarged, true to scale in the Nth degree and cut away so that the interior workings are comparatively easy to study.

Hampton's pottery models, navigational as well as engineering, have been routed to other Navy Schools through the Training Division of the Bureau of Naval Personnel. The Training Aids Development Unit recently "examined with interest" some small model buoys made at Hampton and inquired whether the laboratory could "undertake production of the 500 of the same size, color and character."

Gilliard was born on November 23, 1941, in Taylor, S. C., where he still makes his home. He studied at the New York State College of Ceramics. Alfred University, Alfred, N. Y.

JUL 31 1943

47h-1943

em Flying at Tuskegee Army Air School

Afro-American Baltimore, Md.

FEB 6 1943

Miss Bertha Stallworth inspects the end of a 40 m.m. artillery cartridge case at Frankford Arsenal.

FEB 6 1943

FEB 6

Miss Helen E. Allie (top), laboratory technician at Tuskegee Army Flying School, contributes her bit. Miss Marcelle Phyllis of Atlanta, Ga., (bottom) draws maps and charts, at the Tuskegee school.

FEB 6 1943

Miss Eleanore Bennett, who has a brother in the army, is shown feeding stamp press with 37 m.m. cartridge cases at Frankford Arsenal.

Afro-American Baltimore, Md.

WOMAN RECEIVES "E" FOR 2,000 N.J. WORKERS

BAYONNE, N.J. — Miss Katherine Gay represented the 2,000 Solar Manufacturing Corporation employees when they received the Army-Navy "E" last week.

AMUSEMENTS

King of Swing Shift

AUG 23 1943

One of California's busiest businessmen is 25 years old and makes $55 a week as a toolmaker. As a sideline, he grosses an estimated $250,000 a year as a dance-hall impresario. Last week short, dapper Harrison Augustus (Harry) Schooler acquired a new ballroom (his fourth).

In August 1941, Harry Schooler was working on Vega Aircraft's "swing shift" (4 p.m. to 12:30 a.m.). He worked while most people played, and found amusement places closed when he came out to play. One night he rented the Burbank Elks' hall, gave an after-midnight dance (25¢ for men, women free). He played records for his fellow swing shifters and netted $40.

Last spring Harry Schooler took a ten-year lease on Ocean Park's vast Aragon Ballroom (1,500 electric bulbs dimly light its 14,000 square feet of dance floor). The Schooler enterprises now: 1) dances seven nights a week at the Aragon; 2) swing shift dances on Friday and Saturday at Casino Gardens (12:30 to 5 a.m.); 3) Shrine Auditorium dances for Negroes about once a month, whenever a big-name Negro band is available; 4) barn-dancing in the Plantation Ballroom, Culver City.

Toolmaker Schooler (now on the graveyard shift, 12:30 to 7:30 a.m., at Douglas Aircraft) inspects his interests until about 11:30 each evening, then drives to his $55-a-week job in a green Buick convertible, cream-trimmed. Most of his factory pay goes into war bonds. Most of his dance-hall profit, says he, goes back into the business (decorating and furnishing Aragon took about $50,000). After splitting his holdings with his wife on a community property arrangement, Factory Worker Schooler had a 1942 income tax of $8,500. Said he, musing: "Ever since I was a little kid, I've always tried to do something extra."

AUG 23 1943

Time
Chicago, Illinois

TOOLMAKER SCHOOLER
$250,000.

Over 17,000 Get War Jobs

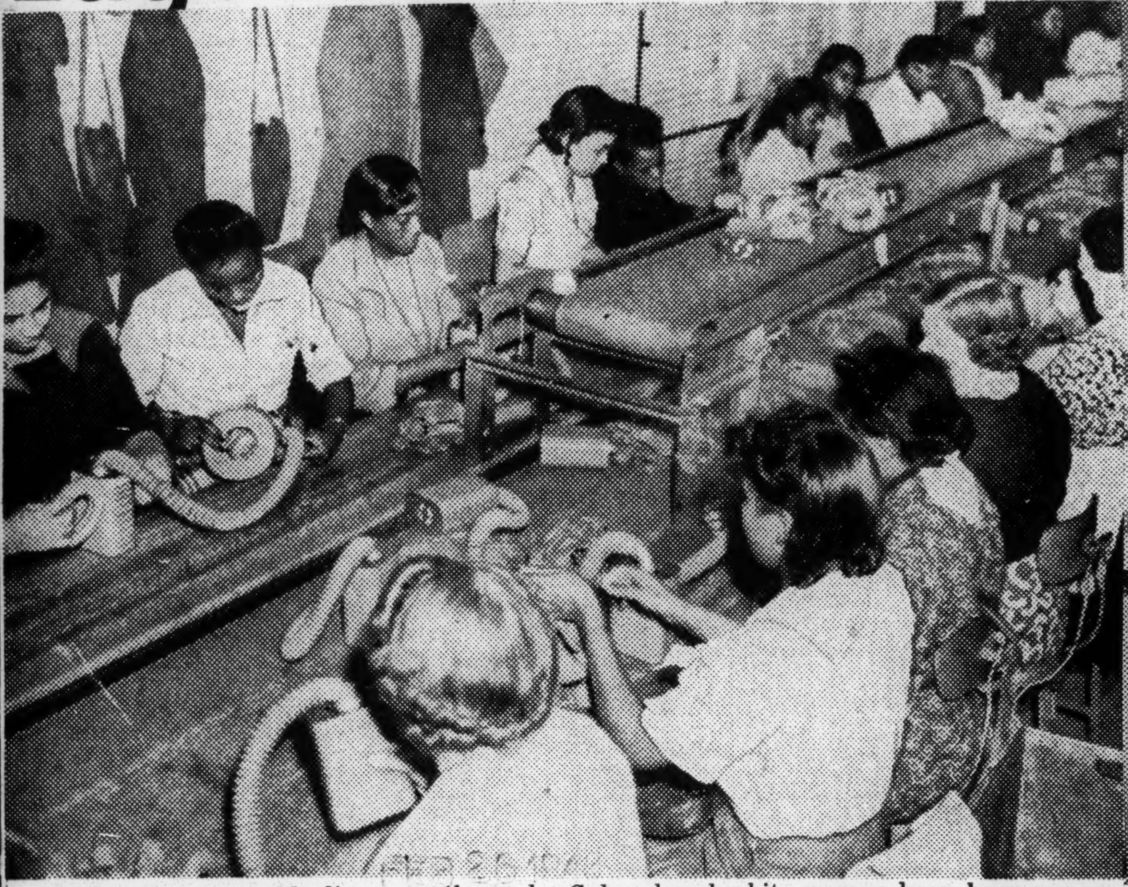
Pittsburgh, Pa.
Courier

ST. LOUIS, June 24 (ANP)— Seventh service command headquarters at Omaha announced that Missouri war plants and war department installations are now employing 17,949 Negroes, and commented that the number compares favorably with the proportion of Negroes to the entire population within the area.

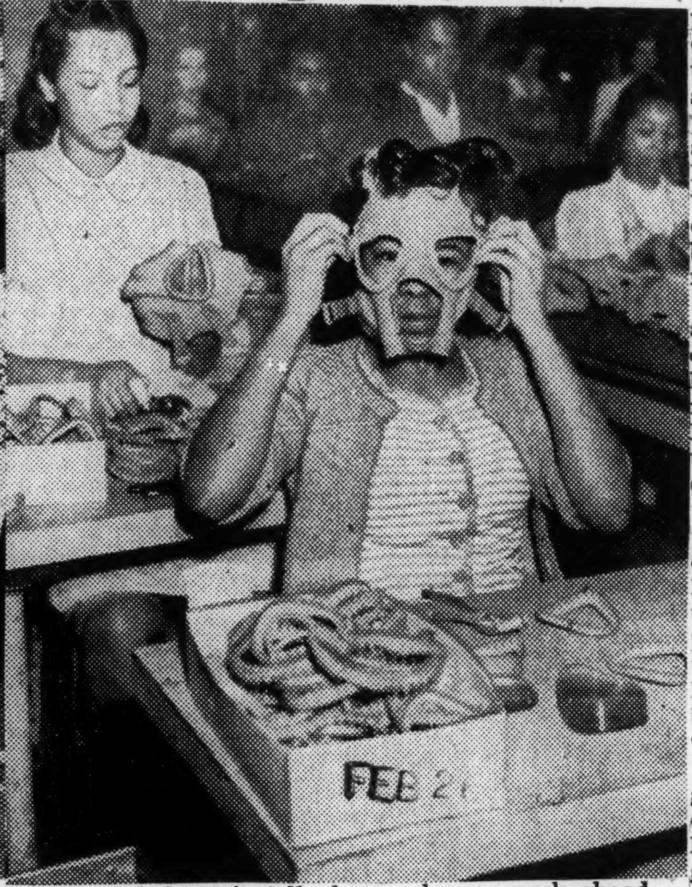
Although Negroes constitute 2.4 per cent of the aggregate population of the nine states of the seventh command, 3.4 per cent of the plant and installation personnel are Negroes, the announcement stated. It added that about 8.3 per cent of the 364,124 Negroes who reside in the nine states are employed at war plants and installations.

1000 Women Work Three Shifts on Edgewood Arsenal Assembly Line

Afro-American
Baltimore, Maryland



View of the assembly line near the end. Colored and white women keep busy moving masks toward completion. One thousand women are employed on the gas mask assembly line at Edgewood, and approximately one-half of that number is colored. They work on three shifts.



Her job is to install glass and pass mask ahead. Miss Constance Adams, another Baltimorean, demonstrates how a gas mask looks minus nozzles and glass.

Wiring the front part of a gas mask is the duty performed by Mrs. Cora B. May, of Baltimore, who works near the middle of the assembly line.

Miss Thelma Whiteside, Baltimore, riveting machine on the assembly line in the gas mask plant at Edgewood Arsenal, Md. She is riveting the top of a gas mask.

FEB 26 1943

HIRING OF NEGROES GAINS, WMC FINDS

New York Times

Proportion to Total in War Plants Rises in 8 Months From 5.8 to 6.7 Per Cent

New York, N. Y.

WASHINGTON, June 20 (U.P.)——A slow but steady increase in the use of Negro workers in war plants has developed throughout the country during the last year, the War Manpower Commission said tonight in releasing the findings of a survey it made.

Of the 12,000,000 workers employed in establishments reporting to the United States Employment Service in July, 1942, 5.8 per cent were Negroes. In March, 1943, there were 14,673,000 workers in these establisments, with 6.7 per cent Negroes.

The increase in Negro employment has varied according to industries. The number employed in tank factories more than doubled during the period reported, while in the aircraft industry the increase was 96.1 per cent, and in shipbuilding, 62.8 per cent.

In many industries, however, the use of Negroes is still very limited. In the fireworks and pyrotechnics industry, Negroes are only a fraction of 1 per cent of the total employes, and in the manufacture of electrical equipment for industrial use, metal-working machinery and scientific instruments, less than 2 per cent. In secondary smelting and refining of non-ferrous metals, Negroes comprised 30.1 per cent of total employment; in bituminous coal mening, 23.1 per cent, and in blast furnaces, steel works and rolling mills, 12.2 per cent.

In Mobile, Ala., which a year ago was an outstanding example of under-utilizabtion of Negro labor, Negroes now comprise one-fifth of industrial employment. However, Negroes comprise nearly two-fifths of the labor force in that city.

In Los Angeles, non-white employment in 118 major war concerns rose almost fourfold from May to December, 1942, while total employment increased about 50 per cent. In the aircraft industry the increase was from 1,012 in May to more than 5,000 in December, of which a large number were women in production jobs.

Inadequate utilization of Negroes is ascribed partly to the geographic distribution of the Negro labor force in relation to the geographical distribution of war contracts, the WMC said.

Two-thirds of the country's Negro labor supply is confined to fourteen Southern States, whereas only 13.5 per cent of all war contracts have been awarded in those States. Besides, a large proportion of Negro workers in the South are engaged in essential agriculture.

Even where there is a labor market, however, prejudices of unions and workers have impeded full use of Negro labor, the report said. Limited training opportunities and lack of industrial experience are other factors keeping the Negro in the lower classification of skills, with relatively little opportunity of upgrading.

JUN 21 1943

Increasing employment of Negro workers necessitates an extensive training program, according to the WMC. On March 31, 1943, non-white enrollments in pre-employment training courses of the Vocational Training for War Workers program were twice as great as a year before. Enrollment of Negroes attending Office of Education supplementary courses, open to employed war workers, tripled during the year.

4/1e

Mixed Shipbuilders Have High Rating

GuardianBoston,Mass.

WILMINGTON, N. C.—Col-dred workers constitute 29.3
per cent of all employes in the N. C. Shipbuilding Coo's Wilmington yard, it was learned as the S. S. John Merrick, fourth Liberty ship to be named for an outstanding colored
American was launched at the yard Sunday afternoon, July 11.
The North Carolina Shipbuilding Company was one of the yards cited recently by the Special Committee investigating the national defense program, headed by Senator
Harry S. Trueman, as the most efficient producers of Liberty ships and Naval vessels. At this Ship-yard, 5,300 colored workers are employed machine operators, blacksmiths, painters, riggers, bolters, drillers, slab benders, erectors, riveters and in other skilled and semi-skilled capacities.

JUL 24 1943

47h-1943

ANOTHER VICTORY SHIP IS LAUNCHED IN CALIFORNIA

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

New Shipyard Worker Chosen To Christen Another Victory Ship

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

APR 17 1943

RICHMOND, Cal., April 15—Excitement ran high in Shipyard No. 2 when the numbers of 35,000 workers were pooled to choose a sponsor for a Victory ship to be launched. Lady Luck smiled on Miss Beulah Whittington, a new employee of the yard as a student welder having started work on Monday and had the privilege of christening the ship on the following Wednesday, March 31. Mrs. Katie Lewis acted as matron of honor, and the Rev. D. G. Hill gave the invocation.

The officials of Yard No. 2 gave every courtesy to Cameraman E. F. Joseph so that he might secure these accurate and historic pictures of the launching which was the second in California where race members participated. James Baines, Negro counselor of the yard, had charge of the arrangements and delivered his message to his fellow workers and spectators in a stirring manner.

He said: "It is indeed an honor and a pleasure to be here this morning for the launching of the S. S. S. Paul Young, and to introduce the sponsor, Miss Beulah Whitington and Mrs. Katie Lewis, matron of honor. We are proud that we are all privileged to be here working for one cause—Victory—with Victory Ships. May we in the future labor hand in hand that this and all shipyards of the nation may build more ships in record time without malice toward one's fellow workers."

As co-ordinator, Mr. Baines has made a record in having less "quits and disputes" in the yard. Soloist Marcus Hall, a worker in the No. 2 Yard, sang "Invictus." He is a protege of Roland Hayes. Mr. Frank Sterans of the public relations office of Yard 2, presented flowers to the sponsor and the matron of honor.

Launching of the Victory ship, S.S. Hall Young, took place recently in California. Standing on a bunting covered scaffold Miss Beulah Whittington proudly christens another ship that will be used in defeating the Axis. Miss Whittington is a student welder at Richmond Shipyard No. 2. The exciting moment of the splash is accurately recorded by the cameraman.

Center: The S.S. Hall Young is seen slipping down the way to join other ships of our Navy.

Right: Frank Stearns of the Public Relations Office of Richmond Shipyard presents roses to Miss Whittington, the sponsor and the matron of honor, Mrs. Katie Lewis.—Joseph photo.

APR 17 1943

Negro War Jobs Show Big Rise

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 29—Negroes represent a growing proportion of the total employment in nearly every war industry, Paul V. McNutt, Chairman, War Manpower Commission, told the executive committee of the National Negro Newspapers' association, Saturday, July 17, and the WMC will continue to promote full utilization of Negro workers.

"The fact that the Fair Employment Practice Committee has been removed from this agency does not mean that Executive Order 8802 will not continue to apply in the War Manpower Commission down to the areas and local USES offices," the chairman stated.

Colored 6.7% of Workers in 16,000 Plants

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

JUL 3 1943

WASHINGTON (ANP) — Colored people 6.7 per cent of the 14,673,000 workers in 16,000 establishments reporting to the U.S. Employment Service in March, 1943, according to figures released Monday by the War Manpower Commission. In July, 1942, the figure was 5.8 per cent.

One of the biggest jumps was in the aircraft industry where colored employment increased 96.1 per cent compared to the total employment increase of 35.4. In the shipbuilding industry colored employment increased 62.8 per cent. The number working in tank factories doubled.

Coal Industry

Colored people made up 23.1 per cent of those engaged in bituminous coal mining, while blast furnaces, steel works and rolling mills utilized 12.2 per cent.

The report pointed out that industry was not utilizing colored manpower as much as it should. The proportion of colored in war industries, it was stated, is not commensurate with their proportion of the labor force, and only about 7 per cent of the employment in war industries.

Reasons given were geographic distribution of the colored labor force in relation to geographical distribution of war contracts; limited occupational and trainig opportunities heretofore afforded colored workers, and race prejudice. Enrollment in supplementary courses tripled, and they also took fuller advantage of NYA courses.

JUL 3 1943

Hits Ban On New Jersey Negro Labor

Chicago Defender
Chicago, Illinois

FEB 6 1943

NEWARK, N. J.—Opposing the barring of Negro and other minority groups from work in the war industries of New Jersey, Lawrence A. Oxley, representative of the U. S. Employment Service, declared Sunday that the bars must be lowered if an estimated shortage of 79,000 workers is to be overcome.

He said that employers of labor in essential war plants in northern New Jersey have indicated that net labor requirements by May 30 will call for 188,620 new workers. The available supply they estimated at 109,147. Oxley also stated that although New Jersey's 225,000 Negroes constitute 5.5 per cent of the state's population, only .8 per cent of their number were included among the 600,000 war industry workers now employed.

Oxley presented his factual data in the course of an address delivered before the second constitutional convention of the Greater Newark CIO industrial council in Continental auditorium. He summarized:

"A recent survey of hiring of selected war employes by the U.S. Employment Service showed that 51 per cent of 282,245 expected job openings were barred to Negro workers." A gain was being made, however, he said, in the hiring of Negroes, through efforts of the Employment Service and FEPC.

FEB 6 1943

More Women Fill War Jobs

Informer
Houston, Texas

WASHINGTON, D. C.—

In ever-increasing numbers women are providing commercial aviation and the aircraft production industry with an answer to the problem of dwindling supplies of available men. Women have infiltrated aircraft plants to such an extent that the War Manpower Commission has predicted that the industry may eventually become a "women's industry." They also are replacing airline employees whose air skills were needed by the armed services.

JUL 31 1943

No discrimination between men and women employees is made by the airlines except that women are not used as pilots or co-pilots. "The public will not yet accept women as pilots and co-pilots," according to a representative of the Air Lines Pilots Association. However, women are filling almost every other job in commercial flight operations. They are working as aviation mechanics, as ticket-sellers, in the hangars and in the offices.

One of these aviation enthusiasts was appointed traffic manager for a large airline in St. Louis last fall. She had been employed by the company for fourteen years.

A different type of airline job is that which has been held by a young Missouri matron. Last March, a representative of the Air Line Mechanics' Association announced that only five women had been licensed as aviation mechanics.

Women make up more than one-third of total personnel in aircraft production companies, according to the War Manpower Commission. In some plants the figure runs as high as 50 percent and it is growing every day since 70 to 80 percent of the workers now being hired by the industry are women.

One woman aircraft worker capped an eventful career with an unusual job at a large Maryland plant as an "Interior decorator" of airplanes. Her job includes designing equipment for bombers—from panels and heaters down to ashtrays—and she reported that it was the most interesting work she had ever done.

Women are not only manning airports and building planes; some are teaching our soldiers and sailors to fly. Instrument flying, aerial navigation and other essential and highly technical subjects are now being taught by women.

JUL 31 1943

WOULD RECRUIT

Pittsburgh, Pa.

RACE WELDERS

Courier

JUL 1943

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 8—(ANP)—The Alabama Drydock and Shipbuilding company, center of the racial outbreak in Mobile not long ago, is trying to recruit Negro welders in Atlanta, to man the four ways set aside for Negro workers in accordance with the famous "Mobile compromise" endorsed by the Fair Employment Practice committee.

At the same time, it is learned from FEPC offices here that the state education department in Georgia is about to institute a course for the training of 1,500 welders, but that Negroes will not be admitted, unless a conference scheduled for last Wednesday, won concessions.

The FEPC has already registered objection to this bias with the office of education immediately following receipt of a telegram from the Citizens' Defense Training committee of Atlanta, and the Atlanta Urban league.

3000 At Big Bond Rally In Alabama

Defender Chicago Ill.

JUN 5 1943

GREENVILLE, Ala.—An estimated crowd of 300 colored residents of Greenville and farmers of Butler county attended the closing program of the war bond and stamp rally which was held at the Greenville baseball park last week.

Featuring the day's activities was a street parade led by the Tuskegee Army Air Corps band, an all-Negro unit, under the direction of Lieut. Frank L. Drye.

War bond sales reached $2,063.95, thus bringing the total for the period of the rally up to $11,304.40.

The meeting was opened by Judge A. E[illegible], representing the white citizens of Greenville.

Dr. F. D. Patterson, president of Tuskegee Institute, and state chairman of the Negro War Savings Staff made the principal address.

T. M. Campbell, field agent of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, and consultant on the war savings staff, made a vigorous plea for all-out support of the war program on the part of every man, woman and child.

The largest investor was Wiley Crenshaw, a prosperous colored farmer of Bragg Hill Community, who brought a $1000 bond. Closely following were Mrs. Lizzie Bedgood with a purchase of $600 in bonds Mrs. Mattie Bedgood with $500 in bonds and Joe Crittendon and wife, $475. The largest sum reported for the communities was made by C. J. Newton Chapman, W. T. Smith Lumber company in the amount of $3,756.07 worth of bonds sold to the colored employees.

JUN 5 1943

Negro Help Keeps TVA Making War Chemicals

Defender, Chicago, Ill.

MAY 1 1943

WASHINGTON. — Already employed in 75 different categories increasing their skills through on-the-job training and upgrading, Negro employes of the Tennessee Valley Authority are helping to relieve critical manpower shortages in dam construction, power operation, and the production of war chemicals, TVA officials announced this week.

At the same time, these officials revealed, Negro TVA workers are pushing war bond sales and Red Cross drives and are cooperating in constructive labor-management efforts to improve living standards, working conditions, and employe morale.

At the Wilson Dam chemical plants, where 18.1 per cent of employes are Negroes, supervisors and personnel training officers revealed that the trainees are learning new skills quickly and efficiently.

"Being able to train Negroes for responsible jobs has helped us meet the manpower shortage," said John P. Clark, nitrate plant supervisor. "Our Negro employes have shown aptitude and willingness to cooperate in the training programs."

By March of this year, 54 Negroes were in the operator training program at Wilson Dam, 130 had completed training programs, and 120 had received promotion.

One Wilson Dam employe, Paul Johnson of Tuscumbia, Ala., has progressed since 1935 from laborer through six classifications to carbide-handling foreman, first Negro to have this job. Supervising men in nine different classifications, he is responsible for crushing, bagging, loading, and checking phosphorus fertilizers for lend-lease aid to Britain and carbide for synthetic rubber.

Lincoln C. Johnson, Paul's brother, is sub-labor foreman, responsible for unloading empty carbide drums and having them on hand for reloading. Since 1933, he has been concrete laborer, concrete finisher helper, tapper helper, minor laboratory helper, and pilot plant operator. So competent has been his work and that of his Negro crew that railroad cars are unloaded and released for reloading so quickly it is not necessary to pay demurrage on waiting cars.

MAY 1943

Union Leaders

Both brothers buy a war bond each pay day, amounting to more than 25 per cent in Lincoln's case, and neither can remember when he has had an unauthorized absence from work. Paul Johnson is chairman of the Negro auxiliary of the AFL Operating Engineers' Union; Lincoln Johnson is vice president of the AFL Hod Carriers' Union, and in the last few months has been business agent.

Four Negro youths, each with a university degree, and graduate study in chemistry, are employed as laboratory technicians in the research and development division. They are doing high-grade sub-professional work and training on the job for professional level responsibilities.

In Tennessee Valley Authority power operations work, the story is the same. Negroes have been given more responsible jobs and have filled them efficiently. At the Watts Bar Dam steam plant, Earl Tulloss of Dayton, Ohio, is senior coal drag operator, responsible for the operation from his cab high above, of a drag line capable of moving one-fifth of a carload of coal at each trip. President of the local Hod Carriers' Union, Tulloss is taking an active part in labor-management drives against absenteeism and in selling war bonds.

MAY

No Absenteeism

Earl M. Qualls, car dumper operator, as a job steward of the local Hod Carriers' Union, calls on Negro workers at lunch, off the job, and at union meetings explaining to them the problem absenteeism creates, and enlisting them in the war bond and Red Cross drives, both of which have gone over 100 per cent in the department of power operations at Watts Bar.

About two-thirds of the Negro construction workers at Douglas Dam are employed in occupations at skilled and semi-skilled levels. Employment of Negro cement finishers and powdermen was on a 50-50 basis.

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

First Negro Is Given Job Award For His Device

Idea Speeds Up Production In Ship Welding

JUN 2 1943

BLOMINGTON, Ill. — (ANP) — John Fletcher, a former janitor here, is now a welder in the Moto Dry Dock company shipyard at Oakland, Calif., and is the first Negro worker in the United States to win a certificate of individual production merit, according to an announcement from the war production drive headquarters in Washington.

Fletcher worked out a device to use in welding insulation pins to deckhands. The device was so effective it will increase production 400 per cent, said WPB.

He used a welding pin extension made of copper piping in his invention. The method was recommended by the board of individual awards to merit widest possible use through the building industry.

Fletcher received his training as a war worker in the NYA training center at Illinois State Normal University. He entered work in California last October. His parents live in Danville.

ANOTHER FIRST

Defender, Chicago, Ill.

Analyzing the vital materials used in the production of Diesel engines is the job John C. Vaughn of La Grange, Ill., holds in the metallurgical laboratory of Electro-motive division of General Motors Corp. Education at Southern university, the University of Chicago and the Illinois Institute of Technology. Mr. Vaughn is the first race man to hold such a position with the Electro-Motive division.

Manpower Report Shows Failure To Use Race Workers

Pittsburgh, Pa - Courier

WASHINGTON, June 17—As Uncle Sam begins during the next six months to scrape the bottom of the barrel for workers to man its war production industries, slated to produce this year the staggering amount of 72 billion dollars' worth of munitions alone, or more than 125 per cent over the output last year, the ugly picture of Jim Crowism in war industry effectively hog-tying America's war effort becomes increasingly clear.

The story of how Jim Crow practices in war industry have bogged down America's war machine is revealed in a report on Negro manpower made public this week by War Manpower Commissioner Paul V. McNutt and a report on America's war production issued by Donald M. Nelson, chairman of the War Production Board.

33 KEPT OUT

Taken in its plainest terms the story is simply this: Out of every one thousand workers in war industry in March of this year 67 were Negroes, according to estimates of the War Manpower Commission based on reports of 16,000 war industry firms covering about fourteen and a half million war workers. But on this same basis 33 Negro workers, who should have been in the war labor force, were kept out of jobs because of race prejudice, because they had not adequate training or because they lived in the South where there are few war contracts.

NO EFFECTIVE MACHINERY

In the face of this grave condition the War Manpower Commission had up to this week failed to establish any effective machinery for planned utilization of Negro workers, while the re-organized FEPC remained a question mark as to whether it would capitulate to anti-Negro sentiment of Southern politicians or move boldly forward to a solution of one of the most vital problems confronting the nation's war effort.

The McNutt report reflected the fact that Negro women are still harshly discriminated against in war industry employment when it stated that Negroes constituted last March only one per cent of the labor force in the explosives industry and only two per cent in the electrical equipment industry, both of which make large use of female labor.

JUN

The report states: "In practically every section of the country, even where Negroes are freely employed, they are frequently engaged only in lower classifications and have relatively little opportunity for upgrading. This is especially true in the South."

Improvement in job opportunities for Negroes between July 1942 and March of this year did occur, however. Especially large gains were noticed in tank industry employment, aircraft, motor vehicles and shipbuilding industries.

In Los Angeles, Calif., in the aircraft industry the War Manpower study shows that roughly 5,000 Negro workers were employed in December, 1942, as against only 1,012 in May of 1942.

"A large proportion of colored aircraft workers were women on production jobs," states the report.

In Mobile, Ala., however, the report shows, that despite improvements in the use of Negro workers, war industries in the area used less than half the number of Negroes who should be used, while at the same time they imported large numbers of white workers into the overcrowded area from long distances.

47h-1943

Miss Negro War Worker Chosen For Freedom Rally at Garden

The Daily Worker New York, N. Y.

Jun 26 1943

MAY 26 1943

By Eugene Gordon

Miss Negro War Worker has been chosen.

She was selected by a committee representing the Negro Freedom Rally and is going to appear at the Freedom Rally spectacle in Madison Square Garden on the evening of June 7.

Miss Negro War Worker is Miss Belle Calhoun, of Jamaica, L. I., a chief wire machine operator for the Lincoln Wire Co., New York City.

Miss Negro War Worker is a:

Member of the labor-management committee at the plant.

Shop steward, Local 36, Wire and Metal Workers Union, CIO.

Member of the Jamaica Unit American Women's Volunteer Services.

MAY 26 1943

Member Queens Temple Lodge 678, Negro Elks.

Member of Allens A.M.E. Church

Member of USO social club "Who's Who."

She has purchased her 10th war bond in eight months.

Miss Calhoun was promoted to chief operator both because of her contribution to increased production and her contribution to the morale of her fellow workers. She has been with the Lincoln Wire Co. eight months. Before that she went from one domestic job to another. The door was always slammed in her face when she applied for a job in industry.

"If it hadn't been for the union," she said in a press interview yesterday, "I'd never have got this job."

MAY 26 1943

She knew nothing about unions before she went to work in war industry.

She will continue in industry after this war, for she feels that Negro women have now definitely begun to come into their own.

She feels that this war is different from the first world war in a number of ways, but chiefly because, this time, it is contributing to the advancement of her people. It is a "progressive war," she said, "because it is promoting large numbers of the Negro people to all kinds of industrial job opportunities.

The committee which selected Miss Calhoun for the honor of standing before a Madison Square Garden crowd on the evening of June 7 thinks she is "more typical of the Negro woman worker than many thousands of young girls who are doing equally as much, but who do not have precisely the same qualifications."

William Gould, head of the Lincoln Wire Co., was present at yesterday's interview in the Hotel Theresa, 125th St. and Seventh Ave. He said Miss Calhoun has considerably aided in maintaining the harmonious relations between management and labor in his shop. Out of that situation, he declared, production for the anti-fascist war poured naturally.

She has a brother in the army engineers. Two nephews are also in the service.

Tribune
Philadelphia, Pa.

Negro Woman Best Welder Indian Second

Apr. 3, 1943

The best woman welder at Todd Shipyard Brooklyn, N. Y., is a Negro, and the next best a Cherokee woman. Miss Mary Anderson, director of the Woman's Bureau, U. S. Department of Labor, is responsible for the statement.

Miss Anderson writing an article, "Negro Women On the Production Front," in the current issue of Opportunity Magazine, also states that when the Brooklyn Navy Yard last year opened its doors to women mechanics for the first time," a Negro girl received a grade of 99, the highest made by the 6,000 women who took the civil service examination to qualify for Navy Yard jobs.

Gadsden (Ala.) Times
July 5, 1943

NYA Closes All Dixie Projects

Acts Swiftly After Hit Deathblow By Congress

ATLANTA, July 5.—(AP)—Acting swiftly after Congress voted Saturday to kill the National Youth Administration, the regional office here ordered all NYA projects in six Southeastern states shut down by today.

Orie E. Myers Jr., regional personnel director, said he had given instructions for work to cease in Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Tennessee Florida and South Carolina. Only enough employes were retained to complete the liquidation in accordance with the bill passed by Congress which have the depression-born agency until the end of the year to close its records.

About 300 employes will be kept on in the six states to dispose of the business, with all but about 100 finishing up within a few days, Myers added.

Affected by the closing order in the six states will be approximately 7,200 youths being trained for war jobs, 20,000 others working part-time to attend school, and 1,400 supervisors, the personnel director estimated.

The NYA spent $6,100,000 in the Southeastern region in the last fiscal year and trained some 38,000 youths between the ages of 16 and 24 for war work. Most of these went into shipyards or aircraft plants.

The regional payroll was $210,000 for supervisors and $175,000 for students, Myers reported.

Of the nearly 2,000 students and 500 supervisors in Georgia, almost one-third were employed on three big projects in Atlanta The $200,000 plant built at Marietta to train workers for the Bell Bomber plant, the Chapman Springs project and a Negro project employing a total of 800 youths and 150 supervisors.

Other Georgia projects and the number of trainees included: Carrollton, 175; Augusta, 160; Savannah, 140; Brunswick, 100; and Jesup, 350 Negro youths. They averaged 50 superviors.

AMONG THE 10,000 WORKERS—mostly women—at the Ravenna Ohio ordnance plant, which now operates 168 hours a week turning out ammunition, the star crew—made up of Negro men and women—last week broke the plant record and won the acclaim of Col. R. A. Brown, depot commander.

The Negro crew, wearing heavy coats, gloves, earmuffs, and scarves, and singing swingy tunes as they work in an unheated section of the plant, is jealous of its output and watches closely the number of crates being filled by rival crews.

Last week the foreman, Louis Moore, of Youngstown, Ohio, who served in World War No. 1 as an orderly to Gen. Pershing, told his fellow crew members that another crew had broken their record of 3,000 cases crated in a single day.

The Negro workers immediately set to work to retrieve their lost laurels. Commenting on their signal success, Depot Commander Brown declared: "The next day those Negroes started singing 'Praise the Lord and Pass the Ammunition' and turned out 4,200 crates. That's a record."

Chicago Defender
Chicago, Illinois

W. Coast Welder Boosts Output 400% In Shipyard

MAY 8 1943

WASHINGTON — A West Coast shipyard worker whose suggestion increased production 400 per cent has become the first Negro war worker to win a certificate of individual production merit, the war production drive headquarters announced this week.

The award winner is Charles H. Fletcher, a welder in the Moore Dry Dock company shipyards at Oakland, Cal. He worked out a device to use in welding insulation pins to deckheads, which increases production 400 per cent.

In a simple operation, Fletcher used a welding pin extension made of copper tubing in his innovation. The device was recommended by the board for individual awards to merit widest possible use throughout the shipbuilding industry.

Fletcher's suggestion was certified to the war production drive headquarters by the labor-management committee representing the Moore Dry Dock company of Oakland, the International Association of Machinists, the International Association of Bridge, Structural and Ornamental Iron Workers and the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, all members of the American Federation of Labor.

---

aily World
tlanta, Georgia

Auto Mechanic Discovers Way To Aid Riveters

MAY 12 1943

ST. LOUIS, Mo.—(SNS)—James Harold Herman, who was an automobile mechanic for 12 years before he was employed by the St. Louis (Mo.) plant of the Curtiss-Wright Corporation, was the first Curtiss Negro production worker to win a Letter of Commendation from the Labor-Management Committee of the plant for an idea to speed up production, the War Production Headquarters announced this week.

MAY 12 1943

Herman, 31, who was born in St. Louis, operates a general riveter, used in "gang" riveting the front and rear spars, which are the long lateral braces in an airplane wing, and which support the wing ribsover which the wing skin is formed. This machine sets approximately nine rivets in a single stroke.

MAY 12 1943

The general riveter has several adjustments built into it, as well as a series of varied gauge shims, to regulate the action of the machine according to the size of the rivet and the number of thicknesses of metal to be riveted.

Herman figured out an arrangement of slots in the special shims, which eliminated the need of disturbing the operating mechanism of the general riveter. The adjustment now can be made by any worker, who merely loosens two screws and slips in the proper shim or shims. The latter method requires but a few seconds per adjustment as compared to a substantially greater loss of machine, operator and maintenance man-time.

Chicago Defender
Chicago, Illinois

Launch Ship All Built By Negro Labor

MAY 15 1943

CHESTER, Pa.—The first ship built entirely by Negroes was launched here Monday, from Yard No. 4, of the Sun Shipbuilding and Dry Dock corporation, the Maritime Commission announced this week.

The ship, newest contribution to the nation's merchant marine, is to be known as the Marine Eagle. It was christened by Mrs. Rachel Stevenson, employed by the firm for 22 years. A $1,000 war bond was given her by the company as a tribute to her long and faithful service.

Sun claims to be first to establish a shipyard manned only by Negroes. Employees receive the same wage rates as those in other yards operated by the company and John G. Pew, president, declared "we are greatly pleased with the work."

New System Devised For Negroes Working At State Shipyards

Men Are To Be Allowed To Do Certain Skilled Work On Separate Ways

WASHINGTON— (AP) —To settle "difficulties" between white and Negro workers at the Alabama Drydock and Shipbuilding Company, Mobile, Ala., Msgr. Francis E. Haas, chairman of the president's fair employment practice committee, announced Saturday a system whereby Negroes will be allowed to do certain skilled work on a limited number of ways set aside specially for them.

The arrangement, which was drawn up at a conference of union, company, War Manpower Commission and committee officials, upgrades Negro workers to all skills necessary for bare hull construction on ways one through four at the yards.

Bare hull construction, the committee explained, is the building of the actual outer hull of the ship, and Negroes will not work on interiors or superstructures.

Chairman Haas added that all steps necessary will be taken by the War Department to maintain order and the production of ships at the yard.

At the conference, he said representatives of the various groups were:

David R. Dunlap, J. M. Griser and W. T. Daly for the Alabama Drydock and Shipbuilding Company; Charles Hanson, J. J. Bouche and Elijah Jackson for the International Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers of America, CIO; E. J. Trimble and Clarence Mitchell for the committee, and Burton P. Morley for the War Manpower Commission.

The arrangement has been approved by the chairman of the Maritime Commission, the assistant secretary of the Navy, the chairman of the WMC and himself Msgr. Haas said.

Raleigh, N. C., News & Observer
June 22, 1943

JOBS FOR NEGROES GROWING STEADILY

6.7 Per Cent of Workers in Plants Reporting to USES Are Negroes

Washington, June 21.—(U.P.)—A slow but steady increase in the use of Negro workers in war plants has developed throughout the country during the past year, the War Manpower Commission said in a survey released here.

Of the 12,000,000 workers employed in establishments reporting to the United States Employment Service in July, 1942, 5.8 per cent were Negroes. In March, 1943, there were 14,673,000 workers in these establishments, with 6.7 per cent Negroes.

The increase in Negro employment has been uneven in different industries. The number employed in tank factories more than doubled during the period reported; in the aircraft industry the increase was 96.1 per cent, and in shipbuilding, 62.8 per cent.

In many industries, however, the use of Negroes is still very limited. In the fireworks and pyrotechnics industry, only a fraction of 1 per cent of the total employes are Negroes, and less than 2 per cent in the manufacture of electrical equipment for industrial use, metal-working machinery, and scientific instruments. In secondary smelting and refining of non-ferrous metals, Negroes comprised 30.1 per cent of total employment; in bituminous coal mining, 23.1 per cent, and in blast furnaces, steel works, and rolling mills, 12.2 per cent.

Two-thirds of the country's Negro labor supply is confined to 14 Southern States, whereas only 13.5 per cent of all war contracts have been awarded in those states. Also, a large proportion of Negro workers in this section are engaged in essential agriculture.

Even where there is a labor market, however, employer, union and worker prejudices have impeded full use of Negro labor, the report said. Limited training opportunities and lack of industrial experience are other factors keeping the Negro in the lower classification of skills, with relatively little opportunity of upgrading.

Chicago Defender
Chicago, Illinois

Warner and Swasey has long been under fire for its refusal to hire colored help in other than unskilled capacities. Last December, two Negro women filed suit in an attempt to force the company to employ them. Decision was in favor of the corporation.

Still another promise was made the white employees in the assur- for the filling of higher-bracket ance promotions would be in order jobs that were being vacated for military service.

MAR 27 1943

News
Birmingham, Ala.

WMC Reports Slow Rise In Negro Employment

WASHINGTON —(AP)— The War Manpower Commission reported Monday a "slow but steady increase in the use of Negro workers in war plants throughout the country," but added that there still is "not an adequate utilization of Negroes in some areas and some plants."

The WMC said Negroes comprised 5.8 per cent of 12,000,000 workers employed in some 16,000 plants reporting to its employment service in July, 1942, but their number, after a month-to-month increase, had only risen to 6.7 per cent of 14,673,000 workers in the same plants by the end of last April.

The WMC gave these reasons:

1. "The Negro labor force is concentrated in that part of the country where a small proportion of war contracts are being executed. Those areas and a large proportion of the Negro working force in them are engaged in essential agriculture." (The report observed that "two-thirds of the country's Negro labor supply is confined to 14 Southern states where only 13.5 per cent of the total war contracts have been awarded.

2. "Limited occupational and training opportunities heretofore afforded Negro workers" and "prejudice even in some areas of concentrated Negro population where war contracts created a stringent labor market."

JUN 22 1943

JUN 22 1943

Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Virginia

Race Award Presented To Industries Hiring Negroes

PHILADELPHIA, Pa.—(ANP) — The association of American Railroads and the Sun Shipbuilding and Drydock Company of Chester, Pa., were presented the first Booker T. Washington awards of the National Association of Negroes in American Industry for outstanding achievements in industrial employment of Negroes.

Bishop David H. Sims of the AME Church made the presentations at ceremonies here April 7. They were accepted by John G. Pew Sr., president of the Sun Company, and by Col. Robert S. Henry, assistant to the president of the Association of American Railroads.

24 1943

Bishop Sims pointed out that 350,000 Negroes were employed by American railroads and stated:

"I believe that this shipyard now employs some 12,000 Negroes among the total 33,000 workers, and that "all are getting equal pay for equal work and we are greatly pleased with the work being rendered."

APR

Tribune
Philadelphia, Pa.

CHESTER — Dr. Emmet J. Scott, director of employment and personnel relations, Shipyard No. 4, was principal speaker at a banquet, Monday, when the 250 employees of Sun Ship celebrated the graduation of 18 men who recently completed courses in shipfitting and lofting.

Dr. Scott announced that two Sun Ship barges were to be named for Brigadier General B. O. Davis and his son, Lieutenant Colonel B. O. Davis, Jr. The barges will be used by painters and other craftsmen in preparing No. 340-type boats for trial trips and final delivery.

General Davis holds the highest rank among Negro soldiers in the country and has recently returned from Europe where he completed a special assignment.

Apr. 3, '43

Lieutenant Colonel Davis graduated from the Academy at West Point in 1936 and has made an outstanding Army record in the past two years. He is stationed at Tuskegee Institute, Alabama, where he is attached to the 99th Pursuit Squadron.

Bee
Chicago, Ill.

WAR PLANT IS SHUT DOWN IN RACE MIX-UP

By FRANK MARSHALL DAVIS

EAST CHICAGO, Ind., July 22—(ANP)—Continued discrimination against Negro workers, culminating in the arrest Friday of an employee who engaged in a fist fight with his white foreman, shut the doors of the huge cast steel plant of the American Steel foundries and threw into idleness 3,000 persons making armor plate for the army and navy. The dispute is expected to be adjusted this week.

JUL 25 1943

The spark that resulted in the work stoppage, second within recent weeks, was the jailing of Clemmons Allen, 24, whose job was to chip flaws out of steel, following an altercation with Robert Van Camp, white foreman. When Allen complained that a white welder was endangering him and might fire his clothing by working too close with his blow torch, a dispute developed in which Van Camp was struck. Charges of assault and battery were preferred against Allen.

This fight occurred around 3:30 Friday morning but the stoppage did not result until 7 a.m. when Negro workers in the same department, 80 percent colored, found their protests were unheeded and three union stewards who sought to adjust matters were taken into temporary custody by plant police in what was described as a clear violation of the union contract.

JUL 25 1943

Conditions leading up to the strike were described in detail by Clarence Goins, newly elected president of Local 2860 of the United Steelworkers of America, CIO, and former union committeeman, who told the Associated Negro Press that although 53 percent of the plant's employees are Negroes, the management had followed a rigid jim crow pattern resulting in increasing dissatisfaction among those discriminated against.

According to Goins, the strike and subsequent loss of production would not have occurred had not the management been intent on following its previous practices. Work was stopped because plant officials refused to grant Allen a hearing according to the union contract.

This contract, said the union president, provides for a hearing at the plant before any worker can be discharged following a dispute. After Allen had been taken into custody by plant guards, three stewards went to the guard department of the personnel division to see if the matter could be adjusted as provided for by the contract. These stewards, Charles Dorsey, C. E. Jennings and a man named Byrd, were also taken into custody.

JUL 25 1943

Three hours later they were returned to the plant with no charges lodged against them. Guards refused them admittance to the plant. Other workers, curious as to their fate, went to the office where they found the trio were under arrest of auxiliary police. The work stoppage resulted.

This was the second arrest of a worker within a week. Four days previously another had been jailed following an altercation with a white foreman. Stoppages in the plant from one cause or another during its short existence have amounted to two full weeks of production, according to Goins.

17,949 Hold Mo. War Plant Jobs

Chicago, Ill.
Defender

ST. LOUIS — (ANP) — Seventh service command headquarters at Omaha announced that Missouri war plants and war department installations are now employing 17,949 Negroes, and commented that the number compares favorably with the proportion of Negroes to the entire population within the area.

JUN 26 1943

Although Negroes constitute but 2.4 per cent of the aggregate population of the nine states of the seventh command, 3.4 per cent of the plant and installation personnel are Negroes, the announcement stated. It added that about 8.3 per cent of the 364,124 Negroes who reside in the nine states are employed at war plants and installations.

Missouri had the largest number of Negroes thus employed, while Kansas is second with 3,890. The other states are Wyoming, Nebraska, North and South Dakota, Minnesota, Iowa and Colorado.

47h-1943

FIVE NATIONALITIES WAR ON THE AXIS

Daily World
Atlanta, Ga.

These girls are but five of several hundred working on delicate aircraft instruments in General Electric's factory at Lynn, Mass. They represent five nationalities. From left to right: Evelyn Savory, American; Anne Sotiris, Greek; Marie St. Pierre, French; Frances Goonyep, Chinese, and Gertrude Hilenski, Polish. Some of the coils on which these girls work are wound with wire but one-third the diameter of the human hair. Dust and lint from clothing often causes trouble with such delicate work so all employes must wear starched white frocks at work.

MAR 26 1943

Women to Skilled Jobs In St. Louis Airplane Plant

"The Call" Kansas City Mo.

ST. LOUIS.—Negro women, as well as men, now are being used at skilled jobs in the production of military airplanes for the Army and Navy at the St. Louis plant, airplane division, Curtiss-Wright corporation, it was announced Friday by C. W. France, vice president and general manager.

FEB 12 1943

The first two groups of Negro women started training for the jobs in mid-December, one class of ten at the plant and another class of 14 at Washington Technical high school, 19th and Franklin Sts., St. Louis.

There is no tuition charge for the training course. Trainees are paid by the company during the last two weeks of the five-week course. when they study riveting, drilling and other production methods in the St. Louis plant.

Trainees first spend three weeks in classes at Washington Tech, then are sent to the plant for additional instruction. The first class was sent directly to the plant for training, because it was desired to get the women on the production line as soon as possible.

Of the first group, four women are college graduates, one was a social service worker, one a swimming instructor, one a postmistress, one a seamstress, and two were recently graduated from high school.

Applications for training are taken at the office of the U. S. Employment Service, 3139 Olive St., St. Louis.

The training and hiring programs for Negro women augment those begun for Negro men last June. One of the factors which led to the extension of the program to include women was Curtiss-Wright's successful experience with graduates of the men's classes. As in the case of the men, the women made excellent school records and are doing well in the plant, Mr. France said.

Workers who successfully complete the five-week training course receive the same rate of pay as other workers in like jobs.

The City Kansas Mo.

FEB 12 1943

WORKS AT CURTISS-WRIGHT— Young women who have completed a course in riveting are shown here in the St. Louis plant of the airplane division, Curtiss-Wright corporation. The woman outside the nacelle is a riveter, the woman inside is a rivet bucker. Women are not being trained and employed by the Curtiss St. Louis plant.

RIVETING TEAM IN ACTION— Here a riveting team is shown in action in the St. Louis Curtiss-Wright plant. Both of these women completed a school course in riveting before they went to work on the production line of the Curtiss plant.

"The Call"

FEB 12 1943

Savannah, Ga. Post
April 30, 1943

NEGRO GIRLS WILL LEARN DEFENSE TRADES

One Hundred Will Attend Project in Jesup.

Arrangements have been made with the National Youth Administration through the Regional Office in Atlanta for a hundred negro girls to be trained in the defense training project at Jesup. This project offers opportunities for girls to be instructed for employment in defense industries. They may be trained in machine shop operation, sheet metal, welding, radio, industrial sewing and other crafts. They will be given their room and board without cost; hospitalization in case of illness and $10.80 per month while in training. Any colored girl from the age of 17 to 24 may enter, even those who are physically handicapped may receive this training as special privileges will be made for them, it was pointed out. Those desiring to enroll may do so at the office of Dr. Ralph Mark Gilbert, president of the local branch of the NAACP, in the basement of the First African Baptist Church, 23 Montgomery street, any day except Sunday, between the hours of 9:30 a. m. and 5 p. m.

Negro Woman Is Best Welder in Brooklyn Shipyard

"The Call" Kansas City Mo.

MAR 26 1943

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.— The startling revelation that "the best woman welder at Todd Shipyard, Brooklyn, is a Negro, and the next best a Cherokee Indian," comes to light in an article by Miss Mary Anderson, Director of the Women's Bureau, U. S. Department of Labor, appearing in the current "Brown American Womanpower" issue of Opportunity, Journal of Negro Life.

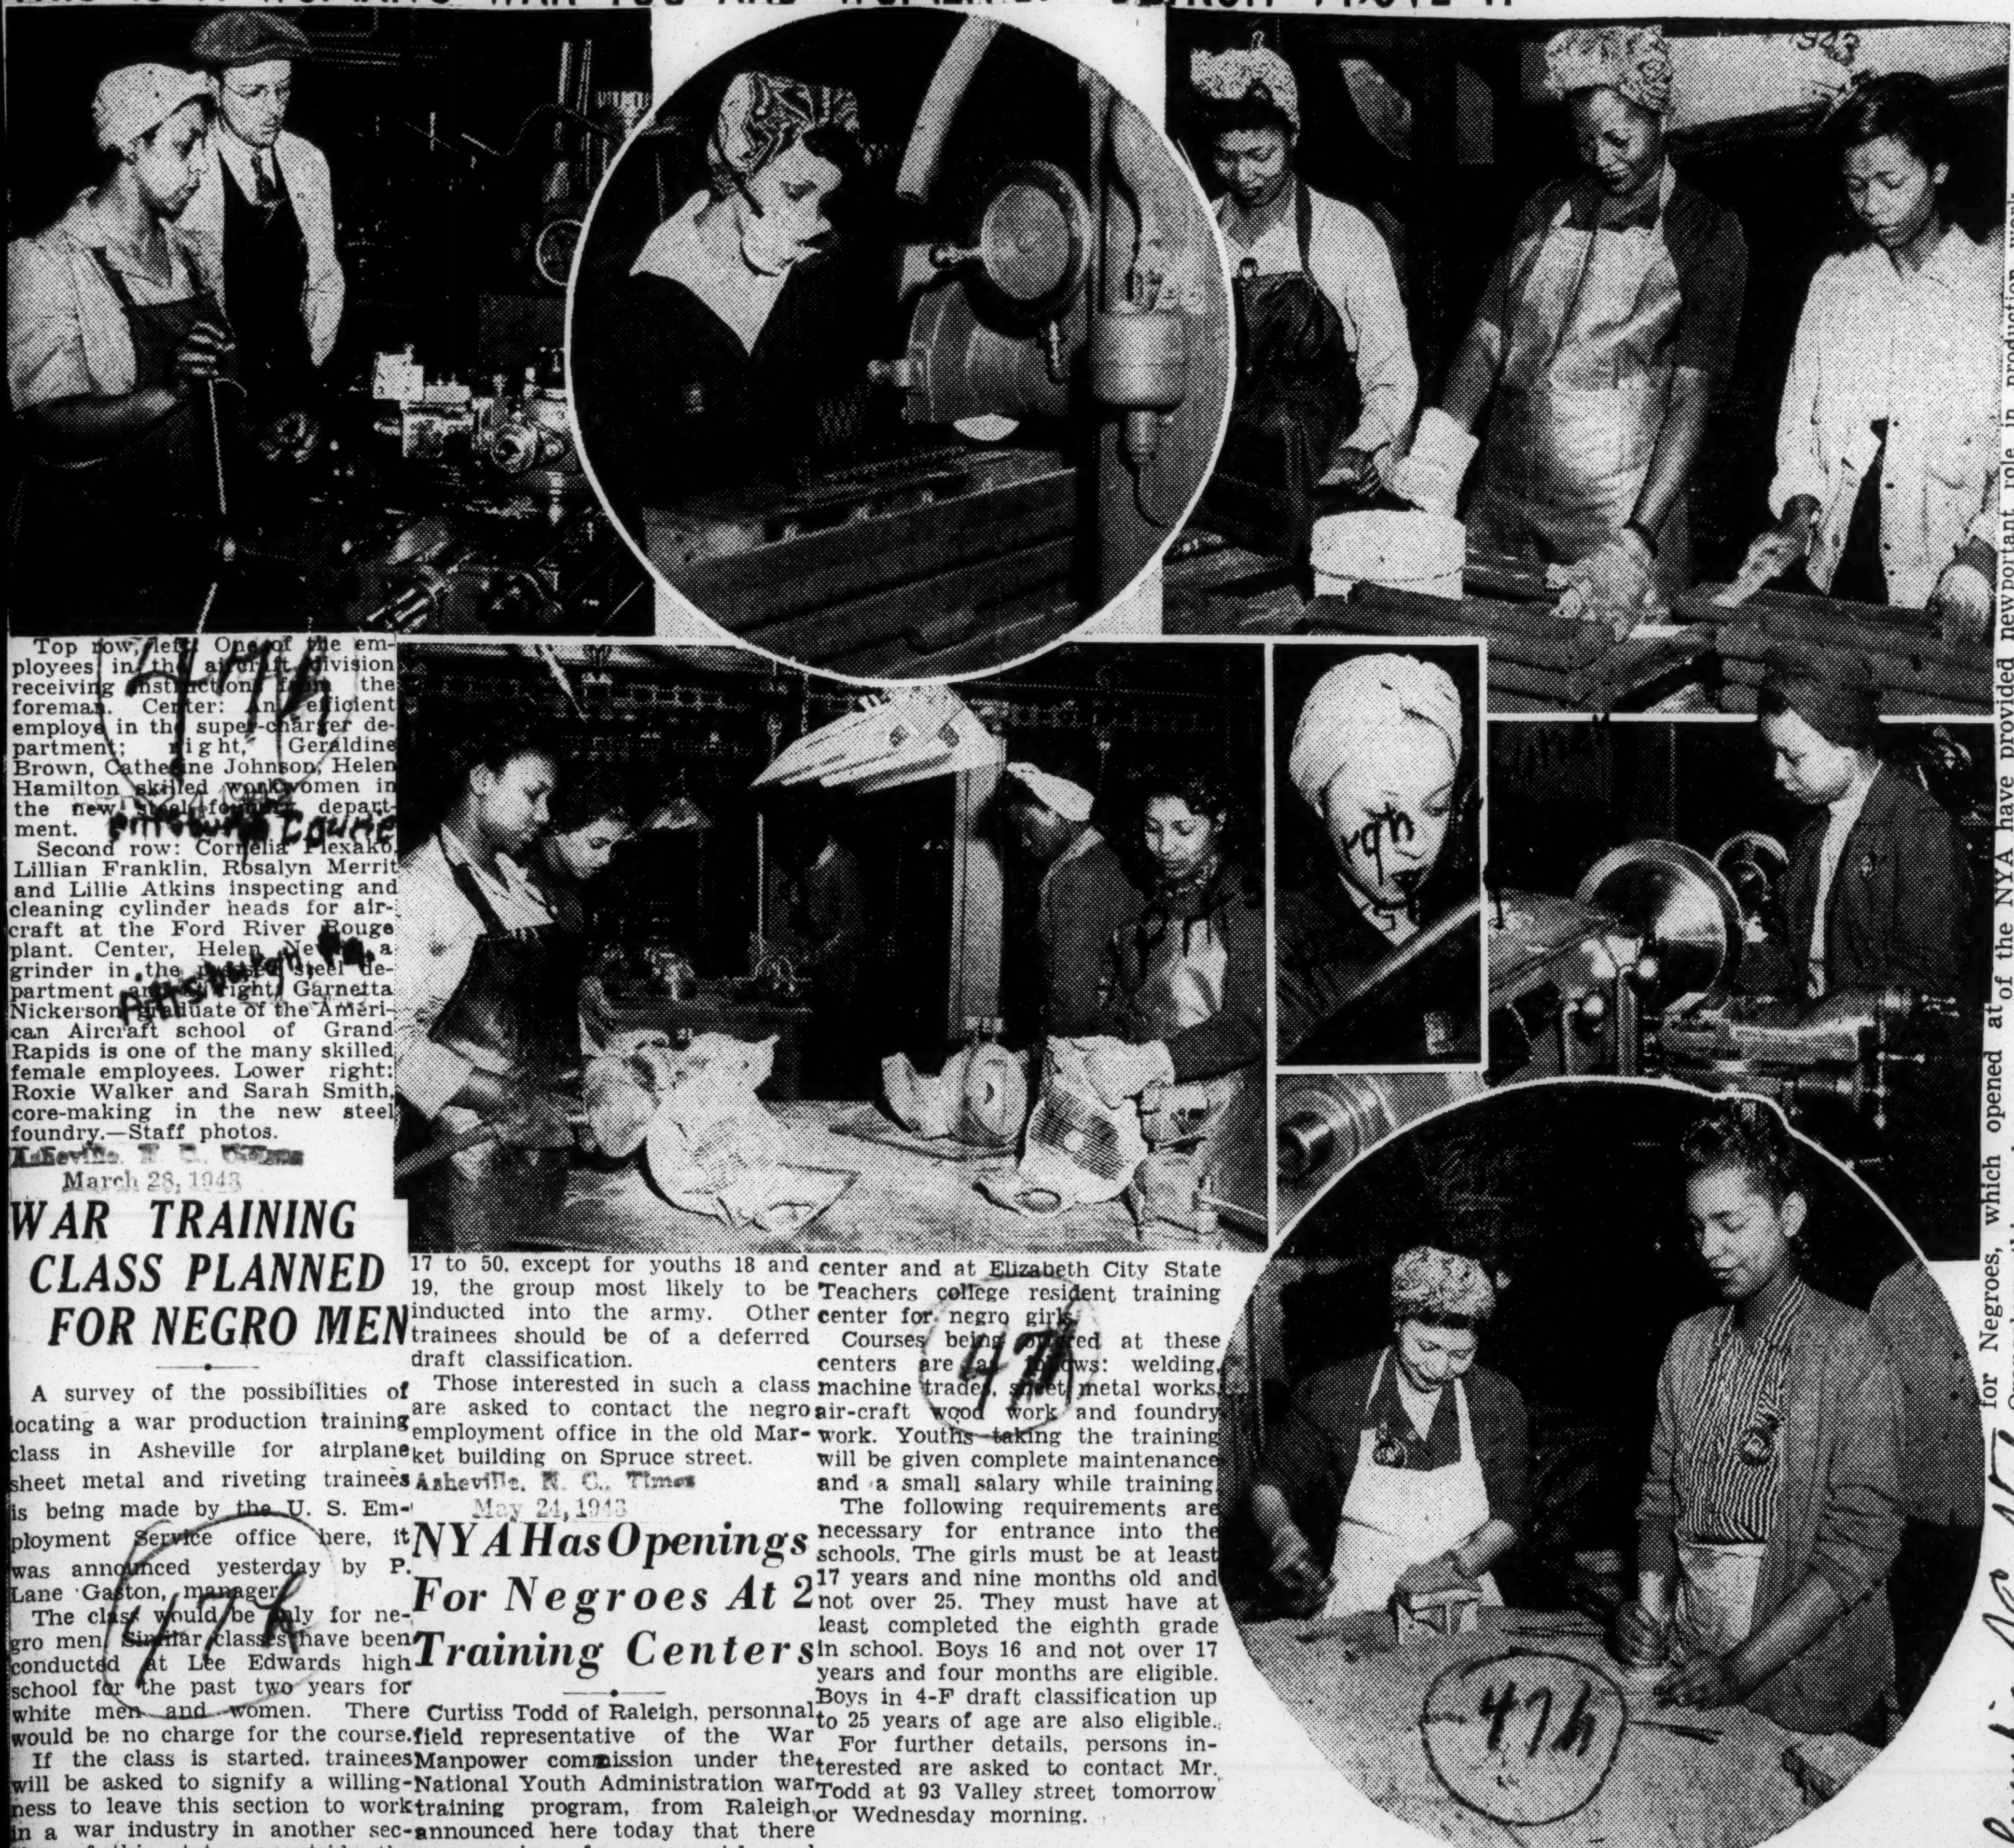
Miss Anderson's authentic and interesting article, "Negro Women on the Production Front," blasts theories set forth by manufacturers that Negro women are not efficient workers. Several other instances are cited by Miss Anderson which prove that Negro women are doing more than just "making the grade," in all types of skilled war production jobs.

"When the Brooklyn Navy Yard last year opened its doors to women mechanics for the first time in 141 years," the article states, "a Negro girl received a grade of 9, the highest made by the 6,000 women who took the Civil Service examinations to qualify for Navy Yard jobs."

Miss Anderson asknowledges the Negro woman's part in the war further: "The accomplishments of Negro women are a part of the whole remarkable production record of America's fifteen million women workers. It is impossible to mention every instance of outstanding work by Negro women on the production front."

MAR 26 1943 Kansas City Mo.

THIS IS A WOMAN'S WAR TOO AND WOMEN OF DETROIT PROVE IT



Top row, left: One of the employees in the aircraft division receiving instructions from the foreman. Center: An efficient employe in the super-charger department; right, Geraldine Brown, Catherine Johnson, Helen Hamilton skilled workwomen in the new steel foundry department.

Second row: Cornelia Plexako, Lillian Franklin, Rosalyn Merrit and Lillie Atkins inspecting and cleaning cylinder heads for aircraft at the Ford River Rouge plant. Center, Helen Nevins, a grinder in the pressed steel department and, right, Garnetta Nickerson, graduate of the American Aircraft school of Grand Rapids is one of the many skilled female employees. Lower right: Roxie Walker and Sarah Smith, core-making in the new steel foundry.—Staff photos.

47k

Pittsburgh Courier

Asheville, N.C.

Asheville, N. C. Citizen

March 28, 1943

WAR TRAINING CLASS PLANNED FOR NEGRO MEN

A survey of the possibilities of locating a war production training class in Asheville for airplane sheet metal and riveting trainees is being made by the U. S. Employment Service office here, it was announced yesterday by P. Lane Gaston, manager.

47k

The class would be only for negro men. Similar classes have been conducted at Lee Edwards high school for the past two years for white men and women. There would be no charge for the course.

If the class is started, trainees will be asked to signify a willingness to leave this section to work in a war industry in another section of this state or outside the state. The age range would be 17 to 50, except for youths 18 and 19, the group most likely to be inducted into the army. Other trainees should be of a deferred draft classification.

Those interested in such a class are asked to contact the negro employment office in the old Market building on Spruce street.

Asheville, N. C. Times

May 24, 1943

NYA Has Openings For Negroes At 2 Training Centers

Curtiss Todd of Raleigh, personnal field representative of the War Manpower commission under the National Youth Administration war training program, from Raleigh, announced here today that there are openings for negro girls and boys at the Rocky Mount training center and at Elizabeth City State Teachers college resident training center for negro girls.

47k

Courses being offered at these centers are as follows: welding, machine trades, sheet metal works, air-craft wood work and foundry work. Youths taking the training will be given complete maintenance and a small salary while training.

The following requirements are necessary for entrance into the schools. The girls must be at least 17 years and nine months old and not over 25. They must have at least completed the eighth grade in school. Boys 16 and not over 17 years and four months are eligible. Boys in 4-F draft classification up to 25 years of age are also eligible.

For further details, persons interested are asked to contact Mr. Todd at 93 Valley street tomorrow or Wednesday morning.

Columbia S.C. State

[illegible]

May 16, 1943

Orangeburg Negro NYA Center Opens

47k

Orangeburg — (Special) — A milestone in economic progress for this growing community was praised when 75 NYA war trainees moved itno a resident-center for Negroes, which opened at Orangeburg this week.

For more than a year since NYA trainees have been pursuing war training courses for job opportunities at South Carolina State college, adequate housing facilities have been an urgent need.

To meet this need, a statewide financial drive was launched and more than $600 has been raised to renovate and repair two large buildings which would adequately housed 200 trainees.

The government through the regional and state administration of the NYA have provided new equipment and furnishings for the two buildings which represent an estimated outlay of more than $5,000. Traineers and workers at the resident center and training project will receive more than $100,000 annually in training fees and salaries.

NEGRO PLAY VITAL PRODUCTION RULE

Pittsburgh, Pa. Courier

JUN 1943

BREMERTON, Wash., June 10—According to the Public Relations Office of the Puget Sound Navy Yard, Negroes are playing an important role in production work. Several hundred are employed here in the various skilled and unskilled capacities. They are represented in all departments and are admirably adjusting themselves to the local setup. Their presence is doing much to alleviate the critical manpower situation.

Nearly every state in the union is represented by these workmen who are playing a vital part in the war effort.

47h-1943

College Graduates Work At Ala. Arsenal

JUL 11 1943

Atlanta Daily World

Ala.

HUNTSVILLE, Ala.—(S N S)—Nearly two score graduates of Southern colleges are loaning their chemical Warfare Service Arsenal here. Many were given special war training by Prof. B. T. Harvey of the Atlanta University ESWMDT courses. Pictured l to r, top row Margaret P. Smith, A. B., Atlanta University; Willie Mae Nelson, A. B., Clark; Estelle Robinson, A. B., Clark; Lois Holland, A. B., Clark; Roberta Wainwright, B. S., Clark; Francis Davis, A. B., Clark; Irma G. Thomas, A. B., Clark; Marie Lawrence, A. B., Clark; Isoline Sherard, A. B. Clark. Center, Thomas J. Cleveland, A. B., Fisk; Albert M. Miller, Jr., B. S. Tennessee State. Front row, Barrietta LeBon, A. B, Clark; Emma Logan, A. B. Clark; Dorothy Samuels, B. S. Virginia Union; M. A. Atlanta U.; Marjorie Sherard, A. B. Clark; Valadonia Barnes, A. B. Clark; Pauline Whitner, A. B. South Carolina State College; Hariett Lewis, A. B., Clark; Mary Alice King, B S., Morris Brown College; and Willie Mae Williams, B. S., Alabama State College.

'Executive Orders Are Not Getting Results -- Voters

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

By STANLEY ROBERTS
(Courier Poll Analyst)

Integration of Negro workers into essential war industries has been one of the major problems faced by the government during the emergency and colored Americans desire drastic steps taken to insure unto themselves a more equitable distribution of employment opportunities. With the exception of what was termed by a sizeable number of Negroes as "a futile request from Washington," there is no federal statute to protect minority citizens from narrow-minded employers who do not choose to hire them in plants holding war contracts.

CALLED TREASON

"Non-utilization of available manpower at a time when authorities concede there is a critical labor shortage can reasonably be interpreted as sabotage of the war effort," said numerous voters who participated in this week's question submitted by The Pittsburgh Courier's Bureau of Public Sentiment.

The poll sought reaction on the following proposition: "Do You Believe That the New Executive Order 9346 Is Strong Enough to Combat Discrimination In Employment Pracitces?"

81.2% said "NO."
12.6% said "YES."
6.2% were uncertain.

ORDER IGNORED

It was definitely learned from a representative of the War Manpower Commission that many American employers are frankly telling that agency's field men where to get off when Executive Orders are mentioned.

"We obey all United States laws . . . but edicts from the 'Great White Father' . . . telling us whom we should hire, and whom we should not hire . . . are not worth the paper they are written on." This seems to be a prevalent feeling among many industrialists.

And it was with this biased attitude in mind that hundreds of voters informed The Courier that nothing less than a courageously enforced, Federal law would be satisfactory to them.

"Truman Committee reports have exposed several business magnates who are 'cashing in' on the war," observed a Mid-western political figure. "It is now high time to jail a few of them who continue to insist on prejudice as usual."

Although it was evident that the wrath of disillusioned Negroes primarily descended on industrialists, organized labor also came in for a share of criticism.

"Many labor leaders daily come into close contact with management, and they are in a position to do much in facilitating the colored worker's employment." This statement was made by a prominent Negro CIO official.

Conclusion: The public appreciates what has been accomplished by Executive Orders but is now demanding a comprehensive Federal law to make them more effective.

Next week: "Do You Believe Negro Workers Are Doing Their Best to Hold Their Newly-won Jobs?"

JUL 31 1943

Only 6.7 Workers In U. S. War Plants

Pittsburgh Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

WASHINGTON, July 1—(ANP)—Negroes represented a bare 6.7 per cent of the 14,673,000 workers in 16,000 establishments reporting to the U. S. Employment service in March, 1943; according to figures released Monday by the War Manpower commission. In July, 1942, the figure was 5.8 per cent. About 937,000 non-whites are covered by the March figure.

One of the biggest jumps was that recorded in the aircraft industry where Negro employment increased 96.1 per cent compared to the over-all employment increase for the industry of 35.4. In the shipbuilding industry Negro employment increased 62.8 per cent between May, 1942, and November of the same year. The number working in tank factories doubled in the period of the report.

Of considerable moment is the figure for the coal industry. Negroes made up 23.1 per cent of those engaged in bituminous coal mining, while blast furnaces, steel works and rolling mills utilized 12.2 per cent.

The report pointed out that in spite of the meagre increased here and there, industry was not utilizing Negro manpower as much as it should in some areas and in some plants. The proportion of Negroes in war industries, it was stated, is not as yet commensurate with their proportion of the labor force, and only about 7 per cent of the employment in war industries.

JUL 3 1943

Tribune
Philadelphia, Pa.

Bomber Christened "Julius Ellisberry"

BIRMINGHAM, (ANP)—On October 6 a large Liberator bomber was to be christened the "Julius Ellsberry," at the Bechtel-McCone-Parsons modification plant. The ceremonies will honor the first Jefferson county man to give his life in the Japanese attack upon Pearl Harbor.

Mrs. Florence Ellsberry, mother of the hero, dedicated the plane, it was announced by A. G. Gaston, bomber chairman for the colored division of the war bond drive, that has already swept past the set $300,000 goal.

Encouraging Report

Pittsburgh Courier

The War Manpower Commission has issued a most encouraging report on the increasing employment of Negroes in the country's war plants.

Whereas in July, 1942, 5.8 per cent of the 12,000,000 workers in reporting plants were Negroes, by March, 1943, the proportion had grown to 6.7 per cent.

In tank plants the number has been doubled in that period, while in aircraft production the increase has been 96.1, and in shipbuilding it has risen by 62.8 per cent.

While two-thirds of the nation's Negro labor supply is confined to the agricultural South and there are many industries elsewhere which are not yet utilizing available Negro labor, the over all picture is most encouraging.

Gradually the nation is burying the myth that Negroes do not make good industrial workers.

They have demonstrated their capacity for exacting work and the industrial training so many are now receiving will prove invaluable in the post-war world.

JUL 3 1943

Transfer NYA Trainees To Pacific Coast Jobs

Pittsburgh, Pa. Courier

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., June 17—During the month of May, approximately 83 National Youth Administration trainees have completed the valuable basic training given at the Fair Park NYA project here in Little Rock, Helena and Arkadelphia, and have been transferred to other sections of the country for work in defense plants. The youth transferred during May are as follows:

Welders, Richmond, Calif., Arthur Ellison, Johnnie Jackson, Foster Hopes, Isaac McNeil, Mason Butler Jr., Wilburn Lee Ivey and Charles Wilkins, of Little Rock; Arrie D. Ross, Winfred Davis and Felix Brown, of Helena; Herman Davis, of Helena; Louis Clifton Daniel and William C. Robert, of Forrest City; Ray Eula Stafford, of Junction City; Paul L. Porter of Brinkley.

Transferred to Seattle, Wash., Katie Shields, Laura Jones, Elnora Thompson, Josephine Jamison, Louisa Shepherd, Varline Wade, Phisford Covington, Rosa Moten and Madeline Green, of Helena.

Woodworkers transferred to Seattle, Washington, are Eunice Lee Banks, Beatrice W. Pryor, George Barnes, Otis Scott, Myrtle F. Payte, and Geraldine Childs, of Little Rock; Elberta Williams, Fannie W. Winters, both from Arkadelphia; Marzelle Bryant, of Conway; Robert L. Stevens, of Rison; Vernton Lee Stroud, of Thornton; Geneva Haynes and Esther Bouquet of Malvern.

Foundry workers transferred to Eugene, Oregon are H. Prim, Jesse Stephens, Robert Holmes, Robert Starks, Vernon Stuart, Rufus Robinson, Julius Stuart, Frank Noble Jr., Richard C. Stuart, John D. Thomas and Chester Hunley, of Arkadelphia; Alvin Phillips, Jerome Jones and Alonzo Marshall, of Arkadelphia.

Sheet metal workers transferred to Seattle, Washington are Alice L. Williams, Lemuel L. Smith, Pearlie G. Smith, Ruth Goforth, Mildred M. Mims, Marion Clayborne, Minnie and Theola Redmond, Daisy Thompson, Elsie McFadden and Florence Thomas of Little Rock; Almeta Bates, Ellent T. Harris and Geraldine Rowe, of Hope; Odessa Pascal and Lee Ann Crenshaw, of Marianna; Exie Jenkins, of Springfield; Sarah V. Poole, of Paris, and Ruby Jackson, of Lexington, Ky.; Tommie Daniels, sheet metal worker, was transferred to Eugene, Oregon.

Machine operators who were transferred from the Little Rock project to Hartford, Conn., are: Vergie Betton, Jeromie Jones, Lillie VanPelt and Alice Williams, of Cotton Plant; Lula Mae Ray, of Marianna; Edith Beamon, of Little Rock and Mitt William Cooper of Forrest City, Arkansas.

Washington Tribune
Washington, D. C.

Given Chance to Qualify As Aircraft Mechanics

BLACKLAND ARMY AIR FIELD, Waco, Texas—Through a plan still in its trial stage, enlisted men at Blackland Army Air Field now have the opportunity of qualifying as aircraft mechanics on the "line."

Fifty men from Negro squadrons on the field were picked for their initiative, willingness to work, and interested in the servicing and maintenance of aircraft. The men were designated as Aircraft Hands and were assigned to washracks on the "line" where they come in contact with the twin-engined training planes used at Blackland Field.

Mavor Makes Appeal Against Absenteeism

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

APR 20 1943

MEMPHIS, Tenn.—(SNS)— Hon. Walter Chandler, Mayor, issued a special appeal Saturday against "absenteeism" among Negro construction workers on defense jobs.

Mayor Chandler urged Negro leaders of Memphis to join him in his plea to the workers to remain on jobs. He stated in a brief interview on the situation that he has received complaints from construction company officials and other employer groups concerning the wide-spread practice of "laying off" the job prevalent among local colored employees, especially construction workers.

In a short, pointed statement the popular Memphis mayor said, "We are particularly anxious to get this absenteeism stopped......for it is a serious matter both from the standpoint of the workers themselves."

It has been observed that many construction workers are away from heir jobs on defense plants as nuch as three days per week on n average.

Mayer Chandler said. "They hould be informed that the honeynoon will be over in 90 days...... omewhere around the 1st of July."

He explained that he meant by he statement that in the area the construction of defense plants will apparently come to a close around the middle of the summer. Memphis has obtained more than a score of new war plants since the outbreak of the war. But now their construction is practically completed. And hundreds of skilled and semi-skilled construction workers will be cut of work or forced to seek other employment.

He urged the colored leaders to advise the construction workers to remain on their jobs and seek to earn as much as possible in wages.. save a portion of the latter..and prepare themselves for the pinch which may strike them with the decline of work in this area

Numbers of outstanding ministers, civic leaders, and business men among the Negro populace repsonded to the Mayor's plea by announcing the situation in their churches, clubs, and other public groups, and urging workers to refrain from the practice of absenteeism.

APR 20 1943

Copy of Wire Sent to Congressman John Taber

The Union
Cincinnati, Ohio

JUN 24 1943

THIS IS MY CHALLENGE TO YOU TO APPEAR PERSONALLY ON THE FLOOR OF THE CONGRESS AND MAKE YOUR TALK AGAINST NEGRO WOMANHOOD IN THE NATIONAL YOUTH ADMINISTRATION AT AUBURN, NEW YORK. IF YOU HAD THE AUDACITY TO APPEAR SECRETLY BEFORE APPROPRIATIONS COMMITTEE YOU OUGHT TO HAVE THE NERVE TO STAND LIKE A MAN AND FIGHT FAIRLY RATHER THAN COWARDLY.

Signed:
WILLARD S. TOWNSEND,
International President,
United Transport Service Employees of America

Chicago, June 18, 1943.

Chicago, Ill.,
June 19, 1943.

Dear Friend:

It seeems as though at Auburn, New York, the National Youth Administration operates a resident center in which both Negro and white girls participate. This project is located adjacent to some property owned by one of the employes of the Honorable John Taber of New York State. Mr. Taber is a Republican who has maintained a derogatory vicious attitude toward any program which includes Negroes as Americans too.

JUN 24 1943

You will note by the attached excerpt from the Congressional Record that Congressman Taber is too cowardly to appear on the floor and publicly make his vicious attack on Negro womanhood. This is a classic example of how some of our northern Republican Congressmen are double-crossing Negroes at every legislative turn.

JUN 24 1943

The National Youth Administration must live. It is on the conscience of the Republican Party.

Sincerely yours,
WILLARD S. TOWNSEND,
International President.

Enclosure

P.S. Will you wire today your Senators and Representative Taber protesting this insult to Negro womanhood and the effort to make a racial issue out of NYA?

OWI Funds Challenged On 'Negroes And The War'

Chicago Ill. Defender

(Defender Washington Bureau)

FEB 27 1943

WASHINGTON— "Negroes and the War," the propaganda publication of the Office of War Information, edited by Chandler Owen, threatened to become a boomerang to the OWI last week.

Reps. Hamilton Fish and John Taber, both Republicans from New York, attacked the publication on the floor of the House. They expressed an intention, while talking with the Defender, of devoting their intention to keeping the OWI from getting any more money for such purposes.

Rep. Fish called the 36-page publication "both tripe and baloney." He added: "Certainly it is, not in the interest of the Negroes and the war, because in the first paragraph it contains a gratuitious insult to all Negroes, which reads in this way:

"'Some Negro Americans say that it makes no difference who wins the war; they say things could not be worse under Hitler.'

"That is a dastardly reflection and a slander and a libel upon 13,000,000 Negroes. It is malicious to start his political propaganda off with a sentence of that kind, questioning the patriotism, the loyalty, and the Americanism of the Negro."

In his office, Rep. Fish told the Defender that he intended to do everything in his power to stop any further slandering of this sort against Negroes.

Rep. Taber said to the Defender that "the first sentence of that thing is enough to make anybody boil."

He declared that if Negroes are not insulted by it, then they have "far less intelligence than I have given them credit for having."

"Only the last few pages show anything about the Negro and the war," he stated. "The rest is only the poorest kind of propaganda tripe."

"Negroes and the War" is on official publication of the Office of War Information. Two million copies have been printed for distribution primarily to Negroes. It has been praised and condemned by various Negro groups.

It has been stated that the agency has been giving consideration to having a similar publication prepared on the Negro and the Japanese, to be edited by the same Chandler Owen.

Nation
New York, N. Y.

JUL 24 1943

IT APPEARS that the migration of Negroes to war-production centers is not an economic phenomenon. The Union News of Towson, Maryland, an anti-union, anti-New Deal paper, explains it thus: "Certain Washington politicians back of the fourth-term drive hope to pack Maryland with a large number of Negro workers, place them in good-paying jobs and comfortable government-built homes, have them declare their intentions to become Maryland citizens before November, and swing Maryland, which is doubtful, to the New Deal column."

Big Contracts Awarded To Colored Parachute Firm

Courier Pittsburgh Pa.

JUL 24 1943

SAN DIEGO, Calif., July 22—(ANP)—Through the efforts of Howard (Skippy) Smith, president of Pacific Parachute company, the international concern became the recipient of more essential war contracts last week.

The former parachute jumper, who skyrocketed to fame last year when be became instrumental in launching the first Negro-owned firm in the United States to hire workers of seven different nationalities, has been making frequent trips to Los Angeles in the interest of the contracts.

MAKES AIRPLANE PARTS, TOO

In addition to the pilot parachutes now being manufactured by the company, important airplane parts will be supplied the Douglas Aircraft company by the local concern.

The Pacific Parachute company, which recently completed its first anniversary, has grown from a first-floor war industry to a three-story concern. On its payroll are employes who are Negroes, Mexicans, American whites, Brazilians, and those of German and Italian descent.

47h-1943

Bureau Admits Negroes Making Some Big Gains

MAY 1 1943

Pittsburgh Courier Pittsburgh, PA.

WASHINGTON, April 29—Although women and Negroes now hold many transportation jobs in which they have not previously been employed, discrimination against Negroes persists in many places, the Office of War Information reported this week on completion of a comprehensive survey of the transportation situation.

Reporting that the battle of transportation in the continental United States is being won, and that the war and necessary civilian transportation load is being carried, the OWI cautions that our victories are not necessarily permanent.

"Our transportation equipment, with few exceptions," the survey revealed, "is being used close to its limits. Railroad passenger equipment, buses, private automobiles, tires, parts and tank cars are wearing out. Few replacements are being made.

WARNS OF PERSISTENT

"Women and Negroes now hold many transportation jobs in which they have not previously been employed, but discrimination against Negroes persists in many places. Selective Service boards which defer war plant workers often draft transportation workers."

Discussing the manpower problems of the transportation industry, the OWI declares:

"Negroes are filling increasing numbers of skilled and semi-skilled railroad jobs, but, war or no war, unwillingness to employ Negroes in [illegible] types [illegible] railroad jobs persists.

"The expanded local transportation field has also been hard hit by the manpower shortage. Large numbers of both drivers and mechanics have entered the vehicle maintenance operations of the Army, or taken training as airplane mechanics, or entered other war industries at higher wages. At the beginning of the year the local transportation industry was short 1,919 vehicle operators, 21 mechanics and [illegible] street car inspectors and repairmen.

"In some cities vehicles are lying idle due to lack of people to run them. Still, out of 227 local transportation companies, representing 86 per cent of total employment in the industry, only eight employ Negro operators. Women 'motorettes,' 'conductorettes,' and bus drivers are no longer a novelty in San Francisco, San Diego, Detroit, Columbus, Ga., and other cities. In December, the national average work week for local transportation employees was 50 hours, with many reports of 60 or 70 hours among vehicle operators."

New York Times
New York, N. Y.

NEGROES PRESENT AWARDS

APR 10 1943

Sun Shipbuilding and Railroad Association Are Honored

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., April 9—To the Association of American Railroads and the Sun Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Company of Chester, Pa., have been presented the first Booker T. Washington awards of the National Association of Negroes in American Industry for outstanding achievements in industrial employment of Negroes.

The presentations were made by Bishop David H. Sims of the First District, African Methodist Episcopal Church, at ceremonies here last night and were accepted by John G. Pew Sr., president of the Sun company, and by Colonel Robert S. Henry, assitant to the president of the Association of American Railroads.

Bishop Sims pointed out that 350,000 Negroes were employed by American railroads and said:

"I believe that the presentation of these awards marks the beginning of an evolution in bringing together Negroes and American industry to the extent that they cooperate to their mutual benefit and to the benefit of the country as a whole."

Mr. Pew said his shipyards now employed some 12,000 Negroes among a total of 33,000 workers.

"All are getting equal pay for equal work and we are greatly pleased with the work being rendered," he added.

Negro Women Employed as Skilled Navy Yard Workers

Washington Tribun
Washington, D. C.

FEB 20 1943

For the first time in history Negro women are now being employed in skilled jobs in the Washington Navy Yard. Within recent months more than 300 specially-trained machine workers and mechanics helpers have been given jobs there at wages averaging $45 per week, and more are being employed at the rate of 50 a month.

This development resulted from the efforts of the National Youth Administration and the project manager and staff of the NYA War Production training School at 1127 S Street, Northwest. This school, now working on a 24-hour basis, offers free training in arc and gas welding, sheet metal work, aircraft riveting, drafting, clerical work, radio construction, small parts assembly, code receiving and sending, and in other jobs now in demand in the war production battle on the home front.

Typical of the results achieved at the NYA War Production Training School is the case of Miss Juanita E. Cray, 20, of 226 Fifty-ninth Street, Northeast, who began her training in the machine shop in April 1942. She completed her training in September of the same year and was placed in the Washington Navy Yard, where she is now earning $45 per week. She is a graduate of the Dunbar High School and prior to taking the NYA training she worked in domestic service.

News
Birmingham, Ala.

Aviation Learned Hard Way

APR 11 1943

Tuskegee Negroes Learn Mechanics Of Craft Through Use Of Old Broken-Engined Plane

BY HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE
Associated Press Science Editor

TUSKEGEE, Ala.—Starting with nothing but one old, broken-engined airplane, Negro students of Tuskegee Institute have learned aviation mechanics the hard way.

They took the old engine down and set it up again 25 times. They dismantled and rebuilt the old plane 12 times.

Their enthusiasm has opened a new sector of manpower, a pool of Southern Negroes suited to skilled war craftsmanship. With the aid of the state of Alabama, Tuskegee begins this Spring to turn out 30 aircraft maintenance artisans a month, to go directly into warplane servicing.

This course, which started with the old plane and two instructors in an unfloored shed, has grown to 15 instructors and occupancy of several well-equipped shops. The boys still have only one plane and still tear it down and build it up. Some still are figuring on how to patch a hole the size of a book in the old engine to see her turn over.

* * *

BUT THEY NOW HAVE A LOT OF PARTS from a lot of old planes. As they were the last of the aviation mechanics schools to win recognition, even old parts are hard to pick up. Heading the school is W. S. Allen, teacher-trainer of the Alabama State Department of Vocational Training. He is a Negro, a graduate of Wooster College and of Ohio State University.

The old plane, a Douglass observation ship, was allotted to Tuskegee two years ago. It was supposed to remain intact.

Allen noticed small parts missing. Each time he would find that piece in the possession of a student who was taking it apart to see how it worked. He described the situation to the state N. Y. A. supervisor. The supervisors agreed that the regulations would be satisfied if Tuskegee always could account for one complete Douglass, regardless of whether it was in one piece.

* * *

THE STATE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION made federal funds available and 82 men and eight women demonstrated that in spite of obstacles, they had the ability. But they didn't get many jobs. There wasn't much market for a Negro's services.

Now, however, all graduates of the school will be taken by the Tuskegee Army Flying School, about 10 miles from here, where the Army Air Forces are training Negro military aviators. They are a large group of pursuit pilots.

The state vocational board's allotments were used by Tuskegee further to set up training courses in welding, cutting and other shipbuilding jobs. A market for the services of these Negroes has not been fully solved.

The Kaiser Yards and the Chester, Pa., Sun Shipbuilding Works, take them at standard starting pay. A Southern shipbuilding center offered to take some at common, unskilled labor wages. Of 110 so far trained, 45 per cent got jobs. Half of the other 55 per cent went into the Army.

* * *

THE STATE OF ALABAMA IS GIVING its high school graduate Negroes a chance at night classes, to give them enough engineering training so that industry can take them on. That has started a rush.

At Tuskgee, T. W. Jones, Iowa State Negro graduate electrical engineer, tells some stories of the eagerness of Alabama's dark sons and daughters. He supervises the establishment of night classes in various parts of Alabama under the E. S. M. W. T. program.

"One notice posted in a church," he said, "is sure fire to bring out 200 or more applicants. They ask for a lot of lines of training. But they say, 'If we can't get what we want, we'll take what you offer.' They are eager for war work."

A group of 30 girls and women wanted courses in physics and mathematics. In the case of a radio night school, parts were lacking for class work. Thereupon two dozen students brought in 105 radios.

Birmingham, Ala. Age-Herald
March 9, 1943

Alabama's War Training

An announcement from the vocational education division of the State Department of Education reports that since July 1, 1941, 60,000 persons in this state have been trained for war work and placed in industries.

This number seems large. In a sense it is. But we are not of the opinion that this represents anything like the maximum number we could have trained during that period.

At present, according to the report, there are between 5,000 and 6,000 persons "in training" for war work. O this number more than 1,500 are women. Emphasis on women workers and training for women is now increasing.

Our vocational education directors—and all directly concerned with the program in Alabama—have been doing good work. There should be no question of that. But they have had limitations, and on the whole we have hardly done more than tap our potential manpower supply which can be trained.

The nationwide emphasis in war work training is now on women. Here in the South, it is important to continue to emphasize that we have a vast supply of manpower among our Negroes. They want this training. Some few have gotten it; some few now are being trained. But facilities for training them are still greatly inadequate.

There are industries in this state that are still reluctant to provide jobs for skilled or semi-skilled Negro workers. In those industries and plants where Negroes have been given a better-than-average opportunity, the results have been highly satisfactory. The proof is a matter of record, that our Negro people can do the work. They continue to wait for extension of opportunity.

Courier-Journal
Louisville, Ky.

More Negroes Find Jobs In War Plants

JUN 22 1943

Washington, June 21 (AP)—The War Manpower Commission reported today a "slow but steady increase in use of Negro workers in war plants throughout the country," but suggested there still is "not an adequate utilization in some areas and some plants."

The W.M.C. said Negroes comprised 5.8 per cent of 12,000,000 workers employed in some 16,000 plants reporting to its employment service in [illegible] 1942, but their number, after a month-to-month increase, rose to 6.7 per cent of 14,673,000 workers in the same plants by the end of last April.

TVA Has Integrated Negro Workers Into All Categories

APR 24 1943

Pittsburg Courier

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 22—Already employed in 34 different categories and increasing their skills through on-the-job training and upgrading, Negro employees of the Tennessee Valley Authority are helping to relieve critical manpower shortages in dam construction, power operation, and the production of war chemicals, TVA officials announced this week.

At the same time, these officials revealed, Negro TVA workers are pushing War Bond sales and Red Cross drives and are co-operating in constructive labor-management efforts to improve living standards, working conditions and employee morale.

At the Wilson Dam Chemical plants, where 18.1 per cent of employees are Negroes, supervisors and personnel training officers revealed that the trainees are learning new skills quickly and efficiently.

PARTICIPATES IN TRAINING PROGRAM

"Being able to train Negroes for responsible jobs has helped us meet the manpower shortage," said John P. Clark, nitrate plant supervisor. "Our Negro employees have shown aptitude and willingness to co-operate in the training programs."

Negro workers have made themselves eligible for skilled and semi-skilled occupations by participating in the regular TVA training program under which an employee is given on-the-job training by foremen and supervisors for higher level positions. By March of this year, 54 Negroes were in the operator training program at Wilson Dam, 130 had completed training programs, and 120 had received promotion. The training program is carried on, likewise with equal opportunity, for Negroes, in the building and construction trades and in power operations.

One Wilson Dam employee, Paul Johnson of Tuscumbia, Alabama, has progressed since 1935 from laborer through six classifications to carbide-handling foreman, first Negro to have this job. Supervising men in nine different classifications, he is responsible for crushing, bagging, loading, and checking phosphorus fertilizers for lend-lease aid to Britain and carbide for synthetic rubber.

Lincoln C. Johnson, Paul's brother, is sub-labor foreman.

BUY WAR BONDS

Both brothers buy a War Bond each pay day, amounting to more than 25 per cent in Lincoln's case, and neither can remember when he has had an unauthorized absence from work. Paul Johnson is chairman of the Negro Auxiliary of Operating Engineers' union (AFL): Lincoln Johnson is vice president of the Hod Carriers' union (AFL) and in the last few months has been business agent. Both have participated as labor representatives in the annual Tennessee Valley Authority Wage conference.

Four youths, each with a university degree and graduate study in chemistry, are employed as laboratory technicians in the Research and Development division.

Negro equipment operators were practically unknown until eight months ago. Today, one is a junior storekeeper in charge of issuing chemicals and chamical equipment for research, keeping the store room in order and making requests to keep inventories up. Four are unloading shift foremen, three as solution distributors, 12 are sub-labor foremen, 12 are graining room operators, three are cencentrator operators, one is a mechinist helper, another is a batter locomotive operator. Others are unloading operators and foremen, mixer operators, truck-tractor operators, oilers, and conveyor operators. Three recently have been employed as building guards, another new occupation.

HOLD RESPONSIBLE UNION POSITIONS

In Tennessee Valley Authority power operations work, the story is the same. Negroes have been given more responsible jobs and have filled them efficiently. At the Watts Bar Dam steam plant, Earl Tulloss, Dayton, Ohio, is senior coal drag operator. President of the local Hod Carriers' union, Tulloss is taking an active part in labor-management drives against absenteeism and in selling War Bonds.

Earl M. Qualls, car dumper operator, is a job steward of the local Hod Carriers' union.

Herbert W. Smith, drill operator, has never had an unauthorized absence in his nine years with TVA. A member of the local labor-management co-operative committee and a job steward, he has fought against absenteeism.

PERSONNEL OFFICERS ON EACH PROJECT

About two-thirds of the Negro construction workers at Douglas Dam are employed in occupations at skilled and semi-skilled levels. Employment of Negro cement finishers and powdermen was on a 50-50 basis. Skilled classifications in construction work at Douglas Dam and other TVA projects in which Negroes are employed include cement finisher and cement finisher tender, powderman and powderman helper, wagon drill operator and wagon drill helper, oiler, flagman, jackhammer operator, vibrator operator, shaft and tunnel miner, cement scoopmen, senior cook, cook, senior waiter, hospital orderly, and janitor.

At Fontana Dam, three Negroes have been made junior cafeteria supervisors, and there is one crew of Negro line men working in the Norris area.

A Negro personnel officer at Wilson Dam and each TVA project under construction give special assistance in recruiting employees, placing them, exploring promotional opportunities, co-ordinating the employee training program for Negroes, counseling with employees, and handling programs of personnel relations. A Negro training officer, stationed at each of these projects, plans and administers an adult education and recreation program for Negro employees in TVA villages and in the area. These officers are under the functional supervision of J. H. Daves, specialist in Negro Education and Relations, at the Knoxville office of TVA.

NEGRO WORKER CITED FOR 'BEST PRODUCTION'

MAY 16 1943

Bee

Chicago, Ill. 1943

Several shipyards where thousands of Negro workers are employed in skilled, semi-skilled and unskilled capacities were cited this week by a Senate investigation committee among "the best and most efficient producers" of Liberty ships and naval vessels.

Given special commendation on performance records by the Special Committee Investigating the National Defense program, of which Senator Harry S. Truman is chairman, were the Newport News Shipbuilding and Drydock company of Virginia nad its subsidiary, the North Carolina Shipbuilding corporation of Wilmington, N.C.

War Manpower commission employment reports indicate that in November, 1942, more than 8,200 Negroes were employed as machine operators, blacksmiths, painters, dismantlers, stage builders, riggers, bolters, drillers, slab benders, erectors, riveters and in a number of other skilled and semi-skilled capacities at the Newport News yards, and that more than 5,800 Negroes were employed in similar capacities by the North Carolina Shipbuilding Corp. Negroes constituted 27.4 per cent of all employees in the Virginia yards and 29.8 in the North Carolina yard.

Other yards discussed in the Shipbuilding and Shipping report of the Truman committee included the Richmond, Cal., yards of the Kaiser company where more than 6,100 Negroes are employed as boilermakers, shipfitters, shipwrights, stage riggers, joiners, sheet metal workers and in other capacities; the Bethlehem Fairfield yards in Baltimore, Md., where more than 6,200 Negroes are working in skilled, semi-skilled and unskilled capacities, and the California Shipbuilding corporation where hundreds of Negro workers assisted in the construction of the SS Booker T. Washington, first Liberty ship named for a Negro. The SS George Washington Carver was recently launched at the Kaiser Richmond Yard No. 1, and the SS Frederick Douglass is now being built in the Bethlehem-Fairfield yard.

Discussing the construction of Liberty ships, the committee's report, ordered printed on April 22, 1943, declared:

"It appears that the Oregon Shipbuilding corporation operated under the management of Mr. Henry J. Kaiser, and the North Carolina Shipbuilding corporation, a subsidiary of the Newport News Shipbuilding and Drydock corporation, under the management of Mr. Homer Ferguson, are the two best and most efficient producers of Liberty ships. The Oregon shipyard is first in point of man-hours and second in dollar cost. The North Carolina shipyard is first in dollar-cost and second in man-hours.

"The Oregon shipyard delivered 12 Liberty ships in January, 1943, at an average of 393,858 man-hours each. The average cost per ship for January is not available, but for the ships produced in November and December, it was $712,768 per ship, and for March the average was $667,000 per ship. The North Carolina shipyard delivered 9 Liberty ships in January, 1943, at an average of 450,807 man-hours and an average cost of $607,827.23 per ship."

In the construction of naval vessels, the committee report compared the man-hours and dollar-cost in the construction of battleships of the same class by the New York Shipbuilding corporation, the Bethlehem Steel company and the Newport News Shipbuilding and Dry Dock company. Discussing variations in the three yards, the report said:

"As appears from these figures, the Newport News Shipbuilding and Drydock company was able to construct a battleship for $9,342,597 and with 3,194,222 man-hours of direct labor less than the New York Shipbuilding corporation required to build a ship of the same class."

The report praised the performance record of the Bethlehem-Fairfield Shipyards in Baltimore and stated that the records of the California Shipbuilding corporation and the Kaiser Richmond yards No. 1 and 2 were both very satisfactory, "but not as good as the excellent records of the Oregon, North Carolina and Bethlehem-Fairfield shipyards."

NEGRO WORKERS INCREASE

DETROIT, April 30—(AP)—Montague A. Clark, area director of the War Manpower Commission, said Friday that the number of Negroes employed in Detroit's major war plants had more than doubled within the last year and the rate of gain is increasing. He said there were 22,200 Negroes among 394,400 workers in the area's 165 larger plants in May of last year, and by March of this year the number had increased to 47,400 out of a total employment of 566,600 in the same plants.

[illegible]

April 6, 1943

28 NYA Trainees Leave for Jobs In War Plants

Twenty-eight young men and women who have received training for war jobs at NYA War Production Training Centers in Middle Tennessee left today to take jobs in various war production centers in the United States.

The program for training young men and women, both white and Negro, has been in operation for more than a year, with from 15 to 30 workers from this area leaving each week to take jobs in war plants, F. R. Fitzpatrick, youth personnel officer of the NYA unit, said.

Training in electric welding, sheet metal, and machine shop work is conducted in Middle Tennessee at NYA resident centers at

---

Washington—Men discharged from the armed services because of disabilities, combat-incurred or otherwise are being given every opportunity to stay in the war, not in the battle lines but on the production front, Chairman Paul V. McNutt of the War Manpower Commission said today.

Mr. McNutt announced that the hospital service of the Veterans Employment division of the United States Employment Service is now operating in 309 army and navy hospitals. The service provides the veterans with a direct contact with the Veterans Employment representative in their home towns, their first step on the way back to a civilian job.

JUL 29 1943

---

when the literary department an the Red Cross committee of th club were hostesses.

The guests were received by Dr
Stapleton, Mrs. A. L. Moore, chair man of the Red Cross committee
Mrs. Frank Fessey, a member o the national camp and hospita service board of the American Re
Cross; Mrs. E. B. Stevenson, Jr.
a member of the national board o volunteer special services, guest from the 14 services of the Re
Cross, and chairmen of various Re
Cross organizations in the city.

Presiding at the tea table wa
Mrs. Dempsey Weaver, president o
the club. The central ornamen of the table was a silver epergn filled with jonquils, tulips and oth

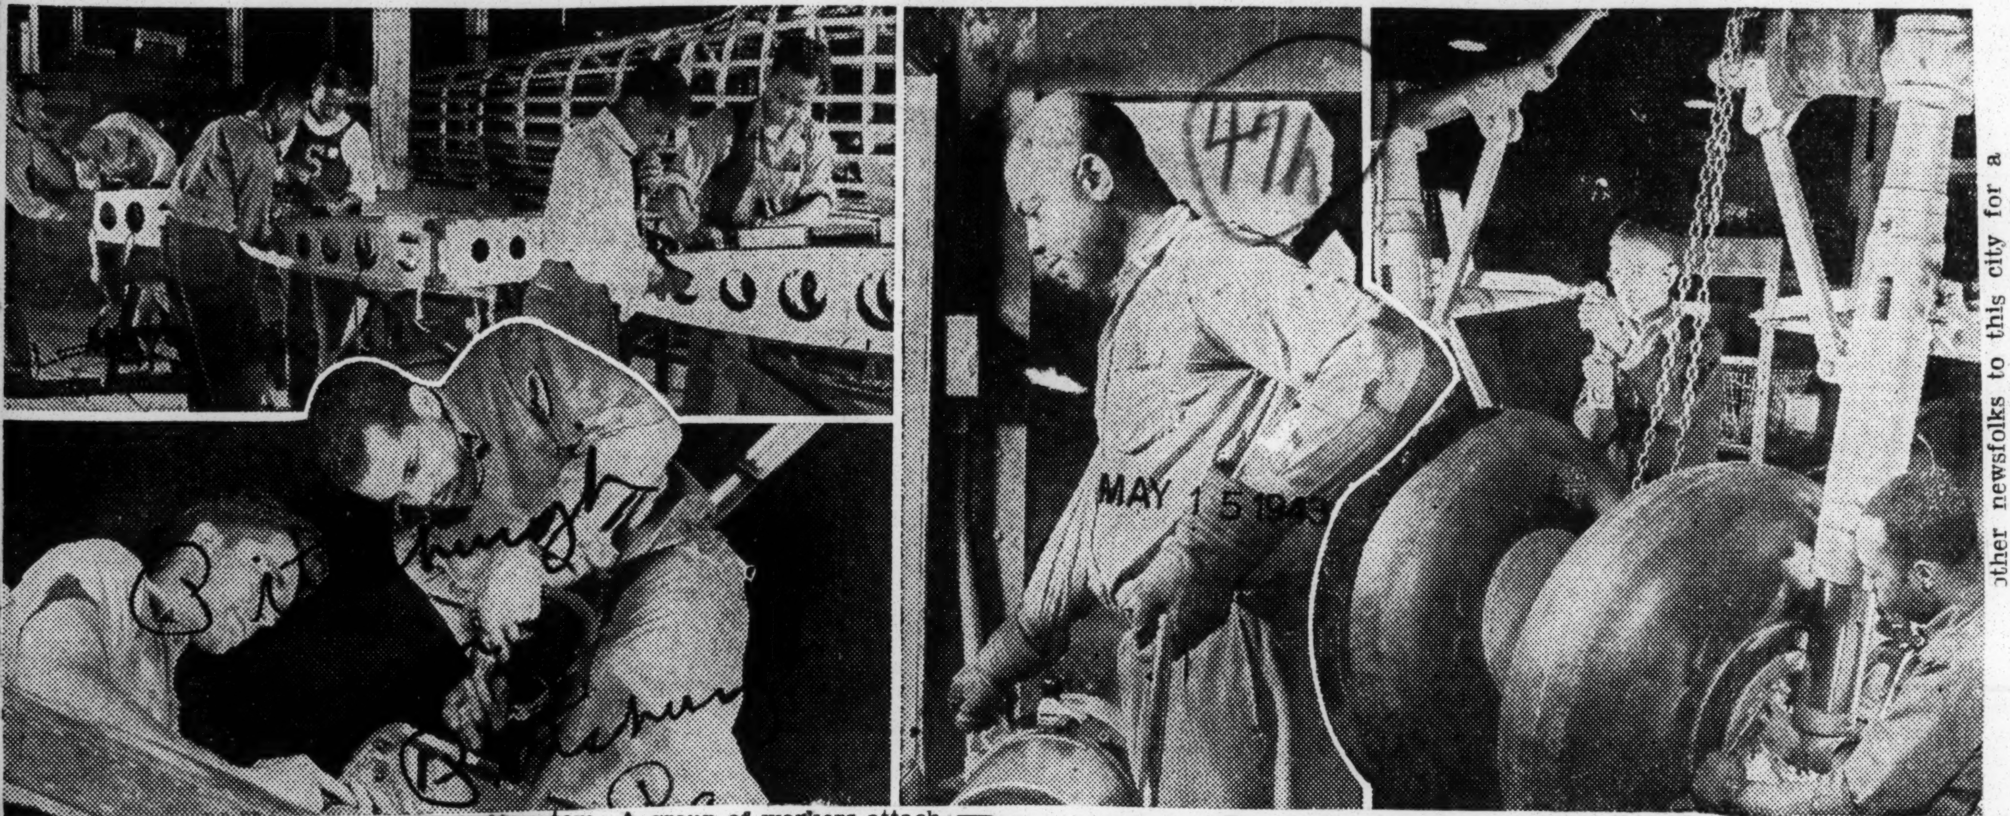
Bystander

Des Moines, Iowa

DISCHARGED MEN GIVEN OPPORTUNITIES

47h-1943

MANNING THE MACHINES ON THE HOME FRONT TO HELP WHIP THE AXIS



After graduating from many various training courses offered by the United States Government, race employees integrated into different branches of the production line of the nation are rapidly gaining recognition as first rate specialists. Above are pictures of several workers, products of the vast training program, busily engaged in production.

At the left from top to bottom—A group of workers attaching skins to the fins of medium bombers at Glenn L. Martin Aircraft plant.

Lower photo — Working together for victory, Walter Shippee and Artie Jackson assemble a pilot's head rest on a P-47 Pursuit ship.

At the right of these photos, from left to right is, a 50-ton crane, operated by a race worker Next is a huge landing gear, which is the type assembled at the factory.

Last photo shows a skilled workman operating a wire drawing machine at a Bethlehem Steel plant. Official OWI photos by Liberman.

MAY 15 1943

Raleigh, N. C., News & Observer
May 27, 1943

NEGRO YOUTHS TRAINED AT ROCKY MOUNT CENTER

Rocky Mount, May 26.—A total of 1,582 Negro boys and girls have been trained and placed in war industries through the local NYA training center, it was revealed here today in a report made by Westry Horne, resident manager of the Negro Civic Forum.

Since the opening of the center here in December, 1941, over 2,000 students have been enrolled for the various courses, the report showed. The project offers training in sheet metal, machinery, foundry, aircraft woodwork and welding.

The report also stated that approximately $10,000 was spent here each month for subsistence, supplies and salaries.

Race Integrated On Large Scale To Relieve Shortages

"Pittsburgh Courier"
Pittsburgh Pa.

~~MAY 15 1943~~

WASHINGTON, May 13—The War Manpower Commission's greatest success in Baltimore has been in the elimination of many of the employment barriers raised against the Negro, the Office of War Information announced this week in a report on wartime problems and conditions in the City of Baltimore.

The report, a study of Baltimore's experience in setting up the first voluntary job-control program which enabled the War Manpower Commission to establish similar or more comprehensive programs in other labor shortage areas, shows how the city tackled its transportation, housing, health and manpower problems.

MAY 15 1943

STILL ROOM FOR IMPROVEMENT

Pointing out that Baltimore is still far from a solution of its own manpower problems, the study reveals its progress in reducing discrimination against Negroes.

"In 1942", the report states, "Negro war workers increased from 9,000, of whom two-thirds were employed in one shipyard, to 22,600 well distributed throughout Baltimore industry. In eight months, from May, 1942, to January, 1943, while the employment of Negroes in Baltimore's 92 main war plants increased 88 per cent, while the total employment in that period climbed from 164,000 to 204,000—an increase of about 25 per cent. In addition, scores of stores and businesses not covered by the agreement hired Negroes for the first time.

MAY 15 1943

GEOGRAPHY FACTOR, TOO

"This record is particularly remarkable because of Baltimore's geographical location. It is neither South nor North, but a little of both with a rather traditional Southern attitude toward the Negro.

MAY 15 1943

"The Bartlett-Hayward plant, a community leader in many ways, has hired 500 Negroes in less than two years, half of them for skilled jobs.

"The Western Electric plant employs Negroes and white workers side by side without segregation as to toilets, cafeteria and other facilities.

SOME SIDETRACKING

"Hiring discrimination in Baltimore war plants has not been eliminated altogether. The Martin plant, which has employed large numbers of immigrants from the rural Southern areas, uses its Negro labor at one plant and keeps Negroes from its larger Middle River factory. Many other factories employ Negroes only at unskilled jobs.

"On Labor Day, 1942, the Maryland Drydock Co. put five Negroes to work in yards where previously only white workers were employed. A strike followed."

MAY 15 1943

NEGROES FOR NYA MAJORITY

Although the number of persons receiving industrial training in Baltimore's vocational education and NYA classes has decreased to the point that only 5,499 persons are expected to graduate in the next six months, Negroes form the majority of those now in training.

The necessity for maximum utilization of Negro labor was brought to the attention of industrialists and trade union officials when the first labor-management committee was appointed in July, 1941, the report states. After several meetings, the labor-management committee made public signed statements in which both employers and trade unions agreed "wholeheartedly to the plan of maximum utilization of local labor supply," and pledged themselves to make every possible effort to employ and grant union membership to "women, Negroes and other groups not ordinarily employed" before making any efforts to secure workers from outside the area. These agreements facilitated the employment of Negroes.

MAY 15 1943

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

Workers Of All Races Toil At Parachute Co.

Many Tokens Of Awards Displayed

By Skippy Smith

By LAWRENCE F. LaMAR

SAN DIEGO, Calif. — (SNS) — This writer at the invitation of Howard "Skippy" Smith, Friday journeyed in company with several other newsfolks to this city for a tour of the Pacific Parachute Company of which Smith is president. The visit proved an eye opener something akin to a miracle.

Here was the full effect of President Franklin D. Roosevelt's Executive Order 8802, known as the Fair Employment Practice Committee. Here too, was democracy in all her ethical and sociological meaning put to practice. Here was mankind living and working in the trueness of Christian civilization without any sign of racial, color or religious friction. A marvel!

LIVE THEIR JOBS.

MAY 9 1943

Non-Negro employers and hostile labor unions have long preached in hidden and double meaning language, that the race white and black, could not amicably work together. Openly, they had prayed that never should down the day when Negro employers should work non-Negroes for hire. Yet, here it was, a living lie to their boasts. Not only were non-Negroes working under the management of Negro business executives, but, actually liking them as fair minded employers.

The Pacific Parachute Company came into existence through the inspiration of 29-year-old, Alabama born "Skippy" Smith, on March 19, 1942. Seven days later at its dedication it numbered 18 employes.

Of course, there was the struggle and some difficulties experienced by intrepid business man. He scoured the havens of the more wealthy and farsighted men of business of his own racial group seeking financial assistance needed for his venture, but without avail.

Finally aid did come. Eddie Anderson, famed stage, screen and radio actor, came forth with financial aid. So did W. W. Gay. Moral aid was lent by the Los Angeles Urban League through its executive director, Floyd C. Covington. Col. C. E. Fountelroy, president of the Standard Parachute Company, lent valuable contractual business assistance. And, so the fledgling organization was begun.

MARKS ANNIVERSARY

On March 18th of this year, the plant celebrated its first anniversary. It was learned that an over all volume of business had been contracted for amounting in excess of a quarter of a million dollars. The personnel on March 7, numbered 72 employes, comprised among its numbers persons of American white, American black, Mexican, Italian, Swiss, Jewish, and French. Not a mollyglot but just ordinary American working people of right ideals and considerate purpose.

The plant occupying three stories of a sizeable building with an ample amount of power sewing machines, silk loom tables and other essential manufacturing equipment to now go into the production field of a prime contractor. As a sub contractor outlet, the Pacific Parachute Company has met every test and been appropriately cited for the manufacture of pilot parachutes. The small safety chutes are attached to the larger ones to greater insure their opening without the jumper becoming fouled in its cords.

AWARDS ARE VISIBLE

In plain view of every visitor to the plant are tokens of awards received by the company, its management and its employes. They have won the AA1 quality rating from the Army Air Corps, Material division; a letter of recommendation from its prime contractor, Cole of California; an Efficiency Award, from the same prime contractor, for its quality and quantity of production.

Cole company has just been notified that the coveted Army "E" award has been achieved as the result of its production. It is well to note that the pilot chute made by the Pacific Parachute Company was included in their efficiency record. The Minute Man "T" flag is also the property of the PPC, the company employes having 100 percent of its employes subscription, 10 per cent of their salary in war bonds.

In numerous ways the writer learned, this amazing business owned and operated by a Negro, but operated as any other American business firm has merited the commendation of numerous outstanding citizens of this city. The firm is only one so operated in California, that is a member of the Southern California Merchants and Manufacturers Association. During the anniversary celebration a Citizens Committee of San Diego Manufacturers, presented Mr Smith with a handsome 30-inch trophy, symbolic of Victory, as Victory Leader No. 1 of America, for success achieved in manfacturing parachutes and bettering racial relations.

Herman E. Warren, Negro, is in charge of production at the plant, supervisor and instruction, Viola Sample (Negro): supervisor and director of the U. S. financed pre-factory school, operated under the direction of the Pacific Parachute Company, is Mrs. Lena Kock (white); Gabriel Verden, is chief inspector of chutes (Mexican); supervisor of Assembly is Minnie Sopetti (Italian), another supervisor in Cora Damm (white), Kentucky born niece of Col. Ed. Bradly, the race horse king, by way of explaning how plant is run. Also, the plant guard is a white woman, the plant PBX system is operated by a Mexican woman, the personnel director is a Negro woman, and the head mechanic and his assistant are both white men.

Smith, president of the firm, is a very modest man. He didn't need to emphasize a determination to win the Army "E" for his plant, it was easy for the visiting newsmen to see that he would do it and achieve it. He wants that above all in order to convince a doubting world. that not only can white and black work harmoniously together, but with efficiency.

Peoples Voice
New York, N. Y.

APR 24 1943

HERO AWARDS KATHARINE

APR 24 1943

Katharine Gay, employee of the Solar Manufacturing Corporation of Bayonne, NJ is awarded the coveted "E" by Sgt. William J. Caldwell, wounded Guadalcanal hero. Katharine represented the entire staff of Solar workers. Wheee!—Photo thru courtesy Continental Features . . .

ALTEMEYER NOT WITH OWI, DAVIS REVEALS

Chicago Bee

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 18—Elmer Davis, Office of War Information chief, told the NAACP this week that Social Security Board Chairman A. J. Altemeyer recently charged with threatening to apply jim-crow policies to federal employees is not also an official in the OWI.

March, 21

In a story sent out last week by the NAACP condemning Altemeyer for his promise to carry out the request of Congressman N. C. Tarver, of Georgia, to segregate Negro clericals at the Social Security board, Altemeyer was also identified as an OWI executive. (Altemeyer is listed as an executive director of the OWI on page 314 of the Official 1943 Congressional Directory.)

Davis, in a letter to the N.A.A.C.P., said:

March 21

"My attention has been called to a March 5 news story captioned 'OWI and Security Board Head Promises to Bow to Jim-Crow in D.C. Employment.'

"This story," said Davis, allegedly reports the testimony of A. J. Altemeyer, social security board chairman, at a recent Congressional hearing. The release, however, identifies Mr. Altmeyer as "an OWI executive director..' Mar. 21.

"Until December 7, 1942, Mr. A. J. Altemeyer was executive director of the War Manpower commission. Since that date he has served as Federal Security Agency representative of the WMC. He still remains chairman of the Social Security board. At no time, however, has Mr. Altemeyer had any connection with the Office of War Information, and, naturally, he has never served as an executive director of this agency.

"It is possible that your erroneous identification resulted from a typographical mistake in the Office of the NAACP Press Service. But I am sure you will be anxious to correct this mistake with the various newspapers which receive your service. It will be unfortunate, of course, if these newspapers confuse OWI's stated policy with that described in the news release."

Memphis, Tenn., Commercial Appeal
July 6, 1943

END OF NYA HITS 450 IN WEST TENNESSEE

Closing Order Is Given Here For War Training Shops

GRADUATES IN DEMAND

Reprinted From Yesterday's Late Editions

Closing of National Youth Administration Projects in five West Tennessee cities will affect about 450 youths now being trained for war production jobs, Henry P. Roth, regional NYA project manager, said yesterday.

Orders to close the projects in Memphis, Bells, Paris, Dresden and Union City were received by Mr. Roth from Orie E. Myers Jr. of Atlanta, regional NYA personnel director, after Congress voted Saturday to kill the agency.

Training Halted

Although the NYA has until Dec. 31 to close out its records under terms of a pending bill to close it, on which Congress now is putting the final touches, instruction of trainees was halted Saturday and will not be resumed unless the order is rescinded, Mr. Roth said.

The NYA has been operating two training projects here, one for white students at 563 Washington and one for negro trainees at 1193 North Manassas.

About 115 students are taking courses in the welding, sheet metal and machine shops at the school for white youths, while some 60 negroes are taking training in woodworking, Mr. Roth explained. Courses run from six to eight weeks, after which the trainee is ready for a war production job. Demand for graduates far exceeds the supply, he added, most of them being placed in shipyards and aircraft factories.

Must Go Elsewhere

Students whose courses of training have not been completed will have to seek instruction elsewhere, Mr. Roth said.

The City Board of Education also operates a vocational school for war production workers at 563 Washington. Ed B. Hudgens, director, said the school has ample facilities for training Memphians dropped by the NYA. Students in the four other West Tennessee projects will have to leave home to complete their training.

Students attending the NYA schools are paid $40 a month while learning a trade, but those attending the school operated by the City Board of Education receive no pay.

47h-1943

Chicago Defender
Chicago, Illinois

Machinists Deny Barring Negroes In Ohio Plant

JAN 2 1943

CLEVELAND — Amidst a barrage of charges and counter charges and an atmosphere electrified by the "extra judicial" remarks of Common Pleas Judge Frank J. Merrick, who last week dismissed the case of two Negro women denied war jobs. Mathew DeMore, president of the Cleveland machinists' union, flatly denied that his group had sought to bar Negroes.

DeMore's denial came in answer to the assertion of Charles L. Stilwell, president of Warner and Swasey company, world's largest manufacturer of turret lathes, that attempts to use Negro women were blocked by union strike threats. Stilwell made his assertion while on the witness stand and under cross examination in Merrick's courtroom.

While DeMore claimed that his union would tolerate no discrimination against any minority group when he was cross-examined he admitted that membership was left entirely to the shop locals.

Complete Demand

Stilwell claimed that DeMore and another labor leader had advised him to resist the hiring of Negroes. DeMore on the other hand, stated that the union had "never been consulted at any time" by company officials as to who they should employ. To further support his testimony that there is no discrimination in the machinist union, DeMore pointed out that a number of Negroes already have membership. He also offered to appear as a witness for the two girls.

The case has stirred the city until it is a seething inferno of indignation as a result of Judge Mericks' remarks. Upon dismissing the suit of the plaintiffs, the jurist delivered an hour-long harangue in which he reviewed the merits of President Roosevelt's executive order 8802. He said, "You can pass ten million laws and still not change the minds of a lot of people on this subject."

Judge Merrick's decision in effect upholds the right of industries to bar workers on the basis of race despite considerations of national interest or previous commitments of the companies.

JAN 2 1943

It was brought out in court that Warner and Swasey had agreed not to discriminate in its contract with the government, and by so doing had violated its terms.

Cite Contract

"In entering into a free contract with the government in which it was granted the use of taxpayers' money for the purchase of machines, the building of plants, and the acquisition of land, these defendant companies agreed not to discriminate against workers because of color or race," declared Clayborne George, one of the attorneys for the girls.

The case is an outgrowth of an attempt of two colored women, Claretta Johnson and Effie Mae Turner to seek a mandatory injunction forcing the Warner and Swasey company and its affiliate Thompson Products company, to give them jobs. Previously, they had been refused because of their race. They showed that they had fitted themselves for skilled positions by 240 hours of training.

Daily World
Atlanta, Ga.

LITTLE ROCK— (ANP)— More than 100 colored women are now working on the assembly line at the Arkansas Ordnance plant in Jacksonville, Ark. This plant is one of the few in the nation hiring Negro women to do skilled work at production, including supervisors, inspectors, and line leaders.

JAN 7 - 1943

Most of these women were referred to the employing firm by the Urban League of Greater Little Rock. A small number already employed in unskilled capacity were upgraded to production jobs, because of favorable performance.

Peoples Voice
New York, N. Y.

Aircraft Plants Hiring More Negroes on Coast

JAN 2 - 1943

Special

LOS ANGLES.—In response to a query as to the effect of Executive Order 8802 barring discrimination in defense plants under government contract, Eugene Johnson, supervisory interviewer at the aircraft hiring division of the US Employment Service, in charge of alien and minority group problems, told PV:

"We just can't get enough Negroes qualified for the positions open," Johnson explained that by "qualified" he referred to men not in the immediate draft classification. Altho one or two firms are still "reluctant" to hire Negroes in other than labor classifications and are being investigated by the War Manpower Commission, most of the 20 to 30 aircraft firms in the southern California area have begun to fall in line with No. 8802.

DIE-HARD FIRM CHANGES POLICY

JAN 2 - 194

One firm, North American, changing from a traditional policy of discrimination, has just hired five Negro production control clerks as trainees at $182 monthly. Two of the men are Vernon Ford, formerly a sergeant with the California State Guard, and Nate Moreland, well-known former manager of an East Side bowling alley.

On the whole USES finds that unskilled men are accepted readily, that women are required usually to have some skills, Johnson said, agreeing that this works particular hardship on Negro women applicants who have consistently been barred from experience.

JAN 2 - 1943

Two types of training are open to the war worker, Johnson stated, indicating that aircraft offers paid training, usually to the younger groups of men and women; and the national defense training setup offers free adult education training to all age groups.

Big Columbus Plant Agrees To Hire Negro Women

"Savannah Tribune"

AFTER REFUSING FOR 18 MONTHS TO USE THEIR SERVICES

Several Other Firms Asked To Follow Suit

JAN 14 1943

Columbus, O., Jan. 8 (ANP)— The hiring of colored women on Jan. 4 by the Timkin Roller Bearing company, one of the largest manufacturing establishments in this city, brought victory to an 18 month fight which has been waged by the militant Vanguard league.

Although hindered by many discouraging developments during the long period, the league never gave up. During the time a number of affidavits, charging the company with racial discrimination and violation of the President's executive order 8802, were sent to the FEPC. This action was suplimented with several conferences with the personned supervisor of the company, and by a series of letters to the officials of the firm.

JAN 14 1943

Last August, when FEPC inquired of the company in regard to its hiring policy, it replied that all the women being hired at that time were former employes and that it intended to start hiring colored women in October. The failure to hire colored women in October, as promised, caused the league to redouble its efforts. The company again stated, in late fall, that it intended to hire colored women as soon as their expan- probably by Jan. 1.

JAN 14 1943

League officials are quite jubilant over this victory and rank it along with the opening of Curtis-Wright, where more than 10 colored girls are now working. In addition to this number on production, there are two in the personnel department and two in the drafting department. The first colored girls went to work at that plant last April, after an investigation by the FEPC following a request from the league.

At present the labor committee is giving attention to several other plants which are still refusing to hire colored women, and is in the midst of a fight to get the gas company to hire Negro meter readers. As a result of a survey taken by the delegates to the recent Fellowship of Reconcilliation convention, where it was found that only six out of 100 persons objected to having Negro meter readers, the league is quite confident that the company will soon be hiring Negro meter readers.

Mobile, Ala., Register
January 24, 1943

Classes Are To Train Colored War Workers

Every effort is being put forth to train colored people that they may better serve the war effort, according to Prof. Benjamin F. Baker, principal of the Mobile Training School. He announces that the fourth of a series of classes will open Monday evening at 6:30 in the vocational building of the Mobile Training School.

474

These classes for the first time will admit women as well as men from 17 years up. Transportation is free to all who come from within 30 miles of the school. These first two classes will be elementary electricity and woodwork. Ten other classes in production will follow. He urges that young and old will take advantage of these free courses which are furnished by federal government through the State Department of Vocational Education. Prof. L. E. Scott will supervise these courses.

Amsterdam Star-News
New York, N. Y.

Bias Rampant at Air School

JAN 9 - 1943

TUSKEGEE, Ala.—Uncle Sam's aviation school here is gradually losing its usefulness, so far as colored Americans are concerned, as a result of the Army's Jim Crow policy, which is "breaking the hearts of our boys who are studying aviation." That's the consensus of local observers, who are wondering why something has not been done about it.

It wasn't always this way, of course, but since the arrival of Col. Frederick Kimble... the cadets have become convinced that the road to success (as an Army aviator) is a long, hard trail which will finally end in nothing more than some extra Jim Crow.

Matters like these are never discussed in public, but in private the cadets point to the things that are happening to Capt. Lloyd Sparks, a regular for 25 years in the U. S. Army.

JAN 9 - 1943

Captain Sparks was sent to Tuskegee as the "finance officer," but upon his arrival he received orders to remain in his barracks for five months. In the meantime, white officers continued to take care of all financial matters.

Before Colonel Kimble arrived Major Ellison was operating under a far different and much more democratic policy. It's generally understood, however, that local white objected to the manner in which Major Ellison conducted the Army's affairs and many people believe that he was ordered away because he insisted on following the democratic line...instead of Jim Crow.

Under Colonel Kimble, "colored" and "white" signs are posted over wash rooms. At first, the signs were torn down as fast as they were put up. Recently, however, Kimble told some of his men: "I am following War Department policy. I am putting the signs up and I dare anybody to remove them."

Even in the mess hall enlisted men are separated on a "white and colored" basis. Colonel Kimble is also quoted as saying that no colored officer will be promoted above the rank of captain as long as he is in command.

Will Necessitate Changes In Manner Of Handling Situation

Houston, Texas

By AL WHITE

WASHINGTON. — (ANP) — The terrific drain on the manpower of the nation necessary to supply the needs of the three great movements now afoot will soon bring about changes in the manner of handling the situation. Every one knows it is absolutely mandatory that the military and armed forces are supplied with manpower; they know it is equally obligatory to staff factories to keep the armed forces rolling; they know it is a positive fact that the great agricultural needs for manpower must also be met. Therefore, the serious problem. With the manpower resources dwindling, it is well to consider the situation as far as the Negro is concerned.

Looking back, Lt. Col. Campbell C. Johnson, aide to Brig. Gen. Lewis Hersey in the selective service system, recently stated that the percentage of Negroes in the armed forces had reached the objective of 10.6 per cent. Taking figures from a press conference held by Secretary of War Stimson, in which it was said there were now 5,000,000 men in the armed forces, this gives the Negro approximately 530,000 men in service.

JAN 2 3 1943

Under the new plans for manpower which eliminated voluntary enlistments from the navy and marine corps, placing their needs under the manpower commission, it is highly probable that the same rule will be applied to these two branches of the service; that is, the percentage quota. Through such an arrangement, the two branches would profit greatly. The type of recruit they would get would be far above those they have accepted from the Negro race in the past.

No definite plan has been worked out on this score as yet but it is giving the naval and marine authorities plenty to think about.

Women Replaces Men

In the industrial field, most of the men are being replaced in certain types of factory work by women. In some plants, women do all but the most laborious work. As far as the Negro is concerned, the males have almost reached the saturation point as far as being absorbed in industry is concerned. It is with the female Negro workers that difficulties are now arising.

JAN 2 3 1943

Negroes have made great gains in employment in certain industries, an outstanding example of which is the aviation field. In 1940, there were only 4,940 persons engaged in this work in the entire United States with no Negroes employed at all, except in menial posts. By 1941, the figure had grown to 360,000 with a mere 250 Negroes working at skilled and semi-skilled tasks. In September, 1942, an estimated 40,000 Negroes were employed in the field, a terrific increase over 1940. They are said to now represent 3-tenth per cent of the total employment in the aircraft industry.

It is pointed out that the greatest employment of Negroes in aircraft industries is on the west coast with Lockheed, Consolidated, Douglas, North American and Vultee showing the way.

Over in the east, where one of the great industrial centers lies, some 1,000 Negroes are employed in aircraft factories, with one employer alone using this number and crying for 600 additional. His chances for getting them apparently are very slender, it is reported.

JAN 2 3 1943

More Negroes in Shipyards

Negroes have made consistent gains in the shipbuilding industry, with the west coast and the busy yards of the east giving employment to thousands of colored workers. In the south, despite claims that there would be 10,000 jobs opened for Negroes following the Birmingham hearings, little has been accomplished except in the non-defense plants, the heavy industries and in one or two shipyards. In this section there is little importance attached to the training of Negroes for work in defense plants. In some instances, Negroes have been upgraded and given additional pay in shipyards which are under union domination.

In the Midwest, especially in the Detroit area, there may be some 2,00 or 3,000 Negro males unemployed. This is due to their own failure to try to get work. Most of the trouble in Detroit is due to the failure of manufacturers to hire Negro women. Thousands of white women are being hired, but Negroes are being given the go-by. This has led to the ordering of a public hearing by FEPC in this section, with certain companies being cited to the FEPC for failing to adhere to President Roosevelt's non-discriminatory order.

In New England, the work shortage has been partially solved by the sudden influx of Negroes from Harlem, who week-end at home after a full week in the defense plants. It is only in the smaller towns, it is reported, that difficulty occurs and this is chiefly in the employment of women.

JAN 2 3 1943

Pay has reached the point in practically all instances of equal pay for equal work whether white or black. The vexatious problem now remaining is the one of classification of workers and the upgrading.

JAN 2 3 1943

The old year was especially kind to Negroes on the whole although there are spots where much improvement could be shown. What 1943 offers remains to be seen and depends largely on the action of the War Manpower commission and its jurisdiction over and distribution of workers according to the needs of the triple giants America has to feed: the military forces, the industrial plants to keep production it is wanting, and the agricultural needs, the latter being the X or unknown quantity as far as solution is concerned.

The Daily Worker
New York, N. Y.

Negro Soldiers and Negro Labor

THE proportion of Negro soldiers in our Army is better than 10 per cent, while the Negro people make up less than 10 per cent of the nation's population. No one, therefore, can deny that the Negroes are making their contribution, and more, to winning the war for America's national existence.

Despite their readiness to fight and die for the nation, however, there still exists the vicious, un-American practice of discrimination against Negro workers in industry. It is estimated that 20 per cent of the unemployed in the nation are Negro, while in the matter of skilled jobs the bars are still up for Negro workers in most industries.

Some progress in breaking down this reprehensible discrimination has been made, but it is as yet only a beginning. What is involved is not only the democratic principle of equality of all Americans, but the vital question of winning the war. Just as Negro manpower is needed in the armed forces, it is needed in the war factories.

Manpower Commissioner Paul V. McNutt announced, early in the week, that several million more people will have to be added to the labor force in 1943. Well, here they are, ready to go to work!

It is necessary that the fight for jobs for Negro workers, and equality on the job, be pressed without a letup. The labor movement especially must keep the fight up in every factory and shop until the practice of discrimination is broken down. It must be fought in every union where it still exists.

Let's see to it that the Charter of the United Nations, for which the peoples of all colors are fighting and giving up millions of lives, is applied here now.

Roanoke Rapids, N. C. Herald

City Negress To Take NYA Defense Training Course

Another group of young men and women left this week for the National Youth Administration War Production Training Center in Durham. They will undergo training for work in defense jobs in the country. They are: Sara Cowan, Katherine Cobb, Margaret Pierce, James Jones, Horace M Boyd, Carroll C. Johnson, and William Frank Taylor. Another boy, Herman Whitley, left this week for Wilmington to begin a course in welding.

The first colored girl to leave this city with the N. Y. A. was Evelyn Knight who went to Elizabeth City to take a course in machine shop work.

After graduation these young people will be placed in vital positions in the many war industries which are now in operation.

Law Called Inadequate On Job Discrimination

New York N.Y.

APR 1 5 1943

The Committee on Discrimination in Employment of the State War Council says that conferences with employers have been found necessary to combat discrimination. In a review of its first year of activity, the Committee points out that laws alone do not get action.

APR 1 5 1943

Progress in Negro employment was reported. A survey of several New York firms showed an 80 per cent increase in Negro hiring compared to a 50 per cent general personnel increase during the past year.

47h-1943

Daily World

Atlanta, Ga.

Negro's Part In War Effort To Be Depicted In Radio Series

FEB 13 1943

How the American Negro is contributing to the war effort on both the battle and home fronts will be depicted in a new weekly radio series, "My People," to be heard over the Mutual network in cooperation with the Office of War Information, starting tonight 6 to 6:30 p.m. CWT (Atlanta's WATL will air the program here.)

Under the supervision of Dr. G. Lake Imes, distinguished Negro educator, editor, chaplain, and close associate of Booker T. Washington "My People" will feature guests from all walks of life.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Roland Hayes, noted Negro concert singer, The Lincoln University (Pa.) Chorus, Dr. Frank P. Graham, president of the University of North Carolina, and two prominent Negro educators, Dr. Mordecai Johnson, president of Howard University, and Dr. Fred D. Patterson of Tuskegee Institute will be on the February 13 broadcast.

The first program will also feature a dramatic tribute to Abraham Lincoln.

FEB 13 1943

George Zachary, chief of the OWI program service division will direct the programs.

Birmingham Post

Birmingham, Alabama

DETROIT FACES CAR, BUS CRISIS, 600 MEN NEEDED

FEB 15 1943

Transportation System Problems Almost Defy Solution

FEB 15 1943

By Brandt Ridgway

United Press Staff Correspondent

DETROIT, Feb. 15.—The Detroit transportation system, a major factor in keeping this most overburdened of all war production centers in operation, is in serious danger of breaking down unless 600 more employes are obtained soon to relieve regular workers, Fred A. Nolan, director of the street railway company said today.

Already, Negroes, bewildered ex-farm hands and willing but nervous women are lending a hand in the tremendous job of getting nearly one million people to and from their jobs daily, but more help will have to be forthcoming, Nolan warned.

Problem Defies Solution

Even in normal times transporting such a load would be a difficult job in a city where there are no subways, elevated lines or fast suburban trains, Nolan said. Now, with manpower acutely short, with gas rationing causing an increase in the passenger load daily the problem almost defies solution.

Nolan said he was afraid the situation would get worse before it gets better. He emphasized that the Government wants farm hands to go back to their agricultural jobs and, that new employes will be more difficult to obtain because of the recent Manpower Commission ruling which in effect freezes workers in their present work.

"Our passenger load has increased 50 per cent over a year ago but we cancel an average of 100 bus and street car runs every weekday morning because of the manpower shortage," he said. "That is why some people are left standing on a corner for half an hour at a time."

FEB 15 1943

20 Per Cent Negro

The company has taken unprecedented measures to solve the manpower problem. About 20 per cent of the operating personnel is Negro.

Nolan said Negroes handle the buses with as much pride as if they were liveried chauffers. The pay is good, too—$1.00 an hour with all the overtime they want at time and a half. Street car operators and conductors receive 90 cents an hour. There are 290 women conductors.

No women bus drivers have been hired yet, although two are in training. Nolan said he hoped the public would react favorably to women drivers.

The ex-farm hands have the most trouble. Many openly confess to passengers that they would rather be back plowing furrows than trying to get around on the city's spider-web street layout. Two street cars have gotten lost since the first of the year and nearly every day some bus driver makes a wrong turn and takes his passengers off the beaten path. It is common for a driver to admit to a passenger that he can't find a certain street.

"I've just been in town three days and I'm going by the map," is a stock answer to inquiries.

Nolan said he hated to think what would happen if the Office of Defense Transportation effect plans for cutting off 10 to 20 per cent of rolling stock.

"We eliminated 25 million bus miles and added it to street car mileage last year, but we can't do much more," he said.

The city has 906 street cars—127 of them salvaged from storage after the war began. There are 2200 buses, all fast moving machines that weave swiftly through traffic. Although they seat only 21 passengers, they often carry as many as 50.

Daily World

Atlanta, Ga.

Workers Needed At Pearl Harbor Bomber Plant

FEB 13 1943

Employment Is Termed Vital To National Defense

FEB 13 1943

Over sixteen hundred skilled and unskilled jobs are open to Negro workers at Pearl Harbor, and all applicants, between the ages of 18 and 62 regardless of his draft status are urged to accept this employment which is so vital to the defense program. The acceptance of qualified workers for positions at the Pearl Harbor Naval Base is given priority over all other Federal recruitment programs.

The base pay for skilled workers is $1.08 per hour and eighty-two cents per hour for unskilled workers. Time and one-half time will be paid for all over time over forty hours per week. Workers with higher degrees of skill will be paid more, and all appointees will be credited with eight hours per day on leaving the west coast for Honolulu.

FEB 13 1943

Information concerning these job may be obtained from the U. S. Civil Service Commission in the New Post Office and the Atlanta Urban League, Room 400, 239 Auburn Avenue, N.E.

The Atlanta Urban League will continue to remain open every night this month until eight o'clock so that all interested persons may register for work with the Bell Aircraft Company. All women, whether employed or unemployed, are especially urged to take advantage of this opportunity.

Daily World

Atlanta, Ga.

Intelligent Use Of All Workers Is Liberal Plea

FEB 9 - 1943

Best Workers Of All Races Will Be Kept After War

By ALVIN E. WHITE

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(ANP)—In a special research report by the American Management association, the question of the Negro worker has been thoroughly analyzed by personnel director and management experts, with a view toward the employment and integration of the Negro in industry. Privately printed and circulated, the report is a frank and open discussion involving questions which have baffled many government agencies.

FEB 9 - 1943

Arriving at a 10-point summary the AMA finds that there should be mutual cooperation between employe and employer. The report points out that Negroes can and have been trained for occupations requiring all levels of skill, as the lists of jobs on which colored men and women are now working indicates; the program of Negro integration requires, first, a firm declaration of company policy; personnel managers now know there is as much danger in not dealing with the problem of the Negro worker as there is in dealing with it ineptly; both the CIO and the AFL are officially committed to the policy of non-discrimination; successful integration of colored workers is predicated on a planned program of selection, induction, training and upgrading. intelligent use of the service of federal, state and local agencies as a source of selected Negro applicants and strategic placement of colored manpower in the plant will yield a substantial dollars and cents return to industry.

RAP TRAINING BARRIERS

Pointing out the limitations in training for Negroes in some southern states the report indicates there is now a considerable reservoir of skilled Negro labor, only a small fraction of which is being utilized in appropriate categories. It is estimated that 5,389,000 colored persons were gainfully employed in 1940. However, many of the men and women were on jobs far below what their actual or potential abilities would warrant.

In April, 1940, these employed Negroes made up 10.7 per cent of the work force of the country. Of the total of unemployed at that time, Negroes constituted 12.5 per cent. In June, 1942, the bureau of employment security indicated that "over 500,000 Negroes who should be utilized for war production are now idle because of the discriminatory hiring practices of war industries."

Making a strong plea for Negro women, the survey states: "Since the draft draws no color line and since large numbers of colored men have enlisted in the armed forces, the Negro woman as an industrial worker must come in for an increasing share of attention."

Discussing the future employment of Negroes, the report praises colored workers, who themselves by virtue of their performance and attitudes have won encouraging victories over tradition and prejudice.

"We must bear in mind that, for every step forward, the road back is twice as long and as hard. The Negro is surely plagued by such thoughts as these; 'Shall I be the first to go when the war is won?' 'Must I return to the jobs to which traditions has so long held me bound?'

The statement above 'After the war management is going to keep the best workers—Negro or white. Workers will not be kept for sentimental reason,' is thus significant for its implications. It gives assurance that a man's record of service shall be the determining factor in his retention on the payroll—not the color of his skin. It is, in fact, a pledge of management's good faith—a pledge that the efforts to consolidate the Negro's position and make him a more productive member of industry will not be relaxed."

Memphis Tenn. Commercial Appeal

February 7, 1943

WAR JOB APPLICATIONS ARE TRICKLING IN HERE

Thousands Of Men Needed For Farm, Industrial Work

DRAFT DEFERMENT CITED

Men are wanted—thousands of men, for the farms and for vital war industry, E. M. Norment, district supervisor of the United States Employment Service, said yesterday.

"We can use all the white production labor we can obtain for Memphis plants," Mr. Norment said. "These men must be between 18 and 45 and draft deferred. The jobs will pay from 65 to 78 cents an hour."

Chance To Get In War Work

Mr. Norment went on to say that men in nonessential industries especially were wanted and they should register at 122 Union. "Those persons of draft age, with children, have the chance to shift to war work now and should do so immediately if they wish to be deferred for military services. Few yet have applied," he added.

"I can place literally thousands of men in draft-exempt farm work," he said. "We need farm day laborers and hundreds of families to go to farms in Tennessee, Mississippi and Arkansas. I have been sending out 50 to 75 negro farm workers every week to Florida sugar plantations at 30 cents an hour. I can place 1000 to 1500 more. MidSouth farmers also are calling for help every day."

OVER

Farm labor should apply to 815 Arkansas, near the Harahan Bridge.

Shipyards Need Men

In addition, R. G. Williams, of the Kaiser Shipyards at Richmond, Calif., is sending out about 100 men a day to work in the shipyards and said yesterday he could use thousands of men. On these jobs, helpers and students are paid 95 cents an hour and craftsmen are paid $1.20 an hour. Mr. Williams is interviewing applicants at 195 South Second.

477

Two thousand common laborers also are wanted on a large war project at Kingsport, Tenn., and an interviewer for these jobs also is on duty at 195 South Second. Fifty cents an hour will be paid either for white or negro laborers, with time and a half for overtime. Free transportation will be furnished to Kingsport. Low-cost heated barracks and restaurants are located on the site. Trains will leave Monday and Tuesday nights for Kingsport.

Journal and Guide
Norfolk. Virginia

TRAINING CLASSES FOR WOMEN TO START SOON

477

PORTSMOUTH--The President's Committee on Fair Employment Practices has informed the Young Men's Civic Organization of this city that the conditions which barred the employment of colored women at the Naval Ammunition Depot are "in the process of correction" and that "qualified colored applicants will be given consideration for employment at an early date."

Compaints were recently registered with the FEPC concerning the refusal of personnel officers to employ colored women at the Naval Ammunition Depot because there were no separate toilet facilities there for race women.

Jan 2, 1943

These women were not allowed to work, despite the fact they were fully qualified and were sent to the depot from the labor board of the Norfolk Navy Yard.

The Young Men's Civic Organization in its complaint to the FEPC cited several cases of discrimination practiced at the Naval Ammunition Depot. The FEPC informed the organization by letter that its investigation revealed that this discriminatory practice would be discontinued.

JAN 2 1943

PLAN CLASSES

Meanwhile, it was learned that training classes for colored women will be started at Norcom High School "after the first of the year." This training will qualify women to be employed at the local government plants as trainee helpers.

Women wishing to enroll in the proposed classes may register or obtain further information at the Federal Employment Agency, Green and King streets, Portsmouth.

With practices of discrimination gradually being wiped out of federal war plants, it is expected that hundreds of colored women will be employed on the local production lines.

CORRECTED

JAN 2 - 1943

Following is the contents of a letter received by the Young Men's Civic Organization from George M. Johnson, assistant executive secretary of the FEPC:

"This is in further reference to your letter of October 22, 1942, in which you presented the complaints of Mrs. Arcola Shaffer, 1037 South street, Mrs. Lessie M. S. Harris, 1113 County street, Miss Mattie B. Scott, 832 Glasgow street, and Clarine Scott, 400 Green street, Portsmouth, Virginia, that they were unable to secure employment at the Naval Ammunition Depot because of their race.

"We are pleased to inform you that the Navy Department has reported to us that the conditions about which you complained are in process of correction and that the above named persons and other qualified colored applicants will be given consideration for employment at an early date."

477

Peoples Voice
New York. N. Y.

OWI Adds New Employees

477

The addition of two Negroes to the staff of the Special Services Division, Bureau of Intelligence, Office of War Information, was announced last week. They are Hylan Lewis, professor of social science at Talladega College, Ala., and Lewis W. Jones, research associate and instructor at Fisk University, Nashville, Tenn.

FEB 1 3 1943

The Worker
New York. N. Y.

End Jim Crow Label On Sun Yard Ships

FEB 1 4 1943

FEB 1 4 1943

477

(Special to The Worker)

CHESTER, Pa.—The ships that are sliding down the ways of Sun Shipbuilding and Drydock do not carry the Jim Crow label that the Pew family intended.

Out of the 32,000 workers in Sun Shipyards some 9,000 are now Negroes, but instead of being segregated in a separate yard, as Mr. Pew announced last May they would be, you can find Negro workers building ships side by side with white workers throughout the huge Sun Plant.

How did the change come about? The answer lies in something stronger and bigger than Mr. Pew—the war.

Let us go back a bit to last spring. There was a lot of pressure on Mr. Pew to hire Negroes in his Sun Ship domain on the Delaware River. The pressure came from the Negro people and from many other quarters, from the labor movement, from the FEPC and from the fact that labor was getting short.

PLANNED SEGREGATION

Mr. Pew responded. He announced on May 27, with considerable fanfare, that Sun Ship would hire 9,000 Negro workers. But these were to be segregated in a new, separate yard, to be known as No. 4.

FEB 1 4 1943

Wide criticism greeted this Pew plan, for its Jim Crow feature. Among other things, the charge was made that Mr. Pew, boss of the Republican reactionaries, was camouflaging himself as a benefactor of the Negro people for the purpose of keeping the Negro vote in line for the Pennsylvania Republican, anti-New Deal column, notorious for its defeatist approach to the war.

477

What has happened during eights months of the war to the Pew plan?

Last spring, Sun Shipyards had about 20,000 workers, of whom about 2,000 were Negroes, employed as laborers, helpers, maintenance and other unskilled jobs in the three yards.

Today, out of the 9,000 Negroes in the entire plant, more than half are working in the original three yards.

These 4,600 men are working there for the first time as welders, shipfitters, and in other skills, along with white workers.

Less than half of all Negroes are working in the new yard, No. 4, which was supposed to be the Jim Crow yard; there are white workers there, too, although the bulk of the men are Negroes.

Under pressure of enlarging the Sun Yards to 32,000 employes Mr. Pew was forced to compromise his Jim Crow plan.

FEB 1 4 1943

What better way could there be of celebrating than to intensify the struggle to make Mr. Pew abandon his Jim Crow plan in principle, as he has already been forced to do, in part, in practice?

Then Negro and white workers would be spread evenly throughout the plant, in regard to needs and skills, not in regard to color and prejudice and Pew's political plans to sabotage the war effort.

Already the experience of white and Negro workers in the same jobs is breaking down old conceptions. White foremen welcome Negro workers for their ability to make ships. Spokesmen for the International Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers, which Mr. Pew is still fighting in the courts, told The Worker they will continue their successful struggle against Jim Crow in Sun Ship.

FEB 1 4 1943

"Despite the fact that Sun Ship has not announced a formal change in its official policy of a Jim Crow yard, the actual results today," said Sarah Tullen, Communist Party organizer for Chester, "'are a mixed yard' that is a great achievement for the whole war effort."

Another achievement to be noted is that approximately 200 Negro women are working now in Sun Ship, not only in the offices, but also as welders, machinists, draftsmen and other production jobs.

Chicago Bee
Chicago, Illinois

Langston Univ. President To Manpower Body

JAN 3 1943

LANGSTON, Okla., Jan. 28—Dr. G. L. Harrison, president of Langston university, has been appointed as consultant in the professional and technical training division, bureau of training, War Manpower commission, effective as of January 5, for an indefinite period.

47A

In a letter to Dr. Harrison explaining his appointment, Paul V. McNutt, manpower commissioner, said, "During this period, your services will be without compensation from the United States.

"However, you will be reimbursed for actual and necessary traveling expenses in accordance with standard government regulations and you will be allowed $10 per diem, in lieu of subsistence, when you are away from your official headquarters, Langston, on official business connected with the War Manpower commission."

Asheville N. C. [illegible]
February 17, 1943

NEGROES TO BE GIVEN TRAINING IN WAR WORK

47A

The first Western North Carolina class to train negroes for war production will open today at Lee Edwards high school. It is sponsored by the state department of public instruction.

Included in the course are ship nomenclature, mould loft work, burning and shearing, making templates, constructing midship section of ship, and other related subjects. Trainees completing the course are taken on as shipfitter helpers at accepted rate of pay.

Anyone desiring information regarding the program should apply to Frank Y. Blanton at Lee Edwards high school or the U. S. Employment service office in city hall.

News
Birmingham, Ala.

Training Workers

There was a dearth of trained workers when this country got into the war. How great was the shortage is indicated in the report of the Alabama Department of Education that since July 1, 1941, its division of vocational education has recruited, trained and placed in war industries more than 60,000 persons.

MAR 6 - 1943

In normal times, Alabama has only around 125,000 workers in manufacturing industries. The training program, therefore, was equal to training half of the normal number of workers in the state's industry. The size of the job is emphasized by that fact.

There is still a reservoir of labor in the state, however, from which additional trained workers could be drawn. It contains unskilled Negro workers, women and older men beyond the age of military service. The training program still has work to do.

47h-1943

The Daily Worker
New York, N. Y.

Raps Jim Crow Policy In Nassau Plane Plants

ROCKVILLE CENTER, N. Y., March 21.—Prosecution in Federal and State courts faces war production plants in Nassau and Suffolk counties refusing to employ Negro workers. That was what Edward L. Carter, Jr., labor discrimination representative of the State War Council declared at a mass meeting of the Negro people held here at the Second Baptist Church.

War Council officials have been negotiating with company heads for more than a year to eliminate all discrimination in the employment of workers, Carter asserted. But the negotiations have met with failure in most cases, he stated, and a firmer approach to the problem is now contemplated.

The mass meeting, which was one of the steps now being taken by the Negro people of Nassau County to mobilize all the win-the-war forces to end racial discrimination, was presided over by Mr. Ernest Van Purnell, prominent Negro leader of this community, who declared at the meeting that:

"Our people are fighting and dying on battlefronts all over the world, yet here on the home front they are denied the right to earn a living in a war plant."

After the meeting, Carter conferred with a number of Negro workers who charged they had been denied employment at Nassau war production plants, despite their qualifications. Carter declared that, upon substantiation of the charges through examination of company files, he would institute a "show-cause" order on the companies as to the reason for the denial of the jobs.

MAR 22 1943

WAIT FOR JOBS

In a survey of the Rockville Center Negro community, conducted by a committee headed by Mr. Purnell, it was found that out of 1,000 people, more than 100 were anxious to take jobs in war production plants.

But the Nassau war plants, Sperry, Republic, Grumman, Ranger, employing close to 50,000 workers, have hired only a tiny fraction of the Negro workers, it is pointed out by leaders of the CIO here, who have been attempting to put an end to the practice of racial discrimination. Token hirings have taken place, but obviously only for the purpose of showing an adherence to the letter of the law and that is all.

MAR 22 1943

Three methods are used to keep Negro workers out of the war plants. The first of these is the application for employment, whereby many are disqualified by a lack of educational requirements, which are not essential for the work required. The second is a mechanical aptitude test, which has no relationship to the type of work in the war plants, and which the personnel departments of the plants utilize to eliminate applicants they do not want. Many Negro applicants are automatically eliminated at this point, due to their unfamiliarity with some of the questions, since out here the Negro people have had perforce up till now only the most menial of laboring and household jobs. Others who have felt that they passed the tests have been told they failed. When they have asked for their corrected tests they have been denied access to them.

MAR 22 1943

The third method used is that of outright refusal to hire Negro workers who have completed a six-to-twelve-week course in the training schools set up by the companies for training workers who have successfully passed the mechanical aptitude tests.

NEED WORKERS

This racial discrimination exists despite the urgent need by Sperry, Republic Aviation and Grumman Aircraft for workers to man their machines. Sperry, which has, for many years had an anti - Negro, anti-Jewish bias, recently changed from a three-shift eight-hour production day to two nine-and-one-half-hour shifts, because it did not have enough workers to man its machines. In addition, machines have been removed by the government because there are not enough workers to man them. This has taken place, despite the fact that there are more than 150 Negro clearers and building maintenance men within the plant itself who are anxious to go on the production lines, and hundreds more in the various communities who want to work.

MAR 22 1943

At both Republic and Grumman the workers are on 10 and 11 hour shifts, with many working Sundays, as a result of which plant efficiency is naturally lower than could be achieved if a three-shift, eight-hour day were in force.

To eliminate racial discrimination, the organizations of the Negro people and the CIO in Nassau and Suffolk counties propose the following program:

1—Preliminary classes to familiarize applicants with mechanical terms.

2—Giving of reasons by the personnel departments of the various companies as to why they refuse to hire, with an appeal from their decisions available.

3—Hiring of all who complete training school courses without discrimination, immediately upon completion of courses.

4—Utilization of all Negro cleaners and building maintenance men in the plants who wish to shift to the production line. Their places to be taken by older men and women, who are capable only of such work.

5—A campaign of recruitment of Negro workers in the Negro communities of Nassau and Suffolk counties.

MAR 22 1943

Chicago Tribune
Chicago, Illinois

NEGROES ASSAIL KNOX AND MORGENTHAU FOR RACIAL STAND ON JOBS

MAR 22 1943

The resignations of Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox and Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau were demanded yesterday by the National Negro council if they fail to end closed shop discrimination against Negro civil service workers in the navy yards and the bureau of engraving.

MAR 22 194

The council, backed by the Chicago Committee of 1,000, at a mass meeting in the Metropolitan Community church, 4100 South Park way, adopted a resolution declaring the secretaries continue to approve the closed shop policies of the AFL metal trades unions and printers' union which have denied membership or promotions to skilled positions.

Sen. Wayland Brooks was praised by the Negroes for his support of nondiscriminatory legislation covering labor practices.

MAR 22 194

Kansas City Call
Kansas City, Mo.

One of Every Four War Workers Will Be a Woman, Says P. V. McNutt, Who Is Head of War Manpower Commission

"Soon one out of every four workers in American war production industries will be a woman," War Manpower Chairman Paul V. McNutt announced today.

Four million women are now working in war plants, out of a total war labor force of 17,500,000 he said.

To meet 1943 war production goals, the number of women workers must increase, Mr. McNutt stated, until, by the end of the year, they will be filling almost 30 percent of all war production jobs. By that time it is expected that 6,000,000 women will be in war work.

"Women will play an even greater role, numerically and proportionately in the essential civilian trades and services which are necessary to maintain the war time economy. Here they are replacing men called to the armed services and those needed in the heaviest industrial jobs which women do not have the strength to fill."

JAN 29 1943

Aircraft Shows Rise

"Women are already being used in such traditionally male jobs as gas station attendants, taxicab and delivery truck drivers, butchers, mail carriers, and even construuction laborers. This trend will increase until by the end of the year as many as 45 per cent of the workers in these home front jobs will be women."

"In the direct war industries the proportion of women workers is rising rapidly," Mr. McNutt said.

In aircraft, the percentage of women workers rose from less than 5 per cent of total employment in 1940 to 17 per cent in September, 1942. By the end of next year, it is expected that there will be more women than men working in the industry.

The war industries employing the largest proportion of women workers in September are: electrical machinery with 36 percent women employees; communications equipment with 48 percent women; scientific and technical instruments, 34 percent, electrical equipment, 27 percent, small-arms ammunition, 35 percent, other ammunition 28 percent chemicals and allied industries 23 percent, rubber products 33 percent, and fire arms 22 percent.

Even in a heavy industry, such as ordnance, 19 percent of the workers are women. In the manufacture of guns of over 60 calibre, and tanks, both of which involve heavy metal work, the proportion of women workers is nine percent and 7 percent respectively. In the iron and steel industry itself, 9 percent of the labor force is made up of women.

Shipbuilding has held to the all-male tradition longer than any other war industry. Even here, however, there has been an influx of women workers in recent months, particularly in the government Navy Yards. At present only 3 percent of the owrkers in the industry are women, but this is expected to rise rapidly in the next few months. For example, one Alabama shipbuilding firm plans to employ as many as 1,000 women welders.

Mr. McNutt pointed out that the proportion of women in any industry varies widely from place to place. The degree to which women are used, he explained, depends on the degree of labor shortage in the area. Where the male labor supply is nearing exhaustion, industry will be willing to try women in more and more jobs for which only men would formerly have been considered. As the need has increased he said, women have demonstrated their ability to fill atmost any kind of job even including the so-called heavy manual jobs.

Examples of unusual work being done by women, as reported by the U. S. Employment Service offices during recent weeks follow:

At an Army proving ground an 18-year-old girl operates a 15-ton crane and an all-women crew fires and cleans a 90-millimeter and anti-aircraft gun. More than a thousand women are replacing men here in all types of war material — tanks, machine guns, trucks, and aircraft cannon.

Women guards are watching for fires and accidents at one aircraft plant and have been trained in jui jitsu in order to be able to deal with saboteurs.

JAN 29 1943

Unusual Work

In Arizona and Colorado mines, women are employed as ore-sorters, machine greasers and cleaners, aerial-team operators and sledgers. In one mine women wield an 8-pound sledge, above ground, of course.

The making of plaster molds for dies, an operation so precise that the slightest variation means a ruined job, is handled expertly by women with previous experience as artists, sculptors and pottery makers.

At least one woman—a former pianist—is operating a milling machine to shape impulse blades for steam turbines on our rapidly growing fleet of merchant ships.

Gyro-horizons and direction-indicators, instruments necessary for safe, accurate navigation of our army aircraft are so delicate that all work must be done in washed-air, ressure-controlled rooms. Women have proved themselves especially adaptable for this kind of work.

Two young women who were members of the clerical force of a large railroad are now working as crossing tenders for the same company.

Four women are operating giant overhead travelling cranes in a steel mill. JAN 29 1943

A Western railroad is employing women as engine oilers and wipers, turn table operators and hostlers' helpers.

A new saw-mill in New England is "manned" entirely by women. Automatic saws and special machinery to lift and haul heavy timber have been installed as a safety measure.

Two 20-year-old girls are gunners in an ordnance factory. It's their job to test 45 caliber ammunition as it rolls off the production line.

Nation
New York, N. Y.

IN AN EFFORT TO BOOST NEGRO MORALE the OWI is distributing 2,000,000 copies of a booklet entitled "Negroes and the War." Lavishly illustrated, it describes what American Negroes are doing in agriculture, industry, and the armed services, outlines progress made by Negroes in all fields during recent years, and refers to the achievements of outstanding Negro citizens. In addition, it discusses what an American victory will mean to Negroes and what they have to lose if the Axis triumphs. The OWI has done an intelligent and sincere job, and it is not its fault that other government departments persist in tearing down the edifice it is trying to build. The latest example of sabotage to come to light is the army's undermining of its much-advertised program for training Negro pilots and other air-force personnel. Unable to make any headway against prejudice, Judge William H. Hastie has resigned as civilian aide to Secretary of War Stimson, charging that the air force has not wanted Negro personnel from the beginning and that it is influenced by "wholly unscientific notions that race somehow controls a man's capacities and aptitudes." More than two years ago, Judge Hastie recalls, a plan for a segregated training center at Tuskegee was submitted to him. His detailed objections were ignored, and since then no projects affecting Negroes have been referred to him by the air command. Meanwhile, he says, Negro volunteers for the ground forces have been organized in "aviation squadrons (separate)" "without any specific military duties but with odd jobs of common labor the characteristic assignment." While attitudes like this persist, the best efforts of the OWI can hardly be expected to bear much fruit. FEB 6 - 1943

No Discrimination Used In Selection Of Factory Workers

Pittsburgh Courier
—Pittsburgh, PA.

FEB 20 1943

Plant Spirit Serves As Model For Entire Country to Follow

NEW BRIGHTON, Minn., Feb. 18—No American war plant producing ammunition has Negroes in as many diversified occupations as the Twin Cities Ordnance Plant operated by the Federal Cartridge Corporation at New Brighton, a suburb of Minneapolis and St. Paul, Minn.

Early in the development of the huge Twin Cities Ardnance Plant, Charles L. Horn, president of Federal Cartridge Corporation, made the statement that there would be absolutely no racial discrimination in the selection of employees for the plant. It has been carried out both in letter and spirit. This vast enterprise is a model for the entire country in this respect. FEB 20 1943

OCCUPATIONS VARIED

Negroes are now working side by side with their fellow-citizens of many other nationalities in virtually all departments within the plant. They are occupied as administrative assistants, department heads, engineers, foremen, supervisors, maintenance men, accountants, stenographers, machine operators, machinists helpers, nurses, millwrights, inspectors, move-men, greasers and oilers, custodians, sweepers, matrons and car-washers.

Opportunities for special training in technical schols are open to Negro employees showing special skills and aptitudes. Advancements are as available to deserving Negroes as to all other workers. Thus they find added incentive to perform their assignments to the limit of their abilities.

Negro employees are to be found holding positions with prominent groups within the operational structure of the Twin Cities Ordnance Plant. Among these are the Labor - Management Committee; the Safety Committee; and the Taxpayers' Committee which has attracted national recognition because of its unique nature and functions.

NEWMAN HEADS PERSONNEL FEB 20 1943

The Negro personnel section of the Industrial Relations division of this plant is virtually a pioneer in American industry. Headed by Cecil Newman, publisher of Negro newspapers in Minneapolis and St. Paul, this section has been active since the first Negro employee was hired. Mr. Newman, a recognized leader among the people of his race, has worked in close cooperation with the plant management to develop the Negro personnel program, and to formulate its policies. FEB 20 1943

One of the basic rules stringently observed by the Negro personnel section is to hire only those applicants who have been established residents of the Twin Cities area for a period of six months or longer.

Doors Opened Wide To Women Workers After 'Pearl Harbor'

Pittsburgh Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

FEB 6 1943

NEW YORK, N. Y., Feb. 4—As the world's foremost maker of communications equipment, the Western Electric company began employing women in its plants before the invention of the telephone, the manufacture of which formed 95 per cent of the company's peacetime activity. Pearl Harbor literally made of the company an "Arsenal of Communications," and its doors have opened wide to thousands of additional women workers who came to fill the breech created on the production front by men entering the Armed Forces.

Western Electric was one of the first large manufacturers to hire and train women for the production of vital wartime communications equipment and its list of jobs now performed by women is one of the most varied to be found in industry. FEB 6 1943

CITY WITHIN A CITY

In the company's several plants women serve the war effort as welders and riveters, engineers and doctors, guards, crane operators, truck drivers, foundry helpers, electric platers, electric testers and inspectors, millwrights and drill press operators—a lady locksmith.

At the company's largest plant where many thousands of employes inhabit a veritable city within a city of northern New Jersey—the number of women on the payroll has increased 150 per cent since January 1, 1942. In this plant well over half of the production army are women. Many who never worked in a factory before have become highly efficient producers. They are doing their bit to knock out the Axis powers—and doing it amazingly well.

Pittsburgh Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

MECHANIC PROMOTED AT TUSKEGEE 2-6-43

TUSKEGEE, Ala., Feb. 4-Mrs. Edith Reesee Wilson, first woman mechanic to be employed at the Tuskegee Army Flying school, has been promoted to mechanical helper according to Major William G. Williams, Sub-Depot Commander.

Mrs. Wilson is a former teacher in the Antenga County

Training school and holds a Bachelor of Science degree from Alabama State Teachers' college, Montgomery. Her husband, Private Wesley C. Wilson, is stationed at the flying school, as an outstanding member of the band. He is also a graduate of Alabama State Teachers' college and formerly was bandmaster at Alabama Reform school, Mt. Meigs. Mrs. Wilson is the daughter of R. G. Reesee of South Ripley street, Montgomery.

Star of Zion
Charlotte, N. C.

TWO SKILLED WORKERS REFUSED BY USES

MAR 18 1943

Fort Worth, Texas—Refusal of the U.S. Employment Office here to permit the registration of two Negro applicants for skilled employment was protested this week to the War Manpower Commission Placement Bureau in Washington, D. C. by the NAACP. MAR 18 1943

Both applicants Mrs. Demaris V. Alston and J. Henry Alston are Ft. Worth school teachers. Mr. Alston is a World War veteran and holds a master of arts degree. He charges that he was required to use a jim-crow side entrance at the employment office and was told that the only jobs open for Negroes were common labor on railroads or construction projects. MAR 18 1943

Mrs. Alston is a mathematics teacher and states she was told at the USES that Negroes are not considered for skilled or technical jobs.

Need for such workers has been widely advertised at the Consolidated the Globe and the North American Aircraft companies which have large plants in and near Ft. Worth.

The Northwest Enterprise
Seattle, Washington

King County Airport Calls Race Men and Women

●● We don't care what they are — Jewish, Negro or whatnot — just so long as they can do the job. Of course there are some restrictions. We prefer deferred men and men with dependents.

The Northwest Enterprise wishes to assure its readers that all advertiseemnts for employment are epersonally investiagted. We recommend the King County Air—Port. See their ad page

47h-1943
Pittsburgh Courier
Pittsburgh, PA.

THE WOMEN

GOLDEN OPPORTUNITIES BEING GIVEN COLORED PEOPLE BY INTRODUCTION OF WOMEN INTO INDUSTRY

JAN 9 1943

BY JOSEPH D. BIBB

AMONG the numerous startling and amazing changes that have been wrought by the effects of the war, there are none that stand out more prominently than the new status of the colored women. They have been literally catapulted into war industry, they have supplanted white women in menial tasks, and they have been enabled to almost write their own tickets for domestic work. These changes should bring about a transformation in the economic lives of the colored people in America and at the same time enrich the women in information and understanding of the problems facing their people.

Mr. Bibb

Only a few years ago the Susan B. Anthony Amendment gave women the right of suffrage and the colored women have taken an active, if not an inspirational part, in politics. They have made surprising progress and have made themselves felt in no small sense. They have evidenced a surprising facility for machine politics but have not surged to the front in shaping policies and correcting iniquitous systems that have for so long a time contaminated and corrupted our poltical endeavors.

WON SPURS IN BEAUTY BUSINESS

In business the women have done remarkably well with their monopoly on "beauty culture." They have made themselves independent in many instances and have undoubtedly proven that they could do business. But never before have they been so intermingled into basic industry as now. They have a splendid opportunity to acquaint themselves as to means and methods of the great American industrial systems. They also are being given the chance of virtually doubling the family income and to build up a more substantial stabilization for their race.

SHORTAGE of manpower has placed our women in clerical positions as well as in the plants and shops. They can now witness how the offices of big business operate as well as how the wheels of industry turn.

JOBS OFFER CHANCE TO HELP RACE

JAN 9 - 1943

The women are being given a golden opportunity to amass practical knowledge whereby the means and methods of destroying our traditional poverty can be achieved. If these opportunities are seized upon and utilized, untold benefits will accrue to the benighted race of colored Americans. Not only are financial opportunities being opened up but women are now being fortunately placed in position to more intelligently marshal the welfare of their families. The plight of minorities is being revealed to them and with understanding they can influence the entire social structure of their people as never before.

WHILE criticism of the public conduct of our women is becoming much too frequent, still there is hope that they will adjust themselves gracefully under the withering fire of condemnation that is being heaped upon them. It is to be expected that our women will have to learn by trial and error just how to adjust themselves into their new importance on the American scene. This writer believes that when they are sufficiently impressed that the destiny of their people is now within their keeping, that they will measure up and deport themselves without reproach. Our women must be made fully cognizant that the ultimate destiny of their people depends upon their handling of their new jobs with sensible grace and decorum.

WAR WILL NOT ALTER ROLES

Despite the fact that women have taken unto themselves the arduous tasks, that heretofore were assumed by men, notwithstanding the fact that the earning power of the weaker sex will now make them more independent, nevertheless they will remain as the tender inspirational sources for rugged mankind. They will continue to be the mothers of men and the homemakers for the American people. They will continue to rock the cradle and rule the world. The tender guiding, inspirational influence of women will be developed into a more vital force than ever before, because women now will be motivated not only by maternal instinct but by their intimate knowledge of the facts of life. Despite the multitude of woes that beset us, yet there are so many benefits that are enuring to us that sometimes we are led to believe that this is truly "God's War."

IF WE are to be benefitted economically, poltically, and spiritually by the unfortunate events that have caused such an upheaval, it surely seems that there is a "Divinity That Shapes Our Ends." Not only the valour of our soldiers, nor the stupendous efforts of our male war workers but the new role of our women seem inspired by heaven. Mothers and wives are now being given a new perspective, a new pattern for living is revealed and with the acquisition of money, it must follow that untold benefits must redound to us.

The women of our race have a superlative opportunity to win a place in the sun for us and we will be derelict in duties and remiss in our tasks if we do not guide and inspire them to aid us, the men, in uplifting ourselves out of the economic, social and political grooves that now imprison us. The women hold the cards that can help to win the game.

Advertiser
Montgomery, Ala.

WMC Takes Over Hiring Of Workers

FEB 5 - 1943

Assumes Control In 32 'Shortage' Sections; Labor Freezing Near

Mobile Affected

FEB 5 1943

Stringent Rules Framed To Prevent Migration From Plant To Plant

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4—(AP)—Chairman Paul V. McNutt announced tonight that the War Manpower Commission would take control of the hiring of labor in shortage areas, a step expected to freeze millions of persons to war industries or other tasks deemed essential.

Under the system, McNutt said, the Manpower Commission agencies approved by it will furnish workers to employers on a priority system based on the importance of the employer in the war effort. New barriers will be raised to prevent workers shifting from vital occupations to less essential ones, and limits will be placed on the authority of employers to fire workers assigned to them through the Manpower Commission.

The controls, it was announced, will go into effect "as soon as practicable" in "critical labor shortage areas" scattered throughout the country. The latest list of such critical areas, issued today, names 32 localities, but officials emphasized that the list may be changed before the hiring control takes effect.

Officials said that many other areas, where shortages threaten, can be brought under similar controls in the discretion of the WMC's 12 regional directors.

While provision was made for adjustment to local conditions, the McNutt order directed that no hiring be done in the shortage area without WMC supervision and approval, except:

Exceptions Listed

1. That done by small establishments, which "in general" are defined as non-manufacturing establishments employing less than 25 persons and manufacturing firms employing less than eight persons.

2. The hiring of domestic servants or "casual" (temporary) employes.

3. Hiring by State, county or local governments, unless they "voluntarily request" that they be put under WMC regulations.

The principal hiring operations will be handled through the U. S. Employment Service, but the order directed "maximum utilization" of "all existing hiring channels" which would operate under WMC policy regulations.

Specifically mentioned as such "channels" were private employer, labor organizations, professional organizations, schools, technical institutions and government agencies.

FEB 5 - 1943

The hiring agencies are directed to:

1. Refer workers to jobs which "will utilize their skills most effectively in the war effort."

2. "Accord priority to employers engaged in essential activities, in the order of the urgency of their activities. . . ."

3. Place workers in jobs "on the basis of their qualifications" and without discrimination as to race, color, creed, sex, national origin or, except as required by law, citizenship."

Must Get Release

The order stipulated that persons "engaged or most recently engaged in essential activities can be employed only by an employer for work in another essential activity." Even then they can only be employes when released by the previous employer or a WMC representative.

On the other hand, it guaranteed that "insofar as it will not interfere with the effective prosecution of the war."

1. "No worker shall be obliged to accept or continue in employment which is not suitable."

2. "No employer shall be obliged to retain in his employ a worker who is incompetent. . . or who fails to conform to reasonable shop rules or standards of conduct."

FEB 5 - 1943

This paragraph implied, officials said, that employers would be prevented from "arbitrarily" firing workers referred to them by the WMC agencies. Such controls, the officials explained, were necessary to make the hiring program effective.

McNutt today published a new list designating 32 cities as areas of critical labor shortage.

Bath, Maine; Beaumont, Texas; Portsmouth, N. H.; Somerville, N. J.; and Sterling, Ill., appeared as new additions while Elizabeth City, N. C.; Newport, R. I., and Sturgeon Bay, Wis., which had been on the last list, were dropped.

FEB 5 1943

Mobile Included

Other cities listed were Akron and Dayton, Ohio; Baltimore and Elkton, Md.; Bridgeport, Hartford, New Britain and Waterbury, Conn.; Brunswick and Macon, Ga.; Buffalo, N. Y.; Charleston, S. C.; Cheyenne, Wyo.; Detroit, Mich.; Hampton Roads, Va.; Las Vegas, Nev.; Manitowoc, Wis.; Mobile, Ala.; Ogden, Utah; Panama City, Fla.; Pascagoula, Miss.; Portland, Ore.; San Diego, Calif.; Seattle, Wash.; Springfield, Mass.; Washington, D. C., and Wichita, Kansas.

It was indicated that names of other cities probably would be added to the list later, and that some might be dropped as their labor problems become less acute.

Chattanooga, Tenn., Labor World
January 8, 1943

AWARDED SCROLL OF ACHIEVEMENT

William Y. Bell Jr. Praised for Work in Negro Defense Work

W. Y. Bell Jr., executive secretary of the Atlanta Urban League, recently was chosen by Eta Omega, graduate chapter of Omega Psi Phi fraternity, as having made the outstanding record of achievement among Negroes in Atlanta for 1942.

An achievement scroll was awarded with appropriate ceremonies at a public meeting, which also saw J. H. Calhoun Jr., local business man, recognized as the outstanding Omega man in the fraternity's honor roll contest. Bell does not belong to the fraternity.

Made in connection with the fraternity's observance of "National Negro Achievement Week," Bell's award was based upon his leadership of the successful effort to secure defense training for Negroes.

"He has also been active in other phases of Negro life in connection with his duties as an official of the Urban League, as well as other civic and social movements," the citation read.

This year's winner of the citizen's award is the son of Bishop W. Y. Bell, Georgia C. M. E. Church prelate who holds a Ph. D. from Yale.

After finishing Clark High School here, Bell did his college work at Northwestern University, received his Master's degree from the University of Pittsburgh on a National Urban League fellowship, and did two years of graduate study in the Howard University school of religion.

He has done casework in Chicago and was general secretary of the Washington Community Center in Hamilton, Ohio. He returned to Atlanta two years ago after a lapse of nine years to take the Urban League position.

Amsterdam Star-News
New York, N. Y.

The Fight for More Jobs

JAN 9 - 194

"THE NARROWING of job opportunities for Negroes is not due altogether to race, but in a large measure to economic conditions," declared John J. Corson, director of the Bureau of Employment Security, in an address at the 52d annual conference of Tuskegee Institute recently. He was urging Negroes to take advantage of expanding employment opportunities to prove their skills and capacities so that they can hold a larger margin of jobs after the war.

"Now that the war is on and manpower is in great demand," he continued, "competition for jobs among various groups is relaxed."

Dr. William Haber of the War Manpower Commission said that by the end of 1943 there will be 20,000,000 men and women in war industries. Emphasizing the importance of training and full utilization of available manpower, Dr. Haber said that more than 13,000,000 men and women will be trained for war jobs in 1943 and that 3,000,000 workers may have to be taken out of less essential industries and put into essential war work so our 80-billion-dollar war production program can be achieved. Another speaker, Kendall Weisiger, War Manpower Commission consultant, advised: "The important job is to build good-will and attack your pertinent problems one by one through well-organized committees of distinguished Negro leadership. Among concessions you should first seek to obtain from the white South are economic or job opportunities, equal educational opportunities and equal hospital facilities."

JAN 9 - 194

In a measure, these pertinent statements contain basically sound advice for a minority race seeking its rightful place in America's economic pattern. There is a growing concern among sober thinking leaders that much of our enlightened efforts to win better conditions for the Negro will go for naught unless we do as Mr. Corson advises. There is no denial of the fact that there are many jobs being opened both in private industry and in war plants that have in former times been consistently denied the Negro. With doors partly open and others thrown completely open, there is no excuse for Negroes not taking advantage of the new opportunities. Yet, that is what is happening. Right here in New York City certain kinds of jobs are going begging to be filled. The competition for these jobs in private business has been partly dissipated because of the war. It is to our advantage that we grab every opportunity to fill jobs of all kinds with competent Negro workers and see that the workers who get the jobs make good, so that we can hold some of our gains after the war is over. As Mr. Corson pointed out, "This is the time for Negroes to take advantage of employment opportunities to prove their skills and capabilities so as to be in demand for a larger margin of jobs after the war."

JAN 9 - 1943

The building of good-will, as noted by Mr. Weisiger, is more difficult, since the Negro faces in many places a deep hostility based on color which even the war has not erased. Naturally, we would like to see everything adjusted in a spirit of good-fellowship and mutual interests, but it takes two sides to settle differences, and both must be willing or the work is not worthy of the effort. There could be, however, a better organization of our leadership. There seems to be too much duplication of purpose as well as effort by our established agencies and a lack of harmony among them that does neither the agencies nor the people they are working for much good. He seems not to be familiar with the fact that Negro leadership in the South has for years carried on a vigorous fight to wring economic and job opportunities, equal educational opportunities and equal hospital facilities from the white South with little success. That is where Bilbo, Talmadge, Dixon, Wilkerson and the others come in.

We fervently hope that of the 13,000,000 men and women who will be trained for war jobs in 1943, as pointed out by Dr. Haber, at least a representative percentage will be Negroes, and that of the 20,000,000 men and women in war industries he speaks about for 1943, at least 15 per cent will be colored. That would enable the Negro to take further advantage of expanding employment opportunities and give them the chance to prove their skills and capabilities that they might hold a larger margin of jobs after the war.

Atlanta, Ga. Journal
January 10, 194

Fullest Use of Negro Manpower In War Service Demanded

Washington, D. C.—Asserting that "the Negro views the imminence of compulsory service with real alarm because it threatens to freeze him at his present employment level, which is substantially below his ability," Leslie Perry, administrative assistant of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, submitted a statement to the Pepper Sub-committee on Senate Resolution 291 providing for a full investigation of the manpower resources of the nation and their most advantageous use in the war effort.

The NAACP expressed "deep and vital" concern with the implications involved in proposed compulsory service legislation before there has been a maximum utilization of existing manpower and suggested certain patterns and areas of discrimination based upon race and color which it urged the committee to explore to their logical conclusion with the view to providing remedial measures.

"The whole history of job training for defense work in the south," said the NAACP, "shows the willingness to capitulate to local and sectional prejudices."

The statement directed attention to the relegating to and restricting of Negroes to subordinate services from which qualified and educable Negroes are not upgraded.

The statement further charged that industry has so far failed to give even token employment to Negro women at a time when white women have been widely integrated into the training and employment picture.

Peoples Voice
New York, N. Y.

LABOR

By FERDINAND SMITH

National Secretary of the National Maritime Union, CIO; Co-Chairman of the Negro Labor Victory Committee of Greater N. Y.

FEB 13 1943

In this war for national liberation, the Negro people must win their right NOW to produce material with which to achieve victory. They must have the right to sail the ships, fly the planes, run the trains—they must be allowed to take their rightful place in American life.

FEB 13 1943

President Roosevelt's Executive Order No. 8802 issued at the time when our nation is waging a war of survival against the foes of freedom, is comparable to the great Emancipation Proclamation of Abraham Lincoln in the year 1863. Now as then, the purpose of this proclamation is to achieve the maximum unity of the American people, regardless of race, creed, color or national origin, to effectively defeat the enemy.

President Roosevelt has ordered discrimination to cease in war industries because of color, race, creed or national origin. The railroad industry is the key war industry of our country; yet the Negro railroad workers find the discrimination-as-usual policy, the order of the day.

Joseph B. Eastman, Director of the Office of Defense Transportation estimates that by Spring of 1943 a shortage of 500,000 railroad workers will exist. There is a tremendous reservoir of Negro manpower that must be tapped.

Mr. Paul V. McNutt, Director of the War Manpower Commission has appealed for an end to anti-Negro discrimination in employment on the railroads in an address before a meeting of the railroad division of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers. He said, "Prejudice and discrimination which limit the use of Negroes must go down. Were the employment practices of many railroads to be applied to American industry as a whole, millions of American Negroes, instead of turning out the ships, shells and planes and guns America needs for victory, would be immobilized for the duration of the war."

What will it mean to the Negro workers if thousands upon thousands of them are immobilized for the duration of the war because of narrow prejudices practiced by the railroad companies? This attitude means that the railroads are not yet convinced that in a people's war all the people must take part.

FEB 13 1943

This is a people's war and must be fought and won by ALL the people. The fight on the production front is an integral part of our whole fight for victory—the railroad industry is an extremely important part of the production front and if the railroad companies continue their business-as-usual policy, our transportation system will be seriously impaired. What would follow that? Much valuable time will be lost in getting the war materials to our allies and to our own fighting men and women.

FEB 13 1943

Negro men and women are increasingly working side by side with white men and women to produce the much needed war materials—Negro men and women must be allowed to deliver these materials. And they must be allowed to do it NOW!!!

The President's Committee on Fair Employment Practice ordered a hearing on discrimination in the railroad industry which was to have taken place on January 25-26 and 27, 1943. On January 11, 1943, Mr. Paul V. McNutt, Chairman of the War Manpower Commission issued an order 'indefinitely postponing' these hearings. This followed upon the heels of the defeat of the Anti-poll-tax bill, which was brought to a vote in the 77th Congress after gathering dust in the cubby-holes of Congress for many years.

The labor movement is the natural ally of the Negro people and all minorities in their struggle for recognition as Americans. Today, the role of the labor movement must be an offensive against the defeatist, anti-administration, lose-the-war spokesmen who have intensified their organization for 'white supremacy', lynch terror, denial of franchise to 4,000,000 Negro men and women and 6,000,000 white men and women, and who, through their vicious pro-fascist propaganda are attempting to introduce Hitler ideology into the American scene.

Today, the labor movement must intensify its offensive for a strengthened and effective Fair Employment Practice Committee. Just as the Congress of Industrial Organizations has set into motion a committee on discrimination under its national banner, so must the American Federation of Labor set into motion a similar committee. Such a powerful combination of unified labor, with the aid of Negro and white church, fraternal, civic and community organizations can guarantee democracy.

Milton Starr Leaves OWI

Pittsburgh Courier

MAY 15 194

WASHINGTON, May 13—(ANP)—Milton Starr, adviser on minority affairs in the Office of War Information, and target for considerable complaint from Negro groups resigned last week to take a job with the War Production Board as a dollar-a-year man.

Gardner Cowles, director of OWI's domestic branch, after some hesitance, confirmed the report that Starr had gone but said that he would still co-operate with the propaganda agency in his spare time.

MAY 15 1943

47h-1943

The Worker
New York, N. Y

1300 Alabama Negro Women Fight Job Bias in Plane Plant

APR 8 1943

By Rob F. Hall

(Special to The Worker)

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — Thirteen hundred Negro citizens—ninety per cent of them women—joined in a demand to the Bechtel-McCone-Parson Airplane modification plant that the company immediately discontinue its policy of refusing to hire Negro women in the local plant and urged an increase in the number of Negro men employed.

The action came at a mass meeting at the great Sixteenth Street Baptist Church here, called by the Citizens' Committee for Jobs and Job Training.

APR 11 1943

Bechtel-McCone-Parsons, a subsidiary of a company by the same name operating in California, has almost completed construction of a plant which will employ 22,000 workers, of which about 13,000 will be women. Although one-third of the population of Jefferson County is Negro, the company has so far instituted training for less than a hundred Negroes, all of them men.

Resolutions passed unanimously by the enthusiastic women included:

1—To President Roosevelt, asking for his intervention to remove discriminatory policies, and urging specifically action in the BMP plant.

2—To the Bechtel-McCone-Parsons management, for the immediate inclusion of Negro women in the training program.

3—To War Manpower Commissioner McNutt, urging action to guarantee the employment of Negro women, the expansion of facilities for training Negro men; and calling for the elimination of discrimination in the local USES.

4—To the local U. S. Employment Service and Vocational Training authorities, demanding equitable facilities for Negro men and women.

ALL MANPOWER

In a keynote speech, Dr. James E. Jackson, secretary of the Citizens Committee, declared: "If we are to achieve a speedy victory in this war and reduce to a minimum the cost in lives, then we must now, immediately, without further delay, make full use of all available resources and manpower, in this favorable moment for taking the offensive in a second front against the Axis."

APR 11 1943

Support of the white population of Jefferson County was voiced by W. O. Hare, state secretary of the American Federation of Labor, Mike Ross, international representative of the Mine Mill and Smelter Workers Union, representing the CIO, and Mrs. Pauline Dobbs, president of the Victory Youth Council.

Included among the speakers and sponsors of the meeting were representatives of every important organization of the Negro people in this area, the SNYC, the NAACP, the Elks, Masons, Federation of Colored Women's Clubs, the YWCA, and leading Church figures of every denomination.

PM
New York, N. Y.

Katherine Gay, employed at the Solar Manufacturing Corp., represented the 2000 Solar employes when they received the Army-Navy E from Sgt. William J. Caldwell, wounded Guadalcanal hero, at the Bayonne, N. J. plant.

APR 15 1943

The Northwest
Enterprise
Seattle, Washington

NEGRO MOTORMEN, CONDUCTORS, CONDUCTORETTES LOS ANGELES ST. RY

FEB 10 1943

LOS ANGELES, Calif. — Twenty-five Negro workers of the Los Angeles Railway Company have already been upgraded from menial jobs to mechanical and other departments. All applicants for motorman, conductor, conductorette and mechanical jobs with LARY must register at the U. S. Employment Service, 11th and Flower streets. NOWHERE ELSE!

FEB 10 1943

Negro motormen, conductors and conductorettes will be hired and upgraded by the Los Angeles Railway Company, it was announced here Monday by the Negro Victory Committee.

FEB 10 1943

An achievement equalling the Victory body's mass march of 2,000 Negro women on the United States Employment Service last year, LARY'S capitulation followed conferences between Victory Committee chairman, Rev. Clayton D. Russell, the railway president, T. B. Haris, and spokesman for the railyway AFL union in the offices of Guy T. Nunn, in the minorities division of the War Manpawer Commission last Friday.

FEB 10 1943

This meeting grew out of the giant mass meetings of the Negro people called by the Negro Victory Committee with the cooperation of the railway unions.

Preliminary to Friday's climatic conflab, Victory Committee and union representatives met hard-hitting Government man Guy Nunn in undisclosed sessions Monday, aJn. 18. Here detailed plans were laid for the final conference with the company.

Guardian
Boston, Mass

Investigator's Records Find Them Among Best And Efficient Producers

MAY 6 1943

Several shipyards where thousands of Negro workers are employed in skilled, semi-skilled and unskilled capacities were cited this week by a Senate investigating committee among "the best and most efficient producers" of Liberty Ships and naval vessels.

Given special commendation on performance records by the Special Committee Investigating the National Defense Program, of which Senator Harry S. Truman, is chairman were the Newport News Shipbuilding and Drydock Company of Virginia and its subsidiary, the North Carolina Shipbuilding Corporation of Wilmington, N. C.

MAY 6 1943

War Manpower Commission employment reports indicate that in November 1942, more than 8,200 Negroes were employed as machine operators, blacksmiths, painters, dismantlers, stage builders, riggers, bolters, drillers, slab benders, erectors, riveters and in a number of other skilled and semi-skilled capacities at the Newport News yards, and that more than 5,300 Negroes were employed in similar capacities by the North Carolina Shipbuilding Corporation. Negroes constituted 27.4 per cent of all employees in the Virginia yards and 29.8 in the North Carolina yard.

MAY 6 1943

Other yards discussed in the Shipbuilding and Shipping Report of the Truman Committee included the Richmond, Cal., yards of the Kaiser Company where more than 6,100 Negroes are employed as boilermakers, shipfitters, shipwrights, stage riggers, joiners, sheet metal workers and in other capacities; the Bethlehem Fairfield yards in Baltimore, Mr., where more than 6,200 Negroes are working in skilled, semi-skilled and unskilled capacities, and the Calofirnia Shipbuilding Corporation where hundreds of Negro workers assisted in the construction of the SS Booker T. Washington, first Liberty Ship named for a Negro. The SS George Washington Carver was recently launched at the Kaiser Richmond Yard No. 1, and the SS Frederick Douglass is now being built in the Bethlehem-Fairfield Yard.

Bystander
Des Moines, Iowa

Lt. Oxley Speaks To NAACP Youth

MAY 8 1943

Lt. Lawrence Oxley of the War Manpower Board addressed a meeting of the NAACP youth council in 12th Bapt. Church last Sunday afternoon.

Oxley is touring the New England States in the interest of colored workers, to see that they get a fair share of employment in the war industries Noting that gains have been made in several New England factories, he seemed pleased by the prospect of still greater opportunities for employment as young people become trained for skilled occupations.

MAY 8 1943

Oxley, a farmer resident of Boston, was an officer in World War No. 1.

Girls Placed As Inspectors In Buffalo Plant

Courier
Pittsburgh Pa

NEW YORK, July 29—(ANP)—Announcement this week by Acting Examiner in charge Edward Lawson of the New York regional office of the Fair Employment Practice committee (FEPC) that three girls had gone to work as government inspectors at the Curtiss-Wright plant in Buffalo, marked an important victory for FEPC. The girls, the first Negroes placed as Government inspectors in the plant, secured the posts only after intercession in their behalf by an FEPC representative.

As a result of the FEPC's work, four additional Negro girls have also been placed as Government inspectors at the Flexible corporation, a subsidiary of Curtiss-Wright.

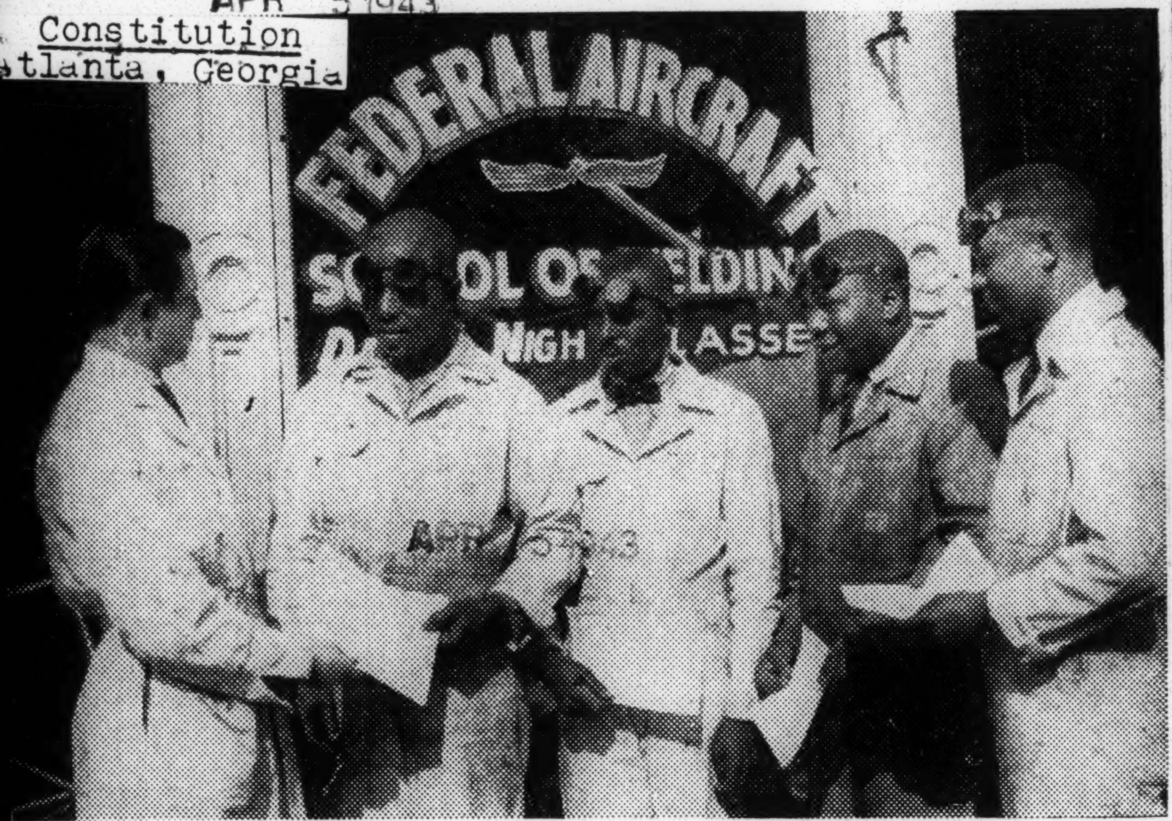
JUL 31 1943

The three Curtis-Wright inspectors, Bernice Plummer, Lucille Crawford and Rosalie Evege, were among the persons completing a 10-week training course at Burgard and technical high school in Buffalo early last spring.

First Graduate Welders Leave For High-Paying Defense Jobs!

APR 5 1943

Constitution
tlanta, Georgia



The above photograph shows the first group of graduates receiving their diplomas. With Oliver Bolding, instructor, they are (left to right) W. E. Johnson, J. L. Owens, Fred Jackson and James Hayes. These four men are leaving at once for New York to take high paying jobs in an aircraft plant. Jobs were secured for these men by the school two weeks before they graduated!

APR 5 1943

474

You Can Be the Next to Step Into a War Production Job in Aircraft Welding

Trained welders are in demand for hundreds of war production jobs all over the country. A short course in our school will qualify you for one of these jobs. Tuition rates are reasonable. It is to your advantage to ACT NOW.

5 1943

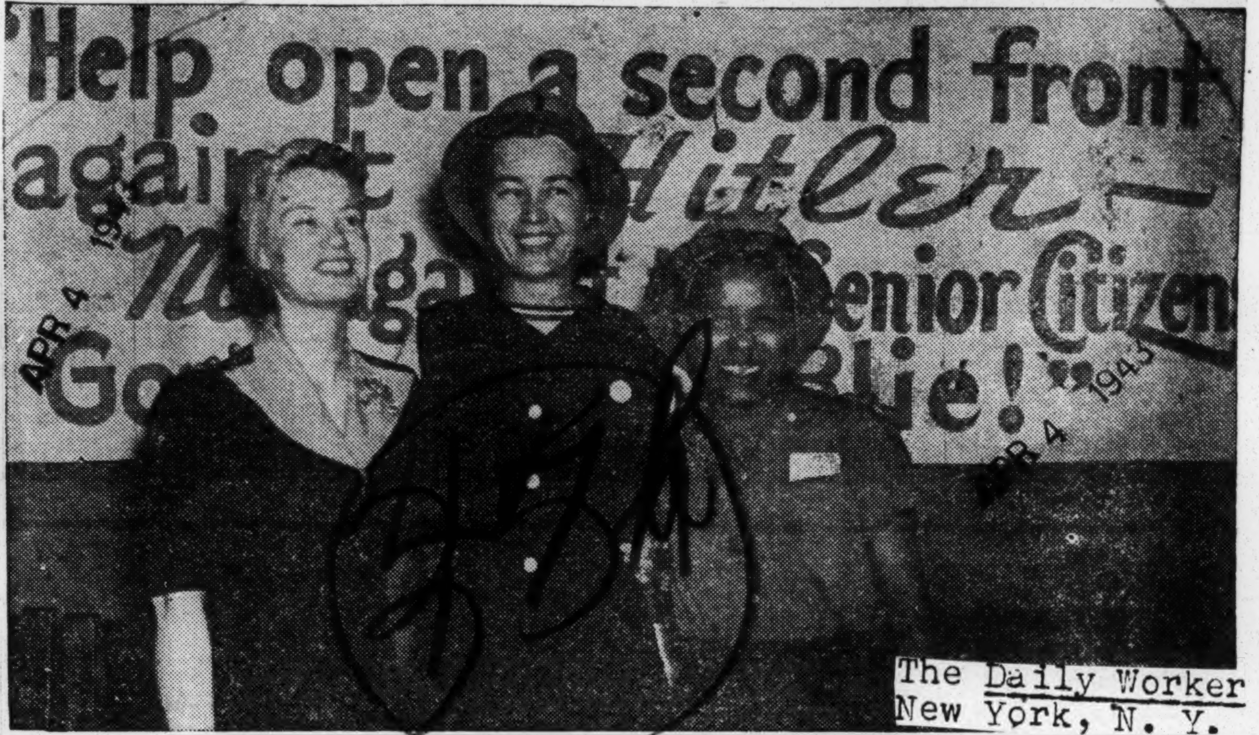
MEN and WOMEN are Needed!

Day and Night Classes

FEDERAL AIRCRAFT SCHOOL OF WELDING

166 Decatur St., S. E. APR 5 1943 Atlanta, Ga.

WOMEN SOLVE A SEATTLE SHIPYARD MANPOWER PROBLEM



'Help open a second front against Hitler
Senior Citizens
APR 4 1943
APR 4 1943

The Daily Worker
New York, N. Y.

Three of the first women dispatched to shipyards in Seattle when the AFL Ship & Dry Dock Workers led the way in meeting a critical labor power problem in this war production area by dispatching women through their hiring halls. APR 4 1943

The women brushed off discrimination. White and Negro women work happily side by side. From left to right: Erdine Stallcop, who has been transferred from scaling to a sheet metal training course; Karen Falkenberg, leadwoman at Associated Shipyards, and Celeste Brooks, who also works at Associated. APR 4 1943

Said Hollis Matheny, union business agent: "The number one job of women scalers is the number one objective of the nation—winning the war against the Axis in the quickest possible time." APR 4 1943

The Daily Worker
New York. N. Y.

Search for 'Miss Negro War Worker' Gets Going

APR 24 1943

Who is Miss Negro War Worker?

She will be chosen from among the thousands of Negro girls now employed in the war industries and will be presented in Madison Square Garden at the Negro Freedom Rally June 7, the committee sponsoring the meeting announced yesterday. The committee is at present contacting the personnel departments of several large plants, as well as trade unions and other organizations, in its search for the young lady, who will be given a $25 War Victory Bond at the rally.

474

The selection will be made on the basis of the girl's production record, her sale and purchase of war bonds and stamps, and general personal character.

Miss Dorothy Funn, secretary to the committee, stated that it would be pleased to receive the names of candidates from various industrial plants, churches, unions, clubs or any other organizations.

A group of judges from the members of the Peoples Committee, the Brooklyn Committee and the Negro Labor Victory Committee will decide. APR 24 1943

May 25 has been set as the deadline for entries to be received at the office of the Negro Freedom Rally Committee: Room 43, 67 W. 125th St.

Large blocks of tickets have already been distributed among church, union and fraternal organizations, the committee stated.

A call for volunteer actors to take part in a dramatic spectacle, "For This We Fight," by Langston Hughes, has been issued by Frank Griffin. Volunteers to appear in the cast, which will star Paul Robeson and Canada Lee, are urged to see Mr. Griffin at Room 43, 67 W. 125th St., evenings between 6 and 8 P. M.

Mobile, Ala. Register
September 9, 1943

Addsco Negro Workers To Be Guests At Show

474

All negro employes of Alabama Dry Dock & Shipbuilding Company have been invited to bring their families to a show to be presented by the company at Hartwell Field Sunday night at 8 o'clock.

The show will be a repetition of the performance given last Sunday night for workers who participated in a month-long attendance contest between welders, burners, chippers and heaters. The presentation is composed of 15 acts, including singing, dancing, circus and vaudeville talent, all of which was recruited among the shipyard's employes.

Those attending the show will not be required to have tickets. Each worker who displays his badge at the gate may bring his entire family.

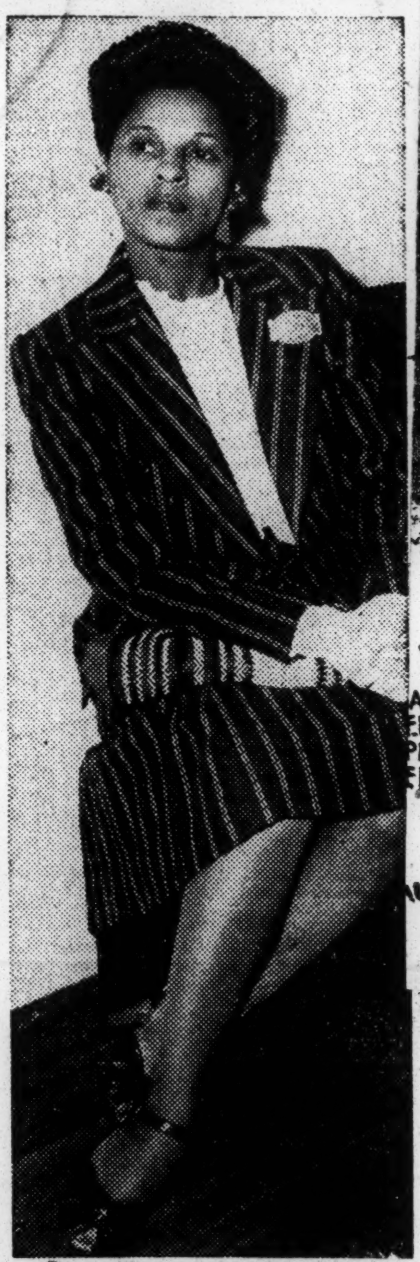
47h-1943

'MISS NEGRO WAR WORKER' ACCLAIMED

Pittsburgh, Pa. Courier

(Picture Story by Billy Rowe)

NEW YORK, June 10—Belle Calhoun, chief wire operator of the Lincoln Manufacturing company, was chosen "Miss Negro War Worker" after careful examination of the work and war activities record of candidates from many plants, factories and other defense establishments. She is considered typical of the Negro woman worker.



She was not specifically trained for the work she is now doing but faced all the bitterness of job discrimination "just working hard" for many years. When the time came for women workers to take over the jobs left vacant by men who were called into the service of the country, Miss Calhoun responded immediately, and since then has established a unique and enviable record.

JUN 12 1943

She is an example to all defense workers — men and women, Negro and white—in the matter of absenteeism. In fact, she has been neither absent nor late since she went to work for her present employer. Her record of bond purchases is astounding. She has already purchased her tenth bond.

For the excellence of her work and her contributions toward increasing production, she has been promoted to her present post of chief operator. Her wages have been steadily advanced by the company in recognition of this fact. She is a member of the labor management of her plant and in this capacity, according to her employer, H. Gould, has considerably according to her employer, H. Gould, has considerably aided in maintaining harmonious relations between management and labor, thereby guaranteeing uninterrupted production for the war.

JUN 12 1943

She is a shop steward of Local 36, Wire and Metal Workers' Union, CIO, and a leading force in her shop in promoting trade union organization in its finest sense.

Washington, D.C. Tribune

WORKERS WANTED REGARDLESS OF COLOR LABOR MANAGEMENT
WORKERS WANTED WHITE ONLY
"BETWEEN MAY, 1942, AND JANUARY, 1943, NEGRO EMPLOYMENT IN BALTIMORE'S PRINCIPAL WAR PLANTS INCREASED EIGHTY FIVE PER CENT."
..........NEWS ITEM
Alston
OWI

47h

JUN 12 1943

JUN 12 1943

"A STEP IN THE RIGHT DIRECTION!!"

"A STEP IN THE RIGHT DIREC

Good Example

New Republic
New York, N. Y.

An interesting example of Negro-white coöperation in industry that has recently come to our attention is the one afforded by the Breslee Manufacturing Company in New York City. The company, which produces bomb-parachutes, life-raft sails, gun covers and other supplies for the armed forces, employs in its three plants some 1,000 workers, equally divided as to Negroes and whites. No segregation is practised in the shop: the two races work side by side in harmony, and are equally represented on the labor division of the company's labor-management committee.

JUL 26 1943

The reactionary Southerners—and Northerners—who blame the occurrence of race riots on the breakdown of segregation and the increased mingling of Negroes and whites under war conditions, should have a few things to learn from the successful experiments in coöperation of the Breslee workers. While the problem which Negroes and whites must solve in learning to live together in society is a complicated one, industrial relations offer an immediate basis for working out such a solution. The representation of Negroes on labor-management committees, in connection with intensive educational campaigns within the trade unions, by helping to establish harmony in industry, should go a long way toward improving conditions in society at large.

JUL 26 1943

47h

Miss Negro War Worker Represents New Woman

People's Voice New York, N.Y.

The new American Negro woman will be officially represented at the Negro Freedom Rally in Madison Square Garden next Monday night by Belle Calhoun, chosen last week as Miss Negro War Worker.

Mrs. Calhoun, chief wire operator of the Lincoln Manufacturing Company, was chosen only after careful study of the war and labor activities of candidates from a wide assortment of other war plants. She is considered as typical of Negro women in industry because she was not specially trained for her work; because she had never held an industrial job before the war, and because she has several male relatives serving in her country's armed forces.

Before employment at Lincoln, Mrs. Calhoun was a domestic worker, a beauty parlor operator, and a housewife. She faced, as do the majority of Negro women who want to participate in the war effort, persistent and discouraging discrimination. She was shut out of job possibilities on the basis of her color and denied job training opportunities.

At a press conference in the Hotel Theresa last Thursday, Mrs. Calhoun stated that she wanted to continue in her work after the war—if it is at all possible. Member of her plant's labor-management committee and shop steward of Local 36, Wire and Metal Workers' Union, CIO, Miss Negro War Worker feels that the future of the Negro must be allied with the Trade Union movement if it is to be a strong one.

Mrs. Calhoun will be presented with a $25 war bond at the Negro Freedom Rally, Monday, June 7, in recognition of her enthusiastic support of the war effort. She her self has purchased her tenth war bond. She is also a member of the AWVS and a strong supporter of the Harlem Servicemen's Center.

She is typical of most Negroes, who, though opposed to the Red Cross jim-crow bank, have nevertheless donated their money and their blood.

H. Gould, head of Lincoln, tol dthe press that Mrs. Calhoun is a strong force for high morale in the plant where Negroes and whites are employed on almost 50-50 basis. The committee responsible for her choice as Miss Negro War Worker felt that she is symbolic of the sincere effort of thousands of Negro women who want to help production for war and at the same time preserve their homes for the return of their men from the armed services. She is a member of a social club and Allen AME church in Jamaica.

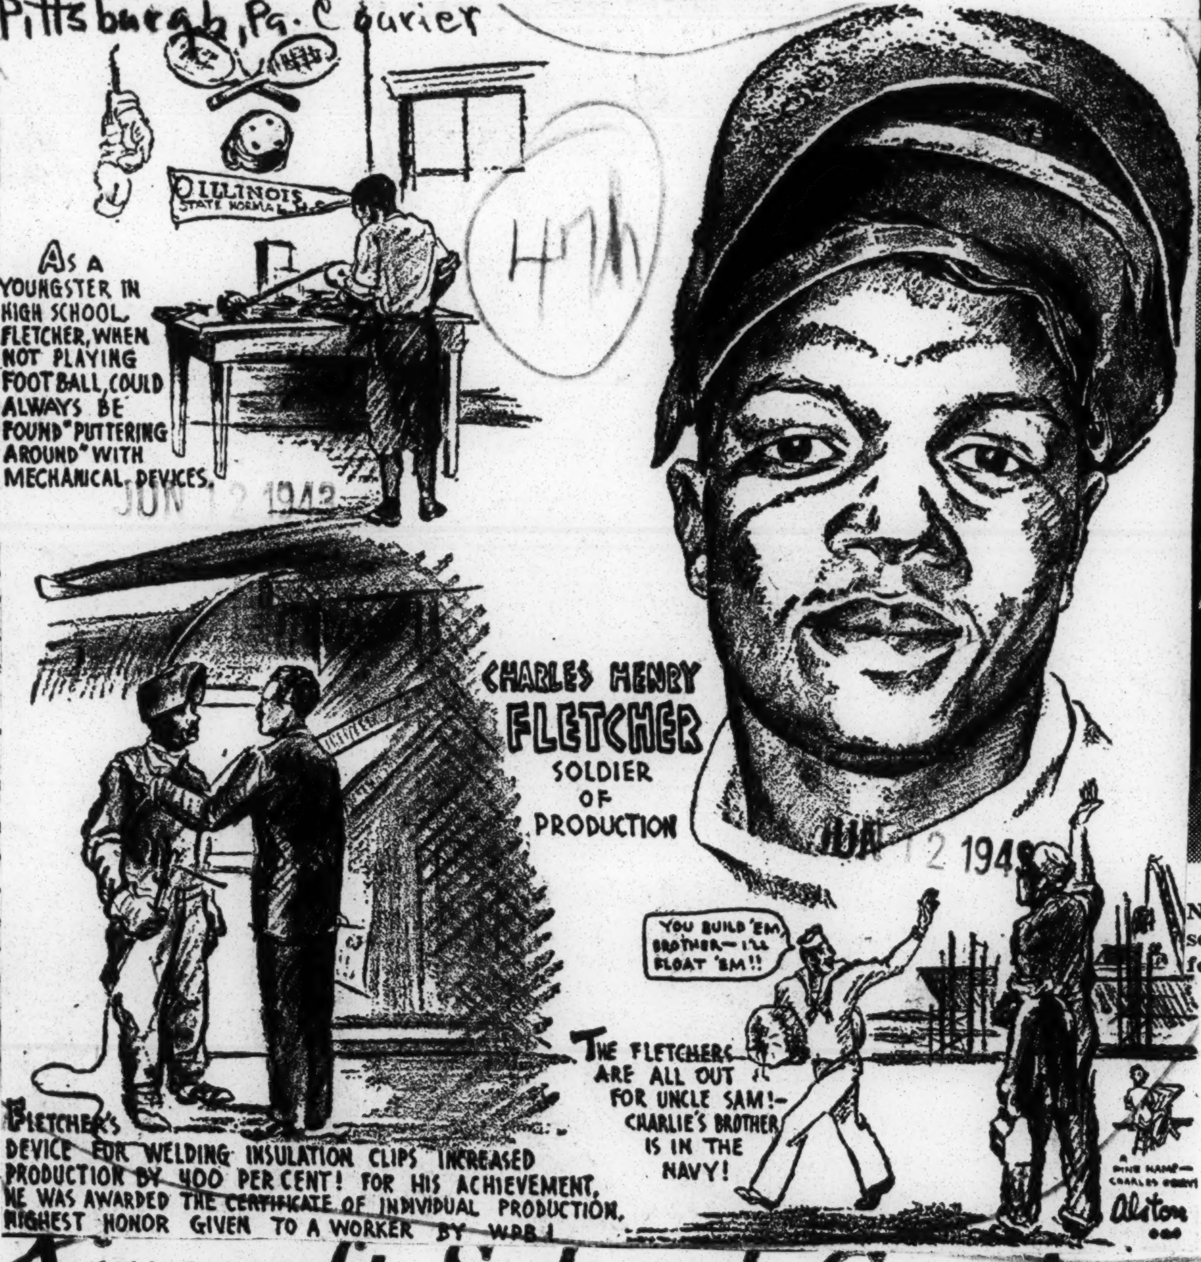
BELLE CALHOUN

The Color Guard

* * *

Charles Henry Fletcher

Pittsburgh, Pa. Courier



ILLINOIS STATE NORMAL
AS A YOUNGSTER IN HIGH SCHOOL, FLETCHER, WHEN NOT PLAYING FOOTBALL, COULD ALWAYS BE FOUND "PUTTERING AROUND" WITH MECHANICAL DEVICES.
JUN 12 1943
4th
CHARLES HENRY FLETCHER SOLDIER OF PRODUCTION
JUN 12 1943
YOU BUILD 'EM BROTHER—I'LL FLOAT 'EM!!
FLETCHER'S DEVICE FOR WELDING INSULATION CLIPS INCREASED PRODUCTION BY 400 PER CENT! FOR HIS ACHIEVEMENT, HE WAS AWARDED THE CERTIFICATE OF INDIVIDUAL PRODUCTION, HIGHEST HONOR GIVEN TO A WORKER BY WPB!
THE FLETCHERS ARE ALL OUT FOR UNCLE SAM!—CHARLIE'S BROTHER IS IN THE NAVY!
Aliston

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

NEW OPENINGS SEEN FOR RACE

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 2—Colored war workers in essential industries who can qualify will be admitted to occupancy to the over 200 vacancies at Morro Villa, located in Belvadere Gardens, a nearlby suburb, according to an official statement issued from the Los Angeles County Housing Authority.

Along with other eligibility qualifications, war workers must be employed within a given radius of the project. Already listed for applicants is a public list of industries thus located.

SEP 4 1943

America's answer
PRODUCTION

JUL 11 1943

47th

JUL 11 1943

The Worker, New York

It's our victory, whatever the color of our skins, that this young Negro girl is working for, as she sews parachutes on a power machine, somewhere in the State of Washington. (Photo by Office of War Information).

Aircraft School Graduates Getting Jobs At Bell Plant

Daily World
Atlanta, Ga

According to information received today, a large proportion of the approximately two hundred and sixty graduates of Washington Aircraft School have already been placed with the Bell Aircraft Company and with other large aircraft companies in California, Connecticut, Pennsylvania, New York, Ohio, Alabama and Maryland.

Individuals who have been prepared to enter semi-skilled work upon completion of the training course are demonstrating their ability to move into higher skills in industries where opportunity for employment has been given.

With an increasing need for prepared workers of the aircraft industry in this immediate area, officials of the Atlanta Urban League point out the increased importance of taking full advantage of the opportunities for training at the Washington Aircraft School.

Men and women already employed in other jobs can take advantage of the free training offered at the Washington Aircraft School during the followling shifts:—from 9:00 a. m., to 5:00 p. m.—day shift from 5:00 p. m., to 8:00 p. m., and 8:00 p. m. to 11:00 p m.—evening shifts. Applicants should register at the United States Employment Service, 191 Marietta Street; they are also urged to register with the Atlanta Urban League for free information.

47th

Hapeville, Ga. Statesman
November 18, 1943

INDUSTRIES INCREASE USE OF NEGRO WORKERS

Use of Negro Workers in the 485 large industries in North Carolina engaged in war and essential civilian production increased 102 per cent from July of 1942, to July of 1943, according to figures released yesterday by Dr. J. S. Dorton, State manpower director.

In July of 1942, 17,662 Negroes—or 6.8 per cent of the force of 259,014 workers—were employed in these 485 industries. In July of 1943, there were 35,754 Negroes—or 11.43 per cent of the force of 312,900 workers—employed in these same plants.

The increase in white workers was 14.9 per cent.

4th

47h-1943
Daily World
Atlanta, Ga.

Eases Manpower Shortage

ODT-3435
2830
THE DRIVER OF THIS VEHICLE IS REQUIRED TO OBSERVE ALL TRAFFIC LAWS

JAN 28 1943

DETROIT, Michigan—Mrs. Lois Wright, who is shown here is one of the first of Detroit's women bus drivers. She is smartly dressed in a uniform of powder blue consisting of trousers, jacket and jaunty cap—(IND.)

Inman, S. C., Times
February 4, 1943

DETROIT REPORT

(Orangeburg Times and Democrat)

The famous Willow Run bomber plant is far from peak production, says the War Production Board, which adds that bombers are being turned out and production is increasing although admitting that there "have been many disappointments" in connection with the huge plant.

The same agency reports that General Motors with 104 plants in 46 cities and 13 states, is "the largest producer of war materials in the country."

One of the difficulties in Detroit, says the OWI, has been the growth of the Negro population. "One cannot travel in Detroit without discovering tension between whites and Negroes," says the statement, which adds that "the Negroes' improved status is sometimes resented."

The influx of labor into Detroit has created problems that continue around the clock, presenting a "fantastic picture of wartime prosperity and social tensions." Despite the fact that the city is "very prosperous, it does not take easily to the strains on work or leisure."

United Program for Victory

"The Worker" N.Y. N.Y.

This inspiring program, a model for women's labor groups throughout America, was adopted at the Joint CIO-AFL Conference on "Women in War," held in Essex House, New York City, Feb. 2, under auspices of New York's Joint CIO-AFL Women's Civilian Defense Committee.

FEB 14 1943

Assembled here tonight are women from many factories and shops throughout the metropolitan area. We represent American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations ammunition workers, needle trade workers,, office workers, instrument makers, machine operators, technical workers, professional workers and member of trade union auxiliaries made up of wives, sisters and relatives of trade union men, Negro and white, working to help win this war. . . .

We realize that all that we hold dear, the very meaning and purpose of our lives, is at stake. As women, we have the most to lose if the fascist axis should win.

On this occasion, we would like to salute the women of our brave fighting allies—Britain, the Soviet Union and China, who for the past years have been giving dauntlessly of their energies and lives. . . .

FEB 14 1943

The Labor Movement of our great country, organized in millions, numbering large groups of women—has pledged itself to a Win-the-War program. . . . Its sons are donning uniforms, its daughters—overalls. Unions, in the first year of the war, led in solving the difficulties of conversion to war work; they trained their workers for new jobs, participated in setting up civilian defense activities and programs, lack of child care facilities. . . . It is not that we complain because we are not willing to sacrifice; we complain because there should be equality and sharing. . . . We are for sending food and necessities to our Allies and our armed forces—but we say let us democratically ration what is left. . . .

FEB 14 1943

There is need of immediate passage of a democratic tax bill which would place the greatest burden on those who can most afford to pay. Let us give more voice to labor in determining these questions. . . .

Waited Too Long

Another acute problem that makes more difficult the full participation of women in war work and civilian defense is the lack of real child care facilities for the children of working mothers. We say we have waited too long and done to little. These centers should be established, where needed, NOW.

FEB 14 1943

We welcome the formation of the Women's Defense Advisory Committee to the Industrial Commissioner in our State, and their position for the registration of women. . . . Our women are part of our nation's manpower. We must know where they are and what they can do. This will insure full use of everyone and will not necessitate the giving up of hard-won labor standards.

. . . There must be full opportunity given to Negro women of our country to participate completely in every phase of the war effort with entrance to all industries and occupations. . . .

We hail the Casablanca meeting. We pledge all support to a program of an offensive war and unconditional surrender. . . . In our fight for a free world we must guarantee that our free institutions and the progress made by our nation shall not be set back.

FEB 14 1943

We oppose very strongly any attempt to pass the so-called "Equal Rights Amendment" which would really nullify those very conditions that have been attained and that make it possible for women to fully participate in war production and the war effort. . . . Therefore, we must be ever vigilant and as working women pledge an increasing interest and participation in the legislative and political questions of the day.

. . . We call on all working women and wives of workers to join us. Organized labor will continue to lead to Victory.

Guardian
Boston, Mass.

WOMEN IN WAR

FEB 20 1943

WASHINGTON—For the first time in history, colored women are now being employed in skilled jobs in the Washington Navy Yard. Within recent months more than 300 specially trained machine workers and mechanics helpers have been given jobs there at wages averaging $45 per week, and more are being employed at the rate if 50 a month.

This development resulted from the efforts of the First National Youth Administration and the Project manager and staff of the NYA War Production training school at 1327 S Street, N W, Washington, D C. This school, now working on a 24-hour basis, offers free training in arc and gas welding, sheet metal work, aircraft riveting, drafting, clerical work, radio construction, small parts assembly, code receiving and sending, and in other jobs now in demand in the war production battle on the home front.

Atlanta, Ga. Journal
November 22, 1943

More Negroes in Plants

RALEIGH, N. C., Nov. 22.—(AP)—Use of Negro workers in 485 large industries in North Carolina increased 102 per cent from July, 1942, to July, 1943, Dr. J. S. Dorton, state man power director, announced Monday.

One Leader to Another

"The Worker" N.Y. N.Y.

High point in AFL-CIO "Women in War" Conference in New York City, Feb. 2, came when Daisy George, Negro executive board member of Local 6, Hotel and Club Employes, AFL, presented Eleanor Roosevelt, guest of honor, with a copy of "Negro Caravan," autographed by all the Negro girls in the local.

—The Worker Photo

…gustine, Fla., Record
February 9, 1943

TRAINING IN ELECTRICAL SHOP

Colored women as well as men are preparing themselves for industry as skilled workers at Florida Normal's War Production Training School. Courses are geared to the war emergency, and diligent students can complete their work in 13 weeks, absolutely free. The courses which are designed to train persons now unemployed, or not in essential industries are now working on a 24-hour shift in order to accommodate the many applicants for training. The above picture shows the electrical shop in which valuable training is being given.

Pittsburgh Courier
Pittsburgh, PA.

Women Do Skilled Work At Navy Yard

FEB 20 1943

NYA Training Found Valuable—Former Domestic Workers Now Earn $45 a Week

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 18—For the first time in history, Negro women are now being employed in skilled jobs in the Washington Navy Yard. Within recent months more than 300 specially trained machine workers and mechanics helpers have been given jobs there at wages averaging $45 per week, and more are being employed at the rate of 50 a month.

This development resulted from the efforts of the National Youth Administration and the Project manager and staff of the NYA War Production training school at 1327 S street, N.W., Washington, D. C. This school, now working on a 24-hour basis, offers free training in arc and gas welding, sheet metal work, aircraft riveting, drafting, clerical work, radio construction, small parts assembly, code receiving and sending, and in other jobs now in demand in the war production battle on the home front.

FEB 20 1943

The school is open to youths of all races between the ages of 16 and 25, but because of Selective Service requirements and demands of the armed forces, most of its pupils are women. The average enrollment ranges from 500 to 550 and in addition to placing workers regularly in the Washington Navy Yard, the center has placed its graduates in war plants in such distant points as Miami, Ohio, Hartford, Conn., the Norfolk Navy Yard, in Virginia and the Philadelphia Navy Yard, as well as in ordnance plants throughout the country.

FEB 20 1943

The school is under the direction of J. P. Bond Jr., project manager, who was formerly in charge of the NYA program for Negroes in North Carolina. Mr. Bond is a trained educator, having taught for several years at A. and T. college, Greensboro, N. C., following his graduation from Howard university. He now has a staff of sixty persons with Edward R. Rodriguez as a personnel officer; Rudolph Jones, finance officer, and David Jefferson, operations officer.

Typical of the results achieved at the NYA War Production Training school is the case of Miss Juanita E. Cray, 20, of 226 59th street, N.E., Washington, who began her training in the machine shop in April, 1942. She completed her training in September of the same year and was placed in the Washington Navy Yard, where she is now earning $45 per week. She is a graduate of the Dunbar high school and prior to taking the NYA training she worked in domestic service.

FEB 20 1943

Hundreds of Negro women are taking advantage of technical training opportunities offered by the National Youth Administration. New employment oportunities are opening every day for women in industry. Their skills and a chance to work are helping to defeat the Axis.

Nashville, Tenn. [illegible]
February 9, 1943

150 Workers To Leave For Kingsport Project

Approximately 150 workmen are expected to leave tonight to report for work at the Kingsport Ordnance plant, according to the local office of the United States Employment Service.

Forty-five Negroes had been accepted this morning and the central office of the USES, which began interviewing white applicants early this afternoon, estimated that approximately 100 would be taken from that group to entrain for the project tonight. Forty-four men left last night to accept jobs as laborers on the construction project, the employment office stated.

Twenty-five hundred workmen are needed on the East Tennessee project for jobs that do not require skill.

Asheville, N. C., Citizen
February 10, 1943

NEGROES WILL GET TRAINING FOR WAR WORK

The first class for negro war workers will begin at Lee Edwards high school Wednesday, February 17, it was announced yesterday. It will be for 15 negro men who wish to learn ship's carpentry.

Negro men in fair physical condition and not subject to the draft are asked to report to offices of the U. S. employment service in city hall if they are interested in the course.

Earl Windley, who is now completing a vocational class in Sylva, will teach the course. All who successfully complete it will be given jobs in shipyards at good wages, it was announced.

2,500 Negroes Get WMC Job Courses

The Daily Worker
MAR 3 - 1943 New York, N. Y. -

Pre-employment training for war work is being given to nearly 2,500 colored persons in New York State each month in courses conducted by the United States Office of Education and the National Youth Administration, according to Mrs. Anna M. Rosenberg, Regional Director of the War Manpower Commission.

Mrs. Rosenberg said yesterday that in November, 1942, the enrollment of Negro trainees stood at 2,337, of which 338 were in National Youth Administration shops. In December it dropped slightly, to 2,289, of which 382 were NYA trainees. Figures for January, not yet compiled, are expected to show a marked increase.

In addition to the pre-employment trainees, a total of 517 Negro workers attended supplementary or "brush-up" courses in November and 568 were enrolled in such courses in December. Many of these have since been placed in war jobs through the United States Employment Service (now a unit of the War Manpower Commission) and cooperating agencies.

HOPES FOR MORE

In urging that a large number of qualified Negro workers seek war training, Mrs. Rosenberg expressed the hope that the percentage in training would continue to rise. The denial to Negro workers of opportunities in industrial plants in the past makes such training particularly necessary and valuable now, she said.

MAR 3 - 1943

In analyzing the December pre-employment training figures Mrs Rosenberg disclosed that of the 1,907 Negroes enrolled in pre-employment Office of Education classes, 351 studied aircraft sheet metal work, 896 took machine shop training and 91 learned electric welding. The remainder were given instruction in such work as ship… sheet metal, marine electrical wir… ng, ship welding, foundry, auto mechanics, gas welding, aircraft ma… chine shop, aircraft welding, air… craft engines, shipfitting, instrument making, power sewing, light assembly and pattern-making.

The largest number of Negro NYA trainees specialized in sheet metal work, with arc welding and machine shop training running second and third, respectively.

MAR 3 - 1943

For admission to the War Manpower Commission's training classes persons must be 18 years of age or over and must meet the physical requirements generally required by industry. To enter "brush-up" classes, applicants must be already employed in an occupation essential to war industries or to a closely-related occupation. Admission in all cases, is arranged through registration at a United States Employment Service office.

AN OPPORTUNITY; MAKE GOOD

Bystander
Des Moines, Iowa

During war time, minority groups often get consideration one way or another almost undreamed of in peace time. This is particularly true of Negroes in the present war. Des Moines is no exception to the rule for since we entered the war, many firms which heretofore never hired any Negroes, are doing so; some have hired additonal Negroes and in some instances in jobs they never had before.

Some of this change of heart is due to a desire to give the Negro better and more recognition; some to the shortage of labor.

47h-1943

She Changes From Domestic To A Well Paid War Worker

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

FEB 21 1943

Official OWI Photo by Roger Smith

Twenty-year-old Miss Juanita E. Gray of 226 Fifty-ninth Street, Washington, D. C., was working as a domestic when she heard about the local NYA War Production and Training Center. With uncertain earnings which sometimes dropped as low as $4.50 a week, she decided to register for NYA training. Mrs. Lela M. Richmond and Mrs. Sadie M. Franklin enrolled her at the center.

Official OWI Photo by Roger Smith

Under the direction of Cecil M. Coles, NYA foreman, Miss Juanita E. Gray learns to operate a lathe machine at the Washington, D. C. NYA War Production and Training Center. This former domestic worker is one of hundreds of Negro women trained at this center.

FEB 21 1943

Official OWI Photo by Roger Smith

A full-fledged graduate from the NYA War Production and Training Center in Washington, D. C., Miss Juanita E. Gray, a former domestic worker, receives her certificate from J. P. Bond, Jr., project manager, while E. R. Rodriguez, youth personnel officer, looks on. Miss Gray was referred immediately to the Washington Navy Yard.

FEB 21 1943

Official OWI Photo by Roger Smith

Beginning as a helper at $4.56 a day in the Washington Navy Yard, Miss Juanita E. Gray, graduate-trainee of the NYA War Production and Training Center, now earns $45 a week. More than 300 NYA-trained Negro women are now working in the Washington Navy Yard and scores are being added monthly.

Increasing Numbers Of Female Workers Are Employed Daily

Pittsburgh Courier
Pittsburgh Pa

By JOHN R. WILLIAMS

DETROIT, April 22—Henry Ford, the great industrialist, who is known throughout the nation and the world because of his genius with motors and production plants, is perhaps better known to Detroiters as a humanitarian.

APR 24 1943

Of course, Detroiters are definitely conscious and appreciative of what Ford has done in the development of the automobile and what he is now doing in the matter of producing tanks and planes for the Allied Nations, but all that fails to obscure the part that he has played in providing employment and better working conditions for thousands who have obtained attractive employment and ideal working conditions under his city-sized River Rouge and Highland Park plants.

Every American citizen today realizes that the cost of living has greatly increased since Pearl Harbor. We know, too, that all are affected, and that higher wages and wider employment opportunities are the only salvation.

NO WOMEN BEFORE OUTBREAK OF WAR

Prior to the outbreak of World War No. 2 women were not employed at all by the Ford Motor company, but when Ford employees began to enter the armed services in large numbers, leaving more or less dependent women behind to bear the economic burdens, the policy at Ford's changed, almost overnight.

Today women are employed in practically every department of the Ford Motor company and no distinction is made between white and colored. Preference is given wives of former employees who are now in the armed services. Next in consideration are women who have received vocational war training.

WOMEN FIT INTO PROGRAM READILY

Last week the writer was privileged to spend several days at the Ford River Rouge plant. He was amazed to observe how splendidly women have fitted into the Ford program. Irrespective of race, women are now playing a great part in building airplane motors and tanks for the Allied Nations of the world under Henry Ford and as William H. Woodstock, superintendent of the new aluminum plant, puts it, "Women are as capable of making cylinder heads for planes as men, and that is true of our women generally, whether they be white or colored." B. R. Anderson, superintendent of the super-charger division, declares, "We are getting splendid results from women. Absenteeism is less and after they have been given a particular machine they take personal pride in it and regard it as a part of themselves."

FIFTY A DAY

Colored women are being employed in ever increasing numbers by the Ford Motor Company and are being integrated into practically all departments. They seem to be employed at the approximate rate of 50 per day.

APR 24 1943

Jesse Owens, who established three individual records in the 1936 Olympic Games at Berlin, is now directing the personnel of colored employees at the Ford River Rouge plant. Assisting him are five other intelligent, courteous men and women: two interviewers, Walter A. Lewis and Lawrence Washington; one sociological administrator, Mrs. W. F. Ward; one labor negotiator, Russell Brown; and one clerk, Elbert Cooper. It will be remembered that Donald Marshall, veteran personnel director and Willis Ward who served with him are no longer on the scene. Mr. Marshall has been ill for quite some time and Mr. Ward is now in military service.

EARN GOOD WAGES

The departments where women are employed in considerable numbers are: New Steel foundry, New Alumnium foundry, Press Steel plant, Airplane plant, Spring and Upset Department and Motor Building.

Of the 90,000 employees at the Ford Motor company, more than 20,000 are Negroes. Ford holds more than four billion dollars worth of war contracts and is making almost, every type of mobile equipment used by the Allied Nations.

All Ford employees in the mechanical brackets are started at 85 cents per hour but after the third pay-day they begin receiving an increase. Sometimes within a year new employees earn as much as $1.75 per hour. Few workers who survive the probationary period receive less than $10 per day.

Pittsburgh Courier
Pittsburgh Pa.

And so today we have many new employment opportunities for colored women here in the Motor City, so often called the Arsenal of Democracy for the Allied Nations, but none to equal the opportunities provided by Henry Ford the humanitarian and industrialist. Surely we Detroiters are recognizing that minority groups too have an important role to play in this global struggle that should mark a new era—an era in which all mankind will live and work together as never before—an era in which color will not be the barrier that it was in these United States before Pearl Harbor.

Army-Navy "E" Flags For Excellence Fly Over Acipco Plants

Birmingham, Ala. News
March 25, 1943

Cast Iron Pipe Company Given Coveted Award At Special Ceremony

The Army and Navy symbol for excellence in production flies Thursday over the plants of the American Cast Iron Pipe Company in Birmingham.

The presentation was made Wednesday afternoon in the company's auditorium before a capacity gathering of workers and company representatives by Col. E. C. Bomar, chief of the Birmingham Ordnance District, who told the men and women of Acipco that while they cannot hope to equal in blood and suffering the sacrifices of the men at the front, they can equal their devotion to duty on the production line where the weapons of victory are being produced.

"The cost of keeping our freedom," Col. Bomar said, "will not be measured in money nor in time, but in American lives, and the boys who are fighting our battles in the jungles and swamps of the South Pacific and on the desert sands of Africa must have combat weapons, bigger, better, faster and more numerous than the Germans or Japs can muster."

W. D. Moore, president of the company, accepted the Army-Navy "E" on behalf of the company and pledged a continuation of the performance record that made the award possible.

Don C. Williams, a member of Acipco's board of operatives, accepted the lapel pin on behalf of the white employes; Norman Randall for the Negroes. Both expressed appreciation of their colleagues and promised there would be an intensification of production effort.

Presentation of the pins was by Lt. Comdr. Edwin Phillips, commander, Naval Training School, Auburn.

"By your unending contribution," Comdr. Phillips said, "not only to the preservation of America, but to immortality itself, the juggernaut of American might is rolling, rolling, and it will keep on rolling across the China seas, roll until the folds of the Star Spangled Banner cast the shadow of its blazing beauty on the slopes of Fujiyama and the yap of the Jap is silenced forever."

George M. Morrow, Jr., president, Goslin-Birmingham Manufacturing Company, was master of ceremonies. The Rev. George C. Turner pronounced the invocation.

World-Telegram
New York, N. Y.

Slow Gain Reported In Negro Employment

By the United Press.

JUN 21 1943

WASHINGTON, June 21.—The War Manpower Commission said today that although there is a steady increase in the use of Negro workers in war plants, the number in war industries is not yet commensurate with their proportion of the labor force.

Racial prejudice, limits placed on occupational and training opportunities, along with geographical distribution of war contracts, were blamed.

"Negroes comprised 5.8 per cent of the 12,000,000 workers employed in establishments reporting to the United States Employment Service in July, 1942," WMC said. "In March, 1943, 937,000 non-whites were employed in 16,000 establishments, representing 6.7 per cent of the 14,673,000 workers in those establishments."

Training Women As War Workers

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

MAR 11 1943

RALEIGH, N. C.—(SNS)—The NYA Defense Training Center formerly located in Fayetteville, and whose quota of girls for training has been increased from ninety-five persons to more than one hundred fifty students, has been transferred to Raleigh, and is now situated on the Shaw University campus according to announcement of officials of the North Carolina NYA Defense Training Project Officials.

This NYA Training Project for Negro Girls was started in July 1942 under the direction of H. I. F. Nanton in the attempt to provide training in radio code, radio assembly and radio theory for girls who upon completion of the course would be prepared to fill positions in war production industries. Since its organization Mr. Nanton has been transferred to another area of defense service and the girls project has been directed by Miss Christine Harrington.

Despite the fact that the Defense Center is the youngest in North Carolina thirty-one girls have been placed in war industries, twelve in the General Electric Company and nineteen in the Fort Mammoth Signal Corps School in New Jersey.

According to Miss Harrington arrangements are now being completed to place twenty one additional girls in another war industry.

Trainees in the project on the Shaw campus at Raleigh occupy an entire building, convention Hall, which includes living quarters for girls, offices, a laundry, a recreation room, and rooms for members of the directing staff.

Nope, This Isn't Romance

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

APR 16 1943

TUSKEGEE, Ala. — (SNS) — This may look like romance, but the young air cadet is only making sure the girl apprentice mechanic does a good job on the plane he is about to fly. Marjorie Dorsey, of Birmingham, Alabama, is one of the many women who are learning to service planes at Army Flying Schools. The cadet is Cornelius G. Rogers, of Chicago, Illinois.

FDR Commends Ship Builder For Race Harmony in Yard

P. M. Daily

A happy ending to a story that began on a theme of racial discrimination was written yesterday when William Edgar John, ship builder of Rye, N. Y., received a letter of commendation from the President.

Just two years ago, FDR reprimanded John for refusing to hire a Negro worker. Today, 88 of his total personnel of 504 are Negroes.

Recently PM told about John's ship yard, using it as a model war-production plant where Negroes and whites work together effectively and harmoniously.

John sent that story to Washington.

On a White House letterhead, dated July 1, 1943, he received this answer:

At a time when I have been hearing so many tragic things about racial tensions and racial violence on the home front, your letter came as an evidence of what I know is the basic goodwill and decency of the American people with regard to their fellow citizens of other races.

I hope many Americans will read the story of your achievement in industrial democracy. It should be especially heartening to them at this time when in too many cases hoodlum violence has interrupted our production for victory at home and given comfort to our enemies abroad.

Thank you for sending me the story, but thank you even more for your fine example for all of us today. I am happy if, as you say, I had a part in turning your mind to the task in human relationships which you have accomplished so well

Very sincerely yours,
FRANKLIN D ROOSEVELT

Courier-Journal
Louisville, Ky.

Negro War Workers Jam Frisco Japtown

JUL 29 1943

San Francisco, Calif., July 28 (U.P.)—Japtown, the San Francisco Japanese center vacated when the Japanese were interned, has been occupied by Negro war workers. As an example of its present congestion, a two-story house, formerly occupied by a family of Japanese, is now housing thirty-seven Negroes and even the bathtub is rented for a bed at $12 a month.

47h-1943

Negroes in War Industry Are Here to Stay---

New York N.Y.

"Daily Worker" Jan 16, 1943

By Eugene Gordon

(Last of three articles)

One tenth of our population is Negro, according to the American Management Association's booklet "The Negro Worker." More than 5,000,000 of these Negroes are gainfully employed, "but too often they are working on jobs below what is warranted by their aptitudes, abilities and skills."

Negroes made up 10.7 per cent of the nation's work force in April, 1940, and 12.5 per cent of its unemployed. As late as June, last year, according to the Bureau of Employment Security (as quoted by AMA), an estimated 500,000 Negro workers were still idle and available to industry. The United States had then been at war six months.

10% IN SERVICE

The Negro people of this country have contributed more than 10 per cent of their number to the armed forces; they make up no more than 10 per cent of the population. They would like to be as well represented in the industries which manufacture arms to destroy fascism as they are in the services which receive the arms. That is a justifiable wish. To what extent is it being realized?

The logic of this people's war against fascism forces increasing numbers of employers to hire Negroes. This fact is acknowledged by such a critical judge of the situation as the Pittsburgh Courier, one of the country's most influential Negro weeklies. The "biggest gains" of 1942, the Courier declares, were made "on the job front, where the President's Executive Order and the work of the Fair Employment Practices Committee, War Manpower Commission, Employment Service and the War Production Board have been effective in breaking the bars against Negro men and women." The Courier also credits "the entire CIO, which in turn forced the AFL international leaders to condemn the practice of discrimination against Negro workers," with the Negro people's gains last year on the "job front."

The Courier, however, as is true of most of the Negro press, sees jobs for Negroes as ends in themselves rather than as weapons against fascism. In that respect many employers are in advance of a powerful section of the Negro people's leadership. "Consideration for the Negro" as a war reservoir of motive power "rests not merely on humanity and charity," says Edwin R. Embree in "American Negroes—A Handbook"; "it rests on the solid base of enlightened selfishness. It is a question," he adds, "not only of the rights of the Negroes themselves; it is a question of the total health and strength of the nation."

Everybody—and that includes the Negro press—will realize in time that jobs "as usual" for the Negro people are out, during this anti-fascist war; that it now is jobs as a war measure. When the problem is approached this way its solution is clearer. That is the way it is being approached by that section of management which has been induced to lay aside its prejudices for the war's duration.

POST-WAR TASK

But what after the war? Are we to be swept back into the waste of the unwanted unemployed? The Negro people are justified in asking this question. "The Negro Worker" quotes an unnamed executive:

"After the war management is going to keep the best workers—Negro or white. Workers will not be kept for sentimental reasons."

The fact that hundreds of thousands of additional Negro workers will be integrated in industry and in labor unions will help that executive to keep his word.

Negroes, in the meantime, through their own efforts and through the efforts of varied organizations, including especially the trade unions, are infiltrating into industry all over the United States. They are working in plants which previously did not employ them. Many are in plants which, until now, hired Negroes mainly as janitors, handy-men, porters, locker-room attendants, maids, and in other menial capacities.

The American Management Association asked a number of these plants what the percentage of their Negro employes was. The figures reported, says the AMA, "ranged from 2 to 7 per cent." Some plants believed their percentage of Negro personnel equalled the percentage of the total Negro population—that is, the average for the nation. Others thought it represented the local average. "A few were guided only by their manpower needs and made no attempt to conform to any average, national or local." One executive reported that attempting to maintain an average was itself "a form of discrimination." Jan. 14, 1943

Though we expect you to take it for granted that all references to Negro workers include the Negro woman, yet we feel it is essential to say something specifically about her and her place. Her place today is wherever the white woman worker's place is. Since the draft calls white men and black men without regard to color, and since the armed services have taken large numbers of Negro men, the Negro woman as an industrial worker must be given a fair share of consideration.

(She has not been given fair consideration in the armed services, her number being disproportionately small in the WAACs and she is being completely excluded from the WAVEs.)

The logic of this anti-fascist war has promoted thousands of Negro men to skilled and semi-skilled jobs. That same logic has removed thousands of Negro women from domestic service, the farm, the laundry and the beauty parlor to aircraft factories, shipyards, ordnance plants and other war industries.

Has the war, then, solved the Negro's employment problem? Is the Negro being integrated in industry, at last, with little or no opposition? Let nobody harbor that belief!

The FEPC only the other day issued orders to Vultee Aircraft, Inc., at Nashville, to eliminate discrimination against war workers because of race or color. The committee at the same time issued directions to the Alabama Shipbuilding and Drydock Corp., the Birmingham A. J. Honeycutt Co., and the Alabama Gulf Shipbuilding Corp., after the FEPC had found that each of the companies was violating Executive Order 8802 in its hiring and upgrading practices with respect to Negro workers.

The whole railroad industry, in both management and certain craft unions (chiefly AFL), reek with discrimination against the Negro worker. This fact makes postponement of hearings on job discrimination in the railroad industry all the more unfortunate. All such citadels of reaction, however, are being stormed by workers' progressive organizations. The very fact of today's urgent need for manpower as a war necessity makes the old attitudes toward the Negro worker illogical and, thereby, outmoded.

The American Management Association comments:

"... management can no longer safely ignore the Negro, quite apart from the shortage of manpower with which it may already be faced or is likely to encounter in the not too distant future."

The very nature of this anti-fascist war, in other words, is so integrating the Negro worker in industry as to make him hereafter an integral and logical part of industry. It is to guarantee that this happens, for the sake of the nation as a whole, that all win-the-war groups should wage unceasing struggle against Jim Crow discrimination.

Daily World
Atlanta, Ga.
JAN 6 1943

Directives Are Sent Plants With War Contracts

Action Follows Hearings Held In Birmingham

WASHINGTON—(ANP)— The President's Committee on Fair Employment practices as a result of the hearings held in Birmingham last June, announced that four large war plants in the south had been directed to cease discrimination in the employment and upgrading of Negro workers and that one of them, Vultee Aircraft, Inc., had already complied with the committee's order. Prospects appeared bright that all would do so, thus setting a pattern which may have some effect in that section despite Talmadges and Dixons of Georgia and Alabama. JAN 6 1943

The Vultee plant in Nashville, had some thousands of workers, Gy Record, WPB assistant, testified during the hearings but only about 20 were Negro. The personnel director said he did not believe Negroes and whites would work together and this in spite of the fact that J. M. Shelton, representative of the International Association of Machinist, had agreed that if the company put Negroes to work, taking the initiative in the matter, that some effort would be made by the union in the way of cooperation.

NEGROES TO BE EMPLOYED

JAN 6 1943

FEPC through Lawrence Cramer, executive secretary, announced that Vultee was taking steps to employ Negroes in its Nashville plant as it had done in its three plants in California. Negroes are to be employed and hiring agencies are to accept qualified people without reference to race while training facilities are to be opened regardless of color or creed.

FEPC said that directives had been issued to three other large companies to cease and desist from violation of the President's executive order against discrimination. These companies--Alabama Shipbuilding and Drydock Co. Mobile, Ala., A. J. Honeycutt Co., Birmingham, and Gulf Shipbuilding Corp., Chickasaw, Ala.--all had been violators more or less flagrant.

ALABAMA SHIPBUILDING CITED

JAN 6 1943

Alabama Shipbuilding had some Negroes who had been with it ever since it opened its doors a quarter of a century ago, but, although they were skilled and even taught whites who came in, they were still drawing helper's pay. The Honeycutt Co. which manufactures prefabricated houses is charged with refusing to hire Negro carpenters even though they belong to the AFL union with which the company had a contract. The Gulf Shipbuilding Co. has been one of the really flagrant violators. Holding tremendous government contracts, it had unlike Alabama Shipbuilding drawn the line tight against Negroes in any sort of skilled job. Alabama hired helpers but Gulf would accept Negroes only as janitors and cleaners.

The complete reports on the hearings in Birmingham have been delayed, it is believed; first by the uproar which went up over the south as soon as it was learned that FEPC actually threatening to hold a hammer over the heads [illegible] southern industrialists; and second by the transfer of the agency from the immediate authority of the President to the War Manpower Commission under Administration McNutt. For a long time the committee was uncertain of its future and had no budget. The reports just issued would indicate that the committee is prepared to forge ahead on the hundreds of complaints which are said to be before it.

Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Virginia

30,000 Race Workers Being Used In War Industries Here

JAN 9 - 1943

(Other stories, pages 13-18)

NORFOLK. — Federal establishments in the Norfolk labor market area provide the major employment outlet for both white and Negro workers, and approximately 30,000 of the latter are currently employed here in these two categories, according to the findings of a survey made recently by Washington representatives of the United States Employment Service, an agency of the War Manpower Commission.

Colored workers, according to the survey, are employed in a wide variety of skills and occupations in the following major government agencies: Norfolk Navy Yard, U. S. Naval Air Station and Naval Operating Base United Nations Depot and Port of Embarkation, and the Norfolk Shipbuilding and Drydock Company.

The total Negro employment in this group approximates 17,000 workers, classified as follows: skilled 2,000; semi-skilled 7,000; and unskilled 8,000, the survey reveals.

Data submitted by sixteen "essential war industries" employers indicates very favorable trends in the employment of colored workers, the survey points out.

35.3 PER CENT OF TOTAL

Employment in these industries totals 15,178; Negro employment comprising 5,361, or 35.3 per cent of the total. During the reporting period there were 5,164 hires by these concerns; and 78.3 per cent of the total hires, or 15.1 per cent, were made on referrals of the local office of the United States Employment Service.

Colored workers make up ninety per cent of the farm laborers placed in Princess Anne and Norfolk counties by the local USES office, according to the report.

"The relative importance to the war effort of Negro manpower should stimulate more efficient service and continuing study by ES personnel with relations to total manpower needs in this area," the report states.

In the period from January through October 1942, the applicant traffic through the local office of the USES totalled 52,548, the report sets forth. A breakdown of this total reveals an average weekly office traffic of 408 white applicants, and, an average weekly office traffic of 758 Negro applicants.

WAR-TRAINING CLASSES

JAN 9 - 1943

An analysis of war-training classes for Negroes in Norfolk conducted at the Booker T. Washington High School reveals that training is being given in electric welding, acetylene welding, machine shop practice, ship-fitting, sheet metal work, armature winding, electrical practice, and sheet metal and welding.

The classes are open to both men and women.

The Daily Worker
New York, N. Y.

How Unions Fight Discrimination

JAN 15 1943

By Eugene Gordon

(Second of three articles.)

Some trade unionists have been hesitant or slow about fighting for the right of Negroes to work in certain shops. This backwardness has been noticed even in plants whose owners, spurred to action by organized pressure of the Negro people and by the Fair Employment Practice Committee, have made the first move toward introducing Negro skilled workers.

Such timidity in trade unionists arises from a combination of fears, the princiual ones being fear of red-baiting and fear of causing disunity among the shop's workers. The fear of red-baiting is based on experience—it has happened. Just the same, it is a foolish fear, for it assumes that nobody but Communists fight for the right of Negroes to work in war industries. That assumption today is false.

Even if it were true the fight would still have to be made. The question which the trade unionist has to settle is how to make it. Certainly he must decide that it is as necessary to be positive and firm with prejudiced workers as with a prejudiced management.

UNION RESPONSIBILITY

The rebellious workers being union members, the union itself must state its policy of non-discrimination against Negroes and other minorities, and state it so clearly and so positively that nobody can misunderstand it. The local union leader will feel then that there is authority behind his anti-discrimination stand in the shop. More important, however, than stating union policy against discrimination, the union must plan and carry out a system of education.

But suppose, in spite of all this, some white workers threaten to walk out? That, too, has happened In that case the union must side with the Negro workers.

We may learn from the National Maritime Union's experience in dealing with problems like these. Wherever the NMU encounters a situation in which white seamen stand out against sailing with Negro seamen, the question is put to a vote of the whole crew. Resultant votes always prove that the majority of the white seamen stand for fair play and democracy. And that, according to Ferdinand C. Smith, national secretary of the NMU, is the result both of "an intensive, persistent campaign of education at union meetings and aboard ships against racial discrimination of any kind," and "of practicing racial equality and finding that it is not only possible but is a positive good."

What the NMU has accomplished afloat, the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, CIO, in several cities, and the Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, AFL, in New York City, have made some progress in accomplishing ashore. The United Automobile Workers, CIO, has progressed splendidly against a particularly fascist-minded group in the Michigan union. The FEPC succeeded in getting the International Association of Machinists, AFL, so to adjust its closed shop agreement with the Consolidated Aircraft plant in San Diego, Calif., as to have qualified Negro machinists employed there.

Both the CIO and the AFL have given locals the "Go" signal, officially, to fight Negro discrimination in the membership. Since Phillip Murray, head of the CIO, and William Green, head of the AFL, are both members of the FEPC, each has thereby committed the organization to the spirit and letter of the President's Executive Order 8802, outlawing discrimination in industry.

JAN 15 1943

The CIO at its recent convention in Boston reiterated its acceptance of Executive Order 8802. The CIO adopted a resolution which declared that "Discrimination against workers because of race, religion or country of origin is an evil characteristic of our fascist enemies"; that "any discriminatory practices within our ranks, against Negroes or other groups, directly aids the enemy by creating division, dissension and confusion."

WINNING NEGROES JOBS

A West Coast delegate told of 1,000 Negroes on production lines in one Los Angeles aircraft plant. He said 15,000 Negroes had been brought into the CIO during a recent union drive in California. All this, the delegate insisted, resulted from the CIO's fight to place qualified Negro workers side by side with white workers on the same jobs.

JAN 15 1943

The AFL at its recent convention also endorsed the policy of the FEPC, though it did not, as the CIO had done, cite many instances of its struggling against discrimination in its ranks or outside.

The National Maritime Union, having sent 115 white and 25 Negro seamen to man a vessel of the United States Lines taken over by the government, called upon the President of the United States for action when officials of the line refused to sign on the Negroes. The President acted, and promptly.

The unions will remember, of course, that in the final analysis it is the employer and not the worker who says whether or not Negroes shall be hired. Unions must lead in the fight, for integration of Negro workers in industry by (1) insisting that manpower requirements make it imperative that qualified Negroes be given jobs in war industries; by (2) seeing to it that Negroes get a chance to go to school and thus to qualify themselves; by (3) tackling the problem of Negro discrimination boldly and carrying through its solution to a logical conclusion; by (4) creating joint action committees between CIO and AFL locals, wherever necessary, in order to facilitate integration of Negro workers in war industry.

Axis Exploits Race Bias Here, Says NY Report

"Daily worker"

ALBANY, Dec. 31 (UP).—Job discrimination against the foreign born has been "heightened by war-borne suspicions and Axis propaganda which bends every straw to its purpose," the State Committee on Discrimination in employment said today in a report to governor Poletti.

New York N.Y.
JAN 1 - 1943

"To the age-long discrimination against Negroes and Jews," the report said, "has been added a recent feeling against persons from Axis-dominated countries, at whom wartime emotion has often pointed an unjust finger of suspicion."

"Those who suffer are not loyal aliens alone—many of these cannot meet the technical requirements of citizenship — but also naturalized citizens and their children."

The committee said that war plants employing nearly 400,000 workers have been visited to urge all-out production by eliminating discrimination.

Commenting on the report, Poletti said:

"It is not possible to persuade any citizen to die for democracy if his father, mother and older brothers and sisters are not given jobs in war industries."

"Not only does discrimination prevent full utilization of manpower for the war effort," the committee said, "but it is a contradiction of United Nations' war aims of equal opportunity and freedom for all.

JAN 1 1943

"This contradiction the Axis has been quick to exploit, both in Europe and Asia. It is literally true that the lynching of a Negro in America is quickly broadcast from Tokio throughout the Far East as an example of 'white' hypocrisy and cruelty in their war for domination over the 'colored races' of the world."

47h-1943
Peoples Voice
New York, N. Y.

JUL 24 1943

SCHOOL—FIRST STEP TO A GOOD WAR JOB

These students of the Bedford Welding School, 11 W. 42nd St., are here shown exhibiting their work to Phil Siebel (right) the school's director. The students are Nathan Hamilton and Malachy McLeavey (left). Bedford School students do not have to pay for their training until after Murray Taylor, the registrar, places them in a satisfactory war job. The school does not discriminate against any student because of race, creed or color.

Industrial Democracy At Home

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa

FDR Praises Shipbuilder For Race Policy; Raps Hoodlums

JUL 31 1943

WASHINGTON, July 29—A New York shipyard owner was the possessor this week of letters from President Roosevelt and Paul V. McNutt, chairman of the War Manpower Commission, commending him for eliminating racial barriers in his shipyard. The builder is William Edgar John, owner and general manager of the Milton Point Shipyards at Rye, N. Y. His plant, formerly a small yard for the construction of pleasure boats, recently celebrated its 30th launching of war vessels for the War and Navy Departments.

FDR EXPLAINS POLICY

In the pleasure boat days, the Milton Point Shipyards had never hired a Negro worker. Soon after the firm received its first defense contract, however, a Negro applied for a job and was turned away. The rejected worker wrote President Roosevelt, and the Chief Executive, in turn, wrote Mr. John explaining the Government's policy of "full participation in the defense program by all persons, regardless of race, creed, color or national origin."

Mr. John had only 75 workers in his yard when he received the President's advice. Needing a crew of caulkers, he went to a Harlem River shipyard and signed up 12 Negro craftsmen. He regarded his experiment as a success when his yard, aided by the Negro caulkers, finished his first Navy contract 28 days ahead of schedule.

A LOYAL BUNCH OF AMERICANS

"I not only found out that they were good workers," Mr. John stated, "but that they are the most honest, square-shooting, loyal bunch of Americans you'd ever want to meet.

"Why, when we've had rush contracts, every one of my colored workers volunteered to work 12 hours a day, seven days a week. They all gave three hours pay to the Red Cross. They all buy bonds. They're expert workers and gentlemen."

Mr. John was so pleased at the outcome that he continued to increase the number of Negro workers in his yard. Today, 88 Negroes—one-fifth of his total staff—are working in all skills in the Milton Point Shipyards. A few weeks ago, the owner decided to tell the President about it. And Mr. Roosevelt promptly replied:

"My dear Mr. John:

"At a time when I have been hearing so many tragic things about racial tensions and racial violence on the home front, your letter came as an evidence of what I know is the basic goodwill to work and decency of the American people with regard to their fellow citizens of other races.

"I hope many Americans will read the story of your achievement in industrial democracy. It should be especially heartening to them at this time when in the many cases hoodlum violence has interrupted our production for victory at home and given comfort to our enemies abroad.

"Thank you for sending me the story, but thank you even more for your fine example for all of us today. I am happy if, as you say, I had a part in turning your mind to the task of human relationships which you have accomplished so well."

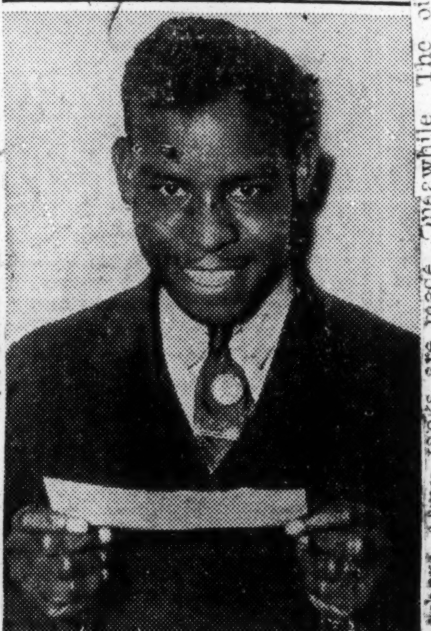
Wins Honors

BELLE CALHOUN

Shop steward of Local 26, CIO United Wire and Metal Workers union, has been chosen "Miss Negro War Worker" and will be presented a $25 War Bond at Negro Freedom rally in Madison Square Garden June 7. Chief operator at her plant Miss Calhoun has already purchased ten bonds during her employment there. She is active in AWVS, church affairs in Jamaica, L. I., where she lives and has aided Red Cross with donations of both blood and money.

JUN 5 1943

Wins Check for Suggestion on Way to Do Job Better



Bystander
Des Moines, Iowa

Precious man-hours are being saved daily in processing metals for Navy equipment at a General Electric plant, thanks to a production suggestion submitted by Hezekiah Coleman, shown above with the check he received for his idea. Coleman, whose job is dipping metals of various sizes and shapes into vats containing cleaning fluids, suggested larger containers for handling the metals, enabling him to put through greater quantities in a day.

Born in Denmark, S. Car., where he attended school, he worked for several years in furniture factories in the south until he learned to operate various types of machines. In 1941 he moved to Schenectady, and after working as a cook in a drug store and a hotel, obtained his present job at G. E. Married, his favorite forms of recreation are fishing and baseball.

JUN 17 1943

Former Atlantan Wins Certificate For Production

Daily World

Detroit Janitor Save Government Oil Worth $10,000

Atlanta, Ga.

WASHINGTON—(SNS)—A Detroit janitor in a tank factory whose ingenuity has already saved 12,000 gallons of oil, worth $10,000, became the second Negro war worker to win a Certificate of Individual Production Merit, the War Production ~~Drive~~ Headquarters announced this week.

The award winner in Edgar Gaston, who is handicapped by having only three fingers on his right hand. He is a janitor in the Cadillac plant of General Motors in Detroit where Army tanks are made. One of his responsibilities is the disposal of chips and shavings from metal-working machines. He realized that quite a large amount of good oil was being thrown away when the chips were cleaned from the machines and dumped into small carts for disposal. There was no oil slinger for salvaging this oil from the chips, so Gaston, on his own initiative, proceeded to build a cart with a false bottom. He filled this cart with the chips and let it stand for a while. The oil drained off very easily and could be replaced in the machine from whence it came.

BORN IN ATLANTA

The production soldier responsible for this idea was born in Atlanta, Georgia, 31 years ago He graduated from high school and that was the end of his formal education. Because he believes so thoroughly in the advantages of education, his ambition is for his children to become school teachers.

Charles H Fletcher, a welder in the Moore Dry Dock Company shipyards at Oakland, Calif., was the first of his race to win the Certificate of Individual Production Merit. His contribution was a device to use in welding operation 400 per cent.

TYPES OF RECEPTION

The Individual Awards Plan provides for several types of recognition for workers whose suggestions increase the quantity or improve the quality of war production. Plant Labor-Management Committees confer local Awards of Individual Production Merit for suggestions deemed meritorious in their own plants. They then submit to Headquarters suggestions which may be used on an industry wide basis.

These suggestions are processed and evaluated in the Awards Branch of the War Production Drive Headquarters before the Board of Individual Awards. This Board, composed of technical experts, recommends letters of Honorable Mention, Certificates of Individual Production Merit, or Citations of Individual Prodction Merit.

Chicago Bee
Chicago, Illinois

Named Labor Adviser In Dixie Plant

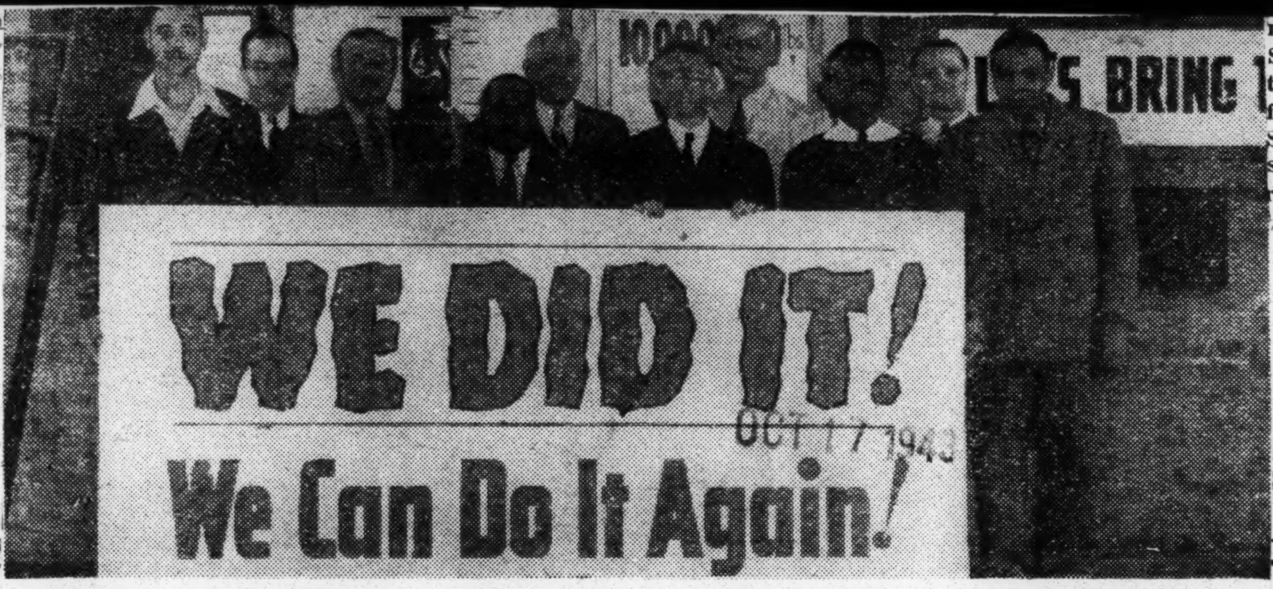
SEP 16 1943

ATLANTA, Sept. 23. (ANP)—Joel W. Smith, who for seven years has been serving as vocational advisor at Booker T. Washington High school, Monday began work as labor counsellor at the huge Bell Bomber plant, the first of his race to be named in this position here.

Present plans call for the plant to use 26,000 workers when it begins operation at top schedule, with more than 9,000 of these expected to be Negroes. Several other counsellors will be named, it was disclosed.

SEP 26 1943

The position pays [illegible] annually. Mr. Smith, a graduate of Morris Brown college, has been working as sports editor for the Atlanta Daily World and is a member of the Southern Coaches and Officials' association and the Phi Beta Sigma fraternity.



WE DID IT!
We Can Do It Again!
BRING
OCT 17 1943

LABOR MANAGEMENT COMMITTEE at the National Smelting Co. in Cleveland displays one of the slogans in their production victory.

The Worker
New York, N. Y.

How One Shop Doubled Aluminum Production

[illegible] G. WENGER

CLEVELAND, O.

THE workers at National Smelting have done it again! Fulfilling their slogan of "Let's Make the Axis Remember September," the members of the National Smelting unit of the CIO Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers exceeded all their own outstanding production records by turning out in the past month more than ten million pounds of aluminum, vitally needed by the armed forces.

Union and management representatives agree that the latest production victory, at the plant which has become famous for its output records, is the direct result of the incentive pay agreement which was approved earlier this year by the War Labor Board.

Twenty months ago, in February 1942, upon the initiative of the union a Labor-Management committee was formed at National Smelting. That was before the government had adopted a policy of urging the establishment of such committees and it was the first in this area. It was then decided that labor and management would, in the interest of the war effort, cooperate for the three main objectives:

1) Sale of war bonds.

2) Unity of Negro and white workers in the plant. (Of the 1,000 workers, 70 per cent are Negro.)

3) Work for a production goal of 10,000,000 lbs. per month (almost double the output when the plan was agreed upon).

Long ago, the shop was awarded the Treasury Department pennant for 10 per cent sale of War Bonds; through the joint efforts of union and management the plant has become a model for unity and cooperation of Negro and white employees—all union brothers in local 735 of the IUMMSW; and now the September output fulfills the third objective originally set

In the beginning of this year under the slogan of "Produce for the Second Front," the company and union agreed upon an incentive pay plan, in order to achieve the goal of 10,000,000 pounds and to give the workers a justly deserved share of the increased production. Under the agreement, which was subsequently approved by the WLB through its Non-Ferrous Metals Commission, the production workers receive each month all savings below the average monthly labor cost during the latter half of 1942

This saving from increased production is placed in an incentive pool at the end of the month and is then divided equally among all production workers in the plant, with the following condition: a worker who was absent without cause once during the month loses one-third of his incentive pay; for two inexcusable absences he loses two-thirds of his share and for three days lost he forfeits his total incentive wage.

Shop Chairman Ray Dennis, one of the city's outstanding Negro leaders and a member of the Executive Board of the Cleveland Industrial Union Council, estimates that the workers will each receive a bonus of approximately $50.00 or about 25 cts. per hour for their September production. He explains that since the incentive plan has been in effect there has been a steady increase in production and, simultaneously, in the monthly bonus—and they expect it to keep going up.

All this has been done without any increased cost to the company or to the government. The company, in fact, benefits from decreased overhead cost per unit with each production increase.

Under the plan, vital war production is being increased; the workers are benefiting materially and in improved morale; absenteeism has been reduced and bond purchases are increased. As the National Smelting workers are saying, "The incentive plan works."

The leaders of the union in the shop have praised THE WORKER for helping to give them an understanding of the advantages of incentive pay as a win-the-war measure. A recent membership meeting of the union's National Smelting unit voted unanimously to take 110 subs to THE WORKER for all officers and Production Soldiers (leaders of production squads), so that they regularly receive proper information to continue their able leadership.

Discriminators Will Lose Labor Priority

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

CLEVELAND—(ANP)—War plants in this area that refuse to employ Negro men and women will lose their labor priority, which entitles them to preferential recruitment of additional workers by the U. S. Employment service, Dr. William P. Edmunds, WMC Cleveland director, announced Monday.

"No company has the right to claim that it has a priority on the supply of labor left in this community when it has made no effort to break [illegible] color barriers and to draw upon a source of manpower that is [illegible] available in considerable [illegible]," he stated.

Edmunds took action after Miss Mary C. Schauffler, assistant director in charge of Negro employment, disclosed that [illegible] of Cleveland's 2[illegible] basic war plants employing over 140 persons had not hired a single Negro. Three of these companies were removed immediately from the labor priority list.

Miss Schauffler further revealed that of the [illegible]70 armament factories which employ Negroes 63 have each hired more than [illegible]0, and of these 63 plants seven are on the priority list. Seventy of the concerns employ some Negro women, but no Negro men.

Dr. Edmund said that there are still more than 8,000 employable Negro women unable to obtain jobs in war factories.

Reidsville
November [illegible]

Many Negroes In N. C. Industrial Plants

Raleigh, Nov. 26—(U.P.)—Use of negro workers in the 485 more important and larger establishments engaged in war and essential civilian production in North Carolina increased 102 per cent from July 1942 to July, 1943, figures on these firms, most of them with 200 or more workers, some types with 100 or more workers and a few with 50 or more workers, announced by Dr. J. S. Dorton, State manpower director, show.

In July, 1943, only 17,682 negroes were employed in these 485 establishments, or only 6.8 percent of the entire force of 259,014 workers. A year later 35,754 negroes were employed in the same plants, or 11.43 per cent of the total force of 312,900 workers. While the number of negro workers increased 102 per cent, the increase in white workers was 11.9 per cent, Dr. Dorton reports.

47h-1943

Owner, Manager, Foreman, Employes—All Women

The New York Times Studio

Grace Bowen, owner of an all-woman plant, was first a model, then a decorator (top left). Now she works in her shop (lower left) and supervises production.

WAR PLANT RUN BY WOMEN

By BEATRICE OPPENHEIM

GRACE BOWEN, "America's most beautiful model" of a dozen years ago, is probably the only pin-up girl in the world who runs two war plants. Both of them—a small shop in a Fourteenth Street studio building where she formerly fabricated cellophane party favors, and a large, newly opened New Jersey unit—were organized and are owned and managed entirely by Miss Bowen.

The small all-girl shop in New York is a striking example of feminine ingenuity. Amid the whirr of drill presses and the screech of power saws a female staff carries on, without male assistance, the production of hundreds of thousands of wood and metal parts for fire-fighting and life-saving equipment used by the armed forces. Each girl is trained to run and service any of the fourteen machines in the place. The "foreman" is 20-year-old Olympia Serritella.

Absenteeism is never a problem at this war plant. Girls who become ill usually stay on the job until they are sent home.

Miss Bowen needed only one month and six days after Pearl Harbor to convert her downtown studio into a wood and metal working shop. During the same brief period she retrained her young artist assistants—adept at making delicate cellophane novelties by hand—to become skilled machine operators.

Miss Bowen's own role as a factory manager was learned by poring over books on wood-working and machine-shop practice and studying the new machines.

The total production of the two Bowen factories is, of course, a military secret; but some indication is given by a single delivery of 480,000 metal screws to be used on tanks in the African campaign.

Grace Bowen takes satisfaction that all the products of both plants are for saving lives and matériel. They have included filler blocks and a portion of the valve assembly for carbon dioxide fire extinguishers on tank destroyers and other combat vehicles, and on Army and Navy aircraft.

The recent opening of the large wood and metal working plant in New Jersey climaxes the third success story of Grace Bowen's career.

The first story began when her sensitive face and slim figure made her a favorite artist's model.

"I enjoyed it," she frankly admits, "but I wanted to quit while I was at the top."

And so, six years ago she accepted a job designing party favors for a large paper company. After a three-year apprenticeship, she began her second success story by opening her own studio.

The end of the war will probably mean a fourth career for Miss Bowen. The former model is already using her spare time to design decorative wood and metal products for civilian use.

47h

NOV 28 1943

438,000 Workers Placed In Non-Agricultural Jobs

New York Times
New York, N. Y

DEC 7 1943

WASHINGTON — (SNS) — More than 438,000 non-white workers were placed in non-agricultural jobs by the United States Employment Service in July, August and September, a report of the War Manpower Commission revealed this week. This represented an increase of 19:5 per cent over similar placements in the April-June period.

Despite an increase for the 3-month period however, non-white placements declined from 155,000 in August to 144,000 in September. The September figures represented 15:8 per cent of the total USES placement of 909,000 persons for that month, but it also showed a decrease of 1.3 per cent below the August rate

The decline in the rate of non-white placements for September was particularly in New Jersey and Connecticut where such placements were approximately one-half of the previous month. These two states, together with Georgia, where the decline was 34 per cent, experienced decreases amounting to 8.400.

The Reports and Analysis Service of WMC revealed that 9,163 skilled nonwhite workers were included among the 438,495 USES placements in the July-September period, while 28,143 non-white workers were placed in semi skilled jobs. Unskilled and other placements accounted fos 260,037 non-white workers, and 138,469 were placed in service [illegible] Clerical ad sales placements amounted to 2,479, while 204 non-white workers were placed in professional and managerial positions by tne USES.

DEC 7 1943

Ex-Hampton Teacher Now Engineer at Bell Aircraft

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md

NOV 20 1943

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y.—Jefferson D. Davis, former head of the physics department and the vocational training program for war production workers at Hampton Institute, is now employed as a vibrations engineer in the Bell Aircraft Company here.

J. D. DAVIS

NOV 20 1943

Mr. Davis's analyses are used when changes are to be made in the now world's fastest pursuit ship, P-39, better known as the Airacobra.

Featured in Plant Paper

In a feature story on Mr. Davis in this week's Bell Aircraft News, he is quoted as saying, "There is a place for the American colored man in American industry, and if I can help blaze a trail for my students to follow, I will feel that I have accomplished something far beyond doing my job at Bell."

A native of Columbus, Ga., Mr. Davis is a graduate of Lincoln (Pa.) University; received the M.S. degree in engineering from Harvard, and has completed the residence requirements for the doctor's degree in physics at Columbia University.

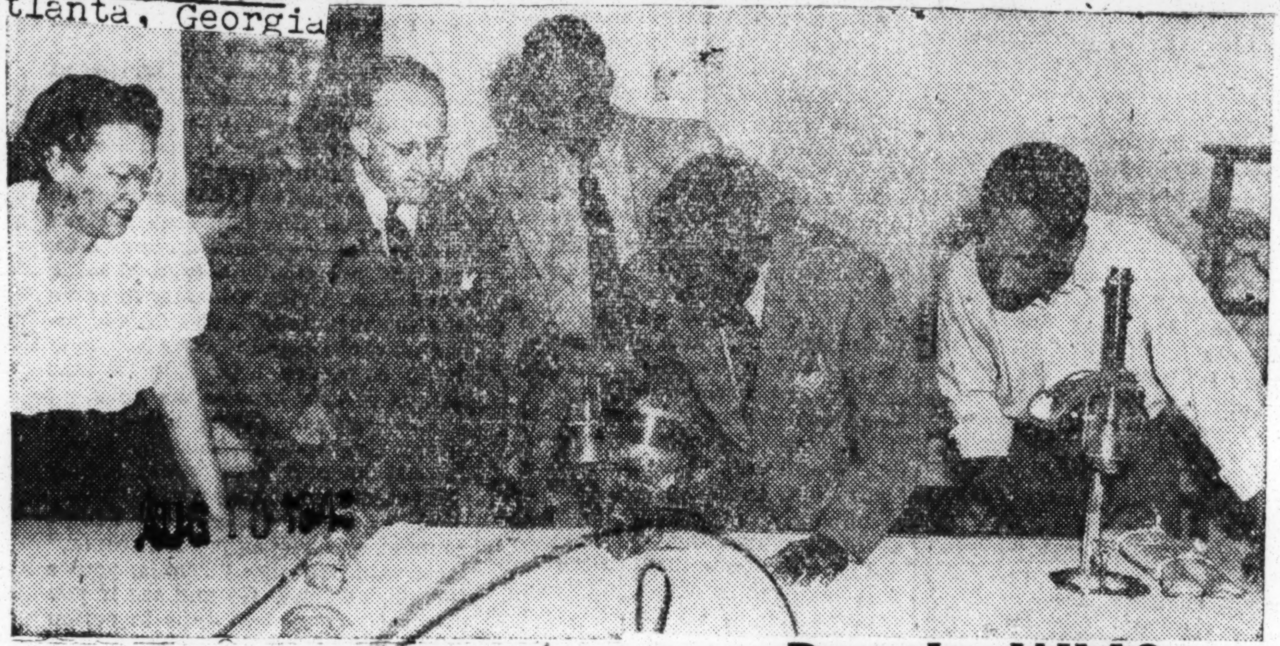
Brothers in War Work

He has two brothers in war work—George W., a chemist at the Hooker Electro-chemist plant in Niagara Falls, and John H., an electrical engineer in the Washington Navy Yard.

Another brother, Paul D., is a student at the Harvard University Law School and a sister, Frances, holds a government job in Washington.

Watch 'Bojangles' Operate Power Cutter

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia



AUG 10 1943

Bill "Bojangles" Robinson, world's ace tap dancer takes time out from show [illegible]ess to visit the Pacific Parachute Company in San Diego, Calif. The plant is the only Negro-owned in the United States engaged in war industry and it employs workers of seven nationalities. Watching Bill operate an electric cutter are Mrs. [illegible]ola Sample, supervisor; Mayor H[illegible] Knox, Howard "Skippy" Smith, president; Budweiser Hawkins, stockclerk.

AUG 10 1943

SHE'S "BACKING THE ATTACK"

Courier
Pittsburgh
Pa.

SEP 18 1943

Mrs. Ruth Austin Corbin, of Pittsburgh, civilian instrument maker with the Air Service Command at Middletown, Pa., participated in the "Back the Attack" show in Washington, to launch the Third War Bond Drive. She demonstrated delicate altimeter instruments.—Photo by Harris and Ewing.

Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Virginia

Discrimination Ban In WMC Agreements

Full Utilization Of Manpower Is Aim Of [illegible]sion

OCT 23 1943

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(ANP)—Reasonable safeguards against discrimination are being incorporated into the employment stabilization agreements announced last week by the War Manpower Commission, a Washington source has revealed.

Written into every stabilization program in effect before October 15 and those now being instituted is this clause: "The decision to hire or defer a worker shall be based on qualifications essential for performance of our suitability for the job, and shall be made without discrimination as to race, color, creed, sex, national origin or except as required by law, citizenship."

Employment stabilization programs, the [illegible] management [illegible] to [illegible] problems of labor supply and demand, are arrangements involving restrictions on separation or hiring of workers, whether through issuance of statements of availability, referral by the United States Employment service, or otherwise.

Specifically, they seek elimination of wasteful turnover in essential activities; reduction of unnecessary labor migration; direction of the flow of scarce labor where most needed [illegible] the war [illegible]ram; and maximum utilization of manpower resources.

MODEL PROGRAM

For sometime now various areas and regions have been operating under stabilization programs arrived at by labor-management committees.

WMC had set up a model program in which a non-discrimination clause was included, but it was not compulsory for the several areas and regions using the pattern to include every item in the mode.

Washington, for example, is one area where the non-discrimination clause had been deleted although there are two Negroes on the area labor-management committee for the District.

According to the bulletin one subject of stabilization programs, all programs now in effect shall be promptly amended by the appropriate manpower director so as to include the non-discrimination hiring paragraph.

It is poin[illegible] out that an employer who fails to adhere to the terms of these programs on this score will be denied the use of USES facilities, which means that he will be unable to recruit labor through that agency if he is unwilling to use Negroes.

Anna Rosenberg, regional director in New York, had already said that she is prepared to withhold service from an employer who violates the program.

OCT 23 1943

47h- 1943

Defender
Chicago, Ill.

NYA DOES THE JOB

The first colored worker in the United Stat to win a certificate of and the anti-poll tax bill.

It is cause for alarm that these men have had the upper hand in this session of Congress.

The time has come for a cry of alarm to rally the people's army for a last-ditch stand against the Bourbon enemy. NYA must be saved!

individual production merit is Charles Fletcher, a welder in the Moore Dry Dock company shipyard at Oakland, Calif.

Fletcher worked out a method of increasing welding production on a certain ship part by 400 per cent.

It is significant that Fletcher is a former NYA trainee from Bloomington, Illinois.

Fletcher's accomplishment bespeaks volumes on the fine work that the NYA has been doing throughout the nation in giving Negro youth the long-sought-for opportunity to learn skilled trades. Possibly no other government agency has done as much as NYA to promote the long term welfare of the Negro. The young men and women who have reaped its benefits will remain an everlasting tribute to its program.

Yet today in Congress an economy-minded bloc of Midwest Republicans has its mind set on wiping out this agency that is doing so much to help win the war. These are the same wilful men who have their blades whetted to knife the Farm Security adr istration

---

HOLD YOUR JOB

Campaign to Help People To Hold Their Jobs Should Be Supported by Citizens

BY JOSEPH D. BIBB

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

INTELLIGENT and far-seeing colored people, realizing that the future participation of their workers is at stake, have wisely set about to do something tangibly constructive. The National Hold-Your-Job committee, consisting of alert and active colored citizens, from important points throughout the nation, has set aside the week of September 12 to September 18, as a time to focus the attention of the people on the means and methods of making good on the job, breaking down spurious contentions against them, and winning the goodwill of both their employers and their fellow workers. This effort is timely and constructive, and should be of inestimable benefit, both to the industry of the nation and to the great hordes of workers.

Mr. Bibb

The most important task confronting the committee and its supporters is the necessity of getting the message over to the workers themselves. It is highly necessary that they be awakened to a full sense of their responsibilities and duties, and that they be convincingly informed that they are being attacked by sinister and evil forces, that they are being maligned and slandered, and that studied attempts are being made to poison the minds of both their employers and their fellow workers against them. The attention of the colored worker must be arrested. He must be reached and he must heed the warnings, and the admonitions of the "Hold Your Job" committee.

DURING the course of the campaign, convincing evidence will be laid before the employers, destined and calculated to discount the propaganda of the enemies of the colored workers who have persistently charged that Negroes have a peculiar body odor; that Negroes are careless about health and cleanliness; that Negroes are syphilitic; that Negroes are guilty of a large percentage of absenteeism; that Negroes are of inferior intelligence; that Negroes receive more garnishments than white workers; that Negroes are unaccustomed to exacting industrial discipline; that they are unreliable and less satisfactory than white workers; that Negroes and white workers do not co-operate together, neither will be happy and that there will be trouble, and that employment of Negroes leads to undesirable social intercourse."

MUST OF NECESSITY MAINTAIN JOBS

These accusations will be disputed and decried and will be discounted by substantial proof that the committee has secured. The workers themselves should be acquainted and informed of the great struggle that they must wage to hold their jobs and to maintain a place in the sun for themselves. Those who read about the "Hold Your Job" campaign should pass on the propaganda, inform the workers of what is expected of them, and, in short, engage themselves in the stupendous task of securing economic liberty and social liberty for their people.

IF the colored American is not sagacious enough to know that the most vital phase of his existence is the maintenance of his job, then he is doomed to remain shackled, underprivileged and deprived of all the freedoms that go along with democracy.

WORKERS MUST MAKE SELF-APPRAISAL

It will be well for the colored worker to make a cold-blooded and dispassionate appraisal of himself and to become aware of his shortcomings. It will be well for him to understand, that he will not advance his cause by constantly belaboring the white man and those enemies of his who are cunningly plotting against him. He will benefit himself by improving the quality of his work, his conduct on and off the job, and proving his adaptability to the accepted codes of modern day workers.

THE worker himself must be aroused and awakened to the full realization that IT IS HIS JOB and that in the last and final analysis that HE IS THE ONE who must figure out the most feasible things to do to win security and the good-will of his employers and his fellow workers. The committee can merely point the way and map the plan, but the colored worker must stand the acid test.

CITIZENS SHOULD AID CAMPAIGN

The colored worker in the past has labored under different conditions. He is no longer largely a sharecropper, a peon or a tenant farmer. He is a war worker, and is a cog in the machinery producing to meet the war exigencies. When the war is ended, there is a strong possibility that for a few years to come there will be a boom in industry. There is a good chance that the exceptional workers will be held on the job. Those who stay on the job now and do their bit should be given preference. There is every hope that there will be a need for the colored worker and that is why he should strain every nerve and fibre to measure up and make good.

EVERY good citizen should join in the "Hold Your Job" campaign and spread the message and emphasize the importance of every worker knowing what lies before him. If the colored American is enabled to hold his job, the way of the future will be bright before him. HOLD YOUR JOB!

Washington Tribune
Washington, D. C.

Wife of Col. Benjamin Davis Is Engaged in War Industry

NEW YORK.—When it came to following in the war effort footsteps of her distinguished husband and celebrated father-in-law, it was a toss-up between the Women's Army Corps and war work of a highly important and confidential nature with one of the nation's greatest war production plants, the Sperry Gyroscope Company. Mrs. Davis chose Sperry where she now works as an instrument inspector.

The Sperry inspector's husband, Lieut. Colonel Benjamin Davis, Jr., is in the North African war theatre commanding an all-Negro air squadron that has already been engaged in some of the fiercest sky fighting on the

Mrs. Benjamin Davis, Jr.

Tunisian and Sicilian fronts. Her father-in-law, Brig. General Benjamin Davis, rose from the ranks to become the first colored general officer in the United States Army.

While Mrs. Davis feels that her work as an inspector in the great Sperry plant may be less exciting than her husband's job, she says, ". . . it is just as important in its own way and is a job that almost anyone with a little common sense can learn to do . . ." Mrs. Davis is a graduate of the New Haven Teachers' College and studied at the Yale University School of Education and the Art Institution of Chicago.

Negro Unit In OWI Assailed

Advertiser

Senate Committee Has Request To Abolish Jobs

Montgomery, Ala.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—(AP)—Members of the Senate appropriations committee said today they had been asked to abolish the negro bureau of the Office of War Information by a witness who asserted the bureau was engaging in "fourth term" political activities among negroes.

Edgar J. Brown, who identified himself as a director of the National Negro Council, made recommendation at an executive session of the committee yesterday.

He brought to the committee room tear sheets from a Philadelphia negro newspaper and from a national magazine (Life) showing a picture distributed by OWI of President and Mrs. Roosevelt with Elie Lescott, president of Haiti, at the White House during Lescot's recent visit to Washington.

Senator Nye (R), North Dakota, an appropriations committee member, said Brown cited the photos as "an example of fourth term propaganda distributed by the bureau." Nye explained the committee took no action on the complaint and could take none, since the OWI's request for a supplemental $5,000,000 appropriation, now before the committee, concerned overseas activities exclusively.

Theodore Poston, chief of the negro news desk at OWI headquarters, said the picture referred to by Brown was of a routine nature, of the type taken "when the head of any state visits the White House," and that it was distributed "only upon request,"

Poston added that 23 negro newspapers, out of a total of 248 in the nation, and one magazine requested it.

Poston said the negro bureau is maintained as a part of the OWI's domestic branch without a specific appropriation for the purpose of furnishing information about negro war activities to negro newspapers and others.

Defender
Chicago, Ill.

Break All Records On First Warship Named For Negro

SEP 4 1943

QUINCY, Mass.—It may have looked like just another destroyer escort to many who saw the show, but the Fore River Yard of the Bethlehem Steel Company nailed a national wartime production record to the mast last week when it delivered the U.S.S. Harmon to the navy—92 days from the hour the keel was laid.

To both the navy and the Bethlehem Steel company the Harmon, first warship ever named for a Negro, represented much more than a sea-going challenge to enemy submarines.

The Harmon hit the crest of the tide at launching exercises July 25, less than two months after her keel was laid. The navy hadn't expected that. No later than August 11, Under Secretary of the Navy James V. Forrestal visited Bethlehem and New England and challenged the shipbuilding industry to beat what was then the record for turning out destroyer escorts—128 days.

Fore River accepted this challenge because it was Fore River's army of 30,000 men and women who established this record. A little more than three weeks after, Fore River shattered its own mark by 36 days.

Unfortunately, the delivery of the Harmon lacked all the gaiety that marked its launching. It was a grim, businesslike ceremony in which the ship changed hands from its builders to the navy. And yet, another precedent was established by the exchange because it was the first navy warship named in honor of a Negro.

He was Leonard Roy Harmon, mess attendant first class of Cuero, Texas, who not only saved several of his shipmates on the night of November 13 1942, but also threw himself in front of a ship's officer and dragged him to safety before being mortally wounded himself by machine gun fire.

The Harmon is now at sea, or will be shortly.

Tell How White, Negroes Work With Each Other

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

Racial Amity In War Plant Told On Radio

SEP 5 1943

NEW YORK CITY — (SNS) — A New oYrk war plant where Negro and white employes are working side by side, was described on the War Production Board's weekly radio program "Soldiers of Production," here recently. The plant was depicted as a modern melting pot where many nationalities are represented.

The factory is the Breslee Manufacturing Company, a war plant that's busy these days out canvas equipment for war weapons, and also one of the top manufacturers of the highly effective fragmentation bomb parachute.

Among the four employes, all of diferent stock, interviewed by the announcer, was Mrs. Ethel Blackwell, 45, a machine operator who hems the top of canvas gun covers. A naturalized American, she came here from Barbados, British West Indies, thirty years ago. Mrs. Blackwell reported two sons in the service. A third son died shortly after he had volunteered but before he could be inducted into the army.

One of the sons is a staff sergeant in the Ordnance Division and is stationed in Arizona. The other son is at the Great Lakes Naval Training Station near Chicago.

Miss Willie Mae Love, 20, a native of Valdosta, Ga., and a resident of New York for seven years, was also scheduled to appear but arrived late for the broadcast. Working as an asembler in the parachute department, Miss Love's job requires much skill. The life of a pilot may depend on her adjusting a chute in its container properly. She was formerly a hotel worker and underwent a period of training before beginning her job.

"Soldiers of Production" is a program of the Labor Production Office of the War Production Board, and is produced by Alton Alexander. Presented each Sunday from 11:00 to 11:30 a. m., EWT, this program is a salute to the men and women fighting the battle for freedom on our assembly lines.

Daily World
Atlanta, Ga.

Riveting Class Now Open To All Employees

AUG 8 1943

Union Executive Board Gets Tough With Strikers

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(S N S)—Workers, Negro and white, were back on their jobs at the Bethlehem Steel Shipbuilding Company at Sparrows Point, Maryland, this week after several days of walkouts and negotiations involving a training course being set by the company.

The training course has been reopened on its original basis-available to all regardless of race, creed or color.

The settlement was put into operation Friday when the union involved—International Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers (IUMSW-CIO)—the company and the workers themselves reached an agreement with the aid of Clarence Mitchell, representative of the Presidents Committee on Fair Employment Practice and Julius M. Gardner, regional representative of the War Manpower Commission.

The executive board of the union Local 33 met Sunday and voted for reopening of the riveting school on a non-discriminatory basis after two six-man committees of Negroe and white workers had failed, in three day conferring, to reach agreement on the question.

The company, which had opened the school a week before and had closed it down under pressure from white workers, promptly launched the course again and Monday Negroes were being trained.

The trouble originated Monday, (July 26) when white employees in the company's riveting department walked off their jobs in protest against the training program which included Negroes. The company immediately met with the white workers, pointed out the need for a 50 per cent increase in the riveting department. When the white workers offered to guarantee this increase, the management agreed to close the school.

Negro workers in the plant immediately walked out in protest against the school's closing and, after a conference with them, the management agreed to reopen the course.

This was done last Friday but strong protests from white workers caused the management to close down the yard "to prevent violence." The three-day conference of the two union committees and the union local's executive board meeting followed.

Monday morning the majority of workers of both races reported to work and, although some of the white workers walked off the job again, the yard continued operations, with state, county and company police present to insure order.

On Tuesday, the absent white workers returned to their jobs after the union had threatened to discipline any members who walked out.

Defense Gals In War Rally

Peoples Voice
New York, N. Y.

SEP 11 1943

Women war workers right out of the shop with welding masks, working costumes and all — will parade on Broadway to Herald Square, at 3 p.m., Wednesday, September 8, to advertise the Third National War Bond Drive and a CIO political rally September 12 in Madison Square Garden.

Fifty or more attractive girls and women from such plants as Sperry Gyroscope, Brooklyn; Ford Instrument, Long Island, and International Projector Co., N. Y., will participate. They are members of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America (CIO).

The women workers will speak over loudspeakers to urge extra bond purchases and to urge attendance at the CIO rally, at which Philip Murray, CIO president, will speak, and such stage and screen stars as Shirley Booth, Duke Ellington, Lucy Monroe and Kenneth Spencer will entertain an anticipated crowd of 21,000 persons.

MORE NEGROES IN WAR WORK

Reports From 485 Defense or "Essential" Plants Show a Large Increase.

RALEIGH, Nov. 22. — Use of Negro workers in the 485 more important and larger establishments engaged in war and essential civilian production in North Carolina increased 102% from July, 1942, to July, 1943, according to figures on these firms, most of them with 200 or more workers, some types with 100 or more workers and a few with 50 or more workers, announced by Dr. J. S. Dorton, State man power director, show.

In July, 1943, only 17,682 Negroes were employed in these 485 establishments, or only 6.8% of the entire force of 259,014 workers. A year later 35,754 Negroes were employed in the same plants, or 11.43% at the total force of 312,000 workers. While the number of Negro workers increased 102%, the increase in white workers was 14.9%. Dr. Dorton reports.

Inefficiency Is Charged To Welders

Defender
Chicago, Ill.

By JOHN LeFLORE
(Defender Staff Correspondent)

MOBILE, Ala.—A startling charge of general inefficiency and wilful neglect in the performance of work was placed last week against hundreds of Negro welders on segregated ways three and four of the Alabama Dry Dock and Shipbuilding company's Pinto yard, where ships are being built for the U. S. Maritime commission. The charge was made by inspectors for the commission.

Threatened wholesale dismissal of colored welders spurred CIO Local 18 and the Southern Conference of NAACP branches in an effort to save the jobs of the men.

J. F. Floyd, personnel director of the Maritime Commission, urged both the union and the NAACP to seek a number of first class welders elsewhere who may serve in supervisory capacities over the colored welders.

Through Charles Hansen, CIO leader here, Tuskegee Institute and John Green, president of the IUMSWA, whose headquarters are at Camden, N. J., were contacted and apprized of the facts regarding the status of the welders. The NAACP also wired Tuskegee institute and the association's national office in New York with appeals for assistance in locating competent men to come to Mobile.

It will be recalled that through an unsatisfactory agreement promoted by the FEPC, the Maritime commission, the union, and management of the shipbuilding company, worked out after racial disturbances at the ADDSCO's yards last May, it was decided that Negro skilled workers would be confined to the necessary trades to do bare hull construction work, and that they would work on four segregated ways, one, two, three and four.

Three factors are given as the causes of the unsatisfactory work being done by some of the Negro welders. They are sub-standard wages, failure of white training school instructors to properly train Negro trainees; and a deliberate plan of white supervisors of hull construction to have the Negro workers turn out unsatisfactory work.

47h-1943

WMC Cites Job Gains, Hits Lag In Upgrading

Defender
Chicago. Ill

NOV 27 1943

(Defender Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON—While the overall employment of Negroes in war industries has shown a tremendous increase, the occupational upgrading of these workers has failed to keep pace with this rise, a War Manpower Commission report discloses this week.

The release, titled "Developments in the Employment of Negroes in War Industries," points out that, for the most part, colored workers are concentrated in a relatively few large firms and that there has been "slow occupational progress generally."

The degree to which colored persons are employed varies widely among specific plants, areas, and industries. In the shortage areas of the South, they are concentrated in those establishments and occupations where heavy unskilled work is performed, the report reveals.

In the South, also with few exceptions, no steps are being taken in the direction of upgrading colored workers to new occupations, nor is there any hiring of Negroes to meet the demand of establishments seeking workers for skilled jobs.

Cites Bigotrous Policies

Use of Negro workers has progressed much further in the North's labor shortage areas, the WMC findings declare, but their employment is limited to certain occupations, establishments and industries here, as well. There is very little indication of an increase in diversified employment of Negroes to meet shortages generally in the tight labor market areas.

Although current placement developments outside the South show slight improvement in the placement of Negroes in skilled war jobs as compared with unskilled and service occupations, discrimination is still a formidable barrier in many plants and occupations.

Their successful recruitment for war work is now fundamentally a problem of the removal of these barriers against their employment in many smaller individual establishments and against the general use of Negroes in all occupations for which they can qualify.

This problem is now being accentuated by the efforts of Negroes to transfer from nonessential to essential war occupations in accordance with Selective Service policies.

Steady Increase

Employer reports indicate a slow but continued upward trend in the general level of employment of Negroes. As shown in the following table, Negro workers in July 1943 represented 7.3 percent of total employment in those major war establishments reporting nonwhite employment. In July 1942, a year ago Negroes constituted 5.8 percent of total employment in such establishments.

Nonwhites Employed In War Industry Establishments
July 1942—July 1943

Month	Total reporting Nonwhites	Percent nonwhite of total
July	11,993,874	5.8
Sept. (1942)	12,153,755	5.7
Nov.	13,148,356	6.0
Jan. (1943)	13,375,000	6.4
March	13,954,463	6.7
May	14,262,614	7.0
July	14,157,099	7.3

Placement of nonwhite persons by the Employment Offices increased by about 20 per cent between July 1942 and July 1943, but the proportion of nonwhite to total placements declined slightly (from 18.2 percent to 15.9 percent) chiefly as a result of the reduced emphasis on filling service jobs, in which Negro placements formerly predominated.

Only very small advances have been made in the placement of Negroes in skilled and semiskilled occupations. During the second quarter of 1943 Negro placements were 3.2 per cent of all placements in skilled jobs as compared to 2.7 per cent in the same quarter of 1942; placements in semiskilled occupations were 7.6 per cent in 1943 and 7.3 per cent in 1942.

Out of every hundred placements of nonwhites, 6 were in skilled and semiskilled jobs in the second quarter of 1942, while a year later the number had risen only to 10.

Employment Varies

Although the long-run employment trend of Negroes has shown some progress, the real problem is to get employers to hire locally available and qualified Negroes to meet all types of labor needs. A current illustration of this difficulty now prevails in the textile mills in Spartanburg, S. C.

There, employers are refusing to hire locally available Negroes and at the same time are insisting that the government provide additional housing facilities to house in-migrant white workers. This situation and many other similar situations have not been met because the practice has been not to employ Negroes where serious opposition has appeared.

Hence, the employment of Negroes in war industries has been scattered and varied as between areas, industries, and plants.

There is a large variation from one industry to another in the extent of utilization of Negroes For example, in May 1943, Negroes represented approximately 43.2 percent of total employment in tobacco manufactures, 21.8 percent in lumber and timber basic products, 17.2 percent in contract construction, at the same time, Negroes constituted only 2.7 percent of total employment in electrical and other machinery, 3.0 percent in textile mill products, and 4.0 percent in transportation and other public utilities.

Affected By Community Patterns

Within a given industry there is a large variation from one geographical area to another in the extent of employment of Negroes. For example, in May the proportion of Negroes employed in aircraft establishments ranged from 2.3 per cent in the Buffalo-Niagara Falls area to 10.4 per cent in Detroit; and in shipbuilding establishments from 12.7 percent in Savannah to 25.1 percent in Charleston.

While geographical variations cannot be adequately interpreted without an analysis of variations in supply, it is known that an important part of the variation is due to difference in employer, labor, and community attitudes and practices. The importance of variations in employer attitudes and practices is evidenced by the variation between plants in the same industry in the same locality.

The result of this pattern of extreme variability in the utilization of Negroes is that unnecessary shortages are allowed to develop and persist in occupations for which Negro workers are available. For example, the Office of War Information reports that in some cities transport vehicles are lying idle due to lack of people to run them. Out of 227 local transportation companies—representing 80 percent of total employment in the industry—only eight employ Negro operators.

Haas Reports Huge Gains For Negroes In War Jobs

Defender
Chicago. Ill

OCT 30 1943

(Defender Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON. — Negroes have scored real gains in war employment since the beginning of the war emergency, Monsignor Francis J. Haas, retiring chairman of the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practice, told newspapermen at his final press conference at the committee's headquarters Monday, October 18.

"At present," Monsignor Haas declared, "Negroes constitute one out of every 14 war workers, and one out of every 11 government workers."

"Improvement in Negro employment in war industries has been substantial in the last year," the chairman stated.

"In July, 1942," he pointed out, "Negro workers constituted only 5.8 per cent of total war production employees. By July, 1943, this percentage had risen to 7.3 per cent. Since Negroes constitute roughtly 10 per cent of our population, you can see that we still have a big job ahead. Negro employment is still limited to too few establishments, and there is still much under-utilization of the skills of Negro workers."

Malcolm Ross, his successor, was sworn into office on Tuesday. Ross, former deputy chairman of the committee, stated briefly that there would be "complete continuity of the committee's work," and announced that George M. Johnson, Negro assistant chairman, would be promoted to the deputy chairmanship.

Monsignor Haas stated that he would leave Washington, D. C. within ten days to assume his new duties as bishop of the diocese of Grand Rapids, Mich. He was appointed to this post on October 7 by Pope Pius XII.

Detroit Janitor Wins War Production Merit Award

Defender
Chicago. Ill

WASHINGTON—A Detroit janitor in a tank factory whose ingenuity has already saved 12,000 gallons of oil, worth $10,000, became the second Negro war worker to win a Certificate of Individual Production Merit, War Production Drive headquarters announced this week.

The award winner is Edgar Gaston, who is handicapped by having only three fingers on his right hand. He is a janitor in the Cadillac plant of General Motors in Detroit, where army tanks are made. One of his responsibilities is the disposal of chips and shavings from metal-working machines.

He realized that quite a large amount of good oil was being thrown away when the chips were cleaned from the machines and dumped into small carts for disposal. There was no oil slinger for salvaging this oil from the chips, so Gaston, on his own initiative, proceeded to build a cart with a false bottom. He filled this cart with the chips and let it stand for awhile. The oil drained off very easily and could be replaced in the machine from whence it came.

The production soldier responsible for this idea was born in Atlanta, Ga., 31 years ago. He graduated from high school and that was the end of his formal education. Because he believes so thoroughly in the advantages of education, his ambition is for his children to become school teachers.

Charles H. Fletcher, a welder in the Moore Dry Dock Company shipyards at Oakland, Calif., was the first of his race to win the Certificate of Individual Production Merit. His contribution was a device to use in welding insulation pins to deckheads which increased production in tack welding operations 400 per cent.

Paired to Smash the Axis

47h

AUG 28 1943

Afro-American
Baltimore, Maryland

These youths are installing De-icer reinforcement on the leading edge wing of a bomber at Crown Cork and Seal Aircraft Division, O'Donnell and Kresson Streets, in Baltimore. Both 18, the two, Abraham Hess, white, and Charles L. Ta[illegible] form one of the best riveting teams in the plant. They are known as trouble shooters about the plant, doing much of the rework on faulty jobs. They say their main job is to help smash the Axis.

Anti-Discrimination Clause Must Be in All US Contracts--FD

NOV 13 1943

Baltimore, Md.
Afro-American

President's Ruling Hits Comptroller General Lindsay Warren Who Called FDR's "Order" a Mere Directive

WASHINGTON

President Roosevelt last Saturday directed that all contracts with the U.S. Government must contain clauses forbidding race and religious discrimination in war industries.

He thus overruled an opinion given to James F. Byrnes, director of war mobilization, by Lindsay C. Warren, Comptroller General of the United States, that the President's order to all government agencies to include such a provision in their contracts was "directive" and not "mandatory."

Stephen T. Early, the President's press secretary, said he believed the action of the President "clears it up once and for all."

Phone Company Refused Contract

The Comptroller Genera[illegible] opinion [illegible] given October 7 in a case in which the Southwestern Bell Telephone Company of Kansas City, Mo., refused to execute a contract containing a clause forbidding discrimination against any worker on account of [illegible] color, creed or national origin.

The company's refusal, Mr. Warren held, was no barrier to a contract because the President's Executive Order No. 9346 was only a "directive" and was not binding upon contracting officers.

Had Warren's ruling stood, the President's Fair Employment Practice Committee (FEPC) would have been left without its means of enforcing no discrimination in war plants.

Roosevelt Lauded

The President was praised in the Capital Saturday for his direct action. He could have left the Warren ruling up to the Attorney General for consideration and a statement.

Instead he wrote the Attorney General advising him what his wishes are.

In his letter Saturday to Attorney General Biddle, the President said:

The President's Letter

"You have [illegible] to my attention the Compt[illegible] General's opinion holding that Executive Order 9346 is directive only and not mandatory in requiring insertion in all government contracts of a provision obligating the contractor not to discriminate against any employee or applicant for employment on account of race, creed, color or national origin, and requiring the contractor to include similar contractual provisions in all subcontracts.

"There is no need for me to reiterate the fundamental principles underlying the promulgation of the executive order, namely, that the prosecution of the war demands that we utilize fully all available manpower and that the discrimination by war industries against persons named in the order is detrimental to the prosecution of the war and is opposed to our national democratic purposes.

"I Wish to Make It Clear"

"I realize the hesitancy of the Comptroller General to withhold payments on government contracts in which these provisions have not been included where there is doubt [illegible] whether the order is mandatory.

"I therefore wish to make it perfectly clear that these provisions are mandatory and should be incorporated in all government contracts. The order should be so construed by all government contracting agencies."

Bell Telephone Company Yields

WASHINGTON

Malcolm Ross, FEPC chairman, announced Tuesday that the Southwestern Bell Telephone Company of Kansas City, Mo., has signed a Government contract, containing the anti-discrimination clause required by Executive 9346, for telephone services to be furnished the national war agencies in that area.

President Seizes Plant Hit by Anti-Negro Strike

Daily Worker
New York, N. Y.

47h

(Special to the Daily Worker)

BALTIMORE, Dec. 19.—Acting on orders of President Roosevelt, the War Department today seized and began to operate the Point Breeze plant of the Western Electric Co., crippled for more than a week by an "independent" union's anti-Negro strike.

The President's action came after President James Drury of the Baltimore CIO Council and other labor leaders wired appeals for seizure.

Faced with rapid progress of the United Electrical, [illegible] and Machine Workers, CIO, in organizing the plant, the Point Breeze Salaried Employes Association, raised the issue of separate washrooms and toilets for Negro workers and called the walkout. While more than 1,000 Negro workers remained at work on essential war orders, the bulk of the remaining 6,000 whites walked off the jobs.

Brig. [illegible] A. A. Farmer took over the plant at 11 A. M., serving the following notice on Clarence G. Stoll, president of Western Electric who is now in Baltimore:

"In accordance with an executive order by President Roosevelt, I have been designated as War Department representative and director to take possession of and operate the Point Breeze plant of Western Electric Company. Taken over today, the plant will continue to operate under army control.

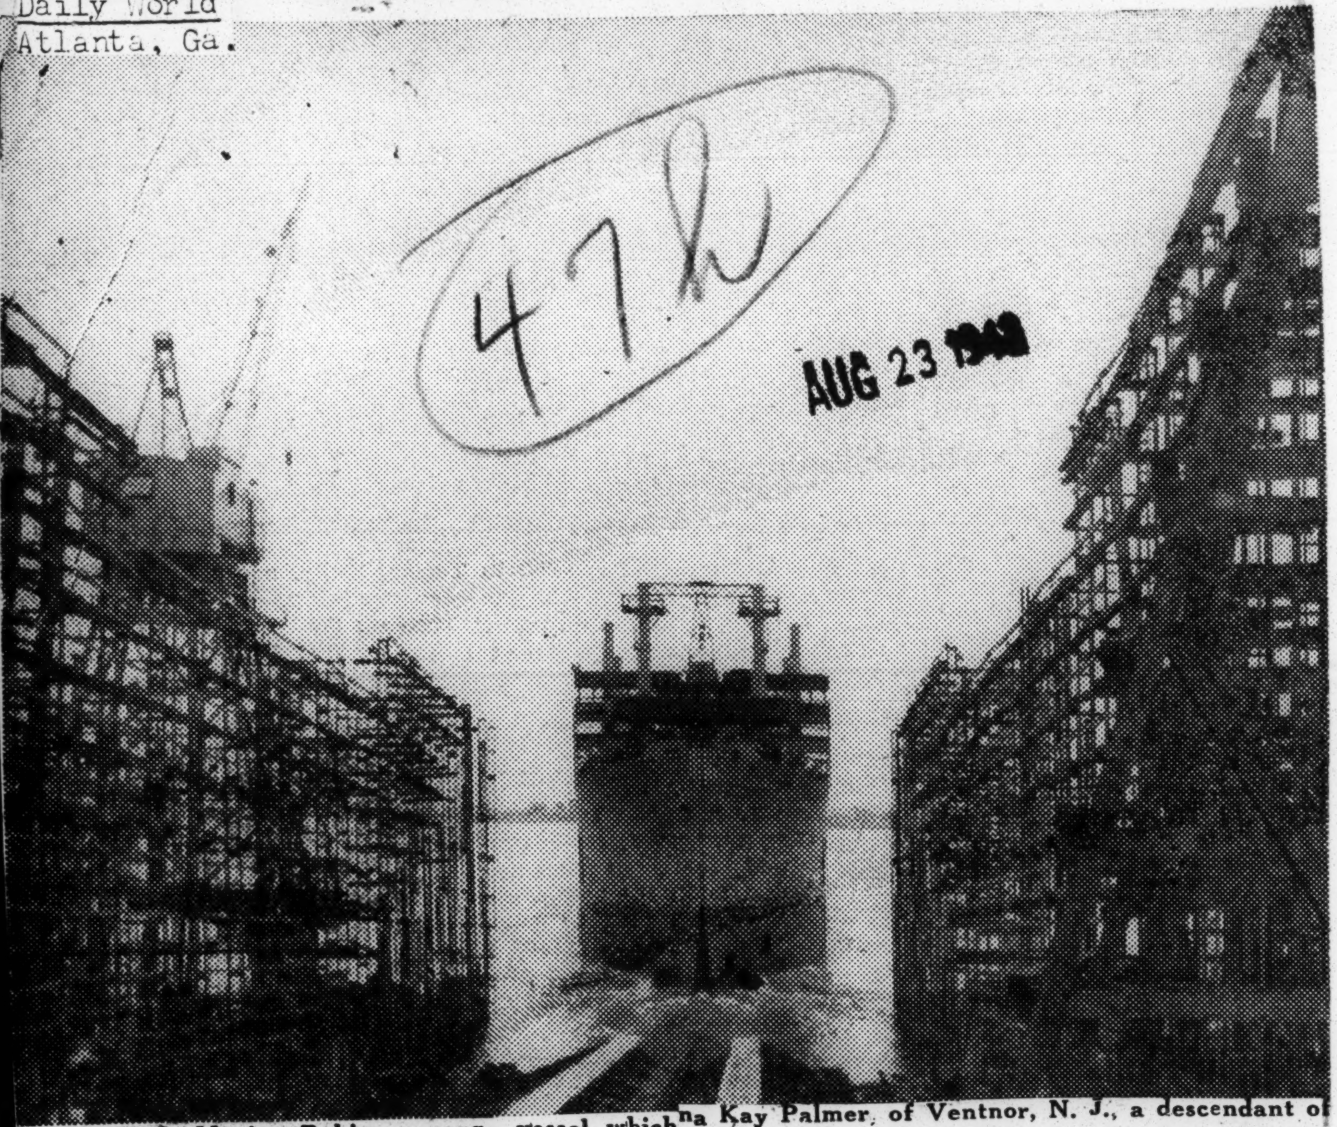
"As soon [illegible] possible we hope to have production back to normal in turning out vital war materials. We are counting on management and labor to cooperate to the fullest extent."

DEC 20 1944

47h-1943

Another All-Negro Ship Launched

Daily World
Atlanta, Ga.



47h

AUG 23 1943

The S. S. Marine Robin, a cargo vessel which can be converted into a troop carrier, is shown leaving the ways of the Sun Shipbuilding Company in Chester, Pa., after being christened by Mrs. Anna Kay Palmer, of Ventnor, N. J., a descendant of Francis Scott Key, author of the Star Spangled Banner. The Marine Robin is the third vessel launched in Chester which was constructed by all-Negro workers. — (International News Photo)

AUG 23 1943 AUG 23 1943

WMC Official Praises Fair Employment Policy Of NMU

DEC 5 1943

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

Believes Same Can Be Done In Any Phase Of Defense

NEW YORK—(A N P)—The relationship of white and Negro workers of the National Maritime Union has received public praise after a review of their employment policies conducted by Walter Diehl, secretary of the sub committee on minority groups employment of the War Manpower commission.

"Your experiences in utilizing Negro seamen and the success of your endeavors give us reason to believe that the same can be done in any phase of defense work," wrote Diehl to NMU officials recently.

DEC 5 1943

Diehl's letter was in response to a letter from Lou Ogull, assistant director of the public relations department of the NMU he wrote requesting information on race relations between white and colored workers in the marine industry. Ogull is reported to have given full details in his letter to Diehl, stressing by specific examples the democratic policy of the NMU and its extraordinary contribution to the war effort.

JEFF YARD PRAISED

The complete absence of racial discrimination at Jeff yard as cited by Vice-President Myers' testimony before the FEPC recently was mentioned in Ogull's letter. The production board of Jeff yard is exceedingly greater than at nearby ship yards where Negroes are not employed, it was pointed out.

"This union, which has a membership of 50,000, 15 per cent of whom are Negroes; has a rotary hiring system which provides that all seamen regardless of race, color or creed shall receive employment in accordance with their date of registration for jobs. This means that Negroes are employed on NMU contract ships in the capacities for which they are qualified and must be employed by the shipping company to which they are dispatched," declared Ogull.

DEC 5 1943

POLICY OF EQUALITY

The basis of the policy of the NMU is that Negro seamen, like their white brother, make all of the sacrifices and endure all the hardships that men of the merchant marine are asked to make in keeping their pledge to "keep 'em sailing" and deliver the goods, officials pointed out.

The example of the NMU and the high production of the Jeff yard "has given us added encouragement that utilization of Negro workers in defense efforts will be vitally necessary in furthering this war effort," stated Diehl in his letter praising the fair employment policy of the NMU.

DEC 5 1943

NYA Equipment Still Idle Despite Manpower Needs

Defender
Chicago, Ill. Bureau)

SEP 18 1943

WASHINGTON — The National Youth Administration was killed by the axe of congress—led by the Republican from Auburn, N. Y., John Taber — just before the summer recess. One of the arguments used against NYA was that already existing agencies could do the training of our youth even more efficiently.

More than two and a half months have now passed, and NYA equipment is lying idle all over the country. The much vaunted vocational education program operated by the states with federal Office of Education cooperation has failed to take up the NYA slack.

Prior to its demise, NYA was turning out almost 30,000 trainees a month equipped to take their places in war industries. At this rate, the war effort is now 75,000 war workers short of what it could have had if NYA had not been killed.

Following the scuttling of the NYA program, Congress hied off on a vacation for the summer. During its absence, the War Manpower Commission, of which Selective Service is a part, found it necessary to issue an order for the drafting of pre-Pearl Harbor fathers, admittedly in an attempt to force more men into war work. The order came as a surprise to many Congressmen, who said they had an understanding that nothing of this nature would be done while Congress was in recess.

War production figures have slipped backwards, too. Of course, NYA's discontinuance cannot be cited as the sole cause — but certainly the absence of 75,000 potential workers is a contributing factor.

It's another instance to prove how expensive is prejudice and discrimination. The death warrant of NYA was first written in the Appropriations of the House, when Rep. Taber raised the "race" bugaboo. He raved and ranted in typical Rankin fashion about white and colored boys and girls associating indiscriminately at the Auburn center of the NYA. By his efforts, he obtained a one-vote margin in favor of killing the NYA.

Now the ghost of NYA is haunting the fathers of its former trainees, and threatening the lives of boys on the battlefields who are relying on up-to-schedule production on the assembly lines and in the shops and shipyards and foundries of the nation.

The idle machinery of NYA is humming — a funeral dirge.

WMC Rule Outlaws Prejudice in Hiring

Afro-American
Baltimore, Maryland

WASHINGTON—(ANP) — Employment discrimination has been definitely outlawed by the War Manpower Commission.

A WMC order issued Friday requires that the following clause be written into every employment stabilization program already in effect or to be instituted.

"The decision to hire or refer a worker shall be based on qualifications essential for performance of, or suitability for, the job, and shall be made without discrimination as to race, color, creed, sex, national origin or, except as required by law, citizenship."

USES Aid Sacrificed

An employment stabilization program is an arrangement restricting the severance or hiring of workers with a view to eliminating wasteful turnover, reducing migration and utilizing manpower to the best general advantage.

The new WMC order specifies that facilities of the U.S. Employment Service are to be denied to employers who refuse to abide by the terms of the amended stabilization programs.

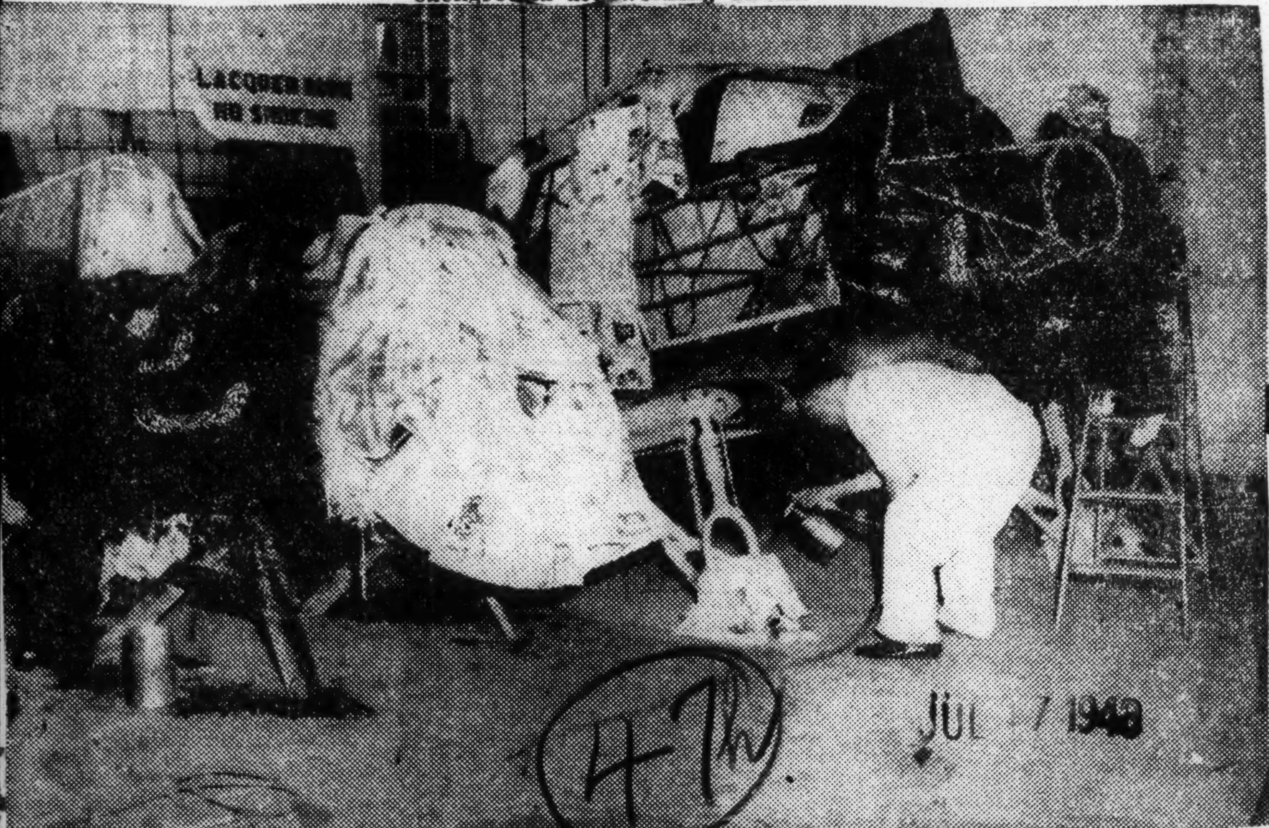
The FEPC, meanwhile, has worked out with the U.S. Maritime Commission, the War and Navy Departments procedures by which cases of alleged discrimination occurring within the jurisdiction shall be adjusted.

Similar procedures are being negotiated with the National War Labor Board, the National Labor Relations Board, War Shipping Administration and the Interstate Commerce Commission.

JUL 17 1943

Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Virginia

MAKING READY FOR ASSEMBLY—The cleaning of aircraft parts preparatory to the assembly of the ships is a major task in the Aircraft Repair Laboratory at the Tuskegee Army Flying School, Tuskegee, Ala. The students seen in the background are working on the retractable landing gear of a P-40 Pursuit Ship. In the foreground, a wing section is being prepared for spraying.



JUL 17 1943

WHERE THEY PAINT 'EM UP—Here is a view of the painting shop at Tuskegee Institute, Tuskegee, Ala., which is now used for aircraft painting and spraying. The trainees in the foreground are water sanding the surface coat on the fuselage of a P-40 Pursuit Ship. The aircraft seen in the rear is a Five-Place Beachcraft used for liason by the Army.

Afro-American
Baltimore, Maryland

Intensive Drive for War Workers Begins in Harlem

DEC 4 - 1943

WMC Making House-to-House Canvass for Men and Women for Factory Jobs

NEW YORK—In an unprecedented move to relieve the labor shortage in this area, the War Manpower Commission has resorted to a house-to-house canvass in Harlem to recruit men and women for jobs in New York and New Jersey factories.

The recruiting, which began Monday, is being done by a group selected by B. J. Barnette, employment secretary of the Harlem YMCA, and will cover five square blocks bounded by Seventh and Eighth Avenues and 140th and 145th Streets.

All Unskilled Jobs

The WMC regional office pointed out that all jobs being offered are in unskilled classifications with good opportunity for advancement, and that a new worker may begin at a minimum of $35 a week.

Most jobs are for a 48-hour-week, with time and a half after the first forty hours. The plants are all in easy commuting distance of New York.

Little Red Tape

Interested persons are asked by recruiters to report immediately to the Harlem YMCA where war plant representatives and U.S. Employment Service agents are stationed. Those who agree to take jobs are being hired on the spot with a minimum of red tape, and in some cases busses are waiting to take the workers to the plant.

If the recruiting campaign is a success in this thickly populated test area, the WMC plans to extend it to other sections of the city.

NEW DESTROYER ESCORT PRODUCTION MARK SET IN DELIVERY OF HARMON

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

SEP 3

BOSTON — (SNS) — A new record in destroyer production was established Tuesday when the USS Harmon was delivered to the Navy by the Fore River Plant of the Bethlehem Steel Company, Quincy, Massachusetts, only 92 days after the vessel's keel was laid.

The USS Harmon is named in honor of the late Leonard Roy Harmon, Mess Attendant, First Class, U. S. N., who posthumously was awarded the Navy Cross for "extraordinary heroism" while serving aboard the USS Sa[illegible]ncisco. He lost his life in ac[illegible] against enemy Japa[illegible] forces in the Battle of Guadalcanal, November 12 and 13, 1942.

The Fore River Plant o fthe Bethlehem Steel Company broke its own record for destroyer escort construction in delivering the USS Harmon. On August 15, 1943, this yard completed a destroyer escort in 115 days.

On August 11, while presenting the Army-Navy Production Award to the Hingham, Massachusetts, Plant of the Bethlehem Steel Company, also builders of destroyer escort vessels, under Secretary of the Navy, James Forrestal announced that the average time of construction of the first ten destroyer escort vessels was 316 days and that the average elapsed time from keel laying to commissioning of the last 20 of the new type vesse[illegible] been cut to 245 [illegible] He poin[illegible] out at the time th[illegible] the record for destroyer escort construction was 128 days and asked the cooperation of all destroyer escort builders in breaking this record. As stated above, this was accomplished four days [illegible]

On August 18, 1943, the U. S. Navy Yard, Norfolk, Va., delivered a destroyer escort vessel 119 days after its keel had been laid.

The keel of the USS Harmon was laid May 31, 1943. Harmon's mother, Mrs. Naunita Harmon Carroll, Cuero, Texas, sponsored the vessel at the time of its launching July 25, 1943.

Harmon, who was 26, was killed when he deliberately exposed himself to hostile gunfire to [illegible]ct a shipmate. [illegible] th[illegible] engagement, with persistent disregard for his own personal safety, he had rendered invaluable assistance in caring for the wounded and evacuating them to dressing stations aboard his ship.

47h-1943

All Nations Were There at War Plant 'E' Ceremony

AUG 23 1943

Daily Worker
New York. N. Y.

It's too bad that the whole United Nations couldn't see the ceremonies at the A. E. Edwards war plant at 223 East 106th St. this week-end, when the workers were honored for their part in winning the coveted "E" of the Army and Navy.

They were a real United Nations crowd.

One saw Chang Ling, a Chinese machinist; Al Mason and a group of other Negro workers, Spaniards, Latin Americans, Greeks, Italians, Jews, anti-fascist Germans, Irish, Yankees, and many more coming forward to get their production certificates.

Just a little shop but so many nations represented.

"And Americans all," said the shop chairman, Charles Gwynn, a former coal miner, in his speech.

This little house of all nations that makes precision parts for military equipment is really tops in production.

Its spoilage rate is under a half of one per cent.

GIVES WORKERS CREDIT

And the credit for its part in winning the "E" goes to the workers themselves and the "100 per cent cooperation the shop committee has given the management," said Al Edwards, the head of the company in a short address.

Technically the little shop, and the twin plant of the Allied Tool Co., with which it is connected, didn't win the "E" for itself. It won it [illegible] the big Arma Corp., of which it is a sub-contractor.

But at the ceremonies two Arma representatives said the twin company was one of five sub-coutractors out of more than 200, which rated special recognition for their part in winning the "E" for the parent corporation.

So each worker was given an illuminated certificate testifying to the part he or she had played in contributing "wholeheartedly to the all-out effort" that won the coveted "E".

"The production record of this all-nations plant shows how foolish is the Axis racial propaganda," said Gwynn.

"Negroes, Jews, Chinese, Mexicans, Italians, Spaniards, Germans and others have won the famous "E" for excellence of the Army and Navy.

"The workers of this plant are speeding production and cutting down spoilage because they want to see facism stamped off the face of the earth," Gwynn continued.

"They want to see the war won as quickly as possible.

"They want to see the Second Front opened quickly [illegible] continent of Europe. They are producing for [illegible].

Gwynn and Jack Sapphire are the labor part of the labor-management committee, that was set up in the plant through the cooperation of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America, CIO.

LABOR-MANAGEMENT JOB

The labor - management committee's job is to clear out all bottlenecks of production. The committee found, for instance, that production was sometimes delayed because certain parts of the machines gave way under strain. That problem was solved by getting an ample supply of spare parts.

Gwynn was especially happy at the "E" victory this week-end, which [illegible] the death of fascism that much nearer. He's a veteran anti-fascist, who took part in many battles of the coal miners union and aided many other struggles to make America a better place to live in.

Labor and Management Unity Wins 'E'

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

Aircraft School Holds Its First Anniversary

DEC 4 1943

The Washington Aircraft School of Atlanta, located at 1041 Beckwith St., S. W., is the first institution of its kind in the deep south and is rendering a splendid public service as it celebrates its first birthday anniversary. The observance in connection with the anniversary was an event of the past week.

The school was established here as a prospective for Negro aircraft workers, and as a result of its operation for the past year, more than 3,000 persons [illegible] race have been certified by the United States Employment Service 400.

Graduate trainees are working at Bell Aircraft, Lockheed, Grummer and several other leading aircraft corporations throughout the United States. But the men in charge of the school here are asking that there be a greater response on the part of all persons in this area interested in the project which has had a far-reaching effect. They feel that, despite [illegible] has been done in the matter of accomplishment, support and interest may have been greater.

More than $10,000 in equipment has been appropriated for the operation of the school and a strong appeal is issued for this free training in a program which can mean much more in training, and preparation of Negroes during the present war and in the post-war period. Classes are held day and night.

To qualify for one of these war jobs, vital to national welfare, school officials strongly urge that Negro residents register with the USES, 191 Marietta St., immediately so that this large appropriation granted for the operation of the school may be utilized to the fullest extent. The faculty is well trained and trainees who graduate will find it easy to gain profitable employment.

There is a definite demand for well qualified workers, and Bell Aircraft will place every man who graduates. This is a surety, company officials stated. Next night classes will [illegible] on December 13, Monday at 5 p.m. and 8 p. m. Next day school will begin Wednesday December 15 at noon. It is asked that all interested persons seeking further information call Raymond 9755.

There is a need for this free training and it is asked that this chance be grasped by Atlantans at once.

Amsterdam News
New York, N. Y.

Col. Julian Changes "Uncles"

SEP 10 1943

Pvt. Hubert Fauntleroy Julian, Harlem's most famous soldier, is no longer in the U.S. Army. His status as a man of military affairs was made public Monday when the dashing, "Black Eagle" arrived at LaGuardia Field from Detroit.

"I'm here to buy myself a new wardrobe," he said, "and I do hope my tailor is able to fix me up in time to catch that 10 p. m. plane back to Detroit on Friday."

Julian was still wearing khaki on his arrival. Judging from his bankroll, however, it was evident that he'd be able to purchase some of the best serges and tweeds on Fifth Avenue.

Before leaving the Army, Julian succeeded, he said, [illegible]ting himself one [illegible] 200 a week jobs at Henry [illegible]s Willow Run plant.

"I am an assistant to Mr. Paul Collier, director of employer-employee relations," he added, "and I am much happier there than I have been in a long time. As a man of 46, I was too old for active duty. So they permitted me to transfer to Willow Run."

Julian became John Q. Citizen, active on the home front, three months ago. His application, sent to five different aviation companies, was accepted by the Ford Company.

"There is absolutely no Jim Crowism at Willow Run," he said, "and I am convinced that the Ford plant is the most democratic business organization in Detroit. A few weeks ago, they fired a southerner for insulting a Negro. They refuse to tolerate that sort of stuff and the union, the United Automobile Workers (CIO), backs the company up 100 per cent. Incidentally, I am a member of the UAW myself."

Recently, Julian said also, he has been serving as a liason officer to preach goodwill among company's 42,000 Negro and white workers. "Occasionally," he said, "we are faced with difficult situations but on the whole we [illegible] to iron everything [illegible] there in the plant."

Julian lives in Detroit. "Many Negroes don't like the Willow Run plant because it is located quite some distance from the city," he revealed. "But Negro workers are doing their share, something we all can shout about. There's a young Negro woman on the job who handles a crane better than any man I've ever seen. I'd certainly like to see our papers print some stories like that because it would do a world of good."

'Skippy' Smith, Parachute Maker, Is A Regular Guy

SEP 11 1943

Defender—Chicago. Ill.

Aside from the fact he is an individual of unusual initiative and foresight, Howard "Skippy" Smith, youthful head of the Pacific Parachute company, is a decidedly likeable personality and one who believes in placing the principle of fairness above everything else.

"Skippy" is the type of fellow who shakes your hand cordially upon meeting you, then says, "Get your questions asked, then let's have some fun."

In Chicago last week, the 29-year-old manufacturer was interviewed by the Defender and then, after reporters' questions had bogged down, joined in a hearty laugh over the irony which attended his recent plane trip to Baltimore, where he was handed the Spaulding Award for achievement in business.

Young Smith, who has made over 150 parachute jumps and has been featured in Hollywood air shows, to the extent that he has become accepted as something akin to the clouds, was stricken with air-sickness on the trip from San Diego. That he, with all his air experience, should be so affected was equally as amusing to him as it was to others in the group.

Injects Democratic Principle

Shortly after he left his home in Birmingham, Ala., "Skippy" won the esteem of Col. C. E. Founteroy, president of the Parachute Corporation in San Diego. Together with Founteroy, who was impressed by the young jumper's daring and ingenuity, and Eddie "Rochester" Anderson, "Skippy" organized his own parachute company, after an extensive course in parachute-making.

His studies completed, "Skippy" set to work organizing the plant which has made history for himself and his race in San Diego.

Throughout his entire life, the youth has been a firm believer in fair practices, so it was only natural for him to carry this attitude into his business.

The result is that today young Smith hires in his factory workers of all nationalities and creeds and thus explodes the myth that men of different groups cannot work together effectively. In his employ are Mexicans, Brazilians, American whites, Negroes, Jews and Swiss.

Seek Post-War Contracts

Young Smith and his public relations director, J. Robert Smith, were here to discuss contract terms with responsible business agencies for the manufacture of men's and women's shirts at the end of the war. They were in lengthy sessions with several local dealers, wholesale and retail, and at the conclusion of the talks appeared fully confident that agreements would be reached.

The west coast manufacturer told the Defender that the present set-up at his San Diego plant, where war contracts are held for the making for parachutes for the army and navy, is ideal for transformation into a shirt-making unit. Much of the equipment now in use there can be converted overnight into machines for the stitching of men's and women's wearing apparel, he said.

SEP 1 1943

Should Smith obtain the market sufficient to justify the attempt, he will become the first Negro to engage in this type of work on such a large scale. When he boarded a westbound plane Saturday evening, he was confident that his dreams would become a reality.

Defender, Chicago, Ill.

Alexander Firm Completes D. C. Tidal Basin Bridge

WASHINGTON. — The $1,000,000 Tidal Basin Bridge, completed on schedule and opened to traffic more than a month ago, and the Independence Avenue Structures were turned over to the District of Columbia last Tuesday — exactly one year after construction was begun on the projects.

The structures were built by the firm of Alexander and Repass of Des Moines, Iowa. Archie A. Alexander, noted Negro engineer, is senior partner of this firm.

The projects, in addition to the new Tidal Basin Bridge, include a grade crossing and a sea wall opposite the Jefferson Memorial in Potomac Park. The sea wall and bridge are constructed mainly of North Carolina granite and limestone.

AUG 21 1943

Several months ago, the War Production Board ordered suspension of work on this project, but the order was rescinded when it was found that the job could be completed on schedule without the use of more strategic materials.

Archie A. Alexander and Maurice A. Repass, former varsity football stars at the University of Iowa and classmates in the School of Engineering, have been business partners for more than 28 years. The firm's first $1,000,000 contract called for the erection of several buildings and a heating plant at their alma mater.

AUG 21 1943

The firm has constructed half of the bridges in the Des Moines, Iowa, area. Its other major contracts include the erection of a power plant at Columbus, Neb., the construction of an airport for a civilian aviation program at Tuskegee, Ala., and the building of a model sewage disposal plant at Grand Rapids, Mich.

Following completion of the D. C. job, the firm has begun the sale of more than $90,000 worth of heavy machinery used on the project. Part of this equipment has been purchased by contractors in such widely separated areas as Georgia, Illinois North Carolina and Connecticut, Mr. Alexander stated.

The engineer praised government officials with whom he worked on this job, and credited their cooperation with the firm's success in completing its contract ahead of schedule.

TURNING OUT THE SINEWS OF WAR AT THE MARTIN-NEBRASKA PLANT IN OMAHA, NEBRASKA

Defender
Chicago, Ill.

An excellent example of the Negro's contribution to the war effort can be gleaned from these photos, taken at the Glenn L. Martin-Nebraska company at Omaha, Neb.

Left Photo: Forming [illegible] for Victory, this group of Martin-Nebraskans are speedy workers in the splicing division. From press, while his wife Evergene works in the welding department. Before joining the Martin-Nebraska company in Omaha, Bryant was a professional musician, playing with some of the leading dance bands of the Middle West.

AUG 28 1943

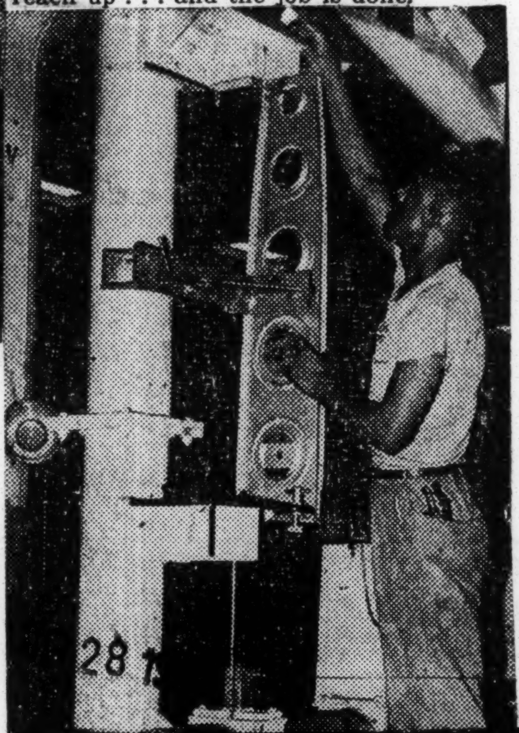
Insert: Bernice Richardson, at the Modification center of the top left to top right are: C. A. Webb, Al Abeny, C. E. Butler, William O. Howard, Miles Martin. William Edson and Leadman Ralph Greene kneeling.

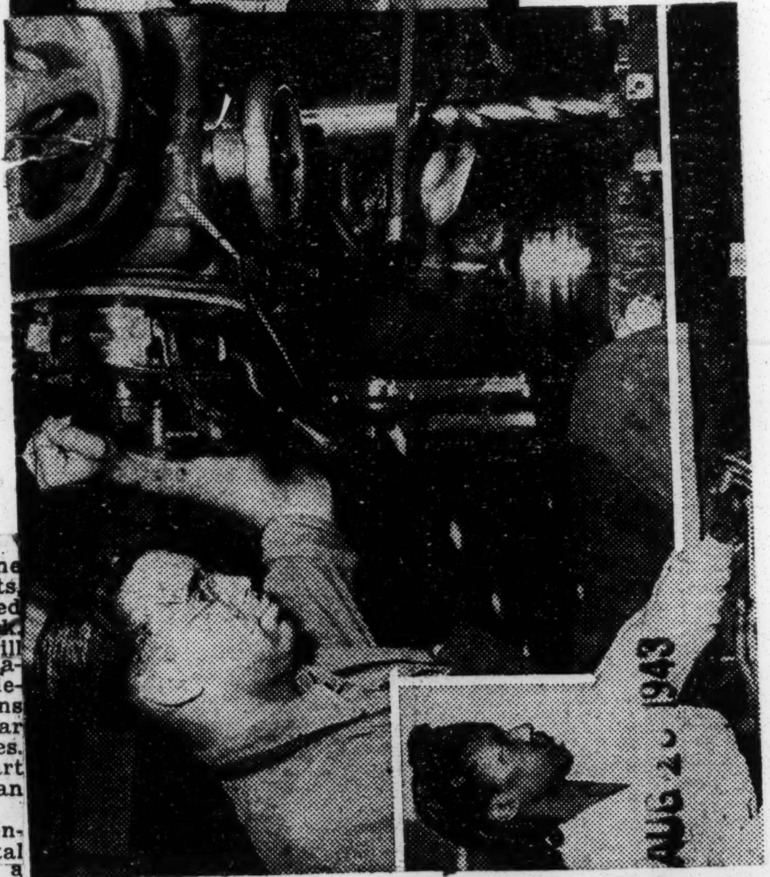
Left Center: In the machine shop and welding departments, it's not unusual to find colored craftsmen doing top-notch work. Ernest Bryant operates a drill Martin-Nebraska plant in Omaha, works in the arsenal department, keeping the guns cleaned. This job calls for clear knowledge of metal surfaces. Bernice oils and cleans each part of the machine-gun, and, she can put it back together, too.

Right Center: Mrs. Eva Johnson, who works in the metal bench department, is doing a good job of turning out small fittings for a new B-26 Martin Mauraude. She studied evenings at Technical high school where she learned how to do this important job.

AUG 28 1943

Right: James (Bill) Monday stands six feet, seven and a half inches high, and weighs 240 pounds. For 16 months, he has been using his great strength as a Martineer in Transportation, Final and Sub-Assembly, helping to turn out new B-26's at the Glenn L. Martin-Nebraska company, Omaha. Bill is adjusting a clamp on a fin jig. To do this job, an ordinary-sized man would have had to resort to a ladder. But all Bill has to do is just reach up . . . and the job is done.





AUG 28 1943

17h-1943

The Feminine Front

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.
NOV 27 1943

Down in the lubrication pit of a vehicle processing plant at a large eastern Port of Embarkation, two of the army's women employees turn their grease guns on an ambulance consigned to one of our fighting fronts. Not only do colored and white workers work together, here, they eat together and use the same recreation facilities.

Women Work Instead of Weep When Men March Off to War

By MABEL ALSTON

NEW YORK. -- Not so many years ago, when men went marching off to war their women sat at home and wept, but not so these days.

Today they are handling jobs left by men, and how thoroughly is demonstrated at one of the larger Eastern ports of embarkation, which was visited by a group of women, Tuesday.

The newspaper, radio and feature writers were guests of the War Department on a tour through the port. The group was welcomed by Major General Homer M. Groninger, the port commander, who paid high tributes to the women workers.

He said:

"Not only are the women workers here doing the jobs [illegible] are given to perform in a thoroughly satisfactory manner, but in the matters of tardiness and absenteeism, they excel men by a considerable margin."

Readjust Readily

The major general pointed out that these women, many of whom have never before been engaged in gainful employment outside of their own home, make more basic readjustment than most men have to make to contribute their share to the war effort. They have made the required changes perfectly, and they have won the gratitude and respect of their employers.

In the motor pool crib apparently frail women handle loaded trucks like veterans. The first woman to be hired in that department was Mrs. Jannie Alexander of Brooklyn, N.Y., who was a former employee of [illegible] Raritan Arsenal. She started [illegible] the motor crib pool in October, last year. She is at present a tractor operator.

Her husband, Technical Cpl. Prince Alexander, recently completed a course in engineering and at present is stationed at Drew Field, Tampa, Fla. She has a son 13 years old, who is cared for by his grandmother.

Whites Only Promoted

There have been several promotions of white women to supervisors, foremen and dispatchers since the hiring of Mrs. Alexander.

Then there was an attractive red-head such as one would expect to find in a [illegible] line-up instead of expertly handling a tractor. Her name is Mrs. Roxanna Brewster. She has two brother in the army, Privates Sidney and Elias Green, stationed in New York City and Wyoming, respectively.

Mother of Three

Mrs. Brewster is the mother of three children, the youngest being 7 months and the oldest 15 years. She works on the evening shift so that it will not interfere with her daughter's education, and she can help care for the younger children during the evening.

Son in Service

"I am working hard to help win this war so that my son, Pvt. Robert Smith, who is preparing for aviation at West Virginia State College, [illegible] return to Morgan State College and complete his education," said Mrs. Viola Smith.

She is a former beauty parlor owner, but when he son got his greetings from the President, she said she decided to do something about Hitler and Tojo. She operates a tractor.

"I accepted a job in the defense industry to help both my children and my husband, Sgt. Leonard Daniels, who is somewhere overseas," said Mrs. Irene Daniels, who is also in the motor crib pool.

On Swing Shift

Mrs. Daniels lives in the Bronx and she has to be up and ready to leave home at six o'clock every morning in order to be at her work at eight o'clock. She has, however, a swing shift which will enable her to spend a few mornings a week with her children. She is working very hard for a promotion.

Mrs. Janie Ellis of New York City was a housewife before she decided to try for a job at the motor pool. She is now handling a tractor expertly and claims that she can manage her housework the same as usual.

The women are attractively attired in neat suits or slacks. They have their cosmetics applied very conservatively and hair arranged in the latest coiffures.

These tractors are truck-like vehicles with a fork-like lift and the women must be on their toes to hit the loads to be lifted in the correct spot. The average pay of a tractor driver is 80 cents an hour.

Women Easy to Teach

Major Ted J. Madden is in charge of the motor crib pool. He said that women are easier to teach than men. Especially is this so with women between the ages of 20 and 35.

Paul McNutt Puts Author On U. S. Body

Amsterdam News
New York, N. Y.
OCT 2 1943

Dr. Henderson Wrote "Negro In Sports"

WASHINGTON.—Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt this week announced the appointment of Dr. Edwin B. Henderson as a member of the National Council on Physical Fitness and the subcommittee on schools and colleges of the National Committee on Physical Fitness.

Dr. Henderson, department head, Health and Physical Education Division 10-13 of the public schools of Washington, D. C., will work under direction of Col. Theodore P. Bank, Chief, Athletic and Recreation Branch, Special Division of the War Department.

On 1910 Champ Five

A native of the District of Columbia, Dr. Henderson has a noted record as an athlete, football official and teacher of physical fitness. He was a member of the basketball team which won the Y. M. C. A. national championship in 1910-12.

A graduate of the old Washington Normal School, [illegible] received an A B. degree from [illegible]rd University, a[illegible] M. from Columbia University, and studied physical education under the late Dr. Sergeant at Harvard University.

He has headed the physical education department, Division 10-13, in the District of Columbia since 1925.

He has also served as president of the Affiliated Board of Football Officials, and is the author of a book, "The Negro in Sports."

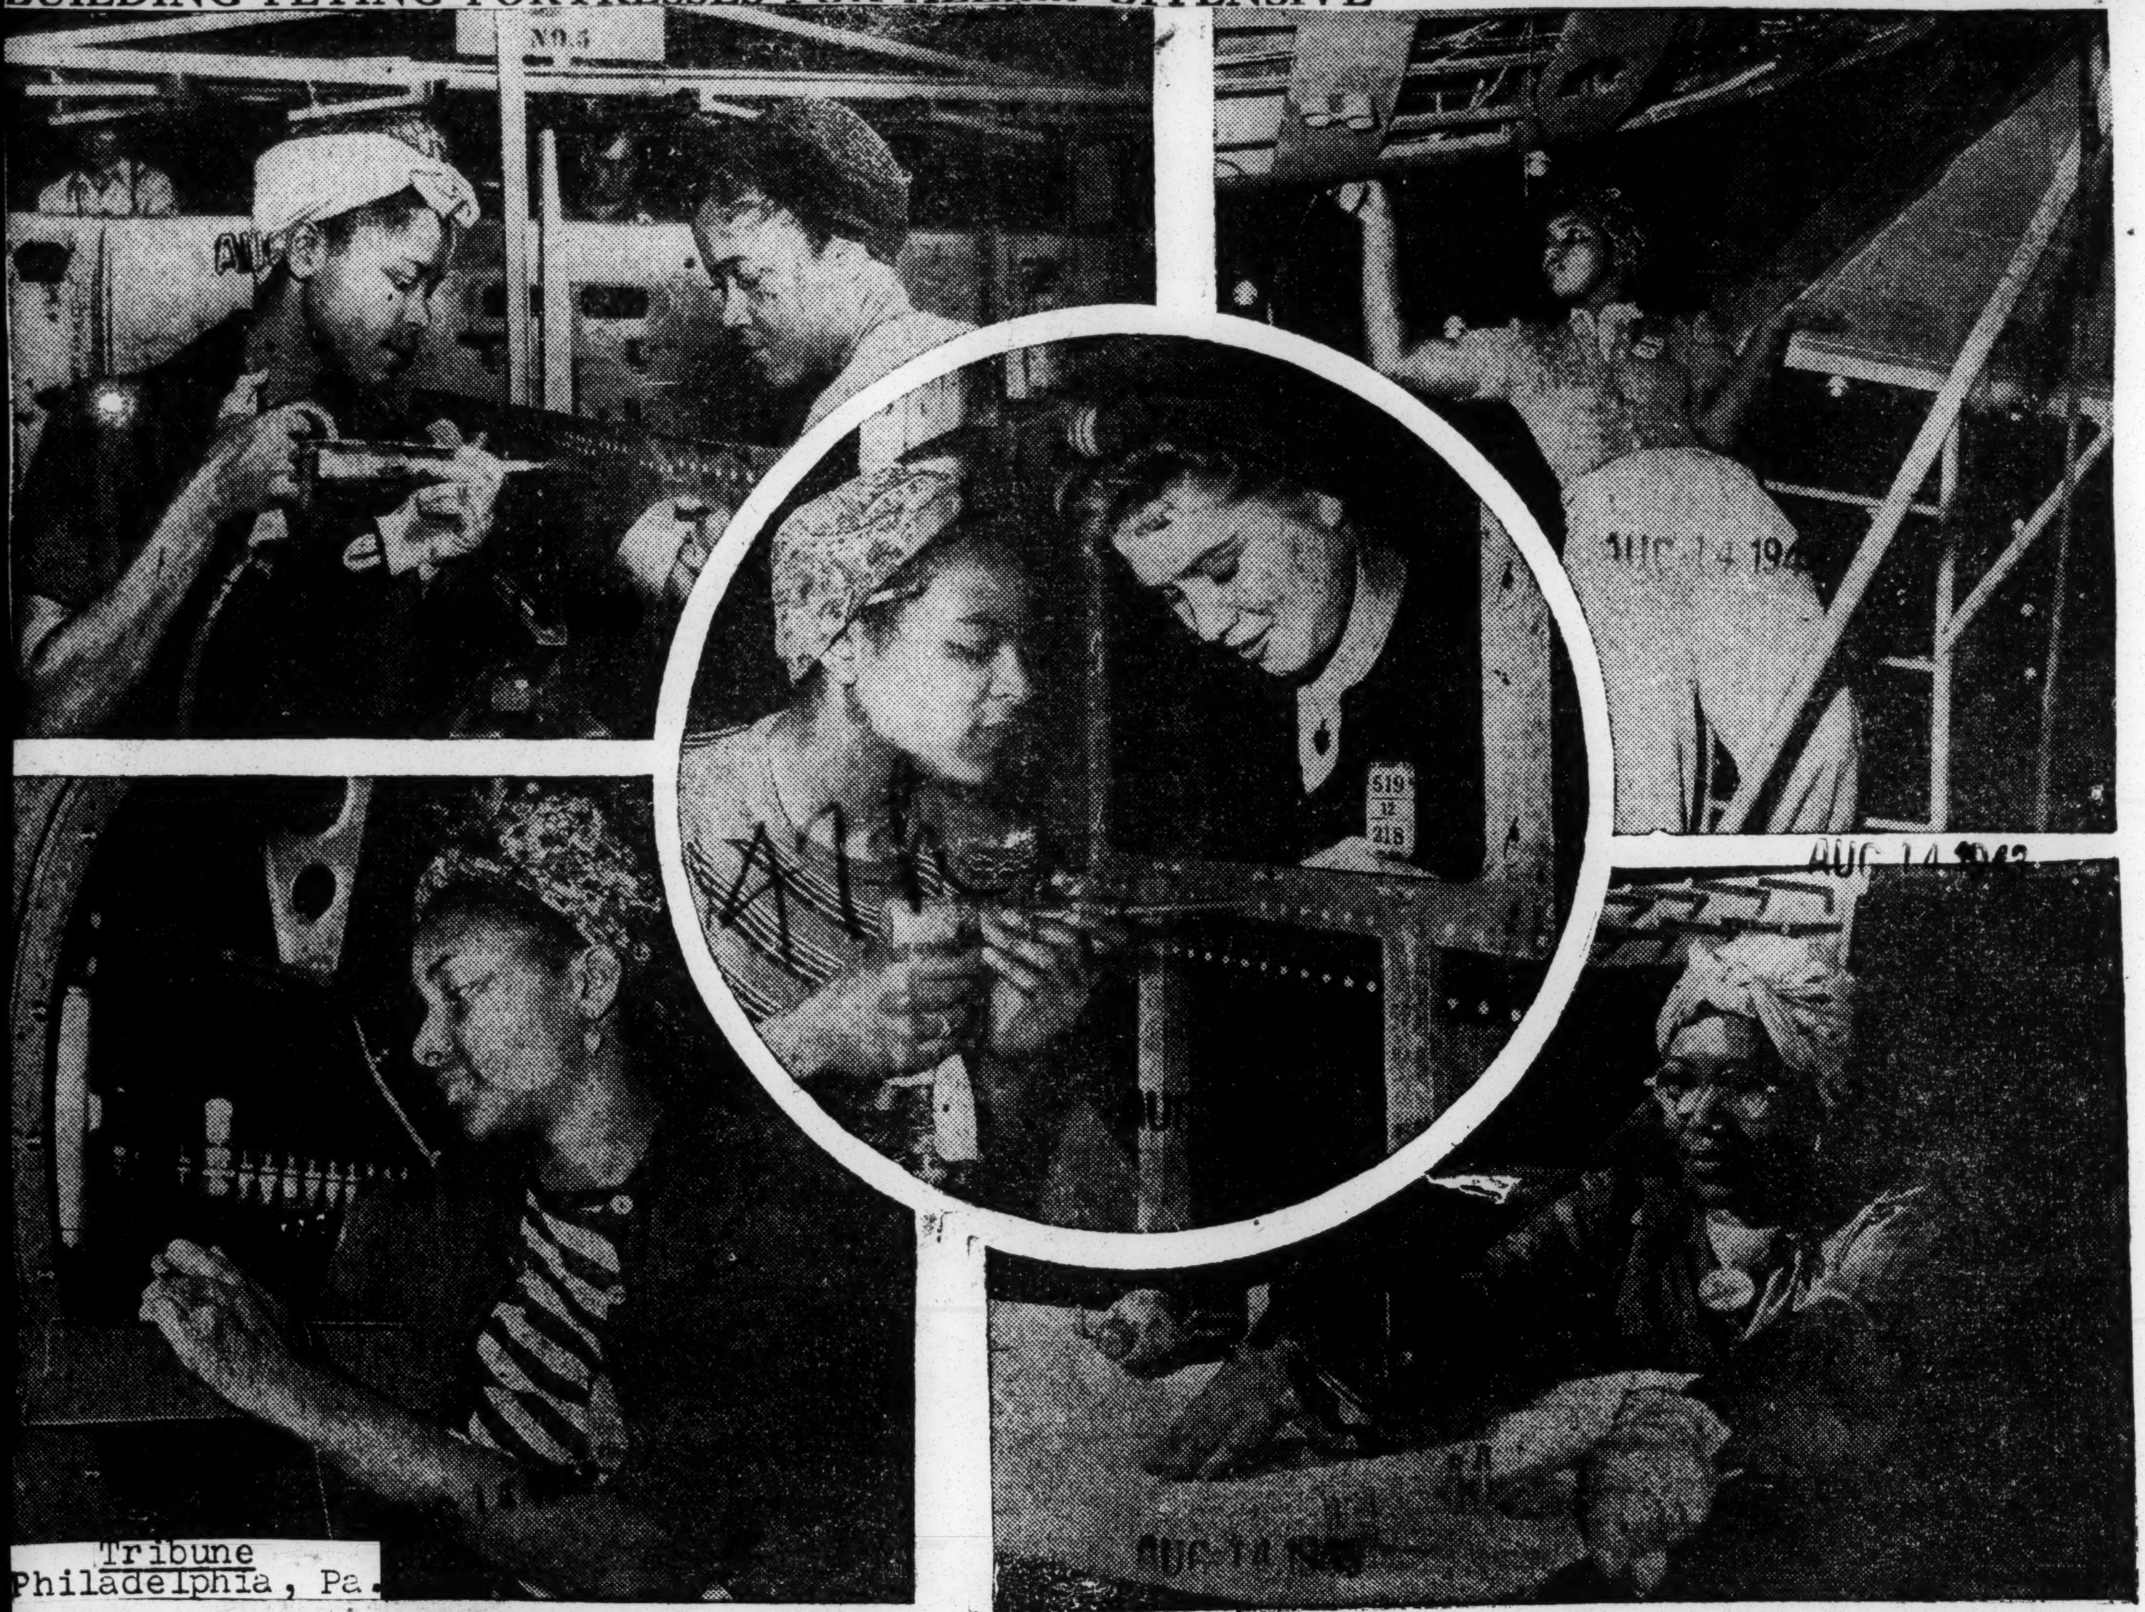
Headed Committee

Long cognizant of the need for increased physical fitness among the civilian population in war time, Dr. Henderson, headed a committee which staged "Victory Through Physical Fitness," exhibition at the Uline Arena last spring at which the physical fitness program in the public schools of Washington was dramatized.

Several outstanding Negro athletes participated on the exhibition which attracted national attention and elicited a letter of congratulation from John B. Kelly, chairman of the Committee on Physical Fitness of the Federal Security Administration.

Members of the Committee on Physical Fitness include: John B. Kelly, chairman; Col. Theodore P. Bank, chief, Athletic and Recreation Branch, Special Service D[illegible] War Department; Asa S. Bushnell, executive director, [illegible]ral Office of Eastern Intercollegiate Athletics; Dr. Warren F. Draper, deputy Surgeon General, U S Public Health Services; Dr. J. W. Studebaker, U. S. Commissioner of Education; John L. Griffith, Commissioner of Athletics, Big Ten Conference; L. B. Icely, chairman, Ahletic Goods Manufacturers Advisory Committee; Captain Benjamin Perry, Assistant Director of Counter Intelligence, Navy Department; Captain John Reynolds, Director of Welfare Division, Navy Department; Col. Leonard G. Rowntree, chief, Physical Training Division, A. A. F., and Office Assistant Chief of Air Staff Training; Charles P. Taft, director, Community War Services of the Federal Security Agency; George M Trautman, president, American Association of Professional Baseball; Arch Ward, Sports Editor, Chicago Tribune, and Hiram Jones, New York State Director of Physical Fitness program.

BUILDING FLYING FORTRESSES FOR ALLIED OFFENSIVE



AUG 14 1943

Tribune
Philadelphia, Pa.

Women are helping to build the Flying Fortresses which are blasting a path for the victorious armies of the United Nations in Sicily.

47h-1943

Sun Launches Largest Cargo Vessel Built

Daily World

Rear Admiral Vickery Speaks At Ceremonies

Atlanta, Georgia

AUG 22 1943

CHESTER, Pa.—(S N S)—The cargo ships now being built in Sun Shipbuilding Company's all-Negro yard are to be converted to troop transports, it was announced last Monday afternoon by Rear Admiral Howard L. Vickery Vice-Chairman of the U. S. Maritime Commission.

Admiral Vickery's announcement was made over the yard amplifyer as he stood on the sponsor's platform following the christening of the S. S. Marine Robin by Mrs. Anna Key Palmer, great-granddaughter of Francis Scott Key, author of "The Star Spangled Banner."

The launching at the Sun wards was the 42nd in seven and a half months of 1943, which equals the total for 12 months of 1942.

CONTRACT FOR 50 VESSELS

The Sun Company has a contract for 50 cargo vessels which are to be built in the New No. 4 yard. Two of the ships constructed in Yard No. 4 are about ready for delivery to the U. S. Maritime commission. The Marine Robin, which was launched last Monday, is the third, and it will immediately be converted into a troop carrier, the Admiral declared.

"The ships you have built in this yard will be carrying tanks, guns and war materials across the oceans within a few weeks," Admiral Vickery told the workers. "The big ship you have just launched will be converted from a cargo vessel to a troop transport, as will those that are now being built. We've got to get more troops to the other side, and the responsibility rests on you workers," declared Admiral Vickery.

The "S. S. Marine Robin" is the largest ship built in America declared Robert Haig, a Vice-President of the Sun Shipbuilding Company and will cost when completed approximately $3,000,000.

Mrs. Palmer, who sponsored the Marine Robin, is the widow of the late Commander Edward C. Palmer, U. S. Navy. A great-granddaughter of Francis Scott Key, Mrs. Palmer's father and grandfather were career men in the U. S. armed services. She was chosen by the Maritime Commission to sponsor the Marine Robin. In 1921 Mrs. Palmer had the honor of christening the S-9, a submarine launched at the Portsmouth Navy Yard.

GUESTS PRESENT

AUG 22 1943

In addition to Rear Admiral Vickery, and Mrs. Vickery, Mrs. Palmer was accompanied by Mrs. William Thompson, Mrs. Clarence Andrews, Mrs. Cyril Morand, and Mrs. Arthur Ackerman, of Ventnor, N. J., Mrs. Daniel Moffet, of Washington, D. C., Conmmander William Weber, aide to Admiral Vickery, and J. McInnis, regional Director of the U. S. Maritime Commission.

John G. Pew, President of Sun Ship, officiated on the sponsor's platform. Mrs. Pew, Robert Haig, Sun Vice-President, John G. Pew, Jr., a Company Vice-President, Mrs. Pew and their two children, Mrs. A. M. H. Sheldon, Robert Haig, Miss Edith Reminton, of Rochester, N. Y., and Dr. Emmett J. Scott, Personnel Director of the No. 4 Yard, were interested spectators at the launching of the third all-Negro built ship. Keels have been laid on all the other 8 ways, with 2 other vessels now nearing completion.

Richard L. Burke, Sun Vice-President in charge of shipbuilding, and George D. Carney, in charge of installations, made a last-minute inspection of the hull, and launching Foreman Frank A. McShane, and his assistant, Wilmer Marine, knelt by the keel blocks, under the prow,, and called off the half-inch marks as the saw crews cut through the heavy timbers which held the vessel to the ways. R. Ottinger, J. Aigeldinger, A. Bedwell, and A. Buckley manned the port saw. R. Sutton, and F. Mosser were the assistant foreman at the launching.

Admiral Vickery's announcement that the ships built in the No. 4 yard are to carry troops instead of cargoes created a stir among the workers. "We're building troop transports now, and not just cargo boats," one workman was heard to remark.

Wartime Clinics Announced To Aid Women Workers

Daily World

Atlanta, Georgia

AUG 15 1943

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—(ANP) — While the committee, on arrangements pushed plans for the national celebration of the "Hold Your Job Committee" Sept. 12-18 sponsored by the National Council of Negro Women, C. A. Franklin, chairman NHYJC, urged workers through out the country to aid interracial unity by adopting friendly attitudes. Franklin said that much of the racial tension abroad in the nation today resulted from both white and Negro workers carrying a chip on the shoulder and daring the other fellow to "knock it off."

"Ths kind of attituted on the part of our workers will not win the war nor the peace," he declared, "but a friendly, intelligent, courteous and harmonious attitude pays the country rich dividens.' '

AUG 15 1943

National organizations, church, labor, civic and fraternal associatons are being expected to cooperate with the national committee in sponsoring mass meetings in local communities to promote "Hold Your Job" observances in every section of the country. Pledge cards with the vow "to be a more efficient and courteous wroker" are being mailed for distribution to organizations from the west coast to the Atlantic ocean.

The NCNW also announced that plans for a wartime employment clinic were being completed. Miss Jeanetta Welch, executive secertray, said the clincs would analyze and recoommend treatment for some of the "employment ills" of this industrial are resulting from a large increase of Negro women in industry.

Courier

Pittsburgh, Pa.

WMC Tells Plant Bosses To Provide More Training

AUG 21 1943

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20—Regional directors of the War Manpower Commission, have been instructed to urge managers of war plants to provide more training facilities for persons already on their payrolls, Chairman Paul V. McNutt announced last week. This action, he explained, was taken because reports received by the Commission's Bureau of Training show a steady decline of enrollments in pre-employment courses, particularly in communities where labor shortages have become acute.

AUG 21 1943

Not Enough!

Pittsburgh, Pa.

AUG 21 1943

OWI Says High Cost Of Living Shrinks Fixed Low Wages

-Courier

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 19 — The incomes of more than 20,000,000 persons who depend on fixed low wages, pensions or allotments, or meager checks from governmental units, are shrinking with every rise in the cost of living, the Office of War Information said this week.

AUG 21 1943

Nine million are dependents of men now serving in the armed forces of the United States.

Nearly 2,200,000 are aged persons on state public assistance rolls.

Another million are disabled veterans drawing pensions or disability compensation, or the widows and dependent children of veterans.

739,000 CHILDREN

Retired and disabled firemen, policemen, state and municipal employees totalling 158,000 are receiving pensions or retirement pay.

Dependent children receiving aid through Federal and State welfare funds number 739,000.

Fifty-three thousand are blind.

About [illegible] retired workers, widows and young children receive social insurance payments under the Old Age and Survivors Insurance program of the Social Security Board.

AUG 21 1943

More than 400,000 persons are drawing annuities for which they had put away their savings for many years.

BLIND DEFENSE TRAINER ANXIOUS TO DO HIS PART

AUG 3[illegible] 1943

TUSKEGEE, Alabama — (ANP) —"Just because I am blind does not mean that I [illegible] assume my share of the war effort," said Ocie Lee McLain, blind ESMWT tranee in the courses of physics and mathematics at [illegible], Alabama, last week after the Library of Congress had forwarded him a treatise in braille on "Principals of Physics."

Atlanta, Georgia

The 35-year old trainee lost his sight through an accident several years ago. He earns his living by directing the activities of a mattress factory.

Daily World

S. S. Panther Built At Cost Of $3,000,000

Atlanta, Georgia

Daily World

Two Others To Be Sent Down Ways This Year

NOV 2 1943

CHESTER, Pa.—(SNS)—The S. S. 'Marine Panther,' the sixth constructed in Shipyard No. 4 of the Sun Shipbuilding Company for the U. S. Maritime Commission was launched here Thursday at 4:30 with Mrs. Nannie B. Alexander, wife of Cleveland Alexander, a guard of Shipyard No. 4 as sponsor.

Mr. Alexander has been in the company's employ since February 20 1941. On November 27 1942, he was appointed to his present job.

The S. S. "Marine Panther," a troopship costing approximately $3,000,000 will be followed before the end of the year by two others completing a schedule of eight since the first keel was laid in this Negro-manned yard on December 5 of last year.

John G. Pew, Jr., vice president of the Sun Ship Compnay, was in charge of the ceremonies.

Capt. Thos. Campbell To Maryland School

SEP 18 1943

Deferder

Chicago, Ill.

Capt. Campbell

TUSKEGEE AIR FIELD. Ala.— Captain Thomas M. Campbell, M.C., 795th Tank Destroyer Battalion, Camp Hood, Texas, has arrived by plane at Tuskegee Institute, his home, where he is spending a few hours with his wife, Mrs. Helen Campbell and his young daughter, Anna Helene. Capt. Campbell is enroute to Edgewood Arsenal, Maryland, for a three week special training course in chemical warfare. His friends are congratulating him on his recent promotion from 1st lieutenant to captain and his being chosen from his outfit to attend this school in Maryland.

N. Y. War Plant Called 'Modern Melting Pot

Journal and Guide

Norfolk, Virginia

SEP 11 1943

NEW YORK, N. Y. — A New York war plant where Negro and white employees are working side by side, was described on the War Production Board's weekly radio program "Soldiers of Production," on August 22. The plant was depicted as a modern melting pot where many nationalities are represented.

The factory is the Breslee Manufacturing Company, a war plant that's busy these days turning out canvas equipment for war weapons, and also one of the top manufacturers of the highly effective fragmentation bomb parachute.

Among the four employees, all of different racial stock, interviewed by the announcer, was Mrs. Ethel Blackwell, 45, a machine operator who hems the top of canvas gun covers. A naturalized American, she came here from Barbados, British West Indies, 30 years ago.

Mrs. Blackwell reported two sons in the service. A third son died shortly after he had volunteered but before he could be inducted into the Army.

One of the sons is a staff sergeant in the ordnance division and is stationed in Arizona The other son is at the Great Lakes Naval Training Station, Great Lakes, Ill.

In addition to her regular employment, Mrs. Blackwell is a member of several civic committees and a post warden in Civilian Defense.

Miss Willie Mae Love, 20, a native of Valdosta, Ga., and a resident of New York for seven years, was also scheduled to appear but arrived too late for the broadcast. Working as an assembler in the parachute department, Miss Love's job requires much skill. She was formerly a hotel worker and underwent a period of training before beginning her war [illegible]

"Soldiers of Production" is a program of the Labor Production Office of the War Production Board, and is produced by Alton Alexander. Presented each Sunday from 11:00 to 11:30 A. M.-EWT, this program is a salute to the men and women fighting the battle for freedom on our assembly lines.

'No Discrimination,' President Rules

World-Telegram

By the United [illegible]

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—President Roosevelt in a letter to Attorney General Biddle today said his executive order requiring a "no discrimination" clause in all government contracts, was mandatory and must be incorporated in all government agreements.

The President's interpretation cleared up confusion caused by a ruling of Comptroller General Lindsay Warren in the case of a contract with the Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. of Kansas City. Mr. Warren held that the executive order which required any government contractor not to discriminate against any employee or applicant on account of race, creed, color or national origin was a directive only and not mandatory.

New York, N. Y.

The President wrote Attorney General Biddle that "there is no need for me to reiterate the fundamental principles underlying the promulgation of the executive order, mainly, that the prosecution of the war demands that we utilize fully all available manpower and that the discrimination by war industries against persons for any of the reasons named in the order is detrimental to the prosecution of the war and is opposed to our national Democratic purposes."

B'klyn Firm Promises to Hire Negroes

Daily Worker

New York, N. Y.

The industrial department of the Brooklyn Urban League announced yesterday that, as a result of a conference between the employment officials of the Arma Engineering Corporation and the Urban League's industrial secretary, the company promises full cooperation to the League's efforts to procure more employment for Negroes.

The conference followed a statement by Lorenzo Davis, industrial secretary of the Brooklyn Urban League, that the Arma Corp. was rejecting "too many colored applicants." The company revealed in its talks with the League its thorough satisfaction with its present Negro employees, yesterday,s announcement said. It was brought out that some foremen of Arma had testified in writing that they were satisfied with the Negro workers.

The company now has about 400 Negro employees distributed throughout the plant, in a wide variety of occupations, among a total of more than 6,000 workers. It was brought out also that talks with Negro workers in the plant revealed satisfaction with their jobs and their treatment.

Wife of Negro Lieut. Col. Serves as Production Soldier

New York, N. Y.

Daily Worker

Mrs. Benjamin Davis, Jr., wife of the organizer of America's all-Negro Air Squadron, and daughter-in-law of Brig. Gen. Benjamin Davis, is working on an important and confidential job at one of the nation's greatest war plants, the Sperry Gyroscope Co., Brooklyn.

It was a toss-up at first whether Mrs. Davis would follow in the steps of her distinguished husband and his father, and join the Women's Army Corps or put her talents into industry. Industry won out and Mrs. Davis is working as an instrument inspector there.

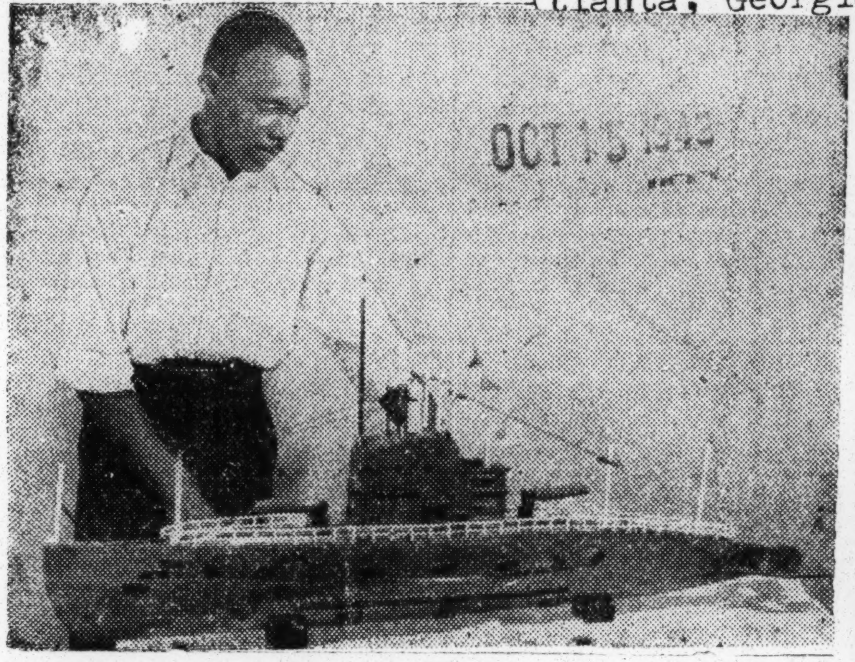
Her husband, Lieut. Col. Davis, is in the North African war theatre commanding an all-Negro air squadron that has already been engaged in some of the fiercest sky fighting on the [illegible]sian and Si[illegible] fronts. Her father-in-law, the Brigadier General rose from the ranks to become the first colored general officer in the United States Army.

While Mrs. Davis feels her work as an inspector in the great Sperry plant may be less exciting than her husband's job, she says, ". . . it is just as important in its own way and is a job that almost anyone with a little common sense can learn to do. . . ." Mrs. Davis is a graduate of the New Haven Teachers' College and studied at the Yale University School of Education and the Art Institute of Chicago.

Lieut. Col. Davis was graduated from West Point in 1936. He was appointed to the Academy by Congressman Oscar De Priest of the 1st Congressional District, Illinois.

Virginian Makes Hobby Pay

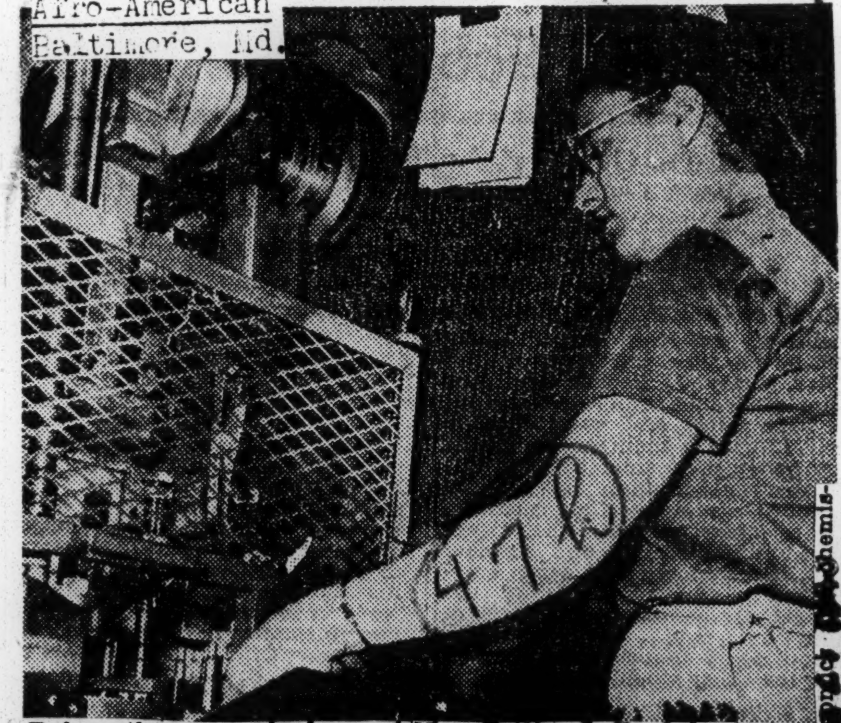
Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia



NORMAN E. ROSS, model maker of Richmond, Va., who has turned his hobby to a paying profession. A specialist in building ship models with only a ruler and a razor blade, he left Richmond last week to take a job in Newport News. The model of a submarine, pictured here, was made from pictures and drawings in magazines and books. Constructed of light balsam wood, the hull is built after the fashion of a real ship and an outer "skin" of balsam strips is glued on.—(ANP Photo Courtesy Richmond News Leader.)

SECRETARY OPERATES MACHINE

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.



47h

Before the war broke out Thelma Berry was a busy secretary for the Twin City Urban league. Now she operates a taper and plug machine at the Twin Cities Ordnance plant, New Brighton, Minn., and she's as much at home at her huge machine as she was at her typewriter. Mrs. Berry is a graduate of the University of Minnesota where she received her degree in home [illegible] chemistry. Her husband is a veterinarian for the Department of Agriculture in Minnesota.

47h-1943

Saga Of Sun Shipyard Tribute To Sagacity Of Emmett Scott

Defender
Chicago, Ill.

By ALFRED E. SMITH

(Defender Washington Bureau)

SCOTT ON THE JOB WITH SUN SHIPBUILDERS

At the Sun Shipyard No. 4, Personnel Director Emmett J. Scott (right), chats with three workers (left to right) George Thomas, Oswald Gilford and E. Chism.

CHESTER, Pa.—An experiment, say the dictionaries, is a test by which something is confirmed or proved. Sun Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Company has experimented with an "all-Negro" yard.

Year-old Shipyard No. 4, staffed by some 8,000 Negro workers, has confirmed and proved startling things of interest and value to American industry and American race relations. The intriguing confirmation process is a saga of the shipyards.

On Wednesday, May 27, 1942, without fanfare, John G. Pew, Sun Ship's president, announced in the daily press construction of a new yard to be staffed with Negro workers, initial supervision of necessity to be white, until Negro supervisors could be trained. Personnel director for the new yard was announced as Dr. Emmett J. Scott of Washington, D. C.

Industrialist Pew had conceived in January a revolutionary use of Negroes as ship workers, possibly while contemplating the bare bottom of the usual labor market. He prevailed upon Doctor Scott to come to Philadelphia for a series of conferences. The terse May announcement marked end of an exploratory period of about three months.

Scott Lays Plans

Availability of Dr. Scott, mellowed Negro leader, a happy combination of personal charm, sheer intellect, sagacity, and an unparalleled experience including 18 years as secretary to Booker T. Washington, a diplomatic assignment to Liberia by President Taft, a special assistantship to the Secretary of War during World War I, and 19 years as secretary and as secretary-treasurer of Howard university, was a windfall.

Frankly suspicious of some potentialities of an all-Negro yard, which northern Negro leadership would undoubtedly regard as unwarranted extension of Jim Crow segregation, Dr. Scott, rated a "conservative" in comparison with young New Deal-nurtured Negro leaders, wieghed the matter carefully between conferences with the impatient Pew.

He called in one or two of his life-long friends and laid the cards on the table. Finally, fortified with their advice, guaranteed adequate authority, and assured a healthy overall race policy by the at-first mildly skeptical Mr. Pew, he was granted leave of absence from the Republican National committee and from February through the May-to-July, 1942, construction period, he planned long and shrewdly.

Work Begins

Under the magic touch of the Pew engineers, some 2½ square miles of desolate sand dunes and river mud on the Delaware elbow adjacent, the Sun yards were transformed figuratively overnight into the most modernly equipped yard in the area. Twenty-eight (28) shipways in all touch flanks on the same shoreline as Yard 4, between towering cranes capable of lifting an average family dwelling. Wide "highway" piers mark deep wet docks for launched but unfitted vessels. Envy of workers in other yards are two travograph robots which slice through piled layers of ship armor steel with the facility and precision of a tailor's cutting machine slicing through cloth thicknesses. It is said, there are only six in operation in the U. S.

Concurrently, there [illegible] other transformations. First [illegible]re in the Negro press over the segregation issue was surprisingly light, and soon subsided editorially into a state of watchful waiting. Negro leaders, after some token protests, assumed the apparent position that immediate employment of several thousand Negro skilled workers constituted an "entering wedge" infinitely more important than physical arrangements which possibly would crumble.

All of this was in part a commentary [illegible] faith of the Negro in Emme[illegible]

NOV 6 1943

Workers Swarm In

Real transformation began in June, 1942. Sun shipyards have always employed Negro labor, but the 2,000 Negro workers in January, 1942, were concentrated almost wholly in the "bullpen" which supplies laborers when and where needed for all heavy work, such as cleaning, digging, or lifting. In June, Negro workers with and without skills swarmed in from the Chester area — Philadelphia, Camden, Wilmington — in such numbers as to dispel fears of President Pew that the Negro labor market like the white, was depleted.

Today 18,000 Negro workers in all have been employed, nearly one-half of the overall total. The "turn-over" here, as elsewhere has reduced this total hiring number to the present total of 12,000. They are being used in nearly every conceivable capacity. Excepting original employees, all of these have come through the exacting routine of the employment office at the gate of Yard No. 4. There, an office staff of 14, functions effortlessly but efficiently amid unceasing bustle. Charles A. Shorter, an assistant to Doctor Scott, tirelessly gives preliminary interviews to each of the hundreds of applicants who crowd the office each day from opening to closing. Promising applicants are assigned to women interviewers who secure vital information for record file cards. Those passing these screenings—Dr. Scott having passsed on questionable cases—are given physical examinations, fingerprinted and photographed for identification buttons.

NOV 6 1943

Throughout Yards

This employment office, gateway to Yard 4, is the gateway to opportunity. This is the major miracle making this a shipyard saga. Yard 4 alone employs some 8,000 Negro workers. The remainder are employed in the other Sun Yards, thoroughly integrated. Graduates from the inspired training programs in Yard 4, these fugitives from the "bullpens" now weld and rivet and machine tool from one end of the vast Sun yards to the other. There is no involuntary segregation at Sun Ship.

Just outside the employment office door, a round-faced Negro engineer drives a puffy switch engine, busy shunting loaded flat cars along the maze of Yard 4's trackage. It puffs past vast orderly piles of materials, past humming machine shops, and the hangar-like fabrication shops where whole sections of ships take shape before being swung into place by mammoth cranes. It swings around by the ship ways, each swarming with workers on the scaffolding around ships in various stages of construction. It pauses to allow a towering traveling crane, a Negro operator peering down from its three-story high cab, to lift off ton-heavy supplies from the cars.

On it huffs and puffs again, past more ways, crossing and recrossing Yard 4's unequalled miles of paving, pausing at last before the wet docks where five mighty grey vessels ride high and easily. These are Yard 4's prides, its launched vessels being feverishly fitted out for immediate commission. Fittings are not those of the ordinary merchantman, for these, the largest merchant ships launched during this war, have been designated as troop ships by the U. S. Maritime commission, because of their excellence of design and carrying capacity. Each must have its complement of anti-aircraft and submarine guns, and each its quarters for Navy gun crews.

One Ready For Wars

One of these, the first-launched "Marine Eagle," has had its shakedown cruise and is ready for the wars. Flanking it is the mighty "Marine Raven," largest Sun merchantman ever launched, then the "Marine Robin," and next the "Wolf." The latest was launched October 18.

Yard 4's 8,000 workers, approximately 300 of them white and 670 of them women, boast high morale. Announcement that these are troop ships to carry precious human cargoes has made it higher.

Dr. Scott's other assistant, Jerome H. Holland, the "Brud" Holland of Cornell football fame, practically lives with the workers, maintaining his office close to the ways, and interesting himself in the actual welfare of the worker on the job. There is a Yard Band which plays during lunch hours and for special occasions, to the delight of weary workers. The yard also has a winning baseball team.

Aid to morale is the advancement of workers through promotion. The yard foremen, white, frequently turn shipmaking responsibilities over to their colored assistants. Other of the 300 whites, not in supervisory capacities, work in Yard 4 by choice. Women workers, like men, are in varied and skilled jobs, one doughty miss running one of the travograph steel shearers.

NOV 6 - 1943

Medical Service

Master morale stroke is the ultra-modern dispensary, with its nine comely female nurses, five male nurses, and three orderlies, its ambulance, and its unexcelled service. Organized in inspired fashion by Dr. Horace Scott, a practicing physician of Philadelphia, and son of Dr. Emmett Scott, this dispensary has records which at first glance seem to reflect a too-high frequency of accidental injuries in the yard. Actually, Negro workers in other Sun yards are wont to slip away with their minor injuries to have them treated at Yard 4. Presence of the comely nurses, it is feared, has its effect. A feature of the dispensary is the $3,000 x-ray machine.

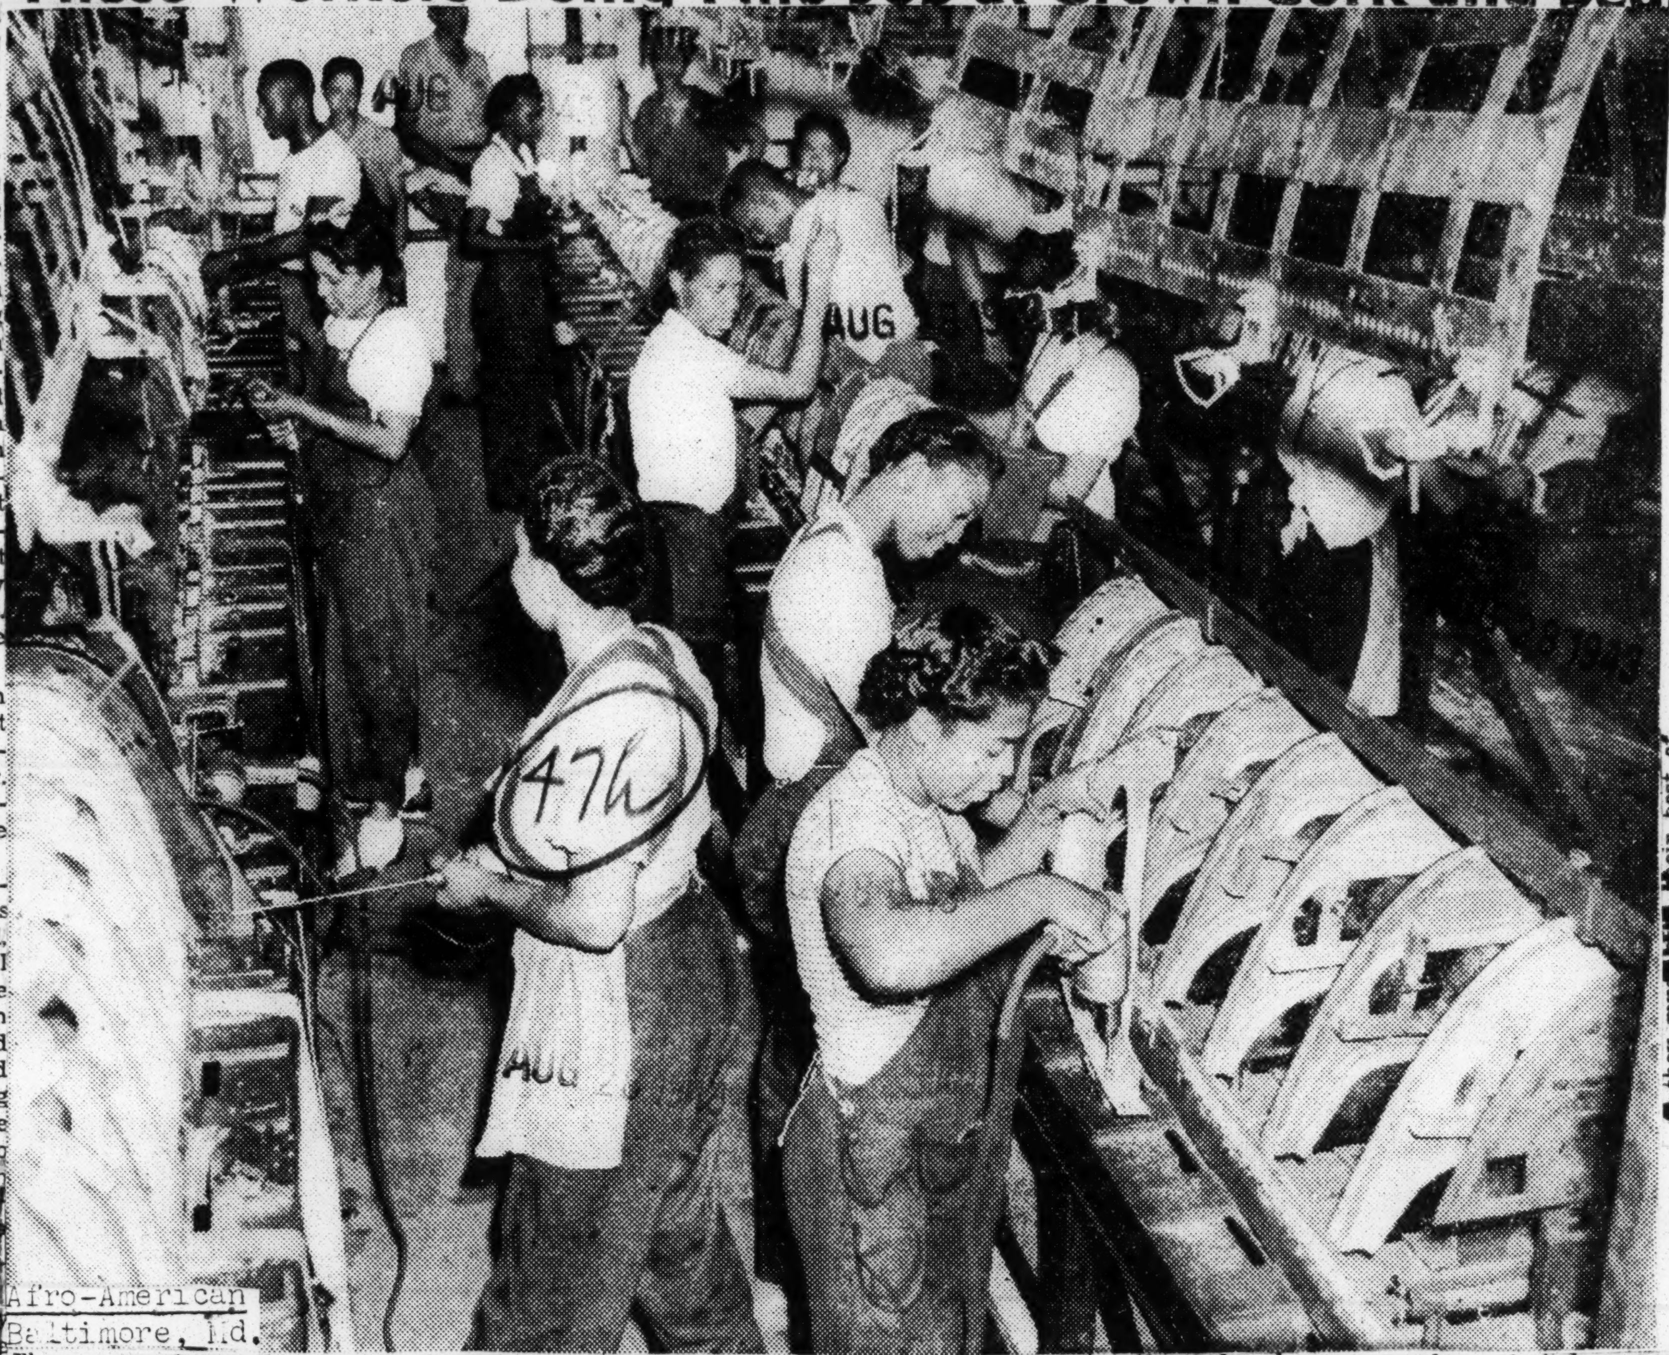
Every day, local trains from Philadelphia are full of clean-cut Negro workers with the unmistakable mark of the shipbuilder. Some wear their protective helmets, some are women, some mere boys.

From 2,000 low paid Negro laborers to 18,000 Negro workers hired since Yard No. 4 opened, skilled and semi-skilled and all paid the identical wages paid white workers for the same work. From no Negro women to 670 colored disciples of the riveter, lathe, and the torch. From a shipbuilding and drydock company with three white yards and one all-Negro, to a company with four yards open alike to the qualified regardless of color and sex, one of them with a Negro personnel director and Negro supervisors.

Conceived with misgivings by President John G. Pew, these miracles Dr. Scott modestly ascribes to the natural ability of Negro workers to make good when given a chance. [illegible] at 70 he does not spare himself; he sees that they get a chance. He holds the reins in his office lightly but firmly, he misses no detail. When they told him he could not find a Negro fingerprint expert, he laughed and came up with two, hiring the more experienced. When the "Marine Eagle" took its shakedown cruise in rough waters, he was aboard.

The Pews do not like fanfare. No great ceremonies at launchings. They build a good ship, with U. S. Maritime experts there to watch and check, workers gather round and they slide it down the ways with a cheer and start another. Yard 4, following this pattern, is quiet, unsung amid its miracles, a Saga of the shipyards.

These Workers Doing Fine Job at Crown Cork and Seal



Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

These are sub-assembly workers in the aircraft division of Crown, Cork and Seal Company in Baltimore. They are among the many colored employees in this division who are doing a tip-top production job, according to the management. Workers in the foreground are drilling holes in the rib of the leading edge wing of a famed bomber. Others in the background do sub-assembly work. This is one of the two operations performed in this section. Colored persons also work in the section which produces parts for this same aircraft.

America Must Decide Now:

Peoples Voice
New York, N. Y.

Whether Negro War Worker Is Asset or Liability

"The Negro War Worker—Asset or Liability? America Must Decide Now," is the title [illegible] the Brooklyn Urban League Industrial Department's semi-annual report of activities concerning the employment of NYC's Negroes during the first half of 1943.

The report, prepared by the league's industrial secretary, Loren[illegible] Davis, lists the following conclusions as constituting the major obstacles impeding the fair employment of Negro workers in the war production effort of this area "drawn upon the observations made from its dealings with thousands of Negro workers and hundreds of employers":

- unfair hi[illegible] practi[illegible] essential and [illegible]essential employers. More than 50% of the war plants served by this department still suggest discrimination in the employment of Negroes;
- the refusal of employers to hire Negroes at their highest skills or to upgrade them where their skill can best be utilized in war production;
- Negro woman power is still the most greatly neglected segment of Negro workers. They are almost totally denied clerical employment. Qualifications demanded of them by large industries are so unnecessarily hig[illegible] pa[illegible]al and arbitrary as to auto[illegible]ify them;
- industry for the most part is not understanding of the problems faced by newly introduced Negro workers and therefore not fair in its treatment of them. It is too ready to fire Negroes in questionable situations unusually provoked by anti-Negro, unpatriotic agitators;
- lukewarm and biased labor organizations which should demand the utilization of more Negroes;
- the need for a constant check on the referral procedures of the local U. S. Employment Service offices to ins[illegible] undisc[illegible]tory placement m[illegible]s.

Advice to Workers

The report gives the following advice to Negro workers to aid them in gaining their just place in the war effort:

- they must be vigorous but orderly, rational and tolerant in striving for their rights;
- they must unite themselves with progressive forces as organized labor which has shown sincere interest i[illegible] Negroes' fight for economic e[illegible]y;
- they mus[illegible] their best effort to their job—be cooperative and avoid interracial friction;
- take training courses for post-war value;
- formally report all cases of race discrimination in order to exhibit how widespread it is and the urgent need for corrective measures.

47h-1943

Crown Cork Supervisor, Leaders

Afro-American
Baltimore, Maryland

AUG 28 1943

Shown are the general supervisors and leaders of aircraft division, Crown Cork and Seal Company, located at O'Donnell and Kresson Streets, Baltimore. The leaders were trained by Clifton Scott, general supervisor, a graduate of Hampton optioned to the company from Glenn L. Martin Company. Sitting left to right, are Miss Lillie Branch, leader; Mr. Scott and Miss Elsie Anderson, leader. Standing, left to right, William Mason, leader; Carlston Peterson, sub-foreman; Gordon Owens, leader; W. Holmes, leader; Antonio Mello, leader, and Manuel Mello, sub-foreman.

Technicians Outstripping Their Own High Records

Amsterdam News
New York, N. Y.

AUG 14 1943

47

How an important part was played by an American Negro in helping produce in record time thousands of pounds of a secret grease urgently needed overseas by General Dwight Eisenhower was revealed by the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey in announcing the production of the vital war material.

Outstripping even its own high production records to turn out in a matter of hours the special lubricant, the technicians of Standard Oil figured in a colorful drama that matches present-day movie thrillers.

Not disclosing the purpose for which the grease was to be used, General Eisenhower recently cabled the U. S. Ordnance Department ordering the lubricant. Ordnance officers turned over the order to the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey requesting 45,000 pounds quickly for "an important war operation."

How It's Done

Assigned the job of making the grease, workers at the Standard Oil plant at Baltimore were told of the importance of their assignment and were held in instant readiness to start the grease-making machine. Three hours late, the ingredients arrived at 11:30 a. m. on a Wednesday. The plant then went into furious action to make the grease which never before had been made in this country.

Turning continuously, the huge kettles, with their belt-driven paddles, turned out 1,800 pails of grease totaling 15,000 pounds by Friday night, and fleets of Army trucks formed convoys to rush it to a ship ready to sail for Africa. By Saturday night an additional 15,000 pounds were made. [illegible] operating under intense strain, the belts and paddles on most of the kettles broke down. Despite this serious handicap, the final 9,000 pounds, completing the order, were delivered on time Sunday night.

The Ordnance Department then suddenly asked Standard Oil to make 260,000 pounds more, to be delivered ninety-six hours after the first order.

With the Baltimore plant useless because of the breakdown of kettles, Standard Oil sublet the contract for 110,000 pounds to another firm, furnishing it with the secret formula. The remaining 150,000 pounds were assigned to the Standard Oil plant at Pittsburgh. Army trucks from various eastern points were rounded up to rush the ingredients, including some fats salvaged by housewives, to the Pittsburgh grease kettles.

Vital Work

Informed of the tremendous task to be done, Edward Harris, Negro, Assistant Greasemaker at the Pittsburgh plant, along with his co-workers, declared that they would neither eat nor sleep until the job was done. The Pittsburgh grease kettles were driven night and day without a let-up and Harris carefully watched them to prevent a breakdown.

Then the sub-contractor notified the Army that it could not complete its part in producing the grease. To the Pittsburgh plant fell the task of making the additional 110,000 pounds.

The grease kettles continued to operate without a slow-down and Harris and his fellow greasemakers turned out the grease for over 24 hours without food or rest.

As fast as the grease was made it was sped east in railroad express trains. When the final 22,000 pounds were not made on time for train shipment, Army bombers flew the pails to an embarkation [illegible] where they were transferred on shipboard.

Feeds the Army

Totalling the amount of grease made, Standard Oil discovered that 245,554 pounds were manufactured—554 pounds more than were requested by the Army. At the same time, Ordnance officers revealed that speed was of such paramount importance that neither Standard Oil nor the Army mentioned the price of the grease.

When all of the grease was delivered to General Eisenhower, he cabled, "The grease has been received and is doing a satisfactory job."

For their work in producing the grease in record time, Harris and other greasemakers from the Pittsburgh and Baltimore plants, were commended by Army Ordnance officers and Standard Oil officials at a dinner held June 14 at the Union League, Philadelphia.

Chicago Tribune
Chicago, Illinois

MAJORITY OF JOB

INEQUITY CASES AFFECT NEGROES

DEC 22 1943

47

New York, Dec. 21 (AP).—Malcolm Ross, national chairman of the president's committee on fair employ[illegible] cases involving [illegible] comprised about 80 per cent of all complaints received by the agency. He added at a press conference there had been a rise since last July in cases involving anti-Semitism.

Negroes and other minority groups in this area, Ross said, did not have as much difficulty in obtaining jobs as they did in being upgraded to higher skills.

"From July to September, 1943," he said, "twice as many women as Negroes were placed, of whom one in four went [illegible] skilled jobs, whereas one in 12 Negroes went into [illegible] jobs."

---

850 Workers In Memphis Get Army-Navy 'E'

Defender
Chicago, Ill.

JUL 3 1943

47

MEMPHIS. — (ANP) — More than 850 Negro employes of the American Finishing company here Thursday were given the army-navy "E" emblem following an impressive ceremony during which the coveted award was presented the concern at its plant.

Featured speaker was Brig. Gen W. A. Danielson of the Memphis Army Service Forces depot, who praised the gathered Negro workers for their fine contribution to the victory effort. Officials of the company, one of the largest users of Negro workmen in the South, also praised the workers and disclosed that they were participating 100 per cent in the payroll deduction plan for the purchase of war bonds.

Recently it was revealed, the workers voluntarily increased their rate of deductions from 10 per cent to 15 per cent. Absenteeism, it was said, has been kept at a surprisingly low level.

Brooklyn Navy Yard Employs 70,000

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

AUG 14 1943

52 Out of 60 Interviewed Say Colored and White Can Work Well Together

47

BROOKLYN, N.Y. — (Special) —Although I saw and interviewed at least a hundred colored and white employees in the Brooklyn Navy Yard who are working together in machine shops, foundries, on ships, and in offices, I left with the feeling that there was still plenty of room for improvement in racial relations on this industrial front.

In some cases I viewed either deliberate or unconscious segregation of colored men and women at work benches. As the Navy Yard is the employer of some 70,000 people, the treatment of the racial problem by this governmental agency is evil foreboding for the future when the war is won and peace restored and when the colored people may again feel the pinch of unemployment much worse than their white brethren.

AUG 14 1943

Supervisors Talk

I spoke to several supervisors and asked them why the malpractices of segregation were continued in time of war. Did it aid production? Was it done under order from higher-ups? Were they afraid the mingling of white and colored people might cause racial conflict?

They replied that they believed that colored employees work in better harmony if put together in one group rather than mingled with whites. They admitted that colored men and women were among the most efficient workers in the Yard, and also that they had had no orders from their superiors to keep them segregated. However they felt the race question was a very ticklish one and that it was no business of theirs to go out of their way to make an attempt to solve it. As one supervisor put it, "I am here to see that the job is done and nothing else."

War Veteran Loses 4 Days

I could extract no more information from them.

I spoke to a colored employee who told me a very sad story. He said that he had been in the armed forces and was recently given a medical discharge from the army after seeing action overseas.

He had contracted malaria and after he was sufficiently recovered he applied for and received employment at the Navy Yard. It seems that he had a recurrence of malaria a few weeks ago and was unable to get to a telephone to call his shop and report his absence from work, nor did he have anybody at home to call for him.

He was out sick two days. when he returned to work, he received a suspension of two days for failing to comply with the regulation which makes it mandatory for an employee to call in if he is absent from work. He also lost his sick leave pay for this reason. He explained the situation to his superiors but could make no headway with them.

They insisted that regulations were regulations and could do nothing about it. As a result, he lost four days' pay through no fault of his own.

This man felt that he should have been treated more fairly in view of the service he had given his country.

Engineer Does Menial Work

I spoke to another colored employee who told me he was an engineer and also a graduate of a technical school where he had been taught to operate an engine lathe.

lathe. He told his supervisor about this. But instead of his being put to work in accordance with his abilities, he was placed at some menial work that an unskilled man could do and was still doing it for over six months. He definitely believed he was being discriminated against because of the color of his skin.

I visited the Navy Yard cafeteria at lunch time and found groups of colored women and men sitting together at one table and whites at another. I approached the first table casually, sat down and engaged the colored workers in conversation.

Why Segregate Yourselves

"Why," I asked, "do you people segregate yourselves at lunch time? Wouldn't you like it better to sit and talk with your white fellow-employees"?

"We certainly would," one man answered, "but they might think we're trying to encroach on them so we feel we're better off staying right here."

"That certainly is no way to solves the problem," I contended. Somebody has to make the first move. After all, you're working with them. Why not invite them to your table for lunch? You've got nothing to lose by trying. The most they could do is refuse."

I left their table after receiving a promise from this man that he would ask some of the white workers in his shop to have lunch with him the following day.

What White Workers Say

I approached a table where there were a dozen white men eating and talking. I sat down and spoke to a young man who told me he was a lawyer and had had to give up his practice and work in defense industry to support his family.

I asked him how he felt about associating and working with colored people, and whether he had any race prejudices.

'Nnone whatsoever," he replied, "You know," he said, "One thing education has done for me is to open my eyes to these things. I have absolutely no use for any person who has race or religious prejudice."

"Have you any colored friends"? I asked.

"Yes, many of them and should I cultivate another friendship here in the Navy Yard, I wouldn't have the slightest hesitation of associating freely with him and of eating at the same table with him."

Relations Better Now

At the cigarette counter I spoke to a colored man of about 50 years of age who told me he was a veteran of the first World War and that he believed that relations between colored and white employees were better now than when he first started work in the Yard and that this was partly due to the fact that they were getting used to working together all day long.

He admitted that the problem was still a long way from a solution but he believed that these things took time and that race prejudices which had been going on for centuries could not be done away with overnight.

I asked him whether the management was helping to eradicate discrimination at the Navy Yard. He said that some supervisors made an attempt and some didn't.

"It's all up to the foreman you work for," he contended. "If he's a decent fellow, he gives everybody a square deal. If not, well, you know the answer."

"What are you doing about it"? I challenged.

"Just this," he replied. "Tonight I am going to speak at an American Legion meeting on the evils of racial discrimination. Maybe they'll throw me out when they hear what I have to say, but I'll take the chance."

I shook his hand and wished him luck.

52 Out of 60 Answer

I left him and started on a tour of the building. I spoke to sixty men and women, half of them colored and the other half whites. To all of them I proposed the question:

"Have you any objections to working together with members of the other race and do you think this would cause racial conflict?

I am happy to report that fifty-two answered that they had no objections whatsoever nor any fear tha tit would cause any disruption. Only eight dissented, six for the reason that it might cause trouble and two because they believed the problem was best if left alone.

Employees Ahead of Managers

On the basis of these interviews I feel that the employees at the Navy Yard seem to have a better understanding of race issues than the management and should be given wider latitude in associating with and working with members of another race.

Perhaps it is custom and perhaps it is tradition which makes the management see things in another light, but whatever it is it had better open its eyes to reality.

And that reality is the fact that we are all engaged in the same struggle now on a world front and that the enemy does not look for the color of our skin when he faces us on the battlefield.

War Worker's Pledge

Argus

NOV 26 1943

AN EDITORIAL

DIRECT and many statements have appeared in the daily papers during the last week which indicated very definitely that thousands of war workers will lose their jobs in the very near future. And while we do not expect the old rule "LAST to be hired and the FIRST to be fired" to hit the Negroes with the same force it has in the past, yet it is not too late for us to renew our efforts to work and work so as to make our services indispensable to the employer so there will be fewer among us who will lose our present jobs. And with a good record of work and fine attitudes toward employers and fellow workers, it will be easy to get work in other fields, whether government or private industries.

The following pledge is offered by the Hold-Your-Job movement sponsored by the National Council of Negro Women:

St. Louis, Missouri

"The Pledges"

"As a Negro war worker, I know that the job I am performing every day is contributing to the victory of my country in a war to guarantee four fundamental Freedoms to peoples of every race, color and creed. I know, also, I am contributing to a record which will prove to the world that Negroes are efficient and dependable workers.

"I fully realize that my conduct, my work habits, my attitudes, and trustworthiness are the weapons I must use to combat misunderstanding and prejudices, and are the tools I must use to open wider the doors of opportunity which now stands ajar for my race. Further, I realize that training is an additional tool to that opportunity.

"I shall never for a moment forget that thirteen million Negroes believe in me and depend upon me. I shall perform every duty, large or small, with the knowledge that the employment of other Negro workers may depend upon my success. I am a soldier on the Home Front, and I shall keep the faith.

To my Nation, and to my Race, I solemnly pledge:

1. To carry myself with the dignity of a worker and a citizen of my community by being congenial so as to not make my fellow-workers bear the brunt of my fatigue, nervous tensions, or my bitterness growing out of my grievances.

2. To be industrious and efficient, so those who would hold me back shall never be able to defend their actions by pointing to my record and finding it blotted with inexcusable absences, lack of respect for supervisors, or failure to do my job well.

3. To safeguard my health, so that I am physically fit to work efficiently every day—including the day after week-ends and the day after pay days.

4. To support organized labor not only as a member, but as an active participants, for I realize that this is an avenue through which many of my problems as a member may be approached.

5. To be clean, neat, and suitably dressed on and off the job.

6. To stand firmly for every privilege of an American citizen, including the opportunity to use my skills for the Victory of my country; but at the same time to accept the full responsibility of deserving every privilege I seek as my right.

7. Finally, I re-affirm, as a real and living creed, the universal avowal of every American:

"I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America and to the Republic for which it stands.........one Nation, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all."

Nation New York, N. Y.

THE BRESLEE Manufacturing Company, which produces war materials, not only hires, pays, and promotes Negroes on the same basis as whites, but is encouraging its employees to think about the issues involved in the war by offering a $25 war bond for the best letter on the subject "What I Am Fighting For."

47h-1943

Publishers' Committee Advises O W I on Press Problems

New York, N. Y. Amsterdam Star-News

By ALEXANDER BARNES

Acutely aware, through first hand information, of the confusion and discouragement of American Negroes concerning their stake in the war, colored publishers meeting here this week took steps to increase the race's knowledge of "what we are fighting for" and to make further progress in their campaign to have the armed services of the nation liberalize policies controlling their utilization of colored men and women in unform.

Toward this end the publishers on Friday and Saturday conferred with Navy and Office of War Information officials and Wednesday morning visited the White House with proposals designed to remove some of the causes of disaffection.

The newspaper group gathered for a two-day series of conferences in a special session called by the Negro Newspaper Publishers Association, which embraces in its membership over forty of the largest and most influential Negro publications throughout the country.

A committee representing the newspapermen laid before Rear Admiral Randall Jacobs, chief of Navy personnel, reports of complaints voiced by America's largest racial minority [illegible] the limited opportunities permitted Negroes in the Navy. These complaints were especially directed against the failure to enlist Negro Waves, chaplains, and aviators and against the Navy's refusal to permit Negroes to become officers.

This committee also urged a broader program by the Navy public relations bureau in providing information about colored service men and their achievements and activities even within the scope of their present opportunities.

At the White House, in a conference with Stephen Early, the President's press secretary, the publishers' representatives discussed the general problems and specificially the current obstacles limiting them in keeping the administration and their reading public fully advised on matters of vital public interest.

After this conference with Mr. Early the publishers took action looking toward representation in White House press conferences and in the Senate and House press galleries.

In talks with OWI officials proposals were offered in the hope of making more effective that agency's news, pictures, radio and movie shorts presentation of the Negro's role in the war effort, and in augmenting the effectiveness of the Negro's contribution to the government's efforts.

One of the publishers' final actions was to authorize a formal statement to be laid before the President on certain conditions which in the publishers' opinion are contributing to disunity and loss of productiveness in the drive for victory.

The Publishers also discussed their participation in the War Advertising Council, the bill before Congress to abolish the poll tax as a prerequisite for voting in federal elections, the FEPC and the forthcoming annual observance of Negro Newspaper Week.

In attendance were: John Sengestacke, NNPA president and publisher of the Chicago Defender; P. L. Prattis, executive editor and Mrs. Robert L. Vann, treasurer, Pittsburgh Courier; Carl, Howard and Arnett Murphy, editor, auditor and secretary, Afro-American; Charles Browning, Chicago Defender; P. Bernard and Thomas W. Young editor and business manager Journal & Guide; Frank Stanley general manager, Louisville Defender; Carter Wesley, editor, Houston Informer; W. O. Walker, editor, Cleveland Call-Post; Alexander Barnes, promotion manager, Washington Tribune; C. B. Powell, editor, New York Amsterdam Star-News; Joseph Christian, New York Voice; Mrs. Juanita Goodman, Los Angeles Sentinel; Roy Garvin, Joe LaCour and Ralph Matthews of the Washington office of the Afro-American.

Afro-American
Baltimore, Maryland

Talbert-Hess Model Team at Crown Cork and Seal

Teamed as riveters and rework men, two 18-year-old youths, Calvin L. Talbert and Abraham Hess, white, are teaching older employes at Crown, Cork and Seal Aircraft Division a thing or two about democracy.

The division, located at O'Donnell and Kresson Streets, is a subsidiary making parts for the Glenn L. Martin Company.

The youths have been working as combination since February, when Talbert was first employed, and clicked from the outset in face of snide comments from cynical fellow employes who apparently had little faith that they would endure as a team.

The duo are now known about the plant as trouble shooters. When a faulty piece of work turns up, they are the ones who ferret out the defects and correct them.

Both Like Combination

I was interested, during a recent visit to the plant, to learn how Hess felt about teaming with Talbert, and vice versa. Both said that they wished some of the other employes would follow their example.

They impressed me with the fact that they were making a real and concrete contribution toward ending the war soon which, as they put it, is what everybody should keep foremost in mind anyway.

Hess has been with the compayn for over a year, while Talbert came after graduating from War Vocational Training School No. 453.

The management has noted their work. S. S. Key, white, in charge of employee relations, said:

"They have been working together for several months in this department (leading edge wing section), get along swell and have done a magnificient job."

Constituting about one-fourth of the personnel, colored persons have been working in the same sections with whites since January, but instances wherein races are intermingled are few.

All Doing a Tip Top Job

They are employed in the leading edge wing and spars section as riveters, lathe drillers, subassembly workers and drillers. With few exceptions, all are doing a tip top job, management says.

In general, according to Mr. Key, the relations between races and between employees and management are "exceedingly harmonious." Everything is done to keep them that way, he added.

P. E. Greenhotz, white, manager of the plant, said:

"I think everything has been satisfactory as far as the colored workers are concerned. We have gone to extremes to keep happiness among all workers."

Leisure Time Activities

He was referring to leisure time activities which the company sponsors for the workers, including the underwriting of social affairs and a softball league.

A team composed of colored persons plays regularly in a softball loop with teams from other divisions of Crown, Cork and Seal, Mr. Grenhotz pointed out.

Absenteeism Low

The plant has a remarkably low rate of absenteeism, management avers. Nevertheless, even though conceding that some of it is almost inevitable, they are not remaining complacent, but are taking steps to keep it at an absolute minimum.

Recently the company started operating on a 48-hour, five-day week. This gives workers a long holiday week end, Mr. Key pointed out, and also enables those with families to have adequate time for shopping and other essential personal matters.

Colored workers are supervised

by Clifton Scott, graduate of Hampton Institute, who has been optioned to Crown, Cork and Seal by the Martin Company. He personally trained leaders, sub-foremen and other workers in supervisory capacities.

Trains Woman Foreman

This group includes Miss Irene Cooper, foreman, who handles all problems concerning women while doing a bang-up job in sub-assembly; Manuel Mello and Carleton Peterson, sub-foremen, and seven leaders, including two women.

Although nothing can be said of the exact production output of the workers, progress charts are kept for each operation and they have been steadily rising each month. As Mr. Scott proudly points out, the workers are keeping their production schedules.

The pay for workers, according to management, "is comparable to that received elsewhere in the aircraft industry."

Charges Of Gross Discrimination At Brooklyn Navy Yard Are Denied Categorically By Naval Commander

Age New York, N. Y.

In answer to charges of gross discrimination at the Brooklyn Navy Yard, the National Negro Congress received here this week, from the Commandant of the Brooklyn Navy Yard, categorical denial of the existence of any discrimination against Negro workers at the Yard, and refused to discuss the matter with Congress officials on the basis that such a discussion "could serve no useful purpose . . . All it could accomplish would be to 're-hash' generalities."

The letter from Rear Admiral Kelly, Commandant of the Brooklyn Navy Yard was received in reply to a request for a conference to discuss gross discrimination in upgrading, working conditions practiced at the Yard against Negro women workers. Negro workers at the Yard reported to the Brooklyn Council of the National Negro Congress continuing abuses which forced them to work under conditions detrimental to their health as well as continued assignments not in line with their work classifications and abilities. Complaints against these conditions, it was reported, led only to lowered efficiency ratings and assignment to more undesirable work.

The Congress, in taking up the cases with the Commandant, indicated its desire to render assistance in arriving at a satisfactory solution to the grievances which lower morale and thereby lower the production of these essential war workers. Although the initial request for an interview was met with complete rebuff, the National Office of the Congress and the Brooklyn Council at a recent meeting, indicated their determination to work with the Brooklyn Urban League, organized labor and other community organizations for full integration and utilization of Negroes at the Yard.

A drive is now under way to get complaints registered through the New York Office of the Fair Employment Practice Committee.

MANY COLORED WORKERS FAILING TO MAKE GOOD ON JOBS, ANP FINDS

Globe and Independer Nashville, Tenn.

Staff Reporter Gives Results of 3-Year Survey of Plants; Prejudice of Whites Based on Individual Shortcomings, In Most Instances, Taylor Finds.

By [illegible]. Taylor

Dayton, O., Nov. 18 (ANP)—All of us have heard the many bitter stories of Negro workers denied jobs at their skills or denied any kind of emloyment in most of our large industrial plants throughout the country. All of us have been at times discouraged and of course deeply resentful of discriminatory practices by both white industrial leaders and some union organizations.

After a three year study of the problem during which I actually worked at several types of occupations in several kinds of iudustrial plants, I have obtained some very definite information pro and con and drawn some, I hope, useful conclusions. Perhaps at the outset it will be well to deal with mistakes in the Negro labor situation:

Of 1.000 Negroes discharged summarily from their jobs:

314 dismissed for laziness, refusal to work out a given period.

234 dismissed for drunkenness, or coming to work intoxicated.

149 dismissed for using obscene language.

185 dimsissed for being abusive to fellow-workers.

194 dismissed for leaving work without notice.

62 dimsissed for continued boisterousness after warning.

82 dismissed fo[illegible]

Of 500 white workers interviewed as to their willingness to work with Negroes in any capacity:

46 voiced strong sentiments in favor of all Negroes.

181 expressed willingness to work

60 flatly stated they would not tolerate Negroes in the skills.

20 agreed to work anywhere with Negro janitors.

193 qualified their willingness with the privilege of naming Negro workers with whom they would labor.

This last offers some significant interpretations. First, it reflects blame upon Negroes themselves collectively as the prime source of friction. Second, it indicates there is a differentiation by white workers of worthwhile Negroes. Third, it takes discrimination out of the class of plain prejudice and places it as the rightful ally of careful, personal, human reactions. Fourth, it impresses one as the fundamental and focal reason for the necessity of a Negro personnel officer in all employment offices, to provide industry with that acceptable type of Negro worker capable, by virtue of personal attributes, of fitting into the continuity of production lines.

This same group of 500 white workers with whom I talked individually revealed a classication of grievances against Negro workers: 39 per cent unhesitatingly names boisterousness as the prime objection.

17 per cent exclusively designated uncleanness.

9 per cent named both boisterousness and uncleanness together. Thus 325 out of 500 white workers laid the prohibitions against only two faults.

77 per cent gave shiftlessness and laziness.

8 per cent covered many causes under the generalization, incompatibility.

5 per cent linked drunkenness with injurious layoffs.

5 per cent listed arrogance resulting from important jobs.

4 per cent claimed personal contact distasteful to them.

2 per cent [illegible] solely upon the prohibitions of social equality.

But it was [illegible] 100 foremen and superintendents that the greatest surprise came to light. They revealed the following reactions:

46 without qualification expressed themselves heartily in favor of using Negro workers in any job—if there was not danger of white workers walking out. They gave as their reason the ability and steadiness of tried Negroes under them, and their productive capacity.

23 preferred all-Negro crews, picked with care, instead of mixed workers, provided they were available in the skills.

19 wished separate departments handling certain skilled productivity.

10 wanted no Negroes at all except menials.

2 would allow Negro apprentice-helpers without a guarantee of further promotion.

9 executives heading factories or approved shops gave up the following stands:

3 wished to equip entire sections with all-Negro workers, with the statement it would be interesting to see the competition developing between them (white and Negro sections of the same plant), and we owners would really get something done.

4 expressed a desire to elevate responsbile Negroes already in their employ: fear of strikes held them back.

One politely refused to commit himself, but evasively prophesied the universal mingling of workers would occur.

One refused point-blank to consider the hiring of Negroes.

MY OWN CONCLUSIONS

1. Attitudes and traits have contributed immeasurably to the plight of the average Negro worker in the lower [illegible] brackets.

2. That if the Negro worker would put a muffler on his mouth, take the chip off his shoulder, assume a deeper sense of responsibility for the work at hand, and expect to barter a fair amount of labor in exchange for his pay-check, his services would be more in demand in all lines of production.

3. One-fifth of all Negro workers in this bracket are incapable of sustained effort at their given tasks, thus causing the remaining four-fifths to receive the same label in the eyes of the average white worker, who makes no distinction among Negroes.

4. Great numbers of Negro workers are unable to bear promotions with a mental equanimity precluding presumptions of false importance.

5. The average worker enters upon every job calling two strikes upon himself, in that he scouts the eventuality of his own promotion and does nothing to render himself worthy of same.

6. Contrary to our conception, the white worker is sympathetic and friendly to Negro workers of ability.

7. The majority of executives are more than anxious to fit in competent Negro workers who prove free from obnoxious characteristics.

8. The discovery of real ability and proficiency in a Negro worker means usually to the executive, "not where he came but how far can he go."

9. In plants where a firm stand is taken from the start by the head of an organization, little trouble is experienced from newcomers, and they take their places beside Negro workers without comment.

10. The "Uncle-Tom" or "monkey-shine" type Negro worker in any plant is the greatest handicap to the progress of his fellow-men.

11. The system of seniority as employed by both labor unions in big plants is a stumbling-block to masses of Negro workers, since a comedy-type Negro worker may be held above efficient workers below who may not be advanced over him, by virtue of his seniority.

12. The average worker fails to keep pace with the times, and is unwilling to accept modern innovation. He loses stride, and is relegated to the rear.

13. Negro teachers everywhere can do a yeoman's job instilling into youth the dignity of honest labor, and the mi[illegible]ance of doing its job well rather than in a haphazard fashion.

14. The importance of work must be epitomized, instead of a capitulation to frivolity and a deification of false sophistication.

15. My last conclusion pertaining to the general field of Negro workers, skilled, semi-skilled, and unskilled, is, "The fault, Dear Brutus, is not in our stars, but in ourselves that we are underlings."

OCT 19 1943

Negroes Constitute One Out Of Every 14 War Workers, Retiring FEPC Chairman Says

Age New York, N. Y.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Negroes have scored real gains in war employment since the beginning of the war emergency, Monsignor Francis J. Hass, retiring chairman of the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practice, told newspapermen at his final press conference at the Committee's headquarters, Monday.

"At present," Monsignor Haas declared, "Negroes constitute one out of every 14 war workers, and one out of every 11 government workers."

"Improvement in Negro employment in war industries has been substantial in the last year," the retiring chairman stated.

"In July, 1942," he pointed out, "Negro workers constituted only 5.8 per cent of total war production employees. By July, 1943, this percentage had risen to 7.3 per cent. Since Negroes constitute roughly 10 per cent of our population, you can see that we will have a big job ahead. Negro employment is s[illegible] too few establishments, and there is still much under-utilization of the skills of Negro workers."

Malcolm Ross, his successor, was sworn into office Tuesday, October 19. Mr. Ross, former deputy chairman of the Committee, stated briefly that there would be "complete continuity of the Committee's work," and announced that George M. Johnson, assistant chairman, would be promoted to the deputy chairmanship.

Monsignor Hass stated that he would leave Washington, D. C., within ten days to assume his new duties as Bishop of the Diocese of Grand Rapids, Mich. He was appointed to this post on October 7 by His Holiness Pope Pius XII.

OCT 30 1943

Note For Victory:

People's Voice — New York, N. Y

Largest U. S. Cargo Vessel Constructed by Negroes

CHESTER, Pa.—The cargo ships now being built in Sun Shipbuilding Company's all-Negro yard are to be converted to troop transports, it was announced last Monday afternoon by Rear Admiral Howard L. Vickery, Vice-Chairman of the U. S. Maritime Commission.

Admiral Vickery's announcement was made over the yard amplifying system as he stood on the sponsor's platform following the christening of the S.S. Marine Robin by Mrs. Anna Key Palmer, great-granddaughter of Francis Scott Key, author of The Star Spangled Banner.

To Carry C[illegible]

"The ships you have already built in this yard will be carrying tanks, guns and war materials across the oceans within a few weeks," Admiral Vickery told the workers.

The S.S. Marine Robin, is the largest cargo ship built in America declared Robert Haig, a vice-president of the Sun Shipbuilding Company and will cost when completed approximately $3,000,000.

Mrs. Palmer, who sponsored the Marine Robin, is the widow of the late Commander [illegible]rd C. Palmer, U. S. Navy. A great-granddaughter of Francis Scott Key, Mrs. Palmer's father and grandfather were career men in the U. S. armed services. She was chosen by the Maritime Commission to sponsor the Marine Robin.

AUG 28 1943

47h-1943

Age
New York, N. Y.

Negro Women Advance As Pennsylvania Railroad Men Go to War

DEC 4 - 1943

47h

2

3

4

5

DEC 4 - 1943

47h

1. Mrs. Marion Turner, head waitress (standing), watches Mrs. Metta Tally set a dining car table as Mrs. Esther Terry, left, and Mrs. Eva Baxter, waitresses, look on. Mrs. Turner was promoted from waitress.

2. Miss Irene Dunne, one of numerous coach lunch waitresses, finds hungry customers in a Pennsylvania Railroad train.

3. Miss Flossie Sawyer inspecting and packing fresh pies baked in the Pennsylvania Railroad commissary kitchen at Sunnyside Yard, Long Island City.

4. Mrs. Jessie Sims, left, is foreman of a gang of 38 coach cleaners at Sunnyside Yard.

5. Mrs. Gertrude M. Whitley, promoted from station cleaner, operates an elevator in Broad Street Station, Philadelphia.

FDR Lauds Shipyard For Cracking Racial Bars

Defender Chicago, Ill.

WASHINGTON. — A New York shipyard owner was the possessor this week of letters from President Roosevelt and Paul V. McNutt, chairman of the War Manpower Commission, commending him for eliminating racial barriers in his shipyard.

The shipbuilder is William Edgar John, owner and general manager of the Milton Point Shipyards at Rye, N. Y. His plant, formerly a small yard for construction of pleasure boats, recently celebrated its 80th launching of war vessels for the War and Navy Departments.

In the pleasure boat days, the Milton Point Shipyards had never hired a Negro worker. Soon after the firm received its first defense contract, however, a Negro applied for a job and was turned away. The rejected worker wrote President Roosevelt, and the chief executive, in turn, wrote Mr. John explaining the government's policy of "full participation in the defense program by all persons, regardless of race, creed, color or national origin."

Gets Harlem Crew

Mr. John had only 75 workers in his yard when he received the President's advice. Needing a crew of caulkers, he went to a Harlem River shipyard and signed up 25 Negro craftsmen. He regarded his experiment as a success when his yard, aided by the Negro caulkers, finished his first navy contract 28 days ahead of schedule.

"I not only found out that they were good workers," Mr. John stated, "but that they are the most honest, square-shooting, loyal bunch of Americans you'd ever want to meet.

"Why, when we've had rush contracts, every one of my colored workers volunteered to work 12 hours a day, 7 days a week. They all gave three hours pay to the Red Cross. They all buy bonds. They're expert workers and gentlemen."

Letter From President

Mr. John was so pleased at the outcome that he continued to increase the number of Negro workers in his yard. Today, 88 Negroes—one-fifth of his total staff—are working in all skills in the Milton Point Shipyards. A few weeks ago, the owner decided to tell the President about it. And Mr. Roosevelt promptly replied:

"At a time when I have been hearing so many tragic things about racial tensions and racial violence on the home front, your letter came as an evidence of what I know is the basic goodwill to work and decency of the American people with regard to their fellow citizens of other races.

"I hope many Americans will read the story of your achievements in industrial democracy. It should be especially heartening to them at this time when in the many cases hoodlum violence has interrupted our production for victory at home and given comfort to our enemies abroad.

"Thank you for sending me the story, but thank you even more for your fine example for all of us today. I am happy if, as you say, I had a part in turning your mind to the task in human relationships which you have accomplished so well."

Important Battle

Mr. McNutt wrote him:

"Our mutual friend, George Sutton, sent me a newspaper clipping concerning you and your shipyard's policy on race discrimination.

"The story had escaped my attention and I am deeply grateful to George for sending it to me. Had I not seen it I would have missed this opportunity to express to you my very great appreciation of the job you are doing.

"The war we are fighting is more than just a matter of guns, tanks and planes. It reaches far back of the fighting line, a war of minds rather than merely materials. We could win one and lose the other and in the end we would find we had lost both.

"By proving, as you and your workers have done, that men of all race and creeds can work as well as fight together you have gained, for all of us, an important battle. In the final analysis we may discover that your victory had as important result as those in Africa, in Guadalcanal. Yours is the first front, the front on which the battle for democracy will be won or lost, regardless of victories on the battle-fields."

And out at the Milton Point Shipyards, Mr. John's workers, Negro and white, continue to buy bonds, make Red Cross contributions—and build ships.

Press Photo Service

NOV 20 1943

NEGRO PUBLISHERS ADVISE OWI ON PRESS PROBLEMS—Members of the Executive Committee on the National Negre Publishers Association and members of OWI's Advisory Committee of Negro Newspaper Publishers conferred with Elmer Davis, director, and other OWI officials, Friday, November 12, on the overall problems of the Office of War Information and the problem of the Negro press and public. Mr. Davis, Palmer Hoyt, director of the Domestic Branch; Charles Al[illegible] chief of the News Bureau, and other domestic and overseas officials conferred with the group. Shown after the meeting are five of the twelve conferees. (Left to right) Ralph Matthews, managing editor of the Afro-American; Frank Stanley, editor of the Louisville Defender; John H. Sengstackle, general manager of The Chicago Defender and president of the National Negro Publishers Association; Joseph Christian, business manager of The People's Voice; Mrs. Robert L. Vann, treasurer of the Pittsburgh Courier Publishing Co.; Howard H. Murphy, business manager of The Afro-American Newspapers; Carter Wesley, publisher of The Houston Informer, and Thomas Young, business manager of The Norfolk Journal and Guide. Messrs. Sengstacke, Murphy and Wesley are members of the OWI Advisory Committee of Negro Newspaper Publishers. Three other members, not shown in this picture, are Alexander Barnes, promotion manager of the Washington Tribune; C. A. Scott, publisher of The Atlanta Daily World, and William O. Walker, publisher of The Cleveland Call and Post.—Press Photo Service

NOV 20 1943

Arma Pleased With Negro Workers; Intertype Hires First Women on Staff

People's Voice
New York, N. Y

AUG 28 1943

The Brooklyn Urban League Industrial Department has just announced that as a result of a conference held between the employment officials of the Arma Engineering Corporation and National and Brooklyn Urban League Industrial Securities, the Company has promised full cooperation to the local League in its efforts to gain employment for more Negroes.

The conference followed a statement made by Lorenzo Davis, Industrial Secretary, that Company was rejecting too many Negro applicants. The talks revealed that Arma is thoroughly satisfied with its Negro employees, both male and female.

Some foremen have even testified in writing as to their satisfaction with the work of their Negro workers. The company now has about four hundred Negro employees who are distributed throughout the war plant in a wide range of occupations, out of a total of more than six thousand workers.

Talks with Negroes in the plant brought out that they were well satisfied with their jobs. The working conditions and pay rates of the Arma Corporation are among the best in New York City. On concluding the conference, Arma requested the League to refer Negro women over twenty-one for night work and some men for day and night shifts.

First Women

The Brooklyn Urban League Industrial Department is also pleased to announce that as of last week it referred the first Negro female production workers to be employed by the Intertype Corporation, a large Brooklyn war plant.

Of a total of five Negro women now employed here, the first four were sent by the League. This gain for Negro workers is the direct result of the constant cooperation of the New York State Committee on Discrimination with this Department. In 1941, the first male Negro production worker was placed with this same plant as a blacksmith.

Mr. McConnell, employment manager for Intertype, told the League this week, "I am completely satisfied with the work of our first Negro women, and will not hesitate to employ more when in need of workers."

AUG 28 1943

Gains Negroes Are Making In Job Opportunities Can Be Maintained After The War By Diligence Now

Age
New York, N. Y.

AUG 7 1943

BY LORENZO DAVIS

While Negro workers must in no way withdraw emphasis from their main fight for full and equal employment opportunity in war industry and government, at the same time they must recognize the substantial gains they are making and can make in the non-war fields of work during this period.

To cite a few examples of such progress made since Pearl Harbor New York City's department stores, retail chain stores and super markets have hired Negro women as salesgirls, clerks, stockgirls, escalator girls and counterwomen. The utilities, the telephone and electric companies, have hired Negro women in their offices only since the war; the telegraph services are for the first time training Negro women as automatic telegraph operators and general office clerks. Private and publicly-owned transportation lines have also [illegible] it practical to hire more Negroes as drivers and mechanics to meet their increasing schedules. Also since the war, all the major chain restaurants with the exception of Schrafft's are hiring Negroes.

Even the highly exclusive and sophisticated Longchamps and Toffenetti's are willing to use Negro women as bus-girls.

These gains are as important as those to be made in war industry for several reasons: First, American history has shown that economic gains made by Negroes during war periods are more or less permanent. They add to Negro workers store of experience and defeat any future argument that they cannot qualify. Such jobs as stenographers, clerks receptionists, bus drivers and salesgirls which allow the Negro to meet the public in positions of relative dignity gives him the opportunity to dispel popular prejudices and misconceptions of him held by averages whites.

Finally but equally as important, such new jobs for Negroes offer the white worker the chance to work with them on the same occupational level and recognize Negroes as fellow workers with similar [illegible] as [illegible]selves; and not only fit for jobs of a servile character into which most are forced.

The Negro worker can do much to secure his own gains. Wherever he is working he should seek out and join the labor union for his trade. If he is refused membership he must fight collectively for his right to be included. When once in, he must be an active participant and be ever alert to protect the rights of fellow Negro workers and see to it, if at all possible, that the door stays open to Negroes in the future.

He must do a good job and be a friendly co-worker and in this way prove to management the practicability of employing him. These are positive steps that Negro workers can take to insure that many of their wartime gains will stick.

AUG 7 1943

47

47h-1943

THEY HELPED TO FABRICATE THE S.S. ROBERT L. VANN

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa

OCT 30 1943

47h

OCT 30 1943

Among the workers at the New England Shipbuilding corporation, South Portland, Me., who worked on the S.S. Robert L. Vann, Merchant Marine vessel named for the famous American lawyer and late publisher of The Pittsburgh Courier, were: front row, [illegible] Smith, Esther Dawkins, [illegible]ly H[illegible] and Suzan Correy.

OCT 30 1943

Back row: Russ Singleton, John Dykes, James Fontaine, Charles Jones, Roy McKinney, James Meikle and Cornelius Walton.

Better Pay, Major Motive

Many Reasons Underlie Heavy Labor Turnover. OWI Discloses

OCT 30 1943

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Approximately 26 definite causes, singly or in combination, underlie the heavy labor turnover in American war plants, the Office of War Information reported this week on the basis of information supplied by the War Production Drive headquarters, the War Manpower Commission and the Department of Labor's Bureau of Labor Statistics.

This information shows that many of the causes are familiar ones in industrial circles, while others are new and often seemingly trivial.

BETTER PAY, BIG MOTIVE

Desire to secure a job at better wages continues to be a major motivating factor in workers quitting. Another reason is a feeling of the worker that he is not doing enough for the war effort—even though he may be working in a war plant. A worker may quit his job because there seems to be no chance for advancement; another may feel that the job gives him no chance to express his ideas and that, therefore, his ability is going unrecognized. Poor health causes some quits. A worker often quits because he cannot find adequate housing or because he gets tired of battling his way long distances on crowded street cars and buses. He may not like his hours, working conditions or his [illegible]man. He may consider his [illegible]k too hazardous. These are the long-familiar reasons for workers quitting.

Then there are newer, lesser-known, but just as potent reasons. If a worker is a stranger in town, he may become restless and unhappy because of a lack of social contacts or recreation after work. He often becomes discouraged because of enforced delays, layoffs or work interruptions that he does not understand even though they may be justified. There may not be proper facilities for providing meals near the plant. The worker may think the war is nearly over and want to find a more permanent peacetime job. And then some men are naturally restless and periodically get the urge to look elsewhere for a job.

47h

War Production Board Appeals To Churches

Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Virginia

AUG 21 1943

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Lagging war production on the home front evidenced in the past two months, which is chargeable to various factors including labor turn-over and absenteeism, has moved the War Production Board to appeal directly to the nation's churches for help, through their congregations.

Joseph D. Keenan, vice chairman of the board is quoted as saying that immediate action is required, because "we cannot wait for surveys."

An appeal is made to men and women workers of their congregations to stick to their present war jobs; to appeal to those who can do so to get into war jobs.

Mr. Keenan said: "I wish there was some way in which we could get these new wartime, wo[illegible]to take a pledge to their country that they would stay in their war jobs till the war ends."

In addition, Mr. Keenan said, he hoped various pastors where there was need would pitch directly into the war effort themselves by arranging day nurseries for workers' children since worry over their offspring has caused many mothers to leave factories.

47h

War Or Civilian Work Is Gain For Negro Worker

Journal and Guide

By LORENZO P. DAVIS

Norfolk, Virginia

NEW YORK, (ANP) — While Negro workers must in no way withdraw emphasis from their main fight for full and equal employment opportunity in war industry and Government, at the same time they must recognize the substantial gains they are making and can make in the non-war fields of work during this period.

To cite a few examples of such progress made since Pearl Harbor—New York City's department stores, retail chain stores and super markets have hired Negro women as salesgirls, clerks, stockgirls, escalator girls and counterwomen. The utilities, the telephone and electric companies, have hired Negro women in their offices only since the war; the telegraph services are for the first time training Negro women as automatic telegraph operators and general office clerks.

47

Private and publicly-owned transportation lines have also found it practical to hire more Negroes as drivers and mechanics to meet their increasing schedules. Also since the war, all the major chain restaurants with the exception of Schrafft's are hiring Negroes.

GAINS IMPORTANT

These gains are as important as those to be made in war industry for several reasons. First, American history has shown that economic gains made by Negroes during war periods are more or less permanent. They add to Negro workers' store of experience and defeat any future argument that they cannot qualify. Such jobs as stenographers, clerks, receptionists, bus drivers and salesgirls which allow the Negro to meet the public in positions of relative dignity gives him the opportunity to dispel popular prejudices and misconceptions of him held by average whites.

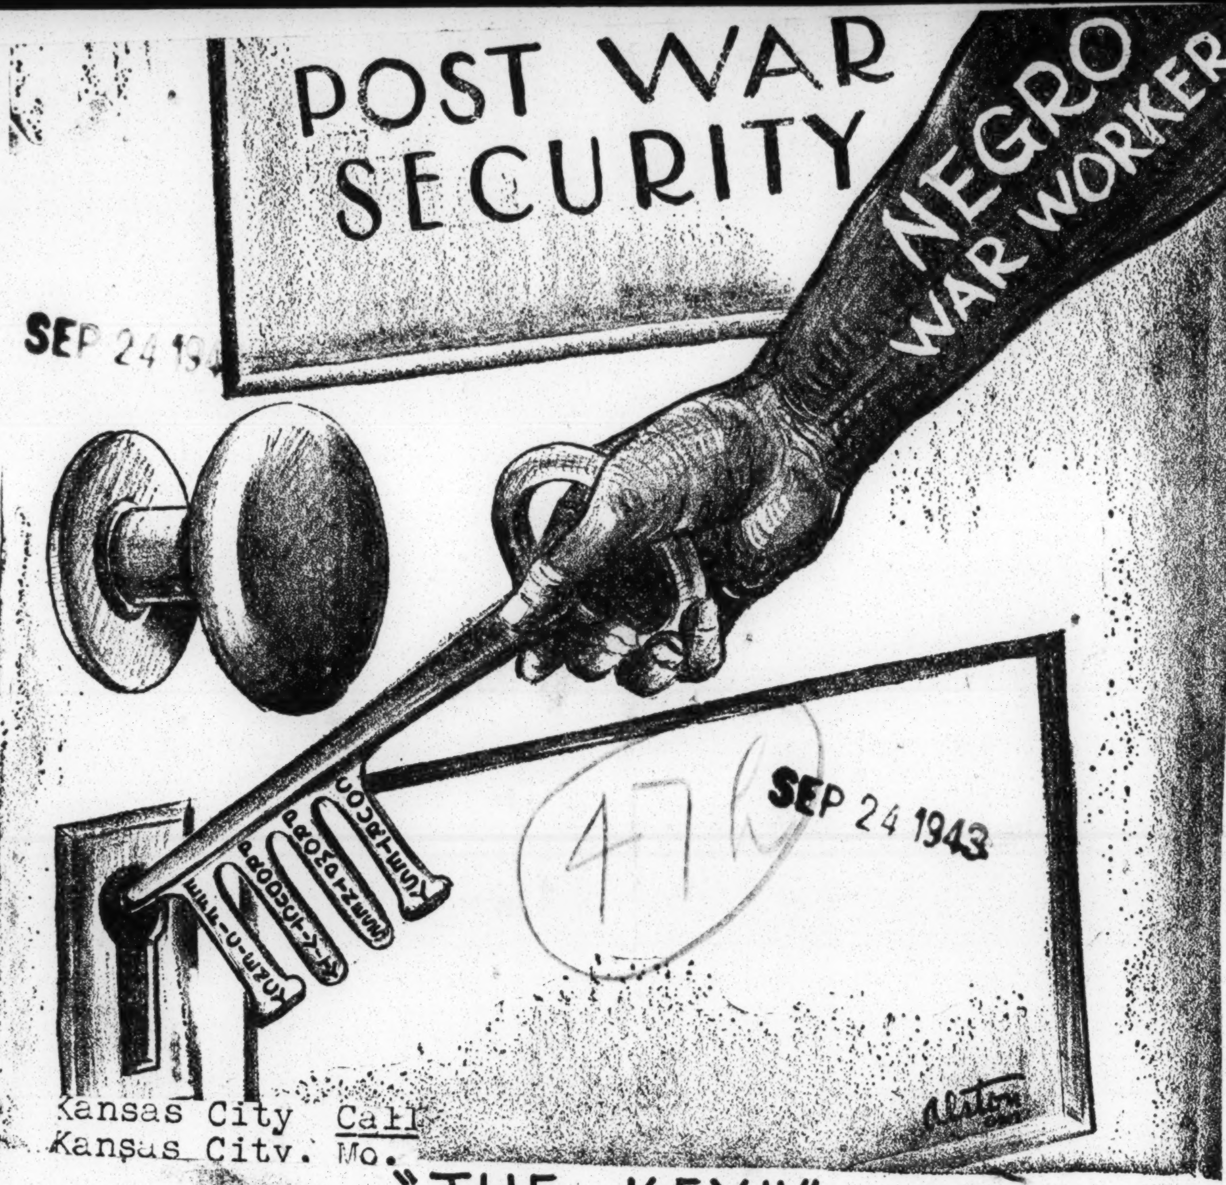
AUG 4 1943

Finally, but equally as important, such new jobs for Negroes offer the white worker the chance to work with them on the same occupational level and recognize Negroes as fellow workers with similar abilities as themselves; and not only fit for jobs of a servile character into which most are forced.

MUST SECURE OWN GAINS

The Negro worker can do much to secure his own gains. Wherever he is working he should seek out and join the labor union for his trade. If he is refused membership he must fight collectively for his right to be included. When once in, he must be an active participant and be ever alert to protect the rights of fellow Negro workers and see to it, if at all possible, that the door stays open to Negroes in the future.

He must do a good job and be a friendly co-worker and in this way prove to management the practicability of employing him. These are positive steps that Negro workers can take to insure that many of their wartime gains will stick.



SEP 24 1943
SEP 24 1943
47R

Kansas City Call
Kansas City, Mo.

"THE KEY!!"

List Free Training For Negro Workers

OCT 7 1943

Daily Worker
New York, N. Y.

By Eugene Gordon

The Negro Labor Victory Committee yesterday, through Moran Weston, field secretary, told of its free training program for Negro workers who want employment in war industries.

OCT 7 1943

The program was outlined in answers given to a series of questions by the Daily Worker, as follows:

1. The Negro Labor Victory Committee announces a program to get skilled jobs for Negroes now doing non-essential work. What facilities are available for training such workers?

Answer: Free courses are offered by the Board of Education under the War Industries Training Program of New York City's Board of Education; by a Training Unit of the War Manpower Commission, sponsored by U. S. Office of Education and offered through colleges in New York City and Long Island; and by the National Technical Institute, 250 W. 49th St., New York.

COURSES

The War Industries Training Program will train for Aircraft Builders: assemblers, inspectors, machinists, patternmakers, riveters, sheet metal workers, wood workers, leather workers, etc.; for Shipbuilders: carpenters, electricians, shipfitters, loftsmen, plumbers, pipefitters, sheet metal workers, riggers, inspectors, testers, welders, etc.; for Machinery Manufacturers: draftsmen, foundery workers, pattern makers, lathe operators, drill press operators, grinders, polishers, tool makers, assemblers, bench workers, milling machine operators; for the Armed Forces: cvilian workers as radio operators, repair and maintenance men, machinists, welders, draftsmen, etc.

The Training Unit of the War Manpower Commission (Region 4) with courses in Brooklyn College, City College, Columbia, Cooper Union, Hofstra College, Hunter College, Long Island University, Manhattan College, New York University, Pratt Institute and Vassar College, offers engineering, science and management war-training courses too numerous to list in a newspaper story.

Detailed information about courses at the National Technical Institute, 230 W. 49th St. (as from the others) may be procured direct.

ROLE OF NLVC

The role of the Negro Labor Victory Committee is that of assisting the workers to get training and assisting the trained worker to get a job.

2. What assurance will the worker have that he will get a job, once his training has been completed?

Answer: Stephen Sheridan, New York Area Director of the War Manpower Commission, in a letter to the Negro Labor Victory Committee, said: "We would like to take this opportunity to tell you that we are doing our utmost to have Negro workers utilized in war industries."

The Negro Labor Victory Committee, on its own part, will assist any worker who encounters difficulty in getting admission to courses or in getting placed after completing training. The NLVC is in a position to place workers through the 54 CIO, AFL and independent unions affiliated with it. This is especially true when vacancies exist in the shops of these unions. That is being done right now.

It is important to emphasize the fact that the Negro Labor Victory Committee is not trying to substitute the work of the United States Employment Service, but only to facilitate the placement of Negro workers who encounter or may encounter discrimination.

The National Technical Institute, so far as the NLVC knows, is the only training school which pays students.

UNION COOPERATION

3. How will the affiliated unions cooperate?

Answer: The NLVC will advise union members who are delegates to the Committee to present this program to church groups, clubs, fraternal bodies, and other community organizations, urging the members to take the free training through the three sources named.

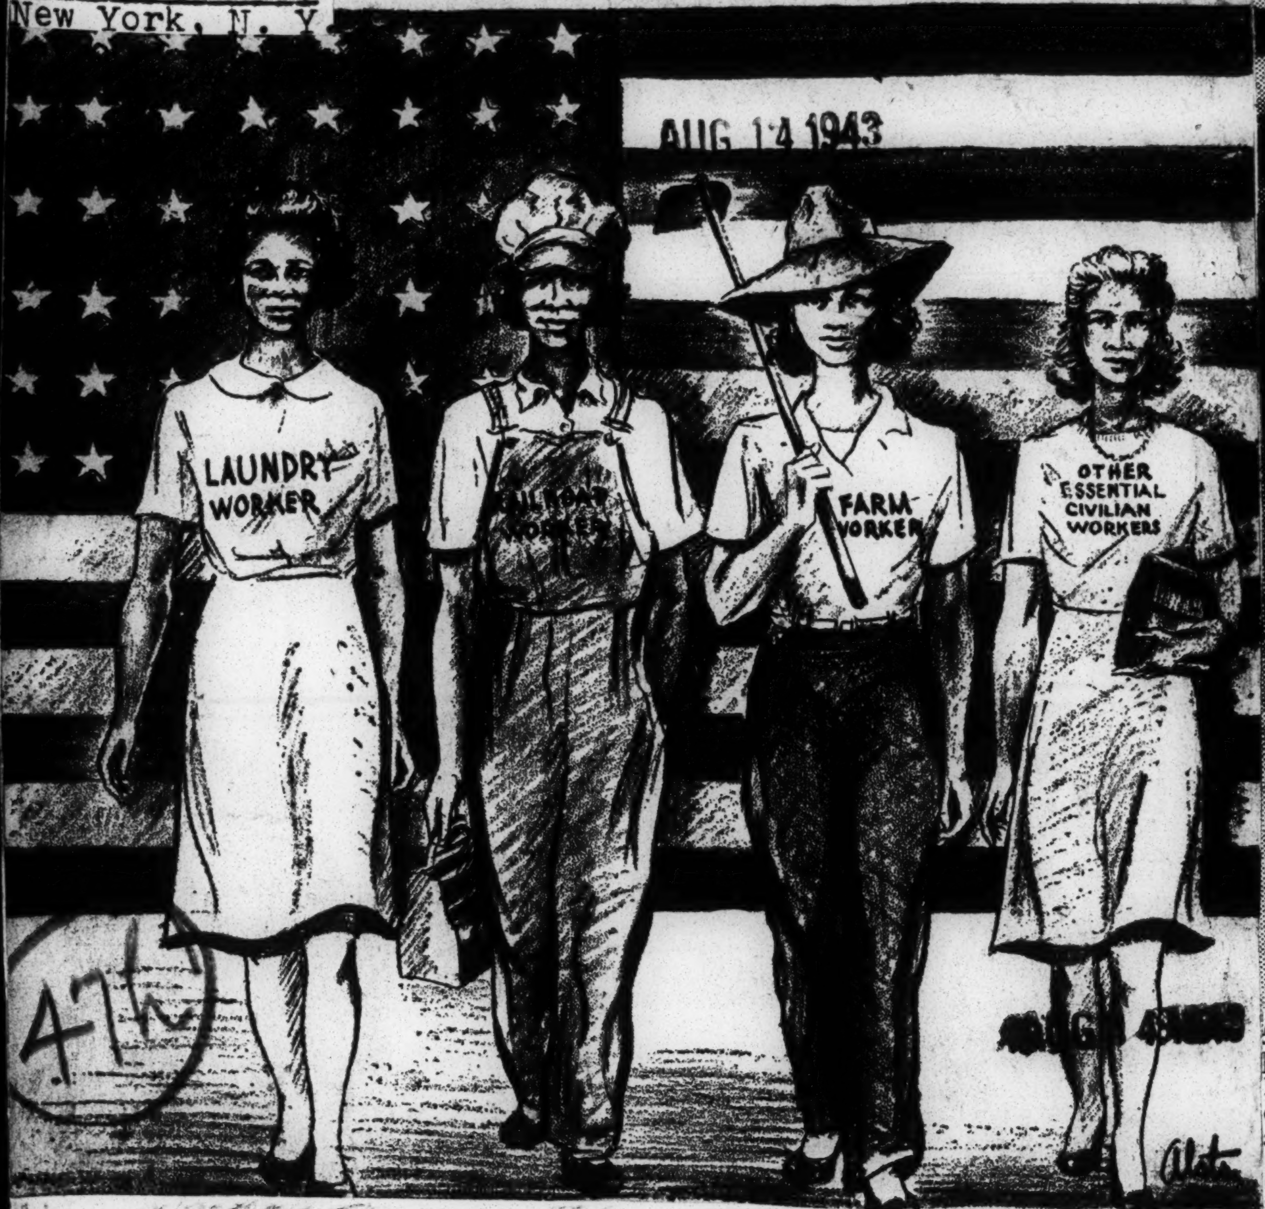
The Negro Labor Victory Committee is especially interested in getting jobs for housewives who are not working; for men and women in low-paying, unskilled work—porters, dishwashers, domestics, etc.; for young people, who must already have their eyes on the possibility of job security after the war.

Important: ALL THESE COURSES ARE FREE.

47h-1943

THEY ALSO SERVE

Amsterdam News
New York, N. Y.



LAUNDRY WORKER
RAILROAD WORKER
FARM WORKER
OTHER ESSENTIAL CIVILIAN WORKERS
Alston

AUG 14 1943

47h

Women Prove Good Riveters

AUG 28 1943

47h

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

Miss Margaret Peace, left, and Miss Sarah Barber, riveters in the aircraft division of the Crown Cork and Seal Company in Baltimore, are examples of what a capable job women are doing at this plant. They are shown riveting parts of the leading edge wing of a bomber. This is part of the second operation in the leading edge wing section.

47h

People's Voice
New York, N. Y.

SYMBOLIZING THE VERY ESSENCE of what we are fighting for—unity, equality and a world free from fascist bigotry, the picture above, taken recently when the Surrey Engineering Co. in Long Island City won the Army-Navy "E" Award, shows (l to r): Lt. Col. Austin D. Smith, wwho presented the "E" pennant; Roger Tucker, oldest Negro employee; William Lynch, oldest white employee; and Samuel C. Dretzin, head of the company.

Gov't Hotel Named For Howard Dean

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

47h

DEC 26 1943

47h DEC 26 1943

Tributes were paid to Lucy Digges Slowe, late Dean of Women at Howard University, at the first anniversary celebration of the opening of the Lucy D. Slowe Hall, government hotel for women war workers on December 5: Two residents of Slowe Hall, which is located at Third and You Streets, N. W. are shown holding a portrait of Miss Slowe as W. Spurgeon Burke, managing director, looks on. They are: (left) Miss Winfred Phillips, a member of the committee which sponsored the celebration, and Miss Nettie Booker, formerly assistant Dean of Women at Howard under the late Miss Slowe, but now house manager of Slowe Hall. Mr. Burke is managing director of both Slowe Hall and George W. Carver Hall, government hotel for male war workers in the same neighborhood (Official OWI Photo by Roger Smith).

47h-1943

YES . . . THE ARMY!

Bystander
Des Moines, Iowa

Twenty-three of the corps of technical instructors on duty at the Army Air Forces Technical Training School, Army Air Base, Lincoln Negraska, are Negroes. Located on Nebraska's rolling prairie land, the school began functioning in June, 1942. The course consists of 13 phases each phase given over to the study of some particular branch under expert supervision. Pictured above is Mr. Major Alfred Reevers, instructor of aircraft mechanics, who is giving pointers to students in the engine assembly class. Reevers was formerly principal of a school at Oswego, Kansas.

People's Voice
New York. N. Y.

Brooklyn War Plant Hires First Negroes

Cooperation between the War Manpower Commission, the Brooklyn Urba[illegible]e, and the B[illegible]Committee on Fair [illegible]ployment Practice FEPC) has resulted in employment of Negro workers for the first time in the Atlantic Basin Iron Works, a Brooklyn shipyard engaged in essential war work, according to Edward Lawson, Regional FEPC Director.

Because the shipyard consistently found reasons for not hiring Negroes referred by the United States Employment Service of the War Manpower Commission while hirin[illegible]ge numbers of [illegible]e workers so referred, t[illegible]USES stopped service to the firm.

DEC 25 1943

First All-Negro Built Ship Passes Severe Trial Tests

Defender
Chicago, Ill.

OCT 2 1943

CHESTER, Pa.—Last week was a Red Letter One at the Sun Shipbuilding company here, when the "S. S. Marine Eagle," launched some weeks ago at Shipyard No. 4, all-Negro shipbuilding unit, had its trial trip under supervision of the U. S. Maritime Commission.

A complement of 180 engineers, official representatives of the Sun Ship company, and of the U. S. Maritime Commission, together with a crew of No. 4 yard workmen, made up the party.

The vessel was put through all of the shake-down processes usually employed, including rigorous checks on speed, fuel consumption, crash stops, and general maneuverability. The trial tests, set by the U. S. Maritime Commission, for whom the vessel has been constructed, were met, it is reported, with maximum credits on the requirements set before it.

Sunship Management was represented by G. D. Carney, Superintendent of Installation of Machinery and Engineering, and J. H. G. McConechy, Chief Engineer.

The U. S. Maritime Commission by a group of Engineers, Naval Architects, etc.

Yard No. 4, by Dr. Emmett J. Scott, director of employment and personnel relations, and the Yard personnel representative, Jerome H. Holland.

On the Saturday following, "S. S. The Wolf," fourth vessel of No. 4 yard, slid down the ways as the fiftieth launching of the year for the Sun Ship company.

It will speedily be outfitted for the tasks to be set before it. The vessel is of the same dimensions as the cargo ships already built, but will be utilized for troop transport instead of for carrying cargo.

The three ships preceding "The Wolf" were "S. S. Marine Eagle," "U. S. Marine Raven," and "S. S. Marine Robin." These ships were constructed from special designs of the Maritime Commission and are the first of their type.

Waiter Urges Negroes To Think Of Future Before Quitting Jobs

Cartersville (Ga.) Tribune-News
September 23, 1943

Augusta, Ga.—W. Allen Murphy, Negro waiter and War Bond salesman extraordinary, urges Negro house servants to think of their postwar future before throwing up their jobs for higher-paying industrial positions.

"In numerous white homes where the help of reliable colored servants is badly needed and would be appreciated, servants refuse to stay on the job even after higher salary demands are agreed upon," Murphy declared in an article written for the Augusta Chronicle.

This attitude, he said, may provide Negroes "a temporary feeling of relief today, but it is a hindrance to the war effort now, and if not corrected will be a hindrance to the peace."

Murphy, as chairman of the Atlanta Service Group War Bond Committee, was a leader in a July 5 War Bond rally among Atlanta Negroes which sold $10,000 in bonds within a few hours. His organization and the Atlanta Council of Negro Women jointly sponsored the drive. Murphy is a waiter at the Piedmont Driving Club in Atlanta.

Murphy wrote that it seemed to him "the domestic field offers a large area of fine opportunities where vast numbers of Negro people could serve well and profitably.

"The profits may not be all cash today, but tomorrow will come, with its peace. We shall need many friends after this war is over. Most of us have to depend upon our friends for all we need. Why can't we let them depend upon us now for what they need."

Shipbuilders Find Southern Negroes Capable Workers

News
Birmingham, Ala.

BY JOSEPH C. GOODWIN

NEW ORLEANS— (AP) —Manpower shortages in war industries hold no terrors for the rapidly expanding shipyards and airplane plants in this center for production of instruments of destruction and war transportation.

In the words of George W. Rappleyea, dynamic assistant to Andrew Jackson Higgins, Southern pioneer in "assembly line" ship building: "The Southern Negro population forms a great untapped reservoir of manpower. Negroes are anxious to help in the war effort. They make good workman, and we now have approximately 1,300 of them in our plants."

Consolidated - Vultee, beginning production of giant flying boats for combating the submarine menace, also has recognized the nearness of a valuable supply of labor.

"We expect to employ 20 per cent Negro labor when we reach full production," says William D. McAdams, director of public relations. "We will use both men and women, and those showing particular aptitude will be given an opportunity for special schooling in skilled operations in the aircraft industry."

Both Mr. McAdams and Mr. Rappleyea see an added expediency in utilizing labor already available in preference to attempting to bring in labor from other sections of the country.

"In the first place," says Mr. Rappleyea, "the rest of the country is short of war workers now, and, in the second place, the Southern Negro—and there are 150,000 of them in the city of New Orleans alone—already is here and has a place to live. That eliminates the housing shortage."

Among Negroes employed by the Higgins industries many already are skilled workmen and others are being trained. Among the trades followed by Negroes in the company's shipyards and plane plant are: Bricklayers, painters, carpenters and carpenter helpers, welders, cement workers, and foremen over Negro construction gangs building landing barges and cargo boats.

And New Orleans plants have no "race" troubles. Negro and white workers have separate canteens and comfort facilities and work primarily on different projects.

In the words of one industrialist: "The Negro is a good American. He wants to help win the war. He is completely loyal and has no past or present associations with any foreign country. He is one of a 13,000,000 minority and he certainly is needed in the war effort. If the country did not make full use of this ready pool of manpower it would constitute sabotage of the war effort."

Labor Group Seeks War Job Trainees

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

OCT 4 1943

NEW YORK—(A N P)—Moran Weston, field secretary for the Negro Labor Victory committee, announced last week that a drive to secure workers engaged in non-essential work to take training for skilled jobs in war industries had been launched. He said that the campaign is being conducted through its 54 affiliated CIO and AFL unions and independent unions.

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

Campbell Johnson Named Colonel

SEP 29 1943

WASHINGTON—(A N P)—Promoted to a full colonelcy, Campbell Johnson, executive assistant to Major General Hershey of the Selective Service System, assumed his new rank last week with no other changes in his duties noted. Colonel Johnson, long known for his splendid record in civic work and in social work in this city, was appointed to his post early in the war on ret[illegible] his title of major for a considerable length of time. However, he was recently promoted to lieutenant colonel, and after a brief time at that rank, received the full rank. He has just returned to the city from a prolonged tour of various sections on behalf of the service he serves.

Chicago Tribune
Chicago, Ill.

LABOR
SEP 25 1943

DOUGLAS AIRCRAFT WORKER Amanda Smith, employed in the Long Beach, California plant of the company, is working side by side with white employees to keep America's air strength at its peak. S. O. Porter, Douglas director of personnel, recently declared that Negroes are doing an outstanding job in all plants.—Douglas Aircraft photo from OWI.

Tribune
Philadelphia, Pa.

Colored-Built Ship Completes Trial

OCT 2 1943

CHESTER, Pa.—Last week was a Red Letter one in No. 4 Shipyard of the Sun Shipbuilding Company, here, when The "S. S. Marine Eagle" launched some weeks ago at Shipyard No. 4, had its trial trip under supervision of the U. S. Maritime Commission.

A complement of 180 engineers, official representatives of the Sun Ship Company, and of the U. S. Maritime Commission, together with a crew of No. 4 Yard workmen, made up the party.

Sunship management was represented by G. D. Carney, superintendent of installation of machinery and engineering; and J. H. G. McConechy, chief engineer, the U. S. Maritime Commission, by a group of engineers, naval architects, etc.: Yard No. 4, by Dr. Emmett J Scott, the director of employment and personnel relations and the Yard personnel representative, Jerome H. Holland.

On Saturday following, "S. S. The Wolf," fourth vessel of No. 4 Yard, was launched.

The three ships preceding "The Wolf" were "S. S. Marine Eagle," "S. S. Marine Raven," and "S. S. Marine Robin." These ships were constructed from special designs of the Maritime Commission and are the first of their type.

Rosedale [Ala.] Women Study War Job Education

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

47 w

Negro women all over the United States are responding to the war effort, taking important war industry jobs, entering the service units and auxiliaries and buying war bonds, among many other things is a scene of the War Production Class at Rosedale (Alabama) High School, which held commencement exercises recently. 27 were awarded certificates.

OCT 1 1943

Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Virginia

Old Record For Building Similar Ship Was 128 Days

SEP 4 1943

QUINCY, Mass.—It may have looked like just another destroyer escort to many who saw the event, but the Fore River Yard of the Bethlehem Steel Company nailed a national wartime production record to the mast this week when it delivered the U. S. S. Harmon, named after a Negro war hero, to the Navy — 92 days from the hour the keel was laid.

To both the Navy and the Bethlehem Steel Company, the Harmon represented much more than a sea-going challenge to enemy submarines. Among other things, it represented what can be accomplished when capital and labor get together in a common cause of victory production.

LAUNCHED JULY 25

The Harmon hit the crest of the tide at launching exercises July 25, less than two months after her keel was laid. The Navy hadn't expected that.

No later than August 11, Under Secretary of the Navy James V. Forrestal visited the Bethlehem Yard and New England and challenged the shipbuilding industry to beat what was the record for turning out destroyer escorts—128 days.

Fore River accepted this challenge because it was Fore River's army of 30,000 men and women who established this record. On September 1, a little more than three weeks hence, Fore River shattered its own mark by 36 days. (Tokio papers please copy).

A PRECEDENT SET

Unfortunately, the actual delivery of the Harmon lacked all of the gaity that marked its launching. It was a grim, businesslike ceremony in which the ship changed hands from its builders to the Navy.

And yet, another, precedent was established by the exchange because it was the first Navy warship named in honor of a Negro.

He was Leonard Roy Harmon, mess attendant first class, of Cuero, Texas, who not only saved several of his shipmates off Guadalcanal on the night of November 13, 1942, but also threw himself in front of the ship's executive officer and dragged him to safety before being mortally wounded himself by machine gun fire.

BROKE WORLD'S RECORD

Bethlehem at Fore River knows that it broke the world's record in turning out a destroyer escort, but the nation should know that Bethlehem did it unconsciously, without pressing.

No one, from W. H. Collins, general manager of the plant, down to the humblest apprentice in the yard even imagined that the company was on its way to a world's record until the Harmon was almost four weeks under construction.

No shipbuilding "shock troops" were rushed in to slap the vessel together. The Harmon was just built, as former destroyer escorts were built.

Globe and Independent
Nashville, Tenn.

Blind Defense

Trainee Anxious To Aid In War

SEP 13 1943

TUSKEGEE, Ala., Sept. 2—(ANP)—"Just because I am blind does not mean that I cannot assume my share of the war effort," said Ocie Lee McLain, blind ESMWT trainee in the courses of physics and mathematics at Anniston, Ala., last week after the Library of Congress had forwarded him a treatise in braille on "Principles of Physics."

The 35-year-old trainee lost his sight through an accident several years ago. He earns his living by directing the activities of a mattress factory.

47h-1943

Whites Learn Aircraft Mechanics from Colored Instructors at Army School

Afro-American
Baltimore, Maryland

Twenty-three of the technical instruct[illegible] the A[illegible] Air Forces Technical Training School, Army Air Base, Lincoln, Neb., are colored. Major Alfred Reevers (center above), instructor of aircraft mechanics and former Oswego (Kans.) school principal, instructs an engine assembly class.

OCT 23 1943

Details of a Pratt Witney airplane are explained to students by Lloyd M. Williams, Kansas City, Mo., graduate of Southern University, Kansas State Agricultural College and Bradley Polytechnical Institute, wh[illegible] an instruc[illegible]at the air base.

Charles Gwynn, chairman, the shop committee at the A. E. Edwards war plant at 223 East 106th St., left, shakes hands with Al Edwards of the company after the plant wins the coveted Army and Navy "E" recognition. Charles Garland and Al Mason, Negro, two plant workers [illegible]eme right.

AUG 2 1943

Henry P. Milligan, instructor, teaching the functioning of an airplane engine on a "cutaway" model at the Army Air Forces Technical Training School, Lincoln Air Base, Lincoln, Neb. Milligan is a graduate of Langston University and received his training in aircraft engines at Amarillo F[illegible] Texas.

The Worker
New York, N. Y.

HEAT INTENSE IN WAR PLANT

How Deadly Missiles Are Made To Help Knock Out Axis

By Duke Merritt

Hand grenades are being made in immense quantities in the Birmingham district.

Liquid fire is what [illegible]on and steel become in the process of manufact[illegible] these grenades, under supervision of Birmingham Ordnance District officers. The coke

Third Of A Series

to heat the metals, as well as the iron and the steel, are produced in the Magic City's coal and iron mines as raw ores.

These destructive missiles come pouring off the production line and their manufacture is as spectacular as is their destruction in battle.

Three primary processes are carried on simultaneously in the making of grenades, the formation of molds, the making of dummies, or patterns, and the heating of the metals.

Din Is Terrific

A terrific clatter and din in a feverish temperature marks the manufacture of these weapons. Workmen become accustomed to the terrific heat a few at a time, plant foremen say.

"Military inflammation," which produces no aid and [illegible] to the enemy, is [illegible] metals while the [illegible]mies and molds are shaped. The patterns are put into the molds for shaping the grenades.

Workmen, really magicians, fashion the patterns and molds, with a speedy and rhythmic motion that is amazing. Sand and oil, under application of scorching heat, make the patterns, which are sent along to the molders.

Placed In Molds

The pneumatic presses, which are also used in making patterns, clamp and pack the molds and patterns.

Then the finished mold, with its final packing, is ready for the casting of grenades.

Placed on a conveyor, or production line, the molds move [illegible] past the furnace, heated to more than 5000 degrees, in which the molten iron and steel mixture is boiling.

AUG 16 1943

An expert workman is "machining" a hand grenade here, with a box of the nearly-finished missiles seen in the foreground. The machine is cutting threads on the inside of the grenade, into which the fuse may be inserted. Through the opening in the upper end, explosives are poured to "charge" the missile. The other end has no opening.

Grenades Pour Off Birmingham Production Line

Birmingham Post
Birmingham, Ala

The fiery, reddish mixture is poured from the furnace into dippers on the end of long handles gripped by workers.

Fiery pinwheels pop into the air and zip and sparkle as the reddened metal is poured into the molds. After sufficient metal is poured into each mold, the production line carries each one along to the "shake out," into which it is dumped, slipping the blazing-hot grenades into this machine.

Get A Shuffling

Shuffled back and forth in the "shake out," the mold is loosened from the grenades. The loosened particles fall through a screen in the bottom of the shakeout.

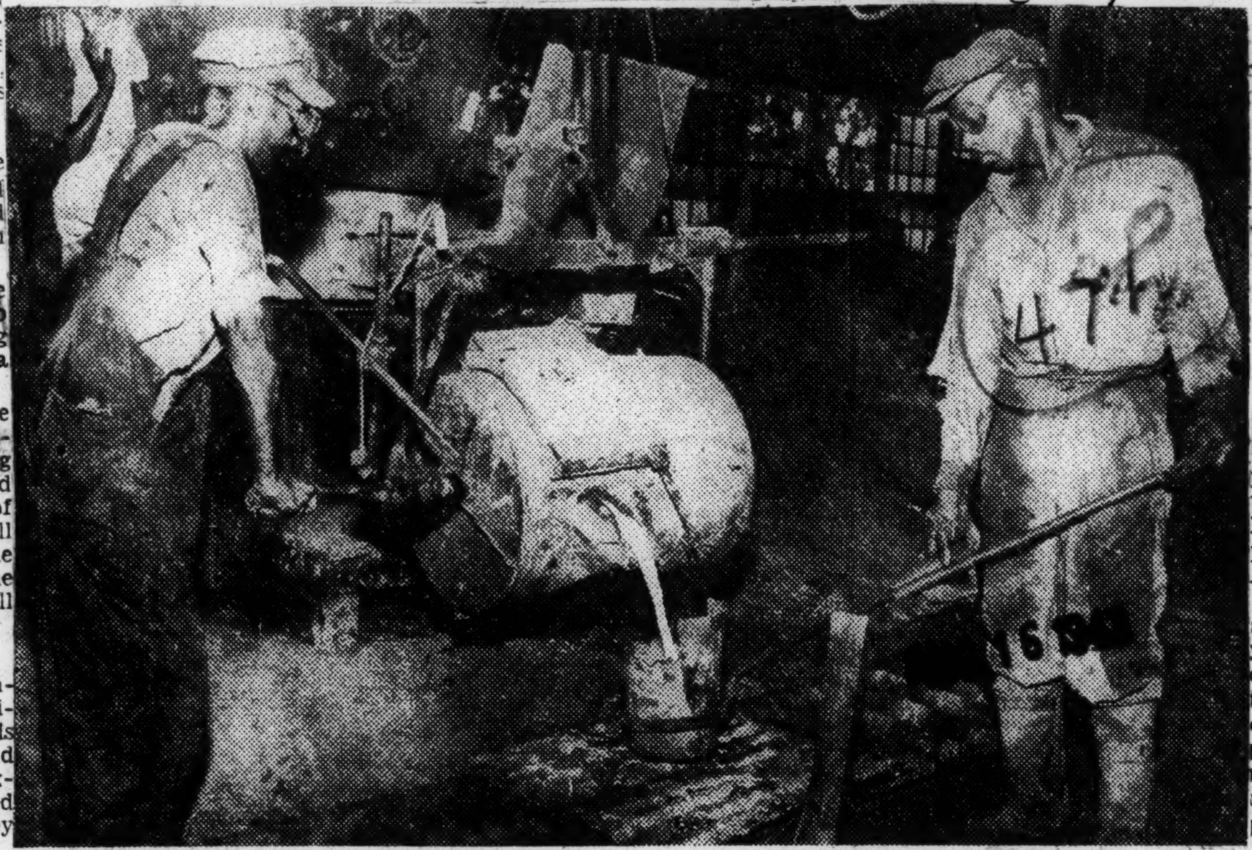
Still red-hot, the grenades are taken from the shakeout, raked into a wheelbarrow by heat-defying workers, who dump them under a shed to cool.

After cooling, the grenades are shoveled into a great, hollow cylindrical device called a "tumbling mill." Then around and around the grenades go, ridding them of extraneous mold and particles still clinging to them. Dumped, the grenades are allowed to cool some more, and then cleaning and still more cleaning follows.

Grenades Machined

Machining of the grenades insures that they are exactly of uniform size. Machines drill threads provide for insertion of fuses and leave an opening for pouring explosives into them. Painting and final inspection follows. Then they are packed.

Follows filling with explosives at other plants and the grenades are on their way to blow a toe off Tojo.



Flaming-hot molten steel and iron are seen pouring from a furnace in a Birmingham grenade factory, into a dipper such as those used by workers for pouring the metals into a mold in casting and making the weapons.

The above picture depicts a workman in a Birmingham grenade factory packing hand grenades in a box, ready for shipment. On a conveyor are seen a number of grenades moving along to his hand, after being painted and inspected as they move along an automatic production line.

Blind Alabama Man Prepares For War Work

Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Virginia

Studies Physics, Mathematics By Braille at Talladega

TUSKEGEE, Ala.—Of interest even in these hectic days when patriotism is no novelty, is the attitude of Ocie Lee McLain, blind ESMWT trainee in the course of physics and mathematics at Anniston, Ala.

Deprived of his sight through an unfortunate accident several years ago, McLain earns his living directing the activities of a mattress company, but finds time during his [illegible] moments to improve his mind and make preparation for a probable Civil Service career.

BRAILLE WORKS

At the request of the ESMWT office at Tuskegee, the Library of Congress forwarded to Mr. McLatin a treatise in Braille on Principles of Physics consisting of nine large volumes.

> "I want to do my part," said McLain, "and just because I am blind does not mean that I cannot assume my share of the war effort."

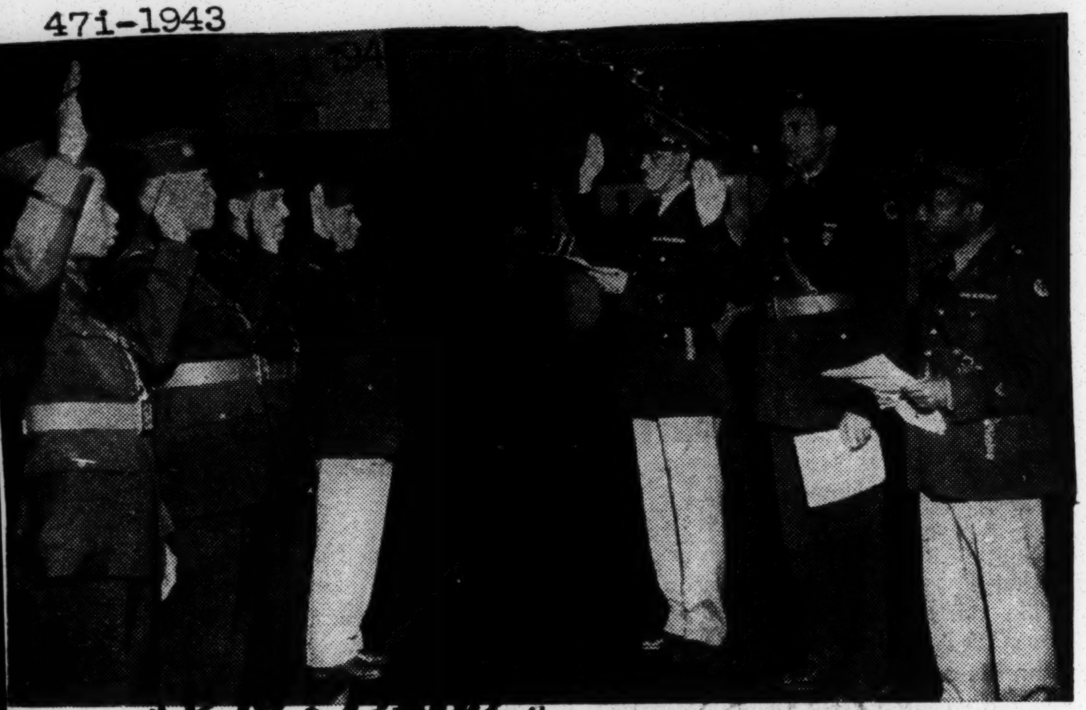
McLain is [illegible] years old and is rated by his instructor, R. A. Thornton of Talladega College, as the most apt pupil in the class of 23 persons. He is the only blind member of this group.

AUG 16 1943

AUG 14 1943

471-1943



"P.M. Daily"

JAN 11 1943 JAN 11 1943

47

N.Y./N.Y.

Negro State Guard Mustered In

About 150 men were sworn into the Third Separate Battalion over the weekend. Here are some taking oath, administered by Lt. Col. Ira L. Aldridge of 15th Regiment, New York State Guard PM Photo by Wilbert H. Blanche

February 9, 1943

47

NASHVILLE, Feb. 9. (AP) — A delegation of negroes visited the Capitol today to protest against failure of steering committees of the Senate and House of Representatives to report out for final action a bill to authorize formation of a negro unit of the state guard.

Guardian

Boston, Mass.

State Guard To Tell Of Dangers Of Bombing Raids

MAR 12 1943

47

(KNS) The Mass. State Guard is getting results, but wants more colored men who do not have to go into active service in the Army to join the 27th Infantry at the South State Armory on Dartmouth St. Boston.

MAR 12 1943

Lt. Col. Larkland Hewitt is the C. O. of the 27th Infantry. His Executive Officer is Major Harvey Wilson while Capt. Stephen Douglass is a member of the Lt. Col. Hewitt's Staff.

In case of invasion or bombing of Boston during this war the State Guardsman will instruct civilians how to protect lives and homes.

MAR 12 1943

On Sunday, March 21 in all the Churches Mass. State Guard Day will be observed. At the close of the church services morning and evening. Officers and enlisted men of the State Guard will explain how to become a member, also present will be members of the Mass. Women's Defense Corps and members of the Red Cross to tell you what you ought to know.

Afro-American

Baltimore, Md.

Pa. to Have Jim-Crow Guard Unit

47

HARRISBURG, Pa.—For the first time in the history of Pennsylvania, colored men are being permitted to join the Commonwealth's militia unit—under a segregated plan.

The recruitment of a battalion of colored troops, which will include three companies of "combat engineers" and will have colored officers, was authorized recently by Governor Edward Martin. He said this was in line with plans to expand the State Guard.

Two of the companies, each to include 82 men and 3 officers, will have headquarters in Philadelphia and the other in Pittsburgh. One of the former will comprise members of the State Guard auxiliary which has been training since May.

47j-1943
Chicago Defender
Chicago, Illinois

CIO Sailors Defy Color Bar In S. Africa Hotels

MAY 8 1943

MAY 8 - 1943

By GEORGE PADMORE
(Chicago Defender London Correspondent)

LONDON. — (Censored) — While American authorities may ignore the color bar problem at home and abroad, there are signs of growing solidarity between white and colored American merchant seamen in foreign ports to unite against attempts to segregate Negroes sailing under the "stars and stripes" carrying lend-lease cargoes.

Describing a recent united front action of white and colored members of the CIO National Maritime Union in a certain port in South Africa, Lady Milner, wife of a former British governor-general of South Africa, said: "We hope that lessons like these will penetrate the thick heads of the Afrikanders.

"In South Africa there has gradually grown up under Boer influence a very strong social repression of all natives," explains Lady Milner in the London "National Review."

"This culmination under the Hertzog-Smuts coalition government when the natives in the Cape Province were deprived of the franchise they had exercised for 80 years, as long as the white population. But Americans very properly do not allow this discrimination to extend to colored American citizens who, whether black or white, have to be treated properly out of America.

Refuse Segregation

The following anecdote illustrates their attitude and the Cape reaction. It comes from a small coastal town:—

"Some two weeks ago, just following our catastrophic rainfall of 13 inches in two days, two boatloads of American merchant sailors blew in here, from a torpedoed ship. About 40 in all, to be fed, clothed, housed and forwarded.

"No difficulty about house-room, as both our hotels stand practically empty. But three or four of the men were Negroes. Suggestion to segregating them at a quite nice non-European boarding house was made by certain officials but the white seamen protested.

"American citizens cannot be treated as inferiors," they asserted.

Stroll Hand In Hand

"So the Hotels Magnifique and Ballymoral had to let them 'muck-in' with their white mates, and for a week our local colored and Pondo inhabitants were treated to the spectacle of white and black parading the village arm-in-arm, sharing drinks, lounging in the hotel lounges, sitting together at table in the 'Est-kamer,' with Ponde waiters to fetch and carry for Yankee 'black-stuff'—and dutifully call them 'Sir.'

May 8, 1943

"The effect was rapidly demoralizing our color-bar, and a plan was made to get rid of the lot by the next South African Railway passenger motor-bus.

"Alas, the Yanks, white and black, all insisted in traveling first class. There are only 10 first class seats in front, and none of them would agree to travel in the empty tail-end of the bus, herded with Brother Pondo. So it took three buses at two-day intervals to clear the lot and give the color-bar in South Africa a chance to straighten its back again."

Washington Tribune
Washington, D. C.

Negro Marines High in Scholastic Rating

MAY 22 1943

When the first 1,200 Negro marine recruits started training last September at Montford Point, Camp Lejeune, N.C., the number of leathernecks holding Master of Arts degrees went up sharply.

MAY 22 1943

Not only did this group bring a flock of college degrees with them, the Marine Base Personnel Office revealed this week, but they also brought a deputy assistant State Attorney, an assistant college dean, a Golden Gloves light heavyweight champion, a newspaper publisher and a whole gang of mere B.A.s.

The college and professional records of the Negro volunteers probably accounted for the fact that the original 51st Composite Defense Battalion established a very high record for intelligence when given the regulation Army classification and intelligence tests. Only 10 per cent of the 1,200 recruits were placed in Class 5, lowest rating.

Since Camp Lejeune is now receiving 40 Negro recruits a day from local Selective Service boards, and approximately 2,000 colored marines are now in training, the 10 per cent average has risen, but the 51st Composite Defense Batallion still rates high in this respect.

Volunteers in the original group included Pfc. Chester A. Thomas, of Brooklyn, N.Y. Private Thomas, holder of an LLB degree from St. John's University in Brooklyn, was until recently a deputy assistant State Attorney General of New York.

Others included Cpl. James E. Huger, director of public relations and assistant dean of Bethune-Cookman College, Daytona Beach, Fla.; Sgt. Charles Anderson, Atlanta University graduate, and at one time co-publisher of Pic Magazine; Sgt. Edson E. Blackman, Jr., M.A. in Business Administration from the University of Michigan; Pfc. Raymond Floyd, a mathematics instructor and Pfc. Hiner Thomas, one-time Golden Gloves light heavyweight champion.

MAY 22 1943

Also Pfc. Roy A. Young, a cartoonist working on his Master's degree at New York University; Pfc. Eddie Culp, a former outstanding distance runner at Xavier University; Pfc. J. D Lewis, varsity football star at Morehouse College; Pfc. William Hubbard, electrical engineer; Cpl. Harry L. Wright, Cpl. William Vaugh and Cpl. Robert P Davis, Tuskegee Institute graduates and Pfc. Walker Manley, a professional organist who now serves in the capacity for the whole Marine Base.

MAY 22 1943

Bristol, Va. [illegible]
August 9, 1943

COLORED MESSBOY PLAYS LARGE ROLE

Valdosta, Ga., Youth in Sicily Keeps Ship from Downing Allied Planes

By JOHN A. MOROSO, 3RD

WITH U. S. AMPHIBIOUS FORCES. (AP)—Back in the library at Dasher High School in Valdosta, Georgia, a 16-year-old negro boy used to spend his spare time poring over books on military aviation.

With the few pennies he saved from working for a dry cleaner, Arthur James Goodwin, of 206 East Branch street, bought plane parts and built models. Little did this slightly-built boy realize then that some day, off the embattled shores of Sicily, what he was learning would help protect Uncle Sam's navy from furious assaults by Axis planes.

A year ago, when he joined the navy, they put him aboard an assault transport as a messboy in the officer's wardroom. Life went along quietly until the transport sailed for an unknown destination—the invasion of Sicily.

On the way across the Atlantic he was made a member of a gun crew and attended classes in plane identification. His knowledge of planes caught the attention of instructors who were impressed also with his excellent sight. As a result he was moved from an aft gun to a gun on the bridge.

When we started in for the beaches Steward's Mate Second Class Arthur James Goodwin, now 17, dropped his plates and silver and took his place on the bridge. It was 11 p. m. Friday night.

He proved so valuable in identifying both enemy and friendly planes that he never left the bridge until Monday night. Some sandwiches and coffee and a few catnaps between air attacks kept him going.

His job was difficult, because enemy planes often became mixed up with friendly planes. Transport planes that carried paratroopers inland returned during the middle of an air attack. Spitfires and Beaufighters often dove on enemy bombers and fighters and this made it almost impossible for us to keep from shooting down some of our own planes.

At times the night sky would be full of planes and about the only thing we could do was to shoot at the ones that dropped flares and bombs. It was tough going.

Arthur went through these battles calmly. He correctly identified the first Focke-Wulf 190s that bombed our landing beaches. When Spitfires attacked these enemy craft, Arthur identified them and prevented his ship from shooting at them.

He was the first man aboard to identify three German Ju 88's that roared in to attack the convoy. They got a warm reception. On another occasion he prevented fire at some Mustangs.

"I knew 'em by their square wingtips," Arthur said.

Through it all this little country boy said the only time he was really afraid was when Nazi planes dropped three bombs into the water one hundred feet from his ship. The ship quivered and reeled but escaped damage.

Arthur's only plane ride to date was in a barnstorming plane at the county fair at Valdosta. Strangely enough he doesn't remember what type it was.

As to his future in the navy he says he just wants to be a plane spotter. Unfortunately, the navy has no such rating so chances are Arthur will keep on serving food and run to the bridge when action appears in the sky.

Chicago Tribune
Chicago, Illinois

NEGRO SAILORS' RANKS ENLARGED AT GREAT LAKES

Commander Tells Rotary of Increase Planned.

JUN 16 1943

Great Lakes Naval Training station, which has had about 4,500 Negro sailors among the 56,000 undergoing basic training, will increase the ratio of Negro seamen to one-fourth of the station's capacity by Aug. 1 and have from 12,000 to 15,000 Negroes.

Plans to increase the number of Negroes in training at Great Lakes were disclosed yesterday by Capt. R. R. Emmet, commanding officer, in telling the Rotary club of Chicago what had been accomplished at Great Lakes in the last two years.

Capt. Emmet said the reason for increasing the ratio of Negroes in basic training was the proximity of the station to the southern states, from which a majority of the sailors are drawn.

Station Has Vast Growth.

The station commander said the navy was getting a fine product in the young men of the nation and that he can't see any difference between the recruits obtained thru selective service and those obtained by voluntary enlistment.

Two years ago Great Lakes had the capacity for training 3,500 men. Today it has 56,000 in training and several thousand additional stationed there to operate the station and assist with training.

Capt. Emmet said trainees formerly were allowed liberty after they had been at the station for a few weeks, but that the practice had been discontinued. Life at the station, the commander said, has been made so interesting that the recruits do not miss "going ashore."

Aptitude Tests Used.

The selection system in use at Great Lakes, Capt. Emmet said, is playing a vital part in getting sailors placed in jobs for which they are best fitted. Aptitude tests are given about a month after recruits have started training. The plan has been so successful that the commander of one of the newest battleships in service obtained the service of a Great Lakes interviewing team to examine his crew.

JUN 16 1943

Discussing the war to date, Capt. Emmet said blows dealt to the axis enemies in North Africa and in the South Pacific had left the smell of victory in the air. "A year ago," he continued, "I believed the republic was in greater danger than at any time in history. Last fall the picture changed.

"Russia had dealt Germany a loss from which she cannot recover. We had landed in Africa and now Rommel's army has been smashed and the forces of Mussolini are on the run. We have proved, plane for plane, ship for ship, and man for man, that we can whip our enemies.

Must Hate Enemies.

"We will have to steel ourselves in the days to come and if the dark angel swoops over our homes we will have to bear our losses bravely. We will have to learn to hate our enemies and pray for vengeance upon them. If we continue to do that, we shall win the war."

Capt. Emmet, who was graduated from the Annapolis naval academy 39 years ago, was decorated in November, 1942, for his part in landing invasion troops in the Solomons last summer. Three months later he was assigned to command the training station. In World War I. he received the navy cross for mine laying against Germany.

5 BROTHERS PERISH ON BATTLESHIP

An Associated Press release carried in some of the country's leading dailies disclosed a report for the first time of the epoch of five Negro brothers who died in the sneak raid on Pearl Harbor more than a year ago.

March 19, 1943

As the story of the heroism of Dorie Miller in this attack first broke through the round about way of a Canada commentator's news broadcast, this report came from the files of John A. Moroso III, Associated Press Correspondent who was with the Atlantic fleet. Says Moroso:

The hail of Japanese bombs and torpedoes that destroyed the 32,600-ton battleship Arizona at Pearl Harbor also killed five brothers of the fighting Holden family—an orphaned group of nine Negro boys.

3-11-43

On Sept. 14, 1942, Warren Holden, 18, of New York City enlisted in the navy as an apprentice seaman. He said:

"I'd like to get on a gun crew and get over there to get a few Japs for my brothers who didn't have a chance to defend themselves last December."

Young Holden has three brothers in the army. His father served in the navy in the last war. Aunts and uncles helped raise the Holden boys after their parents died.

These youngsters, like many other Negroes, have been upholding the honor of the Negro race in American armed forces in this war. Several have been decorated. I have heard many stories of their bravery in my travels with the fleet.

3-19-43

March 19, 1943

Bee [redacted]
Chicago, Ill

To Launch First Warship Named For Negro Sunday

Washington, D.C.

JUL 24 1943

The destroyer escort, which has first United States warship to be named for a Negro, will be launched at the Fore River Yard of the Bethlehem Steel Company, Quincy, Sunday, July 25, according to a recent announcement by Secretary of the Navy, Frank Knox.

The stroyer escort, which has been named for the late Roy Harmon, mess attendant, first class, will be sponsored by his mother, Mrs. Naunita Harmon Carroll of Cuero, Texas.

Mr. Harmon, who was 26 years of age at the time of his death, was awarded the Navy Cross posthumously for "extraordinary heroism," while serving aboard the cruiser San Francisco. He was killed in action against the Japanese in the battle of Guadalcanal, November 12 and 13, 1942.

JUL 24 1943

CALL MEETING TO DISCUSS NEGRO WAVES WEDNESDAY

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 22—About six or seven prominent persons here were to meet with Commander Mildred McAfee of the WAVES Wednesday afternoon to discuss a plan, said to have been approved by Secretary Knox for the enlistment of Negro women into that organization.

JUL 25 1943

The meeting is supposed to be held on the quiet for the purpose of advising Commander McAfee, but there is some feeling that she will attempt to wring a sanction out of the group.

The names of four persons invited to the meeting have been learned. They are Mrs. Thomasina Johnson, lobbyist for the AKA Non Partisan Council on Public Affairs; Mrs. Julia West Hamilton, chairman of the board, local YWCA; Mrs. Pauline Redmond Coggs, secretary, Washington Urban league; and Miss Jeanette Welch, secretary, National Council of Negro Women.

One report is that the plan contemplated is to take Negro women into the WAVES as auxiliaries, train them at a Negro school, and deny them to the ranks of officers. The council has already expressed itself as being "unalterably opposed" to any such plan of segregation. The positions of the others have not been determined.

The call of the meeting is believed to have come as a result of a hot letter which rs. Johnson had sent to the President ten days ago protesting the reported plan, and calling for a conference with either him or Secretary Knox. It appears that Commander cAfee will carry the load. The stated purpose of the various auxiliaries of the armed forces is to have women replace men who may be used in other tasks for which women would not be suited.

JUL 25 1943

In the navy Negroes are denied commissions. An adjustment in navy policy last year allowed for the training of Negroes as seamen. They are being used at shore establishments. But Negro women could hardly replace them in any of these capacities.

Mulzac Crew Pleads For More Democracy

Pittsburgh, Pa. Courier

WASHINGTON, June 10—(ANP)—The SS Booker T. Washington, whose crew comprises 18 Negroes, six Filipinos, and the balance white, under Capt. Hugh Mulzac, has sent a letter to President Roosevelt criticising discrimination in the U. S. Army.

JUN 12 1943

The crew condemned this condition as a means of endangering the war effort and hazarding the prestige of our armed forces.

NO DISCORD

The letter revealed that even though the crew is mixed, with 27 white men in the armed guard, and with many of both crews and the navy gun crew coming from the Southern states, "there has been no instance of discord lack of co-operation, or impaired efficiency in the manning and working.

The crew suggested that the President institute immediately a forthright educational program "designed not only to enlighten the men of our armed forces but the citizenry as well, to eliminate once and for all ridiculous race theories based on Nazi and fascist concepts.

JUN 12 1943

Booker T. Unharmed in Voyages Despite Sub, Plane Attacks

Afro-American – Baltimore

Capt. Hugh Mulzac, Skipper of 10,000-Ton Liberty Ship, Says Storms Worse than Enemy Shells

BALTIMORE

Several trips to sea and numerous attacks by enemy planes and submarines have failed to damage the S.S. Booker T. Washington, 10,500-ton liberty ship.

JUN 10 1943

Capt. Hugh Mulzac, skipper of the ship, told the AFRO Wednesday that one or two of the more severe storms encountered at sea actually caused more concern than enemy shells, all of which failed to score a hit.

The bravery of Captain Mulzac and his crew, who at great risks were successful in saving their cargo during one of these storms while that of some other ships in the convoy was lost, was dramatized over a nation-wide hookup of the Columbia Broadcasting System recently by the Office of War Information.

90-Mile November Gale

The storm in question was a 90-mile-an-hour gale which struck the ship last November with such severity that the cargo was dislodged and the ship's lifeboats and rafts washed away.

Captain Mulzac, commanding a mixed crew representing eighteen nationalities, termed the Booker T. a "floating democracy" and said his men believe it to be the best and easiest ship afloat to work on.

JUN 10 1943

He recalled an occasion recently when a white naval gun crew officer, a Lieutenant Curley, asked to be reassigned to the ship because he had "never worked with men who co-operated any better."

Spirit of Brotherly Love

Some idea of the spirit and brotherly love ideals of the Booker T.'s crew was revealed, the captain said, when upon hearing of the Detroit race riot via radio while at sea, they promptly assembled, drawing up a letter protesting this undemocratic outbreak.

Afro-American

The letter was sent to the U.S. Congress and is scheduled for an early reading before that body.

Accompanied by J. Howard Payne, his attorney, Captain Mulzac on Wednesday made his first visit to the AFRO offices since 1918. At that time he held a second mate's license.

He revealed that he was the first man of his race to sail out of Baltimore during World War No. 1 as an officer.

Holds Commander's Rank

He now holds the rank of commander, due to a recent government ruling that all captains of ships over 10,000 tons be recognized as such.

One difference between circumstances surrounding that war and the present one, he said, is that it seemed easier then for a man of his race holding an officer's rating to get a ship.

JUN 10 1943

Captain Mulzac revealed that he had to go to Washington and personally present his papers before government officials before he was given command of the Booker T. Then, he said, they wanted him to sail it with an all-colored crew.

Refused Jim Crow Crew

"I told them," Captain Mulzac said, in revealing how he had refused the ship unless given authority to assemble a mixed crew, "that all my life I had been fighting jim-crowism, segregation and discrimination and that if I agreed to take the ship with an all-colored crew I would be compromising with those things I've been fighting against."

JUN 10 1943

Tunisia Democratic Oasis

Casablanca, he said, is the only port on the globe where he has found a service men's club catering without discrimination to all races during the present war.

On a recent trip, the captain said, his mixed crew was such a curiosity that newsreel films, under sponsorship of the Great Western Railway Company, were made and shown throughout England's theatres. The pictures always drew large audiences, he said.

Captain Mulzac said he was the guest of several high-ranking officials during his trips abroad and that he and his crew were always treated courteously.

47i-1943

LONE SURVIVOR OF NAZI U-BOAT

Washington Tribune
Washington, D. C.

479
1943

LIBERTY SHIP SURVIVORS ELKS' GUEST—Seaman James Garey, second class cook (center) and only Washington survivor of the ill-fated U.S.S. Frederick Douglass Liberty Ship torpedoed recently, receives a warm welcome from his wife, Mrs. Rose Garey. Entertaining him as an Elks' guest are L. Franklin (left), Mrs. Alice Garey Franklin, mother, and Thomas Johnson, Jr. (right), Elks' Home supervisor. Wright-Rilley Photo.

Harlem Citizens Blast

Defender Chicago, Ill.

Bias In WAVES, SPARS

JUN 5 1943

479

NEW YORK—A wave of protest has followed the recent assertion of Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox that Negro leaders favor barring colored women from enlistment in the naval and coast guard reserves, the WAVES and SPARS.

A formal blast, denying the statement, came this week from the City-Wide Citizens Committee on Harlem, which is holding a series of meetings on problems affecting Negroes.

Some time ago the committee sent a letter signed by Algernon D. Black, co-chairman, to Mr. Knox, asking for clarification of the Navy Department's policy with respect to the recruiting of colored women.

On March 5, say the committee members, Mr. Knox answered that the Women's Reserve "shall be composed of women trained and qualified for duty in the shore establishment of the navy, to release male officers and enlisted men of the naval service for duty at sea."

The letter added: "The navy does not have any substantial body of Negro men available or qualified for general service at sea. There is no occasion to replace Negro enlisted personnel by Negro women enlisted in the Women's Reserve."

Paragraph Stirs Protests

Secretary Knox closed his letter with the paragraph that has stirred the "tempest in a teapot," and which stated: "This program is necessarily experimental, but it is not discriminatory, and it has received the approval of Negro organizations and the Negro press generally."

Later, in reply to letters sent to Negro leaders and representative organizations, the City-Wide committee received an avalanche of messages criticizing the assertion made by Mr. Knox.

Councilman Adam Clayton Powell said the Knox statement was "entirely erroneous." He stated that while it is true that the WAVES was established to relieve male officers and enlisted men of the naval service for duty at sea, "it does not say that these must be supplanted by whites only."

JUN 5 1943

Channing Tobias, senior secretary, Y.M.C.A. National Council, said that Mr. Knox's letter was a "classic illustration of subterfuge and evasion."

Lester B. Granger, executive secretary of the National Urban League, asserted:

"The statement of Secretary Knox that the navy department's program is 'necessarily experimental,' and has received the approval of Negro organizations' certainly does not express the opinion of the National Urban League. Neither does the League approve the over-timid and frequently contradictory policies which the navy department has instituted."

Members of the committee said they would continue the protests and call upon navy department officials to abolish discrimination against both Negro men and women in its services.

Officers of the City-Wide Citizens Committee on Harlem include Algernon D. Black and Rev. A. Clayton Powell, co-chairmen, and William T. Andrews, the Rev. George Ford, Lester B. Granger, Stanley M. Isaacs, Dr. David DeSola Pool, Dr. Robert Searle and Walter White, vice chairmen.

JUN 5 1943

Afro-American
Baltimore, Maryland

FORGETS RACE NAVY DAY

NOV 20 1943

BEAUFORT, S.C. — (ANP) — No colored sailors nor servicemen participated in the Navy Day celebration here in the hometown of Robert Small, Civil War naval hero.

BTW's Mixed Crew Delivers Stinging Rebuke To Rioters

Pittsburgh, Pa. Courier

JUL 10 1943

WASHINGTON, July 8—A stinging rebuke to the "home fascists" responsible for the anti-Negro riots in Detroit was delivered by the Negro and white crew of the United States Liberty ship, Booker T. Washington, in a letter, written on the high seas June 25, sent by every member of the crew to Congressman Vito Marcantonio (A.L.P., N.Y.) and read by him into the Congressional Record last week. The members of the crew, with their Negro captain, Hugh Mulzac, urged the New York Congressman "to take every opportunity on the floor of Congress, and off, to demand a fearless, searching investigation of the Detroit massacre, this to be followed by prosecution of the guilty parties, including the higher-ups who instigated the massacre as well as the mobsters who did the killing."

CITES OWN EXPERIENCES

Denying that the riots were the result of "some sort of spontaneous combustion," the letter stated:

JUL 10 1943

"For nine months now, we—a fairly average group of Negroes an whites from the deep South as well as the North, East and West—have been sailing together on the S.S. Booker T. Washington under circumstances which have compelled the most intimate contact. If there were any real antagonism between the races, surely it would have burst forth again and again aboard.

"Even in peace time, a ship like the Booker T. Washington is a much smaller place than Detroit, but in war time, due to the blackout, the space actually occupied by the crew most of the time is smaller than the smallest drug store in Detroit. And yet some would have us believe that the vast metropolis of Detroit, extending over 250 square miles, isn't big enough for the two races to live in side by side without bitter discord . . . During the nine months that we have lived and worked together on this ship—and manned the guns together when under attack from planes or submarines—we have not known the slightest racial tension, discord or instance of animosity between white and colored."

"While on the high seas," the letter stated, "sailing homeward to pick up another cargo of war materials to follow that which we had just put into the hands of our armed forces in North Africa, we heard over the radio with mingled rage and disgust of the Fascist attack of the Negro people of Detroit."

WANT TRAITORS PUNISHED

JUL 10 1943

The letter declares: "We know what sinister and disruptive forces really plotted and carried into action the Detroit massacre. We know further that unless these traitors are brought to justice, the Detroit slaughter is but the beginning of a nation-wide drive on the part of the home Fascists to disrupt the war effort, paralyze the Allied drive against Hitlerism, just as victory is within our grasp, and so ultimately to divide the American people that Fascism can seize power in the United States in the classic manner adopted by Hitler in Germany."

Among the 38 signers of the letter are, John Beecher, now ship's clerk, formerly on the staff of the New York Post and an investigator for the FEPC; Chief Engineer J. A. Smith, Allister Mulzac, a relative of the captain; Captain Mulzac and Frederick A. Reed, ship's carpenter.

Atlanta, Ga. Journal
October 22, 1943

NEGRO FARM HAND'S WIFE TO GET $308 DEPENDENT'S PAY

479

SHREVEPORT, La., Oct. 22.—(AP)—A 34-year-old Negro, Tom Washington, father of 11 children ranging in age from 5 days to 15 years, was sworn into the Navy here Thursday as a volunteer.

Navy officials said that under the new Service Men's Allotment Act Washington's allotment would be $308 per month. The family lives on a farm and Washington has been employed by a railroad.

All Colors Of Men Are Same to the Navy Now

Daily World
Atlanta, Ga.

AUG 1 1943

47j

SOMEWHERE IN S. PACIFIC—(SNS)—Proof that this is not a 'white man's war' and that all colors of men are needed to achieve victory is this scene showing the U. S. Navy, which at first was reluctant to enlist American Negroes, recruiting dark-skinned natives of South Pacific islands to give overworked men of the Pacific Fleet a hand in their tasks. Spurred by hatred wherever they have come in contact with the Japanese, the aborigines prove willing workers and guides. They are pictured here as they get their first Navy chow before the ship ups anchor from their home harbor. (Official Navy Photo by INP)

AUG 1 1943

Navy Is Worried Over Big Quota Of Race Sailors

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

DEC 1 1943

WASHINGTON — (ANP) — So involved has the navy become in the matter of accepting and utilizing its agreed quota of Negroes that it is unlikely that the enlistment of women into the WAVES, is going to come about until that task is well worked out. This was revealed during a press conference held by Captain Mildred McAfee of the WAVES last Friday afternoon.

47j

When the question was put to her, she said that the department has been working on the inclusion of Negro men more and more, but that as far as women are concerned, "the matter is still under consideration and still under study." She added that "there has been no policy announcement" and could not indicate when one might be expected.

Asked if the question of integrated training had anything to do with the delay in a policy announcement Capt. McAfee neatly side-stepped and said "the whole thing" is being worked out from every aspect" and that the "handling of interracial relationships" would be taken care of then.

Informed of this development, Mrs Thomasina Walker Johnson, legislative representative, AKA Non Partisan Council on Public Affairs, declared:

"A year and five months is long enough to decide the fate of the world let alone the enlistment of a few Negro women into the WAVES Her references was to the time that has been put in battling for the inclusion of Negro women, from the inception of the auxiliary to the navy.

The WAVES expect to have 47,000 women enlisted by the end of this year, and 90,000 by the close of 1944. Capt. McAfee was asked why the wives of naval officers were barred from enlisting and she discussed the "close-knit" relationship of men in the navy, and the important role of navy wives. She said that it might put some officers in a difficult position if they found they had to command the wife of a classmate or close friend of theirs. She stressed the close-knit" relationship of men in the navy, and the important role of navy wives. She said that it might put some officers in a difficult position if they found they had to command the wife of a classmate or close friend of theirs She stressed the closeness of the relationship there.

DEC 1 1943

Talking It Over

OCT 7 1943

47j

Daily Worker
New York, N. Y.

Negro and white, these two U. S. sailors, both wounded in the Pacific war fighting for the same freedom, talk over their battle experiences in U. S. Naval Hospital, Seattle. Louis Blackshaer (left) hails from Matchitoches, Louisiana, and Everett Howk is a Des Moines, Iowa, boy. Both are "backing the attack by buying war bonds as well as fighting it. U. S. Navy Photo.

OCT 7 1943

WAVES NOT WANTED!

The Union
Cincinnati, Ohio

AUG 13 1943

Washington—Four Negro girls who applied for admission to the WAVES at the Navy recruiting office here Friday caused such consternation that officials in charge closed the doors four and one-half hours ahead of the usual time, according to the Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority's National Non-Partisan Council.

47j

Fifteen minutes after two of the girls were asked to leave because the office had "closed", however, two others returned and found the door open. The six girls had decided to test the qualifications for admission to the WAVES which state that a woman must be a native-born American citizen and between the ages 20 and 35. All met both requirements.

AUG 13 1943

"NEGROES FEEL KINSHIP WITH RUSSIANS," DECLARES URBAN LEAGUE'S LESTER GRANGER

"Negroes in this country feel a special kinship with the brave Russian people, not only because the Russians' record of physical and emotional suffering during the centuries matches that of the American Negroes but because the Soviet Union has succeeded in stamping out racial prejudice from its national life."

Thus spoke Lester B. Granger, executive secretary of the National Urban League, this week when he endorsed the National War Fund's coming drive as it relates to the Russian War Relief, Inc.

SEP 1943

The Russian War Relief, with 15 other war service and relief agencies, will share in the funds collected during the National War Fund campaign to be launched on a national scale in conjunction with united community campaigns in October and November.

47j-1943

47j

DEC 3 1943

Chicago Tribune
Chicago, Illinois

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

DEC 3 1943

Officers' Steward C. C. Shephard, hero of destroyer Borie with his wife, Cherry.

Navy's First Class Of Shore Patrolmen

DEC 1 1943

In addition to their class work and physical drill, students in the Service School for Negro Shore Patrolmen at the U. S. Naval Training Station, Great Lakes, Ill., gain practical experience by walking post with veteran SPs assigned to the nearby town of Waukegan. This squad receives last minute instructions from Lt. Abraham Zitenfield (reading orders), officer in charge of the school. With him are Lt. (j. g.) Paul F. Hill, executive officer of the school, and Chief Specialist Lawrence Reaume, (center) chief instructor. (Official U. S. Navy Photo from OWI.)

47j

DEC 1 1943

DEC 1 1943

A Tribute To A Hero:

People's Voice
New York, N. Y.

USS Harmon Launched As Shipyard Breaks Own Construction Record

SEP 11 1943

BOSTON, Mass.—A new record in destroyer escort production was established Tuesday when the USS Harmon was delivered to the Navy by the Fore River Plant of the Bethlehem Steel Company, Quincy, Massachusetts, only 92 days after the vessel's keel was laid.

The USS Harmon is named in honor of the late Leonard Roy Harmon, Negro, Mess Attendant, First Class, U.S.N., who posthumously was awarded the Navy Cross for "extraordinary heroism" while serving aboard the USS San Francisco. He lost his life in action against enemy Japanese forces in the Battle of Guadalcanal, November 12, and 13, 1942.

Broke Own Record

SEP 11 1943

The Fore River Plant of the Bethlehem Steel Company broke its own record for destroyer escort construction in delivering the USS Harmon. On August 15, 1943, this yard completed a destroyer escort in 115 days.

Not For Negroes

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

Secretary Knox, apparently will welcome enlistees of any nationality and color in the Navy's women's corps, the WAVES, except American Negroes. Proof of this is Susan Ann, born of Korean parents, who has just been enrolled in the U. S. Naval Reserve Midshipmen's School at Northampton, Mass. Knox's ruling is that Negroes, who were born and lived in America all their lives, need not apply. How does the 'Four Freedoms' formula fit this, Mr. President?

SEP 5 1943

Amsterdam Star-News
New York, N. Y.

S. S. Robert Vann Launching Sunday

PORTLAND, Me.—With Mrs. Robert L. Vann, widow of the founder of the Pittsburgh Courier as sponsor, a Liberty ship, named for the late editor and publisher, will be launched Sunday noon at South Portland.

Constructed by the New England Shipbuilding Corporation, the vessel is the fourth to be named in honor of Negroes. Of the others—the Booker T. Washington, George Washington Carver and Frederick Douglass—one, the Douglass has been sunk.

Following the launching a luncheon will be given in the Lafayette Hotel, with Dr. Kenneth C. M. Sills, president, of Bowdoin College; Ferdinand L. Smith, secretary, National Maritime Union, and Ira F. Lewis, president of the Courier, among the speakers.

OCT 16 1943

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

Knox Still Silent on Navy Women

WASHINGTON. — (ANP) — Navy Secretary Frank Knox could give no report of the progress being made toward accepting colored women in the WAVES, SPARS or Women's Marine Corps when questioned at his press conference Friday.

A week prior to the conference the naval secretary told the ANP that the subject was under discussion, and promised to release the information as soon as he found out.

Nothing to Report

Reminded of this promise, Knox said: "There is nothing more to report at the present time."

Asked whether a decision might be reached by the end of the year, he answered: "I don't know when there will be one."

People's Voice
New York, N. Y.

SEP 11 1943
47j

USS HARMON BREAKS SHIPYARD RECORD

The USS Harmon, named after Negro messman Leroy Harmon, who gave his life to protect a ship mate during a Navy battle, pro[illegible] sails th[illegible]ters after her launching at the Fore River Plant of the Bethlehem Steel Company's Quincy, Mass., yards in the record-breaking time of 92 days.

SEP 1943

The Northwest
Enterprise
Seattle, Washington

MESSBOY STAR PLANE SPOTTER GEORGIA NEGRO, 17, PROVES INVALUABLE IN SICILY BATTLE

By JOHN A. MOROSO III

WITH UNITED STATES AMPHIBIOUS FORCES. — Back in the library of Dasher High School in Valdosta, Ga., a sixteen-year-old Negro boy [illegible] to spend his spare time pouring over books on military aviation.

With the few pennies he saved from working for a dry cleaner, Arthur James Goodwin, of 206 E. Branch St., bought plane parts and built models. Little did this slightly-built boy realize then that some day, off the embattled shores of Sicily, what he was learning would help protect Uncle Sam's navy from furious assaults by Axis planes.

A year ago, when he joined the navy, they put him aboard an assault transport as a [illegible]boy in the officers' wardroom. Life went along quietly until the transport sailed for an unknown destination—the invasion of Sicily.

HE KNOWS HIS PLANES

On the way across the Atlantic he was mad[illegible] member of a gun crew and attended classes in plane identification. His knowledge of planes caughtt [illegible] attention of instructors, who were impressed also with his excellent sight. As a result he was moved from an aft gun to gun on the bridge.

When he started in for the beaches steward's mate second class, Arthud James Goodwin, now seventeen, dropped his plates and silver and took his place on the bridge. It was 11 p. m. Friday night.

Hep roved so valuable in identifying both enemy and friendly planes that he never left the bridge until Monday night. Some sandwiches and coffee and a few catnaps between air attacks kept him going.

His job was difficult, because enemy pl[illegible]ften became mixed up with friend[illegible] Transport planes that [illegible] paratroopers in and returned during the middle of an air attack. Spitfires and Beafu-fighters oten dove on enem fighters and fighters and this made it almost impossible for us to keep from shooting down some of our own planes.

PLANES SHOT DOWN

At times the night sky would be full of planes and about the only thing we could do was to shoot at the ones [illegible] dropped flares and bombs. It was tough going.

Arthur went through these battles camlly. He correctly identified the first Folke-Wulf 190s that bombed our landing beaches. When Spitfires attacked these enemy [illegible] Arthur identified them and preven[illegible] his ship from shooting at them.

He was the first man aboard to identifp three German JJU 88s that roared in to attack the convoy. They got a warm reception. On another occasion he prevented fire at some Mustangs.

"I knew 'em by their square wingtips," Arthur said.

Through it all this little country boy said the only time he was really afraid was when Nazi planes d[illegible]d three bombs into the water one hundred feet from his ship. The ship [illegible]ered and reeled but escaped damage.

SEP 15 1943
47j

Watch That Hat, Marva

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

AUG 10 1943

Press Photo Service

GREAT LAKES, Ill. — (PPS) — Mrs. Joe Louis, wife of the world's heavyweight boxing champion, presents honor man certificate to Bluejacket Ellis Newton, of 2433 Flora Avenue, Kansas City, Missouri, at recent recruit graduation exercises [illegible] U. S. Naval Training Station, Great Lakes, Ill. Mrs. Louis was introduced to nearly [illegible], who were on the field by Lt. D. O. Van Ness (center), commanding officer of Camp Robert Smalls, one of the training camps at Great Lakes.

AUG 10 1943
47j

NAVY 'E' WON BY GREAT LAKES

Courier — Pittsburgh, Pa.

GREAT LAKES, Ill., Sept. 16— There [illegible] new fla[illegible]ng below the national colors on the Camp Robert Smalls' flagpole at the U. S. Naval Training station here—the Navy "E" award for general excellence.

Camp Smalls was presented the award recently by Captain J. S. Freeman, executive officer of the Training Station, under a new program of inter-regimental competition between Great Lakes' three Negro regiments. The camp was judged the most proficient of the three in its training activities during a three-week period.

SEP 18 1943
47j

'Let's Commission Negroes In Navy,' Urges Commander

Amsterdam News
New York, N. Y.

CHICAGO, (ANP)—In an Armistice Day address at the DuSable High School Thursday, Commander D. W. Arm[illegible]g, of the U. S. Naval Training Station at Great Lakes, said: "I am personally [illegible] record with the Secretary of the Navy in recommending that Negroes be commissioned as officers in the U. S. Navy, and I back up my recommendations." The commandant said he did not know when commissions will be authorized.

Armstrong, in reviewing the Negro's difficult struggle for general service in the Navy, indicated that Great Lakes gets about 25 per cent of its recruits from the north and the balance from the south.

Naval Schooling Needed

He explained that it was necessary for the naval center to institute remedial schools to teach many of these men enough reading, writing and arithmetic so they could read the orders given them.

Commander Armstrong said that there [illegible]ould be [illegible] surer way for this program to [illegible]nded in disaster than by the commissioning of officers before either the prospective officers or the men whom they were to command were trained to discharge the duties and responsibilities incumbent upon them in a satisfactory manner.

DEC 4 1943
47j

Knox Says Navy Accepting Negroes According To Quota

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

WASHINGTON—(A N [illegible] The navy is accepting its quota of Negro selectees according to program, Sec. Knox told his press conference last Friday, although there has been a large percentage of rejections for physical reasons, h[illegible] said.

There is a report that the navy, in spite of the increased proportion of Negroes it has been taking of late, still is far behind schedule and will require a good deal more time to do what it has promised to do by the end of the year.

Several mont[illegible] ago the navy had announced that it planned to take Negroes up to 15 per c[illegible] personnel. This followed the efforts of War Manpower commission to persuade the various branches of the armed services to use Negroes to the extent of at least 10 per cent of personnel. Authentic sources say the army is rapidly approaching its quota.

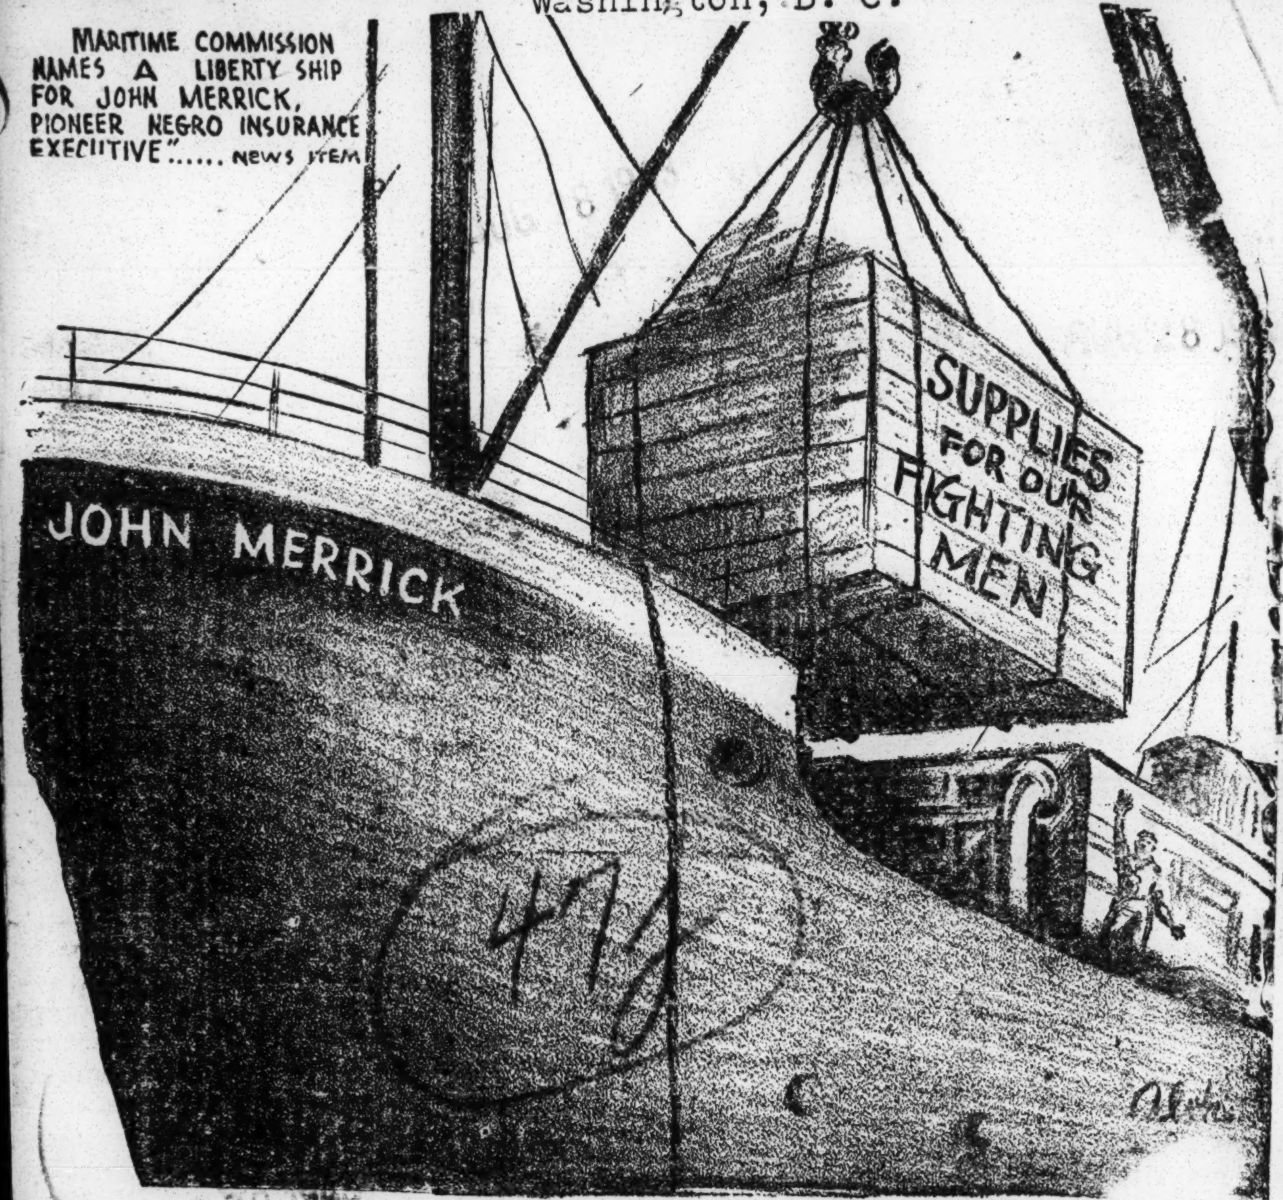
"There has been no delay on our part," Sec. Knox declared. "I don't know whether selective service has given us all [illegible] have asked for. There has bee[illegible] high percentage of physical disqualifications."

SEP 1943
47j

47j-1943

Democracy in Action .. By Alston

Washington Tribune
Washington, D. C.



MARITIME COMMISSION NAMES A LIBERTY SHIP FOR JOHN MERRICK, PIONEER NEGRO INSURANCE EXECUTIVE"...... NEWS ITEM
JOHN MERRICK
SUPPLIES FOR OUR FIGHTING MEN
Alston

AUG 28 194

"The Greatest Insurance of All."

47j

Local Negro Musician Gets Navy Promotion

Nashville, Tenn., Banner

J. D. Chavis, 33, Negro musician with the Navy, was recently promoted from the rank of musician second class to that of musician first class, and is stationed in Seattle, Wash. October 29, 1943

He is the son of Mrs. M. C. Chavis, 910 First Avenue, South, and of the late Rev. J. D. Chavis.

Chavis entered the USNR last November, and is now leader of a 23-piece band. He attended Fisk University, where he received an M.A. degree, and later joined the faculty of Washington Junior High School. He conducted bands at Washington and Pearl High Schools.

Colored Citizens Hold Navy Meeting

Jackson, Miss. News

October 28, 1943

Specialist First Class Harold Jacobs, only colored member of the Navy on recruiting duty in Mississippi, will conduct a meeting of ministers, business operators and other negro citizens of Jackson at 8 p. m. Monday November 1 at the Farish Street Baptist church, 627 North Farish street to discuss Navy enlistments and induction and to lay plans for civilian Navy recruiters to assist men about to enter the service, it was learned.

The Jackson Navy Recruiting Station invites all colored men and women to attend the meeting who are interested in assisting recruiter Jacobs to inform 17-year-old boys of the opportunities open to them in the various trade schools of the Navy.

Explanations of the current Navy program will cover facts which will pertain to placing young enlistees and inductees in Navy jobs where they are most needed and where they will be most useful.

Atlanta, Ga. Journal

October 28, 1943

Negro Servicemen Hold Musical Program

Navy Day was celebrated by Negro servicemen in the Atlanta area Wednesday in a colorful and musical program at the Servicemen's Club, Ashby and Hunter Streets, arranged by Chief Petty Officer Graham Jackson, widely known Atlanta Negro musician.

High Navy and state officials were guests of honor. Music was furnished by the Booker T. Washington High School Band while members of the Naval Air Station band listened.

It was the second annual observance of Navy Day arranged by C. P. O. Jackson for members of his race.

Takes Command Of New Victory Vessel

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

OCT 3 1943

NEW YORK — Captain John Godfrey, U. S. Maritime Service has been placed in command of the S. S. Robert L. Vann the ship which has been named in honor of the late founder of the Pittsburgh Courier, and who was the first Negro Asst. Attorney General of the U. S. The ship is scheduled to be launched at South Portland, Maine, October 14, 1943.

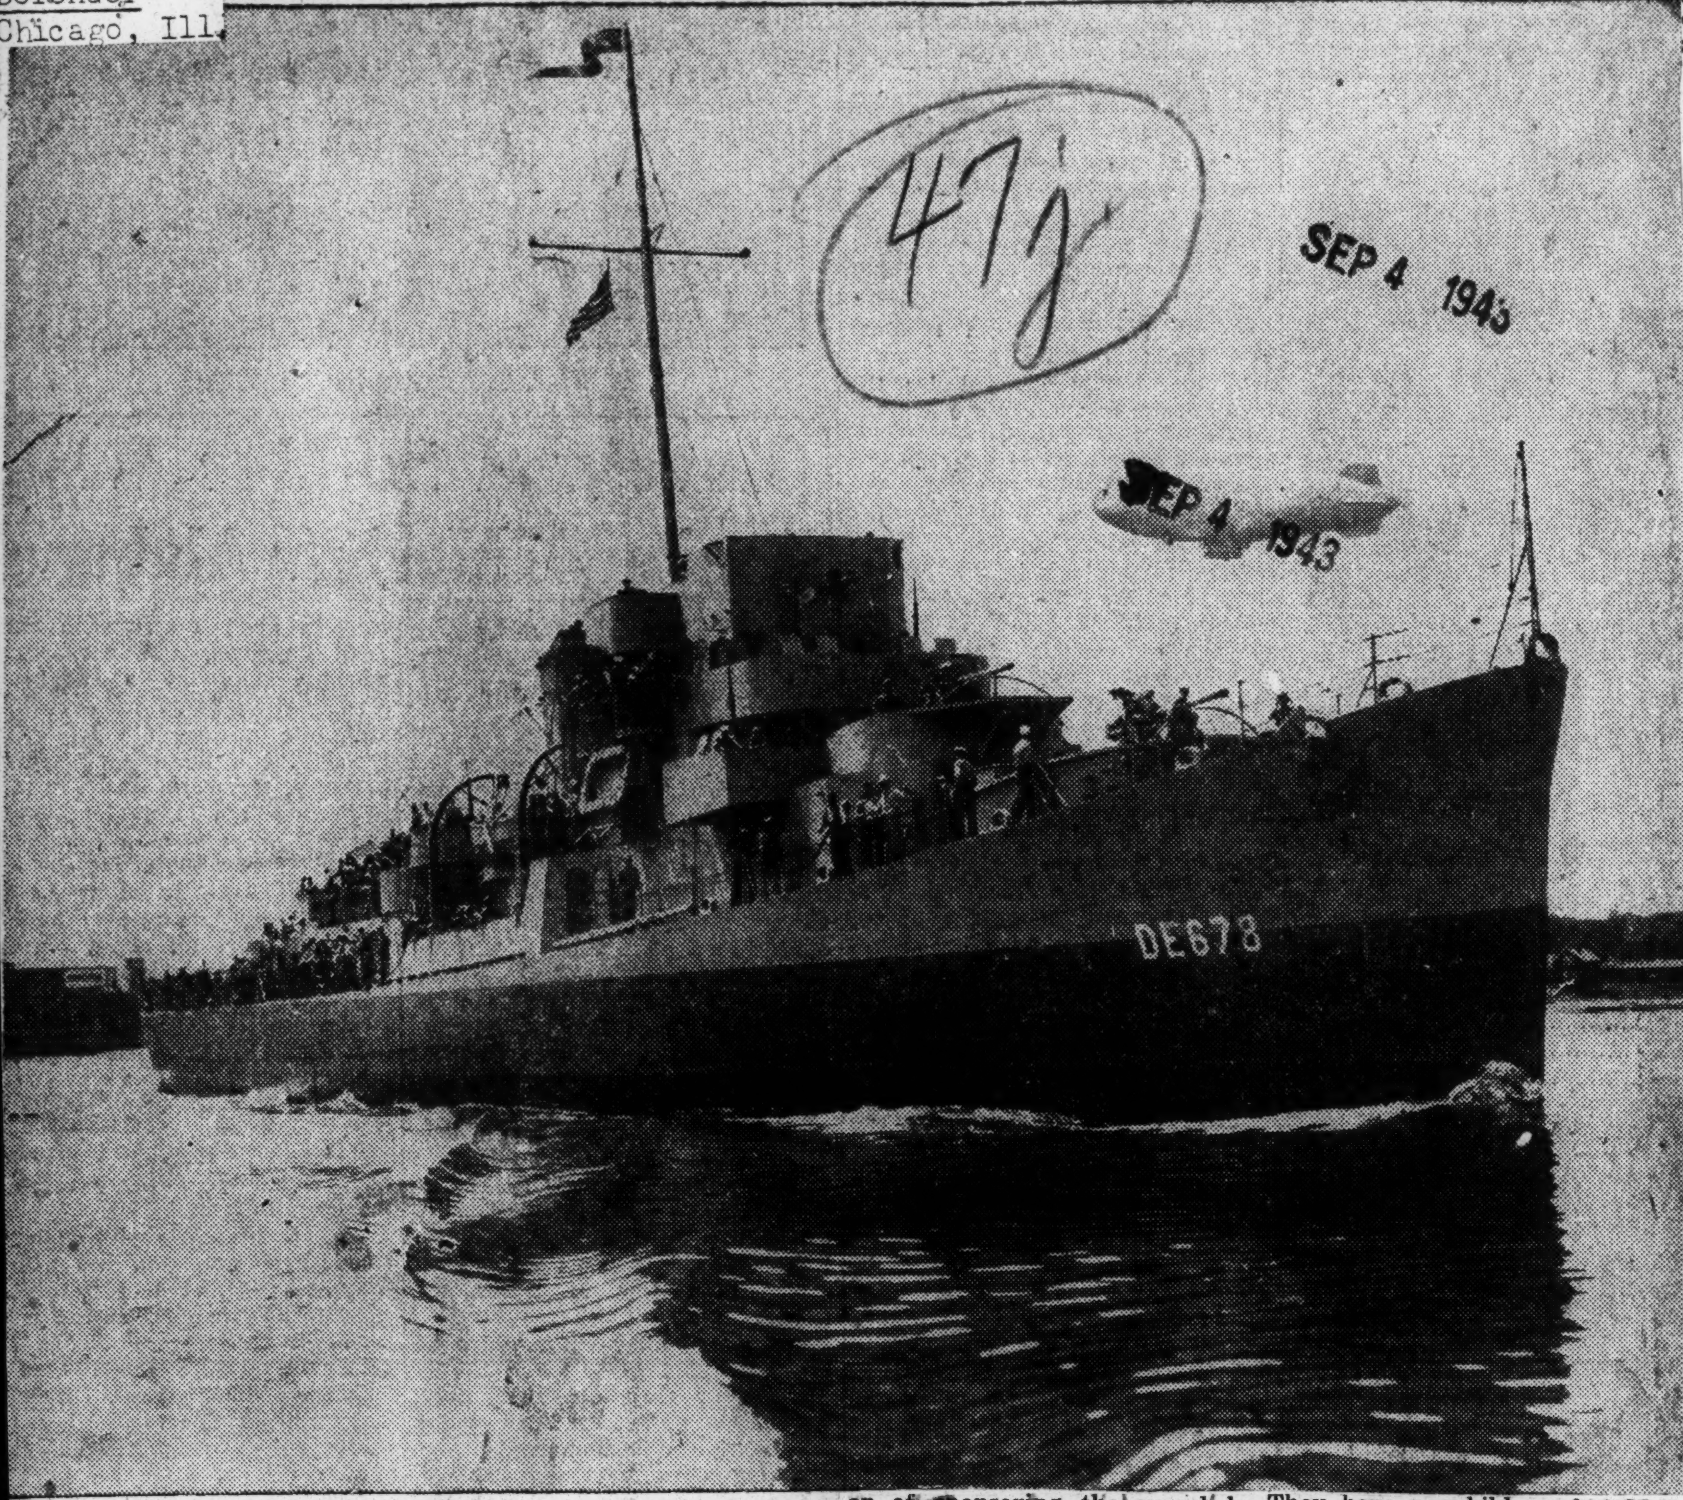
Capt. Godfrey has had twenty five years of maritime experience before joining the postal service. He is a resident of Brooklyn, N. Y. and for the past 14 years has been an employee of the N. Y. Post Office. With him is Lieut. Commander Adolphus Folkes who will be Captain Godfrey's Chief Officer. Lieut. Comm. Folkes is a native New Yorker, a former employee of the New York Sanitation Dept. and was Chief Officer of the First Liberty Ship, the "Booker T. Washington" Photo shows: New York's Postmaster Albert Goldman presenting Capt. Godfrey with his release from the Postal Service for the duration and congratulating him on his new command, while Lt. Commdr. Folkes looks on.

WARSHIP NAMED FOR NEGRO SET FOR ACTION

Defender
Chicago, Ill.

47j

SEP 4 1943



The destroyer, U.S.S. Harmon, plows through the sea water all set for action after its delivery to the Navy in the record breaking time time of 92 days after the keel laying. The first worship ever named after a Negro was built at the Fore River Shipyard of the Bethlehel Steel Company in Quincy, Mass.

Shipyard Worker's Wife Sponsors Liberty Ship

Afro-American
Baltimore, Maryland

NOV 20 1943

10,500-Ton John La Farge Christened by Mrs. Robert Parker at Bethlehem-Fairfield

BALTIMORE

Sponsored by Mrs. Robert Parker of 2335 Madison Avenue, the 10,500-ton Liberty Ship John La Farge, the 239th to be launched at the Bethlehem-Fairfield Shipyard, was sent down the ways this morning (Friday) at 11 o'clock.

Mrs. Parker, wife of an employee of the yard, was given the honor of sponsoring the vessel because of the excellent attendance record made by her husband during a period of several months.

Selected from Among 50 Others

Mrs. Parker's name was selected from a capsule in a bowl containing those of wives of fifty other men who had compiled good attendance marks in a drive by the management to curb absenteeism.

Following the launching, a luncheon was held in honor of the ship's sponsor at the York Hotel. D. B. Parnell, member of the Y Department for Victory Division, was host.

Have No Children

Mr. Parker has been employed at the yard for eighteen months. They have no children, but Mrs. Parker has eight nephews serving in the armed forces. They are:

Sgt. James A. Ennis, Sgt. Howard Liggins, Pvt. Edward P. Rawlings, Cpl. Clifton M. Johnson, Cpl. Lawrence H. Jackson, Sgt. McKinley M. Johnson, Sgt. Orlando Johnson and Pvt. Harold H. Johnson.

The Johnsons are related, but all are not brothers. Sgt. Harold Johnson is a member of the cast of "This Is the Army," now playing London.

Built in 27 Days

The ship, completed in 27 days, is named for an artist born in New York, March 31, 1835, and died November 14, 1904.

La Farge was famous for his creation of "The Ascension," now in the Church of the Ascension, Fifth Avenue, NYC, and was responsible for the bringing to this country the practice of making stained and mosaic glass.

Physical Fitness An Essential Factor In Navy's Morale Aim

New York Age
New York, N. Y.

AUG 14 1943

GREAT LAKES, [illegible] Mass participation is an important part of the physical training and recreation program at the U.S. Naval Training Station, Great Lakes, Ill.

Not a day passes that companies of men in recruit training cannot be seen on the Training Stations' drill field or in drill halls going through a series of calistenics or taking part in the various competitive sports which play such an important role in the Navy's physical fitness program.

Negro Bluejackets in recruit camp or in one or another of the three camps devoted to the training of Negroes, are no exception. With an average of about 130 men to a class, each recruit sailor devotes at least an hour and a half a day to "getting a new set of muscles." And in addition to the scheduled classes, most men spend some portion of their free time on the softball diamond or in the gym.

Every man reporting at the Training Station is given the U. S. Navy's standard physical fitness test, which includes squat-thrusts, sit-ups, push-ups, squat-jumps and pull-ups (chins). Based on a chart allowing a certain number of points for the number of times a man is able to do each exercise, his physical fitness score is deterimned.

Men who score below 40 points, or whose score is below their company's average are given additional work designed to strengthen and to bring up to par the muscular weaknesses indicated. With the first test given in the first week of training, the recruit takes the identical test in his fourth week and again in the seventh week.

In addition to the physical fitness tests, the program includes road work (running, jogging, marching); calisthenics (before breakfast exercises and additional periods); boxing, wrestling; tumbling; personal combat (rough and tumble without weapons); track and field events (emphasizing [illegible]) such as scaling cargo nets or fire bucket relays); obstacle course work; mass games; rope climbing and swimming. Inter-battalion and inter-regimental competition is held in the various sports throughout the training period.

The third phase of the program recreation - includes gym classes, table games, lounge and library activities, group singing, instrumental music, hobbies and special interests. Equipment in each regiment's huge recreation building is furnished through Navy Welfare Funds. Supervising activities in each building are two women recreation leaders and three chief specialists whose task it is to keep equipment busy and officiate at various contest.

The man whose charge it is to whip into shape the thousands of men who train at Great Lakes - over one-third of the total personnel of the Navy - is Lt. Cmdr. Alden W. Thompson, physical training and recreation officer. His staff includes 50 officers and chief petty, officers, all of whom are college graduates with years of experience in physical training and athletic coaching.

Navy Accepts Full Quota Of Negroes

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

SEP 5 1943

WASHINGTON — (ANP) — Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox said Friday that the Navy is accepting its quota of Negro although there has been a large percentage of rejections for physical reasons. Mr. Knox denied that there has been any [illegible] on the prt of his Navy in keeping of abreast of this schedule worked out with the Selective Service.

47j-1943

Launch S. S. Merrick, Fourth Liberty Ship

Peoples Voice
New York. N. Y.

JUL 24 1943

WILMINGTON, N. C.—The "S.S. John Merrick," fourth Liberty Ship to be named for an outstanding American Negro, was launched Sunday afternoon, July 11, at the North Carolina Shipbuilding Company here.

The vessel was sponsored by Mrs. Martha Merrick Donnell, of Durham, daughter of John Merrick, who was one of the founders of the North Carolina Mutual Life Insurance Company, one of the country's largest Negro financial institutions.

The "Merrick" is the first Liberty ship built in North Carolina to be named for a Negro. Mrs. Donnell's attendants were: Mrs. Martha Williams Wheeler, of Durham, matron of honor; Mrs. Hazel Scott of Washington, D. C., matron of honor, and the wives of four shipyard emploees, James Gordon, Jerry McGhee, Charles Sparrow and George Judge, all of Wilmington.

N.C. GOVERNOR PRESENT

Gov. J. Melville Broughton of North Carolina and C. C. Spaulding, president of the North Carolina Mutual Life Insurance Company, were the principal speakers at the launching.

The North Carolina Shipbuilding Company was one of the yards cited recently by the Special Committee Investigating the Natioal Defense Program, headed by Senator Harry S. Truman, as the most efficient producers of Liberty Ships and Naval vessels.

At this yard, 5,300 Negroes are employed as machine operators, blacksmiths, painters, dismantlers, stage builders, riggers, bolters, drillers, slab benders, erectors, riveters and other skilled and semiskilled capacities. Negroes constitute 29.8 per cent of all employees in the company's Wilmington yard.

JUL 24 1943

Journal & Guide
Norfolk, Va.

Big Increase In Number Of Negro Recruits

Sweeping Changes Will Be Made In Training Routine

GREAT LAKES, Ill. — In line with the Navy Department's announcement in Washington a few months ago that an ever increasing number of Negroes were entering its ranks through Selective Service, a huge expansion of the program for recruit training has been undertaken at the Naval Training Station here.

Sweeping changes in training facilities, designed to centralize the regiments' recruit training program and to provide additional space for men of Outgoing Unit and Service School, have been completed.

Under the revisions, Camp Robert Smalls will no longer be used for recruit training, but instead becomes the home of OGU, Service School, Ship's Company, Music and Entertainment Department, and Security Watch, while Camps Moffett and Lawrence are to be utilized solely for recruit training.

The former camp had housed the outgoing unit in addition to recruits since July 3 when Camp Moffett became the third unit to be devoted to the training of Negroes at Great Lakes.

Of the companies in training in Camp Smalls all but a half-dozen have been moved to either of the other two training sites. These will remain in their original camp until completion of training, with the last company scheduled to be graduated October 18th.

Recruit facilities of Camp Smalls, such as the rifle range, gas chamber and obstacle course, will continue to be used by recruits, Cmdr. D. W. Armstrong, assistant recruit training officer in charge of Negro training, explained. Recreational and athletic equipment of the camp will be used by activities newly moved into the area.

LATEST PHASE

The Navy has estimated that 15 per cent of the men inducted into the Navy this year would be Negroes and pointed out that most of these would be assigned to Great Lakes.

The program got underway at Great Lakes on May 1, when Camp Lawrence was turned over to Negro sailors and continued with the construction of a $200,000 Service School building in Camp Smalls and the conversion of Camp Moffett to Negro training. Camp Smalls—parent Negro unit—was opened in June of last year.

Seamen Report Bias At Maritime School

Courier
Pittsburgh. Pa

NEW YORK, Sept. 30—(ANP)—Documented allegations of flagrant and illegal discrimination visted upon ten graduates of the United States Maritime Service Training station at Sheepshead Bay by the USMS, the War Shiping Administration and at least one maritime union were contained in a signed letter to the National Maritime union last week.

The complaints list names, dates, places and circumstances in making the sensational charges that reveal a callous violation of the President's Executive Orders 8802 and 9436 which proscribe "discrimination in essential industries."

FILE AFFIDAVITS

Those seamen filing the affidavit are Henry H. Williams, Lubin E. Spencer, Jr., James E. Bray, Wilton O. Cooper, Alvin A. Watson, Richard J. Stribling, Bryon R. Smith, Chester L. Edward, Sam A. McClellan and Booker T. Brooks.

After graduation from the USMA training school as ordinary seamen, the maritime workers relate that they were quartered at the Chelsea hotel awaiting jobs, but that after five weeks of idleness they decided to act. Spurring their decision was the knowledge that successive classes had graduated from the school and shipped to various vessels, to other stations, and to the Great Lakes. Shipping authorities informed them they could ship only as messmen.

A spokesman for the NMU stated that efforts are being made to correct the situation that is directly opposed to the principles of the leading union organization of sea-going men.

S. S. Merrick Launched Sunday

Tribune
Savannah, Ga.

Vessel Named After Well Known Negro

AUG 5 1943

Sunday afternoon, the mid-part of July, the ship building plant on the Cape Fear River, N. C, was the scene of the launching of the ship named in honor of the well-known John Merrick. More than 1,200 persons witnessed this history making event. The traditional bottle of champagne was smashed on the 10,500 Liberty Ship as she gracefully left the ways. Mrs. Martha Merrick Donnell, daughter of the honored John Merrick, wielded the bottle. President C. C. Spaulding of the North Carolina Mutual Insurance company paid this tribute to the occasion.

"This signal honor to a member of my race has not been conferred in a shipyard south of the Mason-Dixon line. If it was to be, it has rightfully been done for the first time within the confines of the commonwealth of the greatest and noblest state in the Union—North Carolina.

'As I stand here and look out upon this vast concourse of humanity witnessing this grand event, and with my mind anticipate the thousands who will hear the broadcast in this our land and country, I can not help but mention that in all probability nowhere else on earth could an occasion like this one be had except under the protection of the Stars and Stripes—the symbol of the 'land of the free and the home of the brave.'

'John Merrick was not a speaker; he wrote no books, had no publicity agent—never assumed to he a great leader, but he was. He was an humble spirit possessed of superior endowment. Unlike Frederick Douglas and Booker T. Washington—two great leaders who preceded him in death—Douglas spoke—Washington appealed—Merrick taught his race self help in building commercial enterprises—frugality and self employment.

AUG 5 1943

Nixes Mixed Warship Crew

Amsterdam News

Navy Head Admits Special Efforts To Avoid Mixing Negro and White Seamen

New York, N. Y.

DEC 4 1943

By ERNEST E. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON, (ANP) — The Navy Department definitely does not intend to mix the crews of its warships. Sec. Frank Knox, in no uncertain terms, told his press conference last Friday afternoon, in answer to the inquiry of the Associated Negro Press, that the policy of the department is consciously one of Jim Crow.

The subject was precipitated when the Navy secretary announced that he had appointed a Navy manpower survey board to examine the complements—officer, enlisted and civilian—of all naval shore establishments with an eye to "streamlining" and achieving maximum efficiency. The final phase of the Navy's expanding shore organization and mobilization work, he said, is nearing completion.

Streamlining What?

Mr. Knox was then asked whether or not, in view of the stated probability that personnel at shore establishments would be reduced as a result of this study, it would follow that Negroes would be given different assignments since the bulk of those leaving such centers as the Great Lakes Naval Training Station had been sent to such establishments.

"That will depend upon just what the men can do," he stated, "and whether we have places available to them."

"Are they not trained to be seamen?" was the next query.

The secretary sat upright in his spring-chair and looked directly at his questioner and declared: "Well, you know exactly what we are trying to do. We are trying to avoid mixing crews on ships. That puts a limitation on where we can employ Negro seamen. Using them for crews of small shore and harbor craft, and things of that sort, and for shore duty. But we are not mixing crews."

'One-Man Gun Crew'

Mr. Knox's statement came about 48 hours after Lt. Charles H. Hutchins, commander of the destroyer Berio, describing for newsmen the manner in which his ship had knocked out two enemy submarines in fierce combat, told of the exploit of a Negro cook who became a "one-man gun crew" when both the ammunition unpacker, the loader and the pointer all became blinded by the ash of the firing gun.

All-Negro crews are now manning Coast Guard cutters, but there has been no announcement or indication that colored seamen are being used on any other ships outside of the rank of mess attendant. There is ground now for some speculation that those few Negroes known to be enrolled in the Navy's V-12 program, if given commissions as has been hinted, will be assigned to those "small shore and harbor craft" on which they are not presently used and to which the secretary referred.

The only announcements that the department has been in the habit of making about Negroes in the Navy have been with regard to those in construction battalions, popularly called "Seabees."

DEC 4 1943

COLORED SAILORS IN "HALL OF FAME"

Courier — Pittsburgh Pa

SEP 18 1943

GREAT LAKES, Ill., Sept. 16—With the contest only a month old, a company of Negro sailors recently became the first of its race and the third at Great Lakes to be entered in the "Hall of Fame" at the U. S. Naval Training station here.

Named as honor man of the company was John Alvin Martin, of 118 W. Gray avenue, Houston, Texas. Martin was apprentice chief petty officer of his outfit during training. Stanley Martin McBride, of 2508 Palmyra street, New Orleans, La., was company clerk, and James O'Dell Chick, of 1417 Wylie avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa., was master-at-arms.

---

74 SEAMEN FINISH HOSPITAL SCHOOL

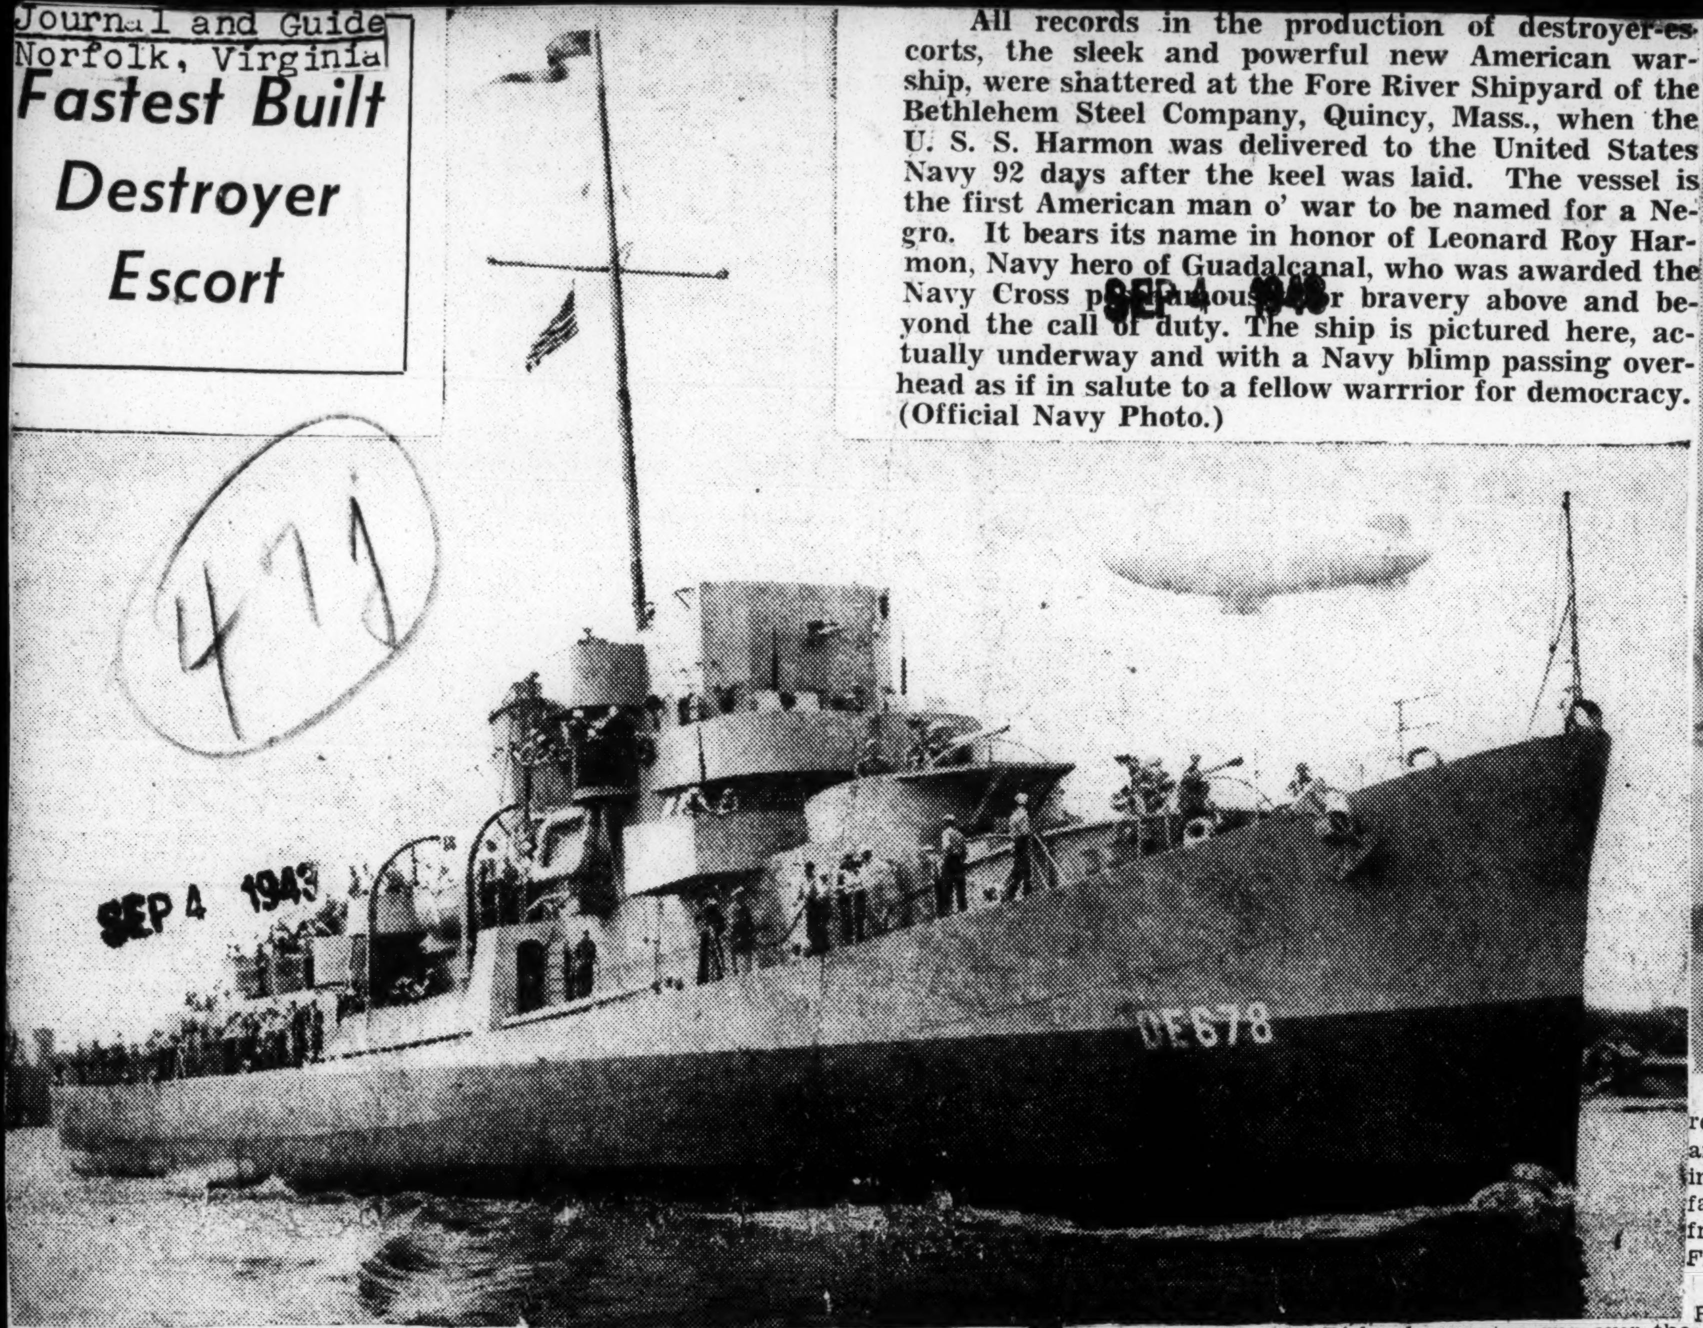
Courier
Pittsburgh Pa.

SEP 18 1943

GREAT LAKES, Ill., Sept. 16—(ANP)—Seventy-four Negro seamen graduated last week from the hospital corps training school here, first Negro class to enter and complete the school in many years. The last Negro to serve on active duty in the corps was chief Pharmacist's Mate Thomas, who had a splendid record.

Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Virginia

Fastest Built Destroyer Escort



All records in the production of destroyer-escorts, the sleek and powerful new American warship, were shattered at the Fore River Shipyard of the Bethlehem Steel Company, Quincy, Mass., when the U. S. S. Harmon was delivered to the United States Navy 92 days after the keel was laid. The vessel is the first American man o' war to be named for a Negro. It bears its name in honor of Leonard Roy Harmon, Navy hero of Guadalcanal, who was awarded the Navy Cross posthumously for bravery above and beyond the call of duty. The ship is pictured here, actually underway and with a Navy blimp passing overhead as if in salute to a fellow warrrior for democracy. (Official Navy Photo.)

SEP 4 1943

47j

~~SS~~ Douglass Goes Down-But Spirit Lives in Captain and Crew

Daily Worker
New York, N. Y.

OCT 28 1943

By Beth McHenry

Captain Adrian Richardson, one of the three Negro masters in the American merchant marine, is happy that of his crew of 70 not a man went down when the S. S. Frederick Douglass was sunk by a Nazi torpedo a few weeks ago.

Named for the great Negro American, the Douglass was returning from her second voyage when she met up with the enemy. The ship sank quickly when the dread needle pierced her but the crew abandoned her in disciplined fashion and all were rescued afterward.

Captain Richardson had nothing but praise for the crew. A fine group of men, he said, as fine as you'll ever get together anywhere.

The men were all members of the National Maritime Union, CIO.

Captain Richardson is a tall slender man with hair just now turning grey although he is nearing sixty. He has been sailing American flag ships for nearly forty years and has had a captain's license for about thirty. In the last war he sailed on army transports and until he took the Douglass he was a master in the Army Transport Service again. He is the second Negro captain to have been chosen to command of a Liberty ship. The first was Captain Hugh Mulzac, master of the Booker T. Washington and third was Captain John Godfrey of the George Washington Corves.

Captain Mulzac and Captain Richardson have been shipmates, incidentally, and they watch each other's progress with pride.

We visited the captain of the lost Frederick Douglass at his home on 110th street the other day and found him restless to be back at sea.

NOT A SHORESIDE MAN

"I'm not a shoreside man," he explained with a slow quiet smile. "And while the war's going on I don't feel right except aboardship. There's too much to be done and my part in it all is out there." He gestured toward the harbor.

The captain was tending his big dog Jerry who had become suddenly ill and lay shivering on the floor. Mr. Richardson put a rug over the dog and fed him liquids. He's an old friend to me, the captain said, an old friend that's mighty close.

The big dog Jerry's son was aboard the Frederick Douglass when she was struck by the torpedo. The captain told us how one of the crew members went back to save the dog. Just like with the cat in "Action in the North Atlantic," he said with a smile.

Mr. Richardson has made his home in New York for the past ten years. As much a home as a seafaring man can have, he explained. He came to the states as a child from the Dutch East Indies and was reared by foster parents in Massachusetts. The men in the family were all deep sea sailors and young Adrian Richardson followed them willingly. His only brother also went to sea.

SON AT GUADALCANAL

Captain Richardson's son, Arthur, 30, was at Guadalcanal and was brought home badly wounded. He recently had a furlough from the army hospital where he is convalescing and came here to meet his father when the latter arrived home from the tragic last trip of the new Frederick Douglass.

CAPT. ADRIAN RICHARDSON

"My boy was badly hurt," Mr. Richardson said, adding proudly "not that you'd ever know it from him. He never would talk about himself. Just anxious to get well and on the job again. He's some lad."

The captain is very proud of the magnificent record that Negro soldiers and sailors have already made in the war and is most anxious that democracy shall fulfill itself quickly. It's time that there should no longer be anything unusual about a Negro captain in the merchant marine or a Negro officer anywhere else, he said.

Captain Richardson has seen all the seas and most of the world's ports in his forty years of seafaring. He said for peace time sailing he likes the South American run the best. A man just takes a fancy, he explained. But now, as he hastened to add, a man's fancy is of no importance. There is only the war voyage and I am anxious to be back on that run, he said.

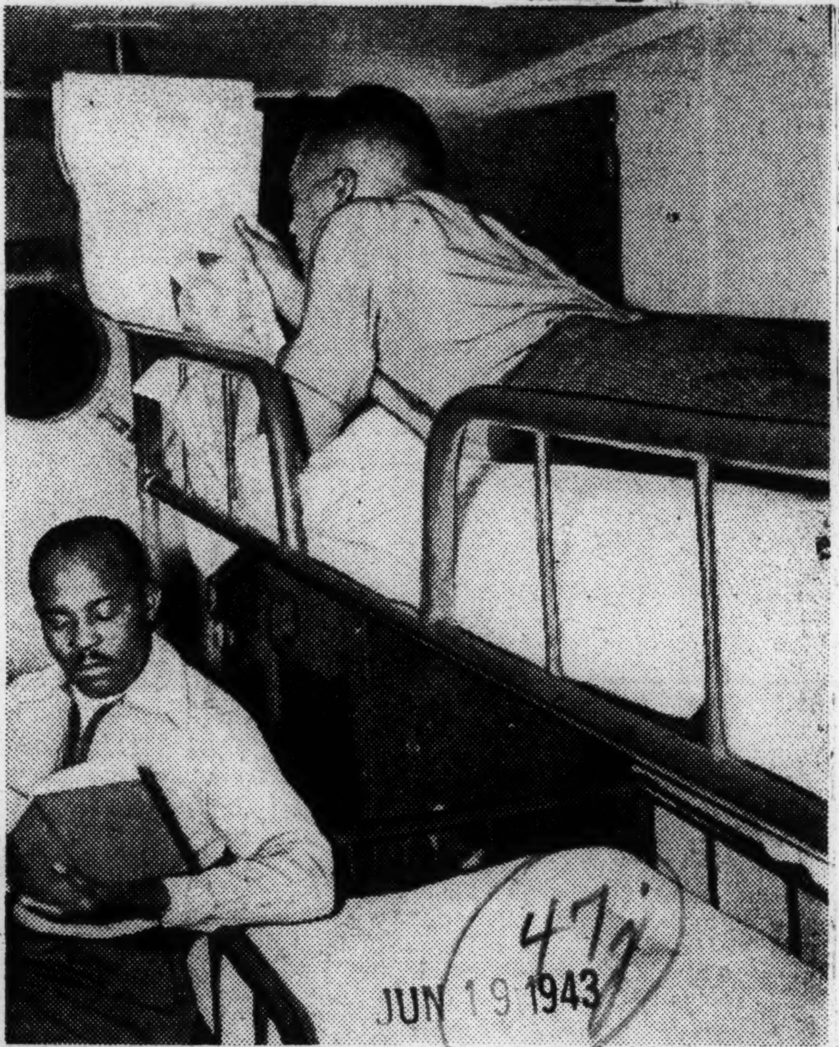
47j

47j-1943

Afro-American
Baltimore, Maryland

Exclusive AFRO Photos of Crew of the S.S. Douglass Now on the High Seas

Capt. Adrian Richardson, skipper of the S.S. Frederick Douglass, is shown above, seated, with two of his three mates about him. John B. Clark, right, is third mate, while Kristian Kristianson, Norwegian, left, is first mate. Not shown in the photo is Benjamin O. Smith, white, second mate.



Relaxing after a day's work aboard the S.S. Frederick Douglass are Able-bodied Seamen Floyd Beavers, lying on his cot, and Claude McCleans, who reads a few passages from the Bible. Seamen's cabins on the Douglass accommodate four men each, with individual steel lockers and an electric fan. In addition, there is a large overhead light and an individual reading lamp over each bunk.

JUN 19 1943

47j

Pittsburgh, Pa. Courier

Newest Discovery Speaks Twelve Tongues; Torpedoed 6 Times

By RANDY DIXON
(Accredited U. S. Army War Correspondent)

SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND, July 8 (Delayed)—No so long ago, word came from Pittsburgh concerning a visit there of Harold Donald Harper, messman aboard a merchant ship. At the time, he was the guest of Mrs. Daisy Taylor, of 3303 Iowa street, mother of Mrs. Sydney Taylor Brown, Red Cross worker overseas.

To most folk back home, Harper who lives at 92 Myrtle avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., is just another seaman. But to the keeper of the records, he is Harold Donald Harper, messman, B.A., University of Edinburgh, M.A., Berlin university, linguist who reads and writes eight languages and speaks 12, and a victim of ship torpedoes six times.

LOSES MOTHER, SONS

In addition, the current war has cost Harper his mother and 17-year-old son, and he lost another son during an air raid on London in World War 1. To add to his retrospective woes, his wife and a son were killed in the Tokyo earthquake in 1923.

Born 54 years ago in Kansas City, Harper lived successively in other American cities including Philadelphia until he was 12. He then went to Russia where his father had become prosperous as a fur trader.

ROMANCE BEGINS

He was sent to England for schooling and while at Edinburgh university met the beautiful daughter of an East Indian merchant.

He began his career aboard ships in an escape plot from Vienna where he was studying music, after he struck the professor over the head with a piano stool and had to flee. He sailed for four years, saved his money and went to Berlin to study languages. There he resumed acquaintances with his sweetheart of Edinburgh days and married. She later converted him to her Mohammedan faith.

Harper got a job as a guide and linguist with Thos. Cook and Co., being stationed at Brussels. He was there when the town fell to the Kaiser's armies in October, 1914.

NARROW ESCAPE

Harper left Belgium in 1915 and went to Holland. To get to England from there he booked passage aboard the ship Arabic which was torpedoed off the West Coast of Africa and sunk. Harper was picked up by an ocean going tug and made England safely.

He settled in a London suburb with his family. And in one of London's two daylight raids of the last war, his home was hit, and his baby son killed.

TORPEDOED

After this tragedy his wife decided to serve as a nurse at the East Indian hospital in Paris, and Harper went into the merchant service in England. During the course of the war he was torpedoed four times. In 1917 in the Bay of Biscay, coming into Bordeaux; again in 1917 in the Bristol Channel and in 1918 in the Mediterannean on the explosive-laden ship Medina.

His fifth torpedoing occurred in Shagerrak, while returning to Newcastle from Norway. His ship, the Ellerman, was carrying 1,200 passengers. A torpedo hit the ship at midnight. Only four persons were saved.

Harper then went to work for a British colonel, Sir Walter Marjoribanks, and traveled all over the world with him.

"BLEW" A FORTUNE

After the war, he continued to work for the colonel, who became British High Commissioner for Foreign Trade and went to China, Argentina, India, New Zealand, South Africa and the United States.

His wife accompanied him. "The colonel was too good to live," explained Harper. "He died, but left me $50,000. But I was a fool with it. I haven't got it today."

WIFE, SON KILLED

In 1922 Harper returned to work as linguist and guide for the Cook firm, first in Egypt and then in Tokyo. Later, Tokyo was struck by its worst earthquake, killing Mrs. Harper and their older son.

Harper came to the United States and then took his infant son to Paris to be cared for by his sister. He went back to sea. His father died in 1926. His mother, who went blind in her old age, was an air raid victim in London in 1941.

Harper said the U. S. consul told him that when the Germans pushed through Belgium in 1940 they blew up everything at Louvain. Harper's 17-year-old son, survivor of the Tokyo earthquake, was attending school there, studying to be an engineer. The consul told Harper the Nazis just lined up everybody and machine-gunned them.

QUITE A STORY TOO!

And that, in tabloid, is Harold Donald Harper's story. And its the same in each of the languages he knows: French, German, Russian, English, Japanese, Arabic, Greek, Gaelic, Icelandic, Hindustani and Basuta, a Zulu dialect.

Although they don't have the rich background of Harper, other merchant seamen encountered in various ports have stories, too. Space prohibits recounting these stories right now. But mention of their names might suffice. They include John Harkins, 2251 N. Orianna street, Philadelphia; John Harrison, 3056 Albany Crescent, Bronx; Jimmy Hughes, 446 W. 164th street, New York City; James Johnson, 2000 N. 27th street, Philadelphia; Albert Bull, 504 S. Ellwood avenue, Baltimore; Richard Clark, 723 St. Nicholas avenue, New York City; Henry Casanova, 913 Longwood avenue, Bronx; Ernest Durham, 453 Foundry street, Atlanta; C. N. Delmore, 504 S. Francis street, Mobile; Matt Graham, 6545 Wentworth avenue, Chicago; Walter Jones, 237 W. 142nd street, New York City; Ernest Matthews, [illegible] St. Nicholas avenue, New York City; Edwin New, 1326 Prospect avenue, Brooklyn; Louis Powers, 625 N. Maderia street, Baltimore; Leland Sykes, 516 W. 149th, New York City; Scottie Scutchins, 351 W. 24th, New York City; Victor Smith, 147 W. 133rd street, New York City; Benjamin Warren, 206 Douglass avenue, Haddonfield, New Jersey; Robert Wilson, 41 Mystic avenue, Everett, Mass., and Walter Williams, 359 Marionette street, Mobile; and, believe it or not, Thomas Thomas, of Camden, N. J., and Greer Greer, 126 13th street, S. E., Washington, D.C.

JUL 10 1943

47j

Arlington, Ga. Courier
October 28, 1943

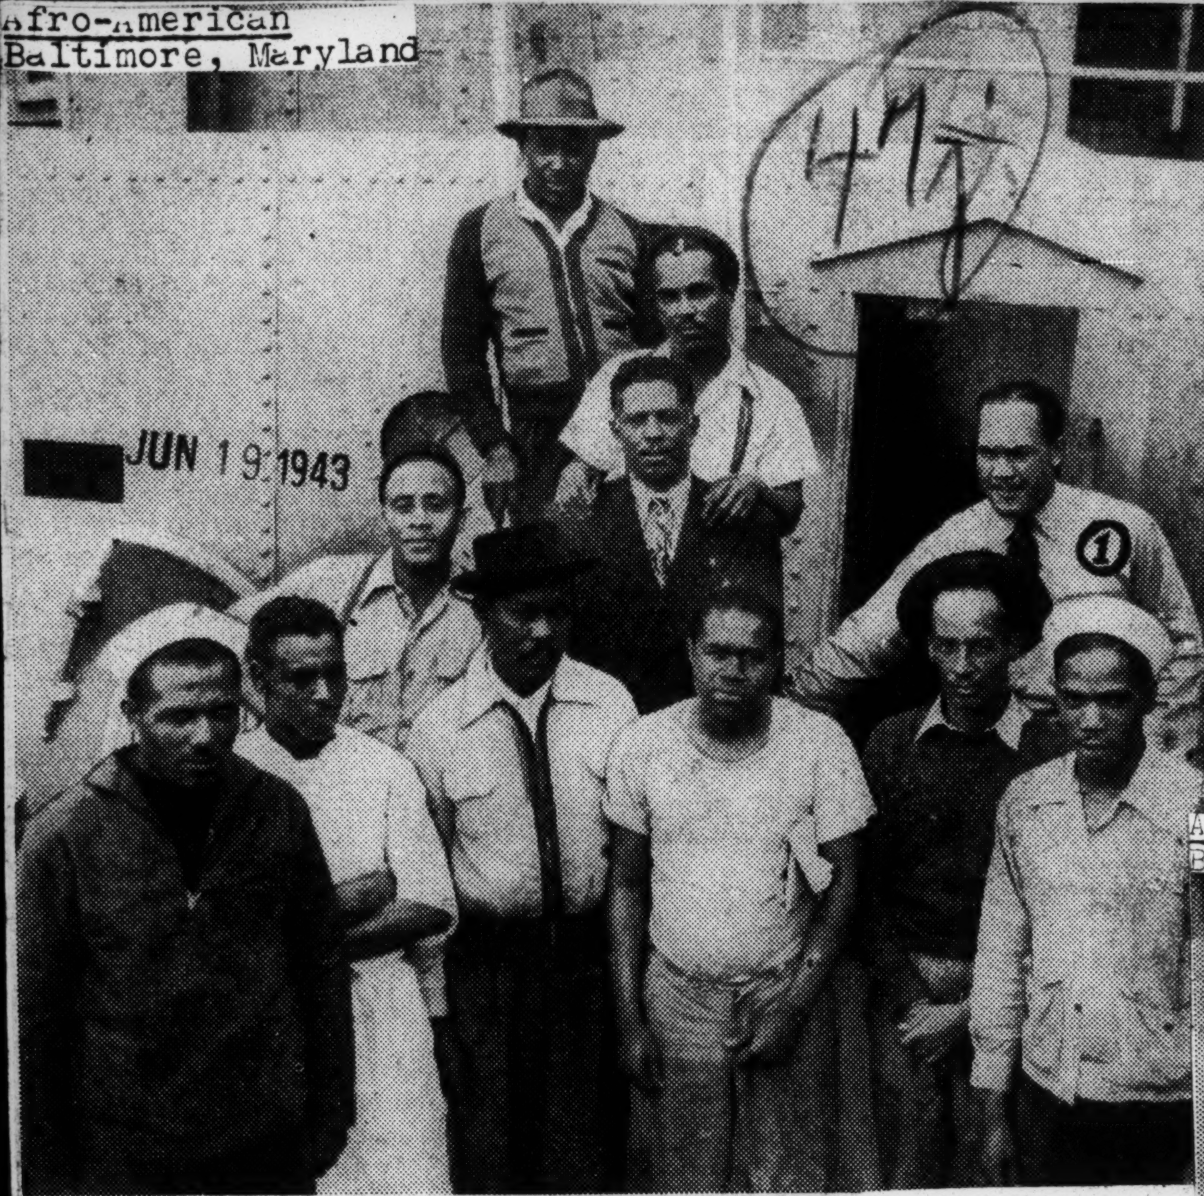
NEGRO FARM HAND'S WIFE TO GET $308 DEPENDENT'S PAY

SHREVEPORT, La. A 34-year-old Negro, Tom Washington, father of 11 children ranging in age from 5 doys to 15 years, was sworn into the Navy here hTursday as a volunteer.

Navy officials said that under the new Service Men's Allotment Act Washington's allotment would be $308 per month. The family lives on a farm and Washington has been employed by a rialroad.

47j

Afro-American
Baltimore, Maryland



47j
JUN 19 1943

Above are shown a group of the able-bodied seamen who help man the new 10,500-ton liberty ship, the S.S. Frederick Douglass, now in service on the high seas. No. 1 is William Barker, ship purser. Barker sailed under Captain Hugh Mulzac on the maiden voyage of the S.S. Booker T. Washington.

JUN 19 1943

Keel Of S.S. Carver Laid In West Coast Shipyard

Chicago Defender Chicago, Illinois

RICHMOND, Calif. — The S.S. George Washington Carver, second Liberty Ship to be named for an outstanding Negro American, was under construction this week in a West Coast shipyard, following the laying of the keel of the 10,000-ton vessel on April 12 here.

Assigned the name of the world-famous scientist by the Maritime Commission a short time after Dr. Carver died at Tuskegee Institute, Ala., on January 5, 1943, the Liberty Ship will be the 60th vessel built in the Richmond Shipyard No. 1 of the Permanente Metals corporation.

The launching of the SS George Washington Carver next month will mark the second such ceremony participated in by the thousands of Negro shipyard workers in the four Kaiser company yards in Richmond.

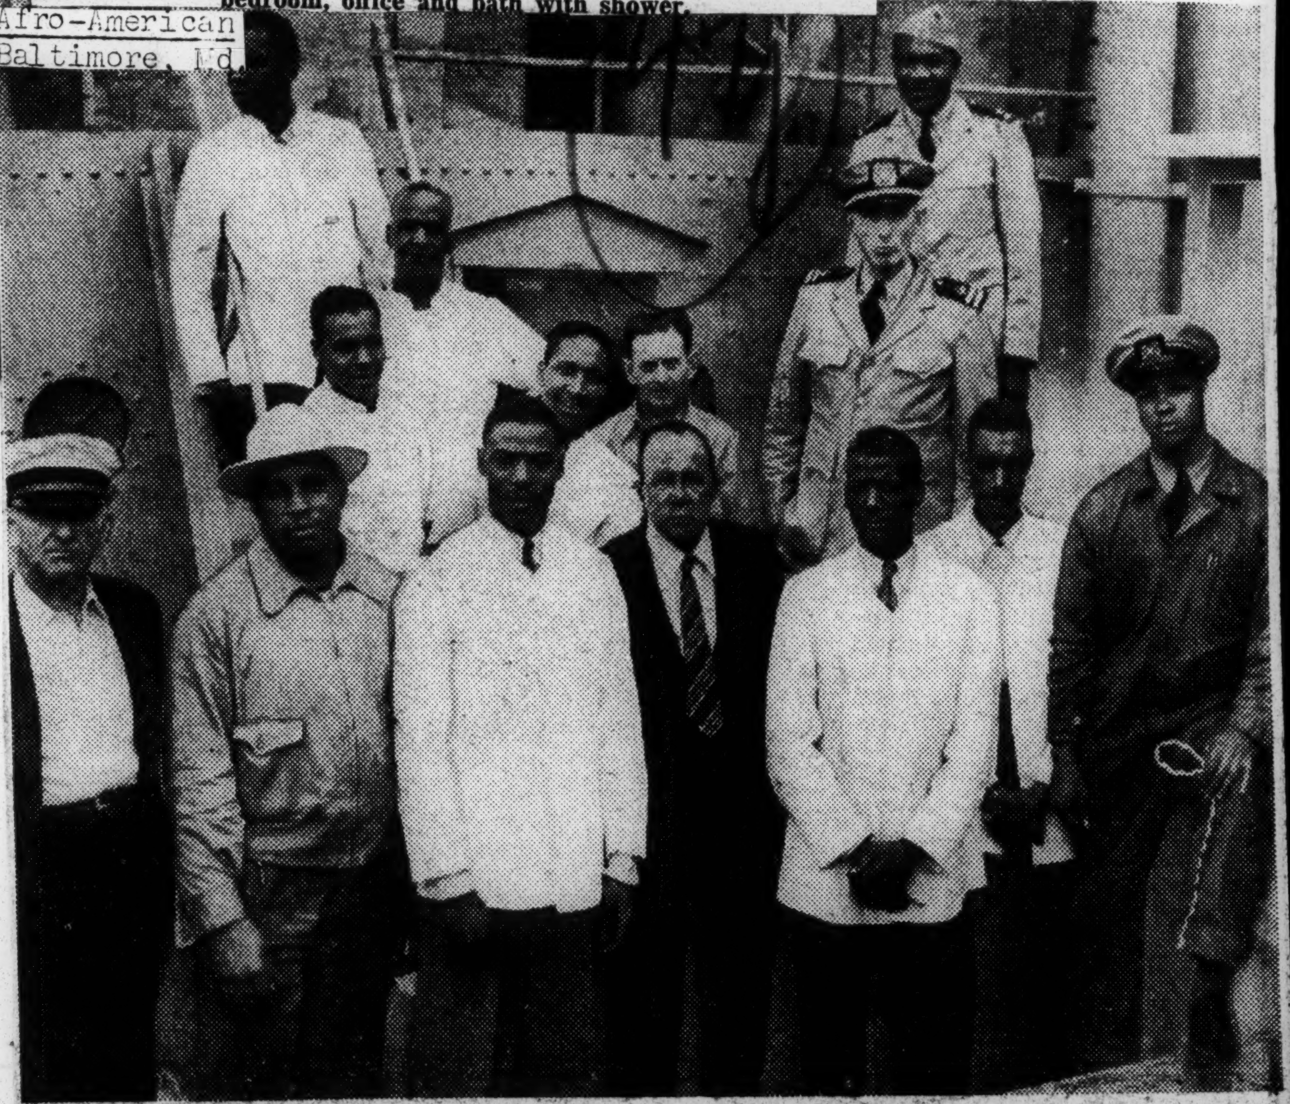
On March 31, the SS S. Hall Young, another Liberty Ship, was launched by Negro workers in Richmond Yard No. 2 after Miss Beulah Whittington, a Kaiser shipyard worker of three days' employment, was selected by lottery to christen the ship. Drawing the lucky number from a pool of 35,000 workers, Miss Whittington christened the ship while Mrs. Katie Lewis served as matron of honor.

The first Liberty Ship named for a Negro, the SS Booker T. Washington, is now in active service under a Negro master, Captain Hugh Mulzac, and the third ship, the SS Frederick Douglass, has been assigned for construction at the Bethlehem-Fairfield Shipyard in Baltimore, Md.

47j
JUN 19 1943

Captain Adrian Richardson, skipper of the S.S. Douglass, can talk from his quarters directly to his officers in the ship's wheel house, engine room or galley. He is shown above using the speaking tube for this purpose while relaxing in his quarters, which is combination bedroom, office and bath with shower.

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.



Officers and crew of the S.S. Frederick Douglass on the deck of their ship. At the rear are John B. Clark and Benjamin O. Smith, white, third and second mates, respectively. At extreme left is Kristrin T. Kristriansen, Norwegian, first mate. At extreme right is William H. Simmons, ship carpenter.

JUN 19 1943

47j-1943

Seamen Tell Why They Like To Sail Under Capt. Mulzac

The Daily Worker
New York, N. Y.

By Art Shields

No austere sea captain stepped like a deck god out of the pages of a Joseph Conrad sea story, when a Liberty ship skipper took the mike at the National Maritime Union convention last Wednesday.

Now Captain Hugh Mulzac is nothing like that.

And the NMU welcomed its favorite "old man" with a storm of applause as he came forward to greet the union he helped to bring into the world six and seven years ago.

There was dignity, yes, in the quiet, slim Negro skipper, who was greeting his brothers. But warm friendship too.

And the men who had sailed and fought by his side in the past responded with equal affection.

Joe Curran, NMU president, calls him "the head of one of the happiest families at sea," as well as the master of a ship, "whose record is the envy of other sea captains."

WHY MEN FOLLOW HIM

You know why men follow him when you talk to members of his crew, like Harry Alexander, the NMU delegate from his ship, the S.S. Booker T. Washington, and Fred Reed, another visiting seaman.

"First ship I ever sailed on where the crew had no 'beefs' at the end of the trip," said Fred Reed.

"We had no beefs because we all worked together, captain and crew."

The S.S. Booker T. Washington was the envy of the convoy homebound from North Africa for more reasons than one.

The ship's spic-and-span appearance and the seamanship shown had something to do with this envy. But the heat had perhaps more.

THE 'BOOKER T.'S' SHOWER

"We ran into blistering weather coming home," said Fred Reed. "The heat just wilted you down. On almost any other ship we'd have suffered, that's all. But not on the good Booker T. Washington. When we got out the fire (hose) lines to cool certain cargo for reasons of safety we did something else. We rigged up the fire lines so that they sprayed a large section of the deck like a great shower bath. And every seaman not needed on duty got under and cooled off in his shorts.

They Sail With Capt. Mulzac

Harry Alexander, right, the S.S. Booker T. Washington's delegate to the NMU convention, is discussing his favorite "Old Man" with his shipmate Fred Reed, at Manhattan Center. —Daily Worker Photo

Captain Mulzac and all the officers and engineers cooled off with the rest for several minutes.

This went on every hot day, while envious eyes watched the Coney Island scene from the decks of other ships.

Captain Mulzac was always zealous of the health of his men.

BOXING AT SEA

The food was the best and he encouraged the men to box and lift weights and engage in other sports in their spare time.

Bruce Shepard, the Negro bosun, gave many boxing lessons. And Bruce Shepard is good. Nat Low Daily Worker sports editor, remembers the fast bout he put on with Bob Pastor at the Garden several years ago, when Shepard was rated the nation's sixth boxer by the American Boxing Association.

The crew is Negro and white, about fifty-fifty. All the deck officers are Negroes, half the engineers and nearly half of the rest of the crew.

They are brothers together.

"White southern boys in the Navy gun crew went out for social evenings with Negro merchant seamen in foreign ports just as a matter of course," said Fred Reed.

WEEKLY MEETINGS

They played checkers and chess together and discussed the war issues together at the weekly meetings at sea.

And together they took pride in keeping the ship the pride of the fleet.

Army, Navy and Merchant Marine officers, who came aboard at an African port to look at the engine room murals, said they had never seen a cleaner ship.

The NMU is proud of Captain Mulzac, its favorite "Old Man."

Beecher Finds Real Democracy On Booker T

Chicago Defender
Chicago, Illinois

By HARRY McALPIN
(Defender Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON — John Beecher has quit a job as correspodent for the New York Post to join the crew of the liberty ship Booker T. Washington as a common seaman.

Behind this little item is the story of a man who is following in the footsteps of an illustrious family in American life. John Beecher says he is fed up with the chicanery and bigotry he finds in the practice of democracy in America, and has sought the haven of one of the few places where that democracy is being practiced.

On the Booker T, John Beecher will be a member of a mixed crew, serving under the command of a Negro captain, Hugh Mulzac. The crewmen are of all nationalities and races.

John Beecher's great-great-grandfather was Lyman Beecher, one of the pioneers in the "underground railroad" prior to the civil war. He had a school for preachers, and this little school just across the Ohio river was one end of the "underground railroad." The other end was in Canada, where the "Fugitive Slave Law" could not reach ex-slaves who escaped.

Lyman Beecher had ten children. One of them was John Beecher's great-grandfather. Another one was Harriet Beecher Stowe, author of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," a book that was read by more people than any other book except the Bible. Another of the ten children was Henry Ward Beecher, whose courage and determination in going to England and speaking out in spite of threats and warnings prevented England from throwing in her might and arms with the Confederacy in the Civil War, which saved the American Union.

John Beecher's mother had in her veins the blood of the Hales. One of the Hales was Nathan, who was shot as a spy by the British in the infancy of this country, and who said "I regret that I have but one life to lose for my country." Another of the Hales was Edward Everett, who wrote the poetic story "The Man Without a Country."

Before working with the New York Post, John Beecher was a member of the staff of the Fair Employment Practice committee (FEPC). He was in the New York office of that agency. But he quit FEPC in protest over the scuttling of its program by McNutt's cancellation of the railroad hearings.

Prior to working for FEPC, he was a member of the staff of the Farm Security administration (FSA) and had charge of setting up the migratory labor camps in Florida.

Since an American ship is technically American land wherever she may sail, John Beecher feels he has at last found "a little bit of heaven" where true democracy is given a chance.

Navy Won't Enlist Trained Specialists

Afro-American, Baltimore, M

WASHINGTON

The navy's traditional policy of non-admittance of qualified colored specialists in physical education is unchanged, notwithstanding the recent proposal to increase the ratio of colored men in sea service to ten per cent as it is in the army.

Revelation of the navy's continued discrimination in this respect was made by Rear Admiral Randall Jacobs, chief of naval personnel, when he pointedly advised Wendall A. (Buddy) Parris, local junior high physical education teacher, that there was no place in the navy for him except as apprentice seaman.

"The navy does not enlist colored specialists in connection with physical education and instruction," Jacobs wrote Parris last October. On Saturday, he reiterated the stand by writing Senator James J. Davis, who inquired about the refusal to accept Parris, that the policy was unchanged.

Parris, graduate of Howard University, former playground instructor and teacher in Civilian Defense first aid classes, has sought to get in either the navy or army physical education set-up for more than a year without success.

General Ulio, adjutant general of the army, accepted his application for special service in the army over a year ago, but has done nothing about it.

Offer Rejected

His application to the navy, last October, was rejected by Rear Admiral Jacobs with the notation: "With the exception of specialists to assist in recruiting effort, all colored persons who desire to enlist in general service are enlisted as apprentice seamen. The navy does not enlist colored specialists in connection with physical education and instruction."

Parris complained to Secretary of Navy Frank Knox, stating that this policy was not true of other racial groups, but received no satisfaction.

He also offered his services for acceptance, "without question of race," inasmuch as hundreds of other athletes, prizefighters and coaches were being injected into the navy physical training program.

Senator Davis took an interest in the case two weeks ago, only to learn the policy is unchanged.

New Navy School For Ngroes Opened With Impressive Ceremonies At Great Lakes, Ill.

New York Age
New York, N. Y.

GREAT LAKES, Ill. — A new Navy Service School for Negroes was officially opened with impressive dedication ceremonies at the U. S. Naval Training Station, Great Lakes, Ill.

Before 1,000 Negro Bluejackets, standing at "Parade Rest" in the wing of the structure which will house the school for machinist's mates, Captain R. R. M. Emmet, commanding officer of the Training Station, turned over the command of the new school to Captain H. R. Harris, Service School Officer.

Captain Emmet told his listeners, 500 Service School students, 300 selectees who will begin classes soon, and 200 men still in recruit training:

"The dedication of this new school is like the commissioning of a new ship. This building is an engine of destruction which will help to defeat our enemies and you men make up its crew."

In accepting command, Captain Harris said:

"This is a war of highly-trained specialists. You men who train here today will be the fighting men of tomorrow. You al[illegible] will determine this building's [illegible]. Although, officially this ceremony is being held to dedicate the school building, in reality we dedicate ourselves to this building."

JUL 3 1943

Taking part in the program, in addition to Captains Emmet and Harris, were Cmdr. D. W. Armstrong, assistant recruit training officer in charge of Negro training; Lt. A. L. Olson, head of Service School classes for Negroes, and the Negro regimental band.

Located a block north of the main entrance to Camp Robert Smalls, parent camp of the two now devoted to the training of Negroes, the new building is a two-story, frame structure, covered with asbestos shingle siding and shaped like an "L" One wing is 240 feet by 60 feet and houses 24 classrooms and 4 group offices. The other wing (the base of the L) is 60 feet by 128 feet, unpartitioned and with a garage-type roof. The latter will be the home of the machinist's mates school.

Bluejackets are selected for Service School through a series of aptitude tests and a personal interview given to each sailor during his period in recruit training. Between one-fourth and one-third of Negroes trained at Great Lakes to date were found qualified for advanced training. The remainder were assigned to stations for which they are best fitted immediately upon completing their basic training.

Trades and services offered the Negro Bluejackets here, include the schools for aviation machinist's mates, aviation metalsmiths, quartermasters, signalmen, yeomen storekeepers, radiomen, gunner's mates, cooks and bakers. [illegible] school for Negroes is at Hampton Institute, Hampton Va., where courses are offered for carpenter's mates, machinist's mates, metalsmiths, cooks and bakers, and in the study of diesel engines.

JUL 3 1943

JUL 3 1943

Negro Saves Crew, Then Turns Back to Blazing Ship for More

The Daily Worker
New York, N. Y.

By Art Shields

"They got us at dusk as we approached the Azores, that graveyard of ships," said Ted Goodhertz, young member of the National Maritime Union.

JUN 16 1943

"The shock of the torpedo threw me off my feet in the messroom. I ran to the deck. A big fire was blazing aft. We began lowering a lifeboat but the releasing gear stuck. Some one said the ship'll blow up before we get away.

"The mate put Andrew in command of this boat because he was the best sailor and men would do what he said.

JUN 16 1943

"'Pull hard!' men were saying, 'before the ship blows up. And we were surely pulling, when we heard cries of 'Help!' We could barely see the white faces of two seamen in the glare of the fire as they hung on the nets by the side of the burning ship.

"Andrew's voice rang out like a loud speaker. 'We're going back to get 'em,' he said.

"It sure looked like death. The ship might explode any minute.

"The rudder had been lost when we got the boat over the side. We had a tough time getting back. But we saved Cadet Anderson and a young Navy gunner just in time."

Ted said the mate told the officers of the ship that rescued the life boat crew nine hours later that: 'The best thing I ever did was to put that Negro in charge.'

"I don't know whether they're giving Andrew a medal or not," said Ted, "but they ought to. His wife and children in New York can be proud of their father. The whole city can be proud of him too. He's a real American hero."

JUN 16 1943

USMS Discriminate 'gainst Ten Seamen

Tribune
Philadelphia, Pa

OCT 16

NEW YORK — (ANP) — Documented allegations of flagrant and illegal discrimination visited upon 10 graduates of the United States Maritime Service Training Station at Sheepshead Bay by the USMS the War Shipping Administration and at least one maritime union were contained in a signed letter to the National Maritime union last week.

The Complainants list names dates, places and circumstances in making the sensational charges that reveal a callous violation of the President's Executive Orders 8802 and 9406 which proscribe "discrimination in essential industries."

Those seamen filing the affidavit are Henry H. Williams Lubin E. Spencer, Jr., James E. Bray, Wilton O. Cooper, Alvin A. Watson, Richard J Stribling, Bryon R. Smith Chester L. Edward, Sam A. McClellan and Booker T. Brooks.

The letter was sent to the NMU because, "We feel," stated the seamen, "that this condition is none of your making and we appeal for your help in combating this evil situation. One of the tenets of your organization is that there shall be no discrimination because of race or color on ships carrying crews from your union."

After grauation from the USMA training school as ordinary seamen, the maritime workers relate that they were quartered at the Chelsea hotel awaiting jobs, but that after five weeks of idleness they decided to act. Spurring their decision was the knowledge that successive classes had been graduated from the school and shipped to various vessels, to other stations, and to the Great Lakes. Shipping authorities informed them they could ship only as messmen.

A spokesman for the NMU stated that efforts are being made to correct the situation that is directly opposed to the principles of the leading union organization of seagoing men.

6th Liberty Ship Named Paul Laurence Dunbar

Washington Tribune Washington. D. C.

OCT 30 1943

The sixth Liberty Ship to be named for a Negro, the SS Paul Laurence Dunbar, was launched by the California Shipbuilding Corporation at Wilmington, California, on Tuesday, October 19, the Maritime Commission announced this week. Sponsor of the vessel was Mrs. Clarice Williams, oldest employed Negro woman in the yard. Miss Eva Stringer was maid-of-honor, and J. H. Wadsworth, manager, Public Relations Department, was master of ceremonies at the launching.

OCT 30 1943

The SS Booker T. Washington, first Liberty Ship named for a Negro, was also built in this yard. The Dunbar has been assigned as a tanker—the 18th Liberty tanker and the 274th ship built by the California Shipbuilding Corporation since Pearl Harbor.

Four of the first five Liberty Ships named for Negroes are now in service, two of them with Negro captains and mixed crews. The five ships named for outstanding Negro Americans included the SS Booker T. Washington, the SS George Washington Carver, the SS Frederick Douglass, the SS John Merrick, and the SS Robert L. Vann. A naval vessel, the destroyer escort Leonard Roy Harmon, was named in honor of a Negro naval hero.

OCT 30 1943

Paul Laurence Dunbar, a native of Dayton, Ohio, was born June 27, 1872. When he was graduated from high school he was president of the literary society and editor of the student publication. He also composed the song of his graduation class of 1891. While working as an elevator operator at $4 per week, he started writing the poetry that was to make him famous. In 1873, he published a booklet of his poems at a cost of $125 and defrayed expenses by personal sale of the booklet at $1.00 a copy.

OCT 30 1943

First Anniversary Of Negro Marines Staged

SEP 4 1943

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

NEW RIVER, N. C., Sept. 2—(ANP) — Appropriate ceremonies were held last week at the training center in Camp Lejeune celebrating the first anniversary of the induction of Howard P. Perry of Charlotte, the first Negro admitted into the Marine corps.

SEP 4 1943

Since their enrollment a year ago the "Leathernecks" have advanced rapidly in the service, reporting today several corporals and sergeants. Many have been assigned to battle areas overseas, while others have demonstrated an uncanny knowledge of amphibious tactics. The marines have also organized athletic clubs, an orchestra and a glee club as extra-curricular activities.

SEP 4 1943

Union
Cincinnati, Ohio

Naval Anniversary!

SEP 23 1943

Hampton Institute, Va.—Marking the completion of one year since its establishment last September, the Hampton Institute Naval Training Station celebrated its first anniversary last Wednesday, in cooperation with the college committee on Freshman Week, then in progress at the Institute.

SEP 23 1943

Opening with a dress parade and review by the seamen in training, the celebration continued with a barbecue for the college and the training station early in the evening and a dance at the new Naval Recreational building later on.

47j-1943

Employee's Wife Christens Sun Ship

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md

With a swing of the champagne bottle, Mrs. Harris Thomas christens the transport S.S. Marine Wolf at the No. 4 yard of Sun Shipbuilding and Drydock Company in Chester, Pa., last Saturday afternoon. Witnessing the event were, left to right, her daughter, Miss Lena Thomas; Harris, her husband, and John G. Pew, Jr., vice-president of the company. Mr. Thomas has been an employee of the yard 13 years.

SEP 25 1943

47j

Liberty Tanker. S. S. Paul Dunbar Launched in California Shipyard

OCT 27 194

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

Ship Slides Into Water 31 Days After Keel Is Laid By Company

OCT 27 1943

WILMINGTON, Calif.—(S N S)—The Liberty tanker, S. S. Paul Dunbar, named for the famous Negro poet, was launched by the California Shipbuilding Corporation, October 19, the 18th of the Liberty tankers to be launched in this yard to date, and the 24th ship to be launched since the yard's shipbuilding program started in 1941.

The ship slid into the water 31 days after the keel was laid following her christening by Mrs. Clarice Williams, attractive employee of Calship, who was chosen as sponsor in recognition of the fact that she is the senior Negro woman employee, having been employed longr than any other Negro woman at the plant.

Another Calship employee, Miss Eva Stringer, sister of the sponsor, of the sponsor, and was attended acted as maid of honor.

The launching ceremony was proceeded by a tea given in honor by her friends.

The ship's namesake, Paul Lawrence Dunbar, world famous poet was born in Dayton, Ohio, June 27, 1872. He was educated in the public schools of Dayton, and was the only Negro in his high school graduating class. After he left school, he worked as an elevator boy and in 1893, published the first booklet of his poes. After a review in Harper's Weekly, in 1896, the works of Dunbar became very popular, and in that year, his best known collection, "Lyrics of a Lowly Life," was published by Dodd Mead and Company. After touring England, Dunbar returned to this country in 1898, and served as assistant in the Library of Congress, at the same time continuing his writing. He wrote the school song of Tuskegee Institute and through his poems became singularly beloved by the people of this country.

47j

McMinnville, Tenn. Standard
September 17, 1943

Local Colored Youth Commended By Captain For Meritorious Service

Tarlton H. Martin, colored youth now serving with the United States Navy in the North African theatre has been commended by his commanding officer for outstanding service under fire.

Martin, along with Willie Reynolds, colored, enlisted in the Navy on July 17, 1942, and now holds the ran kof mess attendant, 3/c.

Martin's mother received a letter from his commanding officer, which was a copy of the one given her boy, and is as follows:

"As your Commanding Officer during the amphibious assault on the beaches east of ——— during the period of ———, I take great pleasure and pride in commending you for your meritorious service on your 20 mm. gun. The manner in which you stood your watch during the long hours of ——— in which the ship was being unloaded more than justified the faith which was put in you. Your alertness in opening fire on numerous occasions against enemy planes actually engaged in attacking our forces provided the safety which was needed.

The letter was signed by Philip P. Welch, Captain, U. S. Navy, Commanding.

47j

Bodega, Ala., Mountain Home
September 29, 1943

Negro Sea Bee Sends Home Relics Of War In South Pacific

Relics of the South Pacific are on display in the Alabama Power Company window on East street.

A grass skirt, shells, beads, bracelets, spear head and a box made of native wood make up the display sent by Willie Wilson, Negro seaman, serving in the South Pacific with the Seabees.

He formerly worked at the Log Cabin Barbecue stand.

The souvenirs were sent to members of his family and put on display by his cousin, Mattie Hancock, who is employed at Jaffe's Store.

He has been in the South Pacific since last December.

47j

Globe and Independent
Nashville, Tenn.

SHIP NAMED FOR ROBERT L. VANN GOES OUT TO SEA

OCT 2 1943

Vessel Was Launched October 10 and Christening Sponsored by Late Editor's Widow

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(OWI)—The fifth Liberty Ship to be named for an outstanding Negro American, the SS ROBERT L. VANN, was launched Sunday, October 10, at the South Portland (Me.) Yard of the New England Shipbuilding Company. Mrs. Jessie M. Vann, widow of the publisher and editor of the Pittsburgh Courier for whom the ship was named, was sponsor of the vessel.

Scores of friends and associates of the late Mr. Vann came from Pittsburgh, New York, Philadelphia, Washington, D. C., Detroit and Chicago to witness the exercises. The ship was built in a drydock which could not be flooded for the actual launching until high tide late Sunday evening.

"We are honoring ourselves and the Negro race in paying tribute to Robert L. Vann today," said C. C. Spaulding, president of the North Carolina Mutual Life Insurance Company of Durham, who was the principal speaker at the brief exercises which were climaxed by the traditional breaking of a bottle of champagne across the bow of the ship. Mr. Spaulding characterized Mr. Vann as a "statesman, organizer and great citizen."

The Rev. C. E. Askew of Detroit, Mich., a former teacher of the late Mr. Vann, blessed the ship with a prayer.

P. L. Prattis, who succeeded Mr. Vann as editor of the Pittsburgh Courier, served as master of ceremonies for both the christening and the luncheon reception which followed at the Hotel Lafayette in Portland.

Andrew B. Sides, executive vice president and general manager of the New England Shipbuilding Company, presented the sponsor with a sterling silver plate inscribed in memory of the occasion.

"This is the second happiest moment of my life to know that my husband's name will become known all over the world," Mrs. Vann declared in accepting the plate. "The first was when I said 'I will' ", she added. The company also presented her with a large bouquet of fall flowers and roses.

Also present at the exercises were: Walter E. Harris, Jr., who will be deck engineer, and William E. Simmons, Jr., warrant officer of the SS ROBERT L. VANN. Both were former residents of Pittsburgh. The captain of the new Liberty Ship is John Godfrey, also a Negro, from New York City. He was unable to attend the exercises.

Following a luncheon at the Hotel Lafayette, greetings were brought out-of-town guests by Chester Churchill, president of the Shipbuilding Company; Mr. Sides, and Andrew Pettis and Kenny Sharp, representing workers in the yard.

Mrs. Eleanor Herrick, in charge of Labor Relations for the War Manpower Commission in New England; Ward B. Freeman, representing the Maritime Commission. and Ferdinand Smith, National Maritime Union, brought greetings. Mrs. Vann presented crew members with a large picture of her late husband to be hung in the ship and announced the formation of the Robert L. Vann Memorial Library for the ship.

Other speakers included: Ira L. Lewis, president of the Pittsburgh Courier Publishing Company, who told of his long association with the late publisher and civic leader; Congressman William L. Dawson of Chicago; Assemblyman Homer S. Brown, who represented the Governor of Pennsylvania; Thomas E. Kilgallon of the Pittsburgh City Council; Edward O. Taber, representing the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce; Wilbur O. Douglass, who read a resolution for the City Commissioners of Pittsburgh; Dr. Emmett J. Scott of the Sun Shipbuilding Co., Chester, Pa.; Mrs. Daisy Lampkin, vice-president of the Courier Publishing Co., and Dr. W. Roderick Brown, representing the Office of Civilian Defense.

47j

The four other Liberty Ships commissioned and named for Negroes are the Booker T. Washington, the George W. Carver, the Rrederick Douglass and the John Merrick. A naval vessel, the destroyer escort, Leonard Roy Harmon named in honor of a Negro naval hero in this war, was recently placed in service.

Survivor

Defender
Chicago, Ill

WILLIAM NUNN JACKSON Steward's mate, first class, who was a survivor of a U. S. battleship lost in the South Pacific. He was in the water for 15 hours before being rescued by a Destroyer. A native of Ladonia, Texas, Jackson has been in service 20 months. He is in Chicago the guest of his uncle Goff Jackson, 5151 Michigan avenue.

Liberty Ship Named for Pittsburgh Editor Launched

Washington Tribune Washington, D. C.

The fifth Liberty Ship to be named for an outstanding Negro American, the S. S. Robert L. Vann, was launched Sunday, October 10, at the South Portland, Me. Yard of the New England Shipbuilding Company.

Mrs. Jessie M. Vann, widow of the publisher and editor of the Pittsburgh Courier for whom the ship was named, was sponsor of the vessel.

Scores of friends and associates of the late Mr. Vann came from Pittsburgh, New York, Philadelphia, Washington, D.C., Detroit and Chicago to witness the ceremony. The ship was built in a drydock which could not be flooded for the actual launching until high tide late Sunday evening.

"We are honoring ourselves and the Negro race in paying tribute to Robert L. Vann today," said C. C. Spaulding, president of the North Carolina Mutual Life Insurance Company of Durham, who was the principal speaker at the brief exercises which were climaxed by the traditional breaking of a bottle of champagne across the bow of the ship. Mr. Spaulding characterized Mr. Vann as a "statesman, organizer and great citizen."

The Rev. C. E. Askew, of Detroit, Mich., a former teacher of the late Mr. Vann, blessed the ship with a prayer.

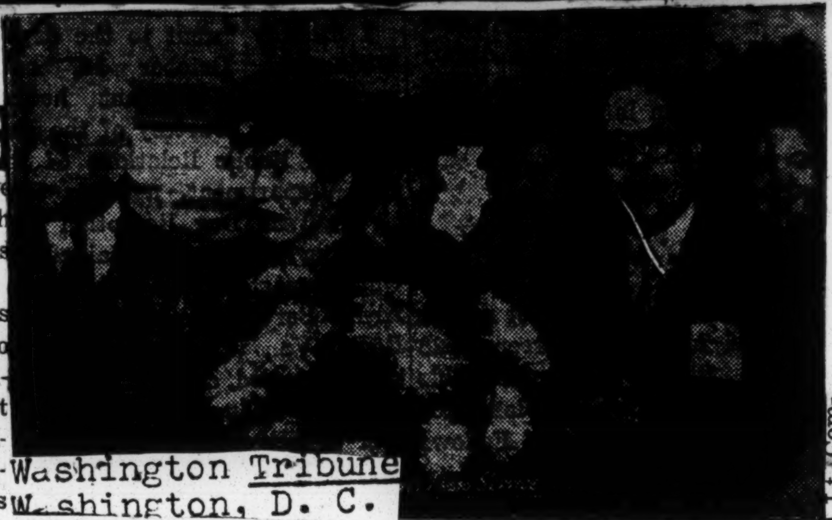
P. L. Pratis, who succeeded Mr. Vann as editor of the Pittsburgh Courier, served as master of ceremonies for both the christening and the luncheon reception which followed at the Hotel Lafayette in Portland.

Andrew B. Sides, executive vice president and general manager of the New England Shipbuilding Company, presented the sponsor with a sterling silver plate inscribed in memory of the occasion.

"This is the second happiest moment of my life to know that my husband's name will become known all over the world," Mrs. Vann declared in acceptin the plate. "The first was when I said 'I will,'" she added. The company also presented her with a large bouquet of fall flowers and roses.

Also present at the exercises were: Walter E. Harris, Jr., who will be deck engineer, and William E. Simmons, Jr., warrant officer. Both were former residents of Pittsburgh. The captain of the new Liberty Ship is John Godfrey, also a Negro, from New York City. He was unable to attend the exercises.

Following a luncheon at the Hotel Lafayette, greetings were brought from out-of-town guests by Chtster Churchill, president of the Shipbuilding Company; Mr. Sides, and by Andrew Pettis and Kenny Sharp, representing workers in the yard.



Washington Tribune
Washington, D. C.

NOTABLES ATTEND LAUNCHING OF SS ROBT. L. VANN—A part of the group of almost a hundred friends and associates of the late Robert L. Vann, noted lawyer and publicist, who attended the launching of the Liberty Ship named in his honor at the yard of the New England Shipbuilding Company, Portland, Maine, on October 10. In the foreground are: C. C. Spaulding, president of the North Carolina Mutual Life Insurance Company, who was the principal speaker at the launching; Mrs. Jesse Matthew Vann, widow of the publisher; Dr. Emmett J. Scott, of the Sun Shipbuilding Company; and Mrs. Daisy Lampkins, vice-president of the Pittsburgh Courier Publishing Company. (Press Photo Service.)

Daily Worker
New York, N. Y.

It's Colonel Johnson Now

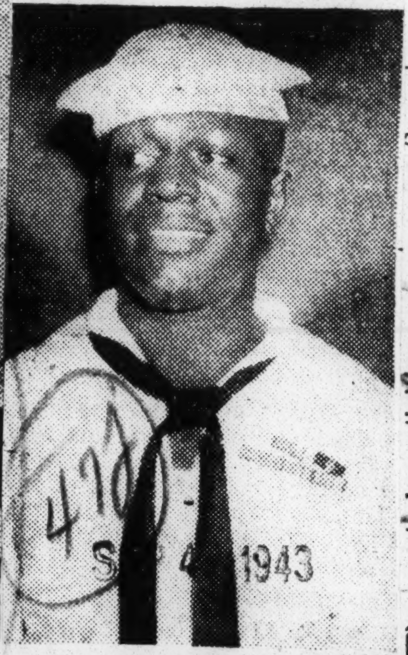
OCT 10 1943

47K

Colonel Campbell C. Johnson, executive assistant to Selective Service Director Major General Lewis B. Hershey, discusses papers covering report of his recent tour of Army induction stations with his assistant, Captain Benson D. Mitchell, in his office in the Selective Service System Headquarters, Washington. Colonel Johnson was promoted to his present ranks on September 21. — (U. S. Army photo.)

Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Virginia

Tells Story



SEP 4 1943

Lincoln Spence, 21-year-old Coast Guardsman from Bell Cross, N. C., describes in vivid detail the action during which the Cutter Spencer sank a Nazi submarine.

Marines Celebrate First Year

NEW [illegible] N. [illegible]—(ANP)—Appropriate ceremonies were held last week at the training center in Camp Lejeune celebrating the first anniversary of the induction of Howard P. Perry of Charlotte, the first Negro admitted into the Marine Corps.

Since their enrollment a year ago the 'Leathernecks' have advanced rapidly in the service. Many have been assigned to battle areas overseas, while others have demonstrated an uncanny knowledge of amphibious tactics. The marines have also organized athletic clubs, an orchestra and a glee club as extra-curricular activities.

Originally the camp site for the 1,200 men expected to be enlisted was a small plot of ground, but has been expanded into seven different camps because of increase and enrollments. Montford Point Camp No. 1, although in process of construction is being partially used for the training of new recruits. It is larger than all the other camps put together. Additional Negroes are planned for the corps in the future and these likewise will receive their basic training here.

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

Dorie Miller Rumor Untrue

AUG 21 1943

GREAT LAKES, [illegible] Aug. 19—Officials at the Naval Training center here denied any truth to the rumor that the OWI poster on Dorie Miller was taken off the bulletin board because some officers raised an objection to it. Declared Lt. Commander White, public relations officer, "We have never heard nor seen such a poster and if any exists we certainly want some of them."

When assured by The Courier that such a poster was available Commander White and Commander Armstrong, head of the colored training station, immediately made a request of Washington for a dozen of the posters on the colored naval hero.

47j-1943

Meet Your Negro Shore Patrolmen

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

JUN 11 1943

MIAMI, Florida. — SNS — Here they are, Miami's first group of Negro Shore Patrolmen as they line up just before going on duty. These young men have quite a responsibility on their hands and would have complete cooperation of their fellow sailors and Coast Guardsmen as well as the Army. They volunteered for this service and it is their duty to preserve order where military personnel is concerned.

These boys have received special training as S. P.'s and were stationed here previous to their appointment. Chief Petty Officer R. P. Thompson, in charge of this Patrol with offices at 166 N. W. 10th Street, told a DISPATCH reporter that this group is a trial group and are under strict supervision. He mentioned, also that it is a Federal offense for any civilian to interfere with them in the performance of their duty and that it will not be tolerated. This has happened in one or two instances, he said, and Federal action is awaiting these civilians as soon as they are apprehended.

Reading left to right, front row, they are: C. A. Ward, St. 2c USCG. Ten years naval service, former welterweight champ of the Coast Guard boxed as "Kid Ward" in 67 matches and hails from Baltimore; R. N. Ragin, OC3c USN, boxed as "Big Chief" in over 50 bouts in New England States and will continue in Navy, he is from Macon, Ga.; N. Hawkins, OC3c, USN, Columbus, Ga.; L. Harris, OC3c, USN, Atlanta, Ga.; back row, 1 to r: Tom Wells, St. M2c, USN, Helena, Ark.; J. J. Boddie, OC3c, USN, Birmingham, Ala.; L. Williams, OC3c. Chattanooga, Tenn.; and M. Hill, OC3c, USN, Atlanta, Ga.

Most of these young men are now residents of Miami as they have moved their families here. All are married.

Good Eyes; Decorated by Navy

Afro-American
Baltimore, Maryland

JUN 26 1943

United States submarine look-out team decorated for sighting enemy ships both in the day and night, so that their teammates could sink them. Left, Donald J. Snyder, Pittsburgh, torpedo man's mate, third class and right, Joseph Cross, New Orleans, steward's mate, first class. In pinning the medal on Cross, the commander said: "He is our best Jap spotter." Under navy regulations, no matter how well Cross sees or fires, he is still in the steward's department.

DESTROYER ESCORT HARMON SPONSORED BY HERO'S MOTHER

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

JUL 28 1943

WASHINGTON — (SNS) — The first United States warship named in honor of a Negro, the Destroyer Escort Harmon, was launched Sunday from the Fore River yard of the Bethlehem Steel Company of Quincy, Mass. The SS Harmon, a 300-foot vessel, was named for the late Leonard Roy Harmon, Mess Attendant, First Class, U. S. N., who was awarded the Navy Cross posthumously for "extraordinary heroism" while aboard the USS San Francisco, during action against enemy Japanese forces in the Battle of Guadalcanal, November 12 and 13, 1942.

Mrs. Naunita Harmon Carroll, of Cuero, Texas, mother of the hero was sponsor for the new vessel. Mrs Carroll had as her attendants, her daughters, Miss Pauline Mabry Harmon, a war worker in the Air Service Command at San Antonio Texas, and Mrs. Constance Elaine Harmon-Edwards of El Paso, Texas.

Mrs. Carroll was also accompanied by her husband, William D. Carroll, principal of the Hudspeth County Training School. The sponsoring party also included Mr. and Mrs. Gustave M. Solomon of Cambridge, Mass. Mr. Solomon, an electrical engineer and graduate of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, is the highest ranking Negro employed by the Bethlehem Yards. He is a technician at the Fore River Plant.

GIVEN SILVER BOWL

Following the launching, Mrs. Carroll was presented with a silver bowl, inscribed in memory of the occasion, by Edward C. Geehr, assistant manager, on behalf of the shipyard.

A reception was also given the sponsoring party in the company's dining room. High ranking navy officials, headed by Rear Admiral Harold T. Smith, supervisor of ship building at the Fore River Lard also attended.

Proudly wearing her hero son's Navy Cross, Mrs. Carroll cried a bit as she smashed the bottle of champagne and said, "I christen thee Leonard Roy Harmon." But she was less emotional after the launching as she told of her son's efforts to enter the Navy. He was turned down at first, she said, because he had a "heart murmur," but he kept coming back to the Enlisting Station until he was finally accepted after the fourth try. He was 26 at the time of his death, and had served four years in the service. He was at Pearl Harbor on December 7, 1941, and saw service in several other engagements.

Mrs. Harmon is also proud of the work of her other son, Cornelius White Harmon, employed at the Naval Base at Corpus Christi, Tex. She herself was formerly a public school teacher.

TEXT OF CITATION

The text of the citation accompanying the posthumous award of the Navy Cross to Harmon is as follows:

"For extraordinary heroism while serving aboard the USS San Francisco during action against enemy Japanese forces in the Solomon Islands area on November 12 and 13, 1942. With persistent disregard for his own personal safety, Harmon rendered invaluable assistance in caring for the wounded and evacuating them to a dressing station. In addition to displaying unusual loyalty in behalf of the injured Executive Officer, he deliberately exposed himself to hostile gunfire in order to protect a shipmate and as a result of this courageous deed was killed in action. His heroic spirit of self-sacrifice, maintained above and beyond the call of duty was in keeping with the highest traditions of the United States Naval Service. He gallantly gave up his life in the defense of his country."

The SS Harmon is the newest type of ship in the United States Navy and is especially designed for the job of convoy protection. The escorts are all being named for Navy heroes, just as destroyers are named. The first of the escorts are now in service. Others have been launched and are fitting out for service at sea. A large number of these vessels has been built and is under construction at the Fore River Yard, which employs 31,000 persons, representing every race.

JUL 2 1943

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia
JUL 28 1943

White Asks Colleges Not To Train Jim Crow WAVES

WASHINGTON — (ANP) — Aimed to kill off an influence that may result in the establishment of a jim-crow set-up in the WAVES when Negro women are permitted to enroll, Walter White, NAACP executive secretary, has called for "unsparing" condemnation of those groups and individuals who have been proposing certain colleges in the south as training sites should the time come.

White's statement came a day after a group of Negro women had quietly conferred with Commander Mildred McAfee of the WAVES on the subject of permitting Negro women to enter the navy auxiliary and on which occasion they are reported to have shown unanimous agreement that a segregated basis will be undesirable.

Informed of this development by the ANP and that one or two southern colleges had offered their campuses to the navy for training purposes, White declared:

"Negroes must be unsparing in their condemnation of any college group or individual which, to help themselves financially or otherwise assists the navy in jim-crowing colored WAVES."

The group of eight women of national reputation who conferred with Commander McAfee were pledged to remain unidentified and to give no comment on the discussion which lasted three and a half hours on Wednesday afternoon. Privately, it is learned however, that Commander McAfee sought to discount the impression that the department had already approved a plan for the enlistment of Negro women. This had been reported in the press earlier. A stream of protests is understood to have been registered that may have had the effect of scaring them off the plan.

The point of view said to have been taken by the group is that a segregated unit is frowned upon completely by them, nor do they look with favor upon training for the women anywhere in the south, since the humiliations and ill-treatment now accorded Negro men in the army would only find duplication. Of course, they did not reject the idea of training in the south if it was a part of an integrated organization. The group was unswerving in its viewpoint.

From other sources it is known that the move to accept Negro women is not far distant, even if it was not an accomplished fact before news stories broke on it.

The report that several Negro colleges had made overtures to the navy are well supported. Names were mentioned with the request that their identity remain undisclosed for the present. Co-educational institutions are included among them.

JUL 28 1943

CHAT WITH FDR AT THE WHITE HOUSE

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

Many of the unsung heroes of this war are members of the maritime service whose job is to get supplies to the boys on the fighting fronts all over the world. Here President Roosevelt chats with a group of torpedoed seamen who called at the White House this week to invite the Chief Executive to address a maritime meeting in New York.

Left to right are: G. A. Fernandez, Admiral Emory S. Land, chairman of the United States Maritime Commission; Wesley Hersey, Thomas Fitzsimmons, Edwin Beck, Joseph Curran, of the Maritime Union; Charles Williams, Hoyt Haddock and Captain Edwin Macauley, of the Maritime Commission.—International News Photo.

Launch Liberty Ship Named For Late Editor;

New York Age

United Fruit Co. Appoints Negro Officers

New York, N. Y.

SOUTH PORTLAND, Me.— The Liberty ship, ROBERT L. VANN named for the late editor of the Pittsburgh Courier, was launched here Sunday with appropriate ceremonies at the New England Shipbuilding Corporation yards.

The ship will be operated by the United Fruit Company, with a Negro captain, John Godfrey, and second officer, Lieut. Commander Adolphus Foulkes.

Vann, born at Ahoskie, N. C., August 29, 1879, received his early education in the home of a family where his mother was employed as a domestic. He was a graduate of Waters Institute, Winton, N. C., the Virginia Union University, Richmond, Va. and received a law degree from the University of Pittsburgh in 1909. In 1910 he helped establish the Pittsburgh Courier Publishing Company and became the paper's first editor, a post he occupied until his death in 1940.

As a lawyer, Vann received a number of public appointments In 1918, he was named assistant solicitor for Pittsburgh; in 1923, President Coolidge appointed him a member of the Commission to the Virgin Islands, and in 1935 he was appointed by President Roosevelt as special assistant to the U. S. Attorney General.

Company Probed By FEPC

The fact that the ROBERT L. VANN will be operated by the United Fruit Co., with a Negro captain and second officer, takes on aded significance when it is recalled that the United Fruit Company on July 13, 1943 was reported by the New York Office of the FEPC to the Washington office of the committee for allegedly refusing to hire qualified Negro maritime officers.

On August 28th, FEPC in Washington announced that the case had been dismissed for lack of merit, with the following report:

"In the course of its investigation of this case, the Committee (FEPC) found that about 25 Negro officers are presently serving in the Merchant Marine and that the total number of qualified Negro officers, including the 25 afloat, is less than 50. Due to the shortening of training time for officers from 36 to 18 months, more qualifying Negro officers are becoming available. The Committee found that the United Fruit Company has employed unlicensed personnel without regard to color. With respect to the licensed personnel, the Committee has received assurances from the United Fruit Company that any qualified officer meeting the requirements of the War Shipping Administration will be employed without regard to race, color, creed, national origin."

47.j-1943

Another "All-Colored" Vessel Launched

JUL 3 1943 Philadelphia Tribune

JUL 3 1943

MRS. MARIE FLAMER receiving a beautiful bouquet of flowers from Sun's vice president, John G. Pew, Jr., after she had sent the Marine Raven gliding down the ways at Sun Ship Yards on Monday morning.

Right: With one mighty swing Mrs. Flamer, wife of John H. Flamer, senior employee in No. 4 Yard, Sun Shipbuilding and Drydock Co., sends the S. S. Marine Raven down the ways at Sun Shipyards marking the second seagoing vessel launched at Sun built by an all-colored crew. John G. Pew, Jr., vice president of Sun, and Dr. Emmett J. Scott, personnel director, look on.

Sun Shipyard Launches Second Vessel Built By All Colored Labor

CHESTER, Pa.—The second seagoing vessel to be built by an all-colored crew at Sun Shipyard here was launched Monday when the S. S. Marine Raven slid down the ways into the Delaware amid tumultuous applause from visitors and workmen who had gathered for the occasion.

Philadelphia Tribune

The sleek appearing cargo ship, sponsored by Mrs. Marie Vernettie Flamer, of 923 Tilghman street wife of John R. Flamer, the oldest employee in No. 4 Yard, hit the water just a little more than 30 days after the launching of a sister ship, the S. S. Marine Eagle, at the Sun Ship Yard on May 10.

Swinging the champagne bottle with a deftness born abviously from practise, Mrs. Flamer made a perfect hit, yet registered some surprise when she discovered the bottle had actually been broken.

Surrounded by John G. Pew, Jr., vice president of Sun Ship; Dr. Emmett J. Scott, personnel director of No. 4 yard, and a large number of local and out-of-town visitors, Mrs. Flamer was presented with a huge bouquet of flowers by Mrs. Isaiah Lewis, Jr., on behalf of her hushand's fellow workers in No. 65 department.

JUL 3 1943

Hundreds of employees standing on ships under construction in adjacent ways and on the ground let out a mighty yell when the huge Marine Raven took her bow.

Company officials expressed satisfaction with the aptitude and skill shown by employees in No. 4 Yard and were pleased with the fact that the time required in constructing the Marine Raven was considerably less than that required for the Marine Eagle.

Philadelphia Tribune

Simultaneously with the launching in No. 4 Yard the M. S. Brandywine was launched at the Central Yard. The sponsor was Miss Ann Bradley Bothe, white, of Merchantville New Jersey.

JUL 3 1943

Among the visitors witnessing the ceremonies were: Dr. and Mrs. Wm. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Flamer, brother and sister-in-law of the sponsor; Mrs. Sophia Kirk, Ira Jackson, Mrs. Frank Davenport, all of Philadelphia; Miss Marion Adams, Miss Doris Graham, Mrs. Francis Graham, Mrs. Mozelle Flamer, Mrs. Margaret Seth, Mrs. Cordie Black, all of Phonexville; Mrs. Isaiah Lewis, Mr. and Mrs. Wilbert Fletcher, and Mr. Paul Blackstone, all of Chester.

Race Captain Takes Over New Ship

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

By BILLY ROWE
(Staff Correspondent)

MAY 29 1943

NEW YORK, May 27 — Capt. Adrian Richardson is a man of the sea with a lifetime record behind him, but loves the good earth. In an apartment house window that overlooks that bit of country, Central Park, in the heart of Manhattan, he gently spades dirt in a man-sized flower box between work and the time to put to sea again.

A quiet, yet impressive man, Captain Richardson becomes the second master mariner of his race to be appointed to the top post of a modern Liberty ship, designed to deliver the goods to our fighting men and allies on the other side of the world. The captain has been given command of the new Frederick Douglass, the third ship named for a great American Negro.

MAY 29 1943

Launched in Baltimore Saturday, the ship is of the 10,500-ton variety. It will carry a mixed crew of officers and men and will be turned over to the Maritime Commission early in June.

The first Negro to ever receive a Master Mariner's ticket in America, Richardson, who is 51 years old and a native of the Dutch West Indies, has been a captain for 33 years. Unlike most modern seamen, he won his papers the old-fashioned way, having never attended a Marine school. Orphaned at an early age, he was adopted by the late Captain A. C. Chaney, who roamed the seas out of Boston, Mass. Brought up at sea by the white Mariner, the youthful Adrian grew to love the caresses of the salt air as he watched the waves of the ocean shape his destiny.

MAY 29 1943

Working up from an ordinary seaman, he received his first mate's ticket when he was 18, three years sooner than the required rule which states that such a ship's officer must be 21. He stayed 21 for three years sailing the seas as first mate. Taught well by his white foster father who had seen the world through a rigging for 50 years, Richardson was still 21 when he was granted a captaincy, limited to certain seas. At the age of 25 he was issued his unlimited papers in New York and became the first Negro to hold such a distinction.

WAS MULZAC'S CAPTAIN

For many years he sailed the seas, master of all kinds of vessels. For three years he captained ships for the France and Canada steamship company. For 12 years he mastered cargo and freight steamships for Crowell and Thurlow. He was with the Black Star line for over a year and for ten months sailed under the Bohemian steamship company flag. During the first World War he mastered an Army transport and delivered the goods making eight successful croosings to and from Europe. Carrying all white officers and a mixed crew, the captain recorded no trouble in his well filled log book. Taking over the Kanawha for the Black Star line traveling through the West Indies and Cuba, he carried the now Captain Mulzac of the Booker T. as his first mate.

Turning from the sea eight years ago, Captain Richardson went into land business as a heating contractor. In September he was again called to the sea to master an Army Transport and at the time he was told to stand by to become the captain of the Douglass, he had already made several successful trips through the Pacific.

A family man of 20 years standing, the new captain has a son, Arthur Alden Richardson, now in the Army with the American fighting forces somewhere in the Pacific. His two foster brothers, both white Carl and Alden, are both Merchant Marine captains and are of the tree from which the branches of American democracy are fathered.

CALLS FOR RESPECT

During the writer's exclusive interview with the captain in his home here, he was found to be a man not easy to get underneath when talking about self. His deeds at sea are considered just part of a man's day's work and the fact that he passed a weather bureau examination with the highest rating in the country several years ago, meant nothing in his log book.

However, he lauded the men who have worked with him and under him during his 33 years before the mast. "There was never any trouble," said he, "and the white officers and seamen gave the uniform I wear all the respect it was due."

"In the new order of things with colored men coming into their own in our great country, we should and must stand up for ours and give our own the respect which is due rank. We can do it, and will do it, and I hope that the Douglass will become as great a ship as any afloat and as symbolic of the greater democracy expected to come out of this war as the Booker T. Washington which sails the seas delivering the keys of freedom with the hope of many minorities following before and aft."

MAY 29 1943

About Our Fighting Men

(From The Jackson Advocate)

Atlanta Daily World Atlanta, Ga.

JUN 1943

Much has been heard, in recent weeks, from the Negro Press, and Rostrum concerning the lack of news about Negro fighting men, a circumstance which perhaps led to the release, and the wide-spread evidence of a deep appreciation on the part of the Negro public, of an enemy submarine of the Atlantic Coast a few days ago.

Since the beginning of the war, except for the wide spread publicity given to the heroic conduct of Dori Miller, and a few other widely separated incidents of individual bravery, loyalty and heroism, the lack of news regarding Negro fighting men, was beginning to have a pepressing affect upon the spirit and morale of the Negro citizens of the nation.

Following almost immediately upon the news of the conduct of the Coast Guard Crew in the sinking of the enemy submarine, come the news of the bravery, loyalty, patriotism, and sacrifice, of Negroes in the Navy, as referred to, by Capt. Thomas L. Gatch, USN, in his article. "THE BATTLE WAGON FIGHTS BACK," published in the Saturday Evening Post of May 24th. Here is the news of a group of eleven Negro sailors, only a few months ago, raised to such a status in the Navy, who, by their brave and heroic conducts, not only makes a glorious contribution in proof of the Negro ability and worth as a fighting sailor, but at the same time makes a fine contribution to the settlement of the question of the relative merits of Sea and Air Power.

The news of the conduct of the Negro Sailor under Capt. Gatch will not fail to arouse the deepest appreciation where ever read by Negroes, but it is of far greater worth to the race and to the spirit and morale of the nation, that his story, published in the Saturday Evening Post, will be read by millions of Americans of all races, in every section of the Nation.

JUN 1943

No Jim Crow WAVES

Washington, D.C. Tribune

The National Non-Partisan Council on Public Affairs, sponsored by the Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority, advises that the Navy Department has decided to admit Negro women to the WAVES, but is withholding the acceptance of Negro women until it can find a school at which they can be trained apart from white women.

Under the direction of Mrs. Thomasina W. Johnson, the AKA Lobby has been working on the Navy Department for over a year. They were told several weeks ago that a plan for the admission of Negro women was waiting the approval of Secretary Knox.

Last week they learned that the plan has been approved, but is waiting on the location of a school where Negroes can be trained separately. The plan likewise excludes provisions for Negro women officers.

The Tribune wants Negro women accepted into the Navy on the same terms as white women are accepted—in training, work, and opportunity for advancement. We want for our Negro women the same opportunity given the Chinese, the Indian and women of other nationalities. We want Negro women trained wherever white women are trained, for after all, they will be called on to help win the war against a common enemy.

Smith College, at Northampton, Mass., has always been noted as a liberal college. It has always accepted Negro women as students. Several are there now. The Navy is using the school to train white women for the WAVES, and is now seeking to inject jim crowism into a school that has never heretofore known the meaning of that term.

We can't win a war for democracy unless there is democracy in our Army and Navy. Negro men are still smarting under the hardships brought about by a Jim Crow Army. There are some liberals who would like to do away with jim crowism in the Army, but the traditions are too hard to break down.

The Navy has never accepted Negro women. If it accepts them now it should accept them as American citizens. If it is not ready to do that, if time "is not ripe," we would prefer that it wait until the time is ripe.

This is no time for the extension of a practice that the war is being fought to outlaw.

Negro women must be accepted in the Navy as American women or not at all.

JUL 24 1943

New Orleans Women Hit Color Bar In Navy Units

Chicago Defender
Chicago, Illinois

NEW ORLEANS, La.—The ambition of scores of young Negro women of this city to enlist in the various women reserve divisions of the navy, Marine and Coast Guard were dampened this week when recruiting officers of these divisions stated that no place was available for women of color.

The recent campagn of recruiting Negro WAACs from New Orleans and the state encouraged several young women to contribute their services in other departments of the armed forces only to be met with the traditional discriminatory policy of Navy, Marine and Coast Guard divisions.

Calls from those interested flooded the N.O. Press club office last Tuesday following the departure of 47 WAACs for Camp Des Moines. Representatives of the club contacted the various recruiting offices only to be told that Negro women are not being accepted for these services.

Barred In WAVEs

Ensign Bracker, recruiting officer for the WAVEs, stated that no provisions are being made for the training and acceptance of Negro WAVEs. She explained that the training schools now in operation are so established as to "not accommodate Negro women" but assured that "when the Navy department change its policy relative to Negroes," she would gladly inform the local office.

Captain Hardy, recruiting officer in charge of recruiting for the women Marine reserves stated that "the Marines only use women to replace men in clerical positions, where the services of the men can be used for active services. We have no Negroes in active duty in the Marines and therefore have no position to place Negro women," he said.

The Coast Guard gave a similar reason for not accepting Negroes in the SPARs. Following these disclosures, the New Orleans Press club directed the following letter to Secretary of Navy Knox:

"To our dismay and discouragement have come the verification that the departments of Navy, Marine and Coast Guard are definitely maintaining a practice of rank discrimination against Negro women. This week we were approached by several score of young Negro women whose desire it was to enter the women's auxiliary of one of these branches of the armed services. Because and only because they were of Negro descent were they turned down cold and officers in charge were at bay to give a justifiable reason, disturbedly explaining that 'it is the policy of the department.'

Cite Dangers

"Without questioning your authority to act in the immediate elimination of this policy, we advise that something be done now to preserve the ambitions of young Negro American women who desire and want their country in the capacity that they chose and that you give serious consideration to the effect of this policy upon general morale within the Negro group.

"To flirt with or discourage the ambitions and patriotic gestures of young women is a much more serious situation than setting up a pacifying policy practice for men. We are requesting that you realize not only the general danger to the war effort by adherence to this practice but the specific influence it can and will have on the war support program.

"In New Orleans where there are hundreds of young Negro women qualified in secretarial and other abilities needed by divisional departments of the Navy, Marine and Coast Guard none are employed and the WAACs have only one employed.

"If your department can sanction such policy, then the advocacy of 'Four Freedoms' and 'democracy' is a myth.

"We should lke to know from you if such policy of your department is tantamount to that for which we are waging this war; if the maintenance of this policy is an established rule of the Navy; if you condone these practices and if you expect the Negro to accept them with any degree of complacency?

"May we further advise you that the situation here following our experiences a few days ago is something more than mere expressed discontent."

MAR 13 1943

The Union
Cincinnati, Ohio

United Seaman Service, 9,000 Negroes Serving!

More than 9,000 Negroes sailed the seas on the ships of the United States Merchant Marine, carrying supplies to the war fronts of the United Nations, it was revealed in a survey made by the War Shipping Administration. This number constituted one-tenth of the entire merchant marine force.

Our merchant seaman are at work on the most gruelling front of the war. The ratio of their losses is 400 per cent higher than for our combined armed forces.

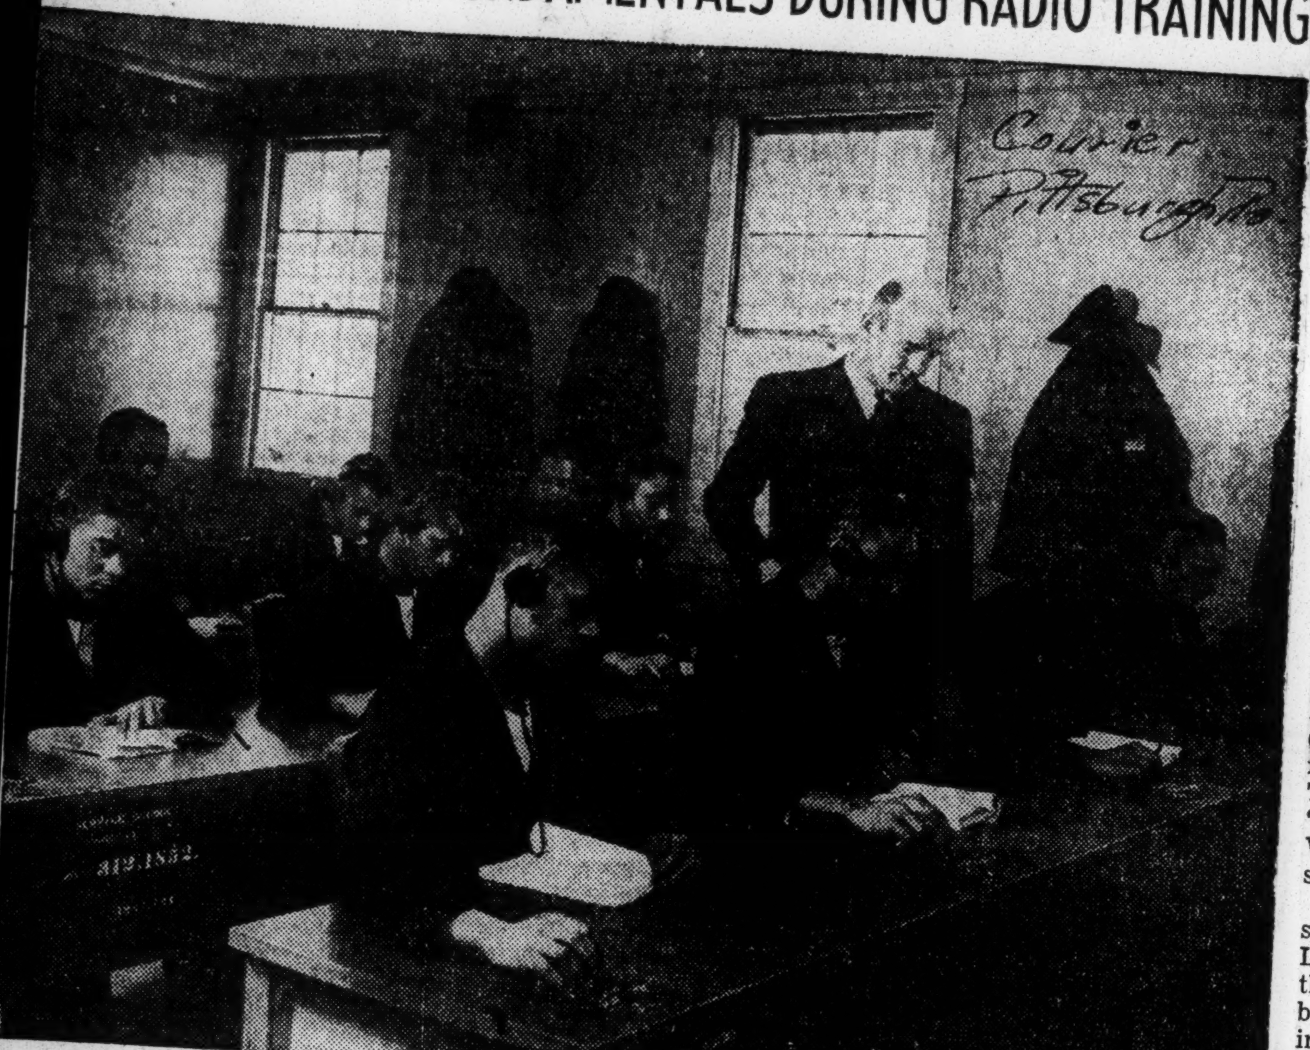
They wear no uniforms, march in no parades, take no bows; but they are braving torpedoes, aerial bombs, seas of flaming oil, machine-gun fire and cunningly-placed mines, days and weeks in flimsy life rafts—racked with hunger, cold and maddeniing thirst.

Realizing that these men, indespensable to victory, must be accorded recognition and benefits equal to those in uniform, the War Shipping Administration took the lead in the launching of the United Seaman's Service in 1942 to administer to the needs and morale of marine workers. The USS provides for American merchant seaman, both in home and foreign ports, medical service, rest and recuperation.

JUL 29 1943

47j-1943

BLUEJACKETS GET FUNDAMENTALS DURING RADIO TRAINING



Courier
Pittsburgh Pa.

Seamen in the radio division at Great Lakes Naval Training Station, Ill., not only study theory of radio, currents, magnetism and other pertinent matter in their second month of training, but are continually kept at the practice of sending and receiving messages over test sets under the watchful eye of their instructor Chief Radioman Harold B. Huber. Above picture shows the future radiomen at work on their sets, while the instructor looks on. Left to right, front row: James E. White, of Washington, D. C., John R. White, Birmingham, Ala., G. W. Walker, Port Arthur, Tex., and Charles Birden, Sevierville, Tenn.—Official U. S. Navy Photo from OWI.

APR 10 1943

47

Meet On Waves Program Today

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

Race Leaders To Attend Session

JUL 21 1943

47

WASHINGTON — (ANP) — six or seven prominent persons here were to meet with Commander Mildred McAfee of the WAVES Wednesday afternoon to discuss a plan, said to have been approved by Secretary Knox, for the enlistment of Negro women into that organization.

The meeting is supposed to be held on the quiet for the purpose of advising Commander McAfee but there is some feeling that she will attempt to wring a sanction out of the group.

The names of four persons invited to the meeting have been learned. They are: Mrs. Thomasina Johnson, lobbyist for the AKA Non Partisan Council on Public Affairs; Mrs. Julia West Hamilton, chairman of the board, local Y. W. C. A.; Mrs. Pauline Redmond Coggs, secretary, Washington Urban League; and Miss Jeanette Welch, secretary, National Council of Negro Women.

JIM-CROW SEEN

One report is that the plan contemplated is to take Negro women into the WAVES as auxiliaries, train them at a Negro school, and deny them tothe rank of officers The council has already expressed itself as being "unalterably opposed" to any such plan of segregation. The positions of the others have not been determined.

The call of the meeting is believed to have come as a result of a hot letter which Mrs. Johnson had sent to the President ten days ago protesting the reported plan, and calling for a conference with either him or Secretary Knox. It appears that Commander McAfee will carry the load. The stated purpose of the various auxiliaries of the armed forces is to have women replace men who may be used in other tasks for which women would not be suited. In the navy, Negroes are denied commissions. An adjustment in navy policy last year allowed for the training of Negroes as seamen. They are being used at shore establishments. But Negro women could hardly replace them in any of these capacities.

JUL 21 1943

JUL 21 1943

JUL 21 1943

Private

Puts O. K. On Marines

Kansas City Call
Kansas City, Mo.

Former Newspaperman Praises Training Program of Marines

JUL 23 1943

47

MONTFORD POINT, NEW RIVER, N. C.—(ANP)—Although the United States Marine corps is noted for its rigorous life and discipline, enlisted personnel are especially well cared for to make them one of the finest fighting units in the nation's war machine, said Pvt. Laurence J. W. Hayes last week in giving an estimate of the "leathernecks". Hayes, a feature editor for the Washington Tribune and author of the book, "The Negro Federal Government Worker", has been in the marines since last May 25.

Both white and Negro commissioned officers attached to Camp LeJeune are highly conscious of the fact that the first Negroes to be admitted to the marine corps in the 167 years of its existence are the cynosure of all eyes, and are working night and day to make the division to top notch, he added.

Hayes proudly pointed to the several records that his fellow marines have broken in rifle practice at the camp.

The ex-newspaperman and author expressed pleasure with the well cooked meals served to the men, and said there is no dearth of food in the camp. Cleanliness of person and equipment, intense exercises and rigid discipline also mark life in the marines, stated Hayes, but he pointed out the men easily adapt themselves to the new routine.

"The United States Marine tradition which requires all of its enlisted personnel to obey orders without question, is enforced to the letter in 'boot camp,' declared Hayes, "and the result, though not altogether painless, is thought-provoking and effective enough to bring about the necessary psychological and a partial physical transition from civilian to military life.

"The religious life of the camp is adequately taken care of by the camp chaplain, a commissioned officer who not only conducts Protestants and Catholic services, but also functions as 'adviser and father-confessor' to the camp's enlisted personnel."

JUL 29 1943

Fifty-Seven Men From Georgia In Naval Training

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

Seven Recruits Are Natives Of Capital City

MAY 30 1943

47

GREAT LAKES, Ill. — (SNS)—Fifty-seven Georgia men are among hundreds of -Negro Bluejackets undergoing several weeks of recruit training at the U. S. Naval Training Station here.

While in "boot camp" the sailors will be put through an intensive training program, including physical conditioning, military drill, fundamentals of seamanship, and Naval customs and procedure. Upon graduation, they each will be given a nine-day leave, after which they will receive further specialized instruction at one of the Navy's Service Schools, or be sent directly to duty at sea or at a shore station.

Men are selected for Service School on the basis of a series of aptitude tests and a personal interview given to each recruit. Some with sufficient experience in a particular trade needed by the Navy are rated as petty officers upon completing training and sent to active duty immediately.

The Georgia recruits here are: Eugene A. Nesbit, 18, 185 North Rockspring, Athens; Isaiah Tate, 19, 160 Second Street, Athens; Lucius Andrews, 18, 147 Hill Top Circle, Atlanta; Ben L. Butts, 34, 574 Randolph Place, Atlanta; Johnnie J. Hutchinson, 33, 181 Elm St., Atlanta; Jerome Johnson, 27, 59 Hilliard St., Atlanta; Charles W. Greene, 19, 304 Griffin St., N. W., Atlanta; Willie Ector, 25, 398 Simpson St., Atlanta; Hayward J. Tucker, 19, 280 Ashby St., Atlanta; Roland H. Zealy, 22, 2365 Gardner, Augusta; Timothy Harmon, 31, 907 King Street, Augusta; Clarence O'Neal, 19, 1817 7th Avenue, Columbus; Charlie R. Brown, 31, 409 5th Ave., Columbus; John H. Walker, 18. 1028 38th St., Columbus; I. D.

Brantley, 27, 414 B. B. T. W. Apt., Loul, Route 1, Tarrytown; Oscar Moultrie.
Also Julius Clark, 18, 505 18th W. Marshall, 18, Route 2, Lake Also Willie B. Fokes, 18, Monte- East 41st St., Savannah; Benja-
Avenue, Cordele; M. L. Wright, 23, Park; William E. Stephens, 18, zuma; Ralph Kyer, 18, 609 South min Broughton, 18, 1507 East Board
Climax; Willie T. Shropshire, 19, Route 2, Madison; David W. Lee Street, Valdosta; Earnest St., Savannah; Willie Golden, 29,
Chicago Avenue, Douglasville; Strickland, 18, 104 Lake Street, Miller, 18, 1008½ Clark St., Val- 509 West Henry St., Savannah;
Harold Miller, 20, Route 1, Fort Marietta; Edward Taylor, 24, 233 dosta; Albert Durran, 18, Route 3, Richard M. Williams, 28, 606 West
Valley; Earnest W. Ponder, 19, No. Roosevelt Avenue, Macon; John E. Newnan; Theodore H. Goss, 18, 32nd St., Savannah; Rufus Cuny,
Lee St., Forsyth; George C. Jen- Hogan, 18, 142 Carling Avenue, Royston; Isaiah Wynn, 18, Allen- 19, 204 Sudgen St., Savannah;
kins, 18, Greenville; Frederick Do- Macon; George F. Billingslea, 22, hurst; David Truell, 18, 513 East Frank B. Walker, 34, 616 West 40th berson, 18, Guyton; King Nolan, 833 3rd Avenue, Macon; James Yore St., Savannah; John Mun- St., Savannah; James Marsh, 25, 19, Route 1, Kingsland; Rufus J. Duncan, 18, Route 5, Macon; Ezell gin, 28, 509 West Park Avenue, Sa- 713 Joe Lane, Savannah; James B.
Mark, 27, 325 1 Avenue, N. W. vannah; Lorenzo Pazant, 31, 110 Pinkney, 33, 1010 West Victory
Drive, Savannah;

Also Joel Scott, 24, Sandre Hill, Sylvania; Roy Hardin, 18 Smyrna; Roy K. Richardson, 20, Route 1, Smyrna; James T. Knighton, 23, Sylvester; Emerson Hunter, 18, Route 1, Stephens; Frank M. Mitchell, 36, 730 South Lee Street, Valdosta; David Collins, 18, 407 South Loombs Street, Valdosta; Clifford Harris, 18, Route 1, Warm Springs.

9,000 Black Men Help Man Bridge Of U. S. Ships

Atlanta Daily World

Unsung Heroes Of Deep Form Tenth Of Total

NEW YORK CITY,—(S N S)—More than 9,000 Negroes sailed the seas of the United States Merchant Marine, carrying supplies to the war fronts of the United Nations, it was revealed in a survey made by the War Shipping Administration. This number constituted one-tenth of the entire merchant marine force.

JUL 19 1943

Our merchant seaman are at work on the most grueling front of the war. The ratio of their losses is 400 per cent higher than for our combined armed forces.

They wear no uniforms, march in no parades, take no bows: but they are braving torpedoes, aerial bombs, seas of flaming oil, machine-gun fire and cuningly-placed mines days and weeks in flimsy rafts racked with hunger, cold, and maddening thirst

Realizing that these men, indespensable to victory, must be accorded recognition and benefits equal to those in uniform, the War Shipping Administration took the lead in the launching of the United Seaman's Service in 1942 to administer to the needs and morale of marine workers.

JUL 19 1943

The USS provides for American merchant seaman, both in home and foreign ports, medical service rest and recuperation centers, and recreation clubs. It is the one agency born of the war which does not countenance discrimination in any form. It is generally conceded that the merchant marine service is one of the most democratic institutions now taking part in the war.

The National War Fund was conceived to economize time and overhead expenses in the collection of funds for the various war agencies which have heretofore been conducting their individual fund-raising campaigns. Winthrop W. Aldrich is the president of the board of directors and Dr. Channing H. Tobias is a member of the board.

The USS Harmon: A Proposal

Journal + Guide

THE launching of any man o' war during wartime is an event of significance; but the launching, during a world conflict in which we and our allies are fighting for the democratic way of life and freedom from prejudice, among other things, of the first warship in the American Navy ever to be named after a Negro American, was an arresting event which took place late Sunday afternoon at Quincy, Mass.

JUL 31 1943

The ship, a destroyer, is named after Roy Harmon, a hero slain aboard the USS San Francisco when it fought its almost legendary encounter in Jap-infested South Pacific waters off Guadalcanal; and it was christened by the proud mother of the Texas youth who has joined that heroic band of men including Dorie Miller and Charles French.

Journal + Guide

We have or soon will have five vessels bearing the names of black Americans: Washington, Carver, Douglas, Merrick, and Harmon. The first four are Liberty ships for hauling the material of war, and the Harmon will protect them and prowl the seven seas in defense of the Four Freedoms and the peoples and nations believing in them.

There are no Negro officers in the Navy, although one ensign is assigned to duty in the Coast Guard now, but we are sure that somewhere in America there are men of color learned in the science of the sea sufficiently to be entrusted with the command of the USS Harmon. We've found them for the Liberty ships. Certainly Captain Mulzac of the SS Booker T. Washington or Captain Richardson of the SS Frederick Douglas are capable and can be commissioned for Navy duty.

Great Lakes and Hampton Naval Training Schools have been turning out technicians for the various skilled functions aboard warships, and there is a backlog of chief petty officers from the last war period available for the crew. The USS Harmon can be manned by a Negro captain and a mixed crew; the only requirements are tolerance and courage to put democracy into fuller operation, on the part of those in authority.

Norfolk Va.

The President and the Navy Department would do well to consider seriously acting favorably upon this suggestion; it would be of inestimable value to war morale and a factual answer to the propaganda of the Axis which had a Roman holiday of making the most of the bad news of Detroit, Beaumont, and Mobile. What about it, Mr. President? Let's send the USS Harmon back into the South Pacific to hunt down the Japs who killed young Harmon—with a Negro captain on the bridge!

Navy Bias Hits Negro Athlete

Physical Education Specialist Denied Commission Because of Race Prejudice

PM
New York. N. Y.

WASHINGTON, June 2.—The Navy still is discriminating against Negroes.

Last Fall Wendall A. Parris, a Negro with long experience in physical education, applied for a commission in the physical education specialists corps, where commissions were being given to many football coaches and others with similar experience.

JUN 2 1943

He received the following reply from Rear Adm. Randall Jacobs, chief of naval personnel:

"With the exception of specialists to assist in the recruiting effort, all Negroes who desire to enlist in general service are enlisted as apprentice seamen. The Navy does not enlist Negro specialists in connection with physical education and instruction."

Parris recently appealed his case to Sen. James J. Davis (R., Pa.), pointing out that he had had three years experience in the physical education dept. of Howard University, the largest Negro college; four years as athletic director and physical education instructor in a big junior high school, and other similar experience.

"My main interest in this situation," he wrote Davis, "is that in the new Army and Navy physical training schools expanded programs are being conducted which will be used in civilian life after the war, but since the policies of the Army and Navy exclude Negroes from such schools by refusing them commissions, then the Negro race, which has a low physical fitness index and a record of 44 per cent rejection of all selectees examined in the draft, will not be improved because our teachers cannot get this training."

JUN 2 1943

Davis appealed to the Navy and got the following reply from Adm. Jacobs:

"At the present time the Navy's policy with respect to the induction or enlistment of Negroes in connection with physical education and instruction is unchanged from the time of this bureau's letter dated Oct. 19, 1942, to Mr. Parris."

LAUNCHING SS FREDERICK DOUGLASS

Pittsburgh Pa. Courier

LAUNCHI
FAIRFI

MAY 29 1943

Anne Wiggins Brown, noted soprano and star of George Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess," recently had the honor of acting as sponsor for the launching of the SS Frederick Douglass at Bethlehem-Fairfield Shipyard, Inc., Baltimore, Maryland. The ship, named for one of the foremost orators and writers of the nation, follows the SS Booker T. Washington and the SS George Washington Carver, both of which were launched on the West Coast.

In the photo at the top, Miss Brown prepares to christen the Liberty Ship.

MAY 1943

Inset: The soprano was caught by the photographer as she broke the bottle of champagne across the hull of the ship.

47j-1943
Daily World
Atlanta, Ga.

Coast Guard Trainees Get Entertainment From Stem

FEB 7 1943

Station Is Just 45 Minutes From Great White Way

FEB 7 1943

WASHINGTON, D. C. (SNS)—The U. S. Coast Guard Training Station at Manhattan Beach, N. Y., where hundreds of Negro recruits have undergone training, is only 45 minutes from Broadway. Its popularity with famous screen radio and stage professionals, however, makes the station a small White Way.

Because of its proximity to the Broadway sector, the station has become a mecca for Broadway headliners, and the recruits witness a stellar show or a dance every night.

FEB 7 1943

The recruits don't have to depend on Broadway altogether, however. For, in addition to welcoming outside talent, the Manhattan Beach Training Station has developed one of the best entertainment programs in the armed services. There is a band, which gives a weekly concert. And there is a Choral Society, organized and directed by Homer Smith, former tenor with The Southernaires, noted quartet in the radio and concert field.

Like most of other activities of the post, the Manhattan Beach Choral Society is a mixed organization, with both white and colored enrollees lending their voices in song. These enrollees have made several public appearances and, during the recent holiday season, were warmly received in a concert at Carnegie Ha[illegible]

FEB 7 1943

James O. Lewis is another Negro from the entertainment world attached to the staff of Manhattan Beach Training Station. Lewis is assistant recreation director of the post and has charge of dances and entertainment for the Negro personnel. The Negro recruits have a dance every Wednesday night, at which many of the leading Negro bands have been presented.

Mr. Lewis appeared on the stage with "Hot Mikado" during the World's Fair and his baritone voice has more recently been heard as an entertainer at such well known night clubs as Cafe Society and Le Ruban Bleu. He was "loaned" to the Navy for their recent radio program, "This Is the Navy, which was broadcast on nation-wide hookup and short-waved to our armed forces overseas.

Daily World
Atlanta, Ga.

Saved Men Who Were Trapped Below Ship Decks

FEB 10 1943

WASHINGTON—(SNS)—A 20-year-old Negro mess attendant, who unhesitatingly entered the most dangerous section of the stricken aircraft carrier, U. S. S. Lexington, during the Battle of the Coral Sea, and assisted in removing injured personnel trapped below decks, has been awarded the Navy and Marine Corps Medal, the Navy Department announced this week.

The heroic young mess attendant, one of five enlisted men similarly honored from the Lexington's crew, is Elvin Bell, an orphan who formerly resided with his aunt, Miss Marie Lofton, at 139-08 114th Avenue, Jamaica, N. Y. He has been promoted from mess attendant, third class, to mess attendant, second class.

FEB 10 1943

FORMER CCC MEMBER

Bell, who attended Jamaica High School for one and a half years and later served in the Civilian Conservation Corps, applied for enlistment in the Navy on July 18, 1941, and reported for active duty immediately.

His citation reads:

"For distinguished heroism while serving aboard the U. S. S. Lexington during the battle of the Coral Sea on May 8, 1942. Voluntarily joining a repair party fighting fire in an area frequented by violent explodings of gasoline vapor and ammunition. Bell, although emerging in an exhausted condition unhesitatingly entered the most dangerous section of the stricken carrier and assisted in removing injured personnel who had been trapped below decks. His courageous initiative and utter disregard for his own safety were in keeping with the highest traditon of the United States Naval Service."

An eyewitness account of such a rescue was cabled to this country by Stanley Johnston, a war correspondent aboard the stricken carrier, soon after the loss of the U. S. S. Lexington was announced. Johnston's account declared:

"It was Commander Mort Seligman's task to direct the rescue. I heard him call on the men around him: 'There are three men in frame So-and-So. That's below the fire. To reach them, one of you must go around the fire and through passage x

FEB 10 1943

VOLUNTEERED FOR TASK

"A young colored mess attendant stepped forward. I could not see his face for he was wearing a smoke helmet. He saluted and quietly said: I'll go, Sir.'

" 'Sure you know how to reach them?' the Commander asked.

" 'Yes, Sir. I know the way.'

" 'Do you realize that you might never make it, might never come back?'

" 'Yes, Sir, I do. But I would like to try just the same.'

"Right then. On your way. And good luck to you. We'll be waiting for you.'

"He went. Through long passageways and down several flights of steel steps deep into the vast hull. But he was sure of his way. This fine colored lad did come back. And what's more—he brought the three men with him."

Other enlisted men receiving the Navy and Marine Corps Medal for heroic action aboard the U. S. S. Lexington included Walter S. Cochrane, pharmacist's mate, (2|c); Douglass Moore, storekeeper, (2|c), Paul Meuleveld, store-keeper (3|c) and Walter L. Stacy, seaman (1|c).

New York Age
New York, N. Y.

HUGH MULZAC, FIRST NEGRO SKIPPER, BRING IN HIS SHIP SUCCESSFULLY 1-2-43

Captain Hugh Mulzac, first Negro skipper in the United States Merchant Marine Service, returned to an Eastern port last week bringing safely to port the 10,500 Liberty Ship, Booker T. Washington, which he commands, and his hand-picked crew which represents seventeen nations and territories of the United Nations.

An uneventful trip was chronicled by Mulzac, but the Captain said proudly that there had been no need for disciplinary action of any sort. that he had proven his capabilities as captain of a ship, and that this proved that "it can be done." The first voyage of the Booker T. Washington, successful as it was, is a convincing argument for breaking down the barriers of prejudice and discrimination, the sea chieftain said. 1-2-43

Twenty-five per cent of the Booker T. Washington's crew are Negroes. There are the four deck officers, chief engineer, wireless operator and others.

Fifty-six year-old native of St. Vincent, Windward Islands, British West Indies, Mulzac has been a seaman since 1907. He lives with his wife and their five children at 536 Dean street, Brooklyn. Mulzac attended Swansea Nautical School South Wales, and was graduated from the United States Shipping Board School at Baltimore in 1918. He had held captain's papers since 1920, but had a master's bertn on only one ship, a small British steamer plying the West Indies in 1922. Recently, due to a vigorous campaign, aided by the National Maritime Union and civic groups, Mulzac won his long campaign to gain a captaincy and thus make the first break into prejudice against Negro officers on the high seas.

HONOR CAPTAIN MULZAC AND CREW AT HOTEL COMMODORE, JANUARY 4

Captain Hugh [illegible]. Mulzac, first Negro skipper in the history of the American merchant marine, and nominated by the editors of PV as PV's Man of the Year for 1942, will be guest of honor at the Hotel Commodore 42st and Lexington ave on Monday evening, January 4 when the Greater New York Industrial Council, CIO tenders a dinner in honor of him and his United Nations crew of Liberty ship, Bocker T. Washington. 1-2-43

Capt. Mulzac and his crew recently landed the vessel at an east coast port to complete a history making maiden voyage through submarine-infested waters. They have already signified acceptance of the Council's invitation to come to New York for the dinner.

Among the speakers at the dinner will be Gov. Charles A. Poletti and Councilman Adam Clayton Jowell jr, Jaul Robeson and Marian Anderson are secheduled to sing and some of the most distinguished figures are expected to turn out for the affair.

Capt. Mulzac will be presented with a scroll at the dinner awarded to him as PV's Man of the Year.

Interviewed at a press conference some time after arrival of the vessel, Capt. Mulzac quietly accepted the congratulations on the success of his maiden voyage as skipper.

"I'm satified that they gave me a chance to prove I could do it," he declared, quietly but proudly.

Warm in his praise for the National Maritime Union which not only gave strong support to the campaign that won him the ship but also helped him select his crew, Capt. Mulzac gave an excellent report of the trip.

PRAISES MARITIME UNION

His crew includes representatives of 18 different nations. He calls his ship a United Nations ship with an American flag." About one-fourth of the crew is Negro. Among the nationalities represented are Belgian, Danish, Honduran, British Guianan, Russian, Turkish, American (Negro and white Filipino, Irish, English, Swedish, British West Indies, Dutch and Mexican.

Mulzac's chief engineer is a Negro, the other three engineers are white. Four deck officers and the wireless operator are Negroes. There are also four white cadets (merchant marine analogy to the navy midshipman).

Capt. Mulzac, born in St. Vincent, BWI, is 56, has been a seaman since 1907. During the last war he served as a mate. In 1920 he secured his master's ticket but, barred from obtaining a ship by color barriers, he sailed on various lines, in various other lower capacities.

He has never been shiprecked never torpedoed. During the last war, he said, he was in convoys in which ships were torpedoed.

He holds membership in both the Masters, Mates and Pilots Association and in the NMU. In the latter he is the only licensed Negro skipper holding regular membership.

The Union

Cincinnati, Ohio

97 BLUEJACKETS!

~~FEB 1 1 1943~~

Ninety-seven Negro Bluejackets the first of their race to complete instruction in various trades offered by the Navy, were graduated recently from the Service School in ceremonies at the United States Naval Training Station, Great Lakes, Ill.

In the presence of two outstanding Negro heroes of the las war and this conflict, the graduates filed to the speaker's platform where they received their Service School certificates—the final step of an intensive training period.

FEB 1 1 1943

Chicago Bee

Chicago, Illinois

NEGRO COAST GUARDS IN ALL BRANCHES OF SERVICE

JAN 3 1 1943

With hundreds of Negro Coast Guardsmen already on active duty on sea and land, and with additional hundreds completing training at regular intervals, colored recruits are being integrated into all branches of the service, the United States Coast Guard announced this week.

One of the most popular of the centers now turning out Negro and white coast guardsmen is the U. S. Training Station at Manhattan Beach, N. Y., where recruits are given intensive four-weeks courses in seamanship, signaling, knot tieing, life saving, and life boat handling.

Instructors at Manhattan Beach for all recruits include a number of veteran Negro Coast Guard officers and nationally famous colored athletes. Recruits of all races train, work, study and play together.

Complete Integration

JAN 3 1 1943

Typical of the integration of Negroes into training station activities was the appointment of Clarence Samuels, veteran warrant officer and boatswain to the Manhattan Beach Training Station Board of Education. Mr. Samuels, who has twenty-two years service in the Navy and Coast Guard, was at one time stationed with an all-Negro crew at the famous Pea Island, N. C., Coast Guard Station. He is now librarian for the educational program and instructor in practical seamanship and navigation for all Manhattan Beach recruits.

Another Negro instructor is Benjamin Jones, formerly a post office clerk in Chicago, who holds an LLB degree from the Chicago Law School. He wrote a brochure on traffic regulations at sea, "Rules of the Road", which is now being used as a text book at Manhattan Beach. Mr. Jones is also a member of the Signalling and Quartermaster School, instructor in navigation regulations, boarding and other relevant courses.

Expert Drill Master

Boatswain and commander of Company 24, the all-Negro company stationed at Manhattan Beach, is Paul L. Perkins, onetime football star at Washington and Jefferson university. Boatswain Perkins is an excellent drill master.

Captain G. U. Stewart is commanding officer of the Manhattan Beach Training Station; Commander A. H. Hall, executive officer; Commander H. F. Walsh, training officer; and Lt. E. A. Simpson, assistant training officer.

The Coast Guard, one of the oldest of the military services of the United States, has a glorious record in the saving of lives and ships in distress. It was formerly under direction of the Treasury Department but was transferred by executive order to the Navy at the outbreak of the present conflict.

Illustrative of the spirit of the Coast Guard is a story told about one of their number, called "The Midget." It seems that "The Midget" and a group of his comrades were debating among themselves the advisability of attempting a rescue in a raging storm. Finally "the Midget" settled the argument by saying, "The regulations say you have to go but they don't say you have to come back." And they all went out in the teeth of the storm.

JAN 3 1 1943

No branch of the service is performing more heroically in this war than are members of the Coast Guard, many of whom received their basic training at the Manhattan Beach Training Station.

Bystander

Des Moines, Iowa

TO NAME SHIP FOR FREDERICK DOUGLASS

APR 1 5 194

Washington, D. C.—The Maritime Commission announced Wednesday that a Liberty Ship, assigned for construction in a Baltimore, Md., shipyard, will be named for Frederick Douglass, famous Negro orator and journalist of the Civil War period.

The ship, third of a series named for outstanding Negro Americans, will be launched at the Bethlehem-Fairfield Shipyards in Baltimore—a short distance from a site where Douglass, a Maryland-born slave, once worked as a ship caulker.

The first ship of this series, the S.S. Booker T. Washington, named for the noted Negro educator, is now in active service under a Negro master, Capt. Hugh Mulzac. The second, the S.S. George Washington Carver, named for the world-famous scientist, is under construction at a West Coast shipyard.

APR 1 5 1943

47j-1943

How to Knock Jim Crow for a Row--

"Daily Worker" N.Y.

JAN 23 1943

By Art Shields

Nazi subs were rising from the shallow bottom of Barents Sea. Hitler's planes were bombing from overhead. And Columbus Savoy, the Negro helmsman from Harlem, was cool as ice.

Savoy deftly swung the ship from port to starboard and back again in a series of zigzags as torpedoes went by.

"Yes, Savoy saved our ship," said John Venaccio, a member of the crew, yesterday afternoon.

Savoy was bosun as well as helmsman. He had taken the wheel only because a white seaman was sick.

And when the Negro bosun wasn't at the wheel he was machine gunning Nazi planes with his watch mate "Texas" Grover Walter, another Harlem Negro.

JIM CROW OVERBOARD

And Jacob Green and Leonard Kirkwood, two more Negro AB's from Harlem, were passing the ammunition as fast as they could.

JOHN VENACCIO

The Negroes weren't the only merchant marine gunners and ammunition passers on the ship as she went through a terrible two-day battle with the Nazis when the convoy was attacked. But they were among the best fighters on board.

And they were beating Jim Crow as well as beating the Nazis at the same time.

"They knocked Jim Crow right out of the ring by their courage," said Johnny Venaccio. "The Navy gunners began eating with the Negro seamen after that battle. They said they were proud to do so."

The Navy gunners had drawn the color line till then. Most of them were Southerners. But Jim Crow was washed overboard in the fight.

Venaccio, a veteran of the Italian Garibaldi Battalion in Spain, who helped lick Mussolini at Guadalajara, knows a good fight. And he saw one in the Arctic.

SHOT DOWN PLANES

"The Navy gunners were mostly young fellows of 20 to 22," he said. "It was their first time under fire. They worked like a machine with merchant seamen who had taken gunnery lessons in Britain... And several Nazi planes were sent smoking into the sea."

Many British and American seamen were lost in the convoy's big battle. But American fighter planes got many torpedo bombers and American depth bombs got some Nazi submarines.

And the bulk of the war weapons the convoy was carrying were laid down in the Soviet land.

The stuff was laid down on the docks by women longshoremen, who are taking the place of the men who left for the front.

"The women longshoremen work while the bombs fall," said Venaccio. "Nothing can stop them."

Venaccio is proud of the Italian anti-fascists, who thrashed Mussolini at Guadalajara and fought on at Bruete (where he himself was wounded), at Fuentes del Ebro and Huesca and other fighting fronts. And he says the Italian people will thrash Mussolini again, and for keeps.

S.S. CARVER ON WAYS

Pittsburgh Courier

APR 24 1943

RICHMOND, Calif., Apr. [illegible]—With scant fanfare and ostentation the keel of the Liberty Ship George Washington Carver was laid Monday, April [illegible] at the Henry J. Kaiser Yard No. 1. Present were several O.W.I. and company officials and [illegible] Joseph, Courier staff photographer.

Pittsburgh, Pa.

Peoples Voice
New York, N. Y.

Navy Awards Jamaica L. I. Youth For Rescue of Trapped Comrades

FEB 13 1943

A 20-year-old Negro mess attendant, who unhesitatingly entered the most dangerous section of the stricken aircraft carrier, USS Lexington, during the Battle of the Coral Sea, and assisted in removing injured personnel trapped below decks, has been awarded the Navy and Marine Corps Medal, the Navy Department announced last week.

The heroic young mess attendant, one of five enlisted men similarly honored from the Lexington's crew, is Elvin Bell, an orphan who formerly resided with his aunt, Miss Marie Lofton, at 139-08 114 ave, Jamaica, NY. He has been promoted from mess attendant, third class, to mess attendant, second class.

Bell, who attended Jamaica High assisted in removing injured personnel who had been trapped below decks. His courageous initiative and utter disregard for his own safety were in keeping with the highest tradition of the United States Naval Service."

An eyewitness account of such a rescue was cabled to this country by Stanley Johnson, a war correspondent aboard the stricken carrier, soon after the loss of the USS Lexington was announced. Johnson's account declared:

FEB 13 1943

EYEWITNESS ACCOUNT

"It was Commander Mort Seligman's task to direct the rescue. I heard him call on the men around him: 'There are three men in frame So-and-So. That's below the fire. To reach them, one of you must go around the fire and through passage X.'

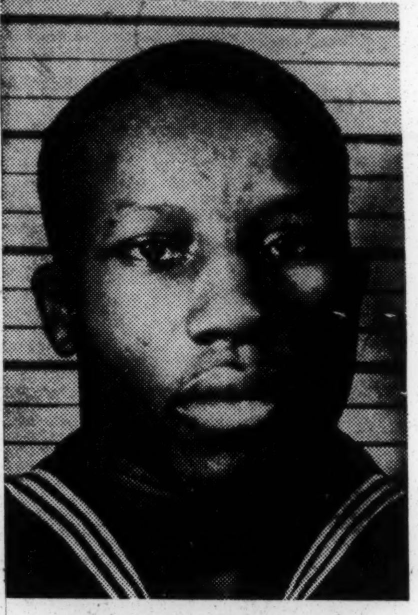
"A young colored mess attendant stepped forward. I could not see his face for he was wearing a smoke helmet. He saluted and quietly said: 'I'll go, Sir.'

"'Sure you know how to reach them?' the Commander asked.

"'Yes, sir. I know the way.'

"'Do you realize that you might never make it, might never come back?'

"'Yes, Sir. I do. But I would like to try just the same.'



MESSMAN ELVIN BELL

Hero of Coral Sea Battle

"Right then. On your way. And good luck to you. We'll be waiting for you.'

FEB 13 1943

"He went. Through long passageways and down several flights of steel steps deep into the vast hull. But he was sure of his way. This fine colored lad did come back. And what's more—he brought the three men with him."

Peoples Voice
New York, N. Y.

Negro Shares Spotlight With Knox, Jones at Cruiser Houston Ceremony

JAN 2 - 1943

By JOHN H. THOMPSON

Special

HOUSTON, Tex.—Democracy is gradually coming to Texas! John W. Rice, state Negro director of the NYA, was chosen to deliver the keynote speech last Monday night at a huge gathering of whites (estimated at 6,000) plus a few Negroes, when a certificate for $85,749,884.24 was handed Secretary Frank Knox of the Navy by Jesse Jones. This sum of money was raised in a little over 21 days in an intensive bond-buying campaign started by citizens who wished to replace the cruiser Houston, recently sunk by enemy action.

Believed to be the first time in the history of this section of the South that a Negro has ever addressed a patriotic meeting. 99 per cent of whom were whites, Rice, noted thruout the state for his oratory, chose Unity for his theme. He exemplified it as he sat on the platform surrounded by some of the biggest figures in this war, all white. Besides Jesse Jones and Frank Knox, there were high admirals, a governor, a mayor and many lesser lights of civilian and military life.

GREATEST APPLAUSE

It was an enthusiastic crowd of patriots who had braved the rain to see and hear the "big shot" in action. Rice did not disappoint them. His address, timely and without any direct reference to race, was given the loudest and most prolonged applause of all the speakers.

The Negro was a definite part of the celebration, altho he was out in few numbers. But his dimes, quarters and dollars had helped swell the total for the cruiser fund.

And Rice was their spokesman. He declared we would win this war and the peace to follow for "we are determined that there shall be a brotherhood of man."

MESSAGE OF FREEDOM

"Tonight we celebrate the completion of the task of furnishing the money with which to replace the cruiser Houston . . . we dedicate it . . . not to our accomplishments of a peace loving city and nation, but as a vessel of war, one which, tho it shall carry the message of death, shall also carry the message of life to the souls of men all over the world . . . it is a message of freedom . . . it is a gift to those who love liberty for men wherever they may be. . .

"As Texans of all races and kinds are facing the enemies of the souls of men all the way from the frozen North to the burning sands of the Libyan desert, just so are men of all races and creeds all over the world. The American parents here tonight are but replicas of Chinese parents, Negro parents, French parents and parents of all those who compose the forces of freedom. . . ."

UNITY—ALLIED SECRET

"Here is the secret weapon of the Allied nations: A heritage of freedom, the will to win, freedom for the souls of men and unity of purpose that is unshakeable. . . . As we have found that ordinary living for one man means that he is indebted to all other men, just so men have learned that when freedom of any man is threatened, the freedom of all men is threatened.

JAN 2 - 1943

"In just the same proportion have we learned that there can be no splendid isolation. . . . War against freedom in Manchukuo or Ethiopia is war against freedom in Chile, Mexico, America . . . we are united in the battle for freedom, not only for ourselves but for all men wherever they may be. . . ."

Newsreel men from all over the country were on hand to take pictures of the celebration. Also present was a large number of widely known newspapermen. The speeches of the government spokesmen were carried over a national hookup.

Rice's picture appeared in the largest daily published here, one of the few times a Negro's picture has appeared in a white paper in this city.

JAN 2 - 1943

Eisenhower Lauds Valor Of Africa Negro Troops

WITH THE ALLIED FORCES IN AFRICA.—Lieutenant General Dwight D. Eisenhower, commander-in-chief of the Allied Forces in North Africa last week commended the courage of American Negro troops here who continued putting high explosive bombs ashore while under heavy fire.

"Americans of the colored race should be proud of the service of their representatives in combat," the General said.

Pittsburgh Courier
Pittsburgh, PA.

Mess Attendants Only For Navy Draftees

FEB 20 1943

WASHINGTON, D.C., Feb. 18—(ANP)—Negroes expressing a preference to join the navy when called before their draft boards will be accepted by the navy, but will be assigned only to the mess attendants branch of the service, it is reported here.

Although other branches of naval service are open to Negroes, the falling off of enlistments in the mess attendant division is given as the reason for the order assigning all Negroes to this status until the required quota is filled. No alternative is given the selectee if he asks for navy duty.

FEB 20 1943

Daily World
Atlanta, Ga.

Race Forgotten At Coast Guard Station

FEB 7 1943

FEB 7 1943

Although the course of training at the Coast Guard Training Station, Manhattan Beach, N. Y., is a tough one with a full schedule, recreation is not neglected. Dances and singing take up much of the leisure in the evening. Homer Smith, tenor of the noted radio Southernaires Quartet, is director of the Manhattan Beach Choral Society, composed of white and colored enlistees. He is shown rehearsing part of his group. Also shown is James O. Lewis, another well-known Negro entertainer, who has charge of dancing and entertainment for the Negro personnel at Manhattan Beach.—Official OWI Photo by Roger Smith)

Chicago Defender
Chicago, Illinois

Hundreds Of Negro Coast Guardsmen On Active Duty

JAN 30 1943

WASHINGTON—With hundreds of Negro coast guardsmen already on active duty on sea and land, and with additional hundreds completing training at regular intervals, colored recruits are being integrated into all branches of the service, the United States Coast Guard announced this week.

One of the most popular of the centers now turning out Negro and white Coast Guardsmen in the U. S. training station at Manhattan Beach, N. Y., where recruits are given intensive four-weeks courses in seamanship, signaling, knot tieing, life saving, and life boat handling.

JAN 30 1943

Instructors at Manhattan Beach for all recruits include a number of veteran Negro Coast Guard officers and nationally famous colored athletes. Recruits of all races train, work, study and play together.

Typical of the integration of Negroes into training station activities was the appointment of Clarence Samuels, veteran warrant officer and boatswain, to the Manhattan Beach training board of education. Samuels, who has twenty-two years service in the Navy and the Coast Guard, was at one time stationed with an all-Negro crew at the famous Pea Island, N. C., Coast Guard station. He is now librarian for the educational program and instructor in practical seamanship and navigation for all Manhattan Beach recruits.

Another Negro instructor is Benjamin Jones, formerly a post office clerk in Chicago, who holds an LLB degree from the Chicago Law school. He wrote a brochure on traffic regulations at sea, "Rules of the Road," which is now being used as a text book at Manhattan Beach. Jones is also member of the signalling and Quartermaster school, instructor in navigation, regulations, boarding and other relevant courses.

JAN 30 1943

Boatswain and commander of Company 24, the all-Negro company stationed at Manhattan Beach, is Paul L. Perkins, one-time football star at Washington and Jefferson university. Boatswain Perkins is an expert drill master.

Negro Labor News
Houston, Texas

Naval Officer In Denial of Use of Offensive Terms

NEW YORK CITY—Denial that he had used such words as "nigger" and "buck nigger" came this week from Lt. Commander William McGovern who was charged with making an insulting speech before a mixed group of teachers attending a lecture at a fall meeting of the Madison County Teachers Institute at Alton, Ill.

Lt. Commander P. B. Brennen, U. S. Navy Reserve director of Public Relations, informed the NAACP who had protested against McGovern's speech had been "misunderstood" by the NAACP correspondent.

JAN 2 - 1943

The persons who heard McGovern included Negro teachers, doctors and others who have the advantage of education and an understanding of the English language, the NAACP answered.

47j-1943
The Daily Worker
New York. N. Y.

Capt. Mulzac Brings Ship Into British Port After 1st Crossing

FEB 22 1943

47j

By Eugene Gordon

Captain Hugh Mulzac, commander of the Liberty ship Booker T. Washington, arrived with his United Nations crew at a British port a few days ago. He and his men were met at the dock by reporters and movie-camera men from all over the British isles, according to dispatches to the Chicago Defender, and other Negro newsapers.

How did the Booker T. Washington weather its first ocean crossing? What was the condition of the men, physically and with respect to morale?

One dispatch says the ship reached port two days ahead of the convoy of which she was a part. The reason was that the Booker T. Washington became separated from the other ships in a storm which sprang up in the north Atlantic and which followed and buffeted them all the way. The storm caused some damage to the vessel, the dispatch says, but only of a minor character.

FEB 22 1943

British and American reporters asked Captain Mulzac what message he would like to give the United Nations. Then they asked the crew what they thought of their Negro skipper.

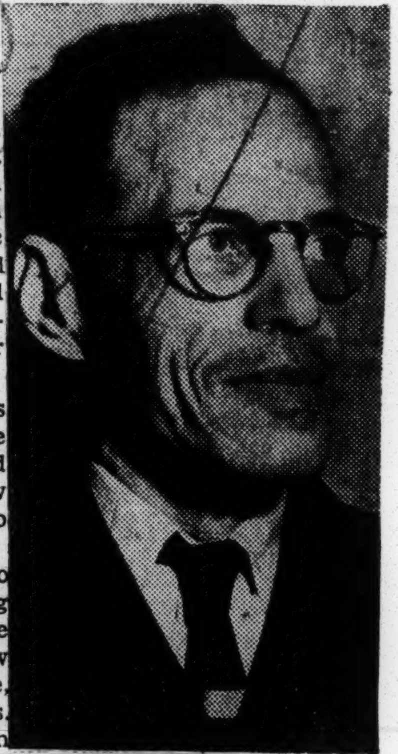
Mulzac was proud, he declared, to have had the opportunity of taking supplies across the Atlantic to the Allies. He admitted that, in view of the ruthless U-boat offensive, the task had been full of hazards.

He told reporters and movie men that he hoped the Negro people would get out of this war some of the benefits promised in the Atlantic Charter. He considered his and his crew's accomplishment of their tasks a successful counter attack against international fascism.

A British newspaperman was quoted as saying to a correspondent of the Negro press:

"It is ironical to think that Captain Mulzac was a Negro braving the dangers of the deep to help white folk in their hour of need, while his own race is denied the most elementary rights of citizens and men."

Captain Mulzac and his crew did not feel, however, that they had made the hazardous crossing to help "white folk." Judging by all they said and by their general attitude toward the anti-fascist war, they did it as citizens of the United Nations and as haters of fascism. They did it to help all decent humanity, which certainly includes the Negro people.



CAPT. MULZAC

Officers of the United States Army Transport Service and of the U. S. Shipping Administration welcomed the Booker T. Washington. So also did British representatives of the Luckenbach Line, agents for the vessel. Captain J. F. Devlin, jovial U. S. representative in Britain of our War Shipping Administration, told the British and American newspapermen that Captain Mulzac was "a fine skipper and a gallant gentleman."

Captain Devlin told British reporters also that Ferdinand C. Smith, the Negro secretary of the National Maritime Union, was one of the most highly respected trade union leaders in the United States.

Captain Mulzac then got in his word for his crew of Norwegians, Danes, Spaniards, black Americans, white Americans, Swedes, Filipinos, Yugoslavs, Poles, West Indians, Hondurans and Irishmen. He repeated what he had said at the banquet in New York—that they were indeed like "one big, happy family."

FEB 22 1943

The men—and that included the all-white guncrew—when questioned by reporters, spoke of Captain Mulzac with affection and admiration. The consensus of the crew was that "the old man" not only knows his business with the wheel but that he is "like a father" to them all

---

To Captain Mulzac

By LANGSTON HUGHES

Dangerous
Are the western waters now,
And all the waters of the world.
Somehow,
Again mankind has lost its way,
Down paths of death and darkness
Gone astray—
But there are those who still hold out
Both chart and compass
For a better way—
And there are those who fight
To guard our harbor entrance
To a brighter day.

47j

FEB 18 1943

FEB 18 19

There are those who, too, for so long
Could not call their house, their house,
Nor their land, their land—
Formerly the beaten, and the poor
Who did not own
The things they made—nor their own lives—
But stood, individual and alone,
Without power—
They have found their hour.
The clock is moving forward here—
But backward in the lands where fascist fear
Has taken hold,
And tyranny again is bold.

Yes, dangerous are the wide world's waters still,
Menaced by the will
Of those who would keep, or once more make Slaves of men.
We have been slaves before.
We will not be again.
Alone, I know that no one is free.
But we have joined hands—
I, with you! You with me!
Together we have launched a ship
That sails these dangerous seas—
A sturdy ship, a solid ship—
But more than these,
Our symbol of new liberties.
We've put a captain on that ship's bridge there,
A man, spare, swarthy, strong, foursquare—
But more than these,
He, too, a symbol of new liberties.

FEB 18 1943

There is a crew of many races, too, many bloods-
Yet all of one blood still:
That is the blood of brotherhood,
Of courage, of good-will,
And deep determination geared to kill
The evil forces that would destroy
Our chart, and compass, and bell-buoy
That guide us to the harbor of the new world
We will to make—
The world where every ugly past mistake
Of hate and greed and race
Will have no place.
In union, you and I can be free.

More than ship then, Captain Mulzac,
Is the Booker T.
And more than Captain you
Who guide it on its way.
Your ship is mankind's deepest dream
Daring the sea—
Your ship is flagship
Of a newer day.

FEB 18 1943

Let the winds rise then
And the giant waves beat—
Your ship is Victory,
And not defeat.

Let the waves rise
And the winds blow free—
Your ship is Freedom,
Brotherhood, Democracy!

Knoxville, Tenn. Journal
May 30, 1943

Marines Will Enlist 20,000 More Negroes

NEW RIVER, N. C., May 29 (INS)—Such an exceptional record has been achieved since the United States Marine Corps broke its 167-year traditions and began the enlistment of Negroes just a year ago June 1, the corps now plans to enroll 20,000 Negro Marines within the next year, it was revealed tonight.

47j

Along with this revelation, it was pointed out that one unit of Negro Marines has already been assigned to overseas duty and that there are approximately 2000

others now in training at New River—only training center and recruiting depot for Negroes in the country.

Pittsburgh Courier
Pittsburgh, PA.

As An Indian Sees It

JAN 23 1943

BY KUMAR GOSHAL

MULZAC'S CREW REPRESENTS UNITY NEEDED TO WIN WAR

IN THE year 1619 an historic ship came to the American colony—historic because of the cargo it carried. It did not carry ivory nor jade nor precious silks from far off Cathay. It did not bring finespun muslin from distant India nor pungent and savory spices from the legendary Indies. It brought no fabulous gold nor silver from Spanish America. It was an historic ship because it brought the first Negro slaves to America.

MR. GOSHAL

Last month, three hundred and twenty-three years later, another historic ship reached an East Coast port of the United States. This ship was not historic because of the cargo it carried. Its cargo was unknown to the public, as was the points of its voyage to and fro. It was an historic ship because of its captain and its crew. It was the good ship Booker T. Washington, its captain a Negro and its crew a mixed group of black, brown and white seamen.

JAN 23 1943

FOUGHT UPHILL BATTLE TO WIN

Captain Hugh Mulzac's life almost telescopes the struggle of the Negro people of America. Inch by inch, little by little, through bitter struggle and at tremendous sacrifice, the Negro people have gradually gained certain human rights, although they are far from securing all that legitimately belong to them. It has taken Captain Mulzac twenty-three years of persistence and struggle, disappointments and detours, to get the job for which he qualified in nineteen hundred and nineteen. But he made it.

HE MADE it, and we are all proud of it. And yet, the shameful waste of all these years of this valiant man's life! But it will not be a waste if this maiden voyage of his becomes historic in the sense that it inaugurates a new day.

And it should do so because the Booker T. Washington has proven conclusively that men of different colors can work together, eat together, play together, live together, and fight together harmoniously, if given half a chance and the right incentive.

JAN 23 1943

APPEASEMENT DOES NOT PAY

How ironic it was that on the very day that the CIO in New York was giving a dinner in honor of Captain Mulzac, War Manpower Commissioner Paul V. McNutt announced that he had indefinitely postponed the Fair Employment Practices Committee's investigation of discrimination against Negroes by the railroad industry! No, "ironic" is too mild a term to use for such action; it was thoroughly dangerous. And the danger is not alone in the fact that it infuriates the Negro people of America, but that it infuriates hundreds of millions of others in Asia and in Africa as well. If this policy is followed, then battles may be won, but the war will be lost.

THE conflict between democracy and fascism has been going on for some time now. Democracies have tried both appeasement and war, and we have accumulated enough experience to make a clear decision. Ethiopia, Manchuria, Spain, Munich, Japan, Vichy-France and North Africa have all proven that appeasement does not pay; on the contrary, it works like a boomerang. This theory applies to domestic policy as well. The increasingly violent oppression of the people of India, the renewed vigor of the reactionaries both in and out of Congress, all prove that appeasement does not pay at home either. Yet the vast majority of liberals here and in the British Empire, by word or by silence, are still appeasing the British government with regard to India. And Mr. McNutt now appeases the railroad magnates with regard to employment of Negro people.

INCREASE POWER OF REACTIONARIES

I will be told that the illustrations I have given are not appeasement but intelligent compromise. It is customary for appeasement to masquerade as compromise. But a little thought will show that in a compromise both sides gain a little and lose a little; and in an intelligent compromise, the intelligent one gains more than his adversary. In the case of India the action—or lack of action, if you please—of the liberals has only increased the arrogance of the British Tories; the Indians have gained nothing. Mr. McNutt's decision, similarly, will only increase the strength of the reactionaries; the Negro people gain nothing.

TO WIN speedy victory all liberals and progressives must give up appeasement, open or camouflaged, and take their stand in the ranks of the common man everywhere, now. This war has produced enough examples already to prove that the common man, irrespective of his color and his creed, is eager to fight fascism, if given half a chance and the right incentive. All honor to Captain Mulzac and the crew of the good ship Booker T. Washington for presenting the latest and one of the best examples of the kind of unity that alone can win this war.

Daily World
Atlanta, Ga.

Top Coast Guard Officers

FEB 8 1943

FEB 8 1943

Two of the ranking Negro officers at the Manhattan Beach Coast Guard Training Station are Coxswain Paul L. Perkins, drill commander of Company 24, and Boatswain and Warrant Officer Clarence Samuels, veteran of 22 years service in the Navy and Coast Guard. Warrant Officer Samuels is also a member of the Board of Education of Manhattan Beach Coast Guard Training Station and teaches practical seamanship and navigation.—(Official OWI Photo by Roger Smith)

New York Times
New York, N. Y.

Lexington Hero Honored Here

Mess Attendant Elvin Bell, 20 years old, a Negro, of [illegible]-08 114th Avenue, South Ozone Park, Queens, one of the heroes of the sinking of the aircraft carrier Lexington on May 8, 1942, was honored yesterday at services at 4 P. M. at the Allen African Methodist Episcopal Church, 104-41 160th Street, Jamaica, Queens. Bell was decorated for his courage in going to the rescue of men trapped below decks.

Washington Tribune
Washington, D. C.

Thousands View Launching of Liberty Ship SS Carver

MAY 15 1943

Sliding down the ways to the strains of "The Star Spangled Banner," amid the plaudits of thousands of Negro and white shipyard workers and civilians, the S.S. George Washington Carver, second Liberty Ship named for an outstanding Negro American, was launched Friday afternoon at the Richmond (Cal.) Shipyard No. 1 of the Kaiser Company.

MAY 15 1943

Launched just 26 days after its keel was laid, the 10,500-ton vessel was christened by Lena Horne, singer and motion picture actress, in a colorful ceremony.

Flanked by Mrs. Beatrice Turner, matron-of-honor and first Negro woman welder employed in the Richmond shipyards, and little Teresa Dellums, her flower girl, Miss Horne crashed the champagne bottle against the ship and uttered the traditional words, "I christen thee The George Washington Carver, as newsreel cameras and photographers' flash bulbs went into action.

MAY 15 1943

The launching followed a whirlwind tour through the shipyards by the movie actress during which she sold more than $25,000 worth of War Bonds. Two Negro shipyard workers, Mr. and Mrs. E. Kautzman, purchased a $2,500 bond and Local A-26, represented by its president, Richard [illegible], bought a $1,000 bond as Miss Horne and Percy Bost, a shipfitter and anchor man, made appeals in three of the four Kaiser yards.

MAY 15 1943

Time
Chicago, Illinois

One of the Best

MAY 3 1943

The full story of a great all-Negro gun crew of the U.S. Coast Guard was told for the first time last week on CBS' radio program The Man Behind the Gun.

The program re-enacted the Coast Guard cutter Campbell's 12-hour scrap with six U-boats in the North Atlantic. Of the Campbell's attack on the sixth submarine, the eyewitness account said:

"The searchlight bridge opens up now, and the wallowing hulk of the U-boat is clearly outlined in the glare. It shudders and rocks as the three-inch shells pour into it at the water line. Everybody on the cutter is yelling like a madman. Up forward you can see the Negro crew of number five gun, working like a machine, and grinning all the while. They throw the shells into the gun in a steady stream—the fastest gun crew on the cutter. And their lips move as they pour hot steel into the submarine. They're singing."

The account might have added that the gun crew, volunteers all and, according to U.S. Navy tradition, messmen, had emptied the entire contents of their "ready box" (32 shells) into the sub in one minute. Exclaimed a Coast Guard officer: "Those boys are one of the best gun crews you ever saw!"

MAY 3 1943

The Daily Worker
New York, N. Y.

Name New Ship After Douglass

APR 22 1943

(Special to the Daily Worker)

BALTIMORE, April 21. — A Liberty Ship named in honor of Frederick Douglass, great Negro Abolitionist, will be launched here some time next month from the Bethlehem-Fairfield Shipyards, it has been announced. The launching will take place only a short distance from where Douglass, born a slave on Maryland's eastern shore, worked as a ship caulker.

APR 22 194

An elaborate ceremony to accompanying the launching has been worked out, according to Tom Aydlett, Negro organizer for Fairfield and chairman of the arrangements committee.

This is the third Liberty Ship to be named after outstanding American Negroes, the other two being the Booker T. Washington, commanded by Capt. Hugh Mulzac, Negro, and the George Washington Carver.

Age-Herald
Birmingham, Ala

FORMER SLAVE HONORED

APR 1 194

WASHINGTON, April 13—(AP)— A Liberty ship to be launched at Baltimore next month will be named the Frederick Douglass for the one-time slave who became famous in the Civil War period as an orator and journalist. Two Liberty ships already have been named for Negroes—the Booker T. Washington and the George Washington Carver.

47j-1943

George W. Carver Launched In Colorful Ceremonies

"Pittsburgh Courier"
Pittsburgh Pa.

MAY 15 1943

RICHMOND, Calif., May 13—Sliding down the ways to the strains of "The Star Spangled Banner," amid the plaudits of thousands of Negro and white shipyard workers and civilians, the S.S. George Washington Carver, second Liberty ship named for an outstanding Negro American, was launched Friday afternoon at Shipyard No. 1 of the Kaiser company

Launched just 26 days after its keel was laid, the 10,500-ton vessel was christened by Lena Horne, singer and motion picture actress, in a colorful ceremony.

MAY 15 1943

STAR SELLS BONDS ON TOUR

Flanked by Mrs. Beatrice Turner, matron-of-honor and first Negro woman welder employed in the Richmond shipyards, and little Teresa Dellums, her flower girl, Miss Horne crashed the champagne bottle against the ship and uttered the traditional words, "I christen the George Washington Carver," as newsreel cameras and photographers' flash bulbs went into action.

MAY 15 1943

The launching followed a whirlwind tour through the shipyards by the movie actress during which she sold more than $25,000 worth of War Bonds. Two Negro shipyard workers, Mr. and Mrs. E. Kautzman, purchased a $2,,500 bond and Local A-26, represented by its president, Richard Guilmenot, bought a $1,000 bond as Miss Horne and Percy Bost, a shipfitter and anchor man, made appeals in three of the four Kaiser yards.

The launching program was opened by M. G. Vanderwende, assistant manager of Yard No. 1, who started that "Today we are honored to witness the launching of another great Liberty Ship. We are also launching another blow for the cause of freedom and honoring a man whose whole life was dedicated unselfishly to this same cause."

1500 WITNESS CEREMONIES

MAY 15 1943

Vanderwende then introduced C. Laurence Dellums, West Coast representative of the International Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, and president of the United Negro Labor committee, which sponsored the launching. He served as chairman of the program. Following an invocation by Rev. H. T. S. Johnson, former pastor of Taylor Memorial church in Oakland, Vernon McCalla, shipfitter representative of the Kaiser workers declared:

"We are all laborers working together towards the completion of a tremendous job—the job of victory. The American Negro has made himself an integral part of the pattern of this great industry of shipbuilding. The dramatic rise of Negro labor in the Bay area has and always will receive nation-wide attention."

The celebration began earlier in the day when Miss Horne and her aunt, Mrs. Edwin King of Los Angeles, arrived from Los Angeles and were honored with a breakfast at the Athens club by the United Negro Labor committee. The whirlwind bond rally at the shipyards followed and the entire launching committee and guests were luncheon guests of the Kaiser company at Yard No. 2. More than 1,500 civilians joined the shipyard workers in witnessing the launching.

MAY 15 1943

New York Times
New York, N. Y.

NAVY STILL BARRED FOR NEGRO WOMEN

MAY 28 1943

Committee on Harlem Reports Failure to Win Enlistment in Waves or Spars

KNOX CITES IMPROVEMENT

But Says There Are Not Enough Negro Sailors in Active Service to Demand Replacements

MAY 28 1943

Correspondence between the Citizens Committee on Harlem and the Secretary of the Navy, showing the failure of the group to effect the entrance of Negro women into either the Waves or the Spars, was made public by the committee yesterday.

The exchange of letters began Feb. 19, when the group, interested in anti-racial discrimination steps, wrote to Frank Knox, Secretary of the Navy, asking for a statement of policy in view of the fact that the Hunter College campus, property of the city, was being used for training purposes, although no Negroes were taken in.

Secretary Knox's reply, after stressing the steps that had been taken to improve the status of Negroes in the Navy, said that the Waves and Spars were being recruited to replace men for active service, and that the Navy does not at present have "any substantial body of Negro men available or qualified for general service at sea."

MAY 28 1943

There followed a second letter of protest from the group, saying that "we fail to see why Negro women cannot enlist in the Women's Reserve to be trained for duty in the shore establishment to release male personnel for duty at sea, irrespective of whether the male personnel is Negro or white."

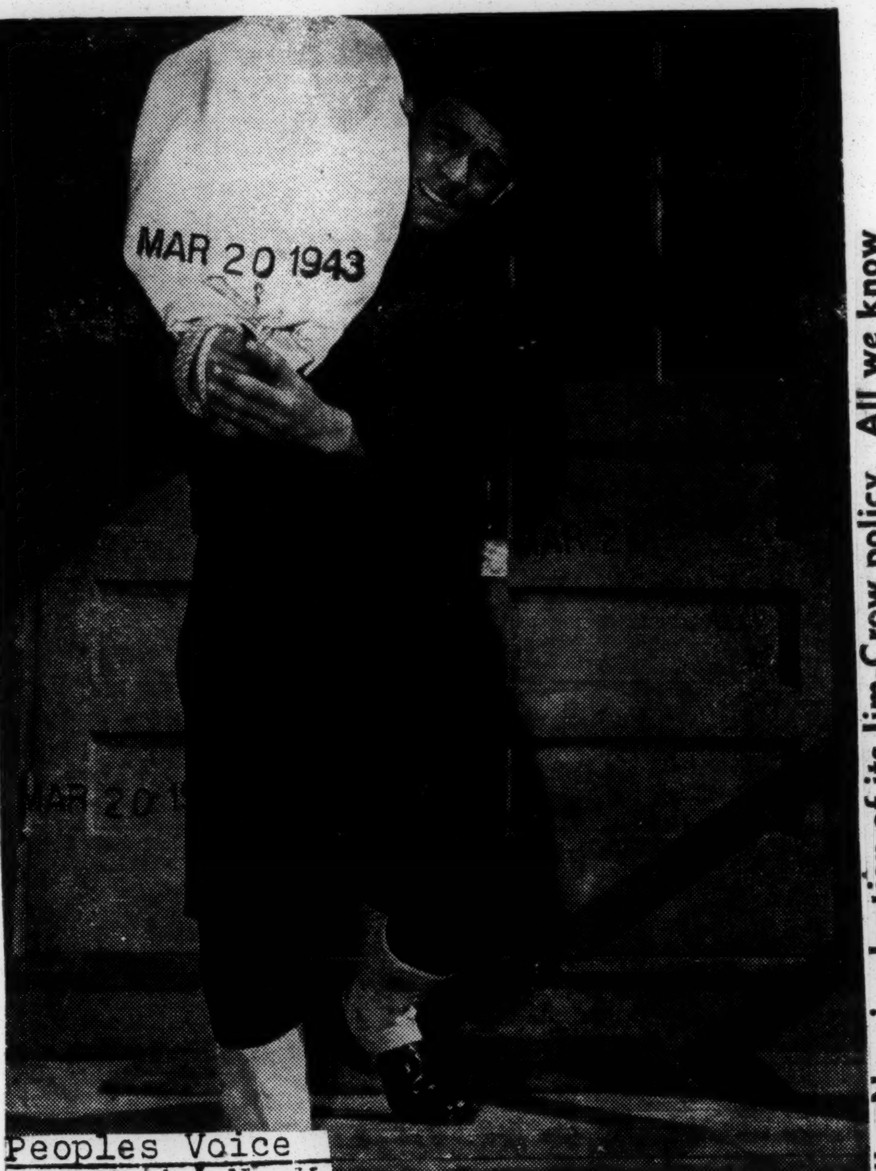
A final erply from the Navy Secretary took the position that "the changes which the Navy has effected in recognition of the Negro's steady progress have been wholly consistent with democratic principles" and "that all theoretically possible steps that are not taken at once cannot reasonably be condemned as undemocratic."

Secretary Knox, in his first letter, spoke of "experimentation" in connection with Negro Navy enlistments, and the group made public a batch of letters from Negro leaders and [illegible] protesting against the terminology.

MAY 28 1943

Meanwhile, a committee of the organization called on Governor Thomas E. Dewey in his suite at the Hotel Roosevelt yesterday afternoon to insure the continuance and expansion of the Committee on Discrimination in Employment of the State War Council, set up two years awo to combat racial discrimination in war industries.

The Governor told the group that the status of all of the citizens' committees working under the War Council was being re-examined by the council, and that he expected that an adequate appropriation would be given to the committee and its work generally revitalized.



MAR 20 1943

Peoples Voice
New York, N. Y.

FDR VALET NOW A GOB

His sea-bag on his shoulder, George Clinton Fields, former valet for President Roosevelt is shown walking from his barracks at the U. S. Naval Training Station, Great Lakes, Ill. Fields was drafted by his Washington selective service board Feb. 3 and chose the Navy.—OWI photo.

MAR 20 1943

A DEMOCRATIC CREW

Boston

MAY 8 1943

Those conservant with the preachments by Booker T. Washington would not ordinarily expect to find a democratic crew aboard the Liberty ship which bears his name. Fate has played honestly, however, to correct the evil disseminated by his racial doctrine that "we can be separate as the fingers but one as the hand." It was not democracy that he preached; it was not the kind of unity necessary to win the war or to spur progress toward the American ideal of liberty and justice for all. It was a doctrine that would segregate, lead to discrimination and bolster the notion of "white superiority." But it [illegible]tily pleased Southern bigots and northern reactionaries fell upon his neck in a spectacle of maudlin grati[illegible]

MAY 8 1943

There is no difficulty to run across colored sailors who have "sailed the seven seas" with their lighter brethren. But today Captain Mulzac's vessel affords the most conspicuous example of colored and white men working and living together aboard ship and getting along harmoniously. It belies the Navy's contention that mixing crews on naval vessels is impossible. Nobody yet has given any clear reason for the Navy's adoption of its Jim-Crow policy. All we know is that the anti-democratic practice was shackled upon the Navy and government departments in Washington after Southern politicians and poll taxers got the upper hand in Congress during the Wilson administration.

MAY 8 1943

Bystander

Des Moines, Iowa

Navy Induction to Be 15 Percent Negro in 1943

MAY 6 1943

Washington, D. C.—Increasingly greater numbers of Negroes are ntering the Navy through Selective Service procedures. It is expected that approximately 15 per cent of the men to be inducted this year will be members of the Negro race, the Navy department announced this week.

Of the thousands of Negroes who volunteered for service with the Navy before the President's executive order of December 5, 1942, banning voluntary enlistment of men between the ages of 18 and 37 years inclusive, most have completed their basic training and many have completed advanced training at the Navy's vocational schools. These graduates have been assigned to duty aboard ships and at shore establishments. Many have already advanced to such ratings as machinist's mates, shipfitters and gunner's mates.

Under the Navy's present plans, Negroes inducted are assigned to duty according to the needs of the service. Aptitude and the personal choice of the individual receive consideration. Following induction, as in the case of all inductees, they are given classification tests to determine the type of duty for which they are best fitted, and then assigned for training.

MAY 6 1943

Various Schools

Schools for the training of steward's mates gunner's mates, quartermasters, signalmen, electrician's mates, radiomen, shipfitters, machinist's mates, motor machinist's mates, aviation machinist's mates, metalsmiths, aviation metalsmiths, all construction battalion ratings, carpenter's mates, yeomen, storekeepers, cooks and bakers, and others are alcessful completion of their training men are assigned to ships and shore establishments of the Navy throughout the world. As they acquire skill and experience, they advance in rating and receive increased pay.

The majority of Negroes inducted into the Navy are assigned to the Naval Training Station, Great Lakes, Illinois, for recruit training. Upon the completion of their basic training, some of the recruits are immediately assigned to duty at shore establishments or aboard defense and harbor craft. Others attend Class "A" service schools at Great Lakes or at the Hampton Institute, Hampton, Virginia for additional training before assignment.

MAY 6 1943

Personnel entering the steward's mates branch of the service receive four weeks' training at the Naval Training Station, Norfolk, Virginia. Upon completion of their training, they are assigned to ships and stations according to requirements.

Evergreen, Ala., Courant
March 4, 1943

Negroes Needed For Navy Duty At Pensacola

Approximately 800 Negroes who are between 17 and 18 and between 38 and 50 years of age are urgently needed for immediate service in the Navy at the Naval Air Station, Pensacola, Fla., according to Chief Petty Officer M. H. Potter, who is in charge of the Navy Recruiting Station at Evergreen.

Many of them will receive as much as $66 a month and in addition free clothing, lodging, food and medical attention, the Recruiting Officer said. The lowest pay for any Negro who enlists for this duty will be $54 a month, he added.

Pointing out another advantage for those assigned to this duty, he said that they will likely have an opportunity to visit their homes ferquently.

Those who are interested should apply to Chief Petty Officer Potter, whose office is in the Jones & Deming Building at Evergreen.

Capt. Mulzac's Ship Sails 15,000 Miles in 4 Months--

APR 24 1943

The Daily Worker

New York, N. Y.

The Booker T. Washington, recently commissioned ship whose master is Hugh N. Mulzac, Negro member of the National Maritime Union, has been seen lately at a North African port, news dispatches from London revealed yesterday.

The correspondent, who saw and interviewed Captain Mulzac, quoted him as saying that his ship had covered more than 15,000 sea miles in five months and had delivered four "really good cargoes" to the United Kingdom and to North Africa.

Captain Mulzac's home is at 536 Dean St., Brooklyn.

Commenting on the report, a National Maritime Union statement yesterday lauded Capt. Mulzac's seamanship and declared that union officials were "not surprised at the fact that Captain Mulzac and his crew have covered more than 15,000 miles, delivering cargoes for the United Nations.

The only thing that makes this ship different from all the other National Maritime Union ships on the high seas is the fact that Captain Mulzac is the only Negro skipper in our merchant marine," the statement said.

The union statement reaffirmed its contention that "not only Captain Mulzac but any member of any minority group who is qualified" should have the chance to do any job that will help win the war.

"We of course are proud of the fact that Mulzac and his crew, which consists of members of 18 different United Nations, despite great stress and strain, are sailing through submarine-infested waters, working and fighting together in peace and harmony for the good of the United Nations' fight against fascism," the statement concluded.

APR 24 1943

Pittsburgh Courier

They Wanted To Serve

Teen-Age Recruits 'Busted' In Navy

MAY 15 1943

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 13—One under-age Negro bluejacket was back home today and another was on his way after having been found guilty of "stowing-away in the Navy" at the U. S. Naval Training station Great Lakes, Ill.

The boys, one of whom is 14 and the other 13, enlisted in the navy as 17-year-olds by forging their mothers' signatures on navy recruiting papers. The hoax was discovered at the U. S. Naval Training station when their mothers' wrote navy authorities discolsing the true ages of their sons.

PROMISES TO RETURN

Youngest of the two is Hudson Anderson, son of Mrs. Bruce Butler of 3A Harlem square, Greenville, S. C., will be 14 years old August 13. The other is Lionel Harold Brown, son of Mrs. Mayola Keller Brown of 247 Evergreen drive, Baton Rouge, La., will be 15 on December 14. Anderson left Camp Robert Smalls' training center for Negroes at Great Lakes, with the promise that he would return "as soon as I'm old enough." "Sailor" Brown echoed those sentiments.

MAY 15 1943

According to naval regulations, 17-year-olds can enlist in the navy only with written consent of their parents. Anderson, who was in the ninth grade at Sterling High school, Greenville, overcame that little difficulty by giving $5 to a friend to sign his mother's name to the consent papers and another $5 to a notary public who witnessed the signature.

MAY 15 1943

Brown took care of his enlistment papers without handing out any money. Securing the necessary papers from the Baton Rouge post office, he signed his mother's name, joined other recruits at New Orleans and reported with them to the training station. He left the ninth grade at McKinley High school, Baton Rouge, to become a bluejacket.

Both boys had completed recruit training and were in the outgoing unit when their fradulent enlistments were discovered. Lieut. Cmdr. D. W. Armstrong, commanding officer of Camp Smalls, advised them, "Come back in a few years."

Columbia, S. C. Record
March 8, 1943

74 Negroes Join Navy In State

A total of 74 Negroes entered the Navy during February, according to figures released today by Chief John F. Potts, specialist Negro recruiter here. Nineteen of these men were 17-year-old volunteers, most of whom enlisted through the navy recruiting sub-stations at Rock Hill, Charleston and Columbia.

The remaining number entered the Navy through the channels of Selective Service and were accepted by the Navy officers stationed at the Joint Armed Forces Induction Stations at Fort Jackson and Camp Croft. Of this number, 27 were accepted as apprentice seamen and were sent to the United States Naval Training Station at Great Lakes, Illinois, for their 12-weeks basic training. Twenty-eight qualified as mess attendants and were sent to the training station at Norfolk for their indoctrination.

Peoples Voice

New York, N. Y.

Carver Liberty Ship Under Construction

APR 24 1943

The SS George Washington Carver, second Liberty ship to be named for an outstanding Negro American, was under construction this week in a West Coast shipyard, following the laying of the keel of the 10,000-ton vessel on April 12 at Richmond, Calif.

APR 24 1943

Assigned the name of the world-famous scientist by the Maritime Commission a short time after Dr. Carver died at Tuskegee Institute, Ala., on January 5, 1943, the Liberty Ship will be the sixteenth vessel built in the Richmond Shipyard No. 1 of the Permanente Metals Corporation.

APR 24 1943

On March 31, the SS S. Hall Young, another Liberty Ship, was launched by Negro workers in Richmond Yard No. 2 after Miss Beulah Whittington, a Kaiser shipyard worker of three days' employment, was selected by lottery to christen the ship. Drawing the lucky number from a pool of 35,000 workers, Miss Whittington christened the ship while Mrs. Katie Lewis served as matron of honor.

The first Liberty Ship named for a Negro, the SS Booker T. Washington, is now in active service under a Negro master, Captain Hugh Mulzac, and the third ship, the SS Frederick Douglass, has been assigned for construction at the Bethlehem-Fairfield Shipyard in

Baltimore, Md APR 2 1943

47j-1943

FDR's Man In Navy Now

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

FEB 25 1943

GREAT LAKES, Ill.—(IND.)—President Roosevelt lost his Negro valet as a result of his tour last September through the Great Lakes Naval Training Station, it was disclosed today. George Clinton Fields, valet to the President for the past ten years, is now in training as an apprentice seaman at the Station. Fields, who got the idea when he accompanied Mr. Roosevelt on his visit to the Station, is pictured admiring himself in his new uniform.

Dewey Backs Demand For Fair Play From Navy On Officers' Training

New York Age
New York, N. Y.

JAN 30 1943

ALBANY, N. Y. — Governor Thomas E. Dewey is showing the forces of reaction in this state that his eloquent remarks about equality of rights for all citizens have been made in sincerity and by a fair-minded public official who intends to do something to correct them.

The former New York prosecutor who recently became the Empire State's first GOP Governor in two decades, served notice last week that the barring of Negroes from special training courses at colleges and universities in this State will not be tolerated.

Dewey's attacks on this vicious form of bias was prompted by a complaint filed with his office by Walter White of the NAACP. As a result of that complaint, the State War Council has formally protested to the United States Navy in the form of a resolution.

The Governor, in statements to the press, refused to name the type of courses or the colleges involved, but it was believed that the complaint referred to included the V class of courses which fit students in college for enlistment in the Naval Reserve and allow them to conclude their college careers. Under present Navy policy Negroes are not eligible for the officer corps, but may become non-commissioned officers. The Governor's refusal to comment extensively was explained in his statement that the report involved is a confidential one.

Resolution To The Navy

The War Council resolution referred to the Navy and made public by New York's Governor, said:

"Whereas, the War and Navy Departments of the United States have deemed it desirable to utilize the facilities of certain colleges and universities in the State of New York for the purpose of giving special training to men in the armed services, and

"Whereas, pursuant to the State Constitution and legislative enactments, it is the declared policy of this State that there shall be no discrimination or segregation because of race, color or creed in the public schools and colleges or other institutions serving the public, and

"Whereas, colored citizens are freely admitted as students to the universities and colleges of the State for the regular courses of instruction and are members of the student bodies of several of these universities, therefore be it

"Resolved that the State War Council of New York express to the War Department and to the Navy Department of the United States and to the War and Navy Committee of the War Manpower Commission its solemn conviction that any departure from recognized policy of the State of New York of equality of opportunity for all its citizens to enter the colleges and universities in this State, regardless of race, color or creed is inimical to the best interest of its citizenry and to their participation in the war effort."

Guardian
Boston, Mass.

Cap'n Mulzac Does It Again

MAY 8 1943

NEW YORK — Capt. Hugh Mulzac, America's only colored sea captain, has done it again.

Captain Mulzac, skipper of the new Liberty ship, Booker T. Washington, brought his vessel into an Eastern port last week after a 15,000 mile voyage, "delivering the goods" to our troops and Allies in Britain and the Mediterranean.

Describing those incidents of the voyage which war-time regulations permit, Capt. Mulzac told reporters that he had visited 24 camps of American soldiers in North Africa, had been the guest of numerous American officers and had talked with hundreds of colored troops.

The colored boys he talked with, Capt. Mulzac reports, are healthy, working hard, preparing for combat and in a hurry to "get the job done."

"I think the people of England realize today that they are fighting a war for democracy and not for just a few individuals," said the Captain. "They are getting down to it. A change is definitely being made in England with the feeling that, after this war, democracy must rule."

The skipper described a visit to his ship by the Lord Mayor of one port and another by five Czechoslovakian generals.

He said that the British press welcomed the arrival of his ship with enthusiastic page one stories, and that they wer all, even the tory press, pressing for a Second Front in Europe now.

At the conclusion of the interview, the Captain was asked if he had some message to give the people.

"I am always glad to be back," said Capt. Mulzac. "Our people should not be disheartened because they have privations. We don't really see anything of the war itself. We don't really know what it is yet. We should do our best to back with every ounce of energy we have the people who are carying on the war at the fronts."

Seaman Tells of Ship Torpedoing

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

APR 24 1943

Swam Two Hours in Mediterranean; Only One Casualty

(Passed by Censor)

NEW YORK. — The Edward Rutledge, one of the transports which carried the invasion forces to North Africa was torpedoed off the coast of French Morocco after it had discharged its passengers.

Saved from the twice-torpedoed ship, Edward S. Stokes, steward's mate, first class, told how he swam in the Mediterranean for two hours, waiting to be picked up, in an interview, last Tuesday over Station WCAU, Philadelphia.

Although two thirds of the colored seamen could not swim, there was only one casualty.

Describes Experience

Orders to abandon the ship were given; the lights went out and life jackets were grabbed, Stokes explained.

"One boy jumped overboard, but when I looked down, it seemed an awful long ways for me to jump," the seaman said. "But they put a rope over the side and I went down it.

"But after I started, I found out that it only reached about six feet. So I had to jump anyway.

All Rafts Loaded

"When I hit water, I swam about 50 yards, when I heard one of the officers calling to me to wait. He hadn't been able to get his life jacket fastened, so I hauled him to the life raft, and then started looking for a life raft for myself.

"All other rafts were loaded so I swam for about two hours before I was picked up.

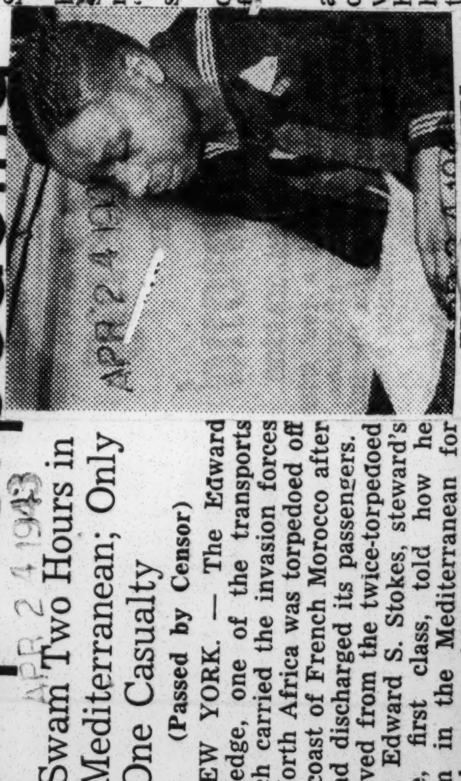
"Our first night ashore, we stayed in a school, and the second night, in a church. The only trouble was that a shell had gone through the roof of the church, and it rained in.

Germans Took Food

"The Germans had cleaned all of the food out of that part of Africa, and there was hardly anything in Casablanca to eat. We got our rations through the army.

"We stayed in Casablanca six days. We weren't supposed to go sightseeing, but we all got to look the town over before we left I've been home since November," he concluded.

A native of Grafton, Va., Seaman Stokes was working in the Navy Mine Department in New York before he went to sea a little over a year ago.



EDWARD S. STOKES

PRIDE AND THE ROSE

By JOHN McALILEY BOYD

How may I couch my remarks to conceal what I dare not disclose?
What can I say to uphold the respect that's so dear to a man
And yet without shaming, uncover the ordure which fosters the rose?

Charleston, S. C. News & Courier
April 27, 1943

PLANS INDUCTION BOOST

McNutt Says More Negroes to Be Drawn by Navy

Washington, April 26.—(AP): The navy, marine corps and coast guard are going to increase their inductions of negroes, war Manpower Commissioner Paul V. McNutt told a press conference today.

He added that he had worked out a "schedule" which would guarantee that the proportion of negroes in the sea services eventually would be the same as their proportion of the national population—about ten per cent.

The army, McNutt said, has been inducting negroes at this rate "right along". He would not say when the sea services would begin taking negroes in higher proportion.

Age-Herald
Birmingham, Ala.

WARSHIP TO HONOR NEGRO NAVAL HERO

MAY 24 1943

WASHINGTON, May 23—(AP)—Secretary Knox approved Friday the naming of a destroyer escort vessel for a Negro mess attendant who lost his life in the naval battle of Guadalcanal in mid-November.

MAY 24 1943

The first American warship named for a Negro, it will be designated the "U. S. S. Harmon."

The mess attendant, first class, was Leonard Roy Harmon, who was aboard the Cruiser San Francisco during the great sea battle. Harmon, 26, son of Mrs. Naunita Harmon Carroll of Cuero, Texas, assisted throughout the engagement in caring for wounded men and removing them from battle stations to dressing stations aboard ship.

MAY 24 1943

He was killed, the Navy said, when he deliberately exposed himself to hostile gun fire to protect a shipmate. The secretary has awarded him the Navy Cross posthumously.

Petition By 51 Coast Sailors Scores Defender Story But The Facts Are...

Chicago Defender
Chicago, Illinois

A big question mark this week surrounded the treatment of Negro sailors at Port Chicago, Calif., despite a lengthy petition signed by 51 colored enlisted men protesting to the Chicago Defender that "we are not jim crowed."

The petition attacked as "untrue" a recent Defender story in which a group of sailors at the West Coast navy base charged that Negro sailors were not given ratings, that there are desertions because of bad treatment, that there is no place for Sunday services, that hours of work and drill are very long, that no colored gobs are allowed to go to sea.

MAR 6 1943

In reply to these charges, Lt. Comm. C. W. Hutton, commanding the base, sent the petition signed by 51 sailors to the Defender with the comment:

"I am wondering whether your paper would be interested for a change in publishing facts instead of insinuations designed to promote racial animosity within the ranks of the armed forces of the U. S. For the information of all loyal and decent thinking citizens of this country, colored and white men have an equal chance for advancement at these barracks depending of course on the initiative and ability of each man concerned. These conditions will continue to exist as long as I am in command."

Two Other Letters

But along with the petition which makes a blanket denial of the Defender's charge, the mailman brought two other letters from Port Chicago from enlisted men who did not sign the petition.

One of the letters is signed by a seaman who says, "I may be court-martialed for telling this, but I feel that it is about time America showed some respect for the Negro people."

MAR 6 1943

This sailor (and the Defender is willing to turn the writer's name over to an impartial board of investigators if he is guaranteed protection from unwarranted prosecution) writes:

"They say that there is no discrimination in the navy. Well, it's a lie.

MAR 6 1943

"The boys here are willing in every way to help win the war. At least they were up until February 11 or 12, when the naval ship R.... pulled into port to be loaded. The first 24 hours went by pretty nice. The next 24 hours the ship's fire guards wore sticks while in the hold where we were working.

Fight Starts

"The next day one of the white fellows that was stationed on the ship threatened a few of the boys from our side with a gun. Then it started. The white sailor called the colored sailor a 'nigger.' With a hard right to the jaw from the colored sailor, down went the white sailor flat on the deck.

"Now this is what made us mad as the devil. The captain of the navy ship says that he don't want 'niggers' on his ship and to get the hell off. So we did and were not going back, but we thought about our colored brothers fighting over there, too, so we went back to work.

"Now the truth is here and must be told. The captain and officers of our camp here at Port Chicago, Calif., are some pretty swell men. They will stick up for us in every way they can. But they couldn't even reason with the captain of the R.....

"We have white shipmates stationed here with us and get along fine together. It is just some ships that have a green crew fresh from Great Lakes that cause the most serious trouble."

MAR 6 1943

Long Petition

The second letter from the Coast naval base is even more inflammable and could not very well be quoted by the Defender.

But both letters, in addition to the original letter published in the Defender which brought on the Port Chicago petition, agree that everything is not right at the Coast naval base as far as treatment of race sailors is concerned.

In the petition circulated on the official stationery of "Naval Enlisted Barracks, Naval Magazine, Port Chicago, Calif.," the 51 sailor signers maintain:

"1. We are not 'Jim Crowed.' We eat at the same mess hall as the white petty officers. Even the commissioned officers eat the same food as is served us.

MAR 6 1943

Cite Ratings

"2. We have the following ratings among colored personnel: five coxswains, four gunners mates third class, two painters third class, six ships cooks third class, two bakers third class, five firemen second class, and 10 firemen third class. There is a proportion of one seaman fire class to three seamen second class which we feel is pretty good inasmuch as a white seaman spends six months as seaman second class and 12 months as seaman first clas before being rated.

"3. As for men running away, there has only been one homesick deserter from this activity.

"4. Our working hours call for seven hours a day, on the days when we are not passing ammunition for the men out there that are doing the fighting. We never drill over five hours a day.

"5. That we have not drawn sea duty as yet can be explained by the fact that we are doing our share in the war effort and more here on land and we do assure you that our efforts and daily work here on shore is hitting the enemy below the belt, as well as if we were at sea.

Charges Not Denied

"6. That our station has no chapel or religious services on board but every man who does desire of his own free will to attend religious services in the community church in Port Chicago, Calif. One of our men has spoken to the congregation of the church here in Port Chicago, Calif., and was received royally."

It is not evident who circulated the petition—the barracks commandeer who sent it to the Defender, or the enlisted men.

But even in the petition, most of the Defender's charges are not denied.

MAR 6 1943

1. The Jim Crow charge is not answered, since it is still evident that the colored sailors are segregated in their barracks. It is stated that all eat in the same barracks but it is not made clear whether black and white are segregated as they are in the mess hall at the Tuskegee air base.

2. Most of the ratings received are not in combat classifications but rather in the traditional menial capacities—cooks, bakers, painters, firemen.

3. There has been desertion, it is admitted.

MAR 6 1943

4. Seven hours of work and five hours of drill make a long day when combined with hours of ammunition passing, which is a fancy name for stevedoring.

5. There has been no sea duty for Negroes, it is admitted. Land duty is important, but the navy still wins its battles at sea.

6. There is no place provided by the navy for church services, it is admitted. Negroes have to depend on civilians for religious observances.

Gadsden, Ala., Times
[illegible]

Ship Built Entirely By Negroes Launched

CHESTER, Pa., May 11.—(AP) The Marine Eagle, first ship built completely by Negroes, was launched Monday at the Sun Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Company.

The Earle was built for the Maritime Commission in Sun's yard No. 4, manned entirely by Negroes. Rachel Stevenson, a Negress, employed by the firm for 22 years, was selected to Christen the ship and receive a $1,000 war bond, gift of the company.

Birmingham Post
Birmingham, Alabama

BIRMINGHAM NEGRO MAKES SHIP'S PIES

We have 11 Negro boys aboard, all in the stewards' department. They wait table in the officers' mess, and run the wardroom pantry that keeps hot coffee going 24 hours a day. They have a separate compartment of their own for quarters, but otherwise they live just as the white sailors do.

They are all quiet, nice boys and a credit to the ship. Three of them are exceedingly tall and three exceedingly short. They all have music in their souls. Sometimes I have to laugh—when the wardroom radio happens to be playing a hot tune during meals I've noticed them grinning to themselves and dancing ever so slightly as they go about their serving.

AUG 6 1943

I haven't room to give more than a couple of their names. One is George Edward Mallory, of Orange, Va. He is 32, and before the war worked as an unloader at a chain grocery store in Orange. He has been in the Navy for a year and has been operated on for appendicitis since coming to the Mediterranean. He got seasick once but it doesn't bother him any more. He is tall, quiet and serious. He had never waited tables before but he's an expert now.

Another one is Fred Moore, who is the littlest, meekest and blackest one on ship. Fred has a tiny mustache that you can't even see, and a perpetually startled look on his good-natured face. He is very quiet and shy.

AUG 6 1943

His home is at (1910 10th-av., s), Birmingham, Ala. He is just 21 and has been in the Navy only since March. He likes it fine, and thinks he may stay in after the war. Before joining up he did common labor at Army camps and fruit farms.

Fred has a gift. He is a wizard at baking delicate and beautiful pastries. He makes all the pastry desserts for the officers' mess. He had never done any cooking before joining the Navy, except to fry a few hamburgers at a short-order joint. He can't explain his knack for pastry-baking. It's just like somebody who can play the piano beautifully without ever taking lessons. The whole ship pays tribute to his little streak of genius.

Fred says he has never been seasick nor very homesick, but during some of our close shaves in action he says he sure was scared.

Memphis, Tenn., Com'rcial Appeal
July 25, 1943

NAVY TO GET NEGROES

800 Will Be Assigned To Millington Air Station

Approximately 800 negroes will be assigned to the Naval Air Technical Training Center at Millington in midAugust, the Navy Department disclosed last night in Washington.

The Navy Department declined to give further information on the plans.

Public relation officers at the training center were not available for a statement.

47j-1943

"I CHRISTEN THEE..."

Pittsburgh, Pa. Courier

22 1943

MAY 22 1943

Mrs. Rachel Stevenson is snapped as she christens the "Marine Eagle," the first ship built by Negroes at the Sun Shipyards at Chester, Pa. Witnessing the ceremony are Albert Thomas, brother of the ship's sponsor, and John G. Pew, president of the shipyard.

Lower photo: The camera catches the actual splash of the champagne as Miss Lena Horne strikes the bow of the George Washington Carver in the christening ceremony last week in Richmond, Calif. — Upper photo by Lawson. Lower photo by E. F. Joseph.

Chicago Defender
Chicago, Illinois

MANY TAKEN SICK BY FOOD AT NAVY CAMP

Tainted Rations Blamed For Widespread Illness Among Recruits

GREAT LAKES, Ill.—Food poisoning felled an undetermined number of naval trainees late last week, causing widespread alarm among Chicagoans having relatives and friends assigned to the U. S. Naval Training Station here.

AUG 7 1943

While only limited information was available, it was learned that a large number of youths, possibly several hundred, were stricken with stomach disorders as a result of something they ate for lunch and dinner on Friday.

A statement from Lt. R. B. McCurrie, public relations officer, offered the following explanation:

Camp Lawrence Affected

"In the afternoon and evening of July 30, there were a considerable number of cases of gastro-intestinal disturbances in one of the regiments at this station. The cause is under investigation but has not as yet been determined. Many of the patients have entirely recovered and have returned to normal duty. All others are doing well and it is expected they will return to their normal duties soon."

AUG 7 1943

Lt. McCurrie declined to give any further information. He stated he could not give an estimate of the number of men involved and refused to say what the menu was for that day. He did, however, admit that the regiment involved was that assigned to Camp Lawrence.

No trainees connected with Camp Moffett or Camp Robert Smalls were affected, Lt. McCurrie declared.

20,000 Negro Marines To Be Enrolled

Savannah, Ga. Tribune

New River, N. C., May 30—Such an exceptional record has been achieved since the United States Marine Corps broke its 167 year traditions and began enlistment of Negroes just a year ago June 1, the corps now plans to enroll 20,000 Negro marines within the next year, it was revealed last night.

JUN 3 1943

Along with this revelation, it was pointed out that one unit of Negro marines has already been assigned to overseas duty and that there are approximately 2,000 others now in training at New River--only training center and recruiting depot for Negroes in the country.

Under the rapidly-expanding program, camp facilities at New River will be doubled by July 1.

There are four different Negro camps on the mammoth reservation of Camp Lejeune—Montford Point Camp No. 1; Montford Point Camp No. 2; a canvas camp and a barracks camp at the rifle range. A fifth camp is at present rising miraculously under fast construction. It will be larger than the first four combined.

JUN 3 1943

A new administration building, another theatre, and infirmary, a hostess house and four school buildings will be erected at Montford Point Camp No. 1, it was stated. The school structure will be for seven schools—electrical, first sergeants, quartermaster, engineers, signal corps, motor transport and fire control.

(471)

The Negro marines, just as the whites, first have to complete basic training as "boots" before receiving special instructions in manning outposts in various offensive actions. All are taught the use of seven weapons of war.

Some of the first recruits have advanced to the grade of sergeants. As a result of their aptitudes and capacities for leadership demonstrated at New River, it is officially reported that members of the original Negro volunteer group eventually will dierct the entire training program for Negro marines.

Afro-American
Baltimore, Maryland

Mixed Crew of S.S. Douglass to 'Lick Axis'

List 12 Marylanders Among 34 Men Under Capt. Richardson

By MAX JOHNSON

BALTIMORE — The S. S. Frederick Douglass, new 10,500-ton liberty ship launched here two weeks ago, has a mixed crew of thirty-four under the command of Capt. Adrian Richardson, all of whom are out to "lick the Axis."

Crew members, including 12 Marylanders and natives of Brazil, Norway and the Virgin Islands, were interviewed at a local port prior to embarking on the high seas.

JUN 19 1943

The ship was launched at the Bethlehem-Fairfield Shipyards here on May 29 and [illegible] the third to be named for colored Americans.

Previously, the S. S. Booker T. Washington and the S.S. George W. Carver were launched from shipyards on the West Coast.

Crew Proud of Ship

Ships are just ships to some seamen, but how this crew seemed to feel about the Douglass with all its modern conveniences was perhaps best expressed by Third Mate John B. Clark of New York City who told the AFRO:

"She sure is a fine ship. I only hope we can keep her this way a long time."

Ensign Clark, 31, is a graduate of the Maritime School in New London, Conn., and a seaman of several years' experience.

JUN 19 1943

Captain Richardson's first and second mates are Kristrin T. Kristiansen, a Norwegian, and Benjamin O. Smith, white.

The ship's deck and engine departments are manned by a mixed crew, but its radio, purser and steward departments are all colored. The U.S. Navy gun crew is all white.

Radio Man Baltimorean

Radio operator is 21-year-old Reginald Brandon whose aunt, Mrs. A. C. Langley, lives at 1421 Druid Hill Avenue.

JUN 19 1943

William A. M. Barker, 24, of Louisville, Ky., who has been sailing about six years and has been to all major ports on the globe, is the ship's purser.

Ship carpenter is William H. Simmons, 22, known as "Chips" by his mates, who hails from South Carolina and holds a chief's rating although he has been sailing only nine months.

Bos'n's mate is Hans Rising, 37, of 104 N. Bond Street.

Rising and Alvano Ortiz, 35, able-bodied seaman of 1516 E. Lombard Street, are two among the ship's crew who have survived U-boat attacks during a previous sea voyage last July. Both were on the same ship and spent several days on a raft before being rescued.

Gives Up War Job to Sail

Jerome Davis, of 1001 Bennett Place, another veteran seaman, gave up a welding job at Bartlett-Hayward's war plant here to sail under Captain Richardson. Davis, listed as an able-bodied seaman, revealed that he expected the rating of boatswain on the Douglass soon.

Proud father among the crew is Claude McClean of 102 Convent Avenue, NYC, whose son, Claude, Jr., 18, has just enlisted in the army and is stationed at Camp Lockett, Calif.

JUN 19 1943

Claude, Jr., he said, is following the right procedure by joining the army to perhaps toughen himself up for merchant marine service. The latter service, he said, is no spot for a softie.

Other Baltimoreans on the ship are:

Willie M. Johnson of 1512 Pressman Street, Wayland Harding of 1824 Madison Avenue, Vernon Forrest of 814 N. Gay Street, Leslie Logan of 1329 N. Caroline Street, all messmen;

James Gregory of 31 S. Bond Street, Adam Van Landingham of 1101 Harlem Avenue and Charles E. Dean of 420 N. Bond Street, are wiper, chief steward and third cook, respectively. Clarence Neal, of Henryton, Md., is a wiper.

Other Crew Members

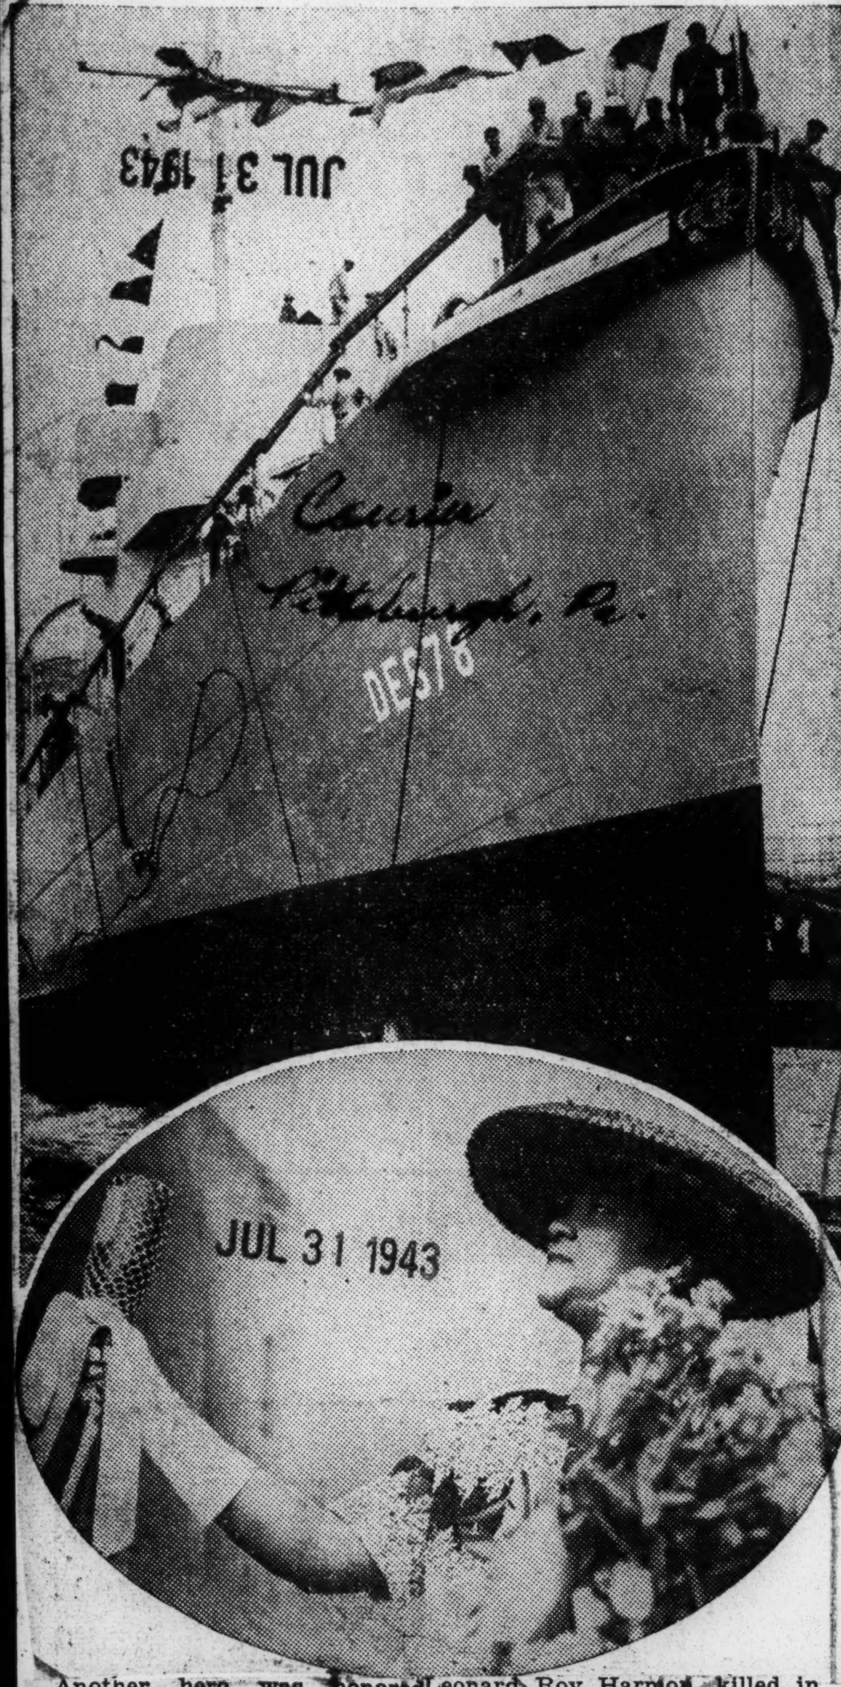
Other crew members are: Charles Richardson of NYC, chief cook; Melvin Briggs of NYC, second cook; Nollie Davis, white, chief engineer; William H. Thompson of Colorado, deck engineer;

JUN 19 1943

Langston Hardaway of Texas and Cecil Usher of South Carolina, oilers; Emmett E. Harris of NYC, fireman; Amaro Coeho of Brazil, wiper;

Alexander F. Sennett of Louisiana, Curtis Bryant of NYC and Floyd Beavers of Georgia, able-bodied seamen; William Jones, John Rector and William Rice, all ordinary seamen of NYC; James H. Gorham of North Carolina and Thomas E. Fountain of Washington, messmen.

ANOTHER "FIRST" RECORDED AS USS HARMON SLIDES DOWN THE WAYS



JUL 31 1943

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

JUL 31 1943

Another hero was honored last week, when the USS Harmon, destroyer escort, was christened at the quaint old seaport of Quincy, Mass., Sunday. A whistle blew, shouts were heard, champagne was splattered and the ship was launched.

This ship bore the name of Leonard Roy Harmon, killed in action off Guadalcanal. Selected to do the christening was the dead hero's mother, Mrs. Naunita Harmon Carroll.

Top photo: the USS Hamon slides down the ways. In the oval, Mrs. Carroll is shown breaking the bottle of champagne upon the bow. This marks the first time in history the U.S. Navy has posthumously honored a Negro in this manner.—Rowe photos.

JUL 31 1943

Hero Ship, Harmon, Is Launched

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa

By JAMES EDMOUND BOYACK

QUINCY, Mass., July 29—One hundred and sixty-seven years ago, only eight miles from this quaint old seaport, Crispus Attucks, first hero of the War for Independence, laid down his life that America might be free. His monument on Boston Commons is a symbol of liberty.

JUL 31 1943

Today, we are again at war . . . a global war for the freedom of all men.

And here Sunday, another colored hero made the headlines of history. When the first United States warship to honor a Negro was launched at the the Fore River shipyard of the Bethlehem Steel company.

GUADALCANAL HERO

He is Leonard Roy Harmon, mess attendant, first class, U.S.N., who laid down his life for his country and became the hero of the battle of Guadalcanal. November 12 and 13, 1942.

The "U.S.S. Harmon" too, is a symbol of liberty, which will ever remind all men that Negroes today, as 167 years ago, are a race of fighting men who still treasure liberty above life itself.

Precisely at 6:20 p. m. E.W.T. Mrs. Naunita Harmon Carroll of Cuero, Texas, broke a beribboned bottle of champagne across the bow of the destroyer escort named for her fighting son. Whistles from ships in the harbor bellowed hearty Godspeed to the newest addition to the United States Navy. A record crowd of 2,000 visitors and Bethlehem's workers cheered the historic occasion and the 1,300-ton destroyer escort slid majestically down the ways, her flags waving greetings to the offshore breeze.

JUL 31 1943

NOTABLES ON HAND

Present at the ceremonies were Mrs. Carroll's husband, William Carroll, principal of the Willkin's school, Port Levaca, Tex.; Miss Pauline M. Harmon, 24, the boy's sister, who is a war worker at Kelly Field, Tex., and Mrs. Constance Edwards, another sister.

Representing the United States Navy were Rear Admiral Harold Travis Smith, supervisor of shipbuilding; Comm. Claude L. Turner, Lt. Comm. J. B. Varney, Lt. Comm. E. O. Peterson, and many other officers representing the First Naval district, Boston, Mass.

Practically the entire executive personnel of the Bethlehem Steel company was on hand with their wives in colorful dresses, to welcome Mrs. Harmon's party and to participate in the ceremonies.

NEWSREEL CAMERAS

As newsreel cameras purred and flashlight bulbs lit up the festive scene, E. C. Geehr, assistant to the general manager, coached the honored Texas lady in the traditional ship launching ceremony.

JUL 31 1943

Suddenly a whistle blew, a foreman down forehead shouted, and pandemonium broke loose as Mrs. Carroll, with a swift stroke of the champagne bottle, sent the gallant ship on its way up to a glorious career in the United States Navy, uttering the timeworn words: "I Christen Thee U.S.S. Harmon," and turning away with tears in her eyes.

WEARS SON'S NAVY CROSS

Mrs. Harmon wore a stunning black and white two-piece dress of semi-sheer material, with a matching hat and white shoes. On her left breast she proudly wore the Navy Cross, which was presented posthumously to the gallant Negro messman hero.

JUL 31 1943

Bethlehem company officials noted on the flag-bedecked dais included John E. Burkhardt, manager of engineering of the shipbuilding division; E. R. inclair, purchasing agent; John T. Weisman, general superintendent; James K. Launders, superintendent of outfitting; Henry P. Hazard, superintendent of hull construction; William H. Collins, general manager; S. W. Wakeman, general superintendent of the Bethlehem-Hinghan Shipyard, Inc.; H. V. Bisbee, assistant to the general manager; H. R. Pund, assistant to the general manager, and many department heads and their wives.

GUESTS OF BOTH RACES

Mr. Collins was seen giving personal attention to his many guests of both races.

Also active during the ceremonies was Frank Leahy, the company's genial director of public relations, who rendered invaluable assistance to the small army of reporters and photographers during the entire proceedings.

Among local colored guests noted were Mr. and Mrs. Allen E. Sasser, his wife and daughter. Mr. Sasser is the Boston district instructor for the Pullman company, and attended the ceremonies representing W. S. Murray, district superintendent. Attorney Ray Guild, of Cambridge, Mass., was also among those present.

TOUCHING SCENE

As a bevy of chugging tugboats took the "U.S.S. Harmon" in charge, a touching scene was enacted on the high dais. An official produced a ribbon-tied box in which was a magnificent Paul Revere silver bowl, suitably inscribed on the side. Mr. Geehr spoke as a hush fell on the thrilled crowd.

"On behalf of the Bethlehem Steel company, the workers of both races, who worked day and night that this fighting ship might be finished on schedule to go forth to battle, and on behalf of all the men and women in this shipyard, I want you to accept this gift," he said, "as a memento of this great occasion."

JUL 31 1943

NOVEL SOUVENIR

Mrs. Harmon, almost overcome, whispered her thanks, she also received the fragments of the bottle of champagne which she broke. It was placed in a suitable mahogany box, still in its cord net protective covering.

The number of the historic ship it launched is "De 678."

Len Harmon was only 26 when he fought the Battle of Guadalcanal, on the "U.S.S. San Francisco." The text of the citation which elevated him to an honored place in American Naval history follows:

"For extraordinary heroism while serving aboard the 'U.S.S. San Francisco' during action against enemy Japanese forces in the Solomon Islands area on November 12 and 13, 1942.

"With persistent disregard for his own personal safety, rendered invaluable assistance in caring for the wounded and in evacuating them to a dressing station.

"In addition to displaying unusual loyalty in behalf of the injured executive officer, he deliberately exposed himself to hostile gunfire in order to protect a shipmate and, as a result of this courageous deed, was killed in action.

"His heroic spirit of self sacrifice, maintained above and beyond the call of duty, was in keeping with the highest traditions of the United States Naval service. He gallantly gave up his life in the defense of his country."

At night on the broad Atlantic or Pacific, in the ward room as well as the mess room, old timers will tell future Navy sailors of the Negro boy at Guadalcanal way back in 1942, who set an example for every sailor in fearless devotion to duty when battle against our country's enemies, raged.

JUL 31 1943

For, today, Leonard Roy Harmon, mess attendant, first class, U.S.N., became a symbol of that irresistible courage—in the face of death—which made our country great.

Globe and Independent
Nashville. Tenn.

Ship Named For John Merricks Business Genius

JUL 9 1943

John Merrick, a Negro, was born in slavery in Sampson County. North Carolina, September 7, 1859 When only twelve years old, he went to work in a Chapel Hill, North Carolina, brickyard. He had no opportunity to go to school, because the support of his mother, brother and himself was his responsibility, but he somehow learned to read, write, and "figure" a little.

JUL 9 1943

What might be regarded as his particular monument is the North Carolina Mutual Life Insurance Company which he organized in 1898 as the North Carolina Mutual and Provident Association. On the 20th day of October in that year, this organization was formed for the purpose of providing sick and death benefits for its members; and John Merrick was elected its president. During the first year's operation, five of the organizers became discouraged and withdrew; whereupon the company was reorganized and John Merrick was elected president of the reorganized company. (He remained president until his death in 1919.)

With no capital, no training, and no experience, the company began doing business. Its "home office" was space in the office of the company's treasurer, Dr. A. M. Moore, rented for $2.00 a month. A home-made desk and a few chairs were its total equipment.

JUL 9 1943

The North Carolina Mutual's forty-four years' history is a long story—one of near-failure, discouragement, doubts, and fears in its early days. At the end of the first year's operation, its income was -393.95 and its assets $350.00.

Time marched on; and from such an humble beginning, the company founded by John Merrick was not only advanced to a position where it stands 28th among the first fifty life insurance companies of the nation from the standpoint of insurance in force and first in the accumulation of assets among Negro-managed companies, but it has lighted up the business horizon for Negroes in all avenues of business.

47j-1943

MAKING PLACES FOR THEMSELVES IN THE SERVICES

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

JUL 10 1943

Outstanding in scholastic activities and with excellent backgrounds, many Negro youths are fast proving themselves capable of taking over responsibilities which have heretofore been denied them in the armed services.

Above are pictured two such Americans.

Left, Bernard Whitfield Robinson, third year student at Harvard University Medical School, first race youth to be commissioned in the Naval Reserve. Mr. Robinson holds the rank of Ensign and will be called to active duty when he graduates in 1944.

At the right is Ensign Joseph C. Jenkins, the first active commissioned officer in the United States Coast Guard or United States Navy. He is a University of Michigan graduate.

GETS PHARMACIST'S RATING

Courier
Pittsburgh Pa.
July 19, 1943

Photo shows James Lewis Perry of New York City, typing out a medical report aboard the U. S. Coast Guard Cutter "Spencer." Although a mess attendant, Perry was "striking" for a rating of Pharmacist Mate, and so excellent was his work in aiding the wounded that the captain of his ship made him a Pharmacist Mate 3 c on the spot. Perry was a medical student in civilian life.

JUN 5 1943

Peoples Voice, New York City

DEMOCRACY IN ACTION

Nearlyy 10,000 persons jamming the street in front of the Harlem Recreation Center Sunday afternoon saw democracy in action when of which are white, perticipated in the program. Directed by former the quartet from the Coast Guard of Manhattan Beach, two members James Lewis and Martin Boughan. The group's accompanist is Frank Southernaire Homer Smith, pictured l to r are Smith, Thomas Lockard, Boyyle. Coast Guardsman Smith also directs a chorus of 40 voices, only 3 of whom are Negro, at Manhattan Beach. Cecil Layne Photo.

JUN 5 1943

47

Citizens Are Asked To Protest Planned WAVES Segregation

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

Aug. 5

JUL 31 1943

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 29—Since the Alpha Kappa Alpha legislative representative, Thomasina Johnson, learned through reliable sources on July 10 that the plan to admit colored women to the auxiliaries of the Navy as WAVES had been approved, but that the announcement of it had been withheld until they could find a school at which Negro women could be trained, and further, that the plan did not provide for Negro women officers, the National Non-Partisan Council of A.K.A. has issued a bulletin asking that every colored citizen in the United States take certain steps to change the situation.

The A.K.A.'s have taken the following position:

1. We want Negro women admitted to the auxiliaries of the Navy on the same basis as other women—in training, work, chance for advancement. (At present all American women citizens are permitted in these services except Negroes.)

2. We are tired of "steps in the right direction." We want simply to have what every other American woman citizen has already.

3. We want no compromises!

WHAT YOU CAN DO

With the help and co-operation of every man and woman, there is a chance to gain the first victory on the home front. First, Negro colleges should not ask for segregated units of WAVES to be trained at their school.

Secondly, it is necessary to get thousands of telegrams and letters to President Roosevelt and Secretary Knox saying simply that you are opposed to any plan that is different in any way to that now in effect for any other American woman citizen.

Thirdly, ask everyone you know to send a letter or a telegram.

Fourth, your congressmen and senators are now at home. Call them up and ask them to write or telegraph Secretary Knox, voicing his protest.

WE MUST NOT LOSE THIS

BATTLE FOR DEMOCRACY

FREIGHTER NAMED FOR NOTED NEGRO

Raleigh, N. C. News & Observer
August 26, 1943

Liberty Ship To Bear Name of Robert L. Vann, Native of Hertford County

Ahoskie, Aug. 25. — A United States Liberty ship, which will be launched from the yards of the New England Shipbuilding Corporation in South Portland, Me., either in late September or early October, will bear the name "The Robert L. Vann," in honor of a Hertford County Negro who was born near Ahoskie and lived the first 16 years of his life in the county.

A driving force in the Negro community life of Pittsburgh, where he established after securing his law degree from the University of Pittsburgh in 1909, Vann became owner and editor of the Pittsburgh Courier, America's largest weekly publication with a circulation of 127,010, and served as special assistant to the Attorney General of the United States from 1933 to 1936 when he gave up law practice to devote his full time to the editorship of his paper.

Vann received his early schooling from the Water Training School, now the C. S. Brown High School, in Winton and then went to Richmond, Va., where he was graduated in 1903. He received his bachelor of arts degree from the University of Pittsburgh in 1906.

Vann was born on what is known as the "Old Dr. Mitchell farm" just outside of Ahoskie.

Although Vann was born just outside Ahoskie, he was taken to Harrellsville, also in Hertford County, as a very young boy, where his mother for awhile was a domestic in the employ of the late Mr. and Mrs. John O. Askew.

Of them he once said in part, "The Askew estate is still hallowed ground to me and Mrs. Molly Askew is still the finest specimen of womanhood I ever knew. It was she who shaped my early education and I attribute to her whatever foundation was laid for me when I was unable to choose my own course of conduct."

"From a painfully obscure beginning, its darkness blacker by long hours of hard work and unhappy childhood, Robert Lee Vann rose to the heights in prestige and importance . . . and his death marks the retirement of a valuable champion of the Negro race," said the Hertford County Herald in October, 1940, at the time of his death.

Awaiting Call To Duty

Age
New York, N. Y.

REGINALD BRANDON, 21, of Washington, D. C., who recently completed the 8-months course in radio operation and maintenance at Gallup's Island (Mass.) Radio Training School of the Maritime Commission. He is the first Negro graduate of this school and is living with his aunt, Mrs. L. J. Williams, of 1241 [illegible] street, N. E., Washington, D. C., while awaiting call to active duty. Upon assignment, he will have the rank of an ensign.

JUN 1943

His Music Builds Morale Of Leathernecks

CAMP LEJEUNE, N. C.—(SNS)—Private first class Walker [illegible], [illegible] organist of the Christian Church in Raleigh and a demonstrator for the Hammond Organ Company, who is now the post organist for the Marine base here. In addition to being organist for the Montford Point chapel, he is also organist for several of the chapels where white enlistees worship. — (OWI Photo by Roger Smith.)

JUN 12 1943

SEGREGATED WAVES

New York Age New York, N. Y.

THE NATIONAL Non-Partisan Council on Public Affairs of the Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority has issued an urgent appeal to the public to join in its new fight against the Navy's plan for admitting Negro girls to the WAVES on a segregated basis. The sorority has been campaigning for almost a year to secure the admission of Negro women to the navy auxiliary services.

About six weeks ago it was learned that Navy officials had finally approved a plan whereby Negroes could enlist in the WAVES. But, like every other action taken by the navy in reagard to Negroes, the plan provided for the rigid segregation which has so long been a navy tradition in this country.

It is reported, in fact, that announcement of the plan has been withheld only because as yet no school had been found at which the Negro WAVES could be trained.

The absurdity of the navy department's alleged thinking in insisting on separation of the races even though it is to be presumed that the training courses are to be the same hardly needs new comment here. Adequate comment, which will apply quite effectively, has been made in regard to the navy's "walking on eggs" attitude about elevating Negro men above the messman rank.

But we feel we can't be too emphatic in urging every one of our readers to jump wholeheartedly into the AKA campaign aimed at stopping the plan before steps are taken to put into action.

Send a letter, telegram, or card immediately to President Roosevelt and Navy Secretary Frank Knox, stating your emphatic opposition to any plan for a Jim Crow section of the WAVES. Get all your friends to do the same. Get in touch with your Senators and your Congressmen (they're back home now, Congress has adjourned until September 14) and let them know in no uncertain terms that you're sick and tired of mealy-mouthed compromise with race hatred and that you want them to join in your protest to Secretary Knox and FDR.

We're fighting for democracy now, we are told. Let's make it a real all-out fight.

JUL 31 1943

Mother of Naval Hero Sponsors U.S.N. Destroyer

A new record in destroyer escort production was established this week when the USS Harmon was delivered to the Navy by the Fore River Plant of the Bethlehem Steel Company, Quincy, Mass., only 92 days after the vessel's keel was laid.

The USS Harmon is named in honor of the late Leonard Roy Harmon, mess attendant, first class, U.S.N., who posthumously was awarded the Navy Cross for "extraordinary heroism" while serving aboard the USS San Francisco. He lost his life in action against enemy Japanese forces in the Battle of Guadalcanal. This action was fought November 12 and 13, 1942.

The Fore River Plant of the Bethlehem Steel Company broke its own record for destroyer escort construction in delivering the USS Harmon. On August 15, 1943, this yard completed a destroyer escort in 115 days.

The keel of the USS Harmon was laid May 31, 1943. Harmon's mother, Mrs. Naunita Harmon Carroll, Cuero, Texas, sponsored the vessel at the time of its launching July 25.

Harmon, who was 26, was killed when he deliberately exposed himself to hostile gunfire to protect a shipmate. Throughout the engagement, with persistent disregard for his own personal safety, he had rendered invaluable assistance in caring for the wounded and evacuating them to dressing stations aboard his ship.

471-1943

Tribune
Philadelphia, Pa.

Stricken Removed Sick On Carrier

Feb. 13, 1943

WASHINGTON—A 20-year-old Negro mess attendant, who unhesitatingly entered the most dangerous section of the stricken aircraft carrier U. S. S. Lexington, during the Battle of the Coral Sea, and assisted in removing injured personnel trapped below decks, has been awarded the Navy and Marine Corps Medal, the Navy Department announced this week.

The heroic young mess attendant, one of five enlisted men similarly honored from the Lexington's crew, is Elvin Bell, an orphan who formerly resided with his aunt, Miss Mari Lofton, at 139-08 114th Avenue, Jamaica, N. Y. He has been promoted from mess attendant ,third class, to mess attendant, second class.

Bell, who attended Jamaica High School for one and a half years and later served in the Civilian Conservation Corps, applied for enlistment in the Navy on July 18, 1941, and reported for active duty immediately.

Feb. 13, 1943

His citation reads:

"For distinguished heroism while serving aboard the U.S.S. Lexington during the battle of the Coral Sea on May 8, 1942. Voluntarily joining a repair party fighting fire in an area frequented by violent explodings of gasoline vapor and ammunition, Bell, although emerging in an exhausted condition unhesitatingly entered the most dangerous section of the stricken carrier and assisted in removing injured personnel who had been trapped below decks. His courageous initiative and utter disregard for his own safety were in keeping with the highest tradition of the United States Naval Service."

Eyewitness Account

An eyewitness account of such a rescue was cabled to this country by Stanley Johnston, a war correspondent aboard the stricken carrier, soon after the loss of the U.S.S. Lexington was announced. Johnson's account declared:

"It was Commander Mort Seligman's task to direct the rescue. I heard him call on the men around him: 'There are three men in frame So-and-So— That's below the fire. To reach them, one of you must go around the firse and through passage X.'

"A young colored mass attendant stepped forward. I could not see his face for he was wearing a smoke helmet. He saluted and quietly said: 'I'll go, Sir.'

473

2-13-43

" 'Sure you know how to reach them?' the Commander asked.

I Know The Way

" 'Yes, Sir. I know the way.'

" 'Do you realize that you might never make it, might never come back?'

" 'Yes, Sir. I do. But I would like to try just the same.'

"Right then. On your way. And good luck to you. We'll be waiting for you.'

"He went. Through long passageways and down several flights of steel steps into the vast hull. But he was sure of his way. This fine colored lad did come back. And what's more he brought the three men with him."

Age-Herald
Birmingham, Ala.

FIRST WARSHIP IS NAMED FOR NEGRO

BOSTON, July 21—(AP)—The first United States warship named in honor of a Negro, the destroyer escort Harmon, will be launched next Sunday, July 25, at the Fore River yard of the Bethlehem Steel Company, Quincy.

Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox assigned the name to honor the late Roy Harmon, mess attendant, first class, USN, who was awarded the Navy Cross posthumously for "extraordinary heroism" while serving aboard the U. S. S. San Francisco.

Harmon was 26 years old and the son of Mrs. Naunita Harmon Carroll, of Cuero, Tex., who will sponsor the new vessel. He was killed in action against Japanese forces in the Battle of Guadalcanal, Nov. 12 and 13. 1942.

474

JUL 22 1943

Negroes Will Take Part In Ship Launching Today

Raleigh, N. C., News & Observer
July 11, 1943

Merrick, Born in Slavery and Reared in Poverty, Became Financier

By JANE HALL.

John Merrick—born in slavery and reared in poverty—will be honored when the first North Carolina-built Liberty ship to be named for a Negro, "The John Merrick", is launched at Wilmington this afternoon.

Merrick was a founder of the North Carolina Mutual Life Insurance Company in Durham, now the world's largest business run by and for Negroes.

Governor Broughton will speak at the launching, which will be held at 5 o'clock. C. C. Spaulding of Durham, president of the N. C. Mutual Life Insurance Company and one of its founders, will introduce the Governor. Sponsor of the ship is Merrick's youngest child, Mrs. Martha Merrick Donnell of Durham. The matrons of honor will be two of Merrick's grandchildren.

IN MERRICK.

The late Dr. A. M. Moore, who was treasurer of the company, joined with Merrick and Spaulding in founding the company.

Once the Mutual Life Insurance Company was organized and started on its career, the restless genius of Merrick and his associates drove him to organizing other companies as the need arose.

Companies that grew out of the Mutual Life Insurance Company are the Bankers' Fire Insurance Company, the only one of its kind in the world operated by American Negroes; the Mechanics and Farmers Bank; the Mutual Building and Loan Association; and the Southern Fidelity Bonding Company, the only bonding company in the world operated by Negroes.

Other businesses touched and aided by Merrick's extraordinary organizing ability are the Royal Knights of King David, a fraternal order; the Bull City Drug Company; the Merrick-Moore-Spaulding Real Estate Company, and the Durham Textile Mill.

Native of Sampson.

Merrick was born in Sampson County in slavery on September 7, 1859. When he was 12 years old, he went to work in the Chapel Hill brickyard and worked there for six years.

Somehow or other he picked up a little reading, writing, and figuring—and this was a feat of some magnitude, for the boy was so busy trying to support his mother and brother that he had little time to take advantage of the scant opportunities the times afforded.

Worked in Raleigh.

At the end of his employment in Chapel Hill, Merrick loaded the family belongings on a steer cart and moved the family to Raleigh. Shaw University was under construction then, and he obtained employment as a hod-carrier and brick mason. Later he worked as a bootblack in a barber shop and managed to pick up the technique of barbering.

To Durham.

A fellow barber decided to open a shop in Durham and offered Merrick the opportunity to go with him; so, in 1880 Merrick left Raleigh and moved to Durham. He made his home in Durham until his death in 1919.

The barber shop in Durham prospered and in six months Merrick bought a half interest in the five-chair shop. A short while later he became sole owner of the shop, and he finally expanded the business into a five-shop chain. About this time, Merrick made his first venture in real estate—the purchase of a three-room house.

As a barber shop proprietor, Merrick became the friend of the Duke, Watts, Carr, and Fuller families of Durham. To Washington Duke, founder of the Duke fortune, he owed much for "Wash" Duke gave him and his associates sound advice and help during the infancy of the North Carolina Mutual Life Insurance Company.

Merrick organized the N. C. Mutual Life Insurance Company on October 20, 1898. The company first bore the name of the N. C. Mutual and Provident Association. The organization was formed for the purpose of providing sick and death benefits, and Merrick was elected president.

During the first year of operation, five of the organizers became discouraged and withdrew, and the company was reorganized under its present name, and Merrick was elected president of this company also. He remained president until his death.

The company began doing business with no capital, no training, and no experience. Income from the first year's operation amounted to $393.95, and assets totaled $350.

Growth.

In the 45 years of its existence, the company has grown from humble beginnings to an institution that now stands 28th among the first 50 life insurance companies in America from the standpoint of insurance in force, and first in accumulation of assets among Negro-managed companies.

Chicago Defender
Chicago, Illinois

Warship Named For Navy Hero

MAY 29 1943

WASHINGTON. — For the first time in the history of the United States, a warship will be named for a Negro.

Secretary Frank Knox, on Monday, gave official sanction to assignment of the name "U. S. S. Harmon, to a destroyer-escort vessel, one of the newest types of battleships designed especially to combat submarine warfare. The colored sailor for whom it is named was Leonard Roy Harmon, who lost his life in the South Pacific.

Harmon who was 26 and the son of Mrs. Naunita Harmon Carroll, of Cuero, Texas, was killed during action against enemy Japanese forces in the battle of Guadalcanal, November 12 and 13, 1942. Throughout the engagement he assisted in caring for the wounded and evacuating them to dressing stations aboard the ship, and, according to the citation accompanying the Navy Cross award, displayed "unusual loyalty in behalf of the injured Executive Officer."

He died when he deliberately exposed himself to hostile gun fire to protect his shipmates.

Harmon was mess attendant, first class. He was awarded the Navy Cross posthumously for "Extraordinary Heroism" while serving aboard the USS San Francisco.

MAY 29 1943

474

Fitzgerald, Ga., Herald
July 2, 1943

Navy Wants Negro Youths

17 YEAR OLD NEGRO BOYS ARE BEING RECRUITED FOR NAVY SERVICE

Negro youths between seventeen and eighteen years old are being recruited as stewards in the navy, according to B. W. Twitty, recruiting officer, who will be in Fitzgerald Saturday for the purpose of recruiting any negro youth who cares to join.

According to Mr. Twitty, he will be stationed at the Twitty Motor Company, at the corner of Main and Central where full information can be secured.

The Navy is now offering unusual opportunities to the negro youths. The service outlined by Mr. Twitty is most excellent for them.

474

Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Virginia

Vessel Will Displace Ten Thousand Tons

APR 24 1943

Kaiser Workers Will Take Part In Launching

APR 24 1943

RICHMOND, Calif. — The SS George Washington Carver, second Liberty ship to be named for an outstanding Negro American, was under construction this week in a West Coast shipyard, following the laying of the keel of the 10,000 ton vessel here on April 12.

Assigned the name of the world famous scientist by the Maritime Commission a short time after Dr. Carver died at Tuskegee Institute, Ala., on January 5, 1943, the Liberty Ship will be the sixtieth vessel built in the Richmond Shipyard No. 1 of the Permanente Metals Corporation.

The launching of the SS George Washington Carver next month will mark the second such ceremony participated in by the thousands of Negro shipyard workers in the four Kaiser Company yards in Richmond.

WON HONOR

---

zation and placement of person nel which acted to exclude Negroe from particular branches of th armed forces either on land, a sea or in the air; the extent t which advancement of Negroes i the ranks of commissioned offi cers has been limited; the exten to which the armed services ar failing to utilize the full profes sional and technical skills of Ne groes; and the relation of th system of segregated units to th effective utilization and appropri ate placement of persons on th basis of individual competency and merit.

The resolution empowers this special sub-committee to carry on hearings, aided by a subpoena power, throughout the 78th Congress whether it be in session or

---

Colored Coast Guard Crew Scores Hit on Nazi U Boat

APR 2 4 1943

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

New York, Norfolk, Detroit Lads' Fire Was Accurate, According to Official Reports

APR 2 4 1943 WASHINGTON.

A crew of eleven colored enlisted men of the United States Coast Guard participated in the attack on the German submarine which was rammed and sunk by the cutter Campbell.

Reports received at Coast Guard headquarters reveal that this gun crew fired several rounds at the U-boat and scored telling hits which aided in the destruction of the submarine.

The crew was in charge of Louis C. Etheridge, Jr., Officers' Steward, 1st class, of 1256 N. Fifty-sixth Street, Philadelphia.

Accounts for Six U. Boats

The Campbell, which had depth-bombed five German subs, accounted for its sixth victim in a fierce 12-hour running fight in the North Atlantic. The cutter was protecting a United Nations convoy.

The U-boat was first attacked by shell fire, then it was rammed. Officers of the cutter say that the big sub shuddered from the impact and then slowly sank, stern first. The collision damaged the Campbell. She had a 2-foot rip in her side below the water line and was partially flooded.

Cutter Remains Afloat

APR 2 4 1943

She remained afloat and safe, however, and was later towed to an Eastern port for repairs.

Commander James H. Hirshfield was the only man aboard the cutter who was wounded. He was hit by a piece of flying metal but remained actively in command.

When King George and Queen Elizabeth of England visited the U.S. in 1939, making a trip from Fort Monmouth, N.J., to New York City on a destroyer, the Campbell served as an escort ship.

Other members of the crew are:

Raymond L. Knott, officers' steward, 2nd class, 491 Dunbar Street, S.W., Atlanta;

Lester E. Carr, mess attendant, 1st class, 3634 S. State Street, Chicago;

Johnnie R. Elliott, mess attendant, 1st class, 815 Layton Avenue, Monroe, La.;

Arthur F. Galloway, mess attendant, 1st class, 20 Morningside Avenue, New York, N.Y.;

Cleveland Powell, mess attendant, 1st class, 915 Gaiennie Street, New Orleans;

James W. Spence, mess attendant, 1st class, 593 Church Street, Norfolk, Va.;

Coy W. Allen, mess attendant, 2nd class, 1622 North West First Street, Miami, Fla.;

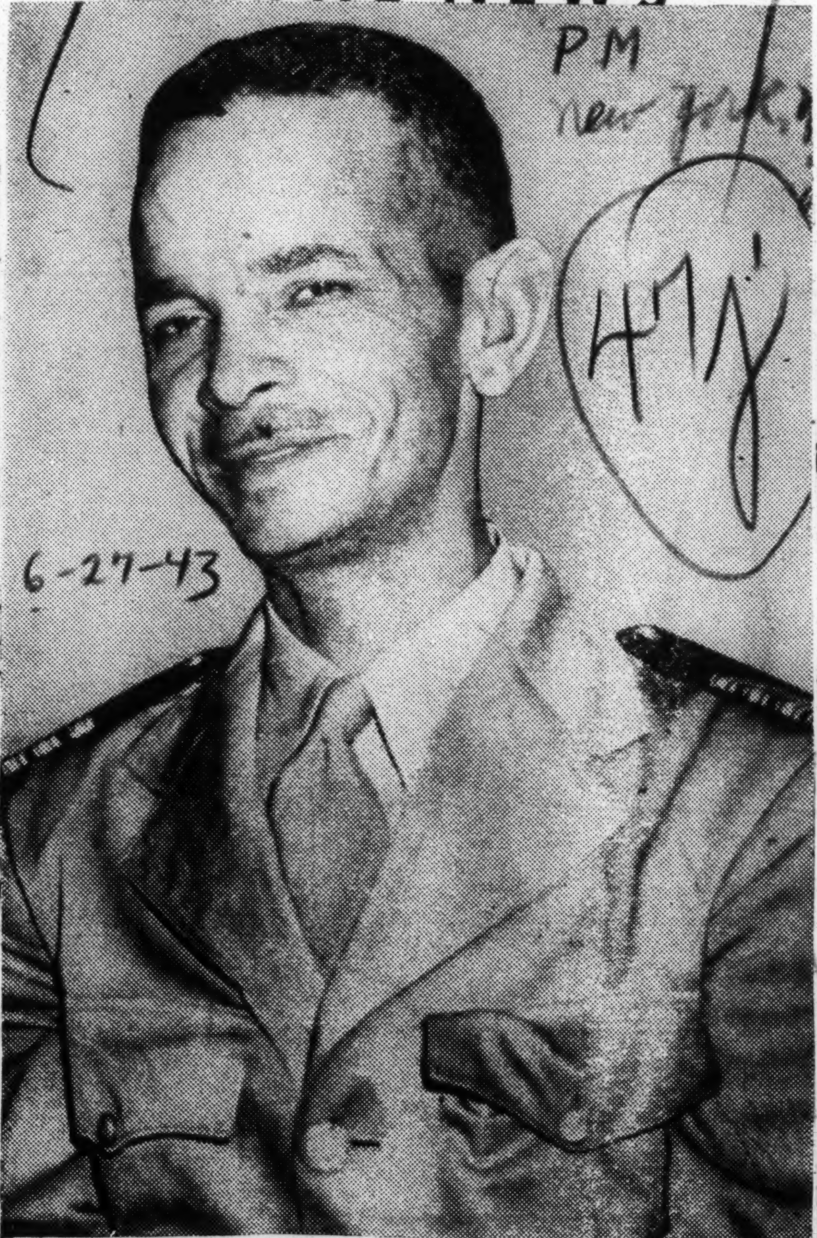
William F. Fitzpatrick, mess attendant, 2nd class 642 Livingstone Street, Detroit;

Earl W. Phillips, mess attendant, 2nd class, 165 North West Sixth Court, Miami, Fla.;

Willie J. Samuel, mess attendant, 2nd class, 211 N. West Fifth Terrace, Miami, Fla.

PEOPLE IN THE NEWS

PM
New York



6-27-43

Captain Adrian Richardson, Negro skipper of the Liberty ship Frederick Douglass, poses in his U. S. Maritime Service uniform a few days after the commissioning of his ship in Baltimore. Richardson, who at 17 was second mate on a schooner, has been serving with the U. S. Army Transport Service. He is the second Negro captain to be given a post in the U. S. Merchant Marine (Capt. Hugh Mulzac, the first, was given command of the Booker T. Washington last year).

Capt. Mulzac Visits 24 Army Camps In N. Africa After Bringing In Supplies

Chicago Defender
Chicago, Illinois

MAY 1 5 1943

NEW YORK—Capt. Hugh Mulzac, America's only Negro ship's captain, has done it again.

Captain Mulzac, skipper of the new Liberty ship Booker T. Washington, brought his vessel into an Eastern port last week after a 15,000 mile voyage, "delivering the goods" to our troops and Allies in Britain and the Mediterranean.

His first public appearance was made at the offices of the Negro Freedom Rally, where both he and all the members of his crew, Negro and white, endorsed the big Madison Square Garden meeting which is scheduled for June 7.

Describing these incidents of the voyage which war-time regulations permit, Capt. Mulzac told reporters that he had visited 24 camps of American soldiers in North Africa, had been the guest of numerous American officers and had talked with hundreds of Negro troops.

Working Hard

The Negro boys he talked with, Capt. Mulzac told reporters, are healthy, working hard, preparing for combat and in a hurry to "get the job done."

The reporters fired questions at Capt. Mulzac on the burning issue of discrimination. They wanted to know if the Negro troops were segregated, or if when on combat duty they were fighting alongside white troops.

MAY 1 5 1943

Before Capt. Mulzac answered, Ferdinand C. Smith, national secretary of the CIO National Maritime Union intervened. "I realize, of course, that the question is well meant and very pertinent to the interview," said Smith, "but we should not ask Capt. Mulzac to answer. Everybody knows that Negro troops are discriminated against."

Welcome By British

The focus of the interview was shifted to a discussion of the reception accorded the captain and his crew in the British ports, which the Booker T. Washington made before going to the Mediterranean.

"I think the people of England realize today that they are fighting a war for democracy and not for just a few individuals," said the captain. "They are getting down to it. A change is definitely being made in England with the feeling that after this war, democracy must rule."

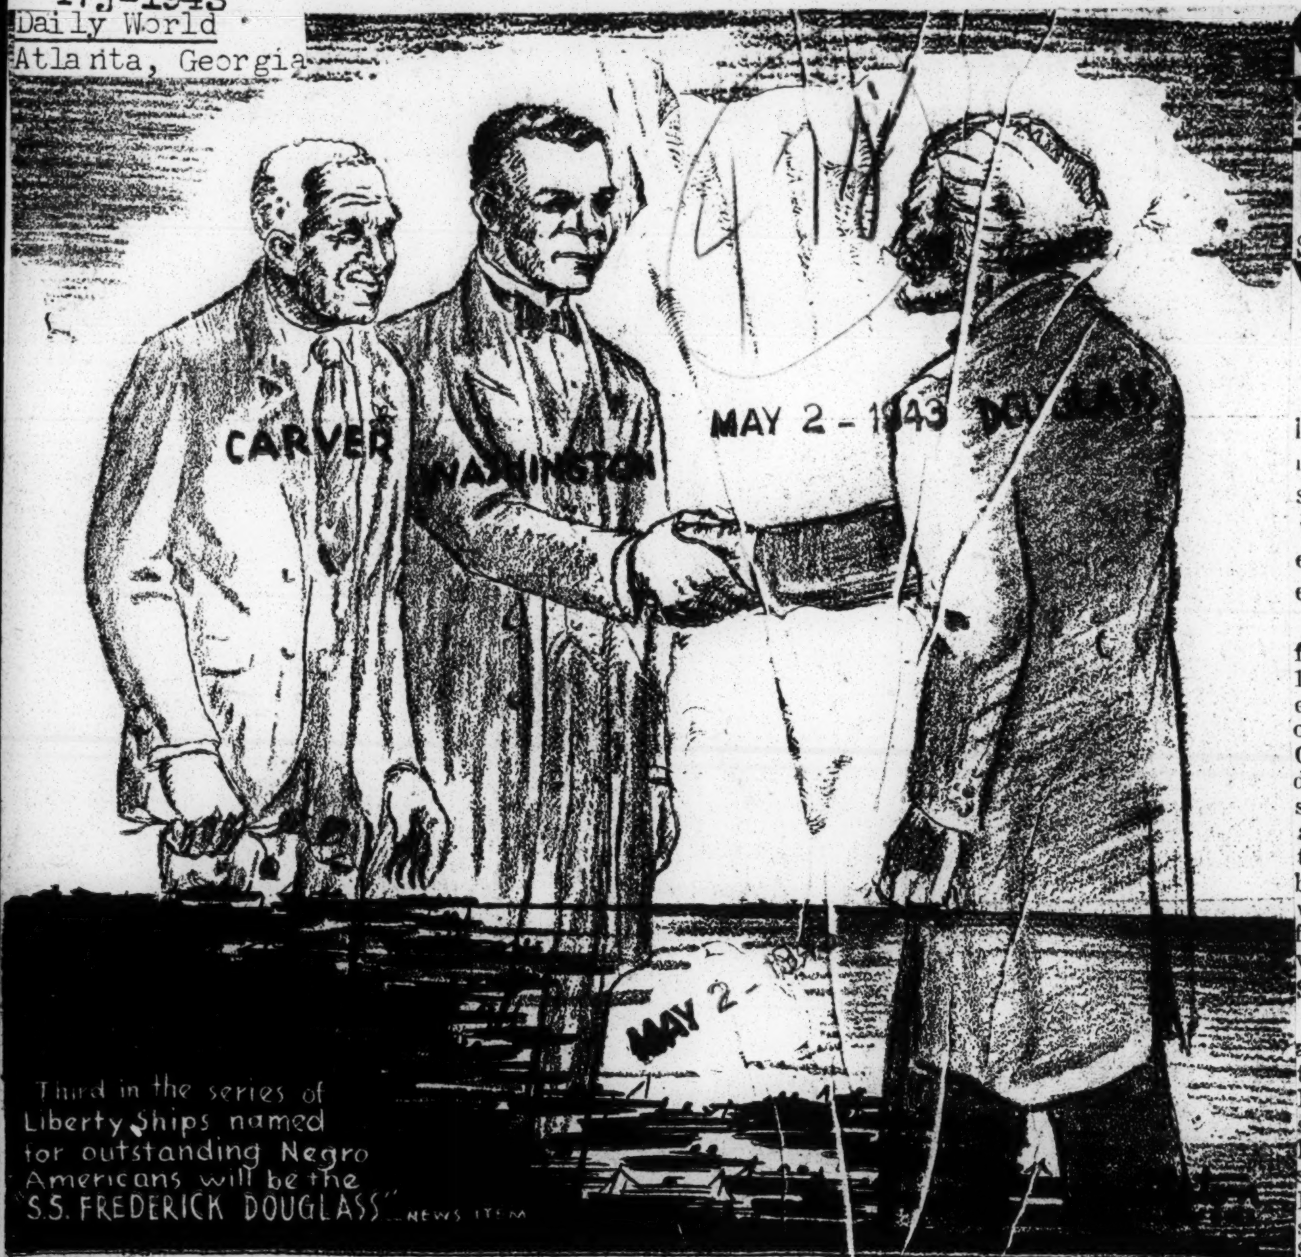
The skipper described a visit to his ship by the Lord Mayor of one port and another by five Czechoslovakian generals who had heard of the Booker T. Washington and its famous captain.

He said that the British press welcomed the arrival of his ship with enthusiastic page one stories, and that they were all, even the Tory press, pressing for a second front in Europe now.

At the conclusion of the interview, the captain was asked if he had some message to give the people.

"I am always glad to be back," said Capt. Mulzac. "Our people should not be disheartened because they have privations. We don't really know what it is yet. We should do our best to back with every ounce of energy we have the people who are carrying on the war at the fronts."

47j-1943
Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia



Third in the series of Liberty Ships named for outstanding Negro Americans will be the "S.S. FREDERICK DOUGLASS" NEWS ITEM

"DEMOCRACY IN ACTION" NO. III

Peoples Voice
New York, N. Y.

Sergeant Rating For Four Marines

CAMP LEJEUNE, N. C.—Four Negro Marines have been promoted to sergeants in the Marine Corp at Montford Point, Camp Lejeune, N. C., Col. Samuel A. Woods, Jr., commander of the 51st Composite Defense Battalion, announced last week.

The first two Negroes to receive this ranking were Corporal Edson E. Blackman, Jr., of Charlotte, N. C., and Corporal Charles F. Anderson of Birmingham, Ala. Both are in the Headquarters Company and were among the first 1,200 Negro enlistees in the Marines.

Corporal Gilbert H. Johnson, and Corporal John T. Pridgen of the Recruit Depot Battalion were promoted to the rank of sergeant. Sergeant Johnson came to the Marines after serving a term as a messman in the U. S. Navy. Sergeant Pridgen had served a term of enlistment in the Army.

MAY 29 1943

Lt. Col. T. A. Holdal praised them for exceptional ability, and stated that they would be placed in charge of "boot" training—the seven weeks' training program given recruits.

Age-Herald
Birmingham, Ala.

NEW LIBERTY SHIP NAMED FOR NEGRO

JUL 13 1943

WILMINGTON, N. C., July 11—(AP)—The John Merrick, a Liberty freighter named for a North Carolina Negro business leader who was born in slavery, slid down the ways of the North Carolina Shipbuilding Company here Sunday.

Merrick, who died in 1919, founded the North Carolina Mutual Life Insurance Company, of Durham, which claims to be the largest insurance company in the world run by and for members of his race.

Gov. J. M. Broughton, in an address, called Merrick's career an example of opportunity in a democracy, and referred to amicable relations which he said had long existed in North Carolina between the white and Negro races.

SHIP'S STEWARD PASSED THE AMMUNITION

Argus
St. Louis, Missouri

Vet Of Eight Years In Navy Has Been In Many Sea Battles

George Upton Sisson returned home lsat week on a leave after being away in the service since February 1936. His mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. John Sisson of 1704 Papin street were happy to welcome their son who entered the service November 5, 1935 and who has had many exciting experiences while traveling thousands of miles on the seas and in encounters in the war zones.

March 26, 1943

The steward, who graduated from Vashon High School in 1934 and attended Stowe Teachers College, and was a member of the Berea Pesbyterian Church Choir, wore several emblems of distinction—the victory medal for service in the navy since 1939 and service at Pearl Harbor; the American theatre of war bar, and for service in the southwest Pacific battle zone; and four stars earned in engagements with the Japanese.

SANK FIRST JAP SUB

His ship was the first to sink a Jap sub and was in action continuously from Dec. at Pearl Harbor until Nov. 1942 when sunk by the enemy. Having at least eight subs to her credit, she was known as "Dead Ready" Benham. Other actions in which she engaged was in the Coral Seas, at Guadalcanal, Santa Cruz Island. The men of the Benham picked up survivors of the Airplane Carrier Yorktown and tried to tow the listing ship in but she sank. They also rescued survivors from the U.S.S. Hammond and made a record run carrying survivors to a hospital base arriving two days ahead of schedule. The most thrilling encounters of this ''veteran" was the Midway Battle in which he said the Americans got their first chance to pay the Japs back for their treachery at Pearl Harbor. He was on the U.S.S. Benham in the American fleet searching for the Mikado's navy. They engaged in a dog fight with the large Jap armada. He was in an ammunition station when the heavy firing started. His ship was struck but more than evened scores by bringing down at least ten planes.

PULLED FROM SEA

Another engagement off the Solomon Islands later saw the crew of the Benham fight off a Jap battle fleet, sinking at least three ships before the Benham itself, was struck by torpedoes and disabled and sunk. Steward Sisson was in the water about half an hour, swimming, before he was picked up.

Officer's Steward Sisson has been on ships in several other encounters, all of which have been successful for the Americans.

Chasing the Japs from the Solomon Islands was another exciting adventure, while his ship's escape from the Pearl Harbor sneak raid was also among his war experience. His ship was due to put in Pearl Harbor the day of the Japs' attack, but received notice of the attack in time.

In Hawaii there is no discrimination or segregation and a man is measured from his shoulders up and not by his race. Steward Sisson said he studied at the Honolulu Academy of Music and sang in recitals all over the Island. He also found Australia very democratic. He heard Marion Anderson sing in Honolulu and dined with her.

Advises Youth

In an article written for the ship paper, Steward Sisson said "Life today is worth living because we have great things for which to fight and for which to die, if need be. Get into the struggles men are waging, and fight for our Americen ideals and institutions. There are great causes to fight for today. There are enemies to be repulsed. There are great principles to be preserved. Get into the battle!'

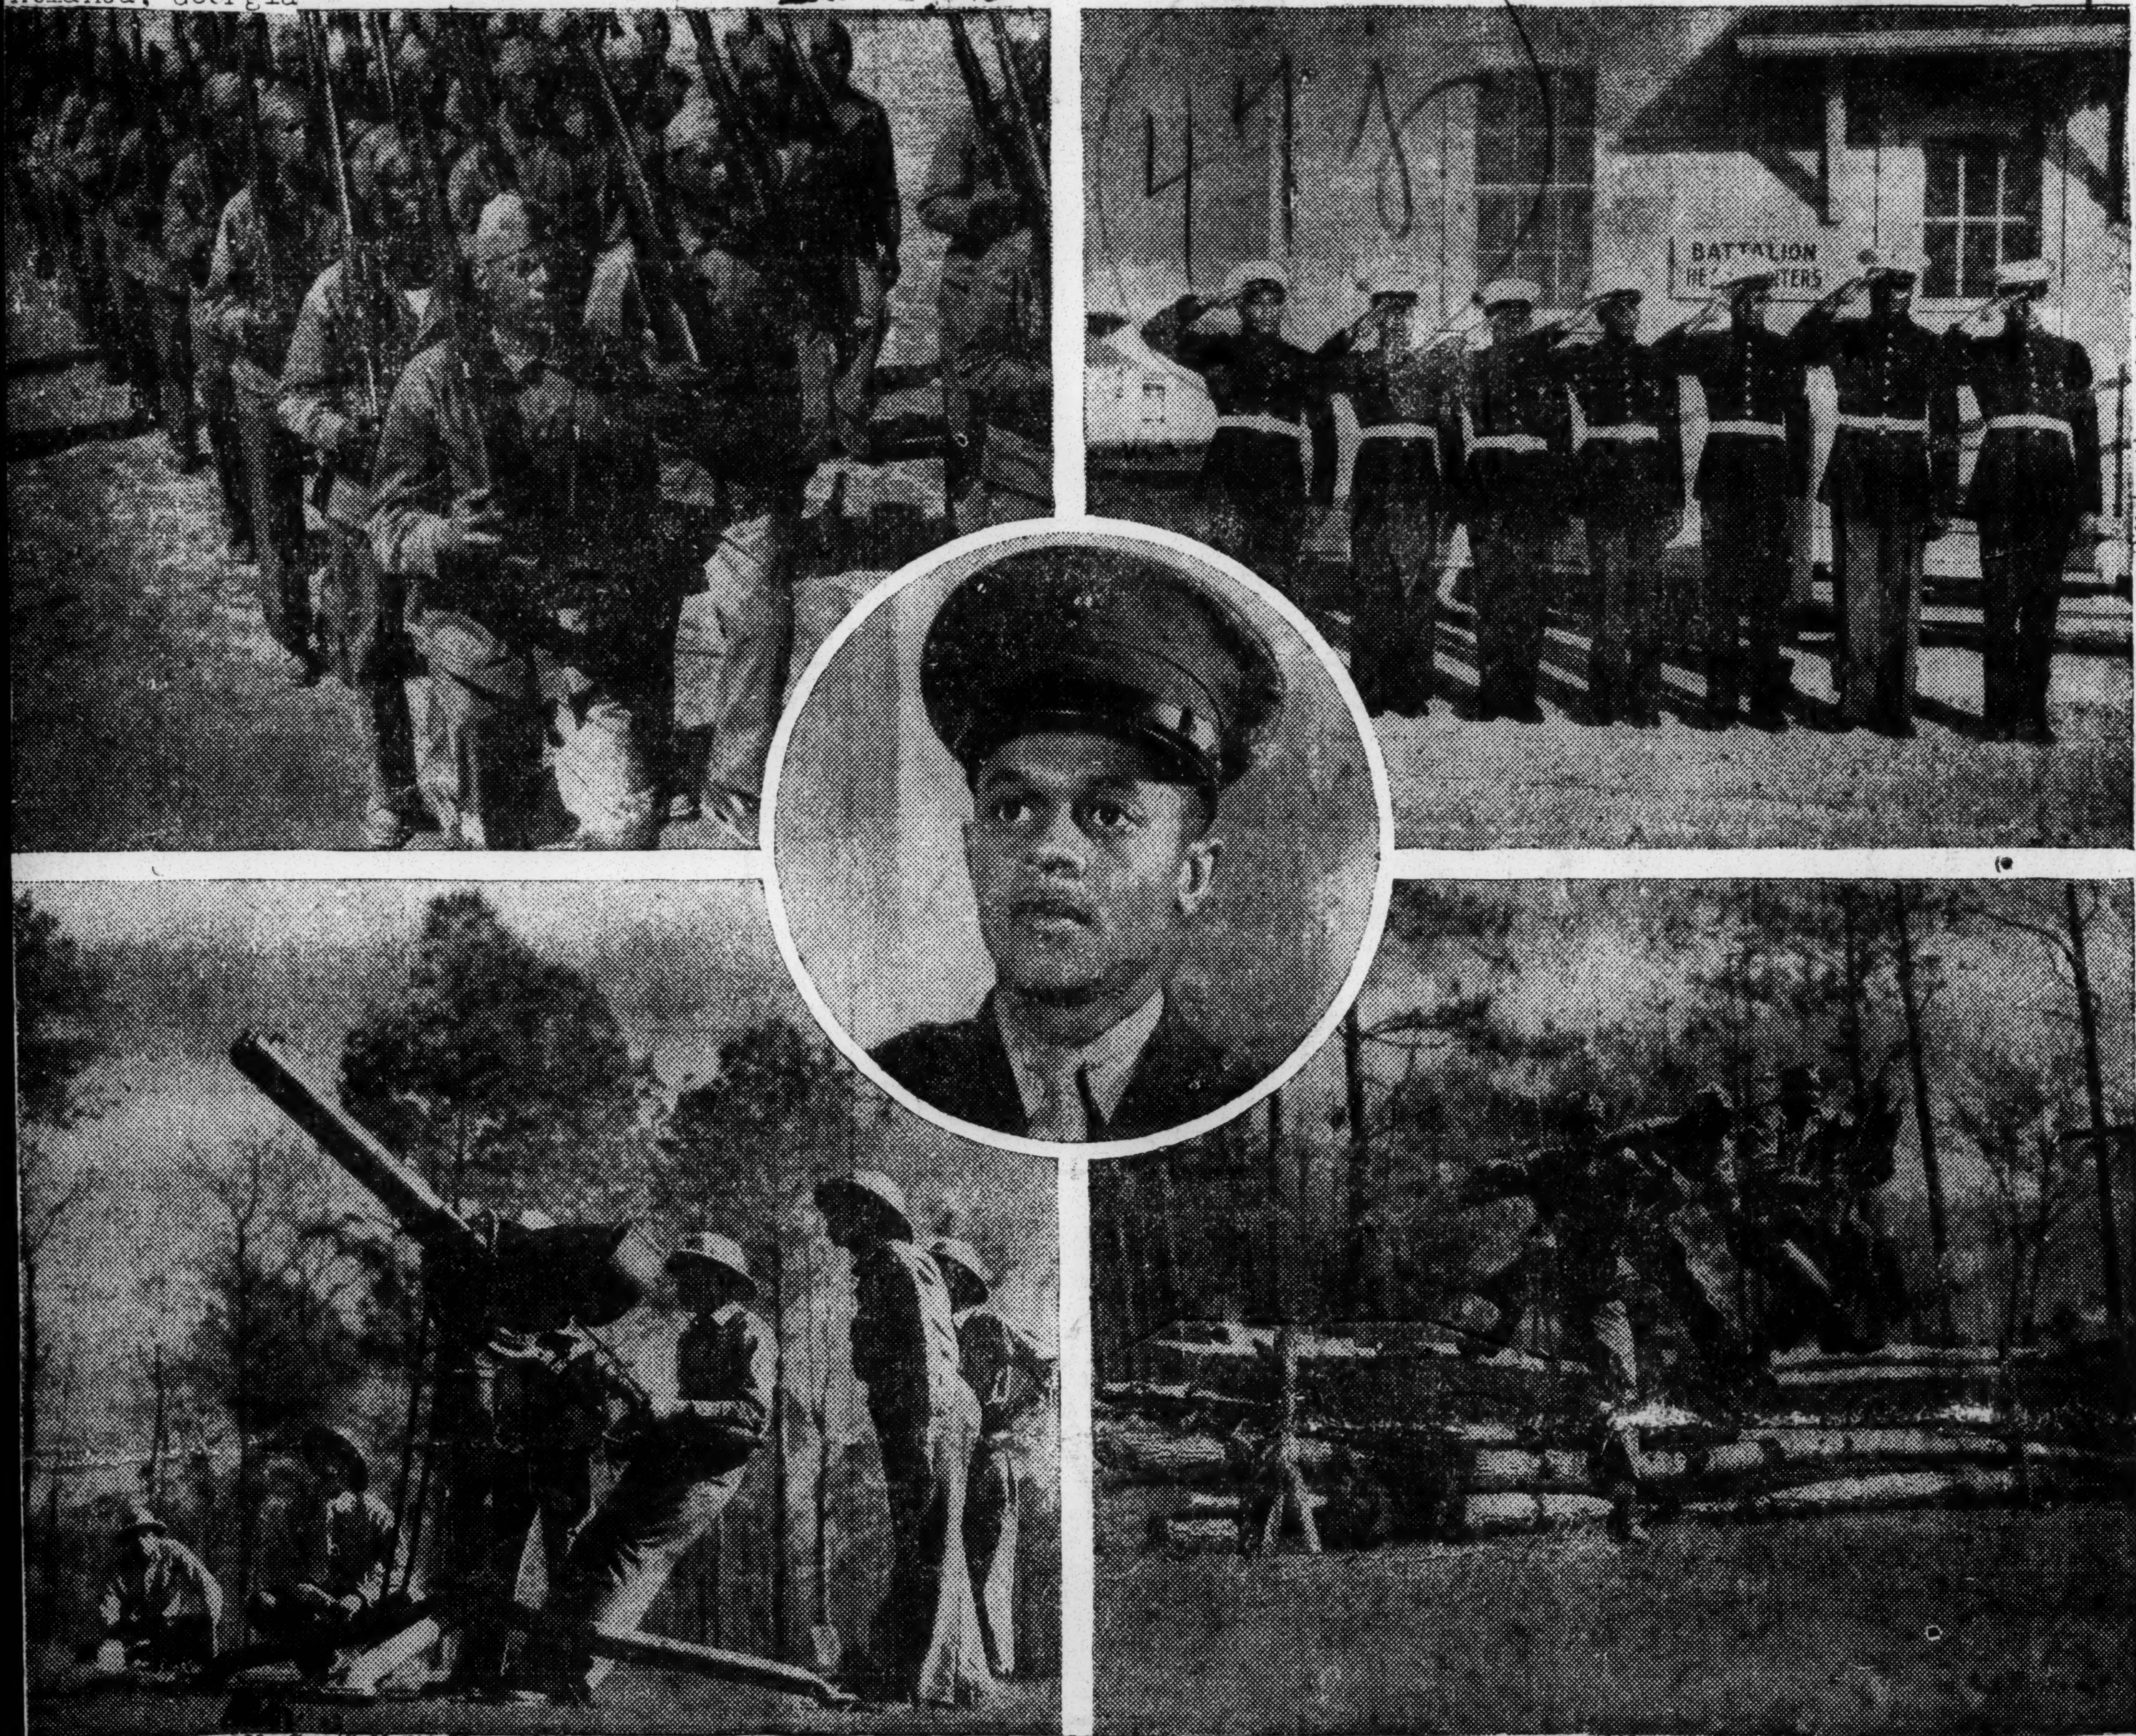
In an interview he further stated: "A new day is dawning for the Negro race. Therefore I implore that boys and girls refrain from procrastinating. In order to meet the demands of the new order they must not waste their time while in school. Also the home will play the greatest role in this great drama of life. From my observation I have concluded that the destiny of any individual or group of individuals depend entirely upon them. Be a man! And people will respect you as such, regardless of race. or creed. You young men of St. Louis, who persist in using knives, guns, etc., disgracing our race as a whole, please stop and consider the pros and cons. If you must fight, wait until you've joined the army, thereby releasing your surplus energy in a more directed constructive way by annihilating people who have upset the entire system of living. I see my race as an archeologist observes a vast, unexplored territory whose natural resources are unlimited. I sincerely believe that after the war the nation will draw much needed material from this source."

Negro Youths Prepare To Live Up To Glorious Marine Tradition

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

MAY 22 1943

MAY 22 1943



NEW RIVER, N. C.—(S N S)—Wearing the uniform of the United States Marine Corps for the first time in the history of this 167-year old branch of the armed services. Negro Marines are now undergoing training at Montford Point, a section of the 200-square-mile Marine Base, Camp Lejeune, at New River, N. C. One unit of Negro Marine graduates has already been assigned to overseas duty and new recruits are arriving at Camp Lejeune at the rate of 40 a day. The fi[illegible]200 volunteers began training on September 1, 1942. Pvt. Howard P. Perry, first Negro to volunteer for Marine Corps service, is shown in the center. At top left, "boots" of three-day enlistment are shown learning to drill, while at top right, Sgts. Edson Blackman, Jerome Alcorn, Otto Cherry, and Robert T. Davis and Pfc. Gus Pittman and Pvt. Renis Black are shown in flashy dress uniforms of the Marines. At bottom left, recruits are being trained with a 30 calibre machine gun, while recruits at bottom right take the hurdles in bayonet training. Marine Corps Headquarters has announced plans for the enlistment of more than 10,000 Negro Marines.

Lamberton, N. C. Robersonian
August 18, 1943

LIBERTY SHIP TO HONOR TAR HEEL NEGRO LAWYER

Washington. —(AP)— A Liberty ship will be named for the late Robert L. Vann, Negro lawyer who was founder and editor of the Pittsburgh Courier, the Maritime Commission has announced.

The ship, fifth in a series named for outstanding Negro Americans, will be launched in late September or early October in the South Portland, Me., yards of the New England Shipbuilding Corporation.

Vann was born at Ahoskie, N. C., educated at Virginia Union university and the University of Pittsburgh, and lived for many years in Pittsburgh, where he lie din 1940.

47j-I943

Navy Service School Officially Opened

WASHINGTON. — A new Navy Service School for Negroes was officially opened with impressive dedication ceremonies at the U. S. Naval Training Station, Great Lakes, Ill.

JUL 3 1943

Before 1,000 Negro bluejackets, standing at "Parade Rest" in the wing of the structure which will house the school for machinist's mates, Captain R. R. M. Emmett, commanding officer of the training Station, turned over the command of the new school to Captain H. R. Harris, Service School Officer.

Captain Emmett told his listeners, 500 Service School students, 300 selectees who will begin classes soon, and 200 men still in recruit training:

"The dedication of this new school is like the commissioning of a new ship. This building is an engine of destruction which will help to defeat our enemies and you men make up its crew."

July 3, '43

47j

Informer Houston Texas

---

108 Navy Graduates

Pittsburgh Courier

JUL 10 1943

GREAT LAKES, Ill., July 8.—"Yours is the task of doing whatever is assigned you as if the outcome of the war depended on your every act."

This was the counsel extended by W. Ellis Stewart, Chicago Negro leader, to the seventh Negro class to be graduated from the Navy's Service school at the U. S. Naval Training Station, Great Lakes, Ill.

Stewart, who is secretary and vice president of the Supreme Liberty Life Insurance company, Chicago, was principal speaker at commencement exercises for 108 Bluejackets, who completed instruction in one or another of the various trades and services offered by the Navy.

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md

Captain Hugh Mulzac of the Liberty Ship Booker T. Washington, posed recently for this picture at the headquarters in New York of the Negro Labor Victory Committee, one of the groups that helped him get his berth. His 10,000-ton ship has traveled 15,000 miles since it was launched last September.

MAY 29 1943

47j

Some of the Workers Who Turned Out Liberty Shi

Here are a thousand reasons a ship can be built in 29 days. This photo, showing workers watching the launching of the S.S. Frederick Douglass, was made from the top of a 500-foot crane by AFRO photographer Paul Henderson, during launching ceremonies Saturday at the Bethlehem-Fairfield Shipyards. Company officials said 7,500 colored workers contributed to the construction.

Anne Brown Heard at Ship Launching

MAY 29 1943

Afro-American Baltimore, Md. 1943

Singer Sponsors S.S. Douglass; Says Fight for Justice Must Last

BALTIMORE—Continuation of the fight for justice, even after the war is won, was advocated by Miss Anne Wiggins Brown, sponsor, during launching ceremonies for the S.S. Frederick Douglass Saturday, at the Bethlehem-Fairfield Shipyards.

MAY 29 1943

This, in addition to working and fighting together now, will be necessary, the noted soprano told the 2,500 workers and 70-odd guests, to accomplish the war's final objective, a total victory for democracy.

Workers' Group Sings

Music before and after the launching was provided by the Victory Four, a quintet of Bethlehem-Fairfield workers composed of Julius L. Payne, Charles Jackson, Thomas G. Turner, Allen Curfee and Thomas Travers.

The 10,500-ton Douglass glided smoothly from the pier at 12:27 p.m., after Miss Brown had performed the traditional christening rites.

3rd Named for Colored American

The ship took her place with the S.S. George W. Carver and the S.S. Booker T. Washington, making the third Liberty Ship to be named for famous colored Americans.

The christening followed a speech and presentation of a plaque to Captain Adrian Richardson, 51-year-old master of the ship, who told the assemblage:

"I am proud to command a ship named after a man like Frederick Douglass. His life history is an outstanding example of what a determined man can do in the face of tremendous obstacles. I can assure you that this ship will live up to the fine traditions of its namesake."

The presentation was made by Ferdinand Smith, New York City, secretary of the National Maritime Union.

Robeson Absent

MAY 29 1943

Paul Robeson, also scheduled to appear, was absent. The only jarring note of the ceremony was the playing of a recording of his disliked "Old Man River" with its hated "d—" epithet. Martin Zech, white, company engineer, presided.

Haley Douglass of Washington, grandson of Frederick Douglass, with his wife and daughter, were among the guests at the launching.

Honoree Was Shipbuilder

Mr. Douglass told the gathering that his grandfather was a shipyard worker and had worked up to a job as caulker.

He said it was a pleasure to participate in the naming of a ship in his ancestor's honor and to see "colored and white employees, 100 years after, working together in harmony."

Members of the ship's mixed crew who witnessed the launching were Chief Engineer Vi[illegible] Davis, white; Ensign John B. Clark, New York City, third mate, and Charles W. Harris of Pawtucket, R.I., first assistant engineer

MAY 29 1943

47j

Ensign Clark, a seaman of twenty years' experience, is a graduate of the Maritime School in New London, Conn.

29-Day Job

The Douglas was launched just twenty-nine days after its keel was laid on April 23, breaking all previous construction records. It was the 140th ship to be launched from that yard.

Following the launching, Miss Brown sang a spiritual, "Walk Together, Children," which she said indicated her feelings because the "only way to real victory and true democracy is by walking together."

Afterwards, J. M. Willis, white, vice president and general manager, presented a diamond and sapphire-studded lapel pin to Miss Brown, who also received a bouquet of roses. MAY 29 1943

Sailing Since He Was 9

The new skipper is a native of Phillipsburg, St. Martin, Dutch West Indies, but was orphaned when 4 years old and reared by a white sea captain, A. C. Chaney, in Cambridge, Mass.

He made his first trip to sea when he was 9 years old and since then he has traveled to every port in the world. During World War No. 1, he was captain of an army transport ship.

He has held a master's license since 1916, but admitted to the AFRO that being given command of the Frederick Douglass did not excite him. He described it as "just another job."

Captain a Gothamite

Captain Richardson, whose home is in NYC, commanded the S.S. Louise for five months, but left that ship to carry an army transport to the Pacific war zone. He returned to this country in February. MAY 29 1943

Captain Richardson is married to the former Miss Octavia Waters, a native of Norfolk, Va. They have a son, Sgt. Arthur A. Richardson, 31, now on duty with the army in Africa.

The entire launching party was entertained by the company at a luncheon at the York Hotel, at which time Melvin J. Hodgkinson, white, personnel manager, presided. Guests were:

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. L. G. Hyman of Washington, Mr. and Mrs. Haley H. Douglass and daughter, Jean Marie, of Washington;

C. R. Thornton, Dr. Ralph J. Young, Dr. O. D. Jones, Julius M. Gardner of Washington, Robert C. Weaver of Washington, Paul L. Chester, George Sanders, Charles F. Eyre, Mrs. W. A. C. Hughes, Jr., William E. Clark, Father Cedric E. Mills, Congressman Thomas D'Alesandro, Dr. Robert L. Jackson;

Frederick Weaver, Washington; Randall L. Tyus, Alexander J. Allen, the Rev. Mr. and Mrs. C. Baker, Pearle Miss Alice Carter, Mrs. Nellie [illegible] Moore Mrs. George McMechen, Dr. and Mrs M. E. Wilson;

Mayor Theodore McKeldin, Congressman Daniel Ellison, Calvin Douglass, Charles Mayfield, George Sanders, Miss Florence Menefee, Mrs. B. M. Phillips, Mrs. Lula Patterson, Carl Murphy, William Alexander, Washington; William J. Thompkins, Washington;

Leslie Perry, Washington; Miss Emma Menefee, Miss Lavinia Watkins, William F. Tyler, Joseph Briscoe, Dr. J. Leslie Jones, H. B. Brady of Columbus, Ohio; Miss Antoinette O. Henry, Pocomoke City, Md.; Dr. Harry F. Brown, Mrs. Olivia Dixon, Mrs. Alice Carter;

Dr. J. E. T. Camper, William V. Harper, J. Harvey Kerns, Dr. and Mrs. S. B. Hughes, Mrs. Arnold Sampson, Thomas L Corlette, Mrs. Lillie Jackson, Mrs. Juanita Mitchell, the Rev. E. W. White, Buckwood Gregory, Elroy Wilson, Yale Merrill, Lamar Cook;

James Drury, Marse S. Callaway, Miss Selma Kaslick, Washington; Paula Ann Petit, daughter of the sponsor; Miss Mayme Brown, Washington; W. S. Briscoe, Mrs. Adrian Richardson, New York City, wife of the captain; Dr. D. O. W. Holmes, and Thomas Aydlett.

9

Washington Tribune
Washington, D. C.

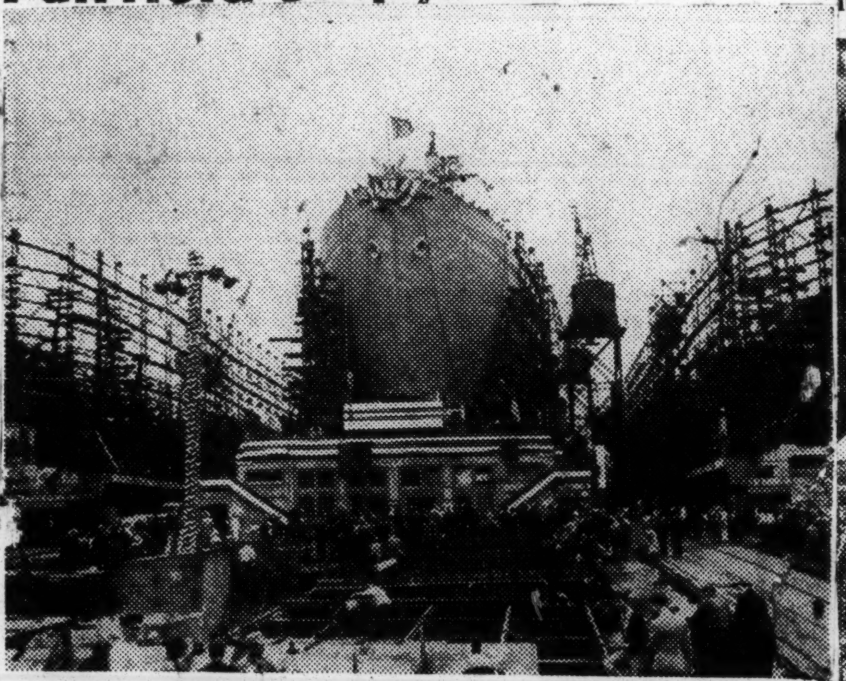
3 Negroes Won Navy Cross During War

Already in this war, three Negroes have won the Navy Cross: Doric Miller, Leonard Roy Harmon and William Pinckney, [illegible]te. (Miller and Pinckney are still on active duty, while Harmon lost his life on the USS San Francisco in the Battle of Guadalcanal last November.)

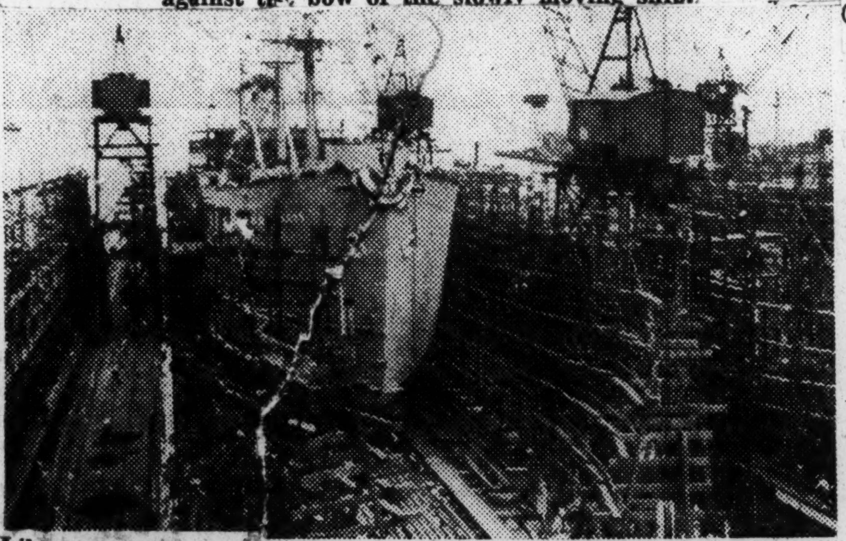
JUL 10 1943

Going, Going, Gone

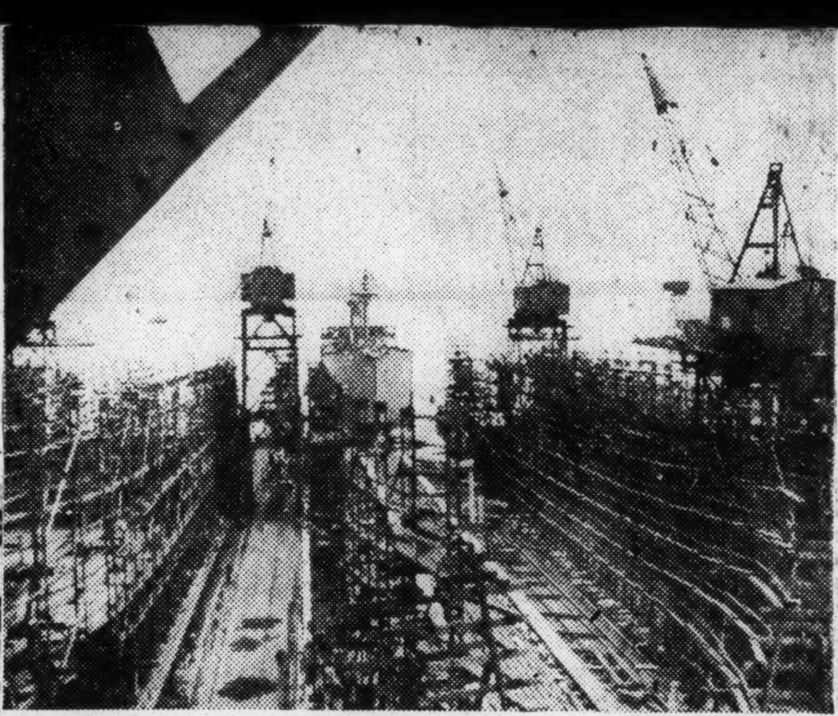
The S.S. Frederick Douglass Is Launched at Bethlehem-Fairfield Shipyards



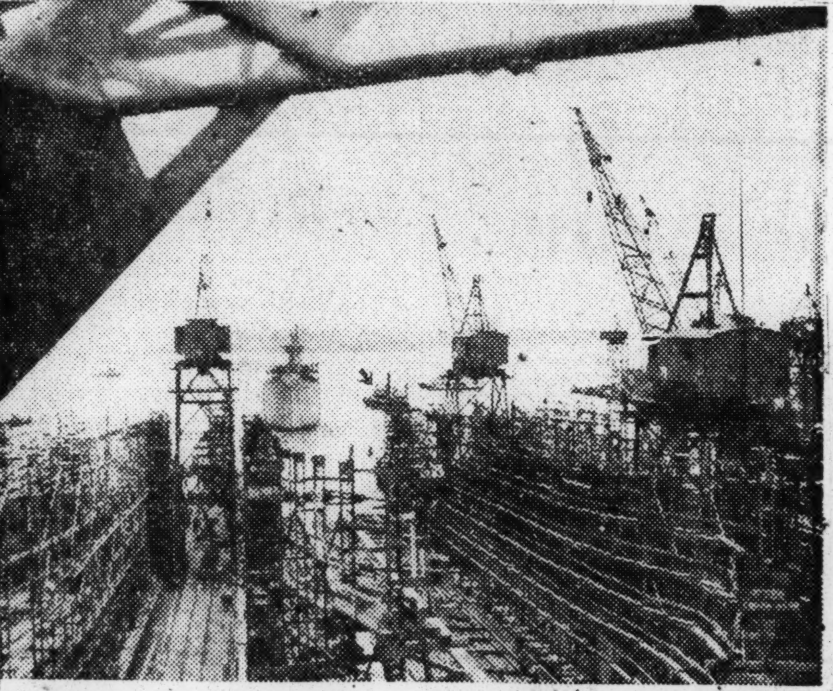
Here is the 10,500-ton vessel just as burners underneath cut the No. 4 prop and Anne Wiggins Brown smashed a bottle of champagne against the bow of the slowly moving ship.



Like a huge building fading away, the S.S. Douglass slides down the ways to the tune of shrieking whistles and cheers of thousands of Yorkers assembled for the launching.



This photo shows the Liberty ship getting its first taste of water as it settles with the grace of an expert swimmer. Captain Adrian Richardson will command her mixed crew.



Completely afloat, the Douglass is taken over by a game little tug (arrow) and anchored for fitting. The ship was launched twenty-nine days after the keel was laid.—All photos by Paul Henderson.

Well Deserved Recognition

AS significant and wholly gratifying as it is, it is not at all surprising that the first ship ever to be launched in the South bearing the name of a distinguished Negro American should slide down the ways of a North Carolina shipyard. Such is the state's traditional reputation for fairness and justice toward its Negro citizenry.

JUL 31 1943

Journal & Guide

In assigning the name of John Merrick, one of the state's most distinguished citizens, to the 114th Liberty ship which was launched at the North Carolina Shipbuilding Company in Wilmington on July 11, the United States Maritime Commission served a dual purpose in strengthening the amicable relations existing between the races in the Old North State.

Not only did the event pay well deserved recognition to one of the founders of the North Carolina Mutual Life Insurance Company, but at the same time provided an opportunity to pay tribute to the shipyard's colored employees who, according to officials of the yard, have contributed their full share toward its splendid production record.

Of Mr. Merrick himself, we believe the sentiments of every person who comprised the crowd of 12,000 who witnessed the historic event, were expressed in the words of Governor James Melville Broughton of North Carolina who made the principal address.

JUL 31 1943

Norfolk, Va.

Said Governor Broughton:

In the launching of this ship bearing the honored name JOHN MERRICK, it is fervently hoped that the life and character of this great man may be brought freshly to the minds of both races in North Carolina, and indeed in America; that in the light of his wholesome philosophy and successful career we may find a path of harmony, success, victory and peace through mutual respect and honest cooperation.

Journal & Guide

These are noble sentiments, nobly expressed and, we submit, fully appropriate to the occasion. It is to be fervently hoped that a similar tribute may be paid in the not too distant future, on another occasion which would do honor to that great educator, philosopher and humanitarian, the late Dr. Robert Russa Moton. We earnestly commend the idea to the United States Maritime Commission.

JUL 31 1943

47j- 1943

Amsterdam Star-News
New York, N. Y.

The Lilywhite WAVES and SPARS

FEB 13 1943

The strange policy of the Navy, even in wartime, of deliberately flouting Southern Jim Crow ideas in the face of a large part of the fighting population, the Negro, is seen in the disgraceful setup governing the lilywhite WAVES and SPARS, female auxiliaries in the U. S. Navy and in the Coast Guard. While the U. S. Army is busy integrating the Negro WAACS into its scheme of things, the Navy is carrying on its age-old policy of insulting and discriminating against capable, qualified and patriotic women citizens whose only crime is to belong to the "wrong" race.

If this were a war in which the whites were fighting little private battles among themselves and didn't need the help of the Negro population, we probably would have little to say on the matter. But the war isn't that kind of a war. It has been roundly denied by those in responsible positions that it is a race war, since colored peoples are fighting on the sides of both the United Nations and the Axis. Day and night the radios blare statements that we all are affected by the war and must all share equally the burden of fighting it. Yet, a group of die-hard reactionaries in Washington control things to the point where Negro womanhood is denied the opportunity to demonstrate their partiotism and support the war effort by deliberately saying that the WAVES and hte SPARS are set up only to show off and "preserve" lilywhite womanhood. We really don't get it.

FEB 13 1943

Chicago Defender
Chicago, Illinois

Race Sailors Win Honors In Capture Of U-Boat Crew

MAY 22 1943

WASHINGTON.— The origin of the expression, "Praise the Lord and pass the ammunition," may still be debatable, but two Negro members of the crew of the Coast Guard cutter Icarus kept the song and the deed very much in evidence during the recently announced sinking of a German U-boat and the capture of its crew off the Carolinas.

The destruction of the U-boat and the capture of 33 members of its crew was announced by the Navy Department on May 1, but the "ammunition" incident was recalled last week by the commanding officer of the 165-foot cutter, Lieut. Comdr. Maurice D. Jester.

"We had just detected the submarine dead ahead about 100 yards distant," the commander recalled, "and general quarters was being sounded. I heard the singing first as the crew ran to battle stations.

"Just before we dropped our first pattern of depth bombs, I located the song and the singers. It was coming from Battle Station No. 9 and the singers were two Negro mess attendants. Oddly enough, the song fitted in perfectly with their duties, for they were passing the ammunition to the gunners."

The two singers were identified by the commander as Adolphus S. Jones, mess attendant, 2nd class of Glen Cove, N. Y., and Charles E. Purdue, Jr., mess attendant, 2nd class, of 76 West 132nd street, New York City.

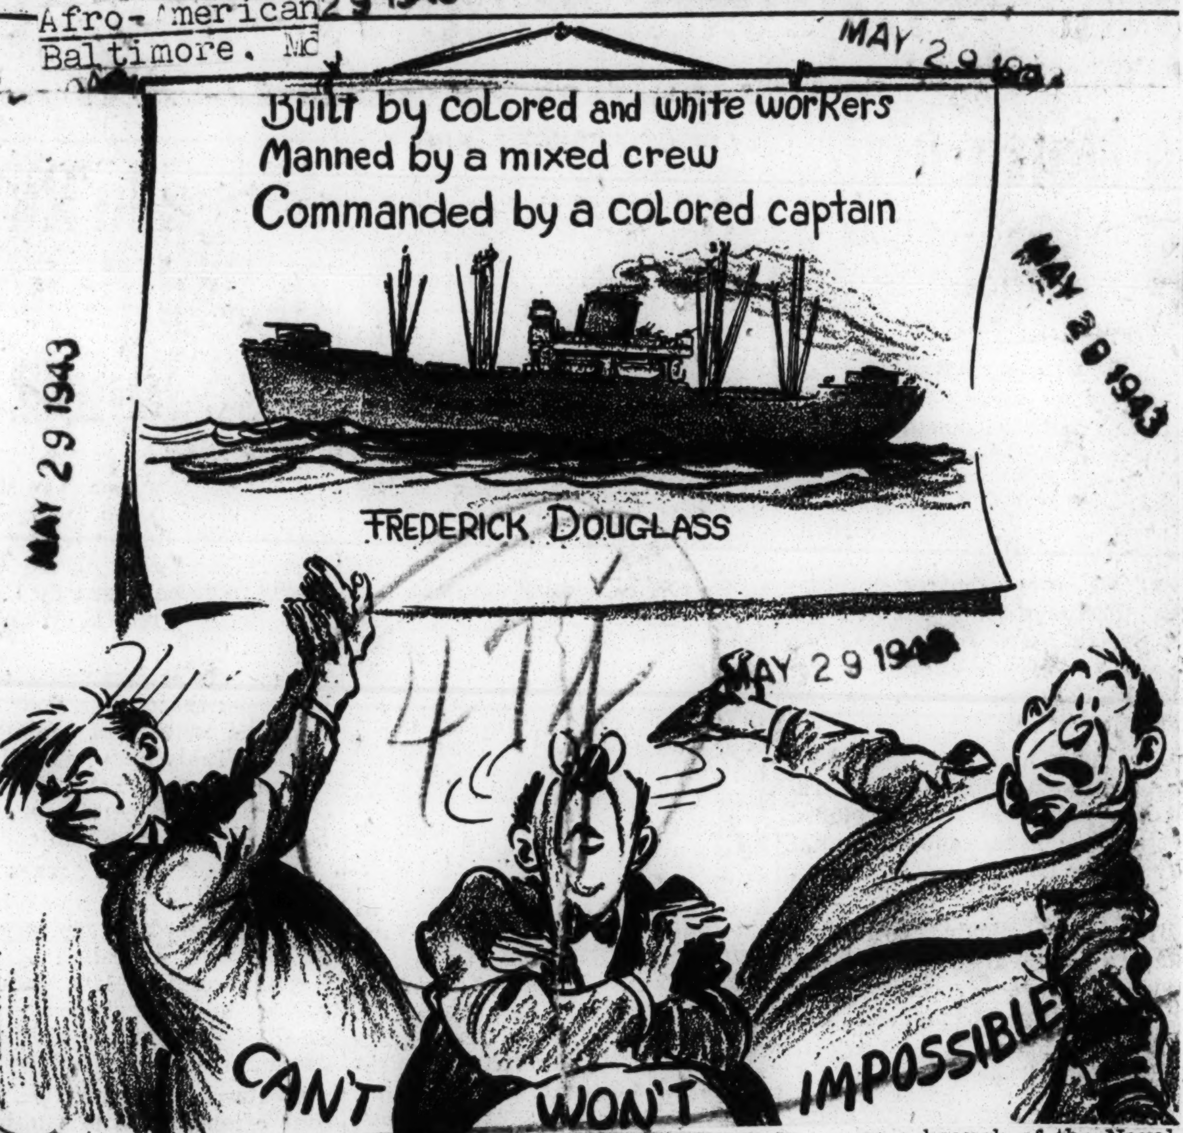
The German U-boat was sunk off the Carolina coast some months ago while the Icarus was on a routine run southward from New York. The captured crew was taken to Charleston, S. C., as prisoners of war. The cutter used depth bombs to force the submarine to the surface and then raked its decks with gunfire.

MAY 22 1943

Where Are the Experts Now?

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md

MAY 29 1943



Built by colored and white workers
Manned by a mixed crew
Commanded by a colored captain
FREDERICK DOUGLASS
CAN'T WON'T IMPOSSIBLE

WAVES Not Expected to Become Democratic Soon

Amsterdam Star-News
New York, N. Y.

Apr. 10, 1943

It's going to be some time before Negro women make the WAVES, the Women's Reserve of the Navy or the SPARS, the women's auxiliary of the Coast Guard. That's sort of a bald statement to make, but we have no less authority for it than Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox. He did, however, indicate that perhaps in the future the Navy would be able to integrate Negro women into its program.

All of this was contained in a recent communication to Algernon Black, co-chairman of the City-Wide Citizens' Committee on Harlem, who had asked him why Negro women were not in the WAVES and SPARS, which were using Hunter College campus and buildings in the Bronx for training purposes.

April 10, 1943

"Our Board," Mr. Black advised Secretary Knox, "supported a resolution before the New York City Council that the use of City property should not be permitted if there is any discrimination because of race or color."

In his answer, Secretary Knox went into great detail to explain the enlistment of Negroes as apprentice seamen in the United States Naval Reserve beginning June 1, 1942, stating that the Navy is carrying out an extensive program to train Negro recruits for service both at shore stations and at sea.

"The Women's Reserve," he wrote Mr. Black, "was established as a branch of the Naval Reserve under provisions of Public Law 689. Under section 505 of the law, it is provided that members of the Women's Reserve shall be composed of women trained and qualified for duty in the shore establishment of the Navy to release male officers and enlisted men of the Naval Service for duty at sea."

No Place For Women

A large proportion of the Negro recruits, Secretary Knox went on, are still at training stations or in Class A schools established for their specialized instruction and at this time the Navy does not have any substantial body of Negroes "available or qualified for general service at sea. There is no occasion to replace Negro enlisted personnel by Negro women enlisted in the Women's Reserve.

"The Navy will be glad to give full consideration to the entire question of enlisting Negro women in the Women's Reserve. And it would not hesitate to take affirmative action in this regard whenever such action were necessary to provide necessary personnel for the prosecution of the war effort. However, having in mind the provisions of Section 505 of the Congressional enactment, we do not feel that the enlistment of Negro women is justified at this time."

Secretary Knox assured Mr. Black that although the program is necessarily experimental, it is not discriminatory and that "it has received the approval of Negro organizations and the Negro press generally."

Chicago Defender
Chicago, Illinois

FDR Valet Hard At Work Learning Navy's Ropes

GREAT LAKES, Ill.—George Clinton Fields, 31-year-old Negro, who served as President Roosevelt's valet for the last four years, has turned bluejacket.

MAR 20 1943

A butler at the White House for six years prior to becoming the President's valet, Fields was drafted February 3 and chose the navy. A week after being sworn in he reported at the U.S. Naval Training Station, Great Lakes, Ill., where he is undergoing recruit training at Camp Robert Smalls—training center for Negro men.

His White House bed has been replaced by a hammock which he having some difficulty in mastering.

Throughout the recruit training period, he will be given aptitude tests to determine whether he should receive further advanced training at one of the Navy's fifty-odd trade and service schools or be sent directly to duty.

When Bluejacket Fields left his city of Indianapolis, Ind., in 1933 to go to Washington, he became the second member of his family to join the White House staff. His brother, Alonzo Fields, has been head butler at the White House since the Hoover administration.

MAR 20 1943

The sailor shared the President's valet duties with Arthur Prettyman, who remains in this post. The men would take turns attending the President both while he was at home or on his journeys. It was Fields who accompanied the chief executive and his party on his tour last September of industrial plants and army and navy training centers including Great Lakes.

At that time, President Roosevelt said he was greatly impressed with the Naval Training Station here. He wasn't the only one. Fields admits the visit definitely sold him on the navy.

The night before Fields left the White House to enter the navy, the President and Mrs. Roosevelt summoned him to the study to say goodbye. After the First Lady had wished him well, the President grasped Fields' hand and said:

"Good luck to you, George. I know you'll do just as good a job for the navy as you've done for me."

Fields is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Clinton B. Fields of 1728 Columbia avenue, Indianapolis, Ind. He attended Attucks high school there and later took a two-year course in accounting.

He is enlisted as an apprentice seaman.

MAR 20 1943

GEORGE CLINTON FIELD

Durham, N. C., Morning Herald
July 11, 1943

Liberty Ship John Merrick, First Named For Tar Heel Negro, To Hit Water Today

Daughter Of Durham Business Man Will Perform As Sponsor

Liberty S. S. John Merrick will be launched with auspicious ceremonies this afternoon at the North Carolina Ship Building Company's yards at Wilmington with Governor J. Melville Broughton delivering the principal address.

The ship, named for the late John Merrick of Durham, is the fourth ship to be named for a Negro in the United States, and the first one to honor a Negro in North Carolina. Other Negro leaders so honored include Booker T. Washington, Frederick A. Douglas and George Washington Carver.

Mrs. Martha Merrick Donnell, youngest daughter of John Merrick, will sponsor the launching of the ship named for her father. Miss Constance Merrick will be maid of honor and Mrs. Martha Williams Wheeler will be matron of honor. They are the youngest granddaughters of Merrick.

Three attendants will be selected from the 7,000 Negroes working at the Wilmington ship yards. They will represent the part the 7,000 Negroes have had in the defense program along with the 13,000 white people employed in like production activities.

Dr. C. C. Spaulding of Durham will introduce Governor Broughton. Spaulding and Dr. A. M. Moore formed a triumvirate with John Merrick to found two of the largest financial concerns for Negroes in the world. Dr. Moore and Merrick are dead, but Spaulding holds the helm of the largest Negro bank in the world.

This afternoon's program will begin promptly at 5 o'clock with music by the Negro Pre-Flight Band from Chapel Hill playing "The Sar-Spangled Banner." Governor will speak and the Liberty S. S. John Merrick will slide into the water for service at exactly 6 o'clock, it was announced.

For lack of facilities the program cannot be heard over Station WDNC at the time of the launching, but at 10:45 o'clock tonight the recording of the occasion will be heard over the Durham Station.

An appraisal of the life of John Merrick will doubtless be of interest to thousands in this area. The story reads like romance to all who knew him, and to the multitudes who never heard his story before.

John Merrick, a Negro, was born into slavery in Sampson County, N. C., Sept. 7, 1859. When only 12 years old, he went to work in a Chapel Hill brickyard. He had no opportunity to go to school, because the support of his mother, brother, and himself was his responsibility, but he somehow learned to read, write, and "figure" a little.

After six years in the brickyard, he loaded the family belongings on a steer-cart and moved to Raleigh. Shaw University was being erected and there he worked on its first building, as hod carrier and brick mason. His next work was as bootblack in a barbership, and in the same shop he learned the barber's trade. A fellow barber was going to a near-by town to establish a business and offered him employment in the new shop. He accepted it and thus began his real career: John Merrick set out for Durham.

The new business prospered and in six months John Merrick bought a half interest in this five-chair shop. The former hod carrier was now a successful business man. With the purchase of a three-room home—his first venture into real estate—he became a property owner. He later became the sole owner of the barbershop and eventually of a chain of five shops. He began to buy other real estate, to build houses for rent, and to accumulate wealth.

John Merrick's personal success is by no means the measure of his greatness, through it is noteworthy that he rose from an unschooled boy to a substantial citizen solely by his own efforts.

John Merrick had a special talent for organizing. He also had the confidence of the people and strong friendship among both races. (The Dukes, the Watts, the Carrs, the Fullers, and their associates were not only customers of John Merrick's, but also his friends.) He began to turn his energy and talents to new enterprises, in coperation with others.

In order that one may properly evaluate this contribution of his, it may be well to cite here figures which will show what the economic status of the Negroes of Durham was at that time. It was in 1880 that John Merrick moved to Durham, 15 years after the close of the Civil War. Tax valuations of 1887 showed that Negroes owned only two lots in Durham and 1,366 acres in the county, a total valuation of $8,696.00. By 1909, the total valuation of Negro property was $583,036; in 1916, $866,207; and in 1923, $4,298,067.

In his book, "The Story of Durham," William Kenneth Boyd, professor of History at Duke University (1925) says: "Definite causes of increase of wealth are always hard to ascertain. But undoubtedly the increase in personal property must be attributed to the genius of three men: John Merrick, Dr. Aaron M. Moore, and Charles Spaulding."

Some of the businesses which were touched and aided by the organizing and promotional genius of John Merrick were: The Royal Knights of King David, a fraternal organization: the Mechanics and Farmers Bank; the Bull City Drug Company; the Merrick-Moore-Spaulding Real Estate Company; and the Durham Textile Mill.

What might be regarded as his particular monument is the North Carolina Mutual Life Insurance Company which he organized in 1898 as the North Carolina Mutual and Provident Association. On the 20th day of October in that year, this organization was formed for the purpose of providing sick and death benefits for its members; and John Merrick was elected its president. During the first year's operation, five of the organizers became discouraged and withdrew; whereupon the company was reorganized and John Merrick was elected president of the reorganized company. (He remained president until his death in 1919.)

With no capital, no training, and no experience, this company began doing business. Its "home office" was space in the office of the company's treasurer, Dr. A. M. Moore rented for $2.00 a month. A homemade desk and a few chairs were its total equipment.

The North Carolina Mutual's 44 years' history is a long story—one of near-failure, discouragement, doubts and fears in its early days. At the end of the first year's operation, its income was $393.95 and its assets $350.00.

Time marched on, and from such an humble beginning, the company founded by John Merrick was not only advanced to a position where it stands twenty-eighth among the first 50 life insurance companies of the nation from the standpoint of insurance in force and first in the accumulation of assets among Negro-managed companies, but it has lighted up the business horizon for American Negroes in all avenues of business.

In Durham are found outstanding financial institutions such as:

Bankers Fire Insurance Company, the only one of its kind in the world operated as it is by American Negroes;

Mechanics and Farmers Bank, with resources exceeding $2,000,000, Mr. Merrick having been its first president;

Mutual Building and Loan Association, with assets amounting to $383,368.75, having increased to over $400,000 since the close of the year;

Southern Fidelity and Bonding Company, the only bonding company operated by Negro citizens in the world.

Then, there is North Carolina Mutual Life Insurance Company itself, which, at the close of business 1942, had over $64,000,000 of life insurance in force; having paid to its policyholders, in its own life span, over $21,000,000 in matured endowments, sick, death, and other claims; having invested over $1,500,000 in a Government Bond folio; having invested among Negroes on amply secured first mortgages, over $3,500,000; having earmarked in statutory reserves over $6,887,225 for the protection of its policies in force; giving gainful and respectable employment to hundreds of prepared men and women; and showing assets for 1942 aggregating $8,273,734.21.

Raleigh, N. C., News & Observer
August 24, 1943

NEGRO MARINES PLAN ANNIVERSARY PROGRAM

New River, Aug. 23.—Negro Marines at Camp Lejeune, the Marine Corps' only Negro training center, will hold appropriate ceremonies Thursday in celebration of the first anniversary of the enrollment here of the first Negro Marine, Howard P. Perry of Charlotte on August 26, 1942.

During their first year's service in the Marine Corps, Negro Leathernecks have made vast strides. A number of them now are corporals and sergeants. Some have been sent on assignments overseas. They have learned a great deal about Marine amphibious tactics. They have athletic teams, a band, orchestra, glee club and many other such extra-curricular organizations.

The small camp built for them at first, when only 1,200 were planned for the corps, has expanded into seven different camps. Montford Point Camp No. 1, still under construction but already in partial use, is larger than all the others combined, to take care of the many new recruits expected from time to time until the contemplated goal for Negroes in the Marines Corps has been reached within the next year. All of these Negroes will receive their basic training here at various intervals.

Tourists To See Statue Made By Navy Bluejacket

Pittsburgh, Pa. Courier

GREAT LAKES, Ill., July 1—A seven-ton statue created by a Negro bluejacket now in training at the U. S. Naval Training station here will be a MUST for tourists visiting the great Mesabi Range in Minnesota to see this summer.

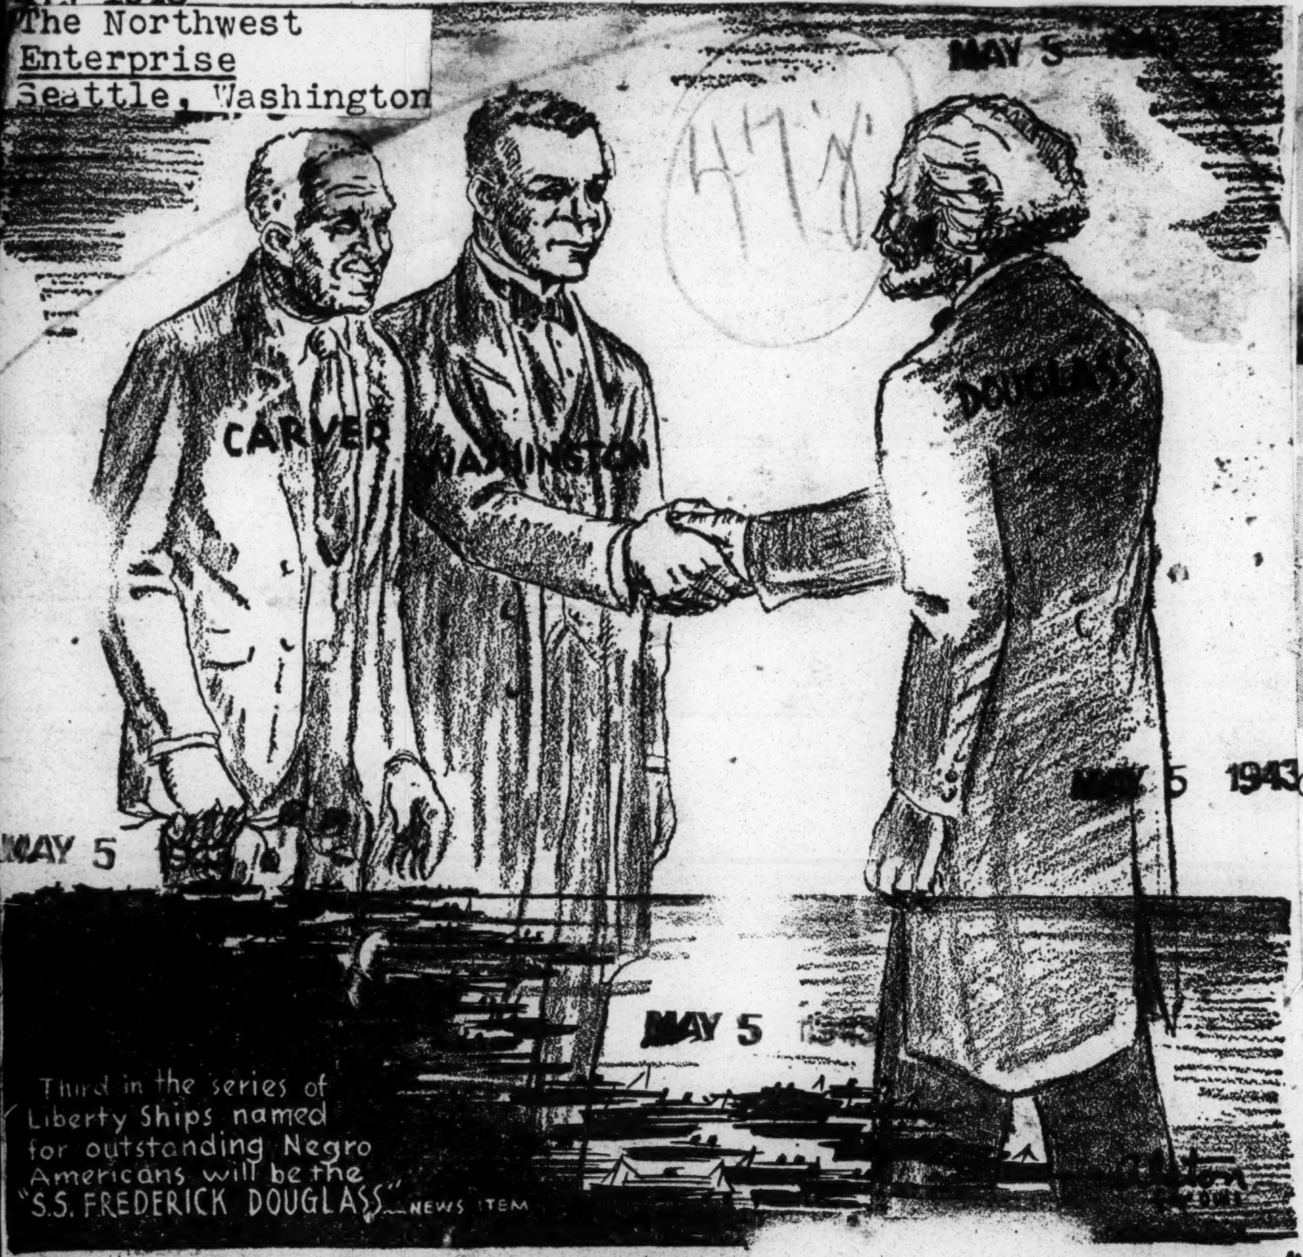
The sculptor of this massive work of Leonida Merritt, the man credited with the discovery of Minnesota's wealth of red-gold iron ore, is Robert Crump III, 33, of 620 St. Anthony avenue, St. Paul, Minn. A seaman second class, he has compleed his recruit training and is awaiting assignment to the Navy's Service school for quartermasters.

JUL 3 1943

47i-1943

The Northwest
Enterprise
Seattle, Washington

478



CARVER
WASHINGTON
DOUGLASS
Third in the series of Liberty Ships named for outstanding Negro Americans will be the "S.S. FREDERICK DOUGLASS"—NEWS ITEM

MAY 5 1943

"DEMOCRACY IN ACTION NO. III"

In S. S. Frederick Douglass Launching Party

MAY 29 1943

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

Above are, left to right, Charles C. Harris, first assistant engineer; Haley G. Douglass, grandson of the namesake of the ship; Mrs. Richardson, Captain Richardson, Anne Wiggins Brown and Ferdinand Smith, secretaryof the National Maritime Union, phootgraphed following the launching.

Time
Chicago, Illinois

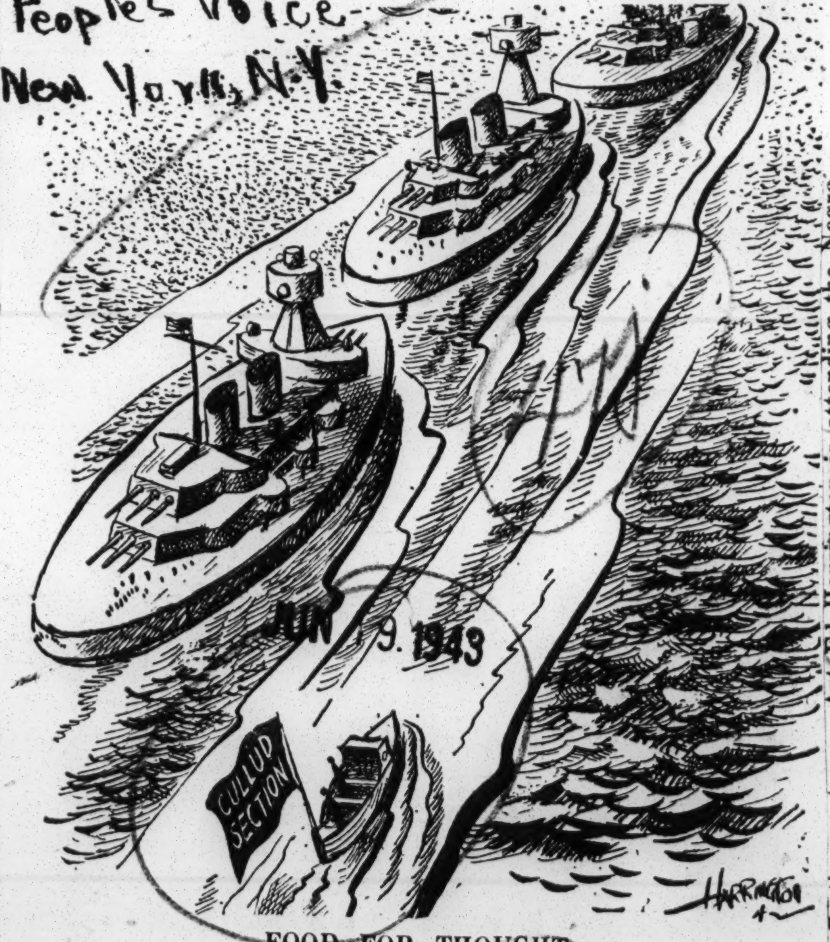
MAY 10 1943

Official U.S. Marine Corps Photo-Wide World

MARINES IN KILTS

These are Samoan "Fita-Fitas," proud members of a native detachment organized by the Navy 40 years ago, now expanded to war strength. Their uniforms: white G.I. undershirts (and drawers) and a khaki wrap-around "lava-lava." Lacking sleeves for chevrons, the native noncommissioned officers wear Marine Corps insignia on the fronts of their skirts. Bare feet are regulation in these detachments, now being trained in other South Sea Isles for defense duties. Marine Corps sergeants (with sleeves and pants) serve as commanding officers.

Peoples Voice
New York, N.Y.



JUN 19 1943

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

At the suggestion of Don Burr, who normally fills this space with his ironical pen sketches, PV reproduces here one of Ol Harrington's most effective cartoons. Art Ed Harrington is attending the Negro Publishers Association Kentucky confab. Last year TIME magazine not only reported on the conference which was held in Chicago, and quoted at length various and sundry unflattering appraisals of PV but also reproduced the cartoon shown above. Despite glowing stories US Navy policy still remains unchanged.

Time
Chicago. Illinois

SHIPS

Honor for a Sailor

AUG 2 1943

Down the launching ways at the big Bethlehem Fore River shipyard at Quincy, Mass. slid the destroyer escort Harmon, first U.S. warship named for a Negro. Navy Secretary Frank Knox had assigned the name in honor of Roy Harmon, Navy messman, who gave his life aboard the cruiser San Francisco in the Battle of Guadalcanal last November.

9,000 Negroes In Merchant Marine

Defender
Chicago, Ill.

JUL 24 1943

NEW YORK—More than 9,000 Negroes sailed the seas on the ships of the United States Merchant Marine, carrying supplies to the war fronts of the United Nations, it was revealed in a survey made by the War Shipping Administration. This number constituted one-tenth of the entire merchant marine force.

MULZAC AND CREW BEAT CONVOY TO LONDON

H.P.W.

MAR 6 1943

MAR 6 1943

Only Negro skipper of a U. S. Liberty ship on the high seas, Captain Hugh Mulzac and his crew took the S. S. Booker T. Washington into a British port carrying a cargo of food and munitions. It was the first trans-Atlantic voyage for the vessel manned by a mixed crew. A heavy storm broke up the convoy and the Booker T. led the rest of the convoy into port by two days. MAR 6 1943

Sing for Victory's Cause

The Daily Worker
New York, N. Y.

THE UNITED STATES COAST GUARD QUARTETTE which will sing at the War Chest Campaign Dinner of the Fur Industry at the Hotel Pennsylvania tonight at 7 o'clock. From left to right, they are; Thomas B. Lockard, Storekeeper 2/c; Homer Smith, Boatswain Mate 2/c, and formerly of the famed "Southernaires"; Martin Boughan, Storekeeper 3/c, and James O. Lewis, Seaman 1/c, a concert soloist. Both Lockard and Boughan are Gilbert and Sullivan opera stars.

The dinner ceremonies in which outstanding representatives of United Nations relief agencies will participate, inaugurate the 1943 fund raising campaign of the fur industry—a joint effort of labor and management. Chairman and co-chairman of the campaign respectively are Lou White, president of the Associated Fur Coat and Trimming Manufacturers Association, and Ben Gold, president of the International Fur and Leather Workers Union of the United States and Canada. Last year the War Chest raised $250,000—this year's goal is twice as much—$500,000.

JUL 12 1943

47

JUL 12 1943

Negro Ship Captain Complains Mixed Crew Too Well Behaved

The Daily Worker
New York, N. Y.

e Associated Press

JUL 2 1943

Baltimore, July 1.—Capt. Hugh Mulzac, first Negro to command an American ship became today probably the first captain ever to complain because his men were "too well-behaved."

For nine months he has commanded a mixed crew of Negroes and whites, both officers and men.

"When there is trouble on a ship, the captain is supposed to 'log' the men—take away a day's pay—or punish them in some other way. But my men have been too well-behaved. I haven't yet had a chance to learn how to do it," the 57-year-old seafarer said.

47

Captain Mulzac, the first Negro to hold a master's license in the U. S. Merchant Marine, has been in the nautical business for almost 40 years. A native of the West Indies, he is agraduate of the Swansea Nautical College in South Wales, England, and of the United States Shipping Board School in Baltimore.

JUL 2 1943

He received his precedent-setting master's license in Baltimore in 1920 after another war had created a pressing need for experienced seamen. He subsequently berthed as second, third or chief officer for steamship companies.

It was not until last year, however, that an opportunity came to command his own ship. Last September he was offered command of the Booker T. Washington, 10,500-ton Liberty ship named for the famed Negro educator. But there was a string attached to the offer.

He was told he would have to have an all-Negro crew.

"I couldn't do that because I had always fought against segregation and this would be the same as approving it," Captain Mulzac said. So he finally got the shipping administrator to agree that he pick his own crew from among the best men he could find.

JUL 2 1943

Captain Mulzac selected three Negroes for chief officer, chief engineer and wireless operator. His other officers were both white and Negro and one-fourth of the crew were Negroes. There is no segregation aboard ship.

"There was no trouble with the crew ashore or aboard ship . . . Not one has left because of dissatisfaction," Captain Mulzac said.

Constitution
Atlanta, Georgia

Union Protests Ill Treatment Of Negroes

~~JUL 11 1943~~

New York, July 10 (AP)—A protest that Negro seamen were forced from a train at Rocky Point, N. C., while en route to their ship was made today at the convention of the National Maritime Union, C.I.O.

47

Joseph Curran, N.M.U. president, told the convention that the Negroes were members of a group of twenty-nine seamen being sent in a special coach to an Atlantic port. When the Negroes were ejected, other seamen left the train also, Curran said.

The convention adopted a resolution addressed to the War Shipping Administration declaring "we will not tolerate any further discrimination against members of this union," and referred the matter to the union's attorney for further action.

JUL 11 1943

Curran said the crew members were proceeding to a port so that the sailing of their ship would not be delayed. He added that he did not know if the men were in a group or traveling separately.

MARINES TAKE PART IN PARADE

Pittsburgh, Pa. Courier

JUN 1943

NEW BERN, N. C., June 10—(ANP)—In their first public display of drilling off their reservation at Camp LeJeune, the marine corps' only Negro recruiting depot and training center, Negro marines participated here Monday in a Memorial day parade and program sponsored by the New Bern Negro civic league.

47

Negro non-commissioned officers directed the band and three platoons of Negro recruit marines. The band was conducted by Drum Major Sgt. L. R. Elmore of Washington, and the platoons were commanded by Sgt. Gilbert J. Johnson of Alabama.

Witnessing the parade were Col S. A. Woods Jr., commanding officer of the Negro marine camps; Lt. Col. T. A. Hogan, commanding officer of the Negro recruit depot at New River; and Marine Gunner Crapser, supervisor of the Negro recruit training. Each highly complimented the drilling by the leathernecks in their first public appearance.

JUN 1943

47j-1943

New Liberty Ship S. S. John Merrick Tribute To Genius Of Great Carolinian

Defender

Chicago, Ill.

WILMINGTON, N. C. — Floating proudly in the harbor here this week waiting its final ship fittings before sailing overseas with war cargo was the newly-launched S. S. John Merrick, a liberty ship tribute to the genius of the man who founded the world's largest Negro business.

Launching of the vessel was the occasion of moving ceremonies honoring Merrick as the guiding influence behind the North Carolina Mutual Life Insurance company.

As its founder and first president, Merrick, an humble Durham barber, guided it into the largest insurance business owned and operated by Negroes anywhere in the world. High tribute was paid him by Gov. J. M. Broughton, principal speaker at the launching of the ship on July 11, when he was described as "a man whose noble life work is a pride of all North Carolina."

Merrick was born in Sampson County in slavery on September 7, 1859. When he was 12 years old, he went to work in the Chapel Hill brickyard and worked there for six years.

Somehow or other he picked up a little reading, writing, and figuring—and this was a feat of some magnitude, for the boy was so busy trying to support his mother and brother that he had little time to take advantage of the scant opportunities the times afforded.

At the end of his employment in Chapel Hill, Merrick loaded the family belongings on a steer cart and moved the family to Raleigh. Shaw university was under construction then, and he obtained employment as a hod-carrier and brick mason. Later he worked as a bootblack in a barber shop and managed to pick up the technique of barbering.

To Durham

A fellow barber decided to open a shop in Durham and offered Merrick the opportunity to go with him; so, in 1880, Merrick left Raleigh and moved to Durham. He made his home in Durham until his death in 1919.

Merrick organized the N. C. Mutual Life Insurance company on October 20, 1898. The company first bore the name of the N. C. Mutual and Provident Association. The organization was formed for the purpose of providing sick and death benefits, and Merrick was elected president.

During the first year of operation, five of the organizers became discouraged and withdrew, and the company was reorganized under its present name, and Merrick was elected president of this company also. He remained president until his death.

The company began doing business with no capital, no training, and no experience. Income from the first year's operation amounted to $393.95, and assets totaled $350.

In the 45 years of its existence the company has grown from humble beginnings to an institution that now stands 28th among the first 50 life insurance companies in America from the standpoint of insurance in force, and first in accumulation of assets among Negro-managed companies.

At the close of business in 1942, the company had more than $64,000,000 of life insurance in force and had paid its policyholders over $21,000,000 in matured endowments, sick and death benefits, and other claims.

Appreciation of the contribution made by Merrick and of the growing amity between the races in North Carolina, was expressed by Gov. Broughten in his address.

In the achievements and philosophy of Merrick's life there are to be found "lessons of great value for this troubled time" declared the governor. He said that great advances have been made in the last 45 years in interracial cooperation and would continue in the future, aborting a repetition of the race riots that gripped Wilmington in 1898.

Cites State's Record

"There has been no race riot in North Carolina since that time," Gov. Broughton continued. "There has been only one act of lynching in this state in over 20 years. A record of racial harmony has been made in this state unsurpassed and perhaps unequalled in any state of the American union.

"We view with deep concern the recent serious race riots in Detroit and lesser outbreaks in other sections of the North, all indicating that the matter of race relationship is still one of the great problems of American life, and that it is not southern but national in its scope."

The state executive pointed with pride to the school system of North Carolina that operates, he said, nine months each year and provides free textbooks and transportation to all races alike. Recently, he added, the legislature passed bills appropriating more than one million dollars to help remove salary differentials between Negro and white teachers. North Carolina's college for Negroes and three other state sponsored schools for colored people have high scholastic ratings, he averred.

"These things in our state have been accomplished by harmonious cooperation and mutual respect as between the two races," he stated, "and not by listening to outside agitators, who in the guise of seeking only economic opportunity for the Negro, would flout established and mutually respected conventions and traditions, which cannot in this state, now or never, be obliterated.

An example of the high esteem in which Merrick was held in the state is contained in the following excerpts from an editorial in the High Point Enterprise, the day of the launching:

"We are glad that honor today will be paid to whom honor is due. We are glad that here in the South—where 80 years ago John Merrick's ancestors were bought and sold as slaves—we have this evidence of a better understanding between the white and colored races.

"We have only to remember what happened in Detroit a few days ago to realize how far we are from a solution of America's greatest 'race problem.' We know this problem has been accentuated by developments during the war — including unrest among both colored and white.

"We realize that there are great dangers ahead, just as there have been great dangers in the past. We know there are fools, hot-heads and criminals in both races who have made, are making and will continue to make the joint problem more difficult.

"But this we know, also:

"If the Negro race can grow leaders like John Merrick and Charles Spaulding; and if more leaders of the white race will give them intelligent cooperation instead sentimental sympathy, we will continue to make headway in a joint effort to deal with each other like men, rather than animals. There will be setbacks. Many of them. But those with faith—those with a vision such as John Merrick had—will not become discouraged.

"The Detroit race riot was a horrible thing. But the launching of the Liberty Ship John Merrick is more significant."

JUL 24 1943

Heroic Sailor In Coral Sea Battle Wins Navy Medal

Chicago Defender
Chicago, Illino

FEB 13 1943

WASHINGTON, D. C.—A 20-year old Negro mess attendant, who unhesitatingly entered the most dangerous section of the stricken aircraft carrier, U.S.S. Lexington, during the Battle of the Coral Sea, and assisted in removing injured personnel trapped below decks, has been awarded the Navy and Marine Corps Medal, the Navy Department announced this week.

The heroic young mess attendant, one of five enlisted men similarly honored from the Lexington's crew, is Elvin Bell, an orphan who formerly resided with his aunt, Miss Marie Lofton, at 139-08 114th avenue, Jamaica, N. Y. He has been promoted from mess attendant, third class, to mess attendant, second class.

His citation reads:

"For distinguished heroism while serving aboard the U.S.S. Lexington during the battle of the Coral sea on May 8, 1942. Voluntarily joining a repair party fighting fire in an area frequented by violent explodings of gasoline vapor and ammunition, Bell, although emerging in an exhausted condition unhesitatingly entered the most dangerous section of the stricken carrier and assisted in removing injured personnel who had been trapped below decks. His courageous initiative and utter disregard for his own safety were in keeping with the highest tradition of the United States Naval Service."

ELVIN [illegible]

Bell, who attended Jamaica high school for one and one-half years and later served in the Civilian Conservation Corps, applied for enlistment in the navy on July 18, 1941, and reported for active duty immediately.

An eyewitness account of the rescue was written by Stanley Johnston, a war correspondent aboard the stricken carrier, in the recent Victory Edition of the Chicago Defender. Johnson's account declared:

"It was Commander Mort Seligman's task to direct the rescue. I heard him call on the men around him: There are three men in frame So-and-So. That's below the fire. To reach them, one of you must go around the fire and through passage X.'

"A young colored mess attendant stepped forward. I could not see his face for he was wearing a smoke helmet. He saluted and quietly and said: 'I'll go, Sir.'

"'Sure you know how to reach them?' the commander asked.

"'Yes, Sir. I know the way.'

"'Do you realize that you might never make it—might never come back?'

"'Yes, Sir. I do. But I would like to try just the same.'

"Right then. On your way. And good luck to you. We'll be waiting for you."

"He went. Through long passageways and down several flights of steel steps deep into the vast hull. But he was sure of his way. This fine colored lad did come back. And what's more—he brought the three men with him."

FEB 1943

FEB 13 1943

FEB 13 1943

Chicago Defender

Detroiter Is First Colored Navy Officer Put On Duty

BOSTON. — (ANP) — Ensign Joseph C. Jenkins of Detroit has the distinction of being the first colored naval officer to be assigned to active duty.

Chicago, Illinois

He is attached to the coast guard shore patrol of the First Naval district with headquarters at the former exclusive Hotel Brunswick and has under his command a mixed personnel of white and colored seamen.

He was inducted as a chief petty officer on presenting his qualifications about a year ago and after attending the coast guard academy at New London, Conn., was commissioned an ensign on April 19.

He is a graduate of the University of Michigan with a bachelor of civil engineering degree, class of 1937, and from that time up to the time of his enlistment was connected with the Michigan state highway.

Ensign Jenkins stated that he has been treated fairly and believes there is an ever-widening opportunity for colored boys in the coast guard. Incidentally his friends in Detroit scoffed at his move in leaving the Michigan state highway saying, "It couldn't be done."

Ensign "Whit" Robinson, the only other colored naval ensign, is still on inactive status awaiting the completion of his medical studies at Harvard university in 1944.

JUN 1943

Liberal Article Lauds Soldiers

Navy Yard Newspaper Tells Of Negro In War

Pittsburgh, Pa. Courier

JUL 10 1943

CHARLESTON, S.C., July 8—(ANP)—Attention to the great contribution Negro men are making in the war effort was called last week in the newspaper, "Ahoy," printed for the Navy and Marine personnel and civilian workers employed at the Charleston Navy yard. The article, entitled. "One Thing in Mind." said in part:

"The Nazis reported they had sunk a certain American cargo ship."

"The ship wasn't sunk. Merchant Seaman Makhan Kitchens isn't dead. He was in Charleston last week, awaiting sailing orders. He told reporters, however, that he had a close call last time his ship put into port on the African front loaded with 10,000 tons of ammunition. Negro soldiers had started unloading the deadly cargo when Nazi bombers attacked. The ship's gun crews fought them off and the Hitlerites missed their target.

"What impressed Kitchens most though, was the way the soldiers worked. 'In less than 60 hours,' he said, 'they had unloaded 10,000 tons of ammunition. Many of them worked 24 to 26 hours without stopping. There were a few white men in the crowd, but it made no difference to anyone. They had a job to do, and believe me, they did it.

"I asked one of those Negro fellows why he worked so hard. He said: 'We just got one thing on our minds—win the war so we can go back to America.'"

To Name Ship For Frederick Douglass

Courier

Pittsburgh, Pa.

APR 17 1943

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 15—The Maritime commission announced this week that a Liberty ship, assigned for construction in a Baltimore, Md., shipyard, will be named for Frederick Douglass, famous orator and journalist of the Civil war period.

The ship, third of a series named for outstanding Negro Americans, will be launched at the Bethlehem-Fairfield Shipyards in Baltimore—a short distance from the site where Douglass, a Maryland-born slave, once worked as a ship caulker.

TWO OTHERS

The first ship of this series, the SS Booker T. Washington, named for the noted educator, is now in active service under Capt. Hugh Mulzac. The second. the SS George Washington Carver, named for the world-famous scientist, is under construction at a West Coast shipyard.

The name Frederick Douglass was assigned to the third Liberty ship by the Maritime commission at the request of Local 43 of the Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers' of America, CIO. The Victory Production committee of the Bethlehem-Fairfield shipyards will make arrangements for the launching ceremony which is scheduled to be held in May, 1943.

Assails Navy's Failure To Use Race Instructors

Courier

Pittsburgh, Pa.

MAR 27 1943

CHICAGO, March 25—The failure of the Civil Service Commission here to appoint qualified Negro ground school instructors to the Navy Department was protested to President Roosevelt this week by the Chicago NAACP.

In a telegram to the White House the NAACP pointed out that although it has been more than a year since some of the instructors completed their training, not one has been assigned while a number of whites trained at the same time are now teaching.

"The appropriate use of manpower requires," said the NAACP, "that these men be assigned to the highest and best use for which they have demonstrated their qualifications. Recently some of them have been classified for immediate induction into the armed forces because the Navy Department has not given them the assignment for which they have been trained. These men have no fear of induction. They are loyal citizens who want to serve their country to the fullest extent of their ability. It will be a great injustice to deprive them of their rights simply because of racial prepudices. It may mean the loss of the war for the United Nations.

The names of these men are: James O. Lee. Robert F. Short, Richard L. Farmer, Cassim M. Pendleton, Douglas R. Turner, J. W. Porter. Wilburn W. Barton Robert Lee Cole, Clarence Stephens and Frederick P. Blair Jr. They and we on their behalf ask your intercession to the end that justice and fair play be accorded them."

The Daily Worker
New York, N. Y.

'In Behalf of the Navy'—Gunner On Ship Honors Capt. Mulzac

JUL 10 1943

Warm letters of cooperation exchanged between Captain Hugh Mulzac of the S.S. Booker T. Washington and Harold Krulcy, Liutenant, junior grade, of the Navy gun crew on his ship, were made public at the National Maritime Union convention at Manhattan Center.

The Naval lieutenant's letter expresses his "sincere thanks" to the Captain and his officers and men "for the splendid co-operation furnished me and the Navy crew during this voyage.

Referring to the "splendid relationship that existed between the merchant crew and the Navy crew," Lieutenant Krulcy writes:

IN BEHALF OF NAVY

"Whatever I requested was supplied two-fold, and in many cases my needs were foreseen and satisfied even before I could state them. Your men volunteered in greater numbers than was needed to supplement my crew in the manning of the guns, and surpassed that gesture by standing general quarters at dawn and at dusk, an act which, in some cases, meant a sacrifice of sleep and rest, especially for those men who were coming off their regular watches at those times.

"On behalf of the Navy crew and myself, I congratulate you on this successful maiden voyage of the Booker T. Washington and on the fact that you and your crew have proved yourselves to be worthy members of the United States Merchant Marine, the organization that is contributing so much to the war effort.

"Should the exigencies of the present conflict terminate our pleasant association and necessitate my leaving the gallant Navy crew and Merchant crew now aboard this ship, it would be a source of personal regret to me."

Captain Mulzac replied: "We, of the Merchant Marine, think to the fullest extent that it is only through cooperation and sincere effort that we will win this war and win the peace. Cooperation and effort must come from both sides; therefore success has been attained, not only by the effort of the Merchant Crew, but also by the effort of you and your Gun Crew.

"I must further mention, in particular, the fine quality of men under your command; the discipline and conduct cannot be surpassed. I shall not forget the effort and personal interest, in which you undertook to carry out for the good and welfare of all concerned.

"I sincerely hope that this will not be our last voyage together."

AKA's Launch Drive Against 'Wave' Plan

Atlanta Daily World

JUL 26 1943

WASHINGTON — (ANP) Tired of "steps in the right direction," the Alpha Kappa Alpha sorority's Non-Partisan Council on Negro Affairs Saturday launched a campaign to head off a proposed Navy Department plan by which colored women would be admitted to the WAVES on a segregated basis, according to Thomasina Johnson, AKA lobbyist.

Vigorous protests have been lodged with President Roosevelt and Sec., of the Navy Frank Knox by the Council on Public affairs of the AKA sorority and other organizations over proposed plans to enlist Negroes into the WAVES in segregated units. The plan expected to be announced soon does not provide for Negro officers and is allegedly being held up pending decision on a Negro school to train the recruits.

Faye Stephenson, of the women's advisory committee of the public relations division of the war department, declared in a letter to the President last week:

"We are very much disturbed by information that has reached us that Sec. Knox has approved a plan for the recruitment of Negro WAVES which provides for their training in segregated schools and makes no provisions for Negro officers.

"We are concerned about the effect on the morale of Negro people of the announcement of such a plan and ask you to take the matter up with Sec Knox.

Walter White, executive secretary of the NAACP, telegraphed Knox that "any plan which provides for separate training for Negro auxiliaries or limits opportunities of Negroes in the navy or its auxiliaries be disapproved."

Rufus G. Byars, chairman of the civil liberties committee of the Elks, said in another protest "we want no compromise on the conditions under which Negro women will be admitted to the navy."

Other organizations joining in the objections to a separate setup for Negro WAVES included the Washington Urban League, the United Office and Professional Workers of America, and the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries (CIO.)

Liberty Ship Honors Vann

Peoples Voice
New York, N. Y.

The Liberty Ship Robert L. Vann, about to be launched up at the South Portland Yards, will need a captain and there are many who consider Captain Godfrey, 432 Macon st, Brooklyn, as the ideal master. The Pittsburgh Courier, for whose founder the ship is named, is among the captain's sponsors.

Captain Godfrey has seen 40 years' service in the merchant marine and holds, with but a few others, licenses to master both steam and sailing ships. He was recently recalled to service to man one of the other liberty ships.

The captain saw service in World War 1 and was wounded in torpedo action. He was born in 1888 and graduated from the Ackerman Nautical Academy as a young man. He worked his way up to second mate and then to master. As master or captain he has sailed ships for such companies as the Ward Line, Atlantic Fruit Line, France and Canada S. S. Company, Shell Oil Co., and the Cuba Mail S.S. Co.

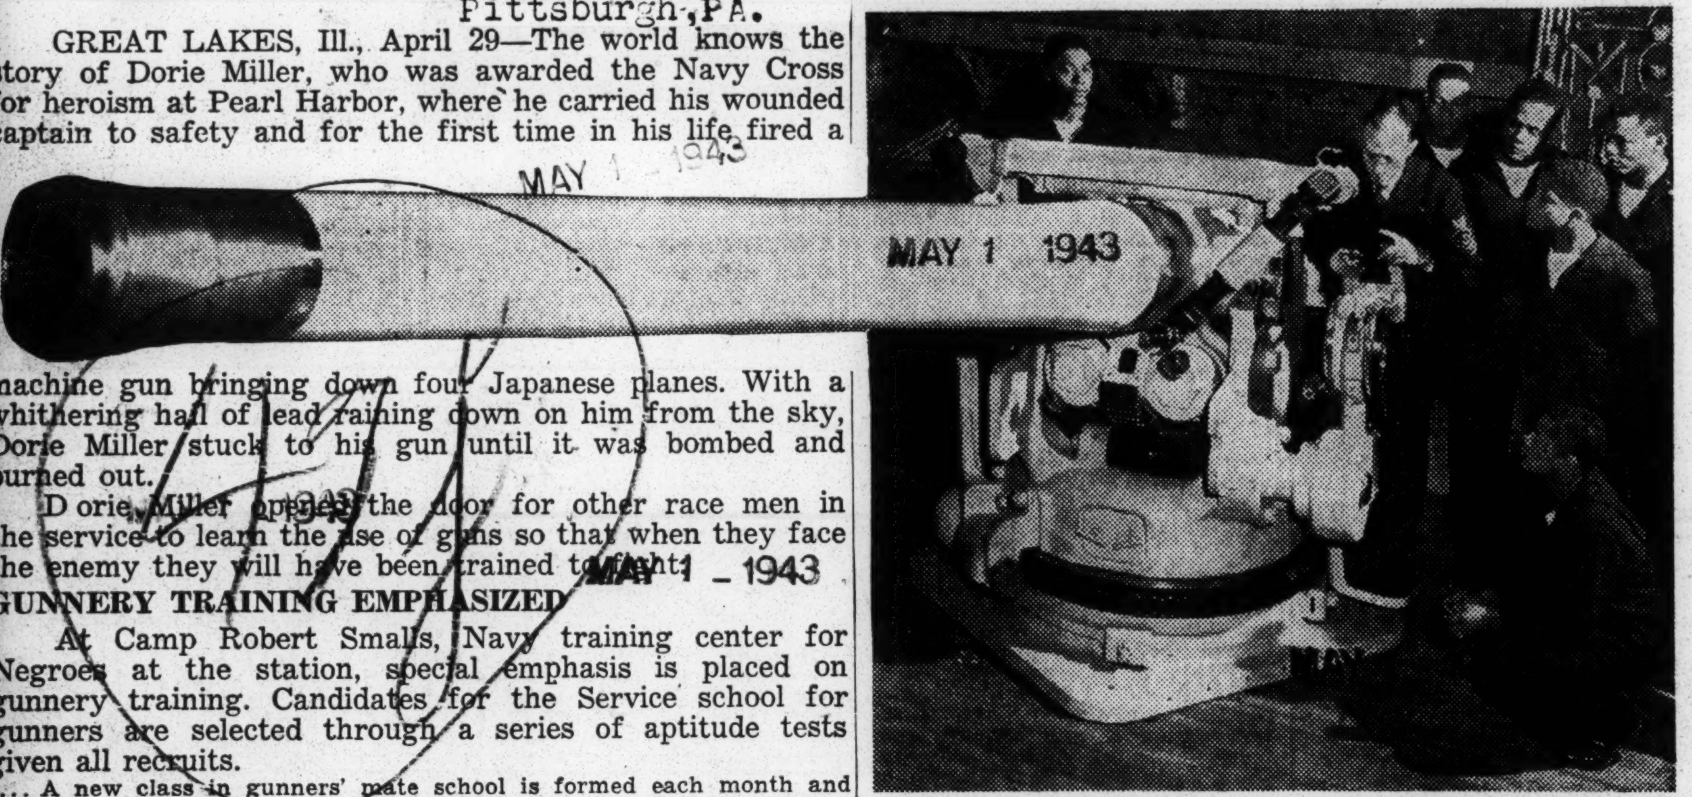
47j-1943

Navy Placing Special Emphasis On Gunnery At Great Lakes As Negro Recruits Thank Dorie Miller For Opening Door

MAY 1 - 1943

Pittsburgh Courier
Pittsburgh, PA.

GREAT LAKES, Ill., April 29—The world knows the story of Dorie Miller, who was awarded the Navy Cross for heroism at Pearl Harbor, where he carried his wounded captain to safety and for the first time in his life fired a machine gun bringing down four Japanese planes. With a whithering hail of lead raining down on him from the sky, Dorie Miller stuck to his gun until it was bombed and burned out.



MAY 1 1943

Dorie Miller opened the door for other race men in the service to learn the use of guns so that when they face the enemy they will have been trained to fight.

MAY 1 - 1943

GUNNERY TRAINING EMPHASIZED

At Camp Robert Smalls, Navy training center for Negroes at the station, special emphasis is placed on gunnery training. Candidates for the Service school for gunners are selected through a series of aptitude tests given all recruits.

... A new class in gunners' mate school is formed each month and each man receives 16 weeks of instruction under veteran naval officers and chief petty officers. More than one-quarter of the men selected for the school are advanced from seaman second class, to petty officer, third class, at the completion of their instruction.

EXTENSIVE TRAINING

During the first two weeks of the course the men are taught the parts, operations, safety precautions, assembling and disassembling of eight guns, including the pistol, rifle, automatic rifle, submachine gun, and machine gun. The remainder of the course covers, in periods of two weeks each, use of the Navy's various types of guns, turrets, sights and battery preparaion, ammunition and care, and aviation ordnance.

DORIE MILLER OPENS WAY FOR REAL NAVY TRAINING

New York, N. Y.
Amsterdam Star-News

MAY 1 5 1943

A year ago next month, Dorie Miller, 23-year-old bluejacket from Waco, Texas, was awarded the Navy Cross for heroism at Pearl Harbor by Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, commander-in-chief of the Pacific Fleet.

The citation, accompanying the award, told how Miller carried his wounded captain to safety while their ship was being attacked by Jap bombers and Zeros, and then manned a machine gun until bombed and burned out, bringing down four Jap planes. That was the first time Miller, a mess attendant, had ever fired a machine gun.

Hundreds of other "Millers" are handling machine guns these days at the U. S. Naval Training Station, Great Lakes, Ill. Perhaps none of them will ever receive the Navy Cross; perhaps fate will never give them the chance to become heroes, but when they leave Great Lakes they will know guns. When they fire upon an Axis foe it will not be the first time they have used their weapons.

In Camp Robert Smalls, Navy training center for Negroes at the station, special emphasis is placed on gunnery training as is the case throughout the Navy. Candidates for the Service School for gunner's mates are selected through a series of aptitude tests given all recruits while in "boot" camp. (The same system is used in choosing men for all other Navy trades and services.)

A new class in gunner's mate school is formed each month and receives 16 weeks of instruction under veteran naval officers and chief petty officers. More than one-quarter of the men picked for the school are advanced from seamen, second class, to petty officer, third class, at the completion of their instruction.

During the first two weeks of the course the men are taught the parts, operations, safety precautions, assembling and disassembling of eight guns, including the pistol, rifle, sub-machine gun, and machine gun. The remainder of the course covers, in periods of two weeks each, use of the Navy's various types of guns, turrets, sights and battery preparation, ammunition and care, and aviation ordnance.

Lost Hand At Guadalcanal, Now Helping Build Ships

Chicago Defender
Chicago, Illinois

APR 3 1943

QUINCY TILLMAN

WILMINGTON, Calif.—He quit college in his third year to join the navy.

He lost his left hand at Guadalcanal last December . .

He spent four months at the Long Beach Naval hospital . . .

This week, with a distinguished service bar and an honorable discharge, he will start life anew as a draftsman at the California Shipbuilding Corporation.

He is Quincy Tillman, strapping 24-year-old Negro, who saw more than four months of action in the Solomons before a machine gun blast from a low-flying Jap plane tore off his left hand, shattered several ribs and missed his heart by "an inch or two."

Unafraid of Jap Zeros, young Tillman disclosed that he hasn't told his wife, his aged mother or any relatives of his wounds. "I just don't want them to worry, but now, with a fine job to start on, I guess they can take it," he said.

Youngest of 12 children, Quincy has four brothers and seven sisters. He studied mechanical and architectural drawing at Prairie View college, 300 miles from his native Troupe, Texas.

In the navy since June, 1941, Tillman was a shipfitter, third class, until he was honorably discharged.

His bride, whom the young hero has not seen since the day after they were married six months ago, is on her way here from Texas. The couple plan to live in Long Beach.

First All-Negro Built Ship Now Ready For Seas

Pittsburgh, Pa.
Courier

MAY 22 1943

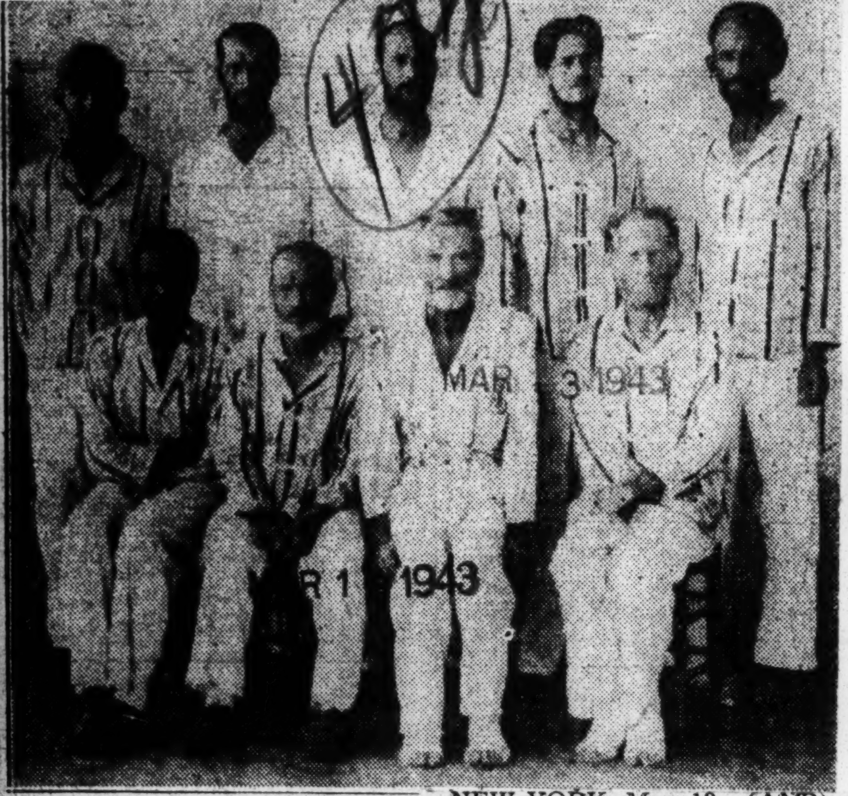
CHESTER, Pa., May 20—(ANP)—The Marine Eagle, U. S. ship built entirely by Negroes, was launched last week at the Sun Shipbuilding and Dry Dock company.

Sun claims that it is the first company to establish a shipyard manned only by Negroes. Employees receive the same rate of pay as those in other yards operated by the company and according to the company president, John G. Pew, "We are greatly pleased with the wor[illegible]

Mrs. Rachel Stevenson, 22 years an employee of the firm, was selected to christen the ship and receive a $1,000 war bond, gift of the company.

39 Days In Lifeboat After Ship Was Sunk

New York Age
New York, N. Y.



MAR 1 3 1943

Fifty-eight men put out to sea to carry the goods to beat the Axis—fifty-eight stalwart members of the unsung Merchant Marine. In S. American waters they met the fury of torpedos unleashed from a Nazi submarine and nine dauntless men came back to tell the tale of a thirty-nine day vigil against hunger and dire danger in shark-swarmed waters.

MAR 1 3 1943

Standing, left to right are Captain E. E. Greenlow; Naval Gun Officers Philip C. Nolan and W. L. Spring; Oiler John Regalc, and Radio Operator J. C. Casey.

Seated are Pantryman George Nelson, sole Negro survivor whose heroism helped save the day; Fireman William Suprey; James Brooks and Second Officer Seabury Cook.

This remarkable photograph was taken at the General Hospital, of a Vichy-controlled Island on the South Atlantic shores.

Chicago Bee
Chicago, Illinois

Naval Officer Tells Sambo Jokes At Commerce Meet

MAY 1 6 1943

NEW YORK, May 13—(ANP)—Rear Adm. Emory S. Land, (U. S. N. retired) chairman of the Maritime commission and War Shipping administration, thinks it funny to tell sambo jokes and speak in Negro dialect when he addresses large audiences such as he did last Wednesday night at the Waldorf Astoria hotel. It was the annual meeting of the United States Chamber of Commerce.

47

Americans must be a good deal more subtle, he said, than the Negro who beat a rap for stealing a dozen chickens through the skillful aid of a court-appointed lawyer. When the judge asked the defendant if he could pay anything for the lawyer, he is supposed to have replied:

"Ah ain't got no money, but I has got a dozen nice fat chickens you gemmen can spit 'tween you."

MAY 1 6 1943

Adm. Land is not particularly noted for ever having done anything for Negroes. In fact, he has been accused of standing in the way of Negroes who sought to get jobs in the merchant marine until the National Maritime commission (CIO) stepped in and put the matter up to President Roosevelt.

Even now Land is accused of blocking Negroes who want training for upgrading in the maritime service at the government operated schools.

MAY 1 6 1943

Seaman, 21, Was Hero of Battle Of Solomons; Tells Experiences

The People's Voice New York N.Y.

FEB 6 1943

By ALFRED A. DUCKETT

When the Japs touched off the Pearl Harbor fuse which ignited a global war, Seaman Harold E. Ward, who is just old enough to vote, was on board one of Uncle Sam's fighting craft. The first thing he did when hell broke loose from the skies was to take his battle station. Since Pearl Harbor he has participated in more maior sea events than you could count on the fingers of one hand.

Special

During the running fight of the task force of nine ships commanded by Admiral Callaghan in the debacle of the Solomon Islands, Ward went down fighting, handling AA guns. Working with the first-aid gang, he was injured by shrapnel which lodged in his legs, back and arms.

Interviewed in PV's office Monday afternoon, the youthful hero told casually and without braggadocio of the dangerous life he has led following the call of the sea under the Stars and Stripes. He arrived here Jan. 17 after spending two months in a navy hospital somewhere in the Pacific area.

We asked if he could describe the feelings of seamen under fire.

"Feelings?" he asked. "When you're under fire, there isn't an awful lot of room for feeling. We set out knowing what to expect. Most people picture seagoing crews as pretty grim folk. That's not true. We're pretty natural—laughing, joking until the time comes, the word is passed to stand by. Then everyone quiets down and gets ready to turn to. I don't think there are words to describe it—how you feel while the actual bombing is going on. Of course, you feel a little punchy after it's all over, but you're glad then that you can still feel anything at all. Out where I've been you forget feelings because every time you turn around the submarines are throwing fish at you."

FEB 6 1943

It didn't take Pearl Harbor to bring Harold Ward to his country's defense. When the Japs struck the Pacific island, Ward had been a seaman for two years. Atlantic City-born, he was brought up in Brooklyn, schooled there and returned to learn the electrician's trade at Atlantic City Trade School.

Living in the neighborhood of a Navy Yard sort of interested him in things nautical. He applied for an electrician's job there after finishing his course, but Pearl Harbor hadn't yet come to change employment policy and he was turned down. So off he went to sea hoping to get a chance to practice his trade there.

FEB 6 1943

We asked him why he wasn't practicing his trade.

He shrugged and said he could not. That is because Seaman Harold Ward knows when to talk and when to button his lip. Men who have been under fire are like that.

But after we had gone we probed about a bit and found out why it is that Harold Ward, hero of several major battles of World War II and competent to do the work of an electrician can only be a messman.

FEB 6 1943

You see, Harold Ward is a victim of a peculiar kind of discrimination. The lads and men like Ward who entered the service before Pearl Harbor, who didn't need the threat of impending draft to send them to their country's cause—those men are not affected by the recent ruling of the Navy Department that Negroes may rise above the berth of petty officers or messmen.

Harold Ward returns to a Naval Hospital sometime about March 1. Due to the seriousness of his injuries he doesn't know whether or not he'll be assigned to combat duty again. But if he is, he'll go willingly.

That is because Harold Ward typifies the quiet, unassuming, courageous spirit of his blood and race brothers all over the nation. It makes him loyal to his country and flag even though because he was loyal in peace time, he cannot enjoy the advantages forced from a wartime emergency.

We knew when the interview had ended the reason why some guy or other had written something or other about the spirit of the men who go down to the sea in ships.

FEB 1943

EDITORIAL

Seaman Ward didn't say it—he couldn't very well—but PV feels it's obvious that there's a situation. which needs attention. Ward, and many others like him, are proving their ability and loyalty in the navy. But the opportunities for advancement past the petty officer or messman rank don't seem to be coming their way.

When the navy department, last year, announced that it was eliminating its traditional ban against Negroes rising above those ranks, everybody realized the action was calculated to encourage Negro enlistments in the service. Every Negro who joined the navy after that ruling is eligible to rise.

But how about those Negroes who were in before the ruling? We know about the "ex post facto" clause applying to statutes whereby one can't be convicted of a violation which took place before the law was passed. But this philosophy should hardly apply to the navy regulation.

That would be too much like exerting an extra penalty for excessive loyalty.—STB

Age-Herald
Birmingham. Ala

INCREASED CALL OF NEGROES SEEN

APR 27 1943

WASHINGTON, April 26—(AP)—The Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard are going to increase their inductions of Negroes. War Manpower Commissioner Paul V. McNutt told a press conference Monday.

He added that he had worked out a "schedule" which would guarantee that the proportion of Negroes in the sea service eventually would be the same as their proportion of the national population—about 10 per cent. The Army, McNutt said, has been inducting Negroes at this rate "right along." He would not say when the sea services would begin taking Negroes in higher proportion.

Ho Hum!

Pittsburgh Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

Nothing New in Navy's Use of Negro Combatants, Declares Secretary of Navy Knox

June 5 1943

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 3—The Navy will use its race units as part of the combatant group, Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox told a House Appropriations subcommittee, but little else concerning their disposition was revealed.

Pointedly questioned by Representative J. William Ditter, Republican of Pennsylvania, Mr. Knox said the Navy plans to use colored personnel "where their capacities will permit them to be used."

Rear Admiral W. H. P. Blandy, chief of the Bureau of Ordnance had previously disclosed that colored men were being used in construction battalions at shore establishments.

Knox, during the hearing, was very vague in his answers. He stated that the Negro complement will be up to 10 per cent of the Navy strength. This percentage will be reached by July, 1944.

The Secretary also stated that a very careful study is being made as to how Negro seamen will be utilized and that combatant units in the Marines are being organized.

47j-1943

Daily World

Atlanta, Ga.

Captain Mulzac Heard In Radio Talk To Indies

JAN 10 1943

Tells Natives Black Folk In Fight For Freedom

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(SNS)—Negro Americans, West Indians and Africans are fighting so that their women and children may enjoy more of that freedom which exists under democracy, Captain Hugh Mulzac, master of the Liberty Ship, Booker T. Washington, declared last week in a series of OWI broadcasts beamed to the peoples of the Caribbean area and the British Isles.

Interviewed by Claude McKay, noted poet and author, Captain Mulzac told his Caribbean radio audience:

NOW SHIP'S MASTER

JAN 10 19

"Last April when I visited Trinidad, I was chief steward of an American ship. And today I am happy to tell you that I am the master of the American ship, the Booker T. Washington. Some of you know that this ship is named for the noble American Negro educator and builder of the all-Negro school of Tuskegee Institute. For 35 years I have sailed the seas and I regard my present position as the greatest honor that has come to me, because it was something that was difficult to achieve. I hope that it will inspire other members of my race to strive hard to win more of these difficult things.

JAN 10 1943

"There have been other Negro captains, such as Captain Cockburn, Captain O'Neil and Captain Webster, all West Indians, who like myself previously sailed under the Union Jack. We West Indians in our homes are surrounded by deep water and so we naturally cast, sponsored by the A. F. of L., C. I. O., and Railroad Brotherhoods, originated in New York and was rebroadcast to the British Isles. It included interviews with several members of the crew of the Booker T. Washington, who praised the leadership of Captain Mulzac on their first trip.

Harry Alexander, white deck engineer, told how Captain Mulzac had been teaching his men navigation. Alexander said he had been sailing for twenty-two years in the engine department of various ships. When asked how the Booker T. Washington compares with other ships he declared:

TEACHES CREW

"Listen. I've been on ships where the captains sat up nights thinking of things to do to irritate the crew. Our old man spends his time teaching us navigation. In fine weather, we have two or three classes a week, on the afterdeck. One man in our navigation class is going to take his examination for a mate's license, and there will be others like him, soon."

Speaking on this broadcast, Captain Mulzac said in part:

"I am captain of a ship with a mixed crew of white men and Negroes from eighteen different nations. Our chief officer and second officer, chief engineer and radio operator are from the West Indies. Our first, second and third engineers and carpenter are white. And so my crew stand together as a symbol of that democratic way of life for which we are all fighting.

JAN 10 1943

CREW WITH HIM

"I know how important it is for me to get my ship through. Every ounce of strength I have, every thought I have is concentrated on that job. If we cannot get through to the men on the fighting fronts, we are ready to die in the attempt. And my crew is with me all the way.

"I have said I was proud of my men. My feelings go further than that. I feel that our crew is a fine example of democracy in action. And the more action we see the more opportunities we are given to fight for what we believe in, and the better we'll take it.

"I am proud to say that the men and officers of the Booker T. Washington are as fine an example as there is in the world of black men and white men united for a quick and smashing victory over the Hitlerites, the Facists and the Japanese—in 1934!"

Nashville, Tenn. [illegible]

January 1, 1943

Navy To Accept Negro Volunteers For Mess Duties

JAN 1 - 1943

Local selective service boards have been notified by state headquarters that Negroes may now volunteer for induction into the U. S. Naval Reserve as mess attendants, and that as the Navy's needs for men in other classifications are announced, the local boards will be informed of these later needs.

Lt. Comdr. E. E. Keith, officer in charge of the Nashville Navy recruiting station, announced today that men 17 years of age and over 37 are being accepted for enlistment in all other classifications and ratings.

Only Negroes between ages of 18 and 38 who desire to enlist as mess attendants are at the present time eligible from the selective service rolls, Commander Keith said.

Local draft boards have been informed as to procedure in the cases of Class 1-A registrants who wish to volunteer for naval service.

Negroes wishing to volunteer as mess attendants can obtain the necessary information from either the local draft boards or from any Navy recruiting station. However, they must state their choice to their local draft board prior to receiving notice of induction.

Argus

St. Louis, Missouri

Sea Biscuits Serving

Lay Runway For Invasions

JAN 1 - 1943

By Julius L. Hibler
Carpenter's Mate Third Class
U. S. N. R.

NORFOLK, Va., — When the United States Navy decided to give Negroes a chance to use their skill in various trades, more than 1,000 colored men immediately enlisted, and on the twenty-sixth day of September this year, reported for active duty at Allen, the Naval Construction Training Center near Norfolk, Va.

Are Tradesmen

Eelctricians, carpenters, drillers, blacksmiths, riggers, truck drivers, pipefitters, painters, draftsmen, steel workers, laborers, and men of some 50 other trades were placed in one unit to make the thirty-fourth U. S Naval Construction Battalion, a unit of that group becoming better known as the "Seabees". More than 300 of these were given advanced ratings due to special skills in their respective trades.

The few weeks at Allen might be said to be the hardest period of anyone's Naval career — detention for physical check-up and inoculation. The first day was easy — assignment of quarters, medical inspection, drawing Navy clothing, and filling out experience record cards.

Get Stiff Training

JAN 1 - 1943

Next morning the job of converting the men into "Seabees" began in earnest. From reveille at 5:45 a.m. to taps at 9:30 p.m., there were few idle moments; and for three and one-half hours in both morning and afternoon we followed a prescribed training schedule, which consisted of courses in military courtesy, manual of arms, combat signals, rifle marksmanship, bayonet drill, extended order marching drill, hand grenade, armaments, chemical warfare, base layout, and air-raid precautions.

Emphasis obviously was on the military, for this was the phase of our coming job with which we were least familiar. The students of base layout and air-raid precautions, however, provided an insight into the real nature of the job ahead. Since all of the "Seabees" had some skill to start with, training was brief but intensive. However, every man was given a course in the fundamentals of all skills needed to construct a faraway base for the fighting fleets.

At Camp Bradford we are given the finishing touches to our previous fundamental military training. With miles of beaches along the Atlantic Coast, brackish swamps, wooded uplands, and lowlands, tough with scrub brush, Bradford offers a terrain for training that matches the difficulties we "Seabees" might expect in any distant nook or fissure of the globe. Here we received more combat training, including landing operations and the use of light artillery and anti-aircraft guns.

JAN 1 - 1943

Through the foresight of our battalion commander, Lieutenant Commander J. P. McBean Jr., this Negro battalion has been placed under the supervision of a group of the best white trade instructors to be found anywhere in the nation. Because 75 percent of this Negro group came from the South, the officers selected to lead us also came from those parts. It has been clearly shown by our leaders that they want, as much as we do, to make this first group of Negro Seabees" one of the best battalions to leave the States.

Negroes May Enlist In Navy Voluntarily

Florence, Ala., Herald

January 8, 1943

Authority to accept Negroes between 18 and 38 years of age, who desire to volunteer for naval service through their selective service boards, has been received at the Birmingham Navy Recruiting Headquarters, Lt. Comdr. J. E. Meredith, Officer in charge, said Monday.

Negro volunteers will be inducted into the Navy as apprentice seamen and their ratings will be changed to mess attendants, third class, at the recruiting station after induction.

Negroes who desire to volunteer for the Navy should visit their selective service boards, procure the proper induction papers and then present themselves to a Navy recruiting station.

Those living in or near Birmingham should report to Room 9 Post Office Building. Those at a distance from Birmingham may apply at the Navy recruiting station nearest their homes and receive transportation to Birmingham for induction the recruiting officer said.

No orders have been received for the induction into the Navy of white men who are between 18 and 38 years of age, but both white and Negro men who are between 17 and 18 and between 38 and 50 years of age will be accepted as quotas permit at any one of the Navy recruiting stations in the Birmingham district Lt. Comdr. Meredith said.

To Be Guests At Testimonial In New York City

"Daily World"

Atlanta, Ga.

JAN 3 1943

Steers 10,500 Ton Ship Thru Submarine Waters

NEW YORK CITY, — (SNS)—A dinner in honor of Captain Hugh N. Mulzac, first Negro to command a vessel in American maritime history, and his United Nations crew aboard the new Liberty ship, BOOKER T. WASHINGTON, will be given by the Greater New York Industrial Union Council, CIO, at the Hotel Commodore, Tuesday, evening, January 12, it was announced Saturday.

JAN 3 1943

Captain Mulzac and the crew recently landed the vessel at an East Coast port after its maiden voyage through submarine-infested waters and have accepted the invitation to come to New York for the dinner, the Council said.

GOVERNOR TO SPEAK

Governor Charles A. Poletti and Councilman A. Clayton Powell, Jr., will be among the speakers.

Joseph Curran, President of the CIO Council, hailed the dinner as a symbol of United Nations' unity and a triumph of democracy over Fascist race theories.

"To win this war we must mobilize the resources of all the people of the world, — regardless of race, creed, color or national origin. This dinner, commemorating the successful voyage of the BOOKER T. WASHINGTON, so capably commanded by Captain Mulzac and manned by seamen of 18 different nationalities, is concrete proof that men of all nations and colors can live and work together in peace and harmony," Curren said.

ORGANIZATIONS AID

Organizations supporting the dinner, in addition to many CIO and AFL unions, are: National Negro Congress, National Urban League, Negro Labor Victory Committee, Brooklyn Victory Council for Equal Opportunity, Brooklyn Lodge 32, Benevolent Protective Order of Elks, Congress of Benevolent and Fraternal Organizations, Carleton Avenue branch, Y. M. C. A., National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

JAN 25 1943 "Life Magazine" Chicago, Ill.

JAN 25 1943

SINGER MARIAN ANDERSON CHRISTENS S. S. "BOOKER T. WASHINGTON" WITH FINE SPLASH

Mulzac Praises Ship, Fine Crew After Maiden Voyage

JAN 3 1943

First Negro Skipper Asserts He's Realized Life's Ambition

NEW YORK—(ANP) — Disembarking from the 10,500 ton U.S.S Booker T. Washington at an east port Capt. Hugh N. Mulzac declared the maiden voyage of the vessel a "thorough success" and said the mixed crew "get along very well."

Capt. Mulzac, the first Negro to receive command of a merchant ship of the size of Booker T. Washington in the American merchant marine, said he had realized his life's ambition when he became the ship's master.

The Liberty Ship, christened a few weeks ago at impressive launching ceremonies in California, has a crew representing 17 nationalities. 25 per cent of whom are Negroes, including the chief engineer, four deck officers and the wireless operator.

JAN 3 1943

PICKED OWN MEN

They were selected by Capt. Mulzac with the aid of the National Maritime union after the War Shipping administration and the Maritime commission instructed him to pick his own men.

"This is like a home here for us all," said Mulzac. "We get along very well. There has been no trouble of any kind, for the men who are here wanted to sail on this ship. At sea we held a meeting and I addressed the crew, saying that we now had a fair opportunity to show that we can handle a ship as well as other people."

The captain was born in St. Vincent, British West Indies, in 1886 He first went to sea in 1907 on a Norwegian bark. During the last war he served as a first mate on British-owned vessels. He was denied appointment as master in America because of his color, although he did serve as an officer on American flagships.

JAN 3 1943

WORKED AS STEWARD

In recent years Mulzac has continued his sea-faring career working often in the steward departments of freighters. Before his appointment as shipmaster of the Booker T. he was employed on the intercoastal freighter Montanan in war service.

JAN 3 1943

Mulzac has continued his studies in navigation and was prepared to accept the appointment after a short refresher course. He studied during the last war at Swansea Nautical school in Wales and was graduated from the shipping board's school in Baltimore in 1918. Further study came through correspondence courses and he holds a certificate in compass operation from the Sperry Gyroscope company.

Johnston, S. C., Herald
January 8, 1943

OPPORTUNITIES OFFERED NEGROES IN THE NAVY

Information has been received at the Greenwood Navy Recruiting Substation that negroes 17 years of age who meet the physical and educational requirements may still enlist in the U. S. Navy as apprentice seaman according to information received from the Main Navy Recruiting Station at Columbia, South Carolina.

Due to the urgen need of negro mess attendants the Naval Recruiting Service stated that all negroes between the ages of 17 and 50 who are qualified can be enlisted in that branch of service.

All interested persons are asked to make immediate application at the nearest Navy Recruiting Station before getting a release from their selective service board.

A traveling recruiting party will be in Edgefield at the Court House each Wednesday.

Peoples Voice
New York, N. Y.
FEB 13 1943

Philadelphia Woman First Negro Inspector for Navy

PHILADELPHIA.—Edith White Garcia, first Negro woman inspector appointed by the USNavy, has just received a promotion from third to fourth grade rating.

Somerville, Tenn., Falcon
December 31, 1942

Negroes May Enlist As Mess Attendants

NASHVILLE—Local Selective Service Boards have been notified by the state headquarters that negroes may now volunteer for induction into the Naval Service as mess attendants, and that as the Navy's needs for men in other classifications are announced the local boards will be informed of these later needs.

Negroes wishing to volunteer as mess attendants can obtain the necessary information either from their local boards or from any Navy recruiting station. However, they must state their choice to their local board prior to receiving notice of induction.

Andalusia, Ala., News
January 21, 1943

Negro Selectees May Join Navy Voluntarily

Authority to accept Negroes between 18 and 38 years of age, who desire to volunteer for Naval Service through their Selective Service Board, has been received at the Birmingham Navy Recruiting Headquarters, Lt. Comdr. J. E. Meredith, Officer in charge, said Monday.

Negro Volunteers will be inducted into the Navy as Apprentice Seamen and their ratings will be changed to Mess Attendants, third class, at the Recruiting Station after induction.

Negroes who desire to volunteer for the Navy should visit their Selective Service boards, procure the proper induction papers and then present themselves to a Navy Recruiting Station.

Those living in or near Birmingham should report to room 9, Pos Office building. Those at a distance from Birmingham may apply at the Navy Recruiting Station nearest their homes and receive transportation to Birmingham for induction, the Recruiting Officer said.

No orders have been received for the induction into the Navy of white men who are between 18 and 38 years of age, but both white and Negro men between the age of 17 and 18 and 38 and 50 years of age will be accepted as quotas permit at any one of the Navy Recruiting stations in the Birmingham district, Lt. Comdr. Meredith said.

Chicago Tribune
Chicago, Illinois
MAR 21 1943

F. D. R.'s Negro Valet Joins Navy; Now at Great Lakes

George Clinton Fields, Negro valet to President Roosevelt for the last 10 years, is in training as an apprentice seaman at Great Lakes Naval training station, it was disclosed yesterday by station officials. Fields accompanied the President when he toured the station last September and decided then to join the navy, he said. He enlisted from Washington and arrived at the station last week.

47j-1943

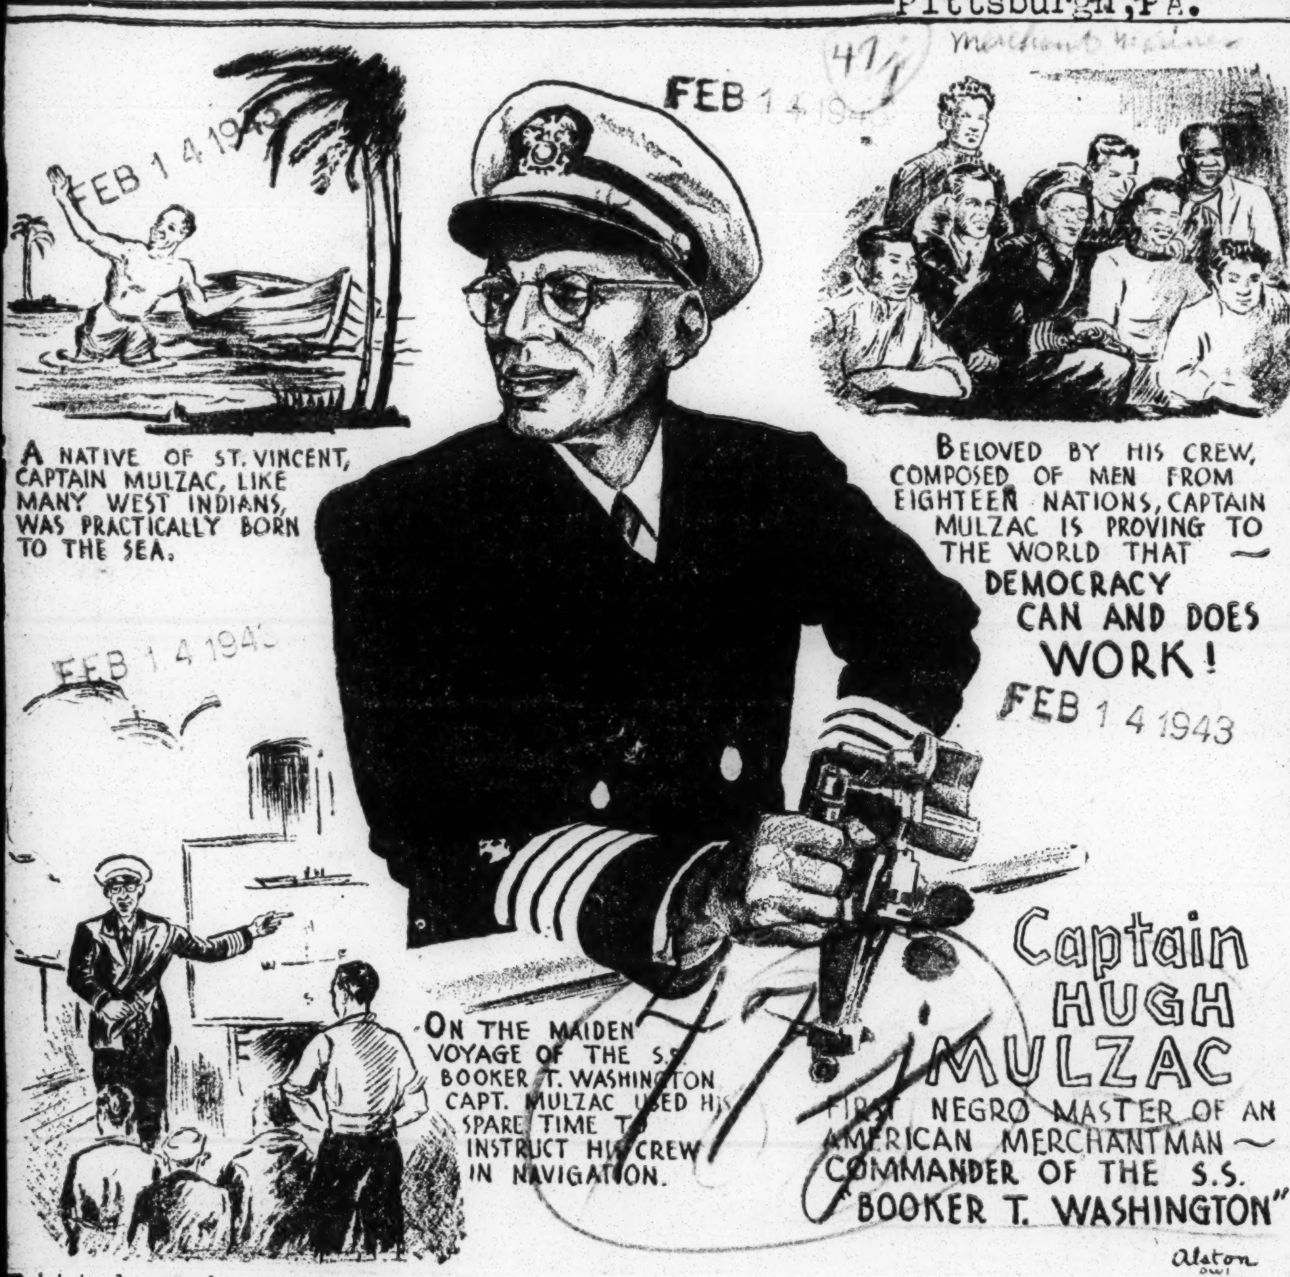
The Color Guard.. Capt. Hugh Mulzac

Pittsburgh Courier
Pittsburgh, PA.

47j

merchant marine

FEB 14 1943



A NATIVE OF ST. VINCENT, CAPTAIN MULZAC, LIKE MANY WEST INDIANS, WAS PRACTICALLY BORN TO THE SEA.
BELOVED BY HIS CREW, COMPOSED OF MEN FROM EIGHTEEN NATIONS, CAPTAIN MULZAC IS PROVING TO THE WORLD THAT — DEMOCRACY CAN AND DOES WORK!
ON THE MAIDEN VOYAGE OF THE S.S. BOOKER T. WASHINGTON CAPT. MULZAC USED HIS SPARE TIME TO INSTRUCT HIS CREW IN NAVIGATION.
Captain HUGH MULZAC
FIRST NEGRO MASTER OF AN AMERICAN MERCHANTMAN — COMMANDER OF THE S.S. "BOOKER T. WASHINGTON"
Alston
OWI

Pittsburgh Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

No Headlines For Navy Mechanics, But They're "In On Every Kill"

JAN 30 1943

GREAT LAKES, Ill., Jan. 28—For every Navy crew that wings its plane off an aircraft carrier to engage the enemy, back on the "flat-top" are scores of men just as important to the Navy's air-arm.

Probably these Bluejackets—the aviation metalsmiths and aviation machinist mates who keep the fighting craft tuned for battle—will never see their names in headlines, but they are "in at the kill" just as much as the flyers. Still others of their rates perform similar duties at flight schools and air bases throughout the country.

Among Bluejackets training in this important branch of the Navy these days at the United States Naval Training Station, Great Lakes, Ill., are many Negroes, chosen to attend the Navy's Service Schools for aviation metalsmiths and machinist mates through a series of aptitude tests given every sailor during recruit training.

After completion of the eight-week basic training period, the sailors do not, of course, come in for practical instruction immediately. First on their schedule is a month of mathematics and layout study, based principally on its functioning in so far as the construction, operation and maintenance of aircraft is concerned.

Closing their textbooks, the men move on to the shops where for the next five months their "shipmates" are airplane engines, airplane frameworks and airplane tools. Upon completion of the course the Bluejackets have a sound foundation of the theory of flight and are able to maintain and repair practically any one of the many multitudinous parts which go to make up a plane.

Among the men working on the project, under the tutelage of commissioned officers and chief petty officers, are Theodore Burgess, Los Angeles, Calif.; Lamar O. Shipp, Ames, Ia.; Edward Kaufman, Los Angeels; Melvin Holland, Morgntown, W. Va.; and Russell Dash, Acushnet, Mass. Robert E. Handy, Baltimore, Md.; Charles R. Hunter, Paris, Tenn.; Adolph Lloyd, 25, Los Angeles, Calif.; Andrew A. Gainer, Los Angeles; Henry Ratcliffe, Chicago, Ill.; William Rhoden, Chicago, and Joseph McDuffie, St. Louis.

JAN 30 1943

47j

EDITORIAL

1-2-43

CAPT. HUGH E. MULZAC, skipper of the Liberty ship Booker T. Washington, has been chosen as the Man of the Year by PV's editors. Capt. Mulzac was selected from among those who have contributed something during the past 12 months toward the progress of the Negro and democracy. The fact that Capt. Mulzac is capable of commanding a ship is deserving of commendation. The fact that, given an opportunity, he has proven his ability equal to that of any other man in his position, regardless of race, creed or color, merits higher praise. But the fact that, as the first Negro American merchant marine captain in history, he has opened a way for others of his race (and there are, or will be others) the fact that he has demonstrated to the world at large--at a time when such demonstrations are sorely needed--that men of all nations can and will work together for the common good, place his achievement above the level of ordinary pioneering. For 1942 then, Capt. Hugh E. Mulzac is the Man of the Year. It remains for those of us behind him to follow thru what he has begun. Then he will become a Man of the Age.--STB

Bystander
Des Moines, Iowa

Excerpts From John W. Rice's Keynote Speech At Crusier Houston Rally Monday

"Somewhere in the Java Sea the first cruiser Houston has been lost. Peace to her remains and rest to the souls of the brave men who went down with her. What now seems just months ago the citizens of Houston gathered by the thousands to view her as she lay at anchor in our ship channel. Then the cruiser Houston was a symbol of the respect which this nation had for the sons and daughters of the intrepid pioneers of this great state who had reared upon its coastal plains a citadel of commerce and of trade which ranked with the best of the world.

"For that ship to have been so named was a tribute to the daring leaders of Houston and those who followed them. At that time our thoughts were all of peace. We were beginning to wonder how to feed all of our hungry and clothe all of our naked. We were striving to restore order in a nation which overnight had come into commercial and eonomic choas.

"Then with startling suddenness, it seemed that the forces of evil were let loose upon the earth. Greed, arrogance, lust for power at the expense of the souls of other men on the part of the three nations that now we call the Axis, made us realize that America had no greater problem than that of determining whether or not freedom or slavery should rule the world.

"No more significant gathering has ever been assembled than that which is here tonight. Nowhere in the world have men and women gathered so forgetful of the little petty things which are born of lack of thought of the kinship which we have learned that men all over the world have to each other. In this Coliseum is gathered a typical example of the world as we hope that it

DEC 26 1942

47j

t sometime will be.

DEC 26 1942

"Here on this platform are representatives of some of the 29 nations of the world who join America in this fight for freedom. Behind me are the flags of all of the nations who, whether conquered or not, nevertheless profess the desire for freedom. Before me sit the families of those who will make up the crew of the new cruiser Houston when it begins its career for freedom. All around and about in this vast building are those of all ranks and kinds who have given their time and sacrificially of their money in order that this celebration might take place. Soon upon this platfrom a Texan, a leading figure of the world by reason of the keenness of his mind and the greatness of his soul will pass to the hands of the Secretary of the Navy, he who guides the destinies of our ships and of our men who go down to sea, a check for an almost unbelievable amount of money. Yes, in this gathering Houston gives to the world a sample of what it calls The Pattern for Victory.

"Here in miniature, as it seems when we think of the world nature of this war, Houston and Texas are proving that what it takes to win a war and to look forward confidently toward winning the peace actually is a fact.

DEC 26 1942

"Rightly do we have satisfaction in the size of this gift. Rightly do men wonder at the zeal of a city which gives not one but almost two cruisers. This is a tremendous sum of money. But as important as it is that there shall be money in large amounts with which to create the munitions of war, it is more important to realize that we also know that we cannot pay for freedom in the coin of the realm alone. Here in this place are the surviving members of the families of those Houstonians who went down to glorious death in the Java Sea. Here also are the mothers and fathers of others who will take their places in the arena of death in order that there shall be freedom and life. And let it be realized that these relatives are but types.

DEC 26 1942

"All over the peace loving world, all throughout the United Nations there is this same spirit. As Texans of all races and kinds are facing the enemies of the souls of men all the way from the frozen North to the burning sands of the Libyan Desert and the infested jungles of the New Guinea wilderness, just so are men of all races and creeds and kinds all over the world. The American parents here tonight are replicas of Chinese parents, Russian parents, Czech parents, Pole parents, French parents, African parents, Holland parents, Norwegian parents, and all of those who compose the forces of freedom.

DEC 26 1942

"Here is the secret weapon of the Allied Nations. A heritage of freedom, the will to win, not more lands to conquer, but freedom for the souls of men and a unity of purpose that is unshakable. The leaders of the forces of the jungle and the beast in a million years could not duplicate the achievement of Houston which this gathering here tonight celebrates. The lessons learned from the trials and failures of human beings through all of the generations of history are being proven in the actions of Houston here tonight.

"We are united in the battle for freedom, not only for ourselves but for all men wherever they may be. We are determined that whenever or wherever the need may be America, all America, United America with the United Nations will fill that need. We glory in giving up the comforts of our bodies for the sake of our souls.

DEC 26 1942

"With the clear and unshakable purpose that freedom for all men shall be brought upon this earth in spirit and in truth, we shall pay the price of this war, whether month by month, year by year or generation by generation—We shall win this war. And we shall in like manner win the peace, for we know that there can be—we are determined that there shall be a brotherhood of man—A federation of the world."

Race Marine Unit Overseas

~~Pittsburgh Courier~~

Pittsburgh Pa.

WASHINGTON, May 13—Marine Corps headquarters this week disclosed that one unit of colored Marines is already on overseas' duty and others are being trained in artillery, anti-aircraft, communications and other fields.

MAY 15 1943

All told, the report states that fully 2,000 Negro Marines are in training at the 51st Composite Defense Battalion, Montford Point, Camp LeJeune, New River, N. C., and new recruits are arriving at the rate of 40 a day.

When the first Negro Marines were enlisted June 1, 1942, a 167-year tradition of non-inclusion was broken.

MAY 15 1943

Pittsburgh Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

British Welcome Mulzac And Crew

FEB 20 1943

By RANDY DIXON
(Pittsburgh Courier War Correspondent)

LONDON, Feb. 18 (Censored)—History added another glowing and epochal chapter to the contributions of brown Americans in the war effort when Capt. Hugh N. Mulzac recently brought his 10,500-ton Liberty-type ship, Booker T. Washington, into port "somewhere in England" to complete the first trans-Atlantic crossing in nautical annals of a vessel captained by a colored man and flying the American flag.

The arrival was epic in many respects and, taking cognizance of this fact, a welcoming party, composed of high government officials, movie newsreel operators, newspaper and magazine photographers, and three selected news correspondents, was on hand to congratulate Mulzac and his "checkerboard" crew of mixed nationalities on its feat of completing a "rough crossing all the way" with its heavily laden cargo of essentials for the war effort in 48 hours less time than had been expected.

ONE BIG HAPPY FAMILY

Glancing about at the crew of Irish, English, Norwegians, Hondurians, Belgians, Danes, Swedes, West Indians, Filipinos, and Americans, Captain J. F. Devlin, who headed the welcoming party as operating manager of the U. S. War Shipping Administration, commented:

FEB 20 1943

"This crew is just like one big happy family."

CALLS CREW "THE FINEST"

Captain Mulzac beamed assent, adding that his crew was the finest any ship could have and that there had been no trouble whatever.

"We don't stop to delve into nationalities," Mulzac continued, "we are so wrapped up in doing our best to carry out every assignment. And we certainly intend to do just that until the war is ended. We want to have our places in the complete democracy which is to follow and we want to say we have worked for it. And we want to have and enjoy democracy not only outside but home in the United States as well. We men want to become known in the world not as a race of people but as men—working men all. There must be no recurrence of the fate that befell me when I had to wait 20 years to make use of an unlimited Master Mariner's License."

WARM IN PRAISE OF THEIR PILOT

The crew, many of its members of the seafarer's vintage, was legion in its praise of Mulzac's seamanship, knowledge, administration, and ability to handle men.

"He's a wonderful leader and knows his business. We never worked under a better captain." This was the substance of the expressions of the crew.

COMPETENT COLORED OFFICERS

Of the nine officers under Mulzac, six are colored—Adolphus Folkes of Florida, chief officer; Clifton Lastice of St. Lucia, B.W.I., and New York, second officer; Henry DuPont of St. Kitts, B.W.I., third officer; Cecil Blackman of British Guiana and New York, chief wireless operator; Ignascio Irving Smith of Trinidad, India, and Washington, D. C., chief engineer, and William Barker of Los Angeles, purser.

All these officers boast extensive nautical backgrounds except Barker, who, as "Billy Metcalfe" was a professional light heavyweight under management of Eddie (Rochester) Anderson of srceen and radio fame. Significantly, each officer made a sizeable personal sacrifices in salary, security and position in normal life to respond to Mulzac's call for competent Negro marines "to show the world we know how to handle big ships."

FEB 20 1943

SEAFARER SINCE BUT 16

Folkes was granted a leave by New York City from his job as captain of a Harlem scow. He has been at sea since 16. He was first mate 14 years on a New York City harbor tug.

Lastice has been at sea since 15, sailing out of the English port of Cardiff. He was graduated from the Technical college at Cardiff and became a shipmate of Mulzac's on the S. S. Talisman," a vessel engaged in coastal trade. His wife, Mrs. Marietta Lastice, is a nurse in the New York City Health Department.

FINE ACHIEVEMENT RECORD

Blackman won war and victory medals in the last World War while serving in the British Navy as a signalman. He came to the United States in 1920 and, in 1921, held a first class radio operator's licence. He was chief radio operator on Marcus Garvey's S. S. General Goethals in 1925 and then became the clerk in the Registry Department of the College Station Post Office, New York City. He held this job until last September. He is unmarried but his fiancee is Miss Mabell Harris of New York City.

FEB 20 1943

Smith is the only man of his race holding a chief engineer's licence. For the past six years he has been chief engineer of the Thirteenth Division Public Schools, Washington, D. C., while, prior to that, he spent 10 years as assistant—then chief engineer on the Bull Freight Lines, operating between New York, Baltimore, and Central American ports. He studied engineering in the United States and, on the Booker T. Washington, directs a crew of 14 assistants, only one of whom is colored. Captain Devlin pronounced Smith's engine room on the Booker T. Washington as "one of the finest kept I have ever seen." The engine is 2,500 horsepower, steam-propelled, reciprocating triple-expansion, developing a speed of 12 knots.

ILLUSTRIOUS CAREER

Capt. Mulzac, 54, was born in St. Vincents, B.W.I. As a boy, he lived in Swansea, England, and sailed out of that place and Cardiff as an ordinary seaman when 19. He came to the United States in 1911 and, from 1918-1921 inclusive, was master of a small vessel making the rounds from Halifax, Boston and New York to Central American ports. He became Marcus Garvey's master on the ill-fated S.S. Yarmouth from 1922-1923 inclusive. A master since 1920, only one other Negro, Harry Colburn, an Englishman, holds a similar license as Mulzac. Capt. Mulzac is a graduate of three nautical schools in the United States: the U. S. Nautical school, where he completed a course in 1918; the International Correspondpence Nautical school, Scranton, Pa., where he took up ocean navigation in 1922, and the Speery Gyroscope school, Brooklyn, N. Y., in 1923, where he also received a diploma. In addition, Mulzac was principal in his own school, the Universal School of Technology and Applied Sciences, New York.

RICH MARITIME BACKGROUND

Mulzac comes from a family of seafarers. His father was a shipbuilder and his brother, John, was captain of a schooner in the West Indies. A resident of Brooklyn for the past 12 years, the captain's wife, Mrs. Marie Mulzac, and their five children (four of them girls) live at 436 Dean street. The eldest Elaine, 22, is a reporter for an outstanding colored weekly newspaper.

Mulzac's main hobby and diversion is baseball. He refers to the Booker T. Washington as a nice ship that "handles well." The ship was built by the California Shipbuilding Company and was launched in early September, last year, at Los Angeles. Marian Anderson christened it and sang "The Star Spangled Banner," the American national anthem, as it moved down the ways for its maiden voyage. The ship was commissioned immediately and delegated to coastal trade.

FEB 20 1943

THIRD VOYAGE FOR MULZAC SHIP

The latest voyage across the Atlantic was the Booker T. Washington's third—but its maiden one across the Atlantic. The vessel is owned by the U. S. War Shipping Administratnon, being operated by the Lucken-Black Lines under wartime agreement. The crew numbers 42, with additional gunners.

Included in the welcoming group for the Booker T. Washington here in London were Capt. Devlin; his chief assistant, John Treckman, port commander; Col. R. G. Simpson, Lt. A. Robert Gale, representing the U. S. Navy, and Maj. John Gaffney, resident manager of U. S. Lines in Europe.

New York Age
New York, N. Y.

Negro Messman Held For Attack On His Captain On Voyage

MAR 20 1943

For an alleged attack upon his captain while at sea, 52-year-old Jerry Ellison, messman, was held by FBI agents in this area last week.

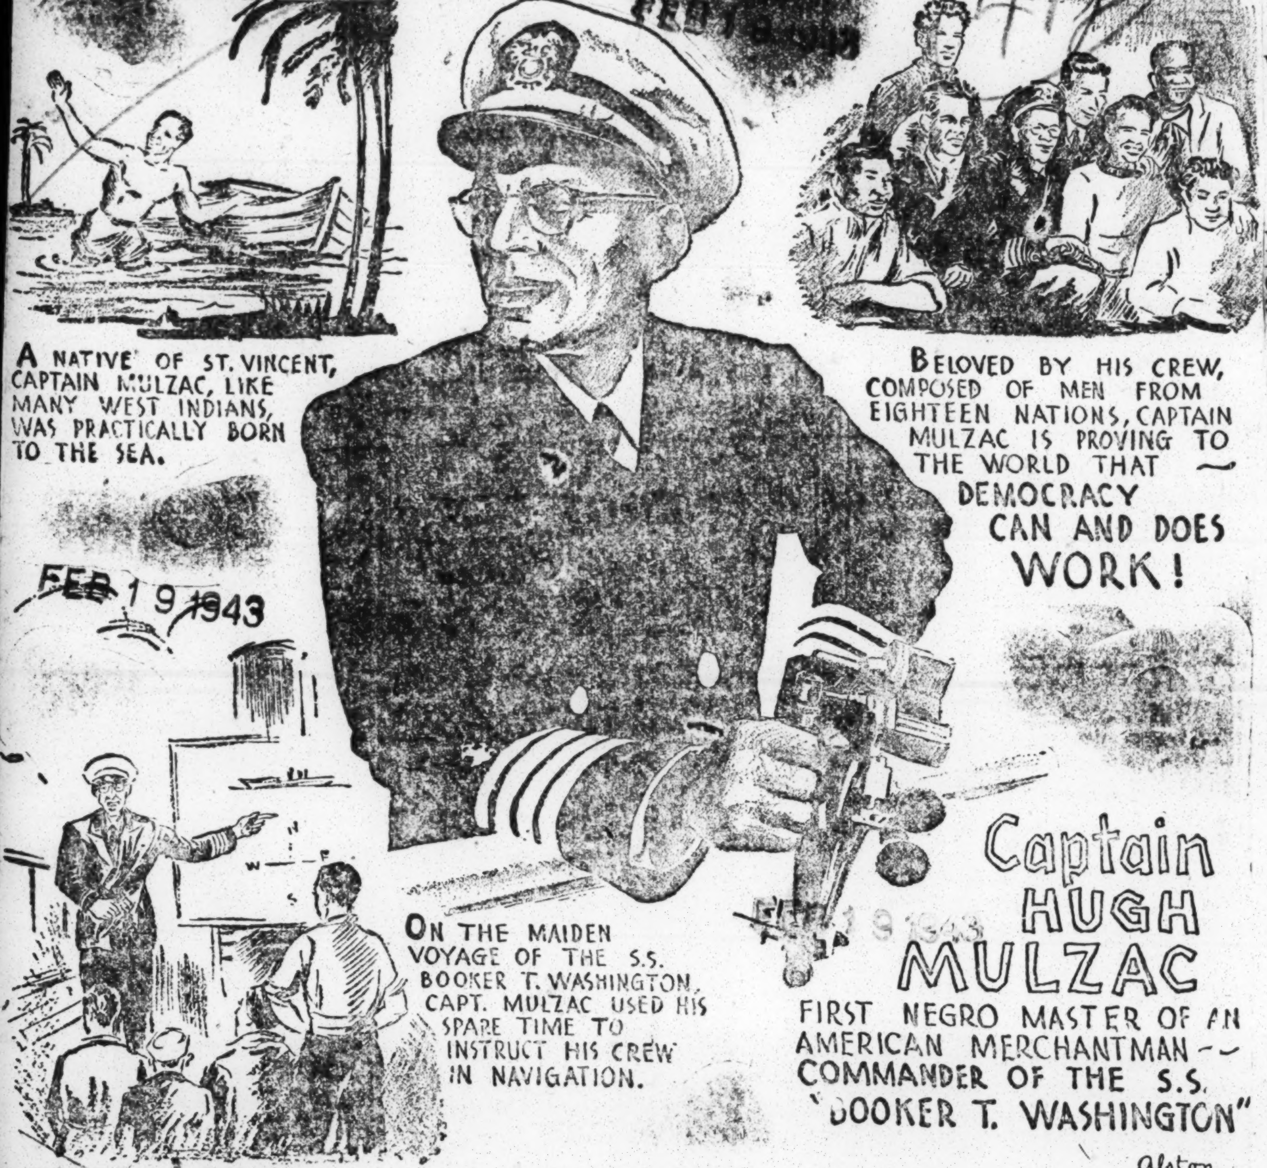
After a period of illness during which he had allegedly been so disgruntled that his efficiency was impaired, Ellison was ordered into the ship's sick bay by the captain.

When he refused to obey orders and the captain remonstrated, the messman is said to have drawn a knife during the ship's trip to Trinidad.

MAR 20 1943

On charges of felonious assault on the high seas, Ellison was held for a hearing before U. S. Commissioner Garrett W. Cotter.

47j-1943
The Plaindealer
Kansas City, Kan.



FEB 1 9 1943
A NATIVE OF ST. VINCENT, CAPTAIN MULZAC, LIKE MANY WEST INDIANS, WAS PRACTICALLY BORN TO THE SEA.
BELOVED BY HIS CREW, COMPOSED OF MEN FROM EIGHTEEN NATIONS, CAPTAIN MULZAC IS PROVING TO THE WORLD THAT — DEMOCRACY CAN AND DOES WORK!
FEB 1 9 1943
ON THE MAIDEN VOYAGE OF THE S.S. BOOKER T. WASHINGTON, CAPT. MULZAC USED HIS SPARE TIME TO INSTRUCT HIS CREW IN NAVIGATION.
FEB 1 9 1943
Captain HUGH MULZAC
FIRST NEGRO MASTER OF AN AMERICAN MERCHANTMAN — COMMANDER OF THE S.S. "BOOKER T. WASHINGTON"
Alston

47j

OWI

The Plaindealer
Kansas City, Kan.

RACIAL DANGER SEEN IN WOMEN'S DRAFT

Washington, Feb. 19. (ANP)—Proposed plans for the registration of women to aid in the war effort are likely to develop further problems in racial relations.

FEB 1 9 1943

Basing this statement on the position taken by many white women, now working in defense plants it is presumed that another executive order will have to be issued for the female of the species..

47c

In the south particularly Negro women are handicapped in obtaining employment simply because white women object to working with colored, who formerly had been in domestic service for the whites.

They do not relish the idea of having their former servants hired by the manufacturers and plants engaged in war industries, where the pay is equal and working conditions comparable to those of whites.

FEB 1 9 1943

So much prejudice exists in this particular field, many letters have been sent, some to the White House, demanding the return of Negro women to domestic work, especially in the southern states.

Complaints have been lodged that white workers no longer find Negro women willing to mind children while the whites earn the high wages now being paid in defense work.

The problem of hiring women also brings again the "separate facilities" problem which white women in particular insist on.

This arose in the Norfolk Navy Yard when a separate toilet was built for one Negro female worker who was later dismissed.

However, the administration has been advised before it attempts to register women to look into the actual existing conditions—find out where discrimination exists in employment of Negro males—just how many have registered for work and been ignored.

FEB 1 9 1943

Advertiser
Montgomery, Ala.

Secretary Hull Asks Parole Of Negro Seaman

MAR 26 1943

Writes Sparks In Behalf Of British Subject Up For Cursing In Mobile

47a

Acute need of seamen in the war effort was underlined by a letter from Secretary of State Cordell Hull to Gov. Chauncey Sparks, inquiring into the prospect for parole of Cleveland Wiltshire, West Indian negro seaman, given a sentence of eight months and 10 days at Mobile Jan. 4 on a charge of using obscene language in the presence of women.

The Secretary of State enclosed copy of a letter from a member of the staff of the British Embassy. It set forth that Wiltshire arrived in Mobile as a member of the crew of a Canadian ship, and while in Mobile "called for his laundry at Sam Joy's Laundry and when informed it was not ready, in a fit of rage, used language unbecoming to a gentleman in the presence of white ladies."

MAR 26 1943

"I have received no information concerning the matter other than that contained in the attached letter and the facts as stated do indicate that Wiltshire was guilty of highly reprehensible conduct," Secretary of State Hull wrote Gov. Sparks. "At the same time, I am conscious of the need of utilizing effectively all available seamen in furtherance of the war effort. I should accordingly be grateful if you would let me know whether there is any prospect of Wiltshire being paroled prior to the expiration of his sentence to enable him to return to his duties at sea." This diplomatically worded inquiry was referred by Gov. Sparks to the State Pardon-Parole Board, where it was announced Thursday that the board's parole officer at Mobile would be asked to investigate the case.

Pittsburgh Courier
Pittsburgh, PA.

BRAVED DANGER AND DEATH ABOARD U.S.S. BOISE AT GUADALCANAL

MAR 1 3 1943

On every war ship every member of the crew has a battle station and on the USS Boise, famed Man O' War which sank six Japanese vessels in 27 minutes at Guadalcanal, the battle stations of 12 of the 13 crew members were in the magazine sections and handling room, where a shell caused explosions, causing them to work in a section filled with gas fumes and water waist deep. Above are pictures of these unsung heroes: Left to right: Jacques Napier, O.C. 2nd class of Washington; Leroy D. Wilson, M. Att. 1st class of Georgia; Woodrow Fitzpatrick, M. Att. 2nd class; Julius Wilson, O.C. 3rd class of Alabama and Benny Patterson, O.C. 2nd class of South Carolina; Harold Winston, M. Att. 1st class of Ohio; Willie W. Branch, M. Att. 1st class of Louisiana; Allen Pipkin Jr., M. Att. 1st class of Texas and Curtis Idlebird, M. Att. 1st class of Texas. Those not in the picture are: Henry Poole, Thomas Torrence and Joe Quintranilla.—Photo by Lawson.

MAR 1 3 1943

Messmen Ignored On Boise

MAR 1 3 1943

Pittsburgh Courier

Pittsburgh Pa.

Negro Sailors Braved Death at Battle Stations; None Cited

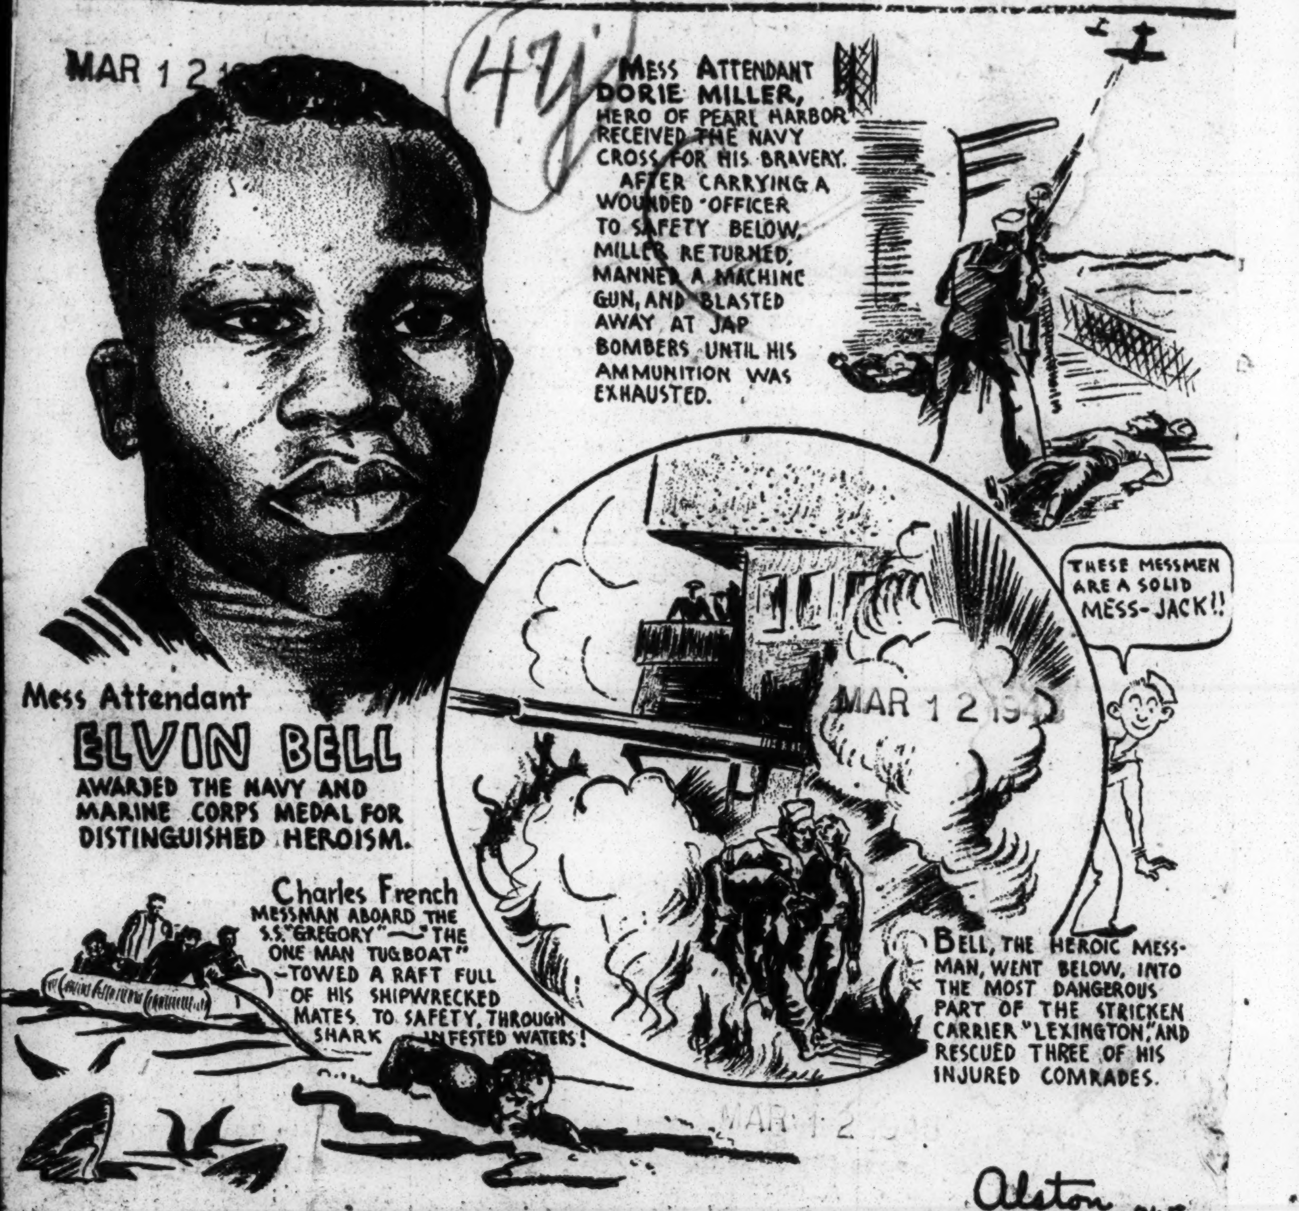
MAR 1 3 1943

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Mar. 11—Much has been said and written about the heroic deeds

Guardian
Boston, Mass

MAR 1 2 1943

47j



MESS ATTENDANT DORIE MILLER, HERO OF PEARL HARBOR RECEIVED THE NAVY CROSS FOR HIS BRAVERY. AFTER CARRYING A WOUNDED OFFICER TO SAFETY BELOW, MILLER RETURNED, MANNED A MACHINE GUN, AND BLASTED AWAY AT JAP BOMBERS UNTIL HIS AMMUNITION WAS EXHAUSTED.
Mess Attendant
ELVIN BELL
AWARDED THE NAVY AND MARINE CORPS MEDAL FOR DISTINGUISHED HEROISM.
THESE MESSMEN ARE A SOLID MESS-JACK!!
Charles French
MESSMAN ABOARD THE S.S. "GREGORY" — "THE ONE MAN TUGBOAT" — TOWED A RAFT FULL OF HIS SHIPWRECKED MATES TO SAFETY, THROUGH SHARK INFESTED WATERS!
BELL, THE HEROIC MESSMAN, WENT BELOW, INTO THE MOST DANGEROUS PART OF THE STRICKEN CARRIER "LEXINGTON," AND RESCUED THREE OF HIS INJURED COMRADES.
Alston for OWI

MAR 1 2 1943

MAR 1 2 1943

of the crew of the Cruiser Boise, which sank six Japanese ships in 27 minutes in Guadalcanal. But the public is to learn for the first time, through Mess Attendant Harold Winston of Springfield, O., the part that the 13 Negro members of the crew played in that battle.

MAR 1 3 1943

CREW ON ALERT BEFORE BATTLE

On a warship every member of the crew has a battle station, and on the Boise the battle stations of 12 of the 13 Negro crew members were in the magazine sections and the handling rooms. Those in the handling rooms and the magazine sections carry shells to the guns. Winston's battle position was the telephone section of the repair party. His duties were to transmit messages from the bridge to the central station of the ship and to the aviators.

The crew of the Boise was first informed that a naval battle was imminent the afternoon of the day of the battle. Every man was ordered to his station at that time, although the naval engagement did not take place until that night. In addition to the Boise, there were a number of other naval ships in battle line, including the cruiser. San Francisco.

MAR 1 3 1943

BOISE HIT AT WATER LINE

The guns of the Boise began the battle, but because the battle positions of the Negro crew members were below deck they could not see the effect of the Boise's shell fire. Their first notice of the tragedy of battle came when a shell passed through the Boise at the water line of the ship. Winston was informed of this damage from the bridge and he transmitted this message to the central section of the ship, whose officers immediately sent out a repair crew.

A few minutes after the first shell had struck the Boise, it suffered other hits in quick succession. One of these shells pierced the magazine section of the ship and caused explosions.

It was here that the valor of the Negro sailors was displayed. Fire broke out in the magazine sections and the handling rooms where the Negroes were stationed, and gas fumes and water, waist-deep, added to their peril. It was necessary that all shells be carried to other sections of the ship to prevent further explosions. This work was done by Negro sailors. The gas fumes and fire were so terrific that Lt. Howell, who was in charge of the work of removing these shells, had to be revived four times.

MAR 1 3 1943

NONE CITED FOR ACTION

Lt. Howell was cited with the Navy Cross for the heroism displayed in having the shells removed; although the Negro crewmen who removed these shells displayed equal bravery, none of them have been cited for decoration.

The Boise had to leave the battle line before the engagement was ended, as it was so badly damaged it was in a sinking condition. The Negro sailors joined the rest of the crew in making the necessary repairs to enable the ship to reach port safely.

MAR 1 3 1943

The 13 Negro members of the Boise crew and their rank are as follows: Harold Winston, mess attendant first class; Arthur McKeldin, mess attendant first class; Elijah Goss, officers' cook third class; Henry Clark Poole, mess attendant first class; Thomas Henry Torrence, mess attendant first class; Jacques Napier, officers' cook second class; Leroy D. Wilson, mess attendant first class; Woodrow Fitzpatrick, mess attendant second class; Julius Wilson, officers' cook third class; Benny Patterson, officers' cook second class; Willie W. Branch, mess attendant first class; Allen Pippin Jr., mess attendant first class, and Curtis Idlebird, mess attendant first class.

The Daily Worker
New York, N. Y.

Negro Takes Top Honors in Coast Guard

APR 5 1943

Geraldo King, a Negro, received the highest grade at the completion of a three-month intensive course for pharmacists' mate at the graduation exercises of Coast Guardsmen on Saturday, at the Y.M.C.A. 5 West 63rd Street. The men were trained at the Columbia University College of Pharmacy. Certificates were granted at the same time to 198 Coast Guardsmen, 50 per cent of whom had received ratings of 90 per cent or over.

Other honor men were Edward Brown W. Nelson, Meyer Kaplan, Nathan B. Kaufman and Richard Belknap. The certificates were presented to them and twenty-five others individually by Lieutenant Theodore Le Blanc, head of personnel of the Medical Section at Coast Guard Headquarters.

APR 5 1943

The newly trained pharmacists will administer elementary or emergency treatment where there are no doctors or pharmacists available, wherever they are sent.

APR 5 1943

Dean Charles W. Ballard of the College of Pharmacy, and others who spoke, expressed amazement that the men were able to learn so much in the short space of time, and commended them for their ready response to the accelerated program of education.

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

101 Are Given Certificates At Great Lakes, Ill.

Second Class To Complete Trades Course

The second Negro class to complete instruction in various trades and services offered by the Navy has been graduated from Service School in ceremonies at the U. S. Naval Training Station, Great Lakes, Ill.

MAR 7 1943

Before an audience of relatives, friends, and shipmates, the 101 graduates marched to the speakers' platform where Capt. H. H. Harris, Service School Officer, presented them with Service School certificates—the final step in an intensive training program.

Three of their number were singled out for special recognition, having been selected as honor men of their respective school groups. Leading the three was Wyatt L. Logan, 27, son of Mrs. Harriett Allen of 2204 Olive Street, Kansas City, Mo., who attained an average of 99 in yeoman school, one of the highest marks recorded at Great Lakes.

MAR 7 1943

Honor men in the cooks' and bakers' school and the school for runners' mates were respectively, Frederick B. Easton, 26, son of Mrs. C. F. Easton, of 555 Kempton St., New Bedford, Mass., and William Gregory, Jr., 19, whose father lives at 474 Halsey Street, Brooklyn, N. Y. Easton completed his course with an average of 97.35 while Greogory attained 96.85.

In addition to these three schools, graduates from the Navy's schools for signalmen, quartermasters, and radiomen were in the class. All completed 16-week courses in their respective branches. New classes in the Negro Service Schools are formed each month with an average of more than 450 men attending at all times.

Taking part in the graduation ceremonies, in addition to Capt Harris, were Capt. Frank J. Lowry, commanding officer of the Training Station, Chaplain J. M. Flowers, and other high ranking officers of the Station. The orchestra and octette also took part in the exercises which were held in the auditorium of Camp Robert Smalls—training center for men of the Negro race at Great Lakes.

In his address to the graduating class, Capt. Harris said:

"You men have acquired skills that will help you as well as the Navy. The Navy awaits your arrival to your next assignment knowing that you will add to its strength. You take with you our sincere wishes for a brilliant Navy career."

Chicago Bee
Chicago, Illinois

LAUNCH 1ST SHIP BUILT BY NEGROES

MAY 1 6 1943

MAY 1 6 1943

CHESTER, Pa., May 13—The Marine Eagle, U.S. ship built entirely by Negroes, was launched Monday at the Sun Shipbuilding and Dry Dock company.

Sun claims that it is the first company to establish a shipyard manned only by Negroes. Employees receive the same rate of pay as those in other yards operated by the company and according to the company president, John G. Pow, "We are grealty pleased with the work."

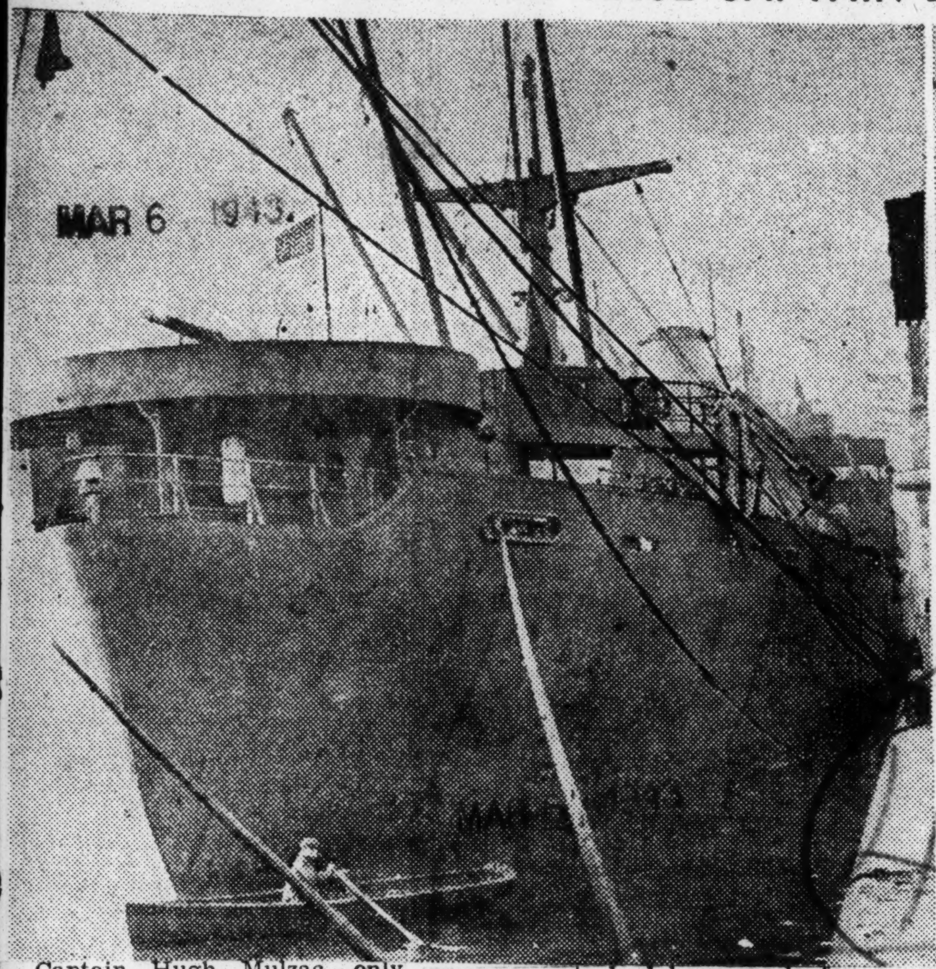
Mrs. Rachel Stevenson, 22 years an employe of the firm, was selected to christen the ship and receive a $1,000 war bond, gift of the company.

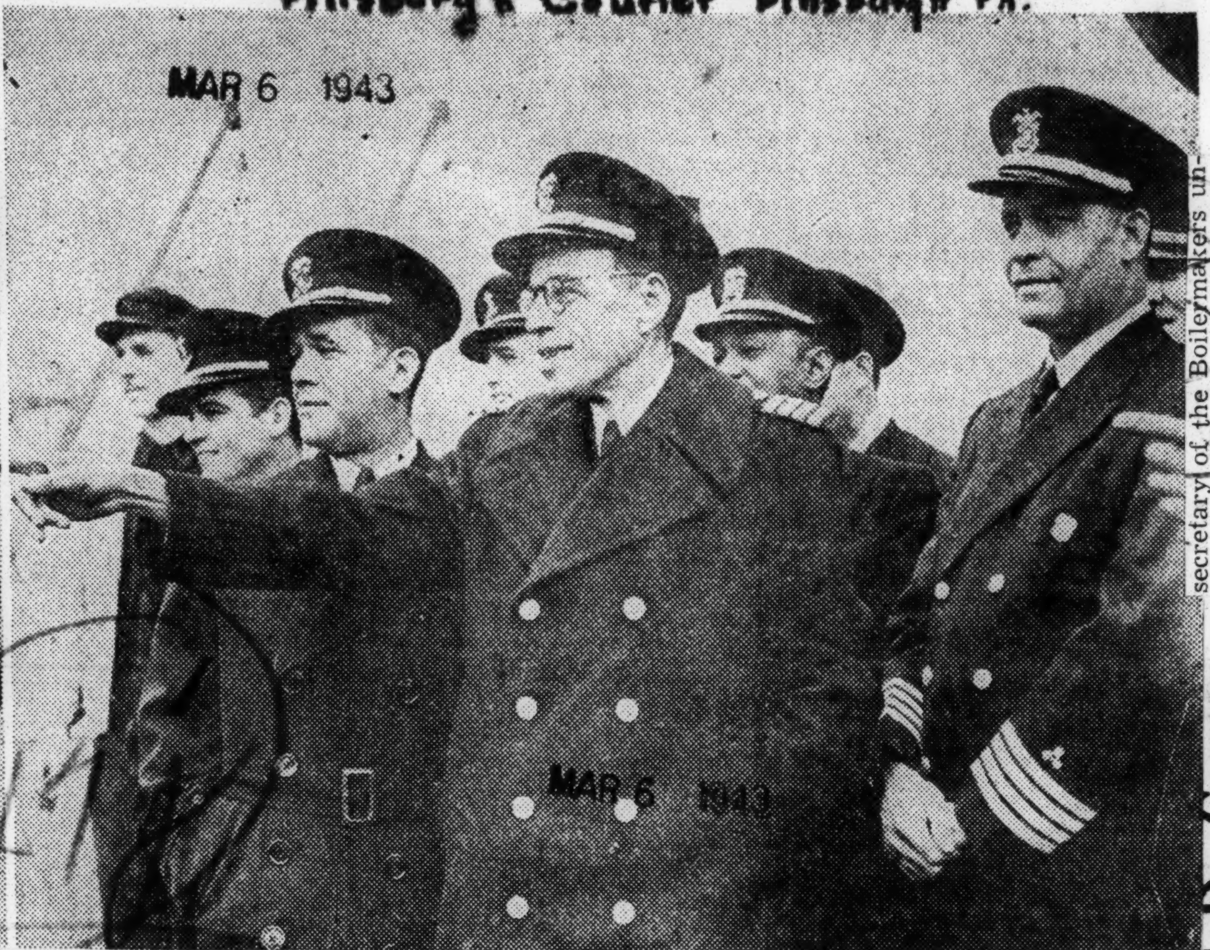
MAY 1 6 1943

47i-1943

LIBERTY SHIP PILOTED BY RACE CAPTAIN DELIVERED GOODS TO WHIP THE AXIS

Pittsburgh Courier Pittsburgh PA.





MAR 6 1943

Captain Hugh Mulzac, only race captain of an ocean-going ship has just completed his maiden voyage aboard the Booker T. Washington through hazardous, shark infested waters, to deliver war-time goods abroad.

First photo shows the trim vessel tied up at a dock somewhere in England.

Second picture is of Captain Mulzac and a group of his ship's officers.

To Christen Liberty Ship Sunday, May 2

MAY 1 1943

Popular Actress Proud Of Honor Extended To Her

HOLLYWOOD, Calif.—The tremendous success she has realized in the flicker city dimmed into insignificance when Lena Horne was notified this week that final arrangements had been made for her to christen the Liberty Ship George Washington Carver when it is launched at noon, Sunday, May 2, in the Richmond, Cal., Kaiser Ship Yards.

The Office of War Information received the following wire from the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer player when she was informed of the plan:

> "It is such a high honor to have even the slightest part in a tribute to that great American and outstanding Negro genius and patriot that I am speechless with gratitude. To be privileged to christen the ship named after him will be the most inspiring moment of my life.

Miss Horne has been accorded countless honors and titles from members of the armed forces in recent months, but she stated that this latest tribute to her far surpasses any other expereince of her career.

The Liberty Ship, second in a series of three bearing the names of outstanding Negro Americans, will be sponsored by Miss Horne, and Beatrice Turner, one of the 6,112 Negro workers in the four Kaiser shipyards in Richmond, will be matron of honor. Both were chosen by the United Negro Labor Committee which is in charge of the launching ceremony.

WORKERS TO TAKE PART

Thousands of the Negro shipyard workers, who are employed as boilermakers, shipfitters, shipwrights, stage riggers, joiners, sheet metal workers, painters, warehousemen and laborers will participate in the ceremony, along with representatives of Negro organizations throughout the country. The latter will include a representative of the Carver Foundation at Tuskekee Institute, Ala., and a Negro delegation from Ohio appointed by Gov. John W. Bricker.

MAY 1 1943

C. L. Dellums, West Coast representative of the International Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters and president of the United Negro Labor Committee, will serve as master of ceremonies on a program which will include short addresses by Attorney Walter A. Gordon of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People; Leon H. Washington, Jr., publisher of the Los Angeles Sentinel, and Vernon McCalla, a shipfitter, representing the Kaiser workers. Marcus Hall, another shipyard worker and protege of Roland Hayes, noted tenor, will sing "Ballad for Americans."

MAY 1 1943

LENA HORNE

DOUGLASS BEING BUILT

Miss Horne, star of "Cabin In The Sky," will interrupt her work in another motion picture, to christen the ship.

MAY 1 1943

Officials of the United Negro Labor Committee include Dr. Dellums, president; Spencer Jourdan, International Brotherhood of Boilermakers, first vice-president; J. R. Hoskins, United Transportation Service Employees, second vice-president; and T. M. Anderson, Dining Car Cooks and Waiters Union, secretary-treasurer.

The SS Booker T. Washington, first Liberty ship named for a Negro, is in active service under a Negro master, Capt. Hugh Mulzac, and the third, the SS Frederick Douglass, is now under construction in a Baltimore, Md., shipyard.

MAY 1943

Chicago Bee
Chicago, Illinois

LENA HORNE CHRISTENS S.S. CARVER

MAY 2 1943

WASHINGTON, Apr. 29—Screen star, glamorous Lena Horne, will christen the Liberty Ship George Washington Carver, named for the celebrated scientist, which will be launched at noon on Sunday, May 2, at the Richmond, Calif., Yard No. 1 of the Kaiser Shipbuilding company, the Maritime Commission announced Tuesday.

The ship, second in a series of three bearing the names of outstanding Negro Americans, will be launched following appropriate ceremonies which will include short addresses from Atty. Walter A. Gordon, NAACP; Leon H. Washington, Jr., publisher of the Los Angeles Sentinel and Vernon McCalla, a shipfitter.

Beatrice Turner, one of the 6111 Negro workers in the four Kaiser Shipyards in Richmond, will be matron of honor. A representative of the Carver Foundation at Tuskegee Institute, Ala., will participate in the ceremony along with representatives of leading organiations throughout the country.

MAY 2 1943

Chicago Bee
Chicago, Illinois

Interest High On Coast Over S. S. Dr. Carver

MAY 7 1943

OAKLAND, Cal., Mar. 5 — The launching of the S. S. Dr. Carver has created great excitement in the Bay area. Citizens lauded the maritime commission for honoring the Northern California citizens by launching the ship in the Richmond yads.

The program committee is composed of Tom Anderson, secretary of Local 456; Spencer Jourdan, secretary of the Boilermakers union; C. L. Dellums, vice president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters; Ben Watkins, secretary of the Musicians Local; Tera Hall Pittman of the NAACP, and Leon H. Washington Jr., publisher of the Los Angeles Sentinel.

A meeting of the committee will be held Thursday evening at the Elks temple, where further plans will be discussed and various committees will be appointed.

Woman Worker Launches Liberty Ship

Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Virginia

MAY 1 1943
MAY 1 1943
MAY 1 1943
MAY 1 1943
MAY 1 1943

Thousands of Negro shipyard workers in the Kaiser yards at Richmond, California, participated in the launching of the SS S. Hall Young on March 31 after Miss Beulah Whittington, an employee of three days then, drew the sponsor's ticket from a pool of 95,000 workers. Miss Whittington is receiving a bouquet of American beauty roses from Frank Stearns of Richmond Shipyard No. 2 as Mrs. Katie Lewis, matron of honor, looks on.

MAY 1 1943

The new Liberty ship SS George Washington Carver will be launched soon at Richmond Shipyard No. 1 with Lena Horne, star of Broadway and Hollywood, as the sponsor. The lower pictures show (left to right) James Bain, coordinator and counsellor of Negro workers at the shipyard; Marcus Hall, shipyard worker and protege of Roland Hayes, who was soloist at the launching; and the Rev. D. G. Hill, pastor of the First A.M.E. Church, Oakland, Calif., giving the launching invocatoin. (E. F. Joseph Photos from OWI)

Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Virginia

S. S. George W. Carver Launching Set For May 7

MAY 8 1943

RICHMOND, Cal.—The George Washington Carver Foundation and the Kaiser Shipbuilding Company paid tribute this week to the celebrated scientist. The Liberty Ship named in his honor was scheduled for launching on May 2 at Richmond Shipyard No. 1, but was tentatively postponed until May 7, according to the Office of War Information.

In a wire made public by the company, Dr. F. D. Patterson, president of Tuskegee Institute, Tuskegee, Ala., stated:

"Deeply appreciate the great tribute being paid to our late distinguished scientist, Christian and friend, George Washington Carver, in the launching of a Liberty ship bearing his name. Deeply regret that we were unable to have a representative present on the occasion. I express to you the profound appreciation of the George Washington Carver Foundation and of the students, faculty and trustees of Tuskegee Institute for making this occasion a reality."

In making the Tuskegee statement public, Clay Bedford, representing the Kaiser Company, declared:

MAY 8 1943

"A floating, fighting monument to a great American scientist will go down the ways — the SS George Washington Carver. This 10,500—ton Liberty Ship was constructed by skilled Negro workers, both men and women, working side by side with their fellow Americans—all doing their best to supply the best in cargo ships for our fighting forces overseas.

MAY 8 1943

"The spirit of George Washinton Carver will live on in this modern steel monument wherever its goes to bring strength to our soldiers just as this great man brought and left with the world of science lasting contributions for all people, races and creeds."

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

Dorie Miller Is Modest

APR 17 1943

By PEARL JOHNS

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif. — Dorie Miller is a modest guy. I met him the other night at the colored USO Club, which was formerly the Japanese YMCA.

I had a long conversation with him and found him a swell person. He has not let success go to his head. He was not wearing his medal and his new stripes. I asked him where his other uniform was and he made an excuse that it was in the cleaners and then winked.

APR 17 1943

Sailors vs. Soldiers

Like soldiers and sailors everywhere, they don't get along together. Both of them are thick as flies in this town. It seems to me that the sailors like to get drunk and pick a fight with the soldiers. They almost took that USO away and I didn't stay long.

I went down to Chinatown to see them welcome Mme. Chiang Kai-shek. She is very beautiful; her pictures don't due her justice. In the afternoon I went down to City Hall to see her review the parade.

APR 17 1943

Hotels Okey

The best hotels and swanky restaurants are open to everybody. I have gone there frequently with my white companions and though maybe that was the reason so the other day I went around by myself and was treated just as fine.

APR 17 1943

This seems to me to be the most democratie State in the union. One hotel was too swanky. I lived there by myself for a while and the help bowed and scraped and waited on me so that I could hardly move for them.

Put in Middle

My white friends fight, argue and raise the devil with each other. I try to be friends with all of them but it puts me in the middle because each one talks about the other and I guess sometimes they talk about me when I am not there.

APR 17 1943

LAUNCH S.S. CARVER SUNDAY

Courier

WASHINGTON, April 29—The Liberty Ship, George Washington Carver, named for the celebrated Negro scientist, will be launched at noon on Sunday, May 2, at the Richmond (Cal.) Yard No. 1 of the Kaiser Shipbuilding Company, the Maritime Commission announced this week.

MAY 1 1943

The ship, second in a series of three bearing the names of outstanding Negro Americans, will be sponsored by Lena Horne, singer and motion picture actress. Beatrice Turner, one of the 6,112 workers in the four Kaiser shipyards in Richmond, will be matron of honor.

MAY 1 1943

C. L. Dellums, West Coast representative of the International Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters and president of the United Negro Labor Committee, will serve as master of ceremonies on a program which will include short addresses by Attorney Walter A. Gordon of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People; Leon H. Washington, Jr., publisher of the Los Angeles Sentinel, and Vernon McCalla, a shipfitter, representing the Kaiser workers. Marcus Hall, another shipyard worker and protege of Roland Hayes, noted tenor, will sing "Ballad for Americans."

MAY 1 1943 Courier

47j-1943

18-Year-Old Eats His Way Into Army

"Courier-Journal"

Frail Negro Passes Exam In 3d Month

JAN 8 - 1943

Louisville, Ky.

Chattanooga, Jan. 7 (AP)—Thomas Wilson, Jr., 18-year-old Negro youth, had what might be termed a case of tenacious patriotism.

Three months ago Wilson started trying to enlist in the Navy as a mess attendant. A preliminary examination showed he was several pounds underweight.

Asking how to gain weight quickly, he was given the familiar old recipe of lots of bananas and water. Three days later he turned up again but was still underweight.

Returned Twice Weekly.

Regularly twice a week he came in to be weighed; just as regularly he was found below standard. Finally he argued the recruiters into giving him a new examination—and they found a crooked finger which they said would disquality him.

Disconsolately Wilson left the office and didn't show up again for almost a month. Then one day he walked jauntily in, assuring the recruiters he was all ready to enlist.

"What about your finger?" they asked.

"Oh, that's O. K." he said. "I went to Nashville to see the senior medical officer and he said he'd pass me if you would."

JAN 8 - 1943

Impressed, they asked him how he got to Nashville. He told them he'd scrubbed floors at Fort Oglethorpe until he had earned enough money for the round trip.

They agreed to take him, but he was still underweight. As usual, he promised, "I'll be back in a few days." And went out.

In the meantime Wilson passed his 18th birthday and had to register, which meant he needed his draft board's release to join the Navy.

But that didn't stop him either; he obtained the release, walked into the recruiting office after a big meal.

JAN 8 - 1943

He's in the Navy now.

Constitution
Atlanta. Georgia

Atlanta Negro Aboard Ship Sinking U-Boat

An Atlanta Negro was a member of a gun crew on the cutter Campbell, which rammed and sank a German submarine, according to a Navy Department announcement yesterday.

Raymond L. Knott, of 491 Dunbar street, S. W., was one of 11 Negro Coast Guardsmen who took part in the attack, the Navy said. The Negroes fired several rounds and scored telling hits, the announcement said.

Skipper Mulzac

"The Daily Worker" JAN 3 - 1943 New York N.Y.

By Ben Davis, Jr.

Welcome home to Capt. Hugh Mulzac, Skipper of the Liberty ship, Booker T. Washington, just returned from its maiden voyage.

The Negro people, the labor movement—the country—is proud of Capt. Mulzac and his "League of Nations" crew.

There is a thrill in the realization that the United States Maritime Service has its first Negro skipper. Here is one more nail in the coffin of Hitlerism — one more reason for Martin Dies, Gov. Talmadge and Gov. Dixon to fall prostrate into political epilepsy. And whatever drives these gentlemen to madness is good for the nation, for victory.

Ben Davis, Jr.

CREW LOVES HIM

JAN 3 - 1943

I have never had the pleasure of meeting Capt. Mulzac. But one does not need to meet him to appreciate him. He describes his vessel as "this United Nations ship flying a United States flag." His crew loves him—a crew of Americans, Negro and white, of Belgian, Dutch, Russian, English, Filipino, Honduran, Irish, Mexican, Swedish and Turkish seamen. Many other ship captains can learn a thing or two from this member of an oppressed people who slashed through racial, religious and all other lines to select his crew.

Is Captain Mulzac qualified? For 20 years he has held a license declaring him qualified to command any merchant ship of any size on the ocean. The man is a scholar, and looks the part; he bears the natural dignity of his people and of a worker who takes pride in his job. It is "no personal victory" Capt. Mulzac is describing his honor in his own words, but a "victory for the National Negro Congress, the Brooklyn Victory Committee, the trade unions, the war effort, and for other licensed Negro officers of which there are many."

LONG, HARD FIGHT

But it has been a long, hard pull for Capt. Mulzac, for the Negro people and for the labor movement in which the National Maritime Union played a great role. The present just, people's war—in which the demands of victory must supersede all other considerations—speeded up the fight and brought it to a successful head.

We must be careful that we do not indulge in excessive optimism. Yet a calm appraisal of the forces at work in this global war compels us to recognize that there are progressive trends taking place that even the most solemn pronouncements out of the old imperialist era cannot hold back.

But these progressive developments—the abolition of jim-crow, of lynching, of spurious blood theories, the enforcement of the full citizenship rights of the Negro people — will not take place by themselves. They have to be fought for, fought for with the added impetus of winning this titanic war against Hitler.

STILL EXCEPTIONS

The Captain Mulzacs are still the exceptions. The war industries, while opening their doors to Negroes under the compulsion of war necessity, are still hiring, for the most part, token numbers of Negroes. Many employers comply with the letter of President Roosevelt's anti-discriminatory order in order to violate its essence.

Capt. Mulzac had to fight for the right to fight for his country. Dorie Miller had to violate an order restricting him to the mess work in order to man a machine-gun on deck against the Japanese. Literally, millions of Negroes are faced with innumerable jim-crow barriers before they can serve their country as free and equal citizens, ready to give their all of victory.

Look at all the waste motion which must be expended before the country is totally mobilized. We need every available man on the battlefield yet segregation in the armed forces still sets the stage for inter-racial strife and shameful atrocities against Negro troops. We must have the strongest national unity, yet eight lynchings took place in 1942.

This is no way to fight a war to victory against the most deadly and barbarous foe mankind has ever known. This is the sure way not to win the war in the quickest possible time and at the least cost. The perpetrators of these crimes against the Negro people are working for Hitler just as if they were shooting down our troops in North Africa.

JAN 3 - 1943

In view of the splendid anti-jim crow policies enunciated by Pres. Roosevelt, Paul McNutt and others, there is no reason why these policies are not carried out particularly through Attorney General Biddle's office. This remains one of the biggest pieces of unfinished business that stares us in the face in 1943. But the people can and will change this through their own intervention — for they are determined upon victory. Let's finish this ugly business now and get done with Hitler in 1943.

Colored Attendants Needed By Navy

"Times" Johnson City, Tenn

Colored applicants are being accepted by the United States navy for enlistment in the regular navy or naval reserve as apprentice seamen or mess attendants according to R. M. Chadwell, head of the Johnson City United States recruiting sub-station, post office building. 1/22/43

White men for the construction corps, are also being accepted, said Chadwell. The age limit is from 18 to 50 years old.

Columbia S C Record
January 18, 1943

Navy Places Open To Young Negroes

According to an announcement today, a quota has been set whereby a certain number of young South Carolina Negroes in the draft age (18 through 37) may be eligible for enlistment in the United States Navy as apprentice seamen, selective volunteers, and train at the Naval Training Station, Great Lakes, Ill.

Men who are interested, may go to their nearest navy recruiting station and get complete information, or else, they may go to their local selective service board and ask to be placed in class 1-A, so that they can enlist in the Navy as an apprentice seaman. The draft board will then send the man to the navy station for an examination.

The local navy recruiting substation is located on the third floor of city hall. Chief Gunner's Mate M. T. Thigpen is the petty officer in charge of the station.

Negro Labor News
Houston, Texas

THE CRUISER HOUSTON

DEC 26 1942

We, the citizens of Houston had reason to be proud of our city last Monday night when Secretary of the Navy, Frank Knox, was presented a certificate by the Hon. Jesse H. Jones for $85,749,884.24 to build a new cruiser and aircraft carrier. Our chests swelled a little more as the cabinet officer praised Houston and Texas for the part they are playing in war efforts. He praised the bravery of Texans in this and other wars.

The audience was surprised to learn from the lips of Secretary Knox when he cited the bravery of Texans, that a Negro shed the first blood in the battle for Texas Independence. This fact, no doubt, was buried in the archives of history and now that it has been brought to light, the historians will get busy. Perhaps, some day, there will stand somewhere on the soil of Texas a monument to this Negro along with monuments of the defenders of the Alamo and the Battle of San Jacinto.

DEC 26 1942

The Cruiser campaign was patriotic from beginning to end. Into the coffers provided for the Cruiser funds went pennies from bootblacks, along with large donations from millionaires. To climax the drive, in a program at the Coliseum, Negroes participated. The race was ably represented by the scholarly and matchless orator, John W. Rice, National Youth Administration director of Texas. The Cruiser Houston program and campaign is a challenge to other states of the union both in raising funds for war efforts and the inclusion of all citizens into worthwhile programs.

Chicago Defender
Chicago, Illinois

Capt. Mulzac In Short Wave Broadcast Tells World His Crew Sails For Freedom

JAN 16 1943

WASHINGTON — Negro Americans, West Indians and Africans are fighting so that their women and children may enjoy more of that freedom which exists under democracy, Captain Hugh Mulzac, master of the Liberty Ship Booker T. Washington, declared last week in a series of OWI broadcasts beamed to the peoples of the Caribbean area and the British Isles.

Interviewed by Claude McKay, noted poet and author, Captain Mulzac told his Caribbean radio audience:

"Last April when I visited Trinidad, I was chief steward of an American ship. And today I am happy to tell you that I am the master of the American ship, the Booker T. Washington. Some of you know that this ship is named for the noble American Negro educator and builder of the all-Negro school of Tuskegee institute. For 15 years I have sailed the seas and I regard my present position as the greatest honor that has come to me, because it was something that was difficult to achieve. I hope that it will inspire other members of my race to strive hard to win more of these difficult things.

Cites Other Captains

"There have been other Negro captains, such as Captain Cockburn, Captain O'Neil and Captain Webster, all West Indians, who like myself previously sailed under the Union Jack. We West Indians in our homes are surrounded by deep water and so we naturally make good seamen. In my voyages to every part of the world, North and South America, Europe and Africa, China and India, I have met West Indian seamen everywhere, in almost every category of seamanship. But as the first American Negro captain I feel that I have a big responsibility to Negroes of the Americas and of Africa.

"We West Indians and Negro Americans and Africans can prove today that for us democracy is not merely an empty rotten name as the Nazis and Fascists have said. We are braving dangers and fighting so that we may not lose such things as we possess under the democratic system. We are fighting so that our women and our children may enjoy more of that freedom which exists under democracy. We are fighting so that our men will stand more firmly on their feet and lift up their heads as other men."

JAN 16 1943

The American Labor Hour broadcast, sponsored by the AFL, CIO, and railroad brotherhoods, originated in New York and was rebroadcast to the British Isles. It included interviews with several members of the crew of the Booker T. Washington, who praised the leadership of Captain Mulzac on their first trip.

Lauds Skipper

Harry Alexander, white deck engineer, told how Maptain Mulzac had been teaching his men navigation. Alexander said he had been sailing for 22 years in the engine department of various ships. When asked how the Booker T. Washington compares with other ships he declared:

JAN 16 1943

"Listen. I've been on ships where the captains sat up nights thinking of things to do to irritate the crew. Our old man spends his time teaching us navigation. In fine weather, we have two or three classes a week, on the afterdeck. One man in our navigation class is going to take his examination for a mate's license, and there will be others like him, soon."

Speaking on this broadcast, Captain Mulzac said in part:

"I am captain of a ship with a mixed crew of white men and Negroes from 18 different nations. Our chief officer and second officer, chief engineer and radio operator are from the West Indies. Our first, second and third engineers and carpenter are white. And so my crew stand together as a symbol of that democratic way of life for which we are all fighting.

JAN 16 1943

Ready to Die

"I know how important it is for me to get my ship through. Every ounce of strength I have, every thought I have is concentrated on that job. If we cannot get through to the men on the fighting fronts, we are ready to die in the attempt. And my crew is with me all the way.

"I have said I was proud of my men. My feelings go further than that. I feel that our crew is a fine example of democracy in action. And the more action we see the more opportunities we are given to fight for what we believe in, and the better we'll take it.

"I am proud to say that the men and officers of the Booker T. Washington are as fine an example as there is in the world of black men and white men united for a quick and smashing victory over the Hitlerites, the Fascists and the Japanese—in 1943!"

Peoples Voice
New York, N. Y.

PV Wins Signal Victory; WAVES' Jimcro Smashed

FEB 11 1943

Negro women holding United States citizenship are eligible to apply and acceptable to the WAVES, women's naval service auxiliary, and the SPARS, women's auxiliary to the coast guard. The ordinary requirements facing all applicants are the only ones they must meet. The People's VOICE was so informed Monday by the NYC Office of Naval Procurement.

Up to the time of inquiry, said the ONP informant, there was no knowledge of Negro enlistments in either of the services. Applicants must present themselves at 33 Pine st, NYC.

PV's inquiry followed public announcement last Friday that "the policy of the Coast Guard and of the Navy would be followed in regard to the possible enlistment of Negro girls as members.

At the ONP office, PV's informant insisted that "there is no discrimination." Since the founding of the WAVES, however, the question as to whether the new navy policy, announced last year, of offering opportunities to rise above the messman and steward rank, would apply to the WAVES has been unclear in the minds of the public.

An official government agency announcement some time ago that the WAVES would be used to replace naval officers doing clerical work so that the latter might be released for active duty indicated at the same time that the policy of replacing white with white was to be followed.

In view of the lack of Negro navy men of such rank, it was generally accepted that the announcement barred Negro women from the WAVES.

FEB 11 1943

GIRLS WANT TO JOIN

Several cases of Negro girls seeking to join the WAVES unsuccessfully, with no specific information as to the reasons for their rejection, entrenched even more firmly the idea that the WAVES were to be lily-white.

In the case of the SPARS, altho Negroes have long served in the Coast Guard in ranks higher than those allowed them in the navy, the announced policy of following the example of the WAVES exercised a deterring effect on potential Negro applicants.

FEB 11 1943

Response of Negro girls to the WAAC, the women's army auxiliary corps, which made it plain from the outset that there was no color ban, is seen as an indication that revelation of the clarified WAVES and SPARS policies should result in Negro enlistments in both services.

New York Times
New York, N. Y.

SPARS OPEN TO NEGROES

FEB 5 - 1943

Policy Same as That of Navy and Coast Guard Enlistments

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4—Officals at headquarters of the Spars said today that the policy of the Coast Guard and of the Navy would be followed in regard to the possible enlistment of Negro girls as members of that unit. Representatives at headquarters of the Waves explained that Negroes were eligible, under Navy regulations. To date, neither office knew of such enlistments, however.

Negro girls have been members and officers of the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps since its formation last Summer.

Advertiser
Montgomery, Ala.

800 Negroes Sought By American Navy

Approximately 800 negroes who are between 17 and 18 and between 38 and 50 years of age are urgently needed for immediate service in the Navy at the Navy Air Station, Pensacola, Fla., according to Chief Petty Officer C. L. Bromberg, who is in charge of the Navy Recruiting Station here.

Many of them will receive as much as $66 a month and in addition free clothing, lodging, food and medical attention, the recruiting officer said. The lowest pay for any negro who enlists for this duty will be $54 a month, he added.

FEB 25 1943

Pointing out another advantage for those assigned to this duty, he said that they will likely have an opportunity to visit their homes frequently.

Those who are interested should apply to Chief Petty Officer Bromberg whose office is in the new postoffice building.

Jacksonville, Ala. News
January 28, 1943

NEGRO SELECTIVES MAY ENTER NAVY VOLUNTARILY

Birmingham, Ala.,—Authority to accept Negroes between 18 and 38 years of age, who desire to volunteer for naval services through their selective service boards, has been received at the Birmingham Navy Recruiting Headquarters, Lt. Comdr. J. E. Meredith, Officer in Charge, said Monday.

Negro volunteers will be inducted into the Navy as apprentice seaman and their ratings will be changed to mess attendants, third class, at the recruiting station after induction.

Negroes who desire to volunteer for the Navy should visit their selective service boards, procure the proper induction papers and then present themselves to a Navy recruiting station.

Those living in or near Birmingham should report to Room 9, Post Office Building. Those at a distance from Birmingham may apply at the Navy recruiting station nearest their homes and receive transportation to Birmingham for induction, the recruiting officer said.

No orders have been received for the induction into the Navy of white men who are between 18and 38 years of age, but both white and negro men who are between 17 and 18 and between 38 and 50 years of age will be accepted as quotas permit at any one of the Navy recruiting stations in the Birmingham district, Lt. Comdr. Meredith said.

Chicago Defender
Chicago, Illinois

Capt. Mulzac In Short Wave Broadcast

JAN 16 1943

Tells World His Crew Sails For Freedom

WASHINGTON — Negro Americans, West Indians and Africans are fighting so that their women and children may enjoy more of that freedom which exists under democracy, Captain Hugh Mulzac, master of the Liberty Ship Booker T. Washington, declared last week in a series of OWI broadcasts beamed to the peoples of the Caribbean area and the British Isles.

Interviewed by Claude McKay, noted poet and author, Captain Mulzac told his Caribbean radio audience:

"Last April when I visited Trinidad, I was chief steward of an American ship. And today I am happy to tell you that I am the master of the American ship, the Booker T. Washington. Some of you know that this ship is named for the noble American Negro educator and builder of the all-Negro school of Tuskegee institute. For 15 years I have sailed the seas and I regard my present position as the greatest honor that has come to me, because it was something that was difficult to achieve. I hope that it will inspire other members of my race to strive hard to win more of these difficult things.

Cites Other Captains

"There have been other Negro captains, such as Captain Cockburn, Captain O'Neil and Captain Webster, all West Indians, who like myself previously sailed under the Union Jack. We West Indians in our homes are surrounded by deep water and so we naturally make good seamen. In my voyages to every part of the world, North and South America, Europe and Africa, China and India, I have met West Indian seamen everywhere, in almost every category of seamanship. But as the first American Negro captain I feel that I have a big responsibility to Negroes of the Americas and of Africa.

"We West Indians and Negro Americans and Africans can prove today that for us democracy is not merely an empty rotten name as the Nazis and Fascists have said. We are braving dangers and fighting so that we may not lose such things as we possess under the democratic system. We are fighting so that our women and our children may enjoy more of that freedom which exists under democracy. We are fighting so that our men will stand more firmly on their feet and lift up their heads as other men."

JAN 16 1943

The American Labor Hour broadcast, sponsored by the AFL, CIO, and railroad brotherhoods, originated in New York and was rebroadcast to the British Isles. It included interviews with several members of the crew of the Booker T. Washington, who praised the leadership of Captain Mulzac on their first trip.

Lauds Skipper

Harry Alexander, white deck engineer, told how Maptain Mulzac had been teaching his men navigation. Alexander said he had been sailing for 22 years in the engine department of various ships. When asked how the Booker T. Washington compares with other ships he declared:

JAN 16 1943

"Listen. I've been on ships where the captains sat up nights thinking of things to do to irritate the crew. Our old man spends his time teaching us navigation. In fine weather, we have two or three classes a week, on the afterdeck. One man in our navigation class is going to take his examination for a mate's license, and there will be others like him, soon."

Speaking on this broadcast, Captain Mulzac said in part:

"I am captain of a ship with a mixed crew of white men and Negroes from 18 different nations. Our chief officer and second officer, chief engineer and radio operator are from the West Indies. Our first, second and third engineers and carpenter are white. And so my crew stand together as a symbol of that democratic way of life for which we are all fighting.

JAN 16 1943

Ready to Die

"I know how important it is for me to get my ship through. Every ounce of strength I have, every thought I have is concentrated on that job. If we cannot get through to the men on the fighting fronts, we are ready to die in the attempt. And my crew is with me all the way.

"I have said I was proud of my men. My feelings go further than that. I feel that our crew is a fine example of democracy in action. And the more action we see the more opportunities we are given to fight for what we believe in, and the better we'll take it.

"I am proud to say that the men and officers of the Booker T. Washington are as fine an example as there is in the world of black men and white men united for a quick and smashing victory over the Hitlerites, the Fascists and the Japanese—in 1943!"

Peoples Voice
New York, N. Y.

PV Wins Signal Victory; WAVES' Jimcro Smashed

FEB 13 1943

Negro women holding United States citizenship are eligible to apply and acceptable to the WAVES, women's naval service auxiliary, and the SPARS, women's auxiliary to the coast guard. The ordinary requirements facing all applicants are the only ones they must meet. The People's VOICE was so informed Monday by the NYC Office of Naval Procurement.

Up to the time of inquiry, said the ONP informant, there was no knowledge of Negro enlistments in either of the services. Applicants must present themselves at 33 Pine st, NYC.

PV's inquiry followed public announcement last Friday that "the policy of the Coast Guard and of the Navy would be followed in regard to the possible enlistment of Negro girls as members.

At the ONP office, PV's informant insisted that "there is no discrimination." Since the founding of the WAVES, however, the question as to whether the new navy policy, announced last year, of offering opportunities to rise above the messman and steward rank, would apply to the WAVES has been unclear in the minds of the public.

An official government agency announcement some time ago that the WAVES would be used to replace naval officers doing clerical work so that the latter might be released for active duty indicated at the same time that the policy of replacing white with white was to be followed. In view of the lack of Negro navy men of such rank, it was generally accepted that the announcement barred Negro women from the WAVES.

FEB 13 1943

GIRLS WANT TO JOIN

Several cases of Negro girls seeking to join the WAVES unsuccessfully, with no specific information as to the reasons for their rejection, entrenched even more firmly the idea that the WAVES were to be lily-white.

In the case of the SPARS, altho Negroes have long served in the Coast Guard in ranks higher than those allowed them in the navy, the announced policy of following the example of the WAVES exercised a deterring effect on potential Negro applicants.

FEB 13 1943

Response of Negro girls to the WAAC, the women's army auxiliary corps, which made it plain from the outset that there was no color ban, is seen as an indication that revelation of the clarified WAVES and SPARS policies should result in Negro enlistments in both services.

New York Times
New York, N. Y.

SPARS OPEN TO NEGROES

FEB 5 - 1943

Policy Same as That of Navy and Coast Guard Enlistments

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4—Officals at headquarters of the Spars said today that the policy of the Coast Guard and of the Navy would be followed in regard to the possible enlistment of Negro girls as members of that unit. Representatives at headquarters of the Waves explained that Negroes were eligible, under Navy regulations. To date, neither office knew of such enlistments, however.

Negro girls have been members and officers of the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps since its formation last Summer.

Advertiser
Montgomery, Ala.

800 Negroes Sought By American Navy

Approximately 800 negroes who are between 17 and 18 and between 38 and 50 years of age are urgently needed for immediate service in the Navy at the Navy Air Station, Pensacola, Fla., according to Chief Petty Officer C. L. Bromberg, who is in charge of the Navy Recruiting Station here.

Many of them will receive as much as $66 a month and in addition free clothing, lodging, food and medical attention, the recruiting officer said. The lowest pay for any negro who enlists for this duty will be $54 a month, he added.

FEB 25 1943

Pointing out another advantage for those assigned to this duty, he said that they will likely have an opportunity to visit their homes frequently.

Those who are interested should apply to Chief Petty Officer Bromberg whose office is in the new postoffice building.

Jacksonville, Ala. News
January 28, 1943

NEGRO SELECTIVES MAY ENTER NAVY VOLUNTARILY

Birmingham, Ala.,—Authority to accept Negroes between 18 and 38 years of age, who desire to volunteer for naval services through their selective service boards, has been received at the Birmingham Navy Recruiting Headquarters, Lt. Comdr. J. E. Meredith, Officer in Charge, said Monday.

Negro volunteers will be inducted into the Navy as apprentice seaman and their ratings will be changed to mess attendants, third class, at the recruiting station after induction.

Negroes who desire to volunteer for the Navy should visit their selective service boards, procure the proper induction papers and then present themselves to a Navy recruiting station.

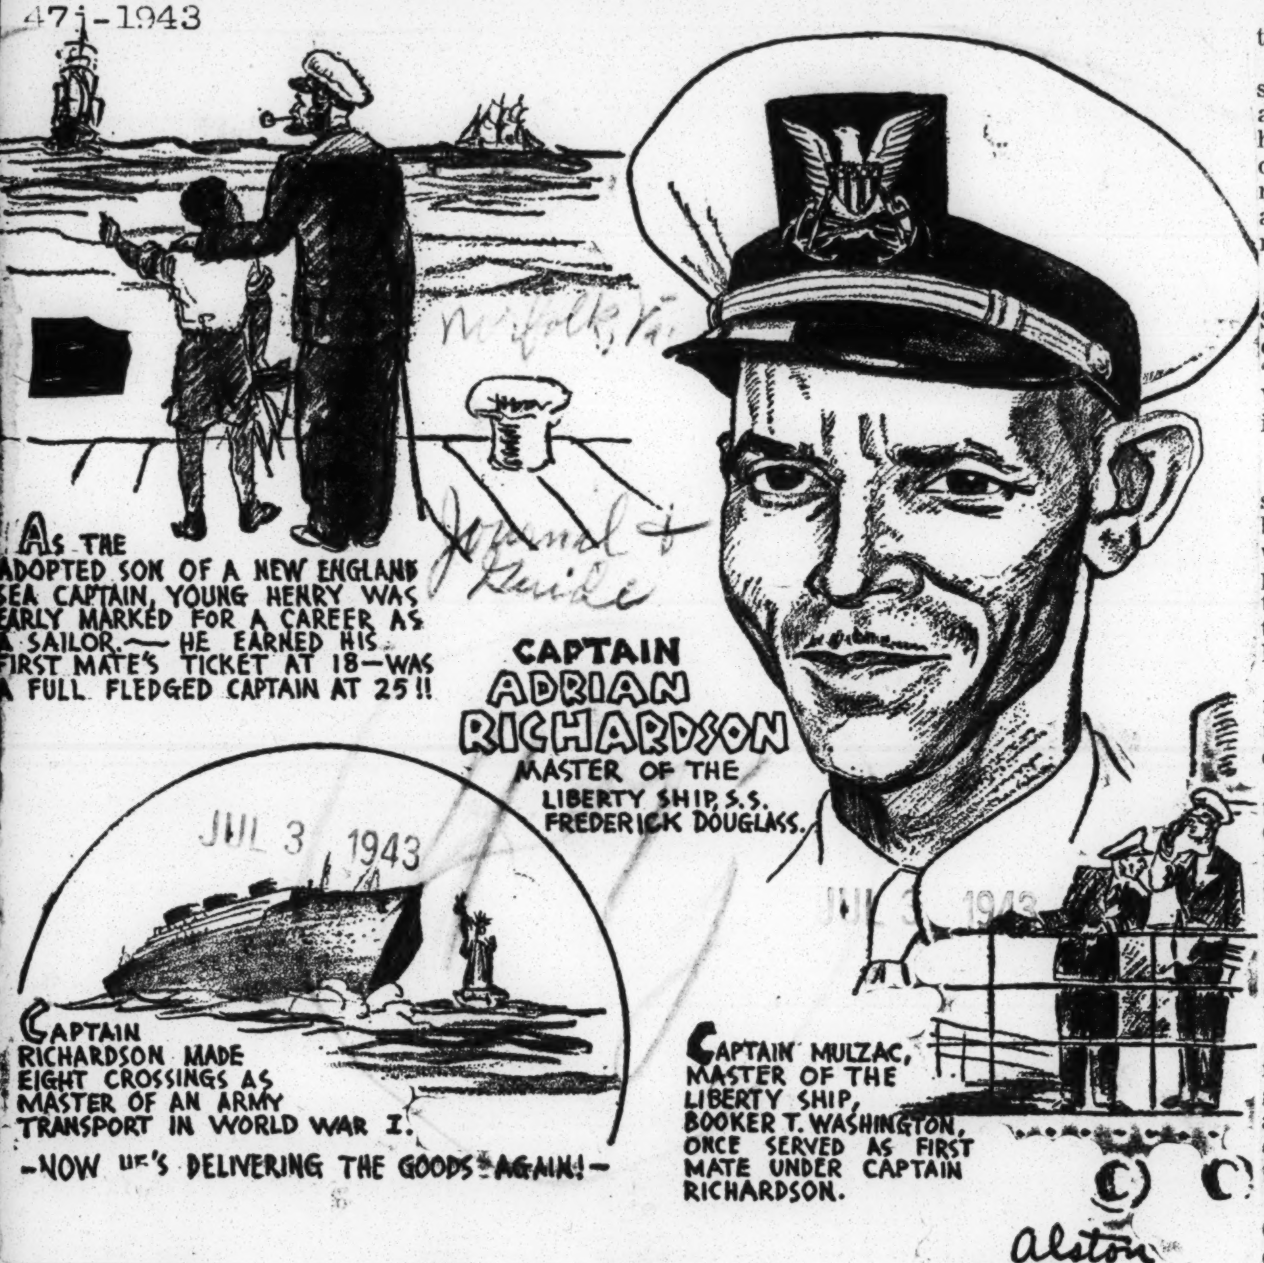
Those living in or near Birmingham should report to Room 9, Post Office Building. Those at a distance from Birmingham may apply at the Navy recruiting station nearest their homes and receive transportation to Birmingham for induction, the recruiting officer said.

No orders have been received for the induction into the Navy of white men who are between 18 and 38 years of age, but both white and negro men who are between 17 and 18 and between 38 and 50 years of age will be accepted as quotas permit at any one of the Navy recruiting stations in the Birmingham district, Lt. Comdr. Meredith said.

47j-1943

Norfolk, Va.

Journal & Guide



AS THE ADOPTED SON OF A NEW ENGLAND SEA CAPTAIN, YOUNG HENRY WAS EARLY MARKED FOR A CAREER AS A SAILOR.— HE EARNED HIS FIRST MATE'S TICKET AT 18—WAS A FULL FLEDGED CAPTAIN AT 25!!
CAPTAIN ADRIAN RICHARDSON
MASTER OF THE LIBERTY SHIP, S.S. FREDERICK DOUGLASS.
CAPTAIN RICHARDSON MADE EIGHT CROSSINGS AS MASTER OF AN ARMY TRANSPORT IN WORLD WAR I.
-NOW HE'S DELIVERING THE GOODS AGAIN!-
CAPTAIN MULZAC, MASTER OF THE LIBERTY SHIP, BOOKER T. WASHINGTON, ONCE SERVED AS FIRST MATE UNDER CAPTAIN RICHARDSON.
Alston

JUL 3 1943

All Races Eat, Sleep and Play Together at Training Station

JUL 31 1943

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

White Texan Says "We Learn from Each Other"; However, No Colored at Coast Guard Academy or in Aviation Branch, and No SPARS Yet

By DOUGLASS HALL
Staff Correspondent

MANHATTAN BEACH, L.I. — Officers and enlisted personnel stationed at the U.S. Coast Guard Training Station here are not so much concerned with "preaching" the principles of democracy; they would much rather "practice" them, the AFRO was told and shown this week.

"We would rather not talk about democracy," stated Commander William H. Hogson, as I waited to be shown activities in the camp, "we want you to see it in action for yourself."

Presently Harold J. Halton (CSK), morale officer of the public relations department, Photographer's Mate Charles T. Reiche, and Chief Petty Officer Walter L. McCoy arrived on the scene and the tour was under way.

Jim Crow Not There

I immediately primed my eyes to get a glimpse of the old jim crow that had been reported flying around the base. But he was the bird that was not there.

Instead, there was a spirit of sincere, natural comradeship among the fellows. When asked how the races get along together one of the boys replied: "There's nothing to it. We don't even think about race. We are Coast Guardsmen and that's that."

Personnel at the base is a geographical combination of every State in the Union and some foreign countries. A white Texan "chows" with a colored lad from Washington and thinks nothing of it.

Learning from Each Other

"We get along fine," the Texan stated, "and there is no need of bringing up the race question if we wanted to. We know that the policy is that all share alike and that is what we are doing. Both the white and colored fellows are learning a lot from each other."

Colored and white Coast Guardsmen eat, play, and train daily under supervision of instructors of all races.

In the mess hall I was given typical Coast Guard chow in the Coast Guard manner: seven vegetables, meat, bread, butter, milk and dessert.

Draftees receive their basic training here and may also take advanced courses in several fields such as carpentry, radio, motor mechanics, etc.

Seamen are selected for different fields on the bases of their grades on an aptitude test given at the station. Personal preferences are also taken into consideration.

"Colored men who enter the Coast Guard can expect the same opportunities as any other men who are called into this branch of service," headquarters officials pointed out.

A statement issued by headquarters said:

"Regarding specific inquiries, there is a colored ensign among the Coast Guard officers and there is a colored warrant officer (the ensign is Joseph Jenkins, now on duty as an engineering officer in Boston, and the warrant officer is Boatswain Clarence Samuels, now in the Coast Guard Training Station here).

None at Academy

"The various branches of the Coast Guard are open to all personnel provided they fulfill established requirements for the particular branches. There are no colored students at the Coast Guard Academy, but one has completed a reserve course and has been commissioned.

"There are colored Coast Guardsmen stationed at the academy, however, as a part of the permanent enlisted complement there.

"Colored Coast Guardsmen are serving on cutters in various capacities, depending upon individual aptitudes and the vacancies that must be filled. The highest enlisted rank is that of chief petty officer.

None in Aviation

"At the present there are no colored men serving in the Coast Guard aviation branch, but all men who qualify are eligible for this branch of service whenever and wherever vacancies may occur.

"Colored men are stationed throughout nearly all the branches of the Coast Guard and are not used exclusively for any one branch."

Asked whether colored women are permitted to serve in the SPARS, headquarters replied:

" . . . Please be advised that to date there has been no need to enlist them to replace colored men."

Wages of Seamen on the S.S. Douglass

Afro-American
Baltimore, Maryland

JUN 26 1943

Merchant Marine seamen on the S.S. Frederick Douglass, new 10,500-ton liberty ship now on the high seas under command of Capt. Adrian Richardson, receive monthly wages ranging from $165 to $900, due to a 100 per cent war bonus for all offshore shipping, which doubles the usual peace-time wages.

In addition, each seaman receives an extra bonus of $5 a day, or $150 monthly, should the ship enter a war zone, which automatically makes this wage scale range from $315 to $1,050 monthly.

Overtime Pay

Rates for all overtime pay are 85 cents an hour for unlicensed seamen and $1 to $1.25 per hour for licensed seamen.

The $125 bonus previously given each Merchant Marine seaman when his ship entered any port subject to bombing attacks has been discontinued.

Captain Gets $900

Highest wages paid monthly are $900 for the captain and $850 for the chief engineer. This includes the 100 per cent war bonus now in effect, but excludes the possibility of the $5 a day war zone bonus and overtime pay.

Lowest wages are $165 for ordinary seamen and $175 monthly for messmen.

Complete listing of monthly wages of all seamen on Merchant Marine ships during peace times, not counting the 100 per cent war bonus now in effect, follows:

DECK DEPARTMENT

Ordinary seaman, $82.50; able bodied seaman, $100; master at arms, $105; quartermaster, $105; storekeeper, $105; boatswain, $112; boatswain's mate, $110; carpenter, $112.50; carpenter's mate, $105; third mate, $195; second mate, $215; chief mate, $262; captain, $450;

STEWARD DEPARTMENT

Chief steward, $147.50; chief cook, $132.50; second cook and baker, $117.50; messmen, $87.50; utility men, $87.50;

RADIO DEPARTMENT

Chief radio operator, $172.50; second radio operator, $155; third radio operator, $135;

PURSER'S DEPARTMENT

Typist-clerk, $126.50;

ENGINE DEPARTMENT

Oiler, $110; watertender, $110; fireman (oil), $100; fireman (coal), $102.50; fireman-watertender (coal), $110; electrician, $150; assistant electrician, $135; storekeeper, $110 [illegible] $87.50; junior engineer, $150; third assistant engineer, $195; second assistant engineer, $215; first assistant engineer, $262; chief engineer, $425.

477

Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Virginia

OCT 30 1943

HAMPTON NAVAL SCHOOL COLOR GUARD—Navy enlisted men of the Hampton Naval Training School led by the Naval Training School band staged a dress parade on Armstrong Field prior to starting of the game between Hampton and Va. State on Saturday. This demonstration added a bit of color to the annual Hampton homecoming game which was loudly applauded by the spectators. The Naval Training School color guard is shown above.

Machinist's Mates School Opened At Naval Station

Daily World Atlanta, Ga.

WASHINGTON—(S N S) — Establishment of a school for machinist's mates in Camp Robert Smalls has opened a new avenue in their Navy careers for Bluejackets at the U. S. Naval Training Station, Great Lakes, Ill.

Housed in a large wing of the Negro Regiments' $200,000 Service School building, the unit went into operation July 19 with 30 Bluejackets comprising the first class. With a new group scheduled to be formed each month, it is expected that nearly 100 men will be enrolled in the school before the initial class completes its 16-week course under the tutelage of veteran Naval officers and petty officers. The ultimate capacity of the school will be 500 students.

Designed to train the men thoroughly in the duties of machinist's mates with the fleet, the course includes instruction in mechanical drawing, shop mathematics and general machine shop practice, covering both bench work and the use of power-driven machine tools. The last four weeks are devoted largely to the study of boilers, engines, turbines, pumps, refrigerating systems, evaporating systems and other auxiliaries found in the engineering department aboard ship.

Negro Bluejackets selected to attend the school will spend many hours at the row upon row of lathes, drill presses, milling machines, shapers and grinders which line the machinist's mate wing.

The men do not spend their time making useless practice articles. Instead, under the guidance of their shop instructors, the sailor-students will turn out precision tools, convert scrap and stock metal into articles which are scarce, and made repair parts for their machines.

They will fashion surface guage, parallel strips, automatic center punches, lathe tapping attachments, welders' Chipping hammers, and a host of other machane shop "musts."

As is the case in all Service School groups throughout the Navy, men will be selected for machinist's mate school by a series of aptitude tests and a personal interview given to each sailor during his period in recruit training. Those named will finish the course a: qualified "specialists" in their trade and will be assigned to duty at sea, or at some Naval shore station.

Chief Machinist's Mate D. L. Synder, of 983 Edgewood Drive, Lakeland, Fla., a veteran of 16 years service in the Navy, is supervisor of the school. Among the instructors on his staff is Negro Bluejacket Robert Coles, 23, specialist, 2nd class, of 8808 Blain Ave., Cleveland, O. Coles was a machinist in his home city before coming in the Navy. Lt. K. C. Beckett, of Evanston, Ill., is the officer in charge.

A similar school has been in operation for sometime at Hampton Institute, Hampton, Va.

Norfolk Sailor Is Honor Man At Naval Graduation

Norfolk, Virginia
Journal and Guide

OCT 23 1943

GREAT LAKES, Ill. — Bostick W. Williams, 20, son of Mrs. Hattie M. Williams, 1112 Transylvania avenue, South Norfolk, Va., has been graduated as honor man of his company on completion of "boot" training at the U. S. Naval Training Station here.

WILLIAMS

Williams was employed at Colonna's shipyard prior to joining the Navy as an apprentice seaman. Having completed his basic training, he will be sent to a naval service school for instruction as a petty officer in one of 49 Navy trades, if not immediately assigned sea duty.

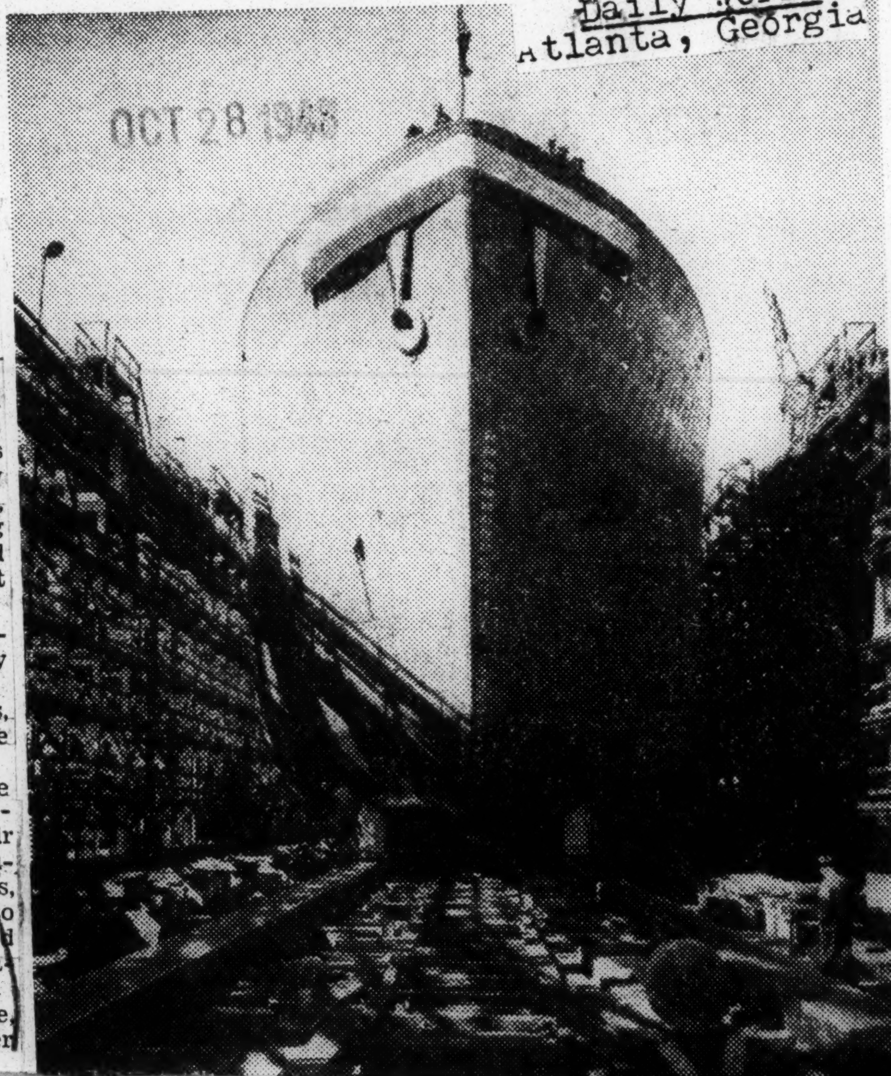
OCT 23 1943

The honor man has left the station for nine-day boot leave with his mother and friends in Norfolk. Williams is a graduate of St. Joseph High School, Norfolk, and attended Virginia State College.

S. S. Dunbar Slides To Sea

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

OCT 28 1943



WILMINGTON, Cal.—(SNS)—The sixth Liberty ship to be named after a Negro, the tanker, S. S. Paul Lawrence Dunbar, is pictured as it slides down the ways of the California Shipbuilding Corporation here, 31 days after its keel was laid. Mrs. Clarice Williams, senior Negro woman employee of Calship, served as sponsor, while Miss Eva Springer, sister of the sponsor, acted as maid of honor.

- 1943

MRS. ROBERT B. PARKER, WIFE OF WORKER WHO MADE ENVIABLE ATTENDANCE RECORD, CHRISTENS S.S. LA FARGE IN BALTIMORE

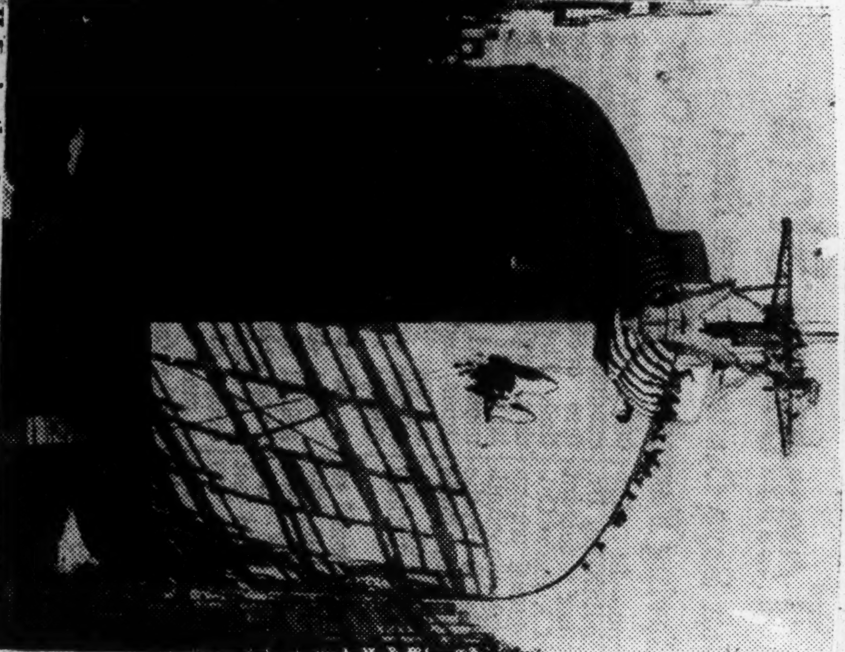
Afro-American
Baltimore, Maryland

According to tradition, the sponsor received a gift from the builders. William Reynolds, shipyard representative, presented a watch, set with rubies and diamonds, to Mrs. Parker.

In the launching party were, left to right: Brooks Parker, who drew the lucky tag from those of all employees who scored against absenteeism, Mrs. Nimrod Dodson, Mrs. Julius Scott and Mrs. J. Nelson Fortune.

477

Champagne splattered as the bottle broke against the bow of the S.S. John La Farge as she broke away amid whistles and cheers. Mrs. Brooks Parker, wife of a shipyard work, was sponsor.



Here is the S.S. John La Farge, named for the famous American artist and sponsor of stained and mosaic glass making, photographed prior to the launching in Baltimore, Friday.

Press Pushes Navy on Colored Officers

NOV 20 1942

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md

Publishers' Group Takes Up Morale-Damaging Ills at D.C. Conferences

WASHINGTON

Representatives of the Negro Newspaper Publishers' Association meeting here Saturday took steps to increase their race's knowledge of "what we are fighting for" and to push their campaign to have the armed service liberalize policies controlling their utilization of colored men and women in uniform.

Toward this end the publishers on Friday and Saturday conferred with Navy and Office of War Information officials and later visited the White House with proposals designed to remove some of the causes of disaffection.

Navy Barriers Aattacked

A committee representing the newspapermen laid before Rear Admiral Randall Jacobs, chief of Navy personnel, reports of complaints against limited opportunities in the Navy.

Especially attacked were the color barrier against colored WAVES, chaplains, aviators and commissioned officers.

This committee also urged a broader program by the Navy public relations bureau in providing information about colored service men and their achievements and activities, even within the scope of their present opportunities.

Officers "Considered"

In reply to questions, Admiral Jacobs said that the Navy Department was considering the appointment of a few colored men as officers. Pressed to give a more definite reply as to the number, Admiral Jacobs refused further comment.

He also said that the Navy was considering the admission of colored women as WAVES, but, said that there was one hitch in that the Navy Department did not want to train them at he same places at which whites are being trained. White WAVES are now being trained at Hunter College in New York City, and at Smith College in Northhampton, Mass.

Concerning the appointment of colored men in the Navy Public Relations Department, Admiral Jacobs said that this matter was out of his hands.

Press Privileges Sought

At the White House, in a conference with Stephen Early, the President's press secretary, the publishers placed special emphasis on obstacles limiting them in keeping the Administration and their reading public fully advised on matters of vital public interest.

They later took action looking toward representation in White House press conferences and in the Senate and House press galleries.

In talks with OWI officials, proposals were offered for making more effective that agency's news, pictures, radio and movie presentations of the colored race's role in the war effort.

F.D. to Get Statement

The group authorized a formal statement to be laid before the President on certain conditions believed to be contributing to disunity and loss of productiveness in the drive for victory.

The publishers also discussed their participation in the War Advertising Council, the bill before Congress to abolish the poll tax as a prerequisite for voting in Federal elections, the FEPC, and its forthcoming annual observance of Negro Newspaper Week.

In attendance were:

John Sengestake, NNPA president and publisher of the Chicago Defender; P. L. Prattis, and Mrs. Robert L. Vann, Pittsburgh Courier; Carl, Howard and Arnett Murphy, Afri-American Newspapers; Charles Browning, Chicago Defender;

P. Bernard and Thomas W. Young, Norfolk Journal and Guide; Frank Stanley, Louisville Defender; Carter Wesley, Houston Informer; W. O. Walker, Cleveland Call-Post; Alexander Barnes, Washington Tribune;

C. F. Powell, New York Amsterdam News; Joseph Christian, New York Peoples' Voice; Mrs. Juanjta Goodman, Los Angeles Sentinel; Roy Garvin, Joe LaCour and Ralph Matthews, Washington Afro-American

Cook on Destroyer Borie Mans Guns in Battle with U-Boat

NOV 20 1943

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

Christopher Sheppard, Cook First Class, Serves as 1-Man Gun Crew as Submarine Is Sunk in Atlantic

NOV 20 1943

BALTIMORE

Dorie Miller, famed colored Bluejacket hero of the Pearl Harbor attack, had a new rival this week.

He is Christopher Columbus Sheppard, cook first class, USN, and a "one-man gun crew" on the Destroyer Borie which was part of a naval force reecntly awarded the Presidential Unit Citation for having sunk "more submarines than any team in naval history."

Sheppard's exploits, and those of another colored member of the Borie crew, Ernest Gardner, steward's mate second class, USNR, were revealed by their commander, Lieut. Charles H. Hutchins of Terre Haute, Ind., during a press conference at the Navy Department on November 10.

Commander Tells Story

According to Lieutenant Hutchins, Sheppard had a battle station as "first loader" on a 4-inch gun when the Borie, fighting alone many miles from her group, was engaged in a knock-down, drag-out battle with two U-boats—one of which was described by the Borie's commander as "the biggest one we'd ever seen."

While fighting the latter sub at ranges of 10 to 40 feet, the gun crew at Sheppard's station became blinded by smoke. The "first loader" immediately seized the gun and started firing away at the sub. Gardner rushed from another station and started passing the ammunition.

After a few minutes, however, Sheppard waved his assistant aside and became a "one-man gun crew," getting his own ammunition, loading the gun and firing continuously at the badly crippled submarine.

Gardner Talks for AFRO

Gardner, who told the AFRO that he has been in the navy only five-and-a-half months and experienced action in European and North African waters, related his version of the battle Monday at his home in Baltimore.

During the heat of the fight he singly manned a heavy weapon after having crawled and pushed ammunition to his battle station, he asserted.

He has five sisters and four brothers. One of the latter, Sgt. Thomas J. Gardner, is now stationed at Camp Croft, S.C. Gardner was formerly employed at the Holabird Signal Depot, in Baltimore, as a mechanic.

Gardner is the son of Mrs. Rose E. Gardner of Ware Neck, Va., and his wife, Mrs. Lucille Gardner, lives at 914

Unit [illegible] ub Group

The Borie was part of the USS Card anti-submarine group, which consisted of the aircraft carrier, USS Card, the Destroyers Borie, Barry and Goff and the Card's aviation units, Composite Squadrons 1 and 9.

In receiving the Presidential Unit Citation, this anti-submarine team was officially credited with being "largely responsible for the complete withdrawal of hostile U-boats" from the United States-North Africa convoy route.

The story of the death battle of the Borie against a pack of submarines and her fight for survival while wallowing in heavy seas in a badly damaged condition has been termed by the Navy Department as:

"An outstanding example of valor and seamanship," typical of "the teamwork of the unsung escort vessels that help make possible the more colorful exploits of the death-dealing, carrier-based planes which are carrying the fight to the U-boats in the mid-Atlantic."

Describes Battle with Sub

Describing the battle with the second sub, Lieutenant Hutchins said:

"We tried to ram the sub, but it submerged and we dropped all the depth charges in the racks. We must have scored because the U-boat came to the surface. Again we sped forward to ram, firing as we went. Our fire wiped the sub's deck clear of Germans and swept away their forward gun.

"Our bow struck the sub and rode over it. I stopped the engines and we held it fast. Then we let go with everything we had—4-inch guns, 20 mm. and machine guns—at ranges from 10 to 40 feet.

"Some men fired shotguns. The executive officer grabbed a tommy gun and started firing from the bridge. Others used pistols and one boy even took a signal pistol and fired at the sub.

The range was so short that one gun couldn't be brought to bear. So the gun captain started throwing empty shell cases and he knocked one man off the deck of sub.

One Man Throws Knife

"Another fellow threw his knife. He said later he'd never been able to stick a knife in the floor before, but this time he stuck it in the stomach of a German and he went overboard.

"After about 10 minutes of this inferno, the submarine got clear and attempted to flee. It went into a 'tight turn' in the pitch black darkness and for a time the Borie could not close in."

"Then he turned the tables and tried to ram us," Hutchins continued, "but we stopped him six feet short by dropping depth charges, set to the most shallow charge. It was like two tomcats in a room. We were [illegible] firing torpedoes at every chance."

Meanwhile, the Borie had been hurt, mainly from the ramming. The forward engine room was flooded, but the crew there kept the turbines operating—operating in water up to their necks.

Sub Explodes and Sinks

The blond young skipper, then told of the work of Sheppard, and Gardner.

Under the terrific fire, the submarine was battered by repeated hits and finally exploded and sank, Lieutenant Hutchins said.

Badly crippled, the 23-year-old Borie then started to limp back to its task force through the North Atlantic storm. All electric lights, however, were knocked out as well as the radio and heating plant.

There was no fresh water for the crew. Torpedoes, torpedo tubes, guns and other weight topside weer cut loose and thrown overboard in an effort to save the listing vessel.

"There was a small auxiliary radio aboard, but we had lost all the gasoline aboard," reported Hutchins. "So we collected all the cigarette-lighter fluid aboard, mixed the doctor's alcohol with kerosene and got enough fuel to use the generator for a short message."

NOV 26 1943

All but 27 of Crew Saved

The message was picked up and planes from the Card located the ship. Despite a 15 to 20-foot sea, all but 27 members of the Borie's crew were rescued by the task force destroyers. Then the hulk was sent to the bottom by bombs from the carrier's planes.

Dorie Miller, the first colored naval hero in this war, manned a machine gun during the sneak Japanese attack at Pearl Harbor and shot down four attacking planes. He was later awarded the Navy Cross by President Roosevelt.

NOV 20 1943

Many other colored naval recruits have distinguished themselves in action since then and several have received awards.

VETERAN

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

SEP 18 1943

Veteran of 15 Naval engagements in the Pacific zone, Byron B. Gray, cook s/c USN, enjoyed a furlough recently with his parents in Los Angeles, Calif. He is survivor of the [illegible] of the USS Helena, light cruiser. He expects to serve on a newly launched aircraft carrier.—George Cutler Photo.

Former Merchant Marine. Youthful Bluejacket Train

SEP 11 1943

Daily World
Atlanta, Ga.

WASHINGTON—(S N S)—A veteran of 15 years' service in the merchant marine and a 17-year-old Bluejacket who was discharged from the Army when it was discovered he was underage are now in training in one of the regiments at the U. S. Naval Training Station, Great Lakes, Ill.

The 5-foot 5-inch, 12[illegible]-pound ex-soldier is John Henry Pryor, son of Robert Pryor, of Abraham Lincoln Court, Paducah, Ky. The former merchant seaman is Frank Gaberial, 33, of 334 St. Nicholas Ave., New York City.

Pryor was 16 years old when he reported for his basic training at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind., where, because of R. O. T. C. training in high school, he served as company clerk and acting drill sergeant. Later he served in the medical corps until his true age was discovered. He was a private first class, when he received his honorable discharge. He enlisted in the Navy July 14, soon after his 17th birthday. His brother, Robert is a corporal serving overseas.

Gaberial, a native of St. Thomas Virgin Islands, went to sea for the first time at Puerto Rico when he was 17 years old. He was shipwrecked several times, and last year was serving aboard a ship which was shelled by an enemy submarine. He was sworn into the Navy on July 3. His wife, Mrs. Mae Gaberial, lives at the St. Nicholas Avenue address in New York City.

Gets High Post On USMS Staff

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

AUG

NEW YORK, Aug. 12—The appointment last week of Roy Ferguson, of Des Moines, Iowa, to the administrative staff in the personnel department at the United States Maritime Service station at Sheepshead Bay, N. Y., marks another first in the integration of Negroes into the war program. In his present capacity, Ferguson is responsible for the functioning of trainees at Sheepshead Bay, both white and colored. He is also connected with the legal department, having been a lawyer before he entered the service.

At the same time, Nathan Hill of Chicago was appointed to the administrative staff and is in charge of certain duties in the carpenter department.

J.C. Insignia for Seamen Protested

Afro-American
Baltimore, Maryland

NOV 27 1943

NEW YORK — The NAACP sent a letter recently to Frank Knox, Secretary of the Navy, protesting an order forbidding colored chief petty officers to wear regulation insignia.

Declaring that chief cooks and stewards at the Norfolk Naval Air Station were "wearing the wrong rating badge on their uniforms," Commander C. Adair, executive officer, signed an order which reads in part:

"The proper rating badge for these ratings is the crescent with four horizontal bars underneath, similar to first class rating with an additional horizontal bar. Non-regulation rating badges will be removed immediately."

Insignia Without Eagle

Complaints from San Francisco and Norfolk assert that colored chief petty officers have been ordered to wear a crescent above four straight bars instead of the regulation three red chevrons under an eagle.

The NAACP letter, which asked quick abolition of the discriminating rules, said in part:

"We are informed that within the limits of the Norfolk Naval Air Station colored seamen are segregated into rear seats of busses operated to carry personnel from one part of the station to another."

47j-1943

'Missing In Action' On Sunken Plane Carrier

By HARRY McALPIN
(Defender Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON.—Dorie Miller, first Negro Bluejacket hero in this war, is "missing in action," the Navy Department officially confirmed this week.

The [illegible] youth who won the Navy Cross at Pearl Harbor was lost when the U.S. escort aircraft carrier Liscome Bay went down in flames off Makin Island on Nov. 24.

There was heavy loss of life in the sinking of the carrier by a Jap torpedo during the conquest of the Gilbert Islands and little hope is held out for Miller. Survivors of the sinking told of many crew members drowning in burning oil in the waters around the carrier.

Miller was known to be serving on the Liscome Bay at the time of her sinking.

His next of kin, Mr. and Mrs. Conery Miller, Waco, Texas, have been notified.

Miller, a strapping, 200-pound former fullback from Waco's Moore high school, was awarded the [illegible] Cross by President Roosevelt for "distinguished devotion to duty, extraordinary courage and disregard for his own personal safety during the attack on the fleet in Pearl Harbor, Territory of Hawaii, by Japanese forces on December 7, 1941."

Defender
Chicago, Ill

DORIE MILLER

At the same time, Miller received a letter of commendation from the secretary of the navy and was advanced in rating from mess attendant, third class, to mess attendant first class. In addition, Bluejacket Miller has received the American Defense Service [illegible] the Fleet Clasp and the Asiatic-Pacific Campaign Medal.

While the navy withheld any details about Miller's loss, it was learned from survivors of the Liscome Bay that there is little chance that any crew members survived the ordeal of fire and water which began a split second after a look-out shouted "here comes a torpedo." The carrier's lights blinked out and flames leaped high above the flight deck.

About 200 survivors arriving in San Francisco said the casualties were heavy. Rear Adm. Henry M. Mullinix, task force commander, and Capt. Irving D. Wiltsie, the skipper, both were lost.

Some of the baby [illegible] planes were hurled into the sea. Bombs and ammunition were set off, but the officers and crew underwent their ordeal "with courage and gallantry that will long be remembered in the navy's traditions," the 12th Naval District announced.

Lt. Cmdr. M. U. Beebe, squadron commander, Anaheim, Calif., described the scene: "There was a terrific rumbling throughout the ship and an explosion that lifted me off the deck. The next thing I knew I was trying to get out the door in the darkness, but could find no passage. Fire started and I don't know how I got there, but I made the flight deck. It was ablaze and there was oil burning on the water."

There were more explosions before the Liscome Bay mae her final dive, bow out of the water until the last.

"Once in the water I tried to swim away but the current carried the ship toward me," Lt. Smith related. "Rounds of ammunition were going off in all directions. I picked up a seaman and we swam beyond the stern."

The U.S.S. Liscome Bay went down a flaming pyre and her last minutes were "like a Chinese New Year's, with explosions going off and tracers whizzing about," Capt. John Crommelin Jr., 41, of Montgomery, Ala., senior surviving officer, said.

Crommelin said he was naked, just coming out of a shower, when the first torpedo hit.

"There was a tremendous upheaval, one violent explosion setting off others on the hanger deck," he related. "Some debris hit me on the head as I stepped out of my cabin without my clothes."

"There were a couple of dead men in the passageway and I smelled burning flesh. As I opened the door, flames swept in, scorching my right side—my face, shoulders, legs and arms—and I thought I was done."

Crommelin said he finally climbed out through the catapult machinery room onto the flight deck. Devastation was everywhere. Planes were burning. Ammunition was exploding. Many d[illegible] crew members lay about.

A moment later he met Lt. Cmdr. Marshall Beebe, the squadron commander. He was carrying a badly hurt seaman "like a cat with a kitten," recalled Crommelin. He said they placed the seaman on the bow where he later would be able to float free.

Beebe slid down the ropes into the water, while Crommelin dove 45 feet into the fiery sea just as the Liscome Bay heeled over.

"The water felt very soothing," he said. "One kid joined me. He had nothing on but a tin hat. Flames were licking about us but none touched me as I swam from the ship. She obviously was doomed, but she stayed up for 10 minutes more—about 20 minutes in all after being hit. One magazine let go, and I felt eight or 10 other explosions. The ship settled by the stern and then began rolling slightly just before she went down."

Crommelin succeeded in making his way to a piece of cork, and while he clung to it, the Liscome Bay cracked and boomed. After a short time, he paddled his way to a life raft to where about 30 officers and men were hanging on.

Although the inferno they had just escaped had left its marks on many of them, everyone was cheerful and they soon were picked up by a destroyer almost within sight of Makin.

Miller, who was born October 12, 1919, left his father's small Waco, Texas, farm on September 16, 1939, to enlist in the navy as a mess attendant, third class, at Dallas, Texas. He was sent to the Naval Training Station at Norfolk, Va., and then was assigned to the U.S. Arizona on which he served until the morning of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor.

Official reports reveal that he arose at 6 a.m., on the morning of December 7, and was collecting laundry when the alarm for General Quarters sounded. He headed for his battle station—the anti-aircraft battery magazine amidships—only to discover that torpedo damage already had rendered it untenable. So he went on deck where—because of his powerfu size—he was immediately assigned to the task of carrying wounded to places of greater safety. An officer ordered him to the bridge to aid the mortally wounded captain. Miller helped remove the dying officer and then returned to the machine gun.

Admiral Chester [illegible] Nimitz, commander-in-chief [illegible] Pacific Fleet, personally presented the Navy Cross [illegible] Miller in ceremonies aboard a United States warship in the Pacific on May 27, 1942. Pinning the bit or ribbon and cross of bronze on the sailor's breast, he described his act of heroism on the U.S.S. Arizona during the Japanese attack on the Pearl Harbor naval base, and complimented Miller on being the first representative of his race to be so honored in this war. He then read the citation which said:

"While at the side of his captain on the bridge, Miller, despite enemy strafing and bombing and in the face of a serious fire, assisted in moving his captain, who had been mortally wounded, to a place of greater safety, and later manned and operated a machine gun directed at enemy Japanese attacking aircraft until ordered to leave the bridge."

Later, in January, [illegible] while visiting the U. S. [illegible] Training Station at Great Lakes, Ill., Bluejacket Miller explained that the Pearl Harbor incident marked his first experience with a machine gun. Addressing hundreds of Negro Bluejackets who are now being taught at Great Lakes to handle such weapons, Miller said:

"It wasn't hard. I just pulled the trigger and she worked fine. I had watched the others with these guns. I guess I fired her for about 15 minutes at those Jap planes They were diving pretty close to us."

Poet's Corner

The following poem was written and sent to Mrs. Robbie Lynn Wallace, 101 Clark street, by Byran [illegible] Gray, now of Los Angeles, California. He was here a few days ago on a furlough and among other incidents he has experienced of his 3 years as a sailor, was the bombing and sinking of his ship, the "Helena" while he and other members of his crew were still on board.

"HELENA'S LAST STAND"

"Twas the fourth of July, old Independence Day,
The boys were sailing around, all happy and gay,
It wasn't till then, the word was passed around,
"The Tokie Express was on its way down,"
The captain then shouted "Every battle station to man,
It was in this great battle, that we made our last stand.
Targets bearing nine-eight zero, zero
Stand by, commence —firing.
After sixteen glorious minutes of continuous firing,
The Old Helena's frame began to groan and sigh,
It wasn't the first fish nor the second but the third,
That caused the mighty Helena, to settle to her berth.
The captain called down to the magazine store,
"The water has covered the boiler room floor,"
Old Gray, ~~old Gray~~, if you pump the water out
I will make you a hero without a doubt."
Now Gray answered back said, "Captain can't you see,
What good would a medal be to me?"
The sparks from his dog wench did fly
As he undogged the batcher on the fifth of July.

'Twas he who led his shipmates to safety above
And into the water, life rafts he did shove,
Then into the murky waters below he did dive,
To watch the gallant Helena, make her last drive.
Against the battle lit sky the Helena did silhoutte
It wasn't an easy sight [illegible] ever forget.
It wasn't till then I realized I was on my own,
With not even a life-raft to call my home.
It was in the early morning that I realized.

Informer

Houston

DEC 25 1943

OCT 30 1943

That the Navy would not leave me in the water to die.
I've sailed the mighty ocean from coast to coast,
And of many beautiful places I
can boast,
But the greatest day in the Navy,
'twill be,
Was the day, when they threw the life line from the ship to me..

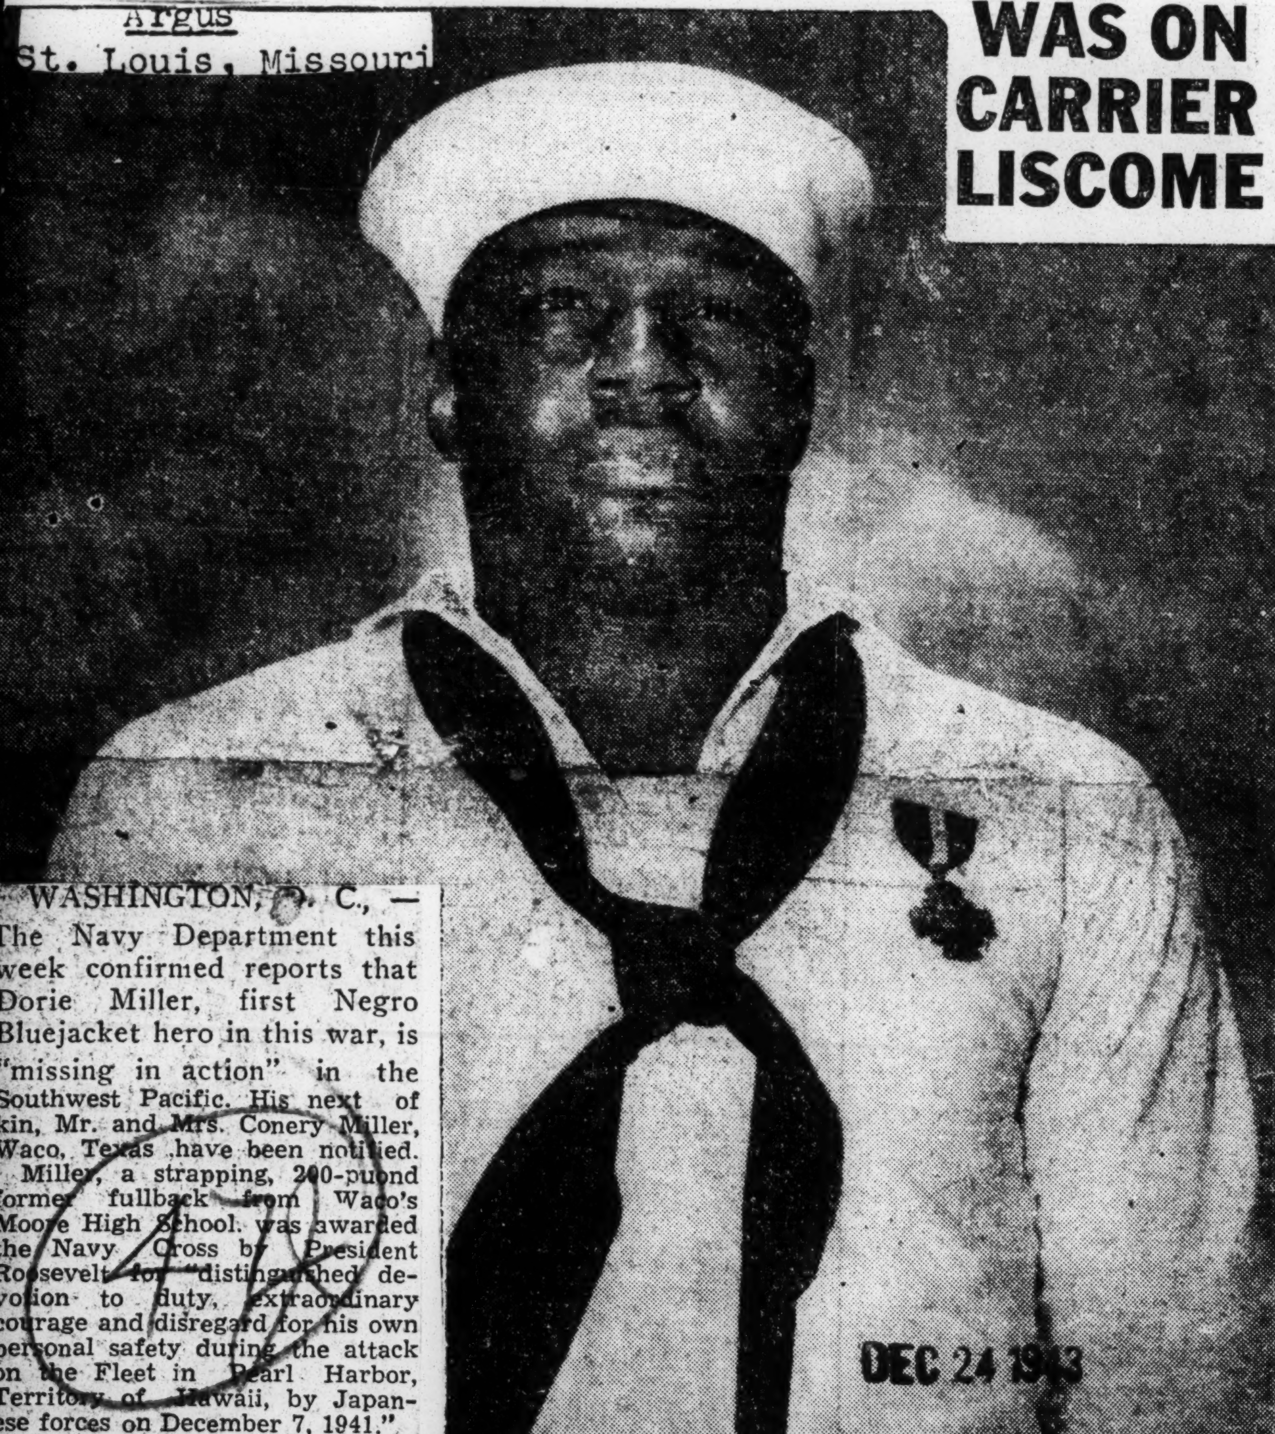
By BRYAN B. GRAY, New Port News, Va. —U. S. Receiving Station.

OCT 30 1943

Argus
St. Louis, Missouri

WAS ON CARRIER LISCOME



WASHINGTON, D. C., — The Navy Department this week confirmed reports that Dorie Miller, first Negro Bluejacket hero in this war, is "missing in action" in the Southwest Pacific. His next of kin, Mr. and Mrs. Conery Miller, Waco, Texas have been notified.

Miller, a strapping, 200-puond former fullback from Waco's Moore High School, was awarded the Navy Cross by President Roosevelt for "distinguished devotion to duty, extraordinary courage and disregard for his own personal safety during the attack on the Fleet in Pearl Harbor, Territory of Hawaii, by Japanese forces on December 7, 1941."

"While at the side of his Captain on the bridge, Miller, despite enemy strafing and bombing and in the face of a serious fire, assisted in moving his Captain, who had been mortally wounded, to a place of greater safety, and later manned and operated a machine gun directed at enemy Japanese attacking aircraft until ordered to leave the bridge.

Later, in January, 1943, visited the U. S. Naval Training Station at Great Lakes, Ill .

Since Pearl Harbor, Miller has been assigned to various other naval vessels. Shortly before he was reported missing in action, he was serving aboard the Aircraft Carrier Liscome Bay which was sunk by enemy action in the Southwest Pacific on November 24, 1943.

Miller's parents live at Route 1, Box 161, Waco, Texas. The missing hero has three brothers, one a private in the U. S. Army.

DEC 24 1943

S. S. James W. Johnson Launched By Mrs. Bass

Defender
Chicago, Ill

DEC 18 1943

WILMINGTON, Calif.—Named in honor of the Negro author, James W. Johnson, Calship's 301st vessel was launched Sunday at the California Shipbuilding Corporation yard on Terminal Island.

The 10,500-ton Liberty Ship was christened by Mrs. Charlotta A. Bass of Los Angeles, editor of the California Eagle. Miss Bernice Cook of Los Angeles, was maid of honor.

James Weldon Johnson (June 17, 1871-June 26, 1938) was an attorney, educator, social worker, and writer of music, poetry and prose. He was born in Jacksonville, Fla., where he first practiced law. In 1901 he went to New York, and spent later years in Puerto Cabello, Venezuela, and Carinto, Nicaragua, as U. S. Consul.

Johnson received the A.B. degree from Atlanta university, 1894. He attended Columbia university for three years, receiving the degree of doctor of literature. He studied at Talladega college, Alabama, 1917, and Howard university, 1923. For several years he was principal of a high school at Jacksonville. In 1897 he was admitted to the Florida bar.

He practiced at Jacksonville until 1901 and then joined his brother, J. Rosamond Johnson, in New York to write for light opera and the stage.

In 1906 he was appointed as U. S. consul at Puerto Cabello, Venezuela. From 1909 to 1912 he served in a similar capacity at Carinto, Nicaragua, where he served through a difficult period of political turmoil.

He was secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, 1916-1930; professor of creative literature at Fisk university, 1930; and visiting professor of creative literature at New York university, 1934. He was a trustee of Atlanta university.

Johnson was the author of "Autobiography of an Ex-Colored Man," 1912; "Fifty Years and Other Poems," 1917; "Self-Determining Haiti," 1920; "Book of American Negro Poetry," 1921; "Book of American Negro Spirituals," 1925; "Second Book of Spirituals," 1926; "God's Trombones," 1927; "Black Manhattan," 1930; "St. Peter Relates an Incident of the Resurrection Day," 1930; "Along This Way," 1933; "Negro Americans, What Now?" 1934; he was a contributor to Encyclopedia Brittanica. He wrote lyrics for several songs and wrote the English version of Libretto to Goyescas, produced at the Metropolitan Opera House, New York, 1915.

DEC 18 1943

Navy Boss Knox Bars Mixed Crews In Navy

NOV 20 1943 Defender
Chicago, Ill

By ERNEST E. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON—(ANP) — The Navy department definitely does not intend to mix the crews of its warships. Secretary Frank Knox, in no uncertain terms, told his press conference last Friday afternoon.

The subject was precipitated when the navy secretary announced that he had appointed a navy manpower survey board to examine the complements—officer, enlisted and civilian—of all naval shore establishments with an eye to "streamlining" them and achieving maximum efficiency. The initial phase of the navy's expanding shore organization and mobilization work, he said, is nearing completion.

Mr. Knox was then asked whether or not, in view of the stated probability that personnel at shore establishments would be reduced as a result of this study, it would follow that Negroes would be given different assignments since the bulk of those leaving such centers as the Great Lakes Naval Training station had been sent to such establishments.

"That will depend upon just what the men can do," he stated, "and whether we have places available to them."

"Are they not trained to be seamen?" was the next query.

The secretary sat upright in his spring-back chair and looked directly at his questioner and declared "Well, you know exactly what we are trying to do. We are trying to avoid mixing [illegible] on ships. That puts a limitation on where we can employ Negro seamen. Using them for crews of small shore and harbor craft, and things of that sort, and for shore duty. But we are not mixing crews."

All-Negro crews are now manning coast guard cutters, but there has been no announcement or indication that colored seamen are being used on any other ships outside of the rank of mess attendant.

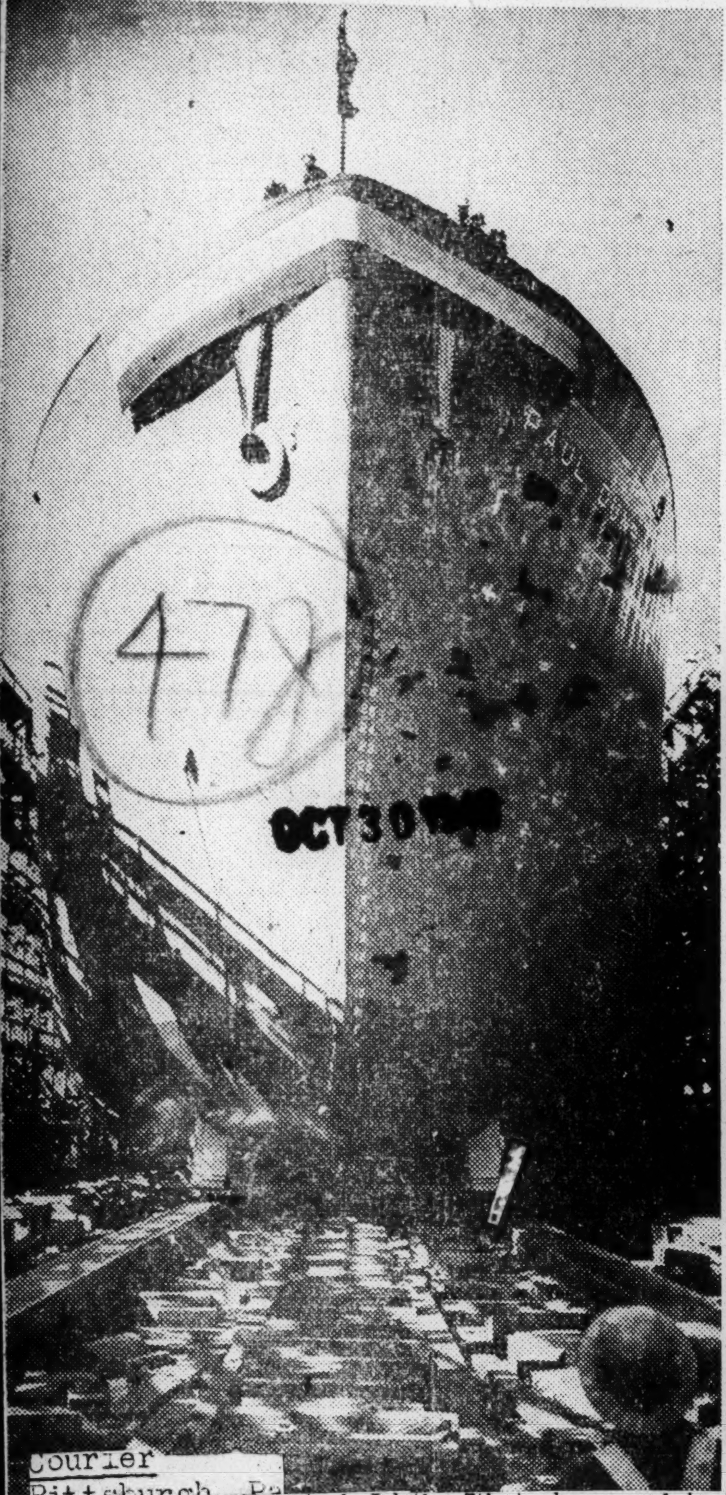
There is ground now for some speculation that those few Negroes known to be enrolled in the Navy's V-12 program, if given commissions as has been hinted, will be assigned to those "small shore and harbor craft" on which they are not presently used and to which the secretary referred.

The only announcements that the department has been in the habit of making about Negroes in the navy have been with regard to those in construction battalions, popularly called "Seabees." Official navy photographs, however, have shown Negro inductees receiving training in radio and other types of specialized training, but nothing has yet been said as to their performance in the posts to which it would be expected they would be assigned.

NOV 20 1943

47j-1943

S.S. PAUL LAURENCE DUNBAR BECOMES SEVENTH VESSEL TO BE NAMED FOR A NEGRO . . .



478

OCT 30 1943

OCT 30 1943

OCT 30 1943

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa

Cal-Ship yard, Terminal Island, was the scene last Tuesday of the launching of the Liberty tanker, S.S. Paul Dunbar, left, named in honor of the world-famous poet, Paul Laurence Dunbar. The vessel was christened by Mrs. Clarice Williams, oldest Negro woman employee in point of service in the yard. Her sister, Mrs. Eva Stringer, acted as maid of honor. She too is a Cal-Ship employee.

The Paul Dunbar was the 15th of the Liberty ships to be launched at the yard to date. The 274th to be sent down the ways since Cal-Ship's building program got under way in 1941 and the 7th to be named in the nation for a Negro.

Upper right: On the launching platform just before the brief but colorful ceremony got under way are: Miss Eva Stringer, maid of honor; Mrs. Geneva Pope, Mrs. Sedonia Palmer and Mrs. Clarice Williams, sponsor. All four are sisters.

Lower right: Pictured on the steps of the yard's administration building are a group of honored guests and the sponsors. Left to right: Mrs. Herman Smith, New York; Miss Vaino Hasson, Mrs. Gladyce Hill, Sidney P. Dones, Mrs. Clarice Williams. Herman Smith of New York, Mrs. Geneva Pope and Miss Eva Stringer.—George Cutler, Clyde Woods and Cal-Ship Photos.

OCT 30 1943

'GOD BLESS THIS SHIP IN PEACE AND WAR'

Pittsburgh, Pa

PORTLAND, Maine — As snow-white sea gulls wheeled silently overhead, multicolored flags [illegible] masts of the [illegible] Robert [illegible] Vann, and a bareheaded multitude bowed its heads — Rev. C. E. Askew, pastor of the Third Baptist church, Detroit, Mich., prayed for "God's divine blessings on the ship, her captain and her crew."

"Upon this ship and her crew we implore thy divine benedictions in peace and in war," he declared.

"Be thou her guard in stormy waters . . . her guide on smiling seas, as Thou did'st stand upon the barque on Lake Galilee.

Courier

"When her voyage is ended and this war of blood and carnage is ended, may she be brought home victorious and moored in peaceful harbors.

"We come to thank Thee for this day, the occasion, and the life and [illegible] Robert L. Vann, in whose honor this ship, we are about to launch, is named.

"And now may the blessings of the Father, the Son and the Holy Spirit be, and abide with all those who have contributed to this grand and historic occasion."

OCT 18 1943

74,000 Negroes Now Serving In Navy: 7,100 In "Seabees"

Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Virginia

WASHINGTON, D. C. — More than 74,000 Negroes are now serving in the U. S. Navy, Secretary [illegible] Knox announced at his press conference Friday, October 22. Approximately 7,100 of these recruits are members of the "Seabees," construction battalions organized within the bureau of yards and docks to build advance bases wherever needed and to fight whenever the occasion requires it.

Secretary Knox also said that 6,000 Negro enlisted men are now serving at 12 naval ordnance stations. These men, he said, have been detailed to duty at ordance stations since August, 1942, and have been organized since May, 1943, in Navy ordnance battalions. A special quota of the complements is being ordered to serve at advance bases in combat areas. Mr. Knox added, and these will be replaced at continental stations in the United States by new recruits as they become available.

The type of work being performed by men of the Negro ordnance battalions ranges from manual labor to hazardous and skillful work on ammunition, the norma l lot of all enlisted men.

PROMOTION INCENTIVE TO PERFORMANCE

NOV 6 1943

47

As an incentive to performance, the comamnding officer of each depot has authority to promote personnel showing the necessary qualifications of leadership to any rating up to and including that of chief petty officer, the Secretary stated. Recreational activities of these battalions have been completely organized.

NOV 6 - 1943

Secretary [illegible] explained that ammunition depots where Negro enlisted men are stationed are located at Fallbrook, Calif.; Hingham, Mass.; Charleston, S. C.; Puget Sound and Indian Island, Wash.; Mare Island, Calif.; Yorktown and St. Julien Creek, Va.; New Orleans, La.; Hasting, Neb.; and McAlister, Okla.

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md

'Damn Mad,' Says Boatswain of Ship Torpedoed, Sunk by Nazis

Baltimore Man Tells Story of Sinking of Capt. Richardson's Ship by Germans in N. Atlantic

By LEE PHELPS

BALTIMORE — Jerome Davis, boatswain of Captain Adrian Richardson's Liberty ship which was torpedoed and sunk in the North Atlantic by a German submarine, is "damn mad."

Davis's ship was launched at an Eastern shipyard in May. All of her crew was saved and landed in New York on Saturday.

In an exclusive interview with the AFRO at his Bennett Place home where he arrived early Sunday, Mr. Davis related how the ship and others in the convoy ran into a wolf pack of subs 500 miles East of Iceland.

Attacked at 5:30 A.M.

When the attack on his vessel came late last month in the early morning he had just gotten out of bed and started to get a cup of pre-breakfast coffee, Davis related.

The force of the torpedo which struck the stern of the ship threw him against her side, but he soon regained his composure and ran out on deck to see what damage had been done.

"I was so mad, I just cussed," he related.

At the time of the attack, Davis had on only his pants, shoes, and undershirt. He returned to his bunk, retrieved his coat and hat, the key to his [illegible] and a whistle and made for the boat deck because the ship was sinking fast.

No Confusion; Ship Abandoned

There was no confusion—everyone was calm and all the time the crew was preparing to abandon ship, escort vessels were fighting subs.

A few minutes after the attack on his ship, Davis said, another ship in the convoy immediately behind his was struck in the middle and sunk almost immediately. Only eleven members of this crew survived.

By this time his lifeboat was lowered and he and fourteen companions were safely seated, their vessel had disappeared from sight.

Because of the heavy seas and the danger of being struck by more torpedoes, members of his lifeboat crew worked frantically until they [illegible] least [illegible] or ten miles away from the scene of the tragedy.

"Surprised" by Rescue

For that reason, they drifted for three and a half hours before they were spotted by a British destroyer.

"We were really surprised," Boatswain Davis said, "when we were rescued so soon. We were prepared for a long trip in that lifeboat. But after the destroyer told us we would be picked up soon, the men spontaneously started singing."

Nevertheless, the danger was not over and all the while they were sailing into a Canadian port on the British rescue ship, Nazi subs were following. The escort vessels were continually letting down depth charges and fighting [illegible] the subs, Davis said.

OCT 9 1943

Sheltered by Canadians

The crew, all unharmed, reached port and were cared for by the Canadian Navy Merchan Association; given shelter, food and clothing.

When he reached home, Davis was wearing the uniform of the Canadian Merchant Marine which is similar to that of the U.S.

Several Ships Lost

Several ships were lost in the convoy.

One of the destroyers lost was the Canadian St. Croix, one of the fifty turned over to England before Pearl Harbor in exchange for naval bases.

The St. Croix, which lost all but one of its 147 crew members, was hit in her magazine just as she was picking up survivors, Davis related.

Davis has been sailing for twenty years and gave up a job in a Baltimore war plant to join the crew of this vessel. This was the first time he had been torpedoed despite his long sea service.

Nevertheless, he's ready to sail again. "There's no use giving up now. I'm going to stay in until we get them or they get us," he said.

Seaman Risks Life, Returning to Sinking Ship to Rescue Dog

BALTIMORE—Here is an ad for the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals: Fred[illegible] Douglass, canine mascot of the Liberty ship, torpedoed in the Atlantic two weeks ago and was saved along with members of the crew of Capt. Adrian Richardson's ship.

Doulass was rescued by one of the white members of the crew who remembered he was still abroad and returned to the sinking vessel to save him.

The dog's rescuer had use of only one arm, as the other was in a sling from an injury received while overseas; but, undaunted, he climbed the monkey lines to save the canine.

In appreciation, Capt. Richardson made him sole owner of the dog.

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa,

'VANN WAS CHAMPION OF HUMAN RIGHTS FOR ALL'--WENDELL WILLKIE

OCT 16 1943

By JAMES EDMUND BOYACK, Staff Correspondent

PORTLAND, Maine—In a telegram to Ira F. Lewis, president of this newspaper, at the launching of the S.S. Robert L. Vann here Sunday, Wen[illegible] L. Willkie declared:

"Mr. Vann would not, I think, take this as a personal tribute, even though it is just that, for the honor to the individual pales into insignificance compared to what this occasion represents.

"I believe that Mr. Vann, who fought so tenaciously for equality of opportunity for his people, would be the first to reject a mere token honor; he would have judged the calibre of the tribute by the proportion of equality his people receive as a matter of every day right."

NEEDED TO KNOW VANN

Mr. Willkie said, "Only those who knew Mr. Robert L. Vann personally during his life can truly appreciate the significance of the launching of the Liberty Ship S.S. Robert L. Vann." Mr. Willkie said further:

"That his memory is honored by his fellow citizens, is no surprise to me, for he was one of the outstanding Negro leaders of his generation . . . a man whose vision, resourcefulness and knowledge of men and affairs, set him apart in usefulness and service to his city, state and nation.

"In the hour of his people's rials, he was always to be found n the forefront, striving ceaselessy for their advancement, no matter what the cost to his family, s business, his health or his fortune. Indeed, at the time he died, was at the height of his usefulness; of activity and industry.

FEARLESS LEADER

"Robert L. Vann was a fearless editor, who championed human rights above all else. Nailed to the masthead of his newspaper were Truth, Tolerance and Freedom. He was the spokesman for 'the man farthest down.' He built The Pittsburgh Courier into a vocal and influential organ of Negro public opinion in the United States. So well did he build, and so well did he inspire his editorial associates that The Courier has gone on to even greater achievements in public service under the guidance of his lifelong friend, Ira F. Lewis.

HISTORY WILL TELL

"History will write in, the details of Mr. Vann's many contributions to our nation during the last 30 years of his life.

"The Robert L. Vann Memorial Tower which today stands on the Virginia Union university campus, is an enduring symbol of the tower of strength he was.

"And another memorial is created as today the S.S. Robert L. Vann sails forth on her mission of conquering tyranny and intolerance abroad. We here at home, by rededicating ourselves to continue the fight for the ideals he cherished, can likewise pay tribute to the memory of Robert L. Vann. We can help build the world for which he strived—a world with a better chance for a brighter future."

473-1943

First Colored Marine Unit Is Ready to Fight

NOV 27 1943

Afro-American

Men Not Clamoring for Combat Duty but Poised for Action

Baltimore, Md.

ALL THEY NEED IS CHANCE—LEADER

Unit, Formed Over Year Ago, in Process of Reorganization

NOV 27 1943

By STAFF CORRESPONDENT

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. — The 51st Defense Battalion is the first colored marine outfit organized for combat and now is poised for action.

You don't hear the men clamoring for combat duty, but it's evident that they are getting ready and when the time comes expect to shoulder their share of action.

The commanding officer, Lieut. Col. Floyd A. Stephenson says:

"I'm firmly convinced that these marines are combat soldiers. They can deliver if given the chance and are properly led."

Formed Over Year Ago

When the outfit was first established over a year ago, it was designated as a composite defense battalion and included tank, infantry and 75 mm. pack howitzer components.

The tank detachment has disappeared altogether. The infantry and howitzer units are now in a state of reorganization.

NOV 27 1943

Under its present composition, the defense battalion is constituted by four groups, Seacoast Artillery, Anti-Aircraft, Special Weapons and Headquarters and Service Battery.

The Seacoast Artillery Group, a coastal defense unit, mans the 155 mm., designed for defensive action against ships. Nicknamed the "Long Tom," this type of weapon was used extensively in the Tunisian and Sicilian campaigns and by the marines when they landed on Rendova Isle in the Solomons.

The AA group is training to handle the 90 mm. Attached to it are searchlight batteries.

Special Weapons Group

Medium artillery, like the 40 mm. and 20 mm., and the Thompson .50-calibre machine-gun, all employed for protection against low-flying aircraft, are manned by the special weapons group.

The H. and S. battery, aside from attending to administrative details and co-ordinating other groups, embraces smaller components like quartermaster, engineer, motor transports, communication and meteorology units.

NOV 27 1943

The most advanced in the training among this group is the seacoast unit. This outfit has already been on miniature maneuvers and fired the 155 mm., the heaviest mobile weapon in the marine corps.

Shatters 14-Year-Old Record

The men in the unit made a commendable showing, breaking a 14-year-old marine record in firing this piece.

To illustrate the accuracy of the unit in firing, this is the story told by its members:

The gun crew had shot the target towed by a coast guard barge to pieces and nothing was left but the sticks which held the target. They then shot down the sticks with deadly accuracy.

The men are trained in advanced electronics and meteorology to supplement the work done by the gun and searchlight battery crews.

The meteorology squad, composed of [illegible] four men, is handpicked and selected on the basis of native intelligence and mechanical aptitude.

NOV 27 1943

They operate a theodolite to determine the velocity and direction of the wind and transmit such information to AA gun batteries. This helps the gun crews to fire more accurately.

Some in Specialist Schools

Several of the men are now sent to army specialist schools, including ordnance at Aberdeen, Md., and range findings at Camp Davis, N.C.

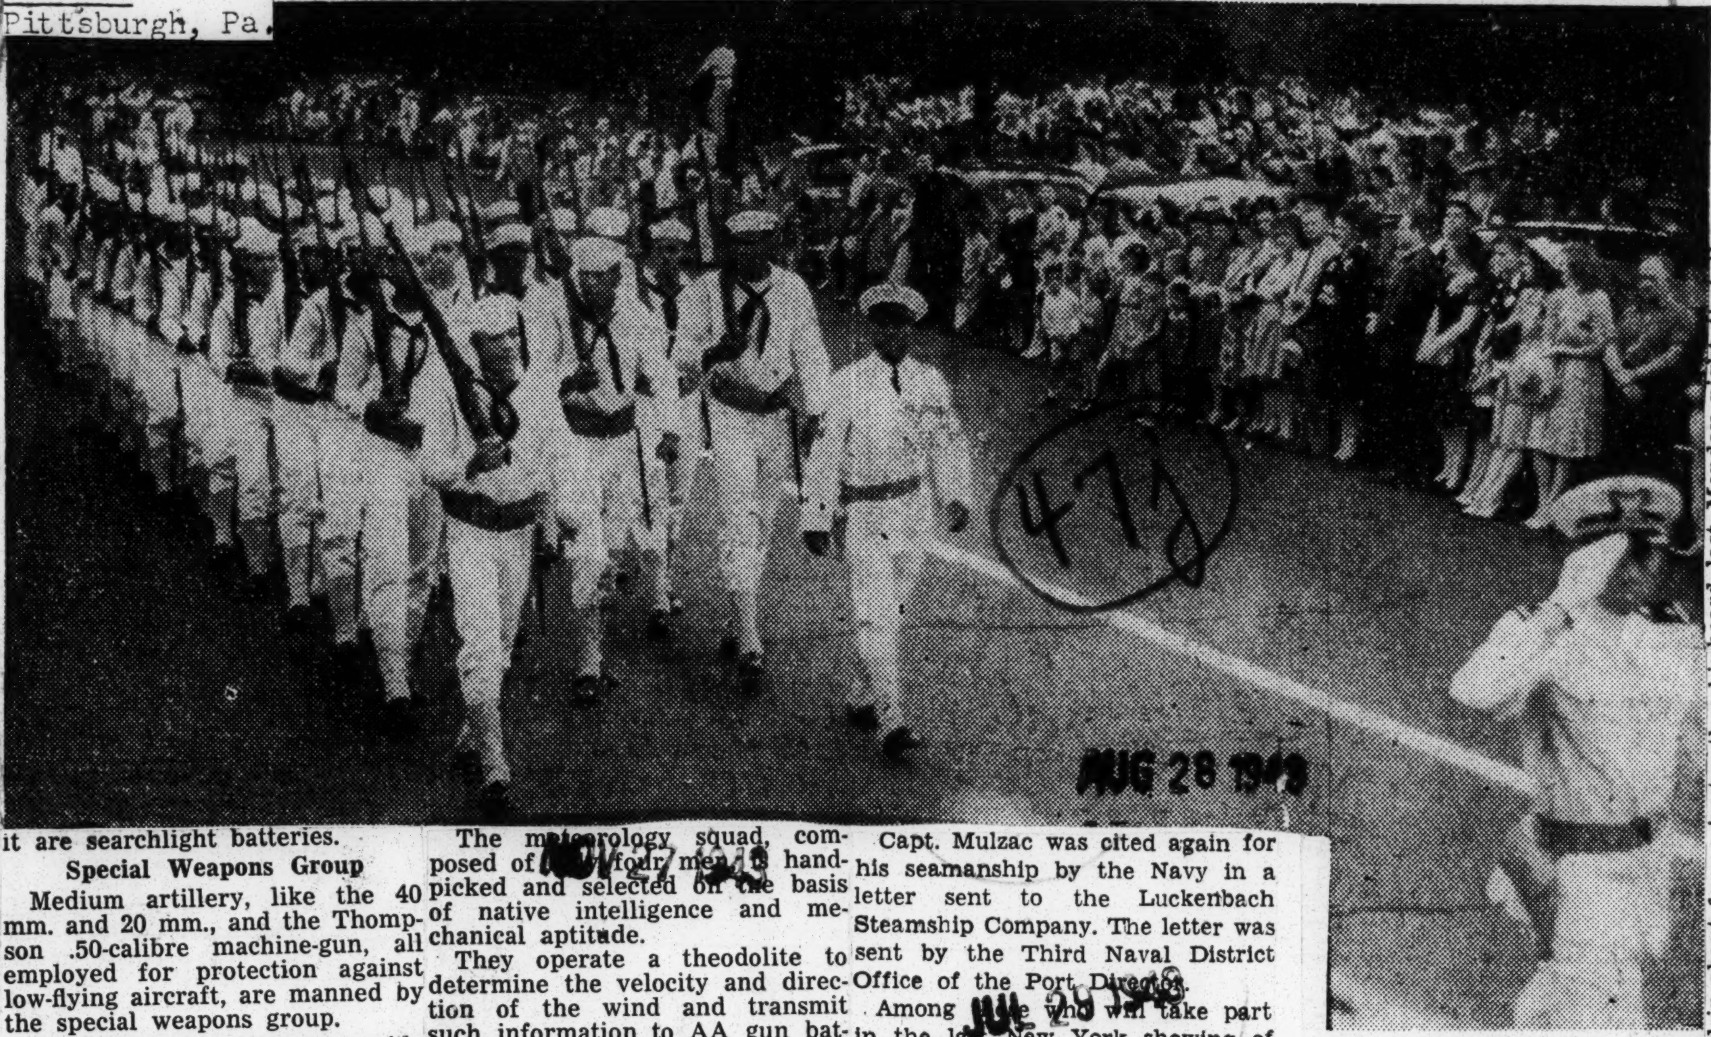
Attached to the defense battalion are thirty-two navy hospital corpsmen, the first colored men to be trained by the navy for medical service.

NOV 27 1943

The marine corps has neither medical units nor chaplains, the same being furnished by the navy.

COAST GUARD OBSERVES 153RD BIRTHDAY

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.



AUG 28 1943

A detachment of Coast Guardsmen participate in the observance of the Coast Guard's 153rd anniversary in Boston recently. Leading the marching unit is Ensign Joseph C. Jen[illegible] (right foreground), highest ranking colored Coast Guardsman, who was graduated from the Coast Guard academy in April, 1942.

Mulzac Backs Brooklyn Rally

Daily Worker
New York, N. Y.

JUL 29 1943

The Brooklyn and Long Island Negro Freedom Rally Committee announced that Captain Hugh Mulzac has wholeheartedly endorsed the rally to be held at the Brooklyn Academy of Music on Aug. 5, 1943.

"We are delivering the goods, and you here on the home front must hold the line against those who would lose the war on the home front," Capt. Mulzac said.

Capt. Mulzac was cited again for his seamanship by the Navy in a letter sent to the Luckenbach Steamship Company. The letter was sent by the Third Naval District Office of the Port Director.

JUL 29 1943

Among those who will take part in the last New York showing of Langston Hughes' "For This We Fight," are Miss Muriel Rahn, nationally known soprano; Pearl Primus of Cafe Society, Lucky Roberts, and Mercedes Gilbert.

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

'WE WERE LUCKY,' SAYS MIXED CREW

Ship Commanded by Colored Captain Sunk by Enemy U-Boat in North Atlantic; All Hands Saved

OCT 9 - 1943

OCT 9 - 1943

By EVELYN SHERRER, Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK CITY—(New York Bureau)—Something of the miracle that brought them home alive and little-injured was written in the faces of the crew of a Liberty ship, sunk on September 20 in the North Atlantic by a U-boat attack upon their convoy . . . something of unreality hovered about them as they walked slowly into Grand Central station Saturday afternoon . . . grimy, tired and grateful to a God that saw every man of them safely out of Atlantic waters to American shores.

"We were just plain lucky," man after man declared at the United Seamen Service club in the Hotel Wiltshire here, where a large group of the crew of 68 was taken upon arriving in New York. Captain Adrian Richardson, who, in losing his ship gained the eternal respect and loyalty of the entire crew, reiterated that sentiment. Sad, quiet, exhausted, Captain Richardson spent his first hour home taking up personal problems with individual men of the crew.

SAND PREVENTED AN EXPLOSION

The September 20 attack on the ship came swift and sudden. It was 5:36 a.m., and most of the crew were asleep. The ship was hit on the stern below the No. 5 cargo hole, which was filled with a 12-foot depth of sand. The sound of the torpodo in piercing through the sand was muffled so that the first impression, according to members of the crew, was that a huge wave had hit the side. It was generally agreed that the large quantity of sand in the cargo hole prevented an explosion that would have cost many lives. Four lifeboats were hoisted over the side and in about four minutes the ship was abandoned as the stern dropped slowly. It was hours, according to members of the rescue ship, before the ship disappeared entirely from view. The crew was adrift in the lifeboats between three and four hours.

Captain Richardson expressed pride in his crew before and after the attack, and repeated again how lucky they had been. "I'm glad to be home; glad to be home," he declared over and over again. Mrs. Richardson, who had heard last Monday night that the ship had been lost, and knew only on Saturday afternoon that her husband was safe, told tearfully of the five days during which she could get no word of her husband.

CREWMAN PRAISES SKIPPER

OCT 9 - 1943

"After I heard the ship had been lost, I went out to the Brooklyn Navy yard; they told me simply that the ship had been lost, but they could not let me know whether or not 'Cappie' was safe. It almost drove me crazy, not knowing

RACE CAPTAIN BRINGS CREW HOME SAFELY

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

Happy over the safe arrival home of her husband following the sinking of his ship by an enemy submarine, Mrs. Adrian Richardson is shown greeting the skipper following his landing in New York Saturday. Captain Richardson did not lose a man of his crew and says, following a little rest, he is ready to return to sea.—Layne Photo.

where he was or how he was. You can imagine how I felt when this morning (Saturday) they called me from the Navy yard and asked me how would I like to have breakfast with my husband tomorrow morning.

"I'm so happy I could scream. But there's always that knowledge in the back of my mind that he won't be with me but so long. There will always be the day when he'll have to leave again and I'll have to go through it all over again."

Chief Steward Adam Van Landingham had nothing but praise for the skipper. "He's a fine gentleman and he knows how to handle men." Van Landingham has been on the sea for nine years, and this was his second encounter with the U-boats. "It's getting tougher each time. But we had Fame Fortune with us this trip. For about two or three minutes after we were hit we were all pretty much excited, and for a brief spell, we just couldn't get it clear what was happening. But it didn't take us any time at all getting organized, and every man was on the job."

NO OCCASION FOR HEROICS

Asked about any instances of outstanding heroism, Van Landingham said that each man's job was cut out for him and each was doing it. "There wasn't any occasion for heroics. We were fortunate that the torpedo hit the spot it did and that we all had time to get a few personals together and get off the ship. It was a pretty fine job."

Ensign William Barker, ship's purser, who was known on the West Coast as Billy Metcalf, the boxer, is reported to have actually jotted down notes as the ship was sinking and the lifeboats were being manned. Barker insists that he has a story to tell and a book to write after the war. In the meantime, he's rearing to get on another ship that will take him into action again.

A comical touch was added by the experiences related by Engineer Charles E. Hahn, Jr., and James Gregory, O.S., both white, who told of how Gregory, who seems in his teens, shot and captured a man-eating shark. The tall story and the attitude of the two seamen were typical of the easy-going aftermath apparent in all the others.

There are only a few—a very few—of the crew who have had the sea-edge knocked off them. The others are anxious to put out to sea again. They shrug their shoulders and say, "Well, it wasn't our time. Maybe next time they'll get us; maybe they won't." But one thing is certain: they're going to finish the job and they're going to SEE if anyone gets them or not. There is no fear in these fellows.

Marines Work, Eat and Sleep Together on Ships

Afro-American
Baltimore, Maryland

OCT 7 1943

"Colored Brothers Are Good Shipmates, the Same as Any Others. There Is No Difference"—NMU's V.-President Myers

WASHINGTON

"I have sailed a number of years. I have been shipmates with a lot of colored brothers. Colored and white merchant marines work together, eat together and are housed in the same forecastle. They are good shipmates, the same as anybody else. There is no difference. A man is a sailor, regardless of color."

This statement was made by Frederick N. Myers, vice-president of the National Maritime Union, at the recent FEPC hearings on railroad discrimination here.

No Trouble in South

The position of the railroads was that this is a problem which should not be faced during the war, and which would require many years to solve. Testimony from the [illegible] official purported to show that in other branches of the transportation industry, non-discrimination furthers the war effort. Mr. Myers continued:

"Many vessels sail from Southern cities, including Baltimore, Wilmington, N.C., Charleston, S.C., Jacksonville and Tampa, Fla., Norfolk, Port Arthur, Tex., New Orleans, Houston, Galveston and Corpus Christi. We have contracts with all of the operators engaged in Southern transportation and we never have any problems. Colored and white join the vessel from the same union hall.

Foreigners Surprised

"We have statements from dockers in Australia, accepting the policy of no-discrimination in the Merchant Marine. They were surprised to find our vessels coming in with mixed crews. They are democratic and appreciated it. The most outstanding case is the S.S. Booker T. Washington when she sailed into Cardiff on her maiden voyage with her colored captain. The Welch miners were so happy that they gave them a big celebration.

"The Government has assisted the union in breaking down discrimination. On most of our vessels there are colored firemen, stewards and others who, because of the Government policy, have been upgraded from the rating of able seaman to third officer, and from fireman, boiler and water tender to second and third assistant engineers.

Training Schools

"And our Government sees that there is no discrimination. We find now men in our government schools who came out of the forecastle studying for jobs as designers, engineers and dock officers."

Mr. Myer's testimony further revealed that the union, whose members are engaged in waterborne transportation, has a record of no vessel missing, or convoy, because of disagreement between members of the crew on the question of color. Convoy movements, he said, are accelerated because of the non-discrimination policy.

Ship Torpedoed at Sea, Men Ready to Sail Again

Baltimore, Md.
Afro-American

OCT 6 1943

Members of Captain Richardson's Crew Reveal Meaning of Playing Tag with Subs

BALTIMORE—Despite the torpedoing of their ship, they are ready to return to sea again, two members of the crew of Captain Adrian Richardson's Liberty Ship told the AFRO this week.

The two seamen returned to their homes over the week end after their vessel, which was launched here last May, was hit by a Nazi torpedo and sunk in the North Atlantic last month.

One of the two, Chief Steward Adam V. Landingham, saw his two-week-old daughter. Dana for the first time when he reached home Friday.

Because he was expecting a son he nicknamed her 'Butch.'

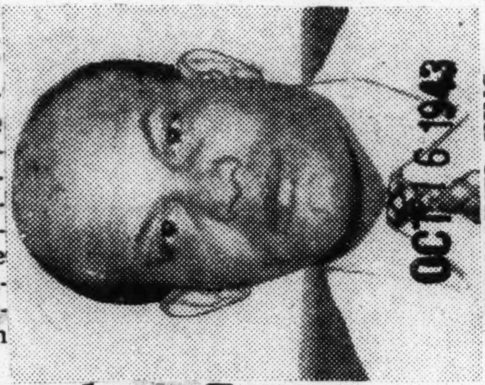
Invisible Torpedoes

Van Landingham has been sailing for nine years. He said that the enemy must now be using a new type of torpedo which is entirely invisible in the water.

He related that despite the force of the impact, some members of the crew did not awaken, thinking that the ship had merely hit an air pocket and lurched.

Hardest thing about abandoning ship w[illegible] they [illegible] to leave all the[illegible]uables and money behind, the chief steward related. But, nevertheless, he's happy to be home and ready and willing to go again as soon as possible.

The second seaman, Emmanuel King, fireman on the vessel, reached his home, 207 W. Biddle Street, Saturday.



EMMANUEL KING

Across Three Times

He has been sailing since 1917 and has made four crossings during the present war.

When the ship was hit he was on watch below and knew without asking questions that they had been attacked because the engines stopped abruptly.

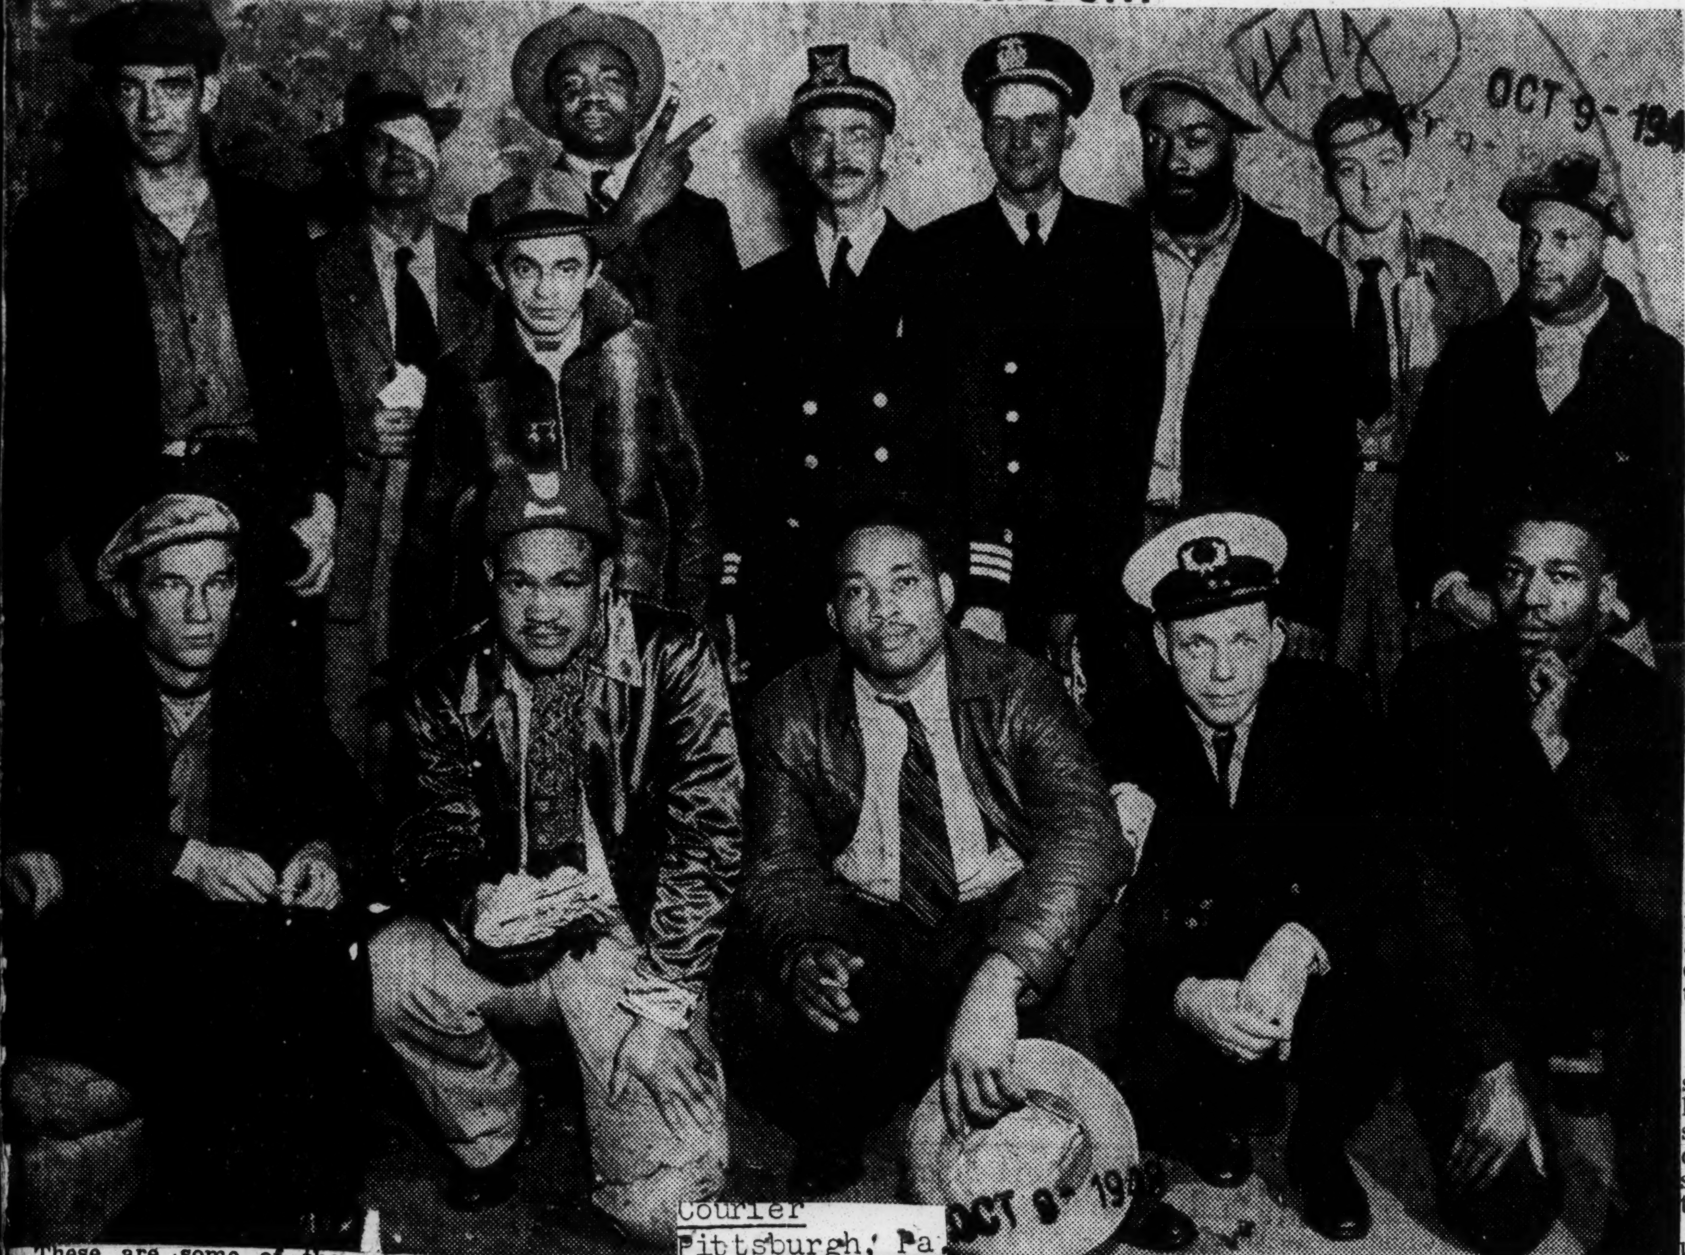
King said the most gruesome sight was when he reached deck and saw survivors from another ship in the convoy swimming around in pools of oil and screaming with fear.

King and Van Landingham both had nothing but praise for the treatment they received from the merchant seamen's club when they landed at a Canadian port, where "all our needs were taken care of and we were welcome with open arms."

King says he is "anxious and ready" to sail again. He resides at the Biddle Street address with his wife. Mrs. Beatrice King.

473-1943

SURVIVORS OF SUBMARINE ATTACK ARRIVE IN PORT



OCT 9 - 194

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

OCT 9 - 1943

These are some of the survivors of the Liberty Ship that went down on September 20 after it was hit by a torpedo in the North Atlantic. Captain Adrian Richardson and his crew are shown immediately after their arrival in New York from Halifax where they were taken by the rescue ship. Left to right, kneeling: Thomas Glenny, oiler; Ensign William Barker, purser; Lester Logan, second steward; Kenneth Watkins, messman; Adam Van Landingham, chief steward.

Second row: Allan McIntosh, oiler; Amaro Coelho, able seaman; Captain Richardson, Edgar Walker, second cook; Emanmanuel King, fireman, water attendant.

Last row: Carroll Ove Hertc, able seaman: James Gregory, wiper; Charles E. Hahn, engineer, and Henry C. Boyce, officers' steward.—Layne Photo.

Coast Guard Fights, Dies for, Lives Democracy on All Fronts

Afro-American
OCT 16 1943
Baltimore, Maryland

Officers, Men of All Colors, Racial Strains Eat, Sleep, Work, Play Together at Boston Headquarters

By JOE SHEPHARD

BOSTON, Mass. — They call it the United States Coast Guard, but afloat and ashore, at home and abroad, wherever and whenever American forces have joined in battle in this war, its members have played an important role, fighting and dying for democracy as well as practicing it.

In the Atlantic and the Pacific, in the Solomons and at Salerno, coast guardsmen have sailed with the convoys, gone ashore with the first waves of troops and marines and then returned to America to tackle the job all over again.

OCT 16 1943

But as dramatic as have been their jobs abroad and on the high seas, they have been effectively and quietly doing a job on the home front of vital importance to both the Allied and American forces on the far-flung battle fronts in all parts of the world.

Their Mission a Grave One

No better place to give one an idea of the magnitude and gravity of their job can be found than dreary, fog-shrouded Boston, headquarters of the First Naval Coast Guard District.

OCT 16 1943

Here Coast Guardsmen of all colors and racial stocks may be seen pouring into the U.S. Coast Guard receiving station at the old Hotel Brunswick, where they come in from God knows where, stay a while between ship assignments, then head out again, headed for God knows what.

The men who wear the shield of the coast guard don't talk much, but if they did they could tell of troops rushed to bolster a wavering attack upon a stubbornly held enemy position, of supplies and munitions delivered in the nick of time to a hard-pressed Allied force, of wounded men brought home and of hundreds of other equally perilous war-time assignments.

Lives Up to Its Motto

These assignments vary, but whatever the assignment, the coast guard is ready to carry it out. Since its organization in 1752, this, the oldest of American armed services has lived up to its motto — "Semper Paratus," always prepared.

A stone's throw from the Boston waterfront stands Constitution Base, a huge converted warehouse which houses the port guard detail, a mixed white and colored outfit composed of seamen, quartermasters, gunner's mates, machinists, radiomen, signalmen, yeomen, musicians, cooks and other specialists.

Here hundreds of coast guardsmen of both races eat together, share the same recreation rooms, work and sleep together and go out together into the fog, rain and darkness of the Boston waterfront to guard docks, bridges and other installations, to supervise the loading of transports with men and munitions, or to board the ships and cutters which will take them out on convoy duty, submarine patrol or to foreign battlefronts.

First Colored Ensign

The commanding officer of Constitution Base is Lieut. J. G. Ashley and his executive officer is Ensign Joseph C. Jenkins, the first colored commissioned officer to see active duty in any branch of the naval service during this war.

OCT 16 1943

A native of Detroit, Mr. Jenkins was a civil engineer and a bridge designer for the Michigan Highway Department. He entered the coast guard as an enlisted man, was assigned to the Coast Guard Academy at New London, Conn., and was commissioned following his graduation in April of 1943.

Prior to his appointment to the staff of the port office, he served for a while as engineering officer for the First Naval Coast Guard District.

Trained for Sub Warfare

His engineering training at the University of Michigan, however, qualifies him also for service as either deck or engineering officer aboard the sleek and deadly cutters which have been used with telling effect in the coast guard's war against the submarine menace.

There are also a number of colored chief petty officers in the First District. Chief Herman Jackson, chief machinist's mate, a veteran of twenty years' service in the coast guard, is assigned to duty at the Hotel Brunswick receiving station.

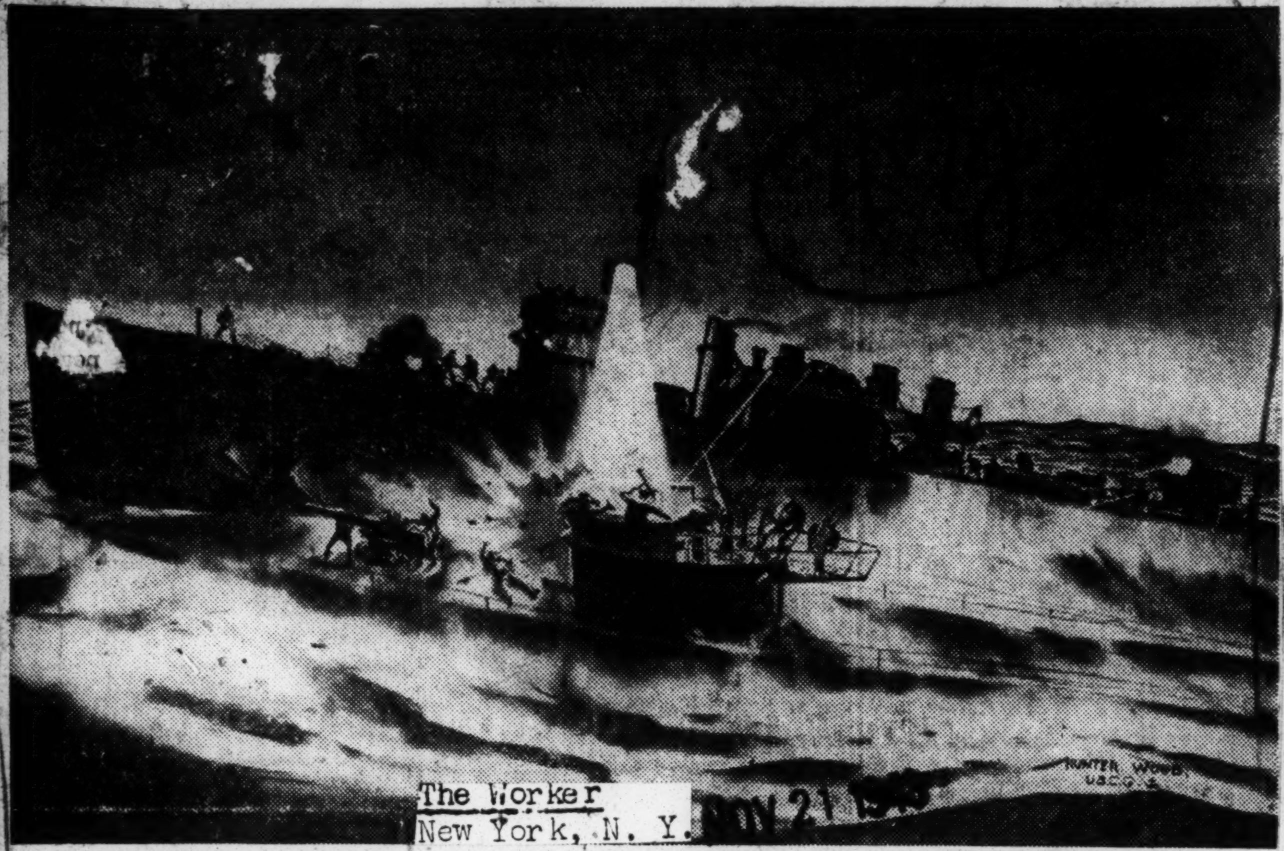
Chief Specialist Percy Richardson, a former lieutenant in the Boston Fire Department, is company commander for a company of coast guardsmen who, armed with guns, flashlights and fire extinguishers, maintain a twenty-four-hour watch of dock, bridge and waterfront facilities in and around Boston.

Richardson World War I Vet

A veteran of World War I, Chief Richardson was recently awarded the purple heart for gallantry in the last war at a special ceremony held at Boston Commons.

So in Boston, as everywhere that one finds the shield of the coast guard, men are showing that democracy can be made to work, that men of different races can serve together in defense of democracy and that they can practice democracy while fighting for it.

ARTIST'S CONCEPTION OF U.S.S. BORIE BATTLING SUB



The Worker
New York, N. Y.
NOV 21 1943

Based on official reports and eyewitness accounts, this drawing was made by Official Coast Guard Combat Artist, Warrant Boatswain Hunter Wood, for the Navy Dept. It shows the U.S.S. Borie astride the enemy sub while our sailors fire through the spray shields of their machine guns when they were not able to get the guns low enough to fire.

---

2 Negro Mess Attendants Among Heroes of USS Borie

Daily Worker
New York, N. Y.
NOV 21 1943

(Special to The Worker)

WASHINGTON. — Two Negro mess attendants together with their white shipmates and officers were named this week as heroes of the battle of the USS Borie in which the destroyer rammed, then fought a Nazi submarine. The action in the North Atlantic was fought at such close quarters that a fireman killed a Nazi with a bowie knife.

One of the Negro heroes is [illegible]-topher Columbus Shepard, cook, first class, of Norfolk, Va. The other, Ernest Gardner, stewardsmate, second class, was called a one-man gun-crew. Neither name appears on any casualty list.

The white fireman who buried his bowie knife in a Nazi in one of the most savage hand-to-hand naval engagements in the North Atlantic since the days of John Paul Jones, was David F. Southwick.

The tale of how the 24-year-old destroyer sank two German submarines and then had to be abandoned and sunk by gunfire from her own fleet was told by her commander, 31-year-old Lieut. Charles Hutchins. Navy spokesmen called it "one of the great stories of the war."

The USS Borie had already sunk one submarine when she sighted and rammed another. For ten minutes the battle continued with the destroyer perched atop the sub. The range was so close that sailors could not depress their guns. They knocked out Nazis with empty shell cases.

When the boats cleared each other, the Borie, blazing away with everything she had on board, finally made the kill.

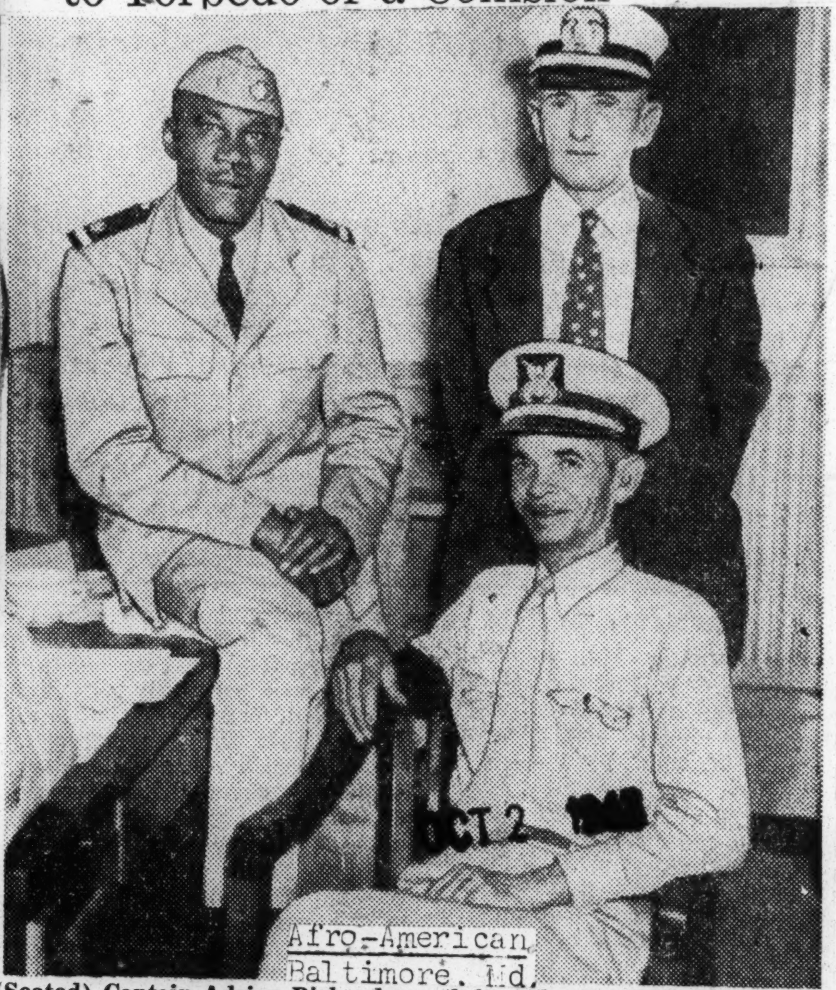
"One colored mess atendant — Shepard," said Lt. Hutchins, "was a gun-loader. He was supposed to put the shell in the gun as it was passed, but his assistants were too slow. 'Get out of my way,' he howled, ran to the ready chest himself and slammed the shells into the gun faster than they could be passed to him.

"Another colored boy, a new man on the ship—all I know off-hand is that his name's Gaidiner—was also a loader. The gun flashes were so intense that the other members of the crew, including the pointer, were blinded, so Gardiner loaded the gun, closed the breach, pointed it and fired it, all by himself. We called him the 'one man gun crew'."

When the Borie had to be abandoned and sunk after her great victory, all but 27 members of her crew were picked up. Along with the rest of the task force, she was awarded a Presidential unit citation. The force had destroyed more submarines than any team in naval history.

Mrs. Had Premonition Husband Needed Aid

Sinking May Have Been Due to Torpedo or a Collision



OCT 2 1943

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

(Seated) Captain Adrian Richardson, (left) John B. Clark, third mate; (right) Kristian Kristianson, first mate.

Captain Adrian Richardson and his crew of a Liberty Ship are safe after a North Atlantic crossing in which his ship was reported lost, the AFRO learned Monday.

It is not known whether the vessel was a victim of a Nazi torpedo or a collision.

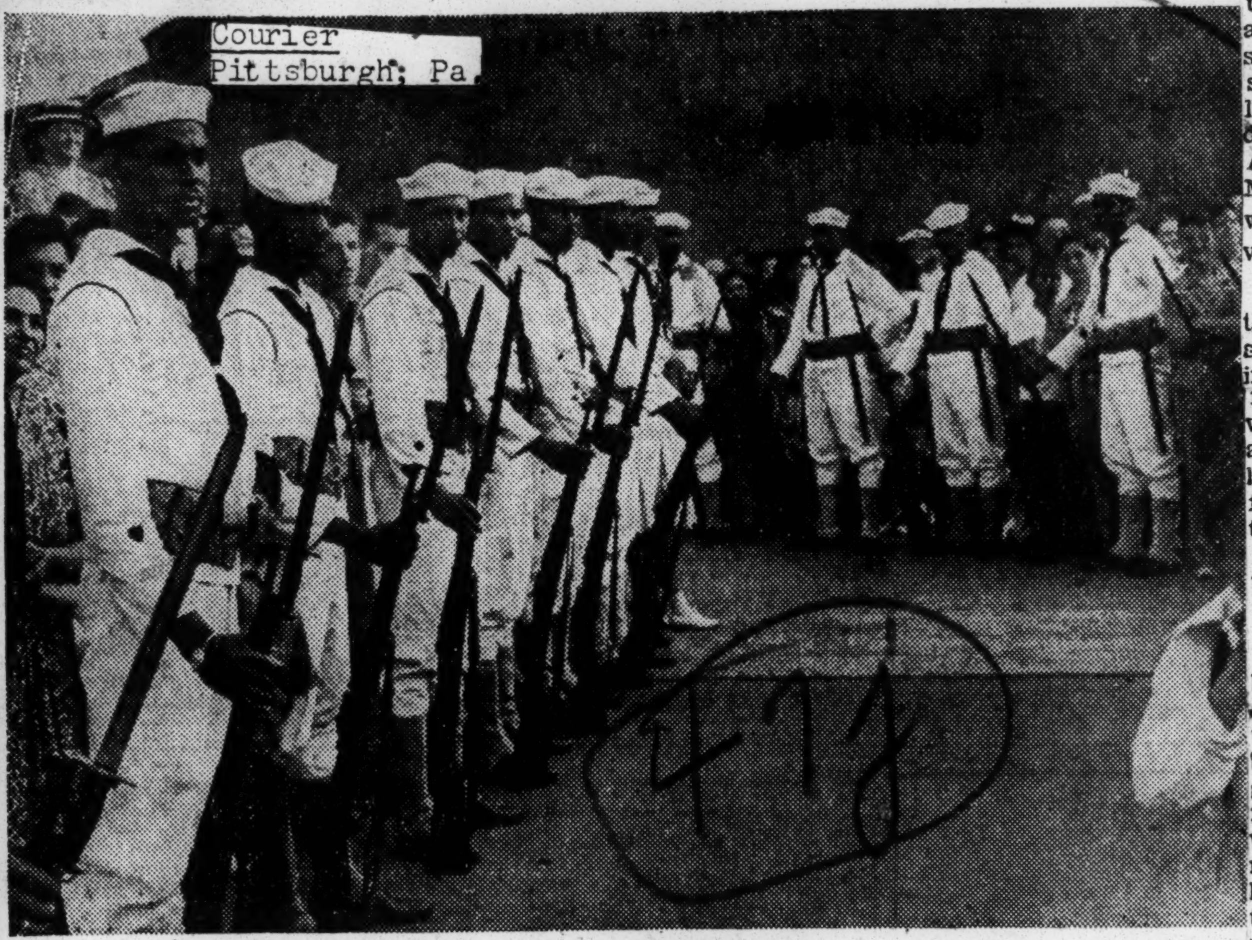
Mrs. Richardson, in her New York home, today, said she had a premonition about her husband and had been worried. She heard Prime Minister Winston Churchill's broadcast in which he said no ships had been lost in the Atlantic during the past two months but that before he went on the air he received information of an attack of an Atlantic convoy.

Mrs. Richardson said that she had not heard from her husband for some time but had received advice from other sources that he was on his way home.

The Navy Department in Washington said it had no statement to give out on Atlantic sinkings.

47j-1943

HONOR GUARD FOR THE ADMIRAL



Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

47j

Race Coast Guardsmen, standing at parade rest, form an honor guard for Rear Admiral L. T. Chalker, assistant commandant, U.S. Coast Guard, during the celebration in Boston of the Coast Guard's 153rd anniversary.—Official U.S. Navy Photo from OWI.

AUG 21 1943

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

Graduates of Seamen's School Protest Delay

OCT 2 1943

Men Who Finished Maritime School Held Five Weeks in Port

U.S. WANTED THEM TO GO AS MESSMEN

Men Refused Because They Are Trained As Seamen

NEW YORK—Ten graduates of the United States Maritime Service Training Station at Sheepshead Bay made charges of flagrant discrimination against the USMS, the War Shipping Administration and at least one maritime union in a signed letter to the NMU last week.

The seamen filing the charges which listed dates, names and circumstances, were:

Henry H. Williams, Lubin E. Spencer, Jr., James E. Bray, Wilton O. Cooper, Alvin A. Watson, Richard J. Stribling, Bryon R. Smith, Chester L. Edward, Sam A. McClellan; and Booker T. Brooks.

Enforced Idleness

The men charged that after graduation they remained idle while other classes were placed on Great Lake vessels and at other stations; that the Seamen's Pacific Union did not accept colored; that the names of colored and white graduates were kept on separate lists;

That there were efforts to get the colored men to ship out as messmen, despite their training for other duties; and that the USMS aided and [illegible] shipping companies in their refusal to use colored men.

Seek NMU Aid

In the letter to the NMU, the seamen stated: "We feel that this condition is none of your making and we appeal for your help in combatting this evil situation."

They further pointed out that it was one of the tenets of the organization not to tolerate discrimination on account of race or color.

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

Hero Arrives From Sicily

SEP 28 1943

COLUMBIA, S. C.—(SNS)—Winding up three years in the U. S. Navy, Steward's Mate James Sanders, son of Mrs. Eugenia Sanders of 918 Taylor Street arrived in Columbia last week on Mae James Sanders, son of Mrs. four week's [illegible], fresh from the Sicilian invasion and, after having seen duty in more than a score foreign places. Six months ago his father, John Sanders, passed away. That is his beggest regret.

Steward Sanders volunteered for service with the Navy three years ago and in typical Navy fashion; thinks the army is pretty fair but that the Navy tops all branches of service. Following his "boot" training at Norfolk, Va. He was assigned to Pacific duty but was transferred to the Atlantic fleet a little before war came He has seen, among many other theatres, service at: Britain, Belfast, Ireland. Iceland, Greenland, Bermuda West, East and South Africa, Arabia, New Foundland, Oran Malta, Casablanca, Tunisia and wound up at Sicily for that invasion.

The seaman spoke glowingly of the heroic role colored troops and seamen played with their comrades in the Sicilian invasion. "It made me proud," he said, "to belong with them Those fellows have guts and are plenty tough. They work hard and usually long hours and fight like the devil." He was in on the Casablanca invasion but said, "It was nothing compared with what we faced in Sicily."

SAW 99th IN ACTION

Steward Sanders said he got his biggest thrill seeing the famed 99th all-colord Pursuit squadron in action against the Germans in the Socilian invasion. "It did my heart good to see them hold their won. I felt like I was flying (course I wouldn't leave the Navy for nothing) but I knew how long and hard they waited for the chance to fly. And brother, I'd much rather be working with them than against them."

WHAT THE BOYS WANT

Asked what our boy wanted most from the folk back home Sanders grew stern and serious The boys didn't want many material things, he said, but they certainly did prize highly a letter from the folks. But he believed the boys wanted most of all that the folks back home work hard to make it a better place when the war is over. "Everywhere I've been," he said, "there is not much question as to race. It's 'American' and when the fight gets tough the white boys stick with us, and of course we always stick with them. but when the danger is over there is a difference in unexpressed words. You just feel its there.

"Since being back home I have been made to feel that I am not so much an American as a Negro. That's pretty bad for the boys who come home from a big fight but I can take it. We boys often talk about how nice it would be to come back home and find the friendliness we found in England, in Tunisia and the other places. Course we are still better off than most of the other colored peple I have seen but [illegible] can get a little better

"I think the best thing my people can do is to stop leading with their chins in so many instances . Take for example, the simple matter of public conduct A white Georgian came up to me and asked, apologetcially, why was it we raised the devil when a white man calls us 'n———r' but grin from ear to ear when one of our own people cal us the same name I couldn't answer him but he made sense."

And Steward's Mate Sanders made plenty sense in his story of what our men are going through for us and other peoples on our side.

SEP 28 1943

---

19 Seabees Forced Out Of Navy, They Say

Daily World
1943

NAACP Makes Charge After Sailors Return

Atlanta, Georgia

NEW YORK — (Calvin's News Service)—After they had been invited to express their opinions of racial discriminations at a West Indian Base, by a commanding officer, 19 colored Seabees (Naval Construction Battalion) were discharged from the service, officials of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People charged here Tuesday. In a press conference at the offices of Thursgood Marshall, NAACP Counsel, nine of the discharger Seabees, several of them, college graduates, testified that they had been invited on October 3rd to express their views because the commanding officer felt they had unaired grievances.

The next day the regimental officer of the base called the men into his office and asked them if they had not formed a secret society, and told them that they had no right to attend any meeting, according to Arthur Segoins of Toledo, Ohio, none of the discharged men. Segoins quoted the regimental commander as saying, "You have really brought about a small state of munity." He told them they could be discharged for it, imprisoned or shot. Shortly thereafter, the men began to be sent back to the U. S. It was said, and 14 of them are now in New York. Five are still said to be held in Naval custody. Naval officials in New York said they knew nothing about the case and refused to comment on it.

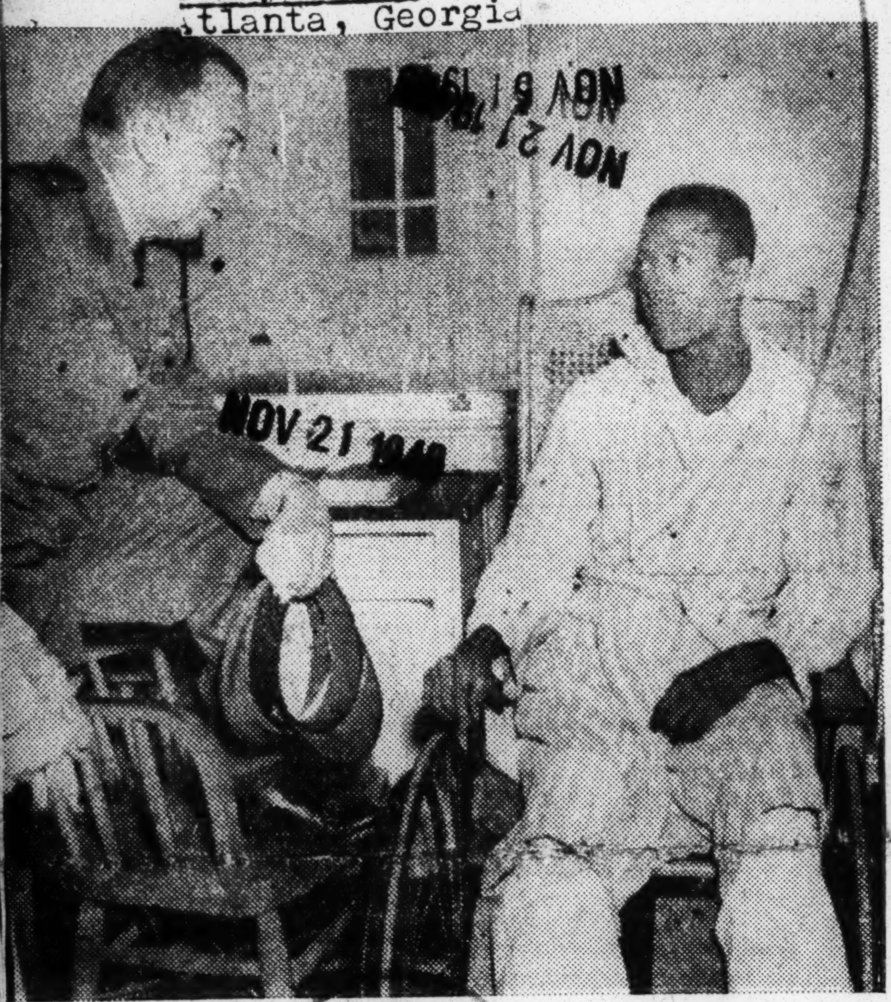
Marshall said that the NAACP would immediately take the case to Secretary Knox and ask immediate reinstatement. "So far as we know this is the first case of its kind since the beginning of the war," Marshall said. He also stated that most of the men had been in the Navy since December, 1942 as volunteers in an effort to help win the war. Almost from the time they entered and received their boot training at Camp Bradford, Va., they were subjected to discrimination it was said. They were prohibited from using the same toilet facilities as white men. They also disclosed that they had separate living quarters separate chow halls and were prevented from rising above second-class petty officers.

Following their training, the Negro Seabees were sent to a West Indies base which they completely built. One of the first difficulties they ran into was a demand by white Seabees that they take the brass buttons off their uniforms and replace them with plastic buttons. Filipinos, Chinese and other minorities were permitted to buy at the ship service store, but Negroes could not. At another time, a Negro guard, acting on order, tried to discipline a white chief petty officer and was "attacked for it." The Negro guard later was exonerated.

Morale among Negroes was said to be low, but none ever did anything serious.

Talking About The Invasion

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia



Big moment in the naval career of Stewart First Class Eugene Bryant is shown here, as Rear Admiral Jules James, Commandant of the Sixth Naval District, stops by his bed in the U. S. Naval Hospital, Charleston Navy Yard, to chat a moment about the invasion of Sicily. One of a contingent of wounded brought home from Sicily and Italy, Bryant formerly lived at 1519 Central Avenue, Tampa, Fla.; Donaldsonville, Ga., and Atlanta, Ga.—(Official U. S. Navy Photo.)

TAN YANKS BUSY IN SICILIAN WATERS

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa. G 21 1943

By EDGAR T. ROUZEAU
(Courier War Correspondent)

FROM AN ALLIED MEDITERRANEAN NAVAL BASE, Aug. 19—(Censored)—Negro sailors are manning battle stations on scores of naval units operating in Sicilian waters. Drawn from the personnel of the ship steward's department, they have earned a large number of emergency berths as anti-aircraft gunners and as helmsmen and lookouts on navy invasion barges.

On [illegible] war vessel, Negro and white [illegible] crews alternate on anti-aircraft batteries, "because our colored boys a[illegible]ed for two or three enemy planes with which this ship was credited during the invasion in North Africa," according to a statement which comes from the ship's fire control officer. Lieutenant (Junior Grade) David W. Woods, Yonkers, New York.

"OUR BOYS" NUMEROUS

During the first three days of the Sicilian invasion, there were few troop transports, coast guard vessels and mine sweepers which did not draw on colored messmen for work gunners, gun loaders, fuse setters and for duty on LSVP invasion boats. Many gave their lives on these assignments.

Gu[illegible] several ships say [illegible] sailors participating in Sicilian action exhibited every quality indispensable in good ship gunners. They say the men observed closely for reaction fire none were jittery or afraid when bombs dropped uncomfortably close. They were mentally alert and responded quickly in situations requiring fast action. The boys were commended on all ships for their faithfulness as lookouts, for good teamwork and for remarkable accuracy as gunners.

LOVE TO SHOOT

The captain of a transport said, "Lord, yes, our colored boys love to shoot those guns. Biggest trouble is to stop them when they start blasting away." In a shipboard interview, the colored crew of a war vessel gave the following account of its experiences during the Sicilian invasion.

Joe Cunningham, 521 East Eighth avenue, Chattanooga, Tenn., related:

NAVAL EXPERIENCE

"We arri[illegible] the coast of Sicily arou[illegible] m. the invasion morning. All of us had been assigned to battle stations. I drew lookout post one of the invasion boats which ferried troops, ammunition, jeeps, gasoline and supplies shoreward. It was very foggy that morning and it was hard to see 50 yard ahead. I was manning a machine gun. We beached at a point near Gela. It was very quiet. We dropped the bridge and the soldiers moved off. I could make out against the skyline darker shapes of hundreds of other landing boats.

NAZIS WAKE UP

"Shortly afterwards, Jerry's Nazis woke up to what had happened and hell broke loose. We had no time to feel afraid, too much to do. We had to unload supplies, because the Army was yet in no position to do this. After unloading, I switched places with the helmsman and steered the boat back to its ship. It was hard to see and I narrowly missed colliding with several boats heading shoreward. The situation changed suddenly when the enemy began dropping flares to see targets for bombing. It was fireworks the rest of that night, our anti-aircraft fire being so thick that much shrapnel came down on my helmet, shoulders, and in the boat. I made 15 trips to shore, working straight through until 6 p. m., July 11. Boys in the other boats, white and colored, had the same long stretch. The only time I really was afraid was once when, unloading gasoline on the beach, some one hollered "planes." I could see myself being blown to bits if a bomb had hit the gasoline. I saw [illegible] white soldier race up the hi[illegible] lit out behind him and passed him. I never thought, at the time, that I might be running into the arms of Germans and Italians. The planes did not drop bombs, so I raced back to the boat and got the hell out of there."

Frederick A. Ford, steward's mate second class, 1902 Hollywood avenue, Shreveport, La., said:

OTHER GRAPHIC TALES

"My experiences in the North African invasion left me well prepared for this one. I was a stretcher bearer and found this nerve-racking, because I had to twiddle my fingers while the other boys carried on the show. I prefer being behind guns at any time. I feel safer.

"The [illegible] time I was afraid was when a fleet of Stukas came over strafing one night. Their bullets hitting the deck like hail and I couldn't see the planes. If you can see who is shooting and from what direction, it's not so bad, but when you can't see anything, you are bound to feel afraid."

Charles Sumner, a steward first class, Hoboken, N. J., who was a member of the gun crew, said:

"This invasion was child's play, though bombs dropped all around and we were under fire from shore or air at least 15 times in the first two days, but, in the North African invasion, the planes were plenty dangerous. We opened fire on several planes on numerous occasions, but they always flew out of range. We could tell by bursts of our fire. Anyway, we kept them way up high and they couldn't bomb accurately either."

BIGGEST EXPERIENCE

Sumner continued, "My biggest experience was when we had to move one night, because a nearby ship was on fire and had lighted up the entire scene. We were about 50 yards away when a bomb dropped near the spot where we had been sitting. Our ship had been really lucky."

Marion Washington, 433 Lenox avenue, New York City, tells of an experience in the North African invasion:

TEAMED TOGETHER

"Cunningham and I were teamed up on a gun one e[illegible]ening when I saw a [illegible] It was flying right on top of the water at a great distance. There were men on other guns. They were looking in the same direction, but couldn't see anything. I pointed to the spot where I could see a plane approaching. I told Cunningham to fire in that direction. Cunningham began blasting and a few seconds later, there was an explosion and a burst first. We soon learned that we had blown a plane out of the water." (It was one of two planes with which the colored battery was credited. Other was a Heinkel 111. Washington's story was confirmed by a gunnery officer who was present at the interview.)

MET ANOTHER PAL

On the same ship I had the pleasure of meeting Chief Steward Joseph A. Wilson, 634 Martin street, Elizabeth City, N. C., who has been in the Navy almost five years and supervises the work of 40 cooks, bakers, butchers, and pantrymen, some of whom are white.

Racial Harmony On Liberty Ship

Courier
Pittsburgh Pa.

NEW YORK—(ANP)—Pointing to their own crew as an example of true democracy, the Booker T. Washingt[illegible]ew, mix[illegible]ne, declared that the abolition of jim crow throughout the armed forces would build morale and strengthen the fighting qualities of our army. The statement was in answer to a letter from Maj. Gen. J. A. Ulio of the war department, who defended the army's policy of segregation.

A letter from Navy Secretary Knox brought forth satisfaction from the Washington crew members. The letter was in answer to the crew's communication on the fine relations between gun and merchan[illegible]ship.

The policy of [illegible] department is not to intermingle colored and white enlisted personnel in the same regimental organization, stated Ulio's letter.

NOV 13 1943

Pioneer Marines Honored

NOV 13 1943

Courier
Pittsburgh Pa

Negroes Come in For Recognition as 168th Anniversary Is Observed In the United States

WASHINGTON—The U. S. Marine Corps observed its 168th anniversary November [illegible] and pioneer Negroes in this service [illegible] in for high honors.

Although Negroes were first admitted only 14 months ago, they are now serving in five of the seven branches of the service.

More than 8,500 colored youths have been enrolled since the Marine Corps began active training of Negro Marines in September, 1942.

The first group of 1,200 Negro volunteers began training at Camp LeJeune, New River, N. C., and six months later on March 1, the first colored Marines were on active duty in the Far Pacific.

HEROIC VALOR

Most of the Negro Marines are in either line duty or in the mess service.

Although many of the colored Marines are in kitchens, there have been times when cooks have been call[illegible] from behind their galley stove[illegible] prove [illegible] fighting heritage with cold [illegible] Corps history is filled with incidents of heroic valor where aproned mess sergeants have answered the challenge of enemy fire.

It is this fighting tradition to which the public paid homage Nov. 10, and the pioneer Negroes in the service shared with others this acclaim.

The Union
Cincinnati, Ohio

2000 BLUE JACKETS SING!

OWI—Voices of 2,000 Negro Bluejackets went out over the airlanes recently [illegible]e second broadcast from the U. S. Nav[illegible]ning Station Great Lakes, Ill., of the Negro Regiments' Evening Hour.

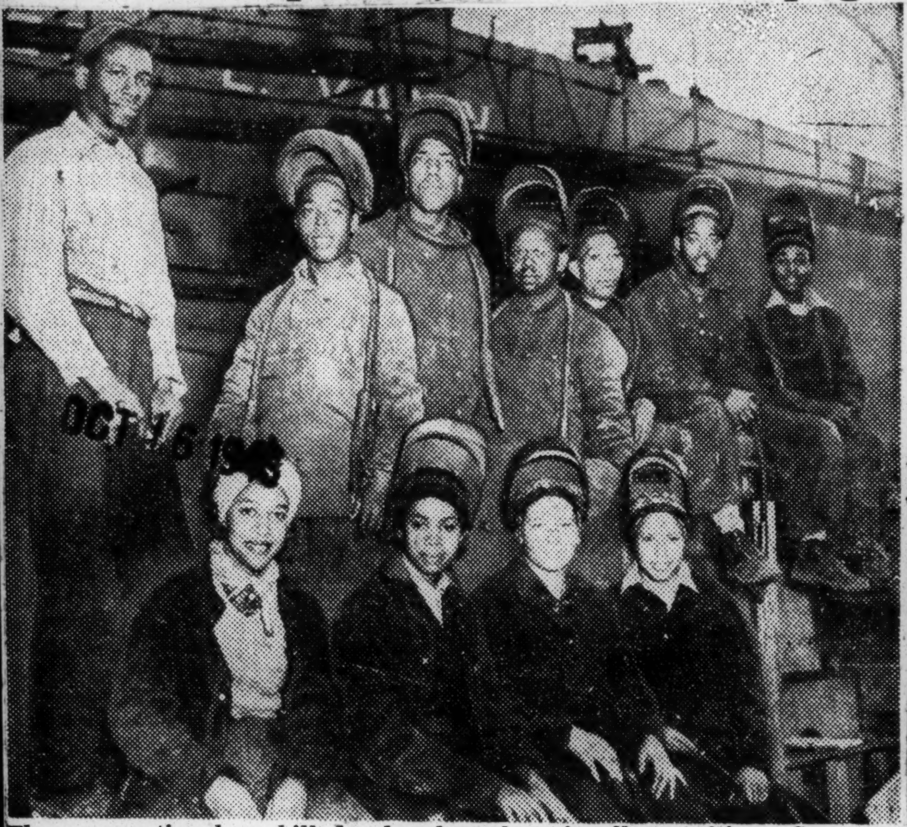
AUG 26 1943

The program originated in the drill hall of Camp Lawrence, one of three camps devoted to the training of men of the Negro race. It included, in addition to [illegible] mass singing, interviews with two sailors and selections by the Camp Lawrence choir.

47j-1943

5th Liberty Ship, Named for Late Robert L. Vann, Launched at Portland, Maine, Sunday; Mrs. Vann, Sponsor, Smashes Champagne Bottle on Second Try

Afro-American
Baltimore. Md.

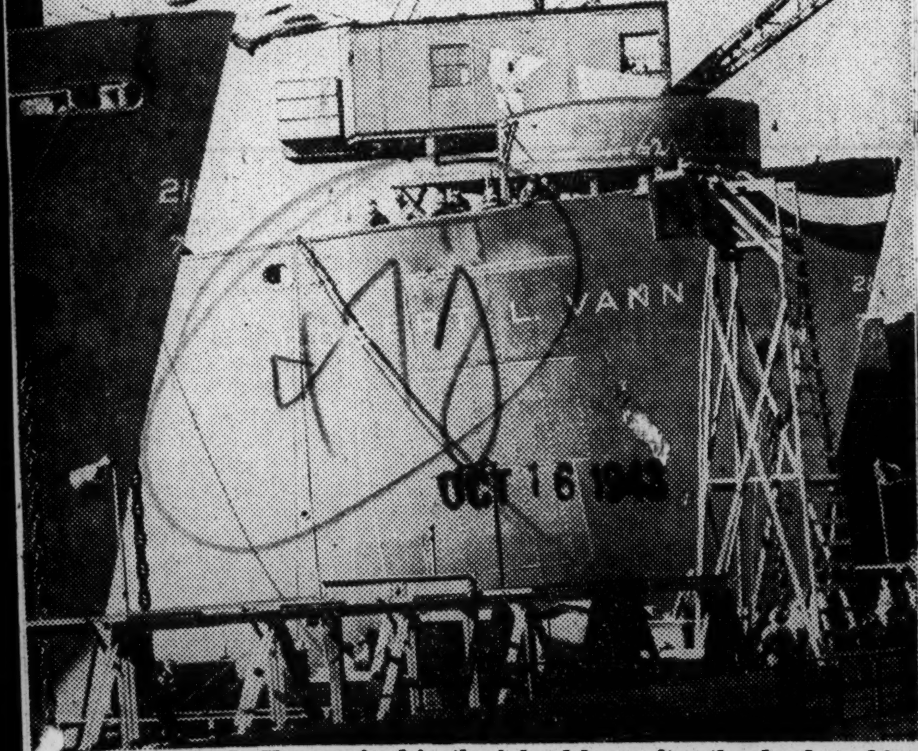


OCT 16 1943

The corporation has skilled colored workers in all capacities. Some are Emerson Commings, lead man in the pipe shop; Dudley A. Dickson, draftsman; Ronald Kenneth Sharpe, N.Y.C., specialist; Richard David, lead man of the welders. Workers shown above are: back row, [illegible] Singleton, John Dykes, James Fontaine, Charles Jones, Roy McKinney, James Meikle, Cornelius Welton; front row, Misses Alice Smith, Esther Dawkins, Ruby Hawkins. Susan Correy.

At the actual launching exercises are: (left to right): C. C. Spaulding, president of the North Carolina Mutual Insurance Company, life long friend of Robert L. Vann for whom the ship was named; Mrs. Vann, dressed in a magnificient baum[illegible] coat; and Mrs. Mable Page Johnson of Johnstown, Pa., close friend of the Vann family.

Standing before the bow of the S.S. Robert L. Vann with a bottle of champagne in her hand ready for the christening exercise is Mrs. Robert L. Vann, wife of the late publisher of the Pittsburgh Courier. The two bouquets of flowers were presented by the New England Shipbuilding Company and employees. It took a second try for the sponsor to break the bottle.



OCT 16 1943

The S.S. Robert L. Vann poised in the inland base after the dry launching on Sunday noon. The Liberty Ship was floated out into the bay early Monday morning. It is now 85 per cent compl[illegible]eady for its trial run within 14 days. The crew has already been chosen and is under Captain John Godfrey, of New York City.

Marine Looter Saved From Jail By Sergeant

Pittsburgh, Pa. Courier

NEW YORK, Aug. 19—(ANP)—An unexp[illegible] flood of oratory by a marine [illegible] week in special sessions court was accredited with freeing a Negro marine being tried for tentative burglary and grand larceny as an outgrowth of the Harlem riots August 1.

The marine defendant was George Lee, 22, who also faces military trial for being AWOL from his outfit and shedding his uniform during the disturbances. He was taken into custody by Detective Terrance Rogers, who said he was caught in the act of looting a store in Lenox avenue.

Rogers was testifying against the prisoner when the marine sergeant Joseph F. Mullane, asked permission to address the bench. He declared:

"If you place him on trial, convict him and place him in prison, he automatically will become a deserter. Then, if he is found guilty by the marine corps on that charge, he will be liable to be sentenced to be shot by a firing squad, because our country is at war."

BREAD [illegible] WATER

Justices Frederick L. Hackenburg, Alfred J. Heffman, and George B. DeLucca conferred with Livingston Goddard, assistant prosecuting attorney, then asked the sergeant what punishment would be meted out to the marine if released.

"Well," replied Mullane, "he'll be placed on trial merely for being absent without leave, and if found guilty, is liable to be placed on bread and water for 15 days and lose a month's pay."

"Whew!", said Justice Hackenburg. "That's worse than giving him a three month workhouse term."

POLITE SENTENCED

After [illegible] with his colleagues, Hackenburg announced, "the court has reduced the charge to unlawful entry and petit larceny, but also has dismissed them."

In another action in felony court. Miss Margie Polite. 35, one of two women charged with creating a disturbance in the lobby of the notorious Braddock hotel that led to the altercation between MP Robert Bandy and a patrolman, was ordered committed to the medical institution for treatment. Miss Polite has been in the house of [illegible] since her arraignment with Mrs. [illegible] Roberts, 40, a registered nurse, who is the mother of Bandy. She was charged with aiding her son attack the officer, an act that resulted in Bandy being shot in the shoulder. He has since been turned over to military authorities.

AUG 21 1943

NAVY CLOSES ITS DOORS ON RACE WOMEN

Defender
Chicago, Ill. 1943

Wave Enlistees Make It 'Hot' For Washington Recruiting Office

AUG 21 1943

By HARRY McALPIN
(Defender Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON, D.C.—The Navy shut the door—a real door at 1320 G street, N.W.—on Negro women last week!

"It's the heat," said Yeoman Smith, who stated he was following the orders of and quoting his commanding officer, Lt. L. A. King. Lt. Commdr. H. B. Atkinson, executive officer of the Office of Naval Procurement, who also said "the office folded because of the heat."

But the "heat wave" that descended on the navy's WAVEs last Friday was not one of atmospheric temperature or humidity. Last Friday, in Washington, was relatively cool. It was only 90.2 degrees at the hottest part of the day—at 3:30 p.m. By 4:35 p.m., when the recruiting office was closed, the temperature had dropped to a cool and breezy 87 degrees. And at 5 p.m., when the office reopened, it was still 87.

No, it wasn't the thermometer, which has topped 90 degrees in Washington on over 45 days this summer, and reached a season high of 98 one day last week—on which day the air-conditioned recruiting office remained open as usual.

The "heat wave" was six Negro "hopeful WAVES," all well-groomed, well-behaved, and comely. And all but one were college women, with skills and training the navy says it needs in women.

Try to Enlist

The first two who entered the recruiting office were Althea Jefferson and Hazel Lee. They expressed a patriotic desire to serve their country through enlistment in the WAVEs. A WAVE receptionist talked to them, took their names and addresses, but refused to give them application forms. In the interview, the receptionist told Misses Jefferson and Lee that "something is being planned for you-all."

When they came out, Velma Hammond and Bernice Jacobs were coming along the street. They had been thinking about the WAVES for some time. Seeing two Negro girls coming out of the recruiting office, they decided to go in. It was then 4:30 p.m. Though the temperature outside was an hour past its peak, and was steadily dropping, the "heat" in the recruiting office suddenly became stifling—but only in the WAVEs recruiting office. The enlisted men's recruiting office next door remained open.

Miss Hammond's name and address was taken by a yeoman, to whom the WAVE receptionist had turned over the job while she went in the back room for a conference. Before he could take Miss Jacobs' name and address, he was given orders to close the office. The door was locked, and Misses Hammond and Jacobs were invited to leave by the back door.

"But why are you closing now?" asked Miss Jacobs.

"It's the heat, it's very h[illegible]," said the yeoman. He gave the young ladies some application blanks and literature concerning the WAVEs, and asked them to please go.

When the girls insisted on leaving by the front door, the WAVEs gave in to their request.

By that time, Cora E. Wright and Cleomine Lewis arrived with intention of applying for admission in the WAVEs. "The door was closed in our faces," they said.

It was then 4:35 p.m. The temperature was 87.

Misses Wright and Lewis walked around the block. Miss Wright had a camera in a repair shop nearby. Returning, they had to pass the recruiting office again. The door was wide open—ready for business.

It was then 5 p.m. The temperature was 87.

Misses Wright and Lewis went in. A short conference ensued—in the back room. A yeoman, who had been stalling on the telephone, then went back and got his orders. He came out wreathed in smiles and steeped in courtesy. He took the names and addresses of Misses Wright and Lewis, and gave them application blanks and literature.

Voluntarily, he offered the explanation that the office had closed because of the heat, "but we noticed a little breeze came up and we reopened." He then instructed the girls to take the applications home and fill them out. He urged that they call up before returning to find out whether "the law has been passed for admission of colored."

The next day, Lt. King denied to the Defender that the office had been closed because of the influx of Negro applicants. "Here is what we are doing as far as they are concerned," he said. "We are going to take their names and addresses and give them all information they desire. We will give them applications to fill out down here or at their leisure at home; and then when some provision is made whereby we can enlist them, we will call them in and complete the applications." He indicated that he had received that morning a report from the Office of Procurement that there is something "in the mill for them."

Lt. Commander Atkinson told the Defender that it is the policy to interview Negro girls and treat them as anybody else. "But," he said, "there is nothing we can do but take names and addresses. We are told by the Bureau of Naval Personnel that a plan is under consideration now. In the meantime, any colored girls coming in we are to get names and addresses and hold them until the plans are effective."

In the meantime, the navy is crying—shedding tears—in an effort to get WAVEs. Various speakers, from Secretary of the Navy Knox, Admiral King and Lt. Commander McAfee, down to the recruiting ensigns, on the WAVEs' anniversary just three weesk ago, appealed for larger and larger enlistments.

But despite denials, for almost one-half hour last Friday, during the height of the passer-by parade, the Washington recruiting office of the WAVEs locked its doors to prevent any more Negro women entering to enlist.

Miss Jefferson is a high school graduate from Washington, Pa., now employed in the Bureau of Engraving, and active in community activities.

Miss Lee is from Cleveland, a dental hygiene graduate of Howard university, and employed at the Civil Service Commission.

Miss Hammond is a graduate of San Francisco State college, with an AB in biology and economics. She is employed at the Bureau of Engraving.

Miss Jacobs is an AB from the University of California, where she majored in Hispanic American History. She has credits toward a master's degree, and is employed at the Bureau of Engraving.

Miss Wright graduated from South Carolina State college, and has credits toward a master's degree. Miss Lewis is a graduate of Virginia Union university, and is a secretary.

AUG 27 1943

SURVIVOR

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa

Steward's Mate, Second Class, Albert E. Paul of Pittsburgh, is ready to return to action after a 30-day furlough. Paul was one of the 18 survivors from an American destroyer which sank on the fifth day of the invasion of Sicily. The sailor was in the battle torn waters four hours before being saved.—Sockwell Photo.

AUG 28 1943

Naval Photographer Back From Solomons

aug. 14, 1943 Courier Pittsburg, Pa

EDITOR'S NOTE: A vivid, startling account by George L. Bankston, Photographer's Mate 1/c U.S.N.R., of how brave, black defiant Americans face death at every instance—gamble recklessly with fate in order that democracy may survive. Mr. Bankston was a former news photographer in New Orleans.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Aug. 12—Those six months in Gaudalcanal area are the most memorable and exciting that I ever had, and six months of life that shall never be forgotten. As a photographer in the U. S. Navy my trip was filled with excitement and anticipation from the moment I embarked from the United States until I reached my point of destination. I shall never forget those days at sea when our group of men, inexperienced as they were in actual combat zones, were eager to reach their base and see just what it was like, and to do their part to get it over with.

MADE OFFICIAL PHOTOGRAPHER

They didn't have long to wait. It was ten days after arriving there that I got my first thrill as a photographer in the armed service. It was during a night air attack that I had occasion to make my first pictures of actual combat, the exploding of bombs, and the fire from our batteries. Those pictures gave me the experience of what real night photography is, and from that day on, every day was filled with excitement.

It was this experience that gave me my opportunity to be made the first official Negro photographer in the U.S. Navy, and which caused me to gain another stripe. This put me in direct charge of our department which then gave me an added duty and opportunity. Being a photographer first class, I was then supposed to do all of the aerial photographic work for our outfit, and in successfully doing this I was then given the official aerial work for the entire area.

MAKES FIRST AERIAL MISSION

I shall never forget that first flight over the Solomon Islands, and into enemy territory. There I was full of excitement and anticipation with the finest photographic equipment in the world in my hands and some of the finest machine guns at my side should I have to use them, and I don't know which I was anticipating more—the aerial observation photographic work, or the use of those guns if a Japanese should have poked his nose into our business. However, I felt fully capable of either, and was keyed up and ready for both, but as we went along on our mission I completed my photographic work and told my flight officer I was terribly disappointed in that I didn't have a chance to use those guns.

His reply was, "don't worry, if you stick by me you will have plenty chance." That chance came three days later. We were up 20,000 feet making a bomber's picture, when we sighted trouble. Being alone, we decided to come down. That trip down gave me the greatest thrill of my life when my pilot stuck the nose of his plane towards the earth and came down in a power drive from 20,000 feet to 2,000 feet before I could hardly catch my breath, or was there any breath there? However, I do know that the earth came up to meet me so fast that there couldn't have been much breath left.

FORMED MANY FRIENDSHIPS

Those experiences then made me a veteran of air and ground work, after which I was given the aerial duties of three different outfits, of which for military reasons I will not name, and the connections with these outfits qualified me as an ace aerial photographer in the combat zone. Memories are plentiful and many, of Air Force officers and I who worked together and will remain everlasting friends. They always sent for me when they thought they would run into something that would make good picture records or information for our forces.

One of the most exciting assignments that I have had to do was when our island was attacked by 150 Japanese dive bombers. When we knew they were coming in on us, my officer handed me an aerial camera and a 45 automatic, patted me on the back and said, "Good luck, Bankston." I knew what he meant, and good luck is what I needed. Not being able to give you a full account of this battle, nor of how I made out in it, I will tell you that I spent one hour and a half doing some of the most exciting work.

I will tell you this — those 150 Japanese planes did not get back home like they came, as a matter of fact only a few returned. One of the greatest little gunners who is giving those Japanese Zeroes all they want is a 19-year-old Negro boy who handles one of our big guns like a little boy handles his cap pistol playing cowboy.

When he lets it go, something is coming down, and you can bet your life it is a Japanese. That young fellow is known to me as Shields, the gunner, from New York. I mention him, because his job is one of the most dangerous and most outstanding in the defense of a base, but just like Shields there are hundreds of other boys with equally important jobs.

47j-1943

Every Mile of U.S. Coast Line is Protected By Coast Guardsmen Like This One

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

OCT 16 1943

47j

Patrolling a four-mile stretch of the Cape Cod beach, Coast Guardsman Charles Stenhouse, seaman first class, has a lot of time to think about his home on the other side of the country at Los Angeles, Calif. His only friends on the beach, he says, are the seagulls. Whenever anything out of the ordinary turns up on the beach, the gulls, of which there are thousands, can be depended upon to raise a racket. (Shephard [illegible]o.)

Booker T.'s Skipper Evades Submarines, but Meets Jim Crow

Captain, Purser Ordered to Leave Richmond's Greyhound Bus Station Waiting Room at Midnight

OCT 2 1943

Afro-American
Baltimore, Maryland

CAPTAIN HUGH MULZAC

OCT 2 1943

By JOHN JASPER

(Passed for Publication)

BALTIMORE — Captain Hugh Mulzac, skipper of the Liberty Ship Booker T. Washington, was forced to leave the main waiting room of the Greyhound bus station at Richmond, Va., at midnight September 22.

The captain, who returned recently from a voyage to a war zone, was in uniform. His purser, John Beecher, white, accompanied him.

He spent several days in New York conferring with officials of the Luckenback Steamship Line and the War Shipping Administration and received orders to report in Norfolk early on the next morning. The only available train arrived in Richmond near midnight, from which he took the 1:30 bus for Norfolk.

Sitting in the Richmond bus station, reading and chatting with Mr. Beecher, Captain Mulzac first became aware of a group of hostile sailors. Later a policeman was summoned.

"You're colored, aren't you?" the cop asked. "You'll have to get over in that little waiting room over there."

"This is all right here," the captain said.

"I have got orders," the cop insisted. "You're colored, you'll have to go."

"I have orders, too," the captain said. "My Government has given me orders to fight for democracy. It seems your State Government has given you orders to fight against democracy. I'm over there fighting for you fellows over here. We are carrying stuff in the ships, day and night, watching for submarines for draft dodgers like you fellows over here who tell us where to sit."

The policeman said that the captain would have to leave or undergo arrest for a violation of the Virginia segregation laws.

"I'll not quarrel or fight with you," Captain Mulzac said finally and picking up his papers and brief case walked outside of the station with Mr. Beecher and waited until the bus left.

The two occupied the same seat in the bus to Norfolk and arrived without further mishap.

47j

Two New Officers

When the Booker T. makes another voyage it will have two new junior officers, replacing Clifton Lastic, a chief officer, who is on leave in order to take his examination for a second officer's ticket. He's successor to Captain M. O'Neal, who is a U.S. citizen holding a British master's license.

OCT 2 1943

Third Officer M. McGregor of the Booker T., is off to the hospital for an operation.

While in Baltimore, Captain Mulzac was the guest of his attorney, J. Howard Payne. He told of having tied up in a North African port by the side of a Liberty ship, named for the author of the song, "Home, Sweet Home."

The captain said momentarily he was stunned, thinking that the vessel was named for the local lawyer.

Gets Commander's Rating

Captain Mulzac now carries a card from the U.S. Maritime Service designating him as a "commander," having completed six months to a year in the service without mishap and with a good recommendation. He has made five round trips to various war theatres.

OCT 2 1943

"INTUITION" TOLD HER

CAPT. AND MRS. ADRIAN RICHARDSON.

She had a premonition that her husband was in trouble. (Story

OCT 2 1943

Liberty Ship, R. L. Vann, To Be Launched

Atlanta, Georgia

Named For Late Lawyer, Publisher

Daily World

AUG 20 1943

WASHINGTON, D. C. — (SNS) —The Maritime Commission announced Thursday that a Liberty Ship, assigned to a South Portland, Maine shipyard, will be named for the late Robert L. Vann, noted Negro lawyer, and founder of the Pittsburgh Courier, a weekly newspaper.

The ship, fifth in a series named for outstanding Negro Americans, will be launched in late September or early October in the South Portland yards of the New England Shipbuilding Corporation.

The first three ships of this series, the SS Booker T. Washington, the SS George Washingotn Carver, and the SS Frederick Douglass, are now in active service, two of them with Negro captains with mixed crews. The fourth, the SS John Merrick, was recently launched at Wilmington, N. C. A warship, the Destroyer Escort Leonard Roy Harmon, was launched last month by the Navy Department at Quincy, Mass.

AUG 20 1943

Robert Lee Vann was born at Ahoskie, N. C., August 27, 1879, and died in Pittsburgh, Pa., October 24, 1940. Educated at Virginia Union University, and the University of Pittsburgh, he was admitted to the bar in 1909 and practiced in Pennsylvania until 1936, when he decided to give his full time to his publishing business.

ONE OF FOUNDERS

He was one of the founders and incorporators of the Pittsburgh Courier Publishing Company in March, 1910, and served as editor of the paper and president and treasurer of the publishing company until his death.

Under Mr. Vann's direction, the Courier became one of the largest Negro newspapers in the world with an ABC circulation of over 200,000 and readers in most English-speaking countries.

Mr. Vann also enjoyed a distinguished career as a lawyer. In 1917-18, he served as assistant City Solicitor for Pittsburgh. In 1924, he was named by President Coolidge as a member of a five-man commission to investigate conditions in the Virgin Islands. In 1935, he served as a member of the Constitutional Convention of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania to revise the state constitution.

Mr. Vann also was an ardent disciple of education, and aided many young people of his race to gain collegiate training. He also made several large contributions to Virginia Union University, where, after his death, the tower of the Belgian Pavillion of the New York World's Fair was renamed the Robert L. Vann Memorial Tower. This Pavilion was presented to Virginia Union by the Belgian Government and transported from New York to Richmond, Virginia.

Torture Victim Back From Sea

Courier

Pittsburgh, Pa.

SEP

ATLANTA, Ga., Sept. 9—(ANP) —Sporting a mustache and a whiff of a goatee, and togged down in his snappy navy uniform, 19-year old Quintard South, who figured in Atlanta's sensational police torture case yast year, breezed in from the sea during the week-end to tell of his adventures in the South Pacifiic.

South was the government's principal witness against Detective M. F. Sutherland, charged with violation of federal civil liberties statutes, in the burning torture of the youth when he was being held at the city jail as a susnect in the theft of a basketball uniform. Two trials of the case ended in hung juries.

IN 3 BATTLES

A steward's mate, second class, South joined the navy a year ago and has seen seven months in the Pacific. He wears three small stars on the upper left of his jacket, a reminder that he has been in three sea battles. An enemy torpedo hit his ship in the third battle, South said.

Officer Sutherland was indicted by a federal grand jury after South displayed raw wounds about his breast and arms which he charged were inflicted by the detective with a photographer's iron in an effort to obtain a confession in the petty burglary case. The owner of the sweater South was charged with stealing later appeared and testified that he had given the garment to the youth.

The case attracted wide attention after white groups became interested in its outcome.

U. S. NAVY APOLOGIZES FOR JOKE

AUG 28 1943

Courier

Pittsburgh, Pa.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28— The Navy Department, last week—in a letter to Congressman Vito Marcantonio (ALP-NY) from Captain Leland P. Lovette, director of public relations — apologized for the appearance in one of its service publications, the Masthead, published at Treasure Island, Calif., of an anti-Negro joke.

"I have stated in previous letters," said Captain Lovette, "that the Navy objects to any expression of racial or religious intolerance by its personnel, and makes every effort to prevent any manifestations of intolerance."

AUG 28 1943

He continued, "Unfortunately, it is not possible, even in a military organization, to exercise airtight control over all the modes and details of expression of hundreds of thousands of men and women. This I repeat, is not a justification or excuse for any derogatory remarks made by persons in the naval service against any racial or religious group; it merely presumes to offer an explanation of the dfifiiculties which beset the Navy's conscientious attempts to deal with the problem."

STORY EXPOSED

A reproduction of the insulting anti-Negro story was published in The Pittsburgh Courier several weeks ago.

Commenting on Congressman Marcantonio's suggestion that stories of Negro naval heroes be published in Naval publications, Captain Lovette's letter said: "I wish to emphasize that the Navy welcomes your suggestion that the exploits of Negroes be publicised. Actually, we are following such a policy all the time. Navy crosses have been awarded three Negroes, Navy and Marine Corps medals have been given two Negroes, and many others have received letters of commendation. This, I am sure you will agree, is as it should be."

SEP 25 1943

Washington Tribune

Washington, D. C.

HIGHEST HONORS

Allen D. Holland, 18, of 766 Columbia Road, Northwest, Washington, D. C., has graduted from recruit training, Great Lakes Illinois, with highest honors in his company at the U. S. Naval Training Station here.

SEP 25 1943

Holland, formerly a junior clerk employed in the War Department, joined the Navy as an apprentice seaman in July. During the boot training period he led the 130 men of his company in drill an scholarship, and is now qualified for duty at sea with the fleet.

SEP 25 1943

The honor man, whose brothers, Roger and Luther, are serving with the Army, has returned to Washington for boot leave with his parents. Holland is a graduate of Armstrong High School

---

Ask Women to Join WAVES by 'Mistake'

Afro-American

Baltimore, Md.

AUG 21 1943

BALTIMORE—The U.S. Navy is doing it again!

It is sending out applications to young colored women, by mistake, seeking their enlistment in the WAVES.

The letter accompanying the application is signed by Lieut. Commander W. C. Meyer, officer in charge, and calls to "all patriotic women to make a more direct contribution to the war effort and join the WAVES which is your privilege as an American woman."

AUG 21 1943

The letter neglects to specify that this privilege is for WHITE women only.

Lieut. Commander Meyer told the AFRO Monday that he has received numerous calls from colored young women who "inadvertently" received letters and applications.

"Something Pending"

The navy is not accepting colored women for enlistment now, he said, and explained that "there is something pending in Washington which may mean we will take them later."

AUG 21 1943

He stated that the navy is securing lists of names of colored young women to make up a waiting list, but that the letters were sent out in error.

News Briefs From Far and Near

Bystander

Des Moines, Iowa

ROOSEVELT'S VALET GRADUATES FROM NAVAL SCHOOL

Washington — The night before George C. Fields, 32, the nation's number one gentleman's gentleman, left the White House to enter the Navy, President Roosevelt grasped his hand and said:

"Good luck to you, George. I know you'll do just as good a job for the Navy as you've done for me."

That was last February. Recently, the Negro Bluejacket lived up to the President's expectation when he was graduated from the Navy's Service Schools at the U. S. Naval Training Station, Great Lakes, Ill., as honor man of his class group. He was advanced from seaman, second class, to storekeeper, third class.

Fields served as President Roosevelt's valet for four years, being advanced to the post after six years as a butler at the presidential residence. His brother, Alonzo Fields, has been head butler at the White House since the Hoover administration. Their parents are Mr. and Mrs. Clinton B. Fields, of 728 Columbia avenue, Indianapolis, Ind.

PM

New York, N. Y.

A Correction

Dorie Miller, Negro messman, was awarded the Navy Cross for manning a machine gun on a warship during the Pearl Harbor attack. PM cited Miller's heroism Friday in Nailing the Hate Rumors and erroneously stated that the Navy Cross had been awarded posthumously. Miller is not dead.

NOV 4 1943

47j-1943

1st Warship Named for Colored Hero Sets World's Record

Afro-American
Baltimore, Maryland

$3,500,000 Vessel in Service in Three Months; Texas Mother Sees Navy Take It Over

QUINCY, Mass.—Fully manned by a complement of 200 men, its guns bristling, the USS Harmon, Destroyer Escort, first warship to be named for a colored hero, was ready to put out to sea for death-dealing action, Tuesday.

Named for Leonard Leroy Harmon, mess attendant, 1/c, Guadalcanal hero, the 1300-ton vessel, costing $3,500,000, was put in service only 92 days after her keel was laid, establishing a world's record for the construction of destroyer escorts. The previous record was 128 days. The Harmon was launched on July 25.

The commissioning ceremony lacked much of the gaiety that marked the Harmon's launching in July, but it took on added significance. Witnessing the closed ceremony was Mrs. Naunita Harmon Carroll of Cuero, Texas, for whose late son the vessel was named, the Bethlehem Shipbuilding officials, and high-ranking navy officials.

Same Party Makes 2nd Trip

As on the trip to the launching, she was accompanied by her husband, William Donaldson Carroll, principal of Wilkins School at Port Lavoca, Texas, and her two daughters, Miss Pauline Harmon, mechanic at the San Antonio Air Field Command, Kelley Field, Texas, and Mrs. Constance Edwards, teacher in El Paso, Texas.

They made the 2,200 mile jaunt for the launching of the ship in July under the auspices of the Bethlehem Steel Company, Shipbuilding Division, while this special return trip for the commissioning of the Harmon was made under the auspicies of Texas officials who felt that her son had brought great honor upon the State.

After the few brief remarks and comments on the vessel, the navy officials were delivered the warship by the lehem Company officials.

Although it was a business-like ceremony in which the ship changed hands from its builders to the navy, a precedent was established in the exchange because it was the first navy warship named in honor of a colored person.

World Record Achieved

No one at the Fore River Yard of the Bethlehem Company, from W. H. Collins, general manager of the plant, on down even imagined that the company was on its way to a world's record until the Harmon was four weeks under construction.

Its launching in July, less than two months after the kee was laid, was a surprise to the navy. On August 11, Unde Secretary of the Navy James V. Forrestal visited Bethlehem and New England asking the shipbuilding industry to bea the record of 128 days then existing for destroyer escorts.

The Fore River plant, with 30,000 employees, two week later shattered its own 128-day mark by completing the Harmon in 92 days—a world's record. The company prides itsel in the fact that the ship was not rushed but built accordin to plans like other destroyer escorts are built.

The plant, with many colored employees in all phases o work, is on a 24-hour, 7-day-a-week shift, turning out a shi a day far ahead of schedule, including aircraft carriers, battleships, all types of cruisers and destroyers.

The Makeup of a Destroyer Escort

A destroyer escort is a fighting vessel designed to carry convoys to safety through submarine-infested seas. It is faster than the fastest ship in a convoy, much faster than a submarine, and yet slower than a destroyer. It is a cross between an American destroyer and the British corvette.

Its purpose, when mass forces of them are afloat, is to relieve destroyers, take them off convoy work and send them back to combat. Escorts are namesakes for navy heroes, just as destroyers are named.

The destroyer escort is 1300 tons of destruction, from stem to stern, and its stem is 300 feet from its stern. Carrying 200 men, it can drop depth charges, discharge torpedoes, send shells from deck pieces and send out a spray of projectiles that is bound to fall on some invading craft on the sea surface.

Rear Admiral Edward L. Cochrane, Chief of Shipbuilding for the navy, went to England before the war began and studied the British corvette, a pint-sized destroyer, returned and drew up the plans for the American destroyer escort.

K.P.'s Get a "Break"

In both the fore and aft section below the weather deck are compartments for showers; each man has his own bunk and locker in which to place his uniforms and valuables. In the galley are an automatic vegetable peeler and a dishwashing machine, eliminating over-exertion from K.P.

Also on the vessel can be found Radar—radio detecting and ranging—the world's most secret weapon based on electronics. The cost of the destroyer escort is $3,500,000, about half the price of a destroyer, and the building time is now just about 3 months compared with the destroyer's 9 months.

Harmon Now at Sea

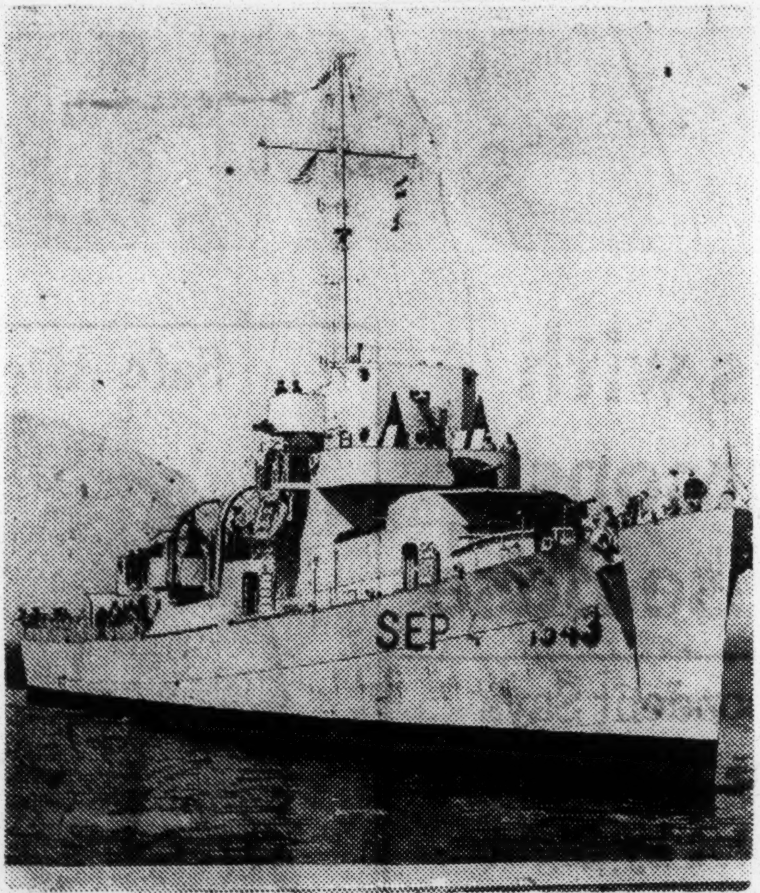
The Harmon is now at sea and may well be protecting a convoy that has within the group one of the Liberty ships that have been named for outstanding colored Americans.

The first three ships, the SS Booker T. Washington, the SS George W. Carver, and the SS Frederick Douglass, are now in active service, two of them with colored captains and mixed crews. The fourth, the SS John Merrick, was recently launched at Wilmington, N.C., and the fifth, will be launched in late September in Portland, Me., named for Robert L. Vann, newspaper publisher.

Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox's approval of the assignment of the name USS Harmon to the warship late last May was well founded because Harmon, not only saved several of his shipmates on the night of November 13, 1942, in the Solomons, but also threw himself in front of a ship's officer and dragged him to safety before being mortally wounded himself by machine gun fire.

Harmon in Navy Four Years

Harmon had been in the navy for over four years and



Cost $3,500,000, crew of 200, carries 3 inch guns and 20 mm. AA guns. Launched July 25, Commissioned August 31. Time of building 92 days a world's record. Best previous time for a destroyer escort 128 days

James G. Tippin, Garfield P. White, Robert Fairhurst, welders at Bethlehem's Quincy, Mass.

SEP 4 1943

ad travelled all over the world, being at Pearl Harbor at the me of the Japanese attack. He was awarded the Navy Cross osthumously for extraordinary heroism while serving aboard he USS San Francisco during action against Japanese forces n November 12 and 13, 1942.

The text of the citation given with the award of the Navy Cross to Harmon was:

SEP 4 1943

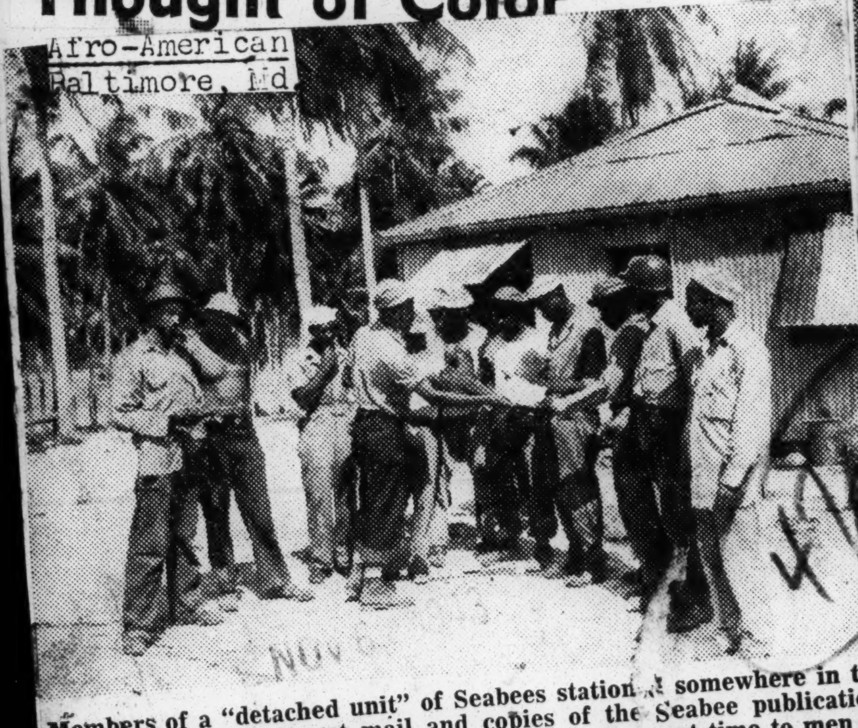
"For extraordinary heroism while serving aboard the USS San Francisco during action, against enemy Japanese forces in the Solomon Island area on November 12 and 13, 1942. With persistent disregard for his own personal safety, Harmon rendered invaluable assistance in caring for the wounded and evacuating them to a dressing station.

"In addition to displaying unusual loyalty in behalf of the injured executive officer, he deliberately exposed himself to hostile gunfire in order to protect a shipmate and, as a result of this courageous deed, was killed in action.

"His heroic spirit of self-sacrifice, maintained above and beyond the call of duty, was in keeping with the highest traditions of the United States Naval Service. He gallantly gave up his life in the defense of his country."

Seabees Grin at Danger, Do Their Work and Then Relax, Without Thought of Color

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md



NOV 6

Members of a "detached unit" of Seabees stationed somewhere in the Solomons line up to get mail and copies of the Seabee publication, "The Dixie Bee." Mail time can be a pretty important time to men on the other side of the world from their friends and families.

Not all Jap bombs land in open jungle areas, however, and here while smoke is still rising from the wreckage caused by a bombing attack, the Seabees have already gone back to work clearing away debris preparatory to rebuilding a warehouse burned during the raid

NOV 6

Some relaxation is needed by the men after they have worked night and day to complete needed advance naval bases. Here two battalions of Seabees, one white and one colored, working together, are taking time out to watch a show put on by an infantry group.

A Jap bomb dug the crater in which these six Seabees are standing, but it will take only a few minutes for them to fill it with their bulldozers. Such bombings were commonplace while the men were working at the construction of an advanced navy base in the Pacific.

Armstrong Says He's On Record For Such A Move

Atlanta, Georgia
Daily World

More Than 75 Per Cent Of Men From The South

NOV 19 1943

CHICAGO—(A N P)—In an address at the DuSable high school, Comdr. D. W. Armstrong, of the U. S. Naval Training Station at Great Lakes, said "I am personally on record with the secretary of the navy in recommending that Negroes be commissioned as officers in the U. S. navy, and I back up my recommendation." The commandant said he did not know when commissions will be authorized.

Armstrong, in reveiwing the Negro's difficult struggle for general service in the navy, indicated that Great Lakes gets about 25 per cent of its recruits from the north and the balance from the south.

He explained that it was necessary for the naval center to institute remedial schools to teach many of these men enough reading, writing and arithmetic so they could read the orders given them.

Comdr, Armstrong said that there would be no surer way for this program to have ended in disaster than by the commissioning of officers before either the prospective officers or the men whom they were to command were trained to discharge the duties and responsibilities incumbent upon them in a satisfactory manner.

Washington Tribune
Washington, D. C.

Naval Training Station Marks First Anniversary

SEP 25 1943

HAMPTON, Va.—Marking the completion of one year since its establishment last September, the Hampton Institute Naval Training Station celebrated its first anniversary last Wednesday, in cooperation with the college committee of Freshman Week, then in progress at the Institute.

Defender
Chicago, Ill.

New Liberty Ship Named For Vann

World-Telegram
New York, N. Y.

WASHINGTON.—The U.S. Maritime Commission announced early this week that a fifth Liberty Ship will be named for an outstanding Negro when the S. S. Robert L. Vann is completed at the South Portland Shipyard of the New England Shipbuilding corporation, sometime in the near future.

Four previous ships already bear the names of leading colored figures. They are the Booker T. Washington, the George Washington Carver, the Frederick Douglass and the John S. Merrick.

Vann died in 1940, terminating 53 years of a colorful and busy life. Born in 1887, at Ahoskie, N. C., in humble surroundings, Vann gradually became a power in Pennsylvania politics, in which state he spent most of his adult life.

Following his achievement of the doctor of laws degree from the University of Pittsburgh, he became a co-founder of the Pittsburgh Courier Publishing Co. He became editor of the paper in 1912, and served in that capacity until his death. After long years of allegiance to the Republican party, during which he saw service as a city solicitor, publicity director for the national committee, and publicity director for the Harding campaign, Vann soured on the GOP when he became dissatisfied with its treatment of the Negro people.

Lending his support to President Roosevelt, he was rewarded by being named a member of the Committee to Revise the Constitution of the State of Pennsylvania in 1935. Following the election of Roosevelt, he was appointed assistant United States attorney general, being the first colored man to receive such an appointment from the Democratic Party.

47j-1943

Georgia Fugitive Now Fights Axis

Atlanta, Georgia

AUG 15 1943

Daily World

PHILADELPHIA—(A N P)—What happens to the scores of tragic fugitives from Dixie chaingangs after they have won freedom from compassionate northern jurists?

One answer was offered here last week by Seaman Second Class Thomas William Mattox, 18, in the city on furlough from Camp Smalls, Great Lakes, Ill., training station. He joined the navy!

Mattox, who just a year ago was trembling at the bar of Judge Clare G. Fenerty's courtroom because Sheriff Mark Cleveland of Elberton, Ga., was pressing extradition proceedings against him is exuberant today over his new found freedom and harbors ambitions of a petty officer's rating.

The youth was charged by Georgia authorities with slashing a motorist during a quarrel over "who passed whom" on a country highway. His able lawyer, Raymond Pace Alexander, won his release by presenting evidence to the court that Mattox's attack came only after he and his sister had been struck by the complainant, and that Georgia justice meant death for the boy.

Judge Fenerty in ordering Mattox released was influenced also by the knowledge that the prosecuting attorney in Elberton had accused him of being prejudiced when he supported the anti-lynching bill while serving in congress.

Young Mattox found work in a shipyard earning $40 per week, but he wanted to show his appreciation to a country that was big enough to smile with favor upon him after first slapping him in the face. He added last May that he would quit his job and join the navy.

"Pennsylvania had been so kind to me," Mattox explained, "I felt like returning the favor. That was the only way I could think to do it."

Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Virginia

B. T. Washington Crew Says Real Democracy On Ship

NEW YORK, N. Y.—(ANP) — Pointing to their own crew as an example of true democracy, the Booker T. Washington crew, mixed one, has declared that the abolition of jim crow throughout the armed forces would build morale and strengthen the fighting qualities of our Army. The statement was in answer to a letter from Maj. Gen. J. A. Ulio of the War Department, who defended the Army's policy of segregation.

A letter from Navy Secretary Knox brought forth satisfaction from the Washington crew members. The letter was in answer to the crews' communication on the fine relations between gun and merchant crew aboard ship.

The policy of the War Department is not to intermingle colored and white enlisted personnel in the same regimental organizations, stated ULio's letter.

"This policy has proven satisfactory over a long period of years and to make changes would produce situations destructive to morale and detrimental to the war eff[illegible] the le[illegible]ontinued.

NOV 13 1943

CREW COMMENTS

The crew commented that ULio's answer was regarded as "the stock excuse of lazy or dishonest minds which refuse to recognize the true nature of this democratic war." They further stated:

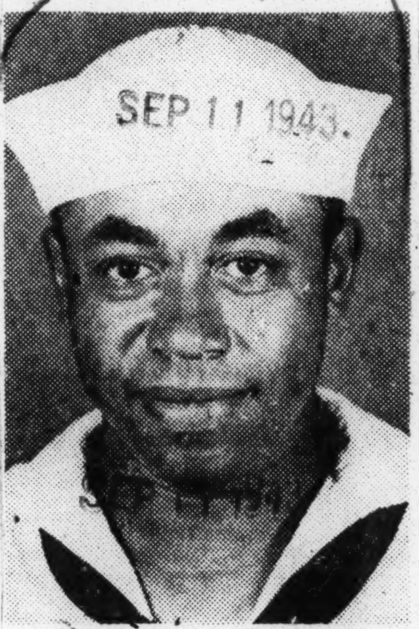
"We contend that abandonment of undemocratic racial segregation in our Army would vastly enhance that Army's effectiveness as a liberating force in foreign lands, for other races and peoples could see in the very composition of our troops the image of that freedom which we profess to bring.

"At the same time it would clear from the minds of our soldiers divisive doubts and questioning, releasing their full potential of devotion to the historic ideals of American democracy. Far from injuring morale and impeding the war effort, 'intermingling' of the races would, we are convinced, build up morale and strengthen the fighting qualities of the Army.

"We know what we are talking about, for the complete racial democracy which has been established on the SS. Booker T Washingt[illegible] embracing merchan and Navy crews alike, has buil an unshakable morale and wil fight fascism which would be har to surpass."

Afro-American
Baltimore, Maryland

No. 1 in Class



SEP 11 1943.

CHESTLEY A. COUSINS, JR., 31, of 1209 St. John Street, Richmond, who was graduated from recruit training with highest honors in his company at the U.S. Naval Training Station at Great Lakes, Ill. Prior to joining the Navy, Cousins was for ten years a bell captain at the Hotel William Byrd. He has qualified for further specialized training at a Navy quartermaster school. The honor man, son of C. A. Cousins, returned to Richmond for boot leave with his wife and father. —Offical U.S. Navy Photo.

Cites Valor Of Negroes In All Nation's Wars

Atlanta, Georgia

Daily World

Indiana Solon Is Speaker At Great Lakes Base

NOV 6 1943

GREAT LAKES, Ill.—(S N S)— The valor of Negroes in this nation's wars since the American Revolution was described recently at Negro Service School graduation exercises at the U. S. Naval Training Station here.

"In suffering and sacrifice, Negroes will not be outdone," Indiana State Senator Robert Brokenbur declared before 1[illegible]9 Bluejackets who completed instruction in one or another of the Navy's various trades.

"The spirit of b[illegible]hood and of noble fellowship surges through them and impels them..to strike down any foe of any Americans," he asserted.

TRACE HEROISM

Quoting famous generals, beginning with George Washington. Senator Brokenbur chronologically traced the heroism of Negro soldiers in order to depict the contribution made by members of his race to "the general welfare and the honor and glory of the United States of America."

"Unlike any other, this is a total war, and the total Negro population, as an important part..is fighting all the foes of democracy with all their souls with all their hearts, with all the[illegible]minds," he continued.

"Members of the graduation class, your country has greater need for you. Into larger fields, harder tasks, and more severe tests it calls you. This call may take you over seas and mountains and deserts. Your ancestors, whose spirit still lives, join in your country's call."

PRESENTED DIPLOMAS

At the conclusion of Senator Brokenbur's address before an audience of the graduating Bluejackets' relatives, friends and shipmates, members of the class were presented Service School certificates by Capt. H. R. Harris, Service School Officer at the Great Lakes training station.

The men completed 16-week courses in one or another of the schools for gunner's [illegible]s, yeomen, storekeepers, quartermasters, signalmen, radiomen, aviation machinists' mates, aviation metalsmiths, and cooks and bakers.

Three men were singled out for special recognition, having been selected as honor men of their respective groups. They were Edward Blevins, of 128 South Bertrand Street, Knoxville, Tenn.; Royal A. Williams, of 240 West 116th Street, New York, N. Y., and Arsene J. Baquet, of 2202 St. Phillips Street, New Orleans, La.

Case Of 18 NMU Members To Be Heard

Norfolk, Virginia

Complaint [illegible] To Interstate C. Commission

NOV 13 1943

Journal and Guide

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(ANP) —With promises to take the case to the "highest court in the land, if need be," NMU Attorney William Standard continued his fight on behalf of 18 Negro members of the NMU who were jim crowed on board a train last year after signing off the SS Seminole.

Standard will soon go before a hearing of the Interstate Commerce Commission where he will demand that the ICC order the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad to discontinue its practice of [illegible]gation and discrimination. The NMU lawyer is [illegible] the cooperation of all organized labor, AFL and CIO.

In June, 1942, 20 members of the crew of the SS Seminole were paid off in Tampa and given first class transportation and meals for a trip to their original shipping port. Eighteen of the 20 members were Negroes.

All had planned to make the trip together, but railroad company officials saw fit to spirit the two whites away from the 18 Negroes and thus present a case of segregation.

On the following morning the 18 seamen were refused dining car service as the diner was "for whites only," and were told that they could either be served privately or go without food. All agreed to go without breakfast.

Startled by the united refusal, the steward wired his boss for the next step; the boss in t[illegible]ld the steward to advise th[illegible] men that they would [illegible] served in the dining car, "a[illegible] completion of the regular meals."

At three o'clock the 18 brothers ate their breakfast in the diner. They were to be told concerning the next meal but that information was never received.

Battle-Scarred Hero

SEP 17 1943

Atlanta, Ga.

Home To Visit Parents

Daily World

COLUMBIA, S. C.—(SNS)— Sporting his campaign ribbon and four stars, representing four major battles, Officers' Steward Mate 3rd Class Alvesta Hart, the son of Mrs. Henrietta Hart-Reid, 1219 Calhoun St., arived in Columbia Tuesday morning for twelve days at home, the first since enlisting in the Navy October 15, 1941. The youth has seen action in the Marshall-Gilbert Islands, the Aleutians and in the Solomons, but is reluctant to tell about them.

JITTERY IN FIRST BATTLE

SEP 17 1943

Sailor Hart, said his shipmates were a little shaky when they had their [illegible] combat engagement, but this wore off, and now a tangle with the Japanese is just routine work. His ship was en route to Pearl Harbor when that port was attacked by the Japanese December 7, 1941. Changing their course, they reached another port and about the middle of January, were in the task force which made the first American attack on the Japanese, held at Marshall-Gilbert Islands. In the Aleutians, their force was attacked by Japanese aircraft, but, he added: "We got the best shots in the Navy on our ship and only a handful of the bombers got away." In the Solomons area, where he has had considerable experience, aircraft batteries on his ship one time knocked out four of seven attacking Japanese planes Fighters got the other three.

BOYS ALL RIGHT BUT MISS HOME

SEP 17 1943

The veteran said the boys liked their duties and [illegible] all right. "But [illegible] nothing like a letter from home," he said. He thinks that the folks ought to write frequently but write briefly, and that they ought to turn in magazines and periodicals for the boys who run for a three-month-old magazine as if it were hot off the press.

There is no color question on his ship, he said. All the men get along fine and they work like a great team, with little fellows offering opinions to higher-ups, who encourage and welcome them. Turning again to his shipmates, the lanky six-foot-two seaman said "all the boys hope the folks back home are keeping up their fight. If they don't fight," he said, "we can't do our best. We want to win this war quickly [illegible] want it over [illegible] do th[illegible] ought to do everything possible to help win the war first. One of the best things all of them can do it to save their money in War Bonds."

SEP 17 1943

Continuing, he said, "If we get the weapons, we'll win. We've come out on top in all our meetings with the Japs. I think we have the best men, the best ships and the best weapons. All we ask is to keep them and get even better ones."

When his leave is up, he will rejoin his ship in a California port. Although he has spent time in many Pacific ports, he swears by the "girls back home." "I'd rather have one of my own girls," he said, "than a million of those I've seen."

Began With Navy in 1893

Afro-American

Serving in His Fifth War

RICHMOND — Marion Robertson, ship's cook first class, who has served in the navy in five wars and campaigns, has just marked the fiftieth anniversary of his service in the navy.

Baltimore, Maryland

DEC 4 - 1943

MARION ROBERTSON
—Photo by the Browns, Richmond.

Mr. Robertson, who lives at 605 Corbin Street, is serving now at the Richmond Naval Training Station.

He has seen thirty years of active service. and returned to duty after the present war began following twenty years in retirement.

Mr. Robertson served in the Spanish-American War, Philippine Insurrection, Boxer Rebellion in China, World War I and World War II.

He sailed on the gunboat Bennington, and the battleships Oregon, Kentucky, West Virginia and Virginia.

His medals are the Sampson, West India campaign, two for the Philippine campaign, the Boxer medal, World War I medal, and Virginia World War I medal.

Recently officers and enlisted men at his station honored him to mark his first enlistment on November 8, 1893, by giving him a new uniform with eight gold service stripes, eagle and chevrons for good conduct, eleven campaign bars, a wrist watch and a navy pin.

His son, Marion, Jr., is in the navy and is studying diesel engineering at Hampton, Va.

Daily World

Atlanta, Georgia

Changes In Navy Training Provided

WASHINGTON—(SNS)—Sweeping changes in Negro training facilities, designed to centralize the regiments' recruit training program and to provide additional space for men of Outgoing Unit and Service School have been completed at the U S. Naval Training Station, Great Lakes, Illinois.

OCT 29 1943

Under the revisions, Camp Robert Smalls will no longer be used for recruit training, but instead becomes the home of OGU, Service School, Ship's Company, Music and Entertainment Department and Security Watch, while Camps Mofett and Lawrence are to be utilized solely for recruit training. The former camp had housed the outgoing unit in addition to recruits since July 3 when Camp Moffett became the third unit to be devoted to the training of Negroes at Great Lakes.

Of the companies in training in Camp Smalls all but a half-dozen have been moved to either of the other two training sites. These will remain in their original camp until completion of training, with the last company scheduled to be graduated October 18.

Recruit facilities of Camp Smalls, such as the rifle range, gas chamber and obstacle course, will continue to be used by recruits, Cmdr. D. W. Armstrong, assistant recruit training officer in charge of Negro training, explained. Recreational and athletic equipment of the camp will be used by activities newly moved into the area.

The latest phase of the Negro expansion program is in line with the Navy Department's announcement in Washington a few months ago that an ever increasing number of Negroes were entering its ranks through Selective Service. The announcement estimated that 15 per cent of the men inducted into the Navy this year would be Negroes and pointed out that most of these would be assigned to Great Lakes.

The program got underway at Great Lakes on May 1, when Camp Lawrence was turned over to Negro sailors and continued with the construction of a $200,000 Service School building in Camp Smalls and the conversion of Camp Moffett to Negro training. Camp Smalls—parent Negro unit—was opened in June of last year.

Gets Honor Of Christening "John LaFarge"

Daily World

NOV 23 1943

Atlanta, Georgia

Marylander Chosen Under Employee Selective Plan

WASHINGTON — (SNS— Mrs. Robert B. Parkker of 2335 Madison avenue, Baltimore, Md., had the honor of being the first Negro woman chosen under the Employee Selective Sponsor Plan to christen a Liberty Ship at the Bethelehem-Shipyard in Baltimore the Maritime Commission announced this week.

NOV 23 1943

Mrs. Parker served as sponor of the SS JOHN LAFARGE, the 239th Liberty Ship built at this yard, which was launched Nov. 12. The LaFarge took the water after being on the way for 27 days. It was the sixth Liberty ship launched at Bethlehem-Fairfield this

Under the Employee Selective Sponsor Plan, the more than 20,000 mployees at the plant hold a drawing to see which department is to select the sponsor; then that department holds a drawing among the workers who have not missed a day's wrok within the last thirty days, and the winner may choose his wife, daughter, mother or sister as sponsor: The winner in this instance was Robert B Parker, a Negro in the Labor Department, and he chose his wife.

NOV 23 1943

John LaFarge, for whom the ship was named, was an outstanding American artist born in New York city on March 31, 1935 of French parentage. He received instructiosn in drawing from his grandfather, Binsse de St. Victor, pointer of miniatures and studied law and architecture. La Farge painted landscape, still, and figure alike in the early sixties. He later turned his attention to stained glass , and became president of the Society of Mural Painters. Some of his important commissions included windows of St. Thomas's St. Peter's tha Paulist Church, the Brick Presbyterian Church, the Church of the Incarnation, and the Church of the Ascension, all in New York City; Trinity Church, Buffalo, N. Y., and the "Battle Window" in Memorial Hall at Harvard University. He was also a prolific in oil and water color, as seen notably in some watercolor sketches, the result of a voyage in the South Seas, shown in 1895. He became president of the Society of American Artists,a member of the Academy of Design in 1869, and an officer of the Legion of Honor of France. He died in 1910.

The Empoyee Selective Sponsor Plan of the Bethlehem-Fairfield yard has done much to cut down absenteeism, the management reports.

47j-1943

Boston Port Captain Lauds His Lone Colored Officer

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md

Couldn't Ask for Finer Bunch Than 200 Colored Among His 600 Coast Guardsmen

By JOE SHEPHARD

BOSTON.—Sitting in a tiny office on the fourth floor of a waterfront building is the rugged and graying Capt. Frank M. Meals, captain of the Port of Boston and port security officer for the First Naval Coast Guard District.

OCT 23 1943

A veteran of thirty-seven years in the coast guard, Captain Meals came up through the ranks, learning about and handling men on the way up.

Asked what he thought about the colored coast guardsmen under his command, he said:

"For nearly a year now, I have have about 200 colored boys with me. They're a fine bunch of lads. You couldn't ask for better. We have one colored commissioned officer, one of the finest in my outfit and second in command of the port guard detail in which there are about 600 men of both races.

OCT 23 1943

Damned Well Pleased

"The co-operation is perfect. I'm damned well peased. There are few problems of discipline and few infractions of regulations. I couldn't want a better bunch of men."

Citing the spirit of co-operation between colored and white coast guardsmen, he related the following incident:

"Some weeks ago a group of colored girls planned a USO dance for the men. At the last minute the arrangements they had made with their orchestra fell through.

Musicians Come Through

"They called us to see whether the coast guard orchestra could play for them, but our orchestra had another engagement.

"However, there are a few musicians scattered through the port company who are not with the orchestra. Some of them are colored and some are white, but as soon as they heard of the fix the people were in they got together, applied for leave, and went out and played for the dance. I understand that everybody had a fine time."

OCT 23 1943

2nd Midshipman

OCT 23 1943

CYRIL J. JONES, of New York City, 1941 graduate of Tufts College and now a junior at the Harvard University Medical School, who was sworn in October [illegible] in Boston as a midshipman in the U.S. Navy Medical Reserve Corps. He thus becomes the second colored man to be given a ranking [illegible] navy [illegible]mount to a com[illegible]n, [illegible] being his classmate, B[illegible]ard W. Robinson of Boston College. Upon the completion of their medical course at Harvard they will be commissioned lieutenants, junior grade, in the Navy Med[illegible]orps. Both are st[illegible]erbilt Hall at the [illegible]d Medical School in Boston. Jones's twin brother, William J. Jones, also a 1941 Tufts graduate, is employed by the Signal Corps in New Jersey and is at present spending two weeks at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in Cambridge, Mass., in the radiation laboratory.

OCT 23 1943

Chief Witness In Torture Case Sees Three Sea Battles

Atlanta. Georgia
Daily World

Sporting a mustache and a whiff of a goatee, and togged down in Navy uniform, 19-year-old Quinter South, who figured in Atlanta's sensational torture case several months back, breezed in from sea during the week-end to visit his mother, Mrs. Rosa South, 3[illegible] Thayer St., S. E.

AUG [illegible] 1943

A steward[illegible] class, South joined the Navy one year ago and has seen seven months in the South Pacific. He wears three small stars on the upper left side of his jacket, a reminder that he has been in three sea battles.

An enemy torpedo hit his ship in the third battle, South said.

The South Atlanta youth was chief witness in the "hot iron" case which resulted in an Atlanta policeman standing two trials in Federal court here. The first time the case came up, the jury was unable to reach a verdict. At the second trial, the officer was acquitted.

South claimed he was burned by the policeman with a photographer's iron at the City Jail while officers were making an effort to obtain a confession from him in connection with a petty burglary.

The case attracted wide attention after white groups demanded a thorough investigation. — R. M. R.

Leathernecks Celebrate 1st Anniversary

Daily World
Atlanta, Ga.

Marines Advance Rapidly At New River, N. C.

AUG 30 1943

NEW RIVER, N. C. — (ANP) — Appropriate ceremonies were held last week at the training center in Camp Lejeune, celebrating the first anniversary of the induction of Howard P. Perry, of Charlotte, the first Negro admitted into the Marine corps.

Since their enrollment a year ago the "Leathernecks" have advanced rapidly in the service reporting today several corporals and sergeants. Many have been assigned to battle areas overseas, while others have demonstrated an uncanny knowledge of amphibious tactics. The marines have also organized athletic clubs, an orchestra and a glee club as extra-curricular activities.

Originally the camp site for the 1,200 men expected to be enlisted was a small plot of ground, but has been expanded into seven different camps because of increase and enrollments. Montford Point Camp No. 1, although in process of construction is being partially used for the training of new recruits. It is larger than all the other camps put together. Additional Negroes are planned for the corps in the future and these likewise will reveive their basic training here.

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

Liberty Ship Named for Negro Editor

AUG 26 1943

(Sp[illegible] to the Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25. — The fifth United States Liberty ship in a series to be named for a Negro has been given the name of Robert Lee Vann, late editor and publisher of the weekly "Pittsburgh Courier." The ship, a 11,500-ton freighter, is under construction at the South Portland (Me.) yards of the New England Shipbuilding Corp. and will be launched late in September or early in October.

Vann was born at Ahoskie, N. C., Aug. 27, 1879, and died Oct. 24, 1940, having been educated at Virginia Union University and the University of Pittsburgh. He was for 30 years a practicing lawyer in Pittsburgh, closely associated with those who founded the Courier in 1910. Among other political offices he held was that of special assistant to the U. S. Attorney General.

AUG 26 1943

Ships [illegible] named for Neg[illegible] the Liberty series are the Booker T. Washington, the Frederick Douglass, the George Washington, Carver and the John Merrick. The Washington and the Carver, now engaged in war service, are manned by mixed crews, captained respectively by Hugh Mulzac and Adrian Richardson, both Negroes.

NMU Wants Richardson to Have Another Ship

New York, N. Y
Daily Worker

OCT 30 1943

Seniority Rights of Torpedoed Skipper Urged in spite of Criticisms

NEW YORK—The assignment of Captain Adrian Richardson

the National Maritime Union, the AFRO learned Monday.

When he returned from his maiden voyage, some members of the crew are said to have refused to stay on. New members were assigned for the second and ill-fated voyage.

Upon their return to the States, after being picked up by a British rescue vessel, five hours after their ship had been torpedoed by a Nazi U-boat, some of the crew expressed dissatisfaction.

Torpedoed Skippers

The union holds that skippers on torpedoed ships have preference over the assignments of other captains

The record of Captain Hugh Mulzac, skipper on the Booker T. Washington, was praised by union and maritime officials this week.

Captain Mulzac is not only a master mariner, but he is a leader of men, the officials told the AFRO. War Shipping Administration officials regard him as one of the ablest skippers plying the sea lanes.

OCT 30 1943

Mulzac Commodore Captain

It was revealed this week for the first time that when the large convoys arive at their destinations in the war zones, if Captain Mulzac is in the convoy, he becomes Commodore Captain and directs.

It was also pointed out that when the Booker T. arrived at Casablanca and at the Strait of Gilbraltar, Captain Mulzac demonstrated outstanding ability in the handling of his ship.

His calculations are accurate. He maneuvers his ship to a 45-degree angle with the greatest of ease. Both union and maritime officials had nothing but praise for the way he handles his men. When he enters a union meeting held by his crew members, he enters as a fellow union member, and not as their skipper, they said.

Navy Blasted For Bias In Jobs At Washington

SEP 19 1943

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(ANP)—Ample public attention has been focused on private industry as the chief offender against Negroes in the matter of employment, the government itself, particularly the navy department, has been getting away with "murder" in the matter of Negroes working that "democratic" department.

Always a sore spot and always aloof and holding itself apart from public criticism, the navy got its first boost toward jim-crowism under Woodrow Wilson when Franklin Delano Roosevelt was assistant secretary to Josephus Daniels, the North Carolina politician who held down the secretaryship. The 'muster roll" division was then set up up John Risher. This was an all-Negro unit, with colored men and women employed as clerks. It still exists and is still an all-Negro segregated unit, according to workers reports.

PROMOTIONS SLOW

Over 15,000 whites are employed. Expanding to include 10 or 12 temporary buildings, many Negroes have been employed, but few composed to the white mostly as messengers, clerk-typists with a salary of $1,440 a sthe maximum for most Negroes. There are few who reach the pay bracket of $1,800. One woman in a division who has been there since World War One now receives $1620 per year.

In the cafeteria whites do not permit Negroes to sit beside them, nor at the same tables, declare girls who have worked in the department for almost two years.

Another statement by these girls is that Negro stenographers do not take dictation from white officers. They work chiefly in pools and do routine work, with the brass hats fram Dixie, who appear to be in the majority, bringing their traditions into the department with them.

IDEA IS SCORNED

One officer, whose brother taught at a noted Negro university in Pennsylvania, boasted that he knew Negroes and they should be 'kept in their place." These complaints have frequently been brought to light, but no one can tell the navy department where to head in.

It was suggested nearly two years ago that the navy, in its expansion program, employ a Negro in the public relations division and set up a better relationship with the Negro press. The navy scorned this idea and pua all matters relating to Negroes in the hands of a white man, who later was transferred out of the office to sea duty. Rumors had it he was too friendly to the Negro problem.

Only after a near revolution in the department did Negro enlisted personnel get consideration, with such persons as Comdr. Armstrong and Assistant Secretary Ralph Bard leading the fight. Any peron who showed any signs of friendship to the Negro cause was immediately branded by his associates and almost became an outcast.

CIVILIANS WORSE

This, however, was in the enlisted division. The civilian personnel division is even worse and in the quarter of a century since World War 1, conditions have grown worse until now when Franklin Delano Roosevelt is President and preaches about freedoms, the navy department is the worst government department employing large numbers of civilian personnel and is ready for a thorough housecleaning in the matter of discriminations against Negroes.

"HE'S A GOOD MACHINE GUNNER"

The Worker
New York, N. Y.

OCT 10 1943

Walter Davis, Negro messman in the U. S. Navy on the USS South Dakota, who stuck by his machine gun last October firing at attacking Japanese planes though riddled with bullets. Davis, still convalescing, is making the rounds of Philadelphia's war plants selling war bonds to the worker.

Would-be WAVE Recruits Bring on D.C. Heat Wave

Afro-American Baltimore, Md.

AUG 21 1943

By JOSEPH SHEPHARD
WASHINGTON

The D.C. WAVE recruiting office closed for half an hour, Friday, and members of its personnel said that it was because of the heat.

But since Friday's highest temperatures fell eleven degrees short of the 98 degrees of a few days earlier, throughout which the air-conditioned office stayed open, it must have been the humidity.

Maybe Just Hot Time

Or perhaps, the fact that six colored girls went to the office to try to join had something to do with it.

Normally the WAVE recruiting office opens at nine in the morning and stays open until nine at night. But Friday wasn't normal.

Enlistment Attempted

Well Friday started becoming abnormal at the WAVE recruiting office around 4 p.m. when two young women, Miss Hazel Lee and Miss Althea Jefferson, went into the office to attempt to enlist.

A male navy recruit who was standing outside of the recruiting office gave the low whistle and decided that he had picked the right branch of the service.

He went into a drugstore and called the AFRO with the suggestion that a reporter be sent down. He gave such an enthusiastic description of the two grls that the paper decided to send a photographer.

In the meantime the two young women were being told about the WAVES by a WAVE ensign.

Photog Arrives

The photographer looked into the door, gave a whistle and wished that he wasn't 4-F so that he could join the navy too.

After telling the WAVE ensign that he would like to make a picture of the two young women, he hotfooted it upstairs to see the public relations officer and get permission.

When permission was not forthcoming the photographer left the building and waited outside to meet Miss Lee and Miss Jefferson. In the meantime two other colored young women came down the street, saw Misses Lee and Jefferson coming out and went inside.

The WAVE ensign had left the office, so Yeoman Smith began interviewing the two newcomers, Miss Velma Hammond and Miss Bernice Jacobs.

Office Closed

In the midst of the filling out of their cards he was called from the room. Upon returning he, obviously flustered and embarrassed, told them that it was very hot and that he had been ordered to close office.

He requested them to leave by a rear door, but Miss Jacobs insisted that she had left her car in front of the building and that leaving by a rear door would cause her to have to walk all of the way around the block.

Outside, several reporters had assembled by this time and were talking to Misses Jefferson and Lee.

Continue to Arrive

As Misses Jacobs and Hammond left the recruiting station, two more girls, Misses Cleomine Lewis and Cora E. Wright attempted to enter. They were told that Yeoman Smith was sorry, but that he had been ordered to close the office because of the heat.

The young women left, went around the corner to a store, and came back past the recruiting station just 25 minutes later, found it open and went inside.

Given Applications

Yeoman Smith was still on duty. "Whew, isn't it hot," he greeted them. "We closed up for a while, but felt a breeze and decided to reopen."

The young women received application blanks and literature about the WAVES and were told that there was no place in the service just then, but that they would be notified as soon as action had been taken which would permit enrollment of colored women.

On Saturday, when 97 degree temperature forced the closing of many federal buildings and the sending home of 30,000 workers, the WAVE recruiting office stayed open.

But then, Saturday was a normal day.
]

47J- 1943

All-Colored Gun Crew on Coast Guard Ship Praised by Officer

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.
OCT 16 1943

Lt. Clarence Samuels Heads Mixed Deck Crew; Says Youngsters Did Swell Job on "General Duty Cruise."

By JOE SHEPHARD
(Approved f[illegible]lication)

WASHINGTON

Clad in the steel gray battle dress of the United States Coast Guard, a patrol craft sailed into an Eastern port recently following a "general duty" cruise.

Bristling with armament, her once canopied decks packed with "Y" guns and their deadly depth charges, the ship moved into the harbor with an attitude of being ready for anything.

The alert young crew of coast-Gardsmen who manned her decks, guns, and engine rooms gave the same impression.

Young Crew Praised

Shortly after she tied up at the dock two members of her crew swung aloft in Bos'n's chairs to begin swabbing down the "mainstick." Other members of the crew began swarming up and down the gangplank in a steady stream as they started provisioning her for another voyage.

Queries of where she had been brought only the terse answer of "g[illegible] duty."

The deck offic[illegible]t. (j.g.) Clarence Samuels, highest ranking colored officer in naval services, spoke glowingly of the work of the youngsters in the crew.

"One-third of the deck crew is colored," he said, "and the boys really did a swell job."

Gunners in Action

He then introduced Chief Petty Officer Frank Batha, commander and instructor of the ship's gun crew, all of whom are colored and the majority of whom are from Washington, D.C.

Chief Batha, hardly more than a youngster himself, and obviously proud of his crew, smiled and said: "They're a swell bunch of kids."

It was then explained that the gun crew had been organized slightly more than a month, and that its members had already seen action in battle.

Too B[illegible] Chang[illegible]form

Lieutenant Samuels then came back on deck. He was still wearing a warrant officer's uniform. Asked why he hadn't had his insignia changed, he said, "I just haven't had time."

His promotion to lieutenant (j.g.) from the rank of warrant officer came through three weeks ago.

Navy to Get Most of Men Called in '44

Baltimore, Md.
Afro-American

Army Almost Has Its Quota, Needs Replacements Mainly

COMPLAINTS MOUNT AGAINST NAVY J.C.

Seamen Learn Trades, but Are Assigned as Laborers

OCT 16 1943

By JOHN JASPER

WASHINGTON.

Some half a million colored men who will be called to the colors next year will be assigned to the Navy.

Nobody here has issued such a statement, but that is the way the signs point and it isn't promising.

The facts are that the Army has some 750,000 colored men now, roughly 10 per cent of the Army's personnel.

No New Army Units

All new Army selectees will be utilized for replacement, as no new units are contemplated.

To get 12 million in the armed services, five more million must be called, which means roughly a half million colored and the Navy is the spot that will get them.

The reaso[illegible]e pros[illegible]s disheartening [illegible]three-fold.

1. The Navy has made little use of colored seamen save as stewards on seagoing ships. Draftees trained in Hampton's trade school are assigned to laboring jobs as munitions handlers in shore depots, in some cases under civilian direction.

No Commissioned Officers

2. There isn't a single commissioned officer in the Navy. In fact, the boast has been made that the Navy is no place for educated colored draftees. Petty officers' ratings comparable to corporal and sergeant in the army are likewise withheld.

3. The Coast Guard is a branch of the Navy. It has one commissioned o[illegible] colored coast gua[illegible]n ar[illegible] ships, guarding convoys and transporting troops or landing supplies.

Coast guardsmen can get promotions. This is the only decent department of the Navy, but its liberal treatment of colored men has been frowned upon by the Navy, which feels that large Coast Guard use of colored men on seagoing ships is too much of a contrast to the Navy, which uses colored men as waiters and lackeys.

In Seattle, Washington

On ships everybody, colored and white, must live together. The U.S. Naval Air Station at Seattle, Washington, has separate barracks and mess halls for trained seamen. Forty per cent of the sailors at this station are to be colored.

In New England

Skilled seamen, trained in Hampton's n[illegible]e school, are in a New En[illegible]depot, handling shells, mines and explosives.

They supplant civilian stevedores who were formerly paid up to $80 a week for this work. These men complain that they are not permitted to work at their trade, are denied promotion, and take orders from civilians.

At Great Lakes

The largest naval training school is at Great Lakes, Ill. From there this letter came this week:

"You who are in civilian life gather your forces and help the colored sailor, who is suffering a living death. Distrust your Congressmen. The organization to concentrate upon is the Bureau of Naval Personnel.

"The problem of the colored man in the Navy has been left alone long enough.

Thousands Trained

"There is not a single colored commissioned officer in the whole of Great Lakes and literally thousands of colored men have been trained here.

"Not a single colored chief petty officer leads a colored company, yet third class petty officers are doing the work but are denied the rank because of their color.

"D. O. Van Ness, a white man, was sent to Washington to head up 'colored' personnel. Every intelligent colored man of leadership quality is wasted in the Navy.

No Colored Doctors

"Recruits go to a hospital and they are impressed that colored doc[illegible]urses and dentists do not exis[illegible] (Edit[illegible]ote: Applicants for the post [illegible]urgeon have been refused.)

"They go out on the drill field and there stands a white company commander, usually from Texas.

"They go to church on Sunday and they must conclude that a colored minister is not good enough for the Navy, for there is a white chaplain only to tell them of Christianity, faith, and democracy.

Even Swimming Teacher Is White

"Most recently a white swimming instructor was named chief petty officer in charge of three colored Navy camps here. A colored man cannot even teach swimming.

"Up here in Illinois, the Navy has introduced segregation, refusal to serve colored seamen in certain centers, segregation of white and colored sailors at camp movies by compulsion."

Conditions in the Navy can be changed for colored draftees, but not until far more pressure is exerted upon the White House than is being used at present."

Knox, King Inactive

From where I sit, it now appears that neither the President, Secretary Knox nor Admiral King proposes to bring back the good old days of 1776 to 1870 when colored men se[illegible] as seamen and g[illegible]ners, and, as Commodore Chauncey declared in 1814, "They are among the best men on my ship, the Pike."

Their attitude apparently is that they will sit tight until public opinion compels them to act, and to date that public opinion hasn't expressed itself forcibly enough. With 500,000 men going into the Navy next year, it might.

Knox Asked If WAVES Will Admit Colored

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

CHICAGO, Ill. — Pointing out that w[illegible] the question of admitting [illegible]ored women to the WAVES has [illegible]hey have been referred to various departments for answers, the Negro Newspaper Publishers' Association, this week, took the question directly to Secretary of the Navy Knox, asking that he advise them if and when such enlistments will begin.

The communication, sent over the signature of Miss Olive M. Diggs, chairman of the committee on naval policy, said that the controversy on the policy of the WAVES can only be cleared by a statement directly from the secretary.

Public Should Know

Other questions posed by the committee included:

Does the Navy Department intend to open the program V-12 to colored persons? If this is true, when will the Bureau of Public Relations release a story to the press?

Do[illegible] Navy Department intend [illegible]employ [illegible]ored person in its Bureau of Public Relations?

While we recognize the necessity for reduction in personnel and other activities of this nature, at the same time we feel that the Navy Department will receive better response from its expanding program if a public relations program is instituted.

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

GRADUATE FIRST HOSPITAL ASSISTANTS

CAMP ROBERT SMALLS, Great Lakes, Ill. — (ANP) — The Navy took another step toward higher ratings for Negro sailors Wednesday when the first group of hospital assistants, first class, was graduated. There were 7[illegible] boys in the class drawn from all over the United States. Some were seamen on active duty, others were scattered among stations before becoming part of this specially selected group. They were taught in a mixed group, some 300 of the class being white. After graduation they will serve a period in hospital laboratories somewhere, later acquiring the title of Pharmacists' Mate.

Steamer Crew Was Reported Lost in 1942

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

Families Were Notified and $5,000 in Insurance Paid

JAPANESE REPORT RESCUE OF 23 MEN

Husband of New Yorker Not Among Those Listed

By DAVIS LEE
(Editor, N.J. AFRO-AMERICAN)

NEW YORK. — Twenty-three crew members of an Export Lines freighter (name censored) which was torpedoed and reported lost in the South Pacific in December, are being held as prisoners by the Japanese, the AFRO-AMERICAN learned Monday.

The freighter, which was used in the Far East as a trader before the war, was assigned to the Export Lines of New York last fall, and when she sailed from her home port she carried a crew of 41, over half of whom were colored.

The ship sailed from an East Indian Port the last of December, and when she was reported overdue at her next destination, efforts to locate her failed.

$5,000 Insurance Paid

In January the vessel was given up as lost. Relatives of the crew members were notified and after the elapse of several more weeks each beneficiary was paid $5,000 under the Government's War Risk Insurance regulation.

Last week twenty-three beneficiaries [illegible] said to have been notified by the government that the men are being [illegible] in a Japanese prison camp.

Among those reported to be held are two well known in union circles, they are Henry Bowen and Clarence Wedell of New York City.

Husband Not Listed

Mrs. Arthur Floyd, 109 W. 112th Street, told the AFRO-AMERICAN Monday that her husband was a crew member on the lost freighter, and that she received a letter from naval authorities last week stating that her husband is not listed among the 23 being held by the Japs.

Liberty Ship Crew Takes Rap at Army Jim Crow

Afro-American Baltimore, Maryland

Booker T's Example Cited as Proof that Democracy Boosts Morale and Strength

NEW YORK — (ANP)—Pointing to their own crew as an example of true democracy, the Booker T. Washington mixed crew declared that the abo[illegible] of jim crow throughout the armed forces would build morale and strengthen the fighting qualities of our army.

The statement was made in answer to a letter from Maj. Gen. J. A. Ulio of the War Department, who defended the army's policy of segregation.

A letter from Navy Secretary Knox brought forth satisfaction from the Washington crew members. The letter was in answer to the crew's communication on the fine relations between gun and merchant crew aboard ship.

Ulio's Letter Quoted

The policy of the War Department is not to intermingle colored and white enlisted personnel in the same regimental organizations, stated Ulio's letter.

"This policy has proven satisfactory over a long period of years, and to make changes would produce situations destructive to morale and detrimental to the war effort," the letter continued.

The crew regarded Ulio's answer as "the stock excuse of lazy or dish[illegible] minds which refuse to recog[illegible] the tr[illegible]ure of this democratic war."

They further stated:

Example for the World

"We contend that abandonment of undemocratic racial segregation in our army would vastly enhance that army's effectiveness as a liberating force in foreign lands, for other races and peoples could see in the very composition of our troops the image of that freedom which we profess to bring.

"At the same time, it would clear from the minds of our soldiers divisive doubts and questioning, releasing their full potential of devotion to the historic ideals of American democracy.

"Far from injuring morale and impeding the war effort, 'intermingling' of the races would, we are c[illegible]ed, build up morale and st[illegible]en the f[illegible]g qualities of the army.

"We know what we are talking about, for the complete racial democracy which has been established on the S.S. Booker T. Washington, embracing merchant and navy crews alike, has built an unshakable morale and will to fight fascism which would be hard to surpass."

NOV 3 1943

NOV 13 1943

Missing In Action

Daily World Atlanta, Georgia

BEN CUTHBERT, JR. —Steward's Mate, second class of the United States Navy, whose parents were notified that he is missing in action at their residence, 326 Lemon Street, Marietta, last week. Marietta's first colored casualty, Cuthbert was a former student of Perkinson High School and volunteered for naval service a few months before his 18th birthday in June, 1943. He had one furlough home and wrote to his parents often, the last letter being received by them about two weeks ago dated November 15. He had asked his mother's prayers, as if he had learned that life was uncertain. He was the oldest of six children. His parents, brothers and sisters are anxiously waiting another message as to his whereabouts.

Baltimore. Md
Afro-American

B. T. Washington Crew Says Real Democracy On Ship

NEW YORK, N. Y.—(ANP) — Pointing to their own crew as an example of true democracy, the Booker T. Washington crew, mixed one, has declared that the abolition of jim crow throughout the armed forces would build morale and strengthen th[illegible]hting qualities of our Army. The statement was in answer to a letter from Maj. Gen. J. A. Ulio of the War Department, who defended the Army's policy of segregation.

A letter from Navy Secretary Knox brought forth satisfaction from the Washington crew members. The letter was in answer to the crews' commu[illegible]tion on the fine relations b[illegible]en gun and merchant crew aboard ship.

NOV 3 1943

Daily World Atlanta. Ga.

Volunteers Negro Navy Continue To Increase

During the month of August, tne largest number of 17-year-old South Carolina Negroes volunteered for the Navy tha[illegible] any single month, and are now bluejackets in the U. S. Navy. Of the 63 volunteers, 32 enlitsed as apprentice seamen, and were sent to Great Lakes for their basic training. During their training period, all of the enlistees will be given a series of intelligence tests to determine their fitness for the Navy's Service School where they will receive special training in a particular skill. More than 18,000 Negroes will receive this specialized training by July 1st of 1944.

Local officials point out that more interest is being shown by Negroes in this state in the SEABEES — the Navy's Construction Battalions. Many Negroes who are skilled in some construction or mechanical trade have already been given ratings as high as Petty Officers second class and sent to Camp Peary Magruder, Virginia, for their basic training. A total of 45 Negroes entered this branch of the service during August. There appear still many good openings for skilled or semi-skilled Negroes between the age of 18 and 50. Upon the completion of their basic training the SEABEES [illegible]e sent to a Naval base outside th[illegible]tinenta[illegible]s of the United States.

A total of 278 Negroes enterec the Navy through the channels of Selective Service during August 204 qualified as apprentice seamen and 74 were accepted as Steward's Mates, third class.

Chief Specialist John F. Potts stated that the increased interest shown by Negroes in the Navy is due to three factors: (1) The good reports now being made by eNgro youths returning home on leave; (2) Most of the trainees not only are well pleased with the physical fitness and recreational activities, but are also greatly impressed with the thoroughness of the Navy training program; (3) They are taking advan[illegible] of their opportunity to become a specialist [illegible] a particular skill which will no[illegible]ly increase their rate and pay while in the Naval Service, but to help provide a maens of earning a livelihood when they return to civilian life.

SEP 10 1943

5th Liberty Ship, the Vann, Goes Down the Ways

Afro-American
Baltimore. Md.

Publishers Wife Smashes Bottle on Second Trial

OCT 16 1943

C. C. SPAULDING IS SPEAKER AT YARDS

Ceremony Called Largest for Portland's 114 Launchings

By PAUL D. DAVIS

PORTLAND, Maine.—The fifth ship to be named for a distinguished colored person, launched here Sunday, was the SS Robert L. Vann, named for the late Pittsburgh publisher.

The 10,500 ton Liberty freighter, launched in dry dock just a few weeks after its keel was laid, was christened by Mrs. Vann, who, on the second attempt, crashed the bottle of champagne against the ship's side and uttered the traditional words of "I christen thee the SS Robert L. Vann."

Prattis O[illegible]s Ce[illegible]

The launching prog[illegible] was opened by P. L. Prattis of the Pittsburgh Courier, who introduced C. C. Spaulding of Durham, N.C., who had spoken at the launching of the SS John Merrick, named for his business partner, a few months ago at Wilmington, N.C.

Mr. Spaulding said, "This could not happen in any other country." The Rev. C. E. Askew, 77-year-old minister of Detroit, gave the launching prayer.

Following the brief exercise, the launching party [illegible]ned to the general offices [illegible] the compan[illegible] where the vice president, Andrew B. Sides, presented an engraved silver plate bearing a picture of the SS Robert L. Vann, with the time and place of launching and the sponsor inscribed thereon, to Mrs. Vann.

Mrs. Vann Responds

Mrs. Vann responded, saying "this is the happiest moment in my life, and it is a thrill that is indescribable."

Although there were two other launchings at the yard on Sunday, this was the most important and company officials admitted that it was the largest of 114 launching parties and preparations that they had ever had.

The New England Ship Building Company, with all types of merit flags, has over 33,000 employees, over 500 of them colored. This has caused the colored population in the City of Portland to increase many fold and doubled the town's 70,000 population.

Most of the 500 colored women and men employed are in skilled capacities and all are working on the Liberty ships in which the yard specializes.

Other Notables Present

Included in the group of launching visitors were:

Homer S. Brown, Thomas E. Kilgallen, president of the Pittsburgh City Council; Ward Freeman, Maritime Commission; Edward O. Tabor, president of the Interracial Committee of Allegheny County; Assistant City Solicitor Wilbur C. Douglass;

Emmett J. Scott, Congressman William Dawson, Chicago; Julian Black, F. Smith, Maritime U.; Bishop C. J. Walls, Robert Brown, Detroit, Mich.

Two Pullman cars that left Pittsburgh at 8:23 Saturday morning reached Portland at 8 on Sunday morning.

Following luncheon at the Hotel Lafayette and the cutting of the huge cake with a picture of the SS Robert L. Vann, R. L. Prattis presided as master of ceremonies while the following persons spoke:

Company Officials Speak

Officials of the New England Ship Building Corporation: Chester Ch[illegible], president; Andrew B. Sides, executive officer; Walter Greene, vice president, and Mrs. Herrick, labor relations expert for New England yards.

A message was read from Wendell Willkie; a white employee, Andy Pattus; and a colored employee, Kenneth Sharpe, spoke; Ward Freeman of the Maritime Commission; Ferdinand Smith, secretary of the National Maritime Union.

Mrs. Ira F. Lewis, on behalf of her husband, presented a picture of Mr. Vann to the ship's master, and Mrs. Vann gave books to the crew.

Mercury Hard on Visitors

From a mercury of 79 degrees on Saturday afternoon in Portland, the temperature dropped to the lower 30's on Sunday morning at the time of the launching exercise, making it very uncomfortable for those who had arrived expecting the New England Indian summer.

Capt. John Godfrey, U.S. Maritime Service, of New York City, has been named to command the SS Robert L. Vann. Besides having had twenty-five years of maritime experience, he has been an employee of the New York Post Office for the past fourteen years.

Chief officer of the ship will be Lieut. Commander Adolphus Folkes, a native of New York, who served as chief officer on the first Liberty ship, the Booker T. Washington, commanded by Capt. Hugh Mulzac.

Other [illegible]ers [illegible]ew ship, which w[illegible] have a[illegible]rew, are Walter E. Harris, Jr., Pittsburgh, junior engineer, and William H. Simmons, E. Providence, R.I., deck carpenter and draftsman.

OCT 16 1943

1943 - 47j

College Graduates Are 'Discouraged' By Recruiting Officer

AUG 28 1943

Courier Pittsburgh, Pa.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 26—(ANP)—Six girls were rebuffe when they sought vainly to join the WAVES at a recruiting offic Friday afternoon. Although two were able to wangle application out of the recruiting officer, every means of discouraging them wa made, even to closing down the office because "it was too hot."

Two of the girls entered the office first. They were Hazel Lee of Cleveland, graduate of the New York Secretarial school, and of the Howard School of Dentistry as a hygienist; and Althea Jefferson of Washington, Pa., a stenographer and Howard student. Their names and addresses were taken, they were given literature and told that "no plans" had yet been made for them.

SHOWN THROUGH DOOR

As they left, Zelma Hammond of San Francisco and Bernice Jacobs of Los Angeles entered the office. Miss Hammond received her bachelor's degree in biology and economics at San Francisco State college, while Miss Jacobs, a graduate of the University of California, has taught school in Texas and is now engaged on her master's in American history. The yeoman was taking the name of Miss Hammond when a superior officer summoned him. Another carried on and got as far as the name of Miss Jacobs when an unidentified officer came through and told them they were closing for the day since the heat was terrific. The yeoman never finished taking the address, and the front door was closed. They were given literature and asked to leave by the rear, refused, and were finally shown through the front door.

About a half hour later Cleomine D. Lewis of Tulsa, Okla., and Cora E. Wright, Lancaster, S. C., sought to apply. Miss Lewis has her degree in English from Virginia Union university and is a stenographer, while Miss Wright is a graduate of South Carolina State college, has taught two years, and now attends Howard. Upon entering they were told that the office really was closed but that "a little breeze" came along and so they opened for a few minutes.

WERE DISCOURAGED

They approached the desk and immediately the recruiting officer busied himself at the telephone, although he had said nothing into it for five minutes when a superior officer called for him. Upon returning, the girls explained, he was cordial and appeared to want to be helpful. They were given applications, paraphernalia and literature, and told to fill them out at home. They wanted to do it there but were discouraged since the office couldn't permit it after five o'clock.

AUG 28 1943

No explanation, official or otherwise, has been forthcoming. The Navy department refuses to say what is the status of its consideration of plans to accept Negro women into the WAVES. Meanwhile, the AKA Non-aPrtisan Council on Public Affairs continues to press its campaign to force the issue with the Navy department, insisting that it be done too on a non-segregated basis.

Gets New Ship

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md

CAPT. ADRIAN RICHARDSON,

(Exclusive to the AFRO)

NOV 13 1943

NEW YORK—Capt. Adrian Richardson, master of the S.S. Frederick Douglass which was torpedoed and sunk in the North Atlantic two months ago, has been assigned to another Liberty ship, the S.S. Lowery, it was learned here Monday.

The Lowery, owned by the Standard Fruit Co., recently was refitted here after torpedoing.

Capt. Richardson has not yet finished selecting the crew, but the AFRO has been informed that, like the Douglass, it will have a mixed crew.

It is understood that the chief and third engineers will be colored and that the first and second will be white.

Survey Reveals Navy Is Not Nearing Pledged Quota

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

SEP 26 1943

Sea Forces At Present Are Short Of About 180,958, Johnson Asserts

By ERNEST E. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON—(ANP) —Unless the navy department make a substantial increase in its call for Negroes, it will not reach the level promised during conversations with War Manpower commission officials last spring, in line with the policy worked out with the approval of the White House whereby Negroes would account for 10 per cent of all branches of the armed forces.

The upward adjustment in total personnel announced two weeks ago by Rean Adm. Randall Jacobs chief of navy personnel, testifying before the senate military committee, makes even more unlikely the attainment of the goal.

NEED ANOTHER YEAR

From an unquestioned source it was learned recently that the navy had requested an additional year in which to achieve what it had promised to do by the end of 1943 in the matter of Negro inductions. Questioned shortly after during his press conference, Sec. Knox declared that the navy is adhering to the program greed to, and that it has been taking all the eligible men selective program had been sending them. He pointed out, however, that rejections were rather high owing to the higher physical requirements for the navy

There are now about 2,609,581 men in the navy. Adm. Jacobs testified that an adjustment of figures, the department has estimated that it will need about 400,000 by the year end, thus giving them a total presonnel of approximately 3,009,581 men.

NOW BELOW QUOTA

Based upon the 10 per cent agreement, the navy should have now about 260,958 Negroes. The additional requirements to which Adm. Jacobs referred would mean that some 40,000 more Negroes would be required, giving the department a total Negro personnel of roughly 300,918 men.

There are today about 80,000 Negroes in the Navy department which includes the coast guard and the marines. This represents a difference of about 180,98 men which it should have had it observed the 10 per cent formula from the outset. It was to make up this difference that the navy announced following the agreement with WMCA that 15 per cent of its calls would be for Negroes. With the changes in personnel estimates advanced by the admiral, this deficiency could amount to 220,958 men unless there is a pickup in inductions.

In spite of Sec. Kox's denial, the acceleration is not taking place in any appreciable degree. Since April, the navy's calls for Negroes have been greater than 10 per cent, but not nearly approaching the 15 per cent it promised to make. Induction figures which are invariably less than those for calls, for the first three months of the year below 10 per cent, and for the next six months, slightly above.

NUMBERS ARE SMALL

Calls for the coast guard and the marines have been much higher than for the navy itself. but the actual numbers of men involved are small, and therefore would make no noticeable dent in the overall figures.

It becomes increasingly apparent therefore that if the navy intends to accept Negroes to the extent of 10 per cent of total personnel the percentage of calls agreed to will have to be made, and if the rate of rejections cut too heavily into the population available for induction, then the percentage of calls will have to be increased above the 15 per cent level.

Courier Pittsburgh, Pa.

Coast Artillery Unit Goes North

CAMP EDWARDS, Mass., Aug. 26—An overnight hop from the 100-degree heat of Camp Forrest, Tennessee, to the cool sea breezes of Cape Cod provided a new experience for a Coast Artillery battalion which recently arrived at the Antiaircraft Artillery Training Center, Camp Edwards, Mass.

The battalion is bivouaced in a tent city spreading out over a quarter mile area and which has all the conveniences of modern sanitation, field kitchens and sleeping quarters. The battalion's firing range, established on the granite cliffs of New England, is a source of wonderment to most of the men who never before have seen the Atlantic ocean.

The hospitality displayed by residents of the area is "something to write home about," according to the soldiers of the battalion.

Included in the battalion membership are the following men:

AUG 28 1943

FROM GEORGIA: Pvts. Adolph Aikens, Savannah, Ga.; Florinza Atkins, Atlanta; Johnny Bellamy, Albany; Coleman Doyle, Jr., Wadley and Henry M. Grier, Macon.

FROM TEXAS: Sgt. E. Chevis, Woodville; Cpl. Bennie Collier, Fort Worth; Pfcs. Frank Harden, Tyler; Wesley Davis, Pennington; Calvin C. Doddy, Cason and Willie H. Green, Manor; Pvts. William Cawthorne, Jacksonville; Rusaw Clark, Winchester, and Booker T. Duncan, Fort Worth.

FROM LOUISIANA: S/Sgt. Daniel Kelly, New Orleans; Pvts. Charlie Cooper and Henry Brown, Sicily Island; Usbua Cross, Olla; Zebebe Davis, Shreveport; Willie Harvey, Hasston; Clifton Jackson, Jr., Bethany, and Allen Jefferson, Lake Providence.

FROM NORTH CAROLINA: Pfcs. McDonald Murray, Elliott; Charles Merrit, Wilcons Mills; Marshall Harrington, Rockingham; Pvts. James Fuller, Sanford; Jerry Craine, Winston-Salem, and Clifton Deberry, Apex.

AUG 28 1943

FROM WASHINGTON, D.C.: T/5 John D. Pressley, Pvts. Frederick Carrol, Bernard J. Hall and Iverson O. Mitchell.

FROM OKLAHOMA: Sgt. Alvin Ward, Pvts. Robert Chatman and Wesley Colbert, Jr., Okmulgee, and Cpl. Barnamon T. Bryant, Sans Springs.

FROM TENNESSEE: Cpl. Chany B. Cumming, Knoxville; Pvts. James T. Alexander, Ellendale; Omenys Arnold and Alton E. Brown, Chattanooga, and Raleigh Inman, Nashville.

The battalion's first sergeants are:

Forgan S. Berry, Enfield, N.C.; Newton T. Lewis, New York, N.Y.; Walter L. Robinson, Philadelphia, Pa.; Leon C. Smith, Greenville, Miss., and Curtis H. Twine, Newark, N.J.

Colonel Colman Is A Lucky Man

Louisville, Ky.
Courier-Journal

SEP 16 1943

The methods and decisions of courts-martial have on occasion seemed harsh and unreasonable to civilians uninformed as to Army codes and customs. But not the rankest sentimentalist could make that objection to the court which heard the charges against Col. WILLIAM T. COLMAN, former commander of Selfridge Field.

To an impartial witness, knowing only the newspaper accounts of the nine-day hearing, Colonel COLMAN emerged as singularly unpromising officer material. It is true that the court dismissed twenty-five of the charges and punished him only for four on which he was judged guilty. But those four, three of them for drunken and disorderly conduct, the other the shooting "through carelessness" of a Negro private, indicate a personality quite unfitted for exercising command over other human beings.

But Colonel COLMAN's punishment is merely a demotion to the rank of captain, a rank which still places him in technical superiority over enlisted men and junior officers. Added to the rather peremptory dismissal of other serious charges, the verdict on the face of it seems one of extraordinary leniency on the part of brother-colonels of the demoted commandant. There are, fortunately, few civil courts in the land which would so lightly dismiss the shooting of a subordinate by a superior, whether that shooting was felonious as first charged, or merely "careless," as the military court decided. And there are likewise few courts, or businesses, in which three separate charges of drunkenness on duty would be reprimanded merely by a mild demotion. Colonel COLMAN is probably a lucky man in that his conduct was reviewed only by the gentle Army and not by cold civilian judges and juries.

SEP 9 1943

Afro-American Baltimore, Md.

World War I Navy Man Now Steward in Coast Guard

PHILADELPHIA, Pa. — Johnny Johnston, steward first class, quit the Navy Yard at Pensacola, Fla., back in 1917 to enlist in the U.S. Navy, served through World War I and until 1927, then entered the coast guard where he has served since that time and is now stationed at the Port Richmond Base.

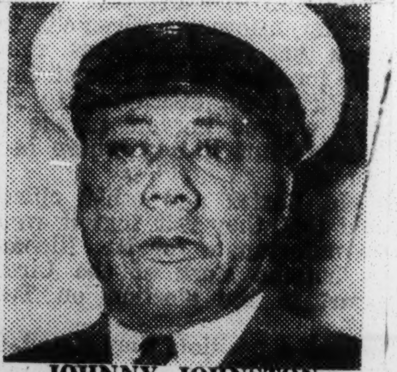
During his twenty-six years in the service, having served through one war and now serving in another, he has visited fourteen Central and South American countries, Canada, the British Isles, France, Germany, Norway, Sweden, Denmark and other European countries, Asia, Africa and Iceland.

In addition to wearing on his breast a variety of ribbons, the army and navy Good Conduct Medals and the coast guard Good Conduct Medal and the World War I Victory Medal, his uniform is adorned with stripes for service in the European and Asiatic theatres in the present war.

Bombed at Singapore

He was aboard the transport Wakefield when it was bombed at Singapore and was at one time stationed aboard the famous coast guard cutter Campbell, the fighting craft that attacked six Nazi subs within a period of twenty-four hours.

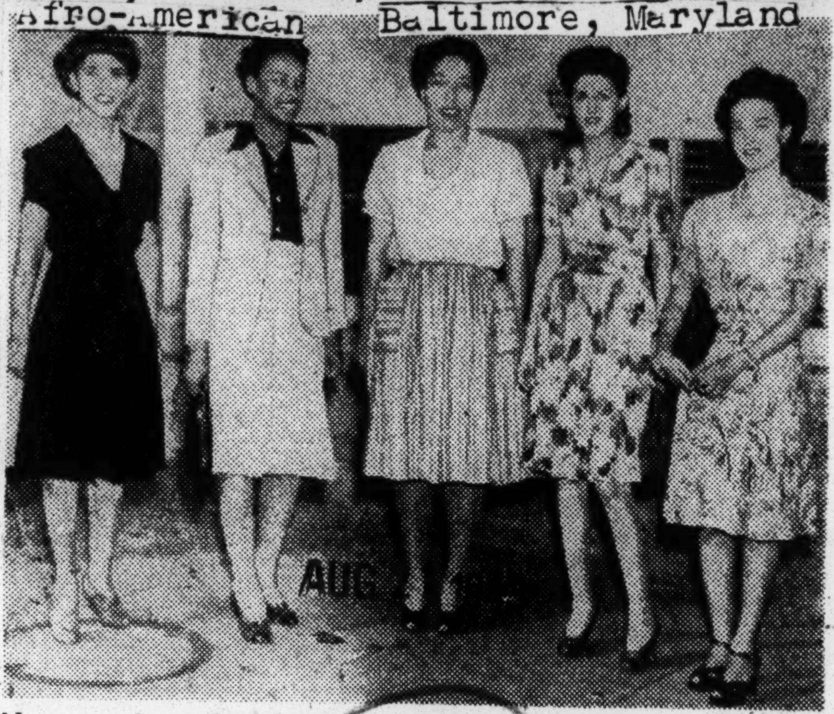
In addition to high officials of his own government, including Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau and Admiral R. R. Waesche, he has delighted the palates of many foreign dignitaries, including royal personages.



JOHNNY JOHNSTON

Pretty and Smart, but Can't Join WAVES

Afro-American Baltimore, Maryland



Above are shown five of the six Washington young women who started a heat wave at the D.C. WAVE recruiting office Friday by applying for enlistment. Two of the young women arrived, were told courteously that enlistments of colored women were not yet being taken although "a plan" was being worked out for their utilization. Their names addresses and telephone numbers were taken. Those shown are, left to right: Miss Bernice Jacobs, Miss Cleomine Lewis, Miss Velma Hammond, Miss Althea Jefferson and Miss Hazel Lee.

AUG 7 1943

Atlanta, Georgia Daily World

In Invasion Of Sicily Georgian Plays Big Role

WITH U. S. AMPHIBIOUS FORCES—(SNS) —Arthur James Goodwin, of 206 East Branch St., Valdosta, played a big role in the invasion of Sicily, it was revealed Wednesday.

He used his training at the Dasher High School, in Valdosta, to advantage. The story is that he used to spend his spare time pouring over books on military aviation.

With a few pennies he saved from working for a dry cleaner, Goodwin, bought plane parts and built models. Little did this slightly-built boy realize then that some day, off the embattled shores of Sicily, what he was learning would help protect Uncle Sam's Navy from furious assaults by Axis planes.

A year ago when he joined the Navy, they put him aboard an assault transport as a messboy in the officer's wardroom. Life went along quietly until the transport sailed for an unknown destination —the invasion of Sicily.

AIDS GUN CREW

On the way across the Atlantic he was made a member of a gun crew and attended classes in plane identification. His knowledge of planes caught the attention of instructors who were impressed also with his excellent sight. As a result he was moved from an aft gun to a gun on the bridge.

When the ship started in for the Sicily beaches Steward's Mate Second Class Arthur James Goodwin, 17, dropped his plates and silver and took his place on the bridge. It was 11 o'clock Friday night.

He proved so valuable in identifying both enemy and friendly planes that he never left the bridge until Monday night. Some sandwiches and coffee and a few catnaps between air attacks kept him going.

His was a difficult job, because enemy planes often became mixed up with friendly planes. Transport planes that carried paratroopers inland returned during the middle of an attack. Spitfire and Beaufighters often dove on enemy bombers and fighters and this made it almost impossible for the ship to keep from shooting down some of its own planes.

At times the night sky would be full of planes and about the only thing the American gunners would do was to shoot at the ones that dropped flares and bombs. It was tough going.

CALM DURING BATTLES

Goodwin went through these battles calmly. He correctly called the first Focke-Wulf 190s that bombed our landing beaches. When Spitfires attacked these enemy craft, the Georgian identified them and prevented his ship from shooting at them.

He was the first man aboard to identify three German JU 88s that roared in to attack the convoy. They got a warm reception. On another occasion he prevented fire at some Mustangs.

"I knew them by their square wingtips," Goodwin said.

Through it all this little country boy said the only time he was really afraid was when Nazi planes dropped three bombs into the water 100 feet from his ship. The ship quivered and reeled but escaped damage.

The Georgian's only plane ride to date was in a barnstorming plane at the county fair at Valdosta. Strangely enough he does not remember what type it was.

He desires to keep on spotting planes for the Navy while serving food on the vital American transport.

AUG 12 1943

Afro-American
Baltimore. Md.

Lookout for Subs, Saboteurs All Colored Unit Keeps Coastal

By JOE SHEPHARD

"Watching the ships go by" might easily be the theme song of the scattered groups of men of the U.S. Coast Guard beach patrols who maintain their lonely 24-hour vigils along America's endless miles of coastline.

Denied the glory and action of their brothers-at-arms on sea duty or at the far-flung battle fronts, these men are doing their bit to hasten an Allied victory by guarding the nation's blacked-out shores against the landing of saboteurs and by insuring safe passage for the big ships that beat their way along the coast.

Some of these ships are inward bound, bearing cargoes of wounded and prisoners from the battle areas. Others, freighted with men, munitions, and material for the Allied forces, are outward bound, headed for rendezvous with convoys in the Atlantic or the Pacific.

On Lookout for Subs

But whatever the ship, whatever its mission, it is kept under the careful scrutiny of the men of the Coast Guard Beach Patrols as long as it is in sight of land.

No small part of their responsibility is the maintaining of a keen and unceasing watch for venturesome enemy sub which might sneak sufficiently close to our shores to prey upon these ships, or to disgorge trained saboteurs intent upon wrecking vital war installations.

Members of Patrol

One such patrol on the Eastern seaboard is manned by an all-colored group of coast guardsmen under the comand of Chief Machinists' Mate Rothall Gardner, a veteran of twenty-six years of navy and coast guard duty in all parts of the world.

Included in the patrol are:

Coxwain Edward Christian, Chicago, Ill., second in command to Chief Gardner; Joseph Stenhouse, s 1/c, Los Angeles, Calif; James H. Brown, s 1/s, Jersey City; Joseph Noel, s 2/c, Washington, D.C.; Clarence Whitehurst, s 2/c, Norfolk, Va.; Leo Plummer, s 2/c, Washington, D.C.; Floyd Jackson, s 2/c, New York; Robert Pearson, s 2/c, Cleveland, Ohio; Anthony Cooke, s 2/c, Norfolk, Va.; Coxwain Leon Gadsen, Detroit; Samuel Davenport, s 2/c, Norfolk, Va.; Nathaniel Anderson, s 1/c, Montclair, N.J.; Paul McClendon, s 2/c, and Ellsworth Blumberg, s 2/c, Detroit, and Philip McKinnon, Miami, Fla.

Miles from Civilization

These men's station is located on a particularly lonely and desolate stretch of beach which juts out into the Atlantic, miles from the nearest human habitation, and which can be reached by land only when the ebbing tide has uncovered the packed sand of the beach.

Transportation to and from the station is by jeep, for no other type of vehicle could traverse the hilly, sandy wastes which begin only a few yards about the high water mark.

But even the jeep needs help in the loose, shifting sands which might easily be mistaken for those of the California or North African desert, so iron mats have been placed at critical spots so that the wheels of the vehicle may gain purchase.

A couple of shovels and a roll of canvas are also an important part of the jeep's equipment so that the men may dig their vehicle out if its spinning wheels bury themselves in the loose sand.

Boats Used in Winter

During the winter months the picture changes, and instead of calling their particular stretch of beach "the Sahara," the coast guardsmen call it "Little Siberia."

At that time of the year the station cannot be reached by land, and as a result all provisions are brought in by boat which is also used for traveling to the mainland.

During the daylight hours one coast guardsman mans the lookout shack located on a high spot above the beach while another walks back and forth along the four-mile stretch which they guard.

OCT 23 1943

47j-1943

He's Missing In Action

478

DEC 16 1943

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

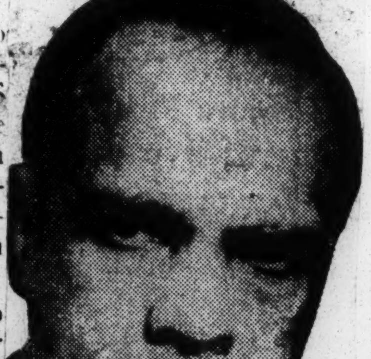
DORIE MILLER, the first Negro bluejacket to distinguish himself in World War II, is evidently lost in the Southwest Pacific, the Navy Department in Washington confirmed Wednesday. Mr. and Mrs. Conery Miller, of W[illegible] Texas, [illegible] of kin, have been notified. The stalwart messman who distinguished himself at Pearl Harbor, was awarded the Navy Cross by President Roosevelt after public clamor had forced the Navy to identify him.

DEC 18 1943

7th Liberty Ship Named James Weldon Johnson

Tribune
Philadelphia, Pa.

DEC 11 1943



James Weldon Johnson

The seventh Liberty Ship to be named for an outstanding colored American, the SS JAMES WELDON JOHNSON, will be launched at the Wilmington yards of the California Shipbuilding Corporation in December, the Maritime Commission announced this week.

The vessel will pay tribute to the noted poet, essayist, lawyer and diplomat who was killed in an automobile collision near his summer home at Dark Harbor, Me., on June 26, 1938.

Johnson, who also achieved note as a song writer and a professor of literature at Fisk and New York universities, was born in Jacksonville, Florida, on June 17, 1871. Completing public school study in his native city, he later received B. A. and M. A. degrees from Atlanta university and did graduate study at Columbia university, New York City.

DEC 11 1943

His career began as a teacher in the Jacksonville public school, which was elevated to high school grade during his tenure as principal. During this period he studied law at night, and, in 1897, was admitted to the Florida Bar, the first of his race to achieve this honor since the Civil War.

In 1901 he went to New York City with his brother J. Rosemond Johnson, and Bob Cole, collaborated in the successful writing of popular songs and light operas. Later he was appointed U. S. Consul, first to Venezuela and later to Nicaragua. Returning to New York in 1910, he married Grace Nail and two years later his first book, the fictional "Autobiography of an Ex-Colored Man," appeared annoymously. Its authorship was not acknowledged by him until 1927.

He edited a book of American Negro poetry and two of Negro spirituals; and also wrote the English libretto for the opera "Goyescas," which was produced by the Metropolitan Opera Company in 1915. As a New York resident, he became contributing editor for The New York Age, and later executive secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. This organization awarded him the Spingarn Medal in 1925.

DEC 11 1943

Finally, without ceasing to write, he returned to teaching in 1930, to become professor of Creative Literature at Fisk university, Nashville, Tennessee and from 1934 until his death visiting professor of Literature at New York university.

Among his best known books were: "Fifty Years and Other Poems," "Self-Determining Haiti," "Black Manhattan," "St. Peter Relates an Incident of the Resurrection Day," "Negro America, What Now?" and "Along This Way."

Six other Liberty ships have been named for colored men: the SS Booker T. Washington, George Washington Carver, Paul Laurence Dunbar, Frederick Douglass, John Merrick, and Robert L. Vann.

478

Dec. 11, 1943

The Navy Department has named a naval vessel, the destroyer escort Leonard Roy Harmon, in honor of a colored messman who received the Navy Cross posthumously for heroic conduct at Guadalcanal.

WAVE HEAD, RACE WOMEN HOLD CONFAB

JUL 31 1943

Chicago, Ill.

Plan To Admit Negroes Discussed With Lt. Comm. McAffee

JUL 3 1943

Defender
(~~Defender~~ Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON.—The Defender's expose of the navy's jim-crow plan for admitting Negro women in the WAVEs, which was immediately put in the hands of Navy officials, and a letter attacking the plan written to the White House by the AKA Non-Partisan Council on Public Affairs, were credited by sources close to the problem with obtaining the conference last week with Lt. Commander McAffee, head of the WAVEs, and several outstanding Negro women.

478

JUL 3 1943

News that such a conference was held leaked out, although it was being held in the strictest confidence. All of the persons who are presumed to have attended the conference have been observing their pledge of silence as to what occurred there. It is believed, however, that the conference hinged around a discussion of ways and means of integrating Negro women into the present structure of the WAVEs without setting up separate facilities and separate units.

It is believed that the women took steps to protect themselves by submitting in writing their position on the question of a segregated WAVEs set-up for Negroes, in event the Navy officials fail to abide by their recommendations. This would forestall any intimation that any plan other than a completely democratic one was endorsed by the group called to the meeting.

The holding of the meeting, however, is no guarantee that the Navy has retreated from its established jim-crow policy. Individuals and organizations were urged to continue to send protests to the President and to Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox against the establishment of separate training facilities or separate units for Negro women. Such action should be taken immediately before a plan is publicly announced.

Wins Highest Honors At Great Lakes Class

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

AUG 21 1943

GREAT LAKES, [illegible] Aug. 19—Samuel Edward W[illegible], 23, of 53 Hamilton Terrace, New York City, has graduated from recruit training with highest honors in his company at the U. S. Naval Training Station here.

South Sets Pattern For Navy Treatment Of Negro Sailors

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

OCT 23 1943

OCT 30 1943

(Review of Courier Fight on Navy Policy — Page 13)

Remember Dorie Miller, Charles French, Leonard Harmon? They were Negro messmen serving their country in the present war. But they were "Messmen Heroes," too. Next Wednesday . . . October 27 . . . America will celebrate Navy Day, traditional observance in honor of Theodore Roosevelt. Next Wednesday . . . October 27 . . . The Pittsburgh Courier is asking America to remember the men mentioned above. The Pittsburgh Courier is also asking that this day be set aside to pay fitting and silent tribute to 13 unsung naval heroes of the USS Philadelphia. It was their courage in writing a letter to this newspaper five years ago, which served to spark a campaign against the Navy's discrimination policy, which today envelopes the entire nation.

478

NO DAY FOR FINE SPEECHMAKING

Navy Day, this year, is deeply significant. In the second year of the war and the sixth year of The Courier campaign for the full and complete integration of Negroes into every branch of the armed services, it is time that we once again open the books and balance the ledger sheets. This Navy Day is not . . . for us . . . a day of fine speechmaking, bugle blowing, band playing or precision drilling. Rather, it is a day of solemn purpose and high intent . . . a day to rededicate ourselves to the fight for real democracy in the Navy.

The Navy must be divorced from the unregenerate South. Our boys who toil and sweat on the seven seas must be given due recognition. The entire pattern of Navy policy must be thoroughly checked and exposed. A race which can produce naval heroes must be given its place in the sun. But the record so far reveals that Dixie still rules the U.S. Navy. Here are some incontrovertible facts to support this statement:

HERE IS THE RECORD

TODAY . . . there is not a Negro commissioned officer serving in the Navy. There is not even a colored physician or minister.

TODAY . . . no Negro attends the Naval Academy at Annapolis, although the cadet enrollment at this institution has been doubled.

TODAY . . . no Negro college has been accepted under the Navy V-12 program.

TODAY . . . with but one exception, no Negro has been accepted for the Navy Reserve training program at a white college.

TODAY . . . not a single Negro has been admitted to Naval aviation. All a colored youth can do is play "nursemaid" to a Navy plane engine at some shore installation.

Trained seamen, graduates of the naval school at Hampton institute, are assigned to ammunition depots as stevedores.

Graduates of Great Lakes Training school are not permitted to serve on seagoing vessels except as stewards or sculliions.

Many inductees, sworn in as apprentice seamen, are forced into the messman branch or into construction labor battalions.

Discrimination runs riot at every naval establishment.

Sailors who protest the treatment accorded them are charged with mutiny . . . a serious offense during wartime. This follows the pattern set five years ago when the 13 sailors who wrote The Courier were DISHONORABLY DISCHARGED.

NAMES SHIP FOR NAVAL HERO

On the other side of the ledger, and showing that some progress has been made, we review the following gains:

Two schools, Great Lakes and Hampton, train Negro sailors for duties in the deck or engineer departments of the Navy.

One camp at Great Lakes was named in honor of Captain Robert Smalls colored naval Civil War hero.

A destroyer-escort vessell, the USS Harmon, was named posthumously in honor of Leonard Harmon, a Texas youth, and a mess attendant who distinguished himself in the battle of Santa Cruz.

Seven mess attendants have been honored by the Navy for bravery during the present war.

Bernard Whitfield Robinson, a medical student at Harvard university, was commissioned an ensign in the naval medical reserve on June 27, 1942, and will be called to active duty when he graduates on 1944.

Colored seabees . . . naval construction battalion . . . were recently praised by five U.S. Senators upon their return from the Pacific war zone.

This is the picture . . . NOW!

COAST GUARD BEST SERVICE BRANCH

Brightest spot in the Navy picture focuses on the U.S. Coast Guard, a branch of the Navy during wartime. The Coast Guard has two colored commissioned officers holding the rank of ensign. There is no discrimination in the training or assignment of Negro and white sailors in this branch of the service. The men are promoted according to their abilities, and are serving on combat vessels guarding convoys, transporting troops to war areas and serve as crew members of the shore patrol.

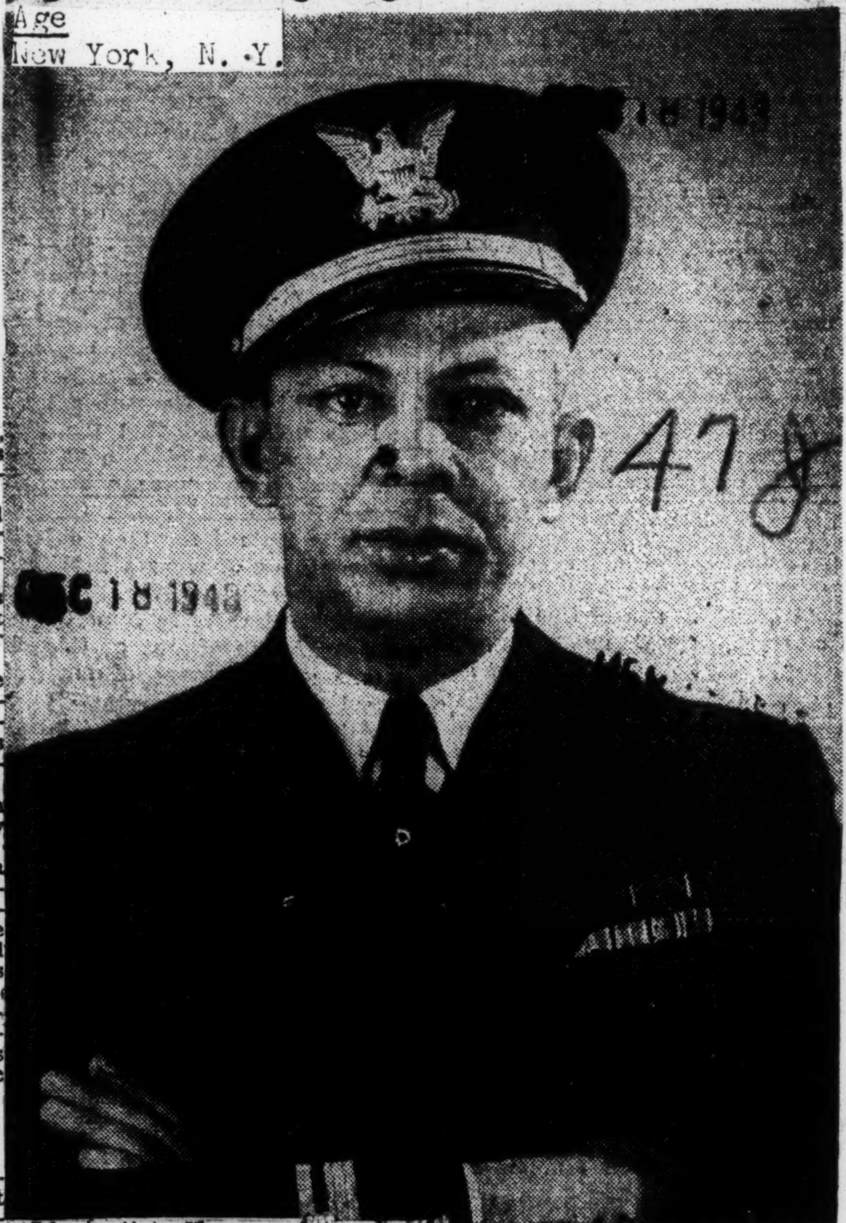
This picture contrasts sharply with that of the U.S. Marines, who opened their doors to Negroes for the first time on May 30, 1942. Colored marines train in a separate camp at New River, N. C. The marines have consistently refused to commission a Negro . . . the highest rank now held by a colored marine being that of a buck sergeant.

Yet today, fighting combat units of the Marines are serving in the Pacific area and are standing guard in Philadelphia and on the West Coast.

A Congressional investigation is needed. Write your congressman or senator on NAVY DAY . . . October 27 . . . and give him the facts. Demand action. The Army and its policy is bad enough . . . but something must be done . . . at once . . . about the Navy.

Highest Ranking Negro Officer In U. S. Navy

Age
New York, N. Y.



478

Lieut. (jg) Clarence Samuels of the United States Coast Guard, is now the highest ranking Negro in the Navy. A native of Panama, Lieut. Samuels has spent 23 years in the Coast Guard, during which time he has served in charge of a cutter in Savannah, Ga., harbor; in charge of the Coast Guard unit at Pea Island, near Manteo-Roanoke, N. C., and at the U. S. Coast Guard Training Station, Manhattan Beach, N. U. He is known through the service for his excellence as a signalman and marksman. His ribbons indicate pre-Pearl Harbor service, Pearl Harbor action, American Theatre of War action, African mid-eastern campaign, expert pistol shot and his good conduct ribbon has four bars.

—U. S. Navy photo from OWI

Navy's Prejudice Doesn't Please All White Officers

Afro-American Baltimore, Maryland

(Excerpts from an Officer's letter home)

I recently saw the Life Magazine story of the disgraceful Detroit episode and I can't tell you how much it angered me. I felt like writing an article in the biggest magazine in the U.S.A., and expressing my views.

However, it would only get me in trouble as I would have to step on the toes of the navy, even if I wanted to be honest. Nevertheless, I have started one and I'm about half through.

Present Position Hurts

I don't know why, but towards the colored man I have always had the greatest liking and his present position hurts me. Yet there is so much prejudice. It's all around me and it chokes me. I would like to "crusade" against this intolerance, but the opposing forces are so strong that I feel I would break myself if I attempted it.

We have (among ourselves) fought a whole Civil War over certain points, one of which was the race problem, and we have not actually progressed a bit toward a just solution.

On the other hand, I feel yellow if I sit by and watch it operate. I have a feeling that this question will dominate my life and so I am a bit cautious.

These Marines Visited Our Boro

New York, N. Y.
Amsterdam Star-News

FOUR FIGHTING MARINES—Here's four U. S. Marines who are doing a good job for Uncle Sam at Camp Le Juene, New River, N. C. The quartet visited Brooklyn on Sunday and a Brooklyn Amsterdam News photographer was on hand to snap their pictures. They are (left to right): Pvt. Thomas Henderson, Sgt. Kermit White, Pvt. William "Bill" Jones and Pvt. Frank Jackson.

47j-1943

Navy Officials Praise Work At Hampton Naval Training

Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Virginia

SEP 11 1943

By S. A. HAYNES

HAMPTON—On September 12, the U. S. Naval Training School for Negroes at Hampton Institute will observe its first year of activities, and, on the basis of the seasoned judgment of high ranking naval officers who have inspected the school, Commander Edwin H. Downes and his staff of able instructors have done and are doing a commendable job in training and developing "good men" for the Navy.

Since classes started on September 12, 1942, the school has sent out to various operating naval bases over 1,000 graduates representing nine graduating classes, each of approximately 120 men, the majority of whom came here direct from the Great Lakes, Ill., Naval Training Center, and are representative of nearly every state in the union.

SCHOOL'S OBJECTIVES

Commander Downes took charge of the school on July 18, 1942. What he has endeavored to do at Hampton is best summarized in the stated purpose of the school which hangs prominently in his office, and is imparted daily to the trainees in the classrooms, in the shops, on boats at sea, on the parade ground, and in the recreational activities.

This is to teach trainees to do better those things they are likely to be required to do afterwards."

Great emphasis is placed upon morale, which is defined by the commander and his staff thus: "Morale is that something that makes people eager to do and to do well those things required of them."

We were not long in conversation with Commander Downes before we were made aware of the fact that, true to the proudest tradition of the Navy, he puts the interest and integrity of this great and glorious arm of our national defense FIRST.

MAKE MEN COMPETENT

"We are not trying to solve the race problem here at our school," he told us: "we are simply trying to make a constructive contribution to its ultimate solution . . . We are making men competent so that they can be in demand wherever they are in the post-war world."

The present class of trainees has 43 per cent who are graduates or students of high schools, and 17 per cent who possess college training. Other classes have averaged as high as 35 per cent in college experience. The men are rated according to intelligence, judgment, initiative, leadership, cooperation, neatness, conduct, and manual skill.

A most recent example of the quality of rating at the Hampton naval school was revealed when, of 28 men sent to the Naval Section Base at Portland, Me., only three were rated poor.

COMMENDATIONS

The following tributes received by Commander Downes speak for themselves: From Captain E. C. Raguet, chief of staff, 5th Naval District, in a memorandum to the district commandant, dated May 10, 1943, following an inspection of the Hampton Naval Training School by Captain Raguet and Commander R. G. Pennoyer, acting director of training:

"Excellent morale, military bearing, and courtesy exhibited by enlisted personnel. Officers had a cordial and cooperative attitude, as well as a personal interest in the trainees. Practical instruction is given in phases of work to be done on future assignments, and good utilization is made of salvaged material. Practical and purposeful work is provided on boats and job orders for N. O. B., Norfolk Navy Yard, and the Amphibious Force. Training Aids are well used, and effective cut-away and operational models have been developed for efficient demonstration purposes.

"Courses of study are being revised as information is received from graduates and officers under whom former graduates are serving. Facilities are well organized and efficiently used. A newly constructed recreation building and worthwhile recreational activities are used to care for leisure time activities. The plant and quarters are well kept in military order. There was concrete evidence of actual learning, and of effective leadership in the development of the school.

"There were no apparent deficiencies or irregularities noted during the inspection.

"The training activities, utilization of materials and equipment, recreational program, and the leadership displayed are worthy of commendation."

GRADUATES PRAISED

From Lieutenant B. C. Gifford, education officer, Naval Local Defense Force, Portland, Maine, July 29, memorandum to Commander Downes:

"In regard to the colored personnel who have come from Hampton to this Base, they are in general a fine lot of men. Southall, EM3c, and Penny, CM3c, are two exceptional men. We could not afford to lose either one without feeling it . . . These men are willing and good leaders, and in general fine characters, great additions to any naval establishment."

From Captain John M. Gill, commanding officer of the U. S. Navy Section Base, Tompkinsville, Staten Island, N. Y., where 2,500 white and colored sailors are stationed. Letters to Commander Downes, April 7, 1943:

"It is a pleasure to report every man from Hampton who is serving afloat or ashore from this Base, has in every way reflected highest credit on your system of training and indoctrination. They have been examples for all, regardless of race, and only favorable reports come to me on their progress in advancing themselves and contributing to the war effort.

MET THE TEST

SEP 11 1943

"There has been, by order, no coddling, and they have met the test. On shore, in our shops, your former students have been equally proficient, equally capable, willing, and earnest in all their undertakings . . . Their discipline is excellent, and by their behavior, they have influenced mess attendants, who, brought into the service without indoctrniation had to learn Navy ways and life the hard way."

Christian Recorder
Philadelphia, Pa.

Officers Praise Negro Marines

SEP 16 1943

NEW RIVER, N. C.—One year after the first Negro was enrolled in the Marine Corps marine officers announced today they were well pleased with the excellent record achieved by Negroes during the first year in the corps.

Col. S. A. Woods, Jr., Commanding officer of the Negro Marine quarters at Camp Lejeune, declared the Negroes have made an excellent showing.

Dorie Miller Has Rival In Sheppard

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia
NOV 10 1943

WASHINGTON — (SNS) — Dorie Miller, famed Negro Bluejacket hero of the Pearl Harbor attack, had a new rival this week.

He is Christopher Columbus Sheppard, cook first class, USN, and a "one-man gun crew" on the Destroyer Borie. This destroyer was part of a Naval force recently awarded the Presidential Unit Citation for having sunk "more submarines than any team in Naval history."

Sheppard's exploits, and those of another Negro member of the Borie crew, Ernest Gardner, steward's mate second class, USN, were revealed by their commander, Lieut. Charles H. Hutchins of Terre Haute, Ind., during a press conference at the Navy Department on November 10.

According to Lieutenant Hutchins, Sheppard had a battle station as "first loader," on a 4-inch gun, when the Borie, fighting alone many miles from her group, was engaged in a knock-down, drag out battle with two U-boats one of which was described by the Borie's commander as "the biggest one we'd ever seen."

BLINDED BY SMOKE

While fighting the latter sub at ranges of 10 to 40 feet, the gun crew at Sheppard's station became bilnded by smoke. The "first loader" immediately seized the gun and started passing the ammunition. After a few minutes, however, Sheppard waved his assistant aside and became a "one-man gun crew", getting his own ammunition,, loading the gun and firing continuously at the badly crippled submarine.

The Borie was part of the USS Card anti-submarine group, which consisted of the aircraft carrier, U SS Card, the Destroyers Borie ,Barry and Goff, and the Card's aviation units, Composite Squadrons 1 and 9. In receiving the Presidential Unit Citation, this anti-submarine team was officially credited with being largely responsible for the complete withdrawal of hostile U-boats" from the United States North Africa convoy route.

The story of the death battle of the Borie against a pack of submarines and her fight for survival while wallowing in heavy seas in a badly damaged condition has been termed by the Navy Department as "an outstanding example of valor and seamanship," typical of "the teamwork of the unsung escort vessels that help make possible the more colorful expolits of the death-dealing, carrier-based planes which are carrying the fight to the U-boats in the mid-Atlantic."

BATTLE IS DESCRIBED

Describing the battle with the second sub, lieutenant Hutchins said:

"We tried to ram the sub but it submerged and we dropped all the the depth charges in the racks. We must have scored because the U-boat came to the surface. Again we sped forth to ram, firing as we went. Our fire wiped the sub's deck clear of Germans and swept away their forward gun.

"Our bow struck the sub and rode over it. I stopped the engines and we held it fast. Then we let go with everything we had—4 inch guns, 20mm. and machine guns at ranges from 10 to 40 feet.

"Some men fired shotguns. The executive officer grabbed a tommy gun and started firing from the bridge. Others used pistols and one boy even took a signal pistol and fired at the sub. The range was so short that one gun couldn't be brought to bear. So the gun captain started throwing empty shell cases, and he knocked one man off the deck of the sub.

"Another fellow threw his knife. He said later he'd never been able to stick a knife in the floor before, but this time he stuck it in the stomach of a German and he went overboard.

"After about 10 minutes of this inferno, the submarine got clear and attempted to flee. It went into a "tight turn" in the pitch black darkness and for a time the Borie could not close in."

STOPPED SIX FEET SHORT

"Then he turned the tables and tried to ram us," Hutchins continue, 'But we stopped him six feet short by dropping depth charges, set to the most shallow charge. It was like two tomcats in a room. We were firing torpedoes at every chance."

Meanwhile, the Borie had been hurt, mainly from the ramming The forward engine room was flooded, but the crew there kept the turbines operating-operating in watr up to their necks.

The blond young skipper, then told of the work of Sheppard, and Gardner.

Under the terrific fire, the submarine was battered by repeated hits, and finally exploded and sank, Lieutenant Hutchins said.

Badly crippled, the 23-year old Borie then started to limp back to its task force through the North Atlantic storm. All electric lights however, were knocked out, as well as the radio and heating plant. There was no fresh water for the crew. Torpedoes, torpedo tubes, guns and other weight topsides were cut loose and thrown overboard in an effort to save the listing vessel.

'There was "small auxiliary radio aboard, but we had lost all the gasoline aboard," reported Hutchins. "So we collected all the cigarette-lighter fluid aboard, mixed the doctor's alchohol with kerosene and got enough fuel to use the generator for a short message."

FINALLY LOCATED

The message was picked up and planes from the Card located the ship. Despite a 15 to 20-foot sea, all but 27 members of the Borie's crew were rescued by the task force destroyers. Then the hulk was sent to the bottom by bombs from the carrier's planes.

Navy records reveal that Sheppard is a native of Norfolk, Va., and that he enlisted there. Gardner, son of Mrs. Rose E. Gardner of Ware Neck, Va., is a resident of Baltimore, Md., where his wife Mrs. Lucille Gardner, lives at 911 Warner St.

[illegible] Miller, [illegible] Negro naval [illegible] this war, manned a machine gun during the sneak

Japaneses attack at Pearl Harbor and shot down four attacking planes. He was later awarded the Navy Cross by President Roosevelt. Many other Negro naval recruits have distinguished themselves in action since then and several have received awards.

---

editorial

Courier-Pittsburgh, Pa.

Navy Discrimination

In April, 1942, when Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox announced that the policy of the Navy department had been relaxed and that United States citizens who happened to have been black would, in the future, be given the opportunity for service in the Marine corps and for more extended service in the Navy, The Courier, which had waged an unrelenting campaign against the Navy's practice of discrimination and exclusion, announced that Negro citizens had expected more and deserved more.

* * *

The Courier did not delude itself into believing that the Navy department had decided to observe to the full the mandate of Abraham Lincoln, the federal constitution and the laws of the nation and treat all citizens in the service of their country alike.

* * *

The caste of high officers in the Navy had too long cultivated a tradition of regarding the Navy as a sort of separate sovereignty to change overnight.

* * *

Secretary Knox bluntly intimated that Negroes were to be recruited for the expanded messman class, for construction battalions and for coast guard duty.

* * *

Nothing has happened since April, 1942, to change this conviction.

* * *

The Navy department still treats Negroes as though they were second-class American citizens to be disposed of as suits the prejudices of the Navy high command which, to be truthful, does not include Secretary Knox and President Roosevelt.

* * *

We believe reports that the word has gone out from the board of admirals in the Navy department to both Secretary Knox and the President that this equal rights stuff for all citizens is not to be considered in the Navy.

* * *

As the nation prepares to celebrate Navy Day and to pay deserved tribute to the fighting prowess of our Navy, The Courier submits that the United States Navy, in policy and practice, is one of the chief violators of the principles of democracy for which we say we are fighting. We make the following charges, supported by abundant evidence:

1. The Navy makes a rigid distinction between American citizens, based on the color of their skins.

2. Certain ratings in the Navy are given to white Americans only.

3. The messman class is recruited principally from black Americans.

4. That no attempt has been made to classify thousands of messmen to discover their fitness for other types of service.

5. That hundreds of Negroes have been kept in the messman class, regardless of their demonstrated ability to perform other types of service, as demonstrated by Dorie Miller and others who, when occasion demanded, have quit their servile jobs to man the guns and defend their ships.

6. That the Navy stubbornly refuses to commission any Negro.

7. That the Navy stubbornly sticks to segregation in its training program.

8. That the Navy draws a rigid color line against Negro women.

9. That the Navy has broken the hearts of thousands of black boys who have wanted to serve their country.

10. That the Navy maintains a strict system of segregation on all its ships.

11. That the example of the [illegible] undermines faith in the professed ideals of the nation.

* * *

What can be done about the Navy, The Courier does not know. We are at war and all Americans, regardless of personal interests, seek victory.

* * *

There is certainly reason to fear, however, that the victories which the Navy wins with its guns may be dissipated by its undemocratic practices.

* * *

Maybe the Congress can find some way to inform the admirals in the Navy that the department they are running still belongs to the American people, all of them, black and white.

* * *

The Negro Press and the Negro people have done their utmost. In their contacts with the Navy department, they have met with polite but firm run-arounds and evasion.

* * *

Since Admiral Chester Nimitz left for Hawaii, not one responsible, policy-making officer in the Navy department has been willing to talk with any representatives of the Negro people. Secretary Knox, who can't do much anyway, has ducked them. Assistant Secretary Ralph Bard, who carries even less weight with the Navy admirals, has funneled into practice some of the policies of the admirals.

* * *

But not a single admiral has given an ear to the Negro's plea that the Navy practice democracy. Each Negro delegation to the Navy department has been met by a commander, a captain or someone of lesser stature. These men can hear complaints. They have no power to act. For two years, Rear Admiral Randall Jacobs has been too busy to see any Negro or delegation of them. He is chief of the Bureau of Naval Personnel and in the responsible position affecting Negroes in the Navy. He does as he pleases and keeps his door closed.

* * *

Frequent complaints are lodged against the Army. But the high command of the Army, from General Marshall down, have listened to Negroes and have attempted to improve conditions in the Army. A Negro delegation might as well attempt to see Hirohito as to try to have a conference with either Admiral Ernest King or Admiral Jacobs. They are not concerned with those whom they regard as second-class citizens.

* * *

The situation in the Navy, for the sake of the nation in its future relations with other peoples, demands a congressional investigation. The Courier has already asked for that investigation and will press its request.

OCT 23 1943

47

Former Blind Youth Now

Washington Tribune Washington, D. C.

Member of United States Navy

Robert Morine, of Philadelphia, Pa., was seven years old when the sight in his left eye began to fail. The other eye became affected soon after he entered the hospital and within two months the curtain fell—total darkness in the summer of 1932.

Today that boy, fully recovered from his affliction, as a Bluejacket in the Navy, undergoing recruit training at the U. S. Naval Training Station, Great Lakes, Ill. He wears strong glasses, for his eyes are still weak, but his vision rating when he entered service was 10-20, minimum standard for a recruit to be placed on general service.

The youth, who was sightless for four years, told shipmates of his life in a world of night:

"It might have been easier if it had struck suddenly, instead of coming in an increasing haze until finally . . .nothing but darkness. But, I was fortunate, being only seven years old. I was too young to fully realize my loss.

"I was confined to a hospital for the entire time, being under constant medical care. Several doctors gave up all hope for recovery. The first sign that I was getting well came early in the summer of 1926 when I was 11 years old. I was able to determine night from day, and then, as if through a heavy, black screen, objects and persons. A month or so later my sight was almost back to normal."

He was kept in a darkened room while on the road to recovery, Morine said, and when he was sent home he was permitted to be in a lighted room only a short period of each day until recovery was complete.

In September of that year Morine entered elementary school, being placed in the fifth grade. He was graduated in 1940 and went to work as a clerk in a grocery store. For six months prior to entering the service he worked at the Philadelphia Navy Yard.

NOV 27 1943

47

47J 1943

'General Alarm'-- Seagoing Paper on a Union Ship

The Worker

New York, N.Y.

4/19

AUG 29 1943

By ART SHIELDS

CAPTAIN HUGH MULZAC or Harry Alexander or some other member of the crew of the S. S. Booker T. Washington should give a file of the ship's newspaper, the "General Alarm," to the National Museum.

For here in this ocean-going paper, that the seamen edit themselves, you get the human side of the job of "keeping 'em sailing."

Tragedy and humor are mixed together in the "General Alarm" as you find them in life.

Sad but inspiring is the story of the passing of the chief steward, Walter S. Bradshaw, a Negro.

"We shall all remember the steward," says a recent issue of the "General Alarm," "as a man who did his best—and it was a good best—to keep the merchant and Naval crew aboard in good working and fighting shape through sound and plentiful food.

"Bradshaw was a fighter for human freedom. He was in the beginning of the National Maritime Union with [illegible] Curran and Fred Reed ([illegible]ker T's carpenter), when [illegible] going was plenty rough and such conditions as [illegible] know today on the BTW were only a pipe-dream."

The story goes on to tell how the friend they had lost used to run munitions to Spain from France and the Soviet Union during the civil war. It tells of his escapes from the sea after a recent torpedoing, and it concludes on this note:

"One good thing to think about is that Bradshaw lived to see the turning of the tide. . . . What's more, when the tide turned he was riding on the crest of it, riding eastward with the stuff to blow fascism clean off the face of the earth."

In lighter vein [illegible] story, which says:

"First mate F----, this newspaper has learned on good authority, was really taken to the cleaners in a messroom poker game last night. Observed at breakfast. . . he appeared to be suffering deeply. Sol bowed down sume but a single hot cake. The 'General Alarm' extends its condolences to Mr. F---, and congratulations to B---, et al. You see this is one paper that can't afford to make enemies. This ship is a mighty small place."

But five days later comes this postscript: "F--- has since recouped his losses, plus untold sums to boot."

News has to be cut to the marrow in this 11-by-8 inch paper, but the flavor is rich, whatever Dodger fans may say as they read bulletins like this: "Slipping Bums and Giants Tied 5-5 end of 8th."

Pungent is this report on a ship's meeting at sea:

"John L. Lewis is a phony, the guys concluded at the educational session following the union meeting last night, after they thought over how the coal miners' strike would mean this convoy wouldn't have sailed. . . . or wouldn't be followed by other convoys to put the heat on Hitler. . . .

"Now that the Mediterranean is open, John L. Lewis would like to close the Atlantic Ocean."

At that meeting were men like Antonio P. Blanco, an oiler, who fought three years in Spain, was wounded, captured, behind barbed wire near Seville, escaped in a hail of bullets down the Guadalquiver River and finally got to the coast after the war. to ship out against Hitler.

Blanco comes into the columns of the "General Alarm" when his hand was crushed in a bearing on the Booker T. Washington and Captain Mulzac skillfully applied the dressings.

The Negro skipper's surgical skill was matched [illegible]sical ability. The [illegible] tells how the c[illegible], "who hitherto had been hiding his light under a bushel," entertained the crew with a guitar.

You meet Captain Mulzac again leading classes that make men better seamen and you appreciate the remark Larry Burke, the wiper, that "the guys here don't hog their knowledge—they pass it on to you."

Larry is an ex-Boston longshoreman. In a spicy interview with a reporter for the "General Alarm," Larry compares the "Booker T." with his last ship, "The Blankety-Blank," where a ship's officer was considered a "good fellow," if he just said "hello."

Here's a nice news beat in the "General Alarm" that appeared shortly before the release of the Spanish Republican prisoners in Africa.

". . . . a committee from the Booker T. Washington," writ[illegible]he "General Alarm's" [illegible]st Friday visite[illegible]pal penitentiary of [illegible]ench Morocco at Fort Lyautey and delivered the cigarettes and clothes collected on the ship to 79 Loyalist prisoners. . .

"The entire prison was inspected, the Spanish prisoners addressed in a body and the collection distributed under the eye of the ship's committee, consisting of Alexander, Reed and Beecher.

"Included in the collection were 80 cartons of cigarettes, several cartons of soap, pipe tobacco and clothing.

"The anti-fascist prisoners expressed great appreciation and a strong desire to regain their liberty so that they might join again in the world fight against fascism."

It's too bad there isn't space to introduce the reader to the "Blue-jacket Scuttlebutt," the Navy gunners corner of the paper: to the lively gossip tit-bits in the column, "Glancing 'Round," to the story of John Carapiet, the oiler, who ran a barber's chair on the hatch on th[illegible] and donated his tonsorial earnings to the Red Cross—$50 on the trip.

Well, there's just too much to tell. Captain Mulzac or Alexander will just have to donate those files to National Museum or the NMU library.

CAPT. HUGH MULZAC on the bridge of his ship, the SS Booker T. Washington

---

Journal and Guide Norfolk, Virginia

NOV 13 1943

Negro Marines Share In Service's 168th Year

WASHINGTON, D. C.—When the 168th anniversary of the U. S. Marine Corps is observed on November 10, tribute will be paid for the second time to Negro recruits in this branch of the service.

Although the Marine Corps only began active training of Negro Marines on September 1, 1942 more than 8,500 of these recruits are now enrolled in the service.

The first group of 1,200 Negro volunteers began training at Camp LeJeune, New River, N. C., and six months later on March 1, the first Negro Marines were on active duty in the Far Pacific.

Since 1921, November 10, has been observed as the birthday of the Marine Corps. Each year on that date, detachments of Marines all over the world have been assembled by their commanding officers for a formal reading of the official birthday message.

In 1942 the Corps announced an expansion program which would include the recruitment of 10,000 Negroes into the service. Today, though the Corps is still expanding, its ranks are being filled through the mechanism of Selective Service.

Began In 1775

In 1775 when "two battalions of Marines" were recruited in a Philadelphia tavern to form the nucleus of the Continental Corps, prospective recruits had little choice in the type of duty which they were to perform. But as the Marine Corps celebrates the 168th Anniversary this year, modern Leathernecks have opportunity to serve in numerous highly specialized branches.

These include Aviation, Line, Mess, Musician, Paymaster, Quartermaster, and Communication.

But regardless of his specialized training, every Marine is potentially a fighting man—a Marine first, a specialist later.

Although Negroes were first admitted only 14 months ago, they are serving in five of the seven branches of the service.

Most of the Negro Marines, however, are in either Line duty or in the Mess service. Line duty is sub-divided into [illegible] elements, [illegible] as infantry, artillery, anti-aircraft, air ground units, tank units, engineering, chemical warfare and the new Paramarines.

The Mess Service

The Mess Service includes the Cooks and Bakers School. Picked for natural aptitude rather than arbitrarily, Marines fresh from rigorous "boot camp" training are sent to cooking schools where they learn how to satisfy divergent tastes with appetizing menus.

Leatherneck cooks have frequently been called from behind their galley stoves to prove their fighting heritage with cold steel.

Corps history is fi[illegible]ith incidents [illegible] heroic valor where aproned mess sergeants have answered the challenge of enemy fire, to return casually to the work of preparing belated chow.

It is this fighting tradition to which the public pays homage on November 10, and the pioneer Negroes in the service share with others this acclaim.

Pittsburgh, Pa. Courier

GREAT LAKES MIRROR STRIDES OF RACE MEN SERVING IN UNCLE SAM'S NAVY

As the day of doom draws nearer for the Axis, Negro soldiers are learning the art of marine service, which will stand them in good stead for the remainder of their lives. These scenes are typical of what sepia sailors learn in the Navy.

Left: Trainees stand at attention on the campus of Hampton Institute as Capt. Edward C. Raguet, U.S.N., chief of staff inspects them for the commandant of the Fifth Naval district, Admiral Hanley H. Simons, U.S.N.; Capt. Raguet is in the foreground. The three-striper facing the trainees is Commander R. C. Pennoyer, U.S.N., executive officer Fleet Service schools.

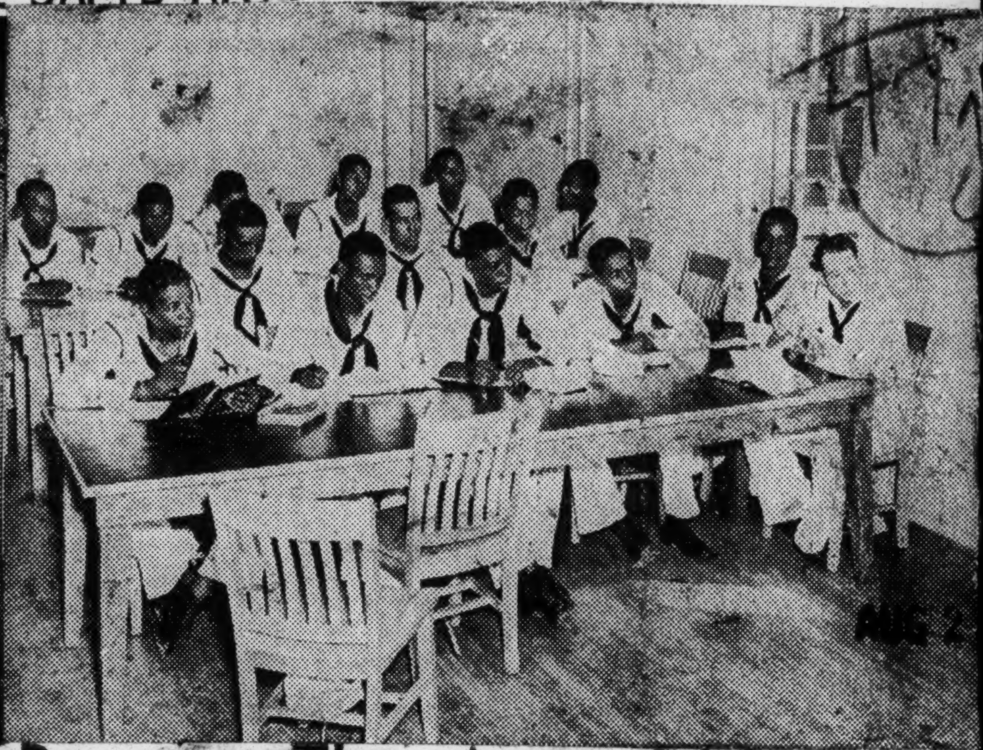
Center: The first class of Negro cooks and bakers to report at the Charleston Navy Yard Cooks and Bakers' school are shown receiving their first lesson in how to cook "chow" for the Navy's fighting men. All are rated seaman second-class, and they will be promoted to seamen first-class upon completion of the 16-weeks' course. Top ranking men of the school will be graduated as ships' cook third-class.

They are, left to right: M. Whisenant, seaman second-class Birmingham, Ala.; A. Barnwell, seaman second-class, St. George, S. C.; C. Barnet, seaman second-class, Winston Salem, N. C.; T. Oates, seaman second-class, Charlotte, N. C.; J. Winstead, seaman second-class, Roxboro, N. C.; S. Williams, seaman second-class Kansas City, Kan.; W. Young seaman second-class, Bessemer Ala.; E. Roan, seaman second-class, Washington, D. C.; G. J. Bell, seaman second-class, High Point, N. C.; J. Williams, seaman second-class, Brooklyn, N. Y.; S. Anderson, seaman second-class, Birmingham, Ala.; L. Lomax, seaman second-class, Washington, D. C.; J. A. Benton, seaman second-class, Greensboro N. C.; J. R. Morton, seaman second-class, Shreveport, La.; A. Young, seaman second-class, Birmingham, Ala. The instructor is S. P. White, yeoman first-class.

Right: Chosen as honor men of their respective school groups four Negro Bluejackets receive honor man certificates from Commander D. W. Armstrong at graduation exercises for the eighth Negro class to complete Service school instruction at the U. S. Naval Training station, Great Lakes, Ill. Left to right, they are: Charles Lindsay Stoudenmire, 30, of 169 Ninth street N., Birmingham, Ala.; Vernon Dunbar Bailey, 23, of 14 Brown street, Beulah Park, Cleveland, Ohio; John Edward Scott, 22, of 220 Pope street, Washington, Ga.; and John Louis Watkins, 18, of 1302 Wentworth avenue, Chicago Heights, Ill.—U. S. Navy photos from OWI.

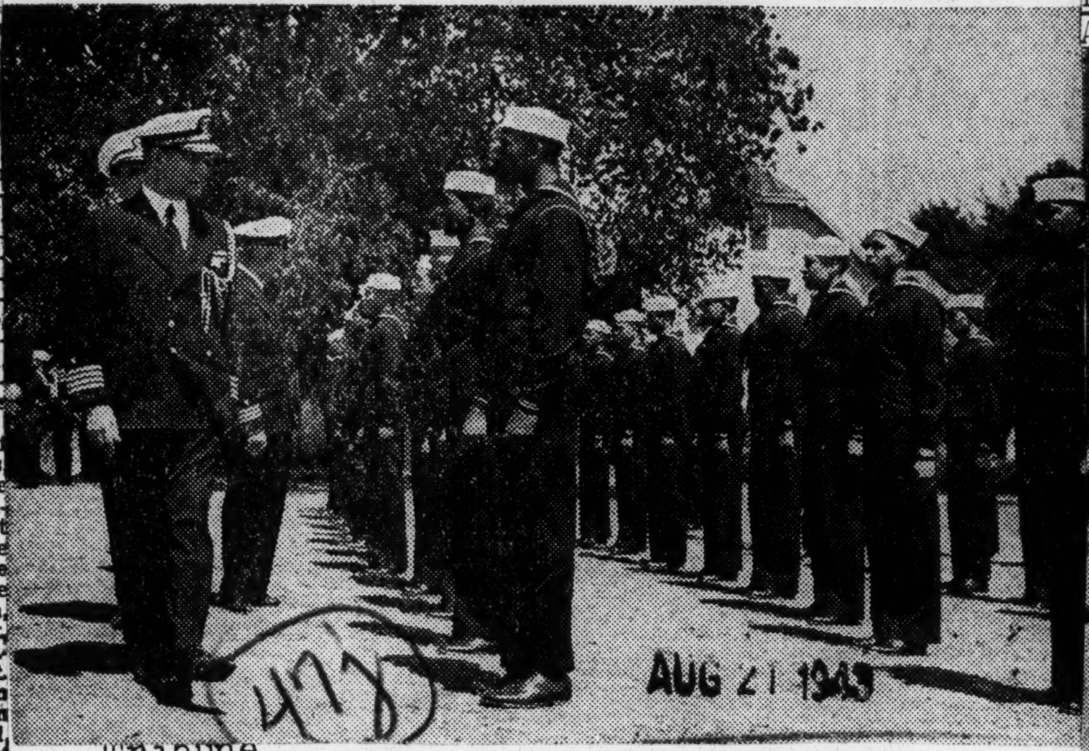
Aug 21 1943

AUG 21 1943



AUG 2

CHARLESTON NAVY YARD ... HAMPTON INSTITU



AUG 21 1943

478

Passing The Ammunition

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

NOV 24 1943

NOV 24 1943

Somewhere in the Pacific — (Special) — Aboard a U. S. Navy Warship in the Pacific, here you see a Commander inspecting a group of fighting Negroes before the battle begun. In the lower photo Monroe J. Johnson, Jr., M. (left) of Jonesboro, Tennessee, and Leslie Wilson, Steward 3-c, of Elgin, Texas, are passing the ammunition' in effort to Hitler and Hirohito. The picture is proof that Negroes are serving in this capacity, despite the rumors to the contrary. — PRESS PHOTO SERVICE.

Nov 24 1943

Tribune
Philadelphia, Pa.

85,628 Colored In Navy

WASHINGTON, D. C. (ANP) — Functioning with the navy department are 85,628 colored men. These men are distributed among the three branches in the following proportions:

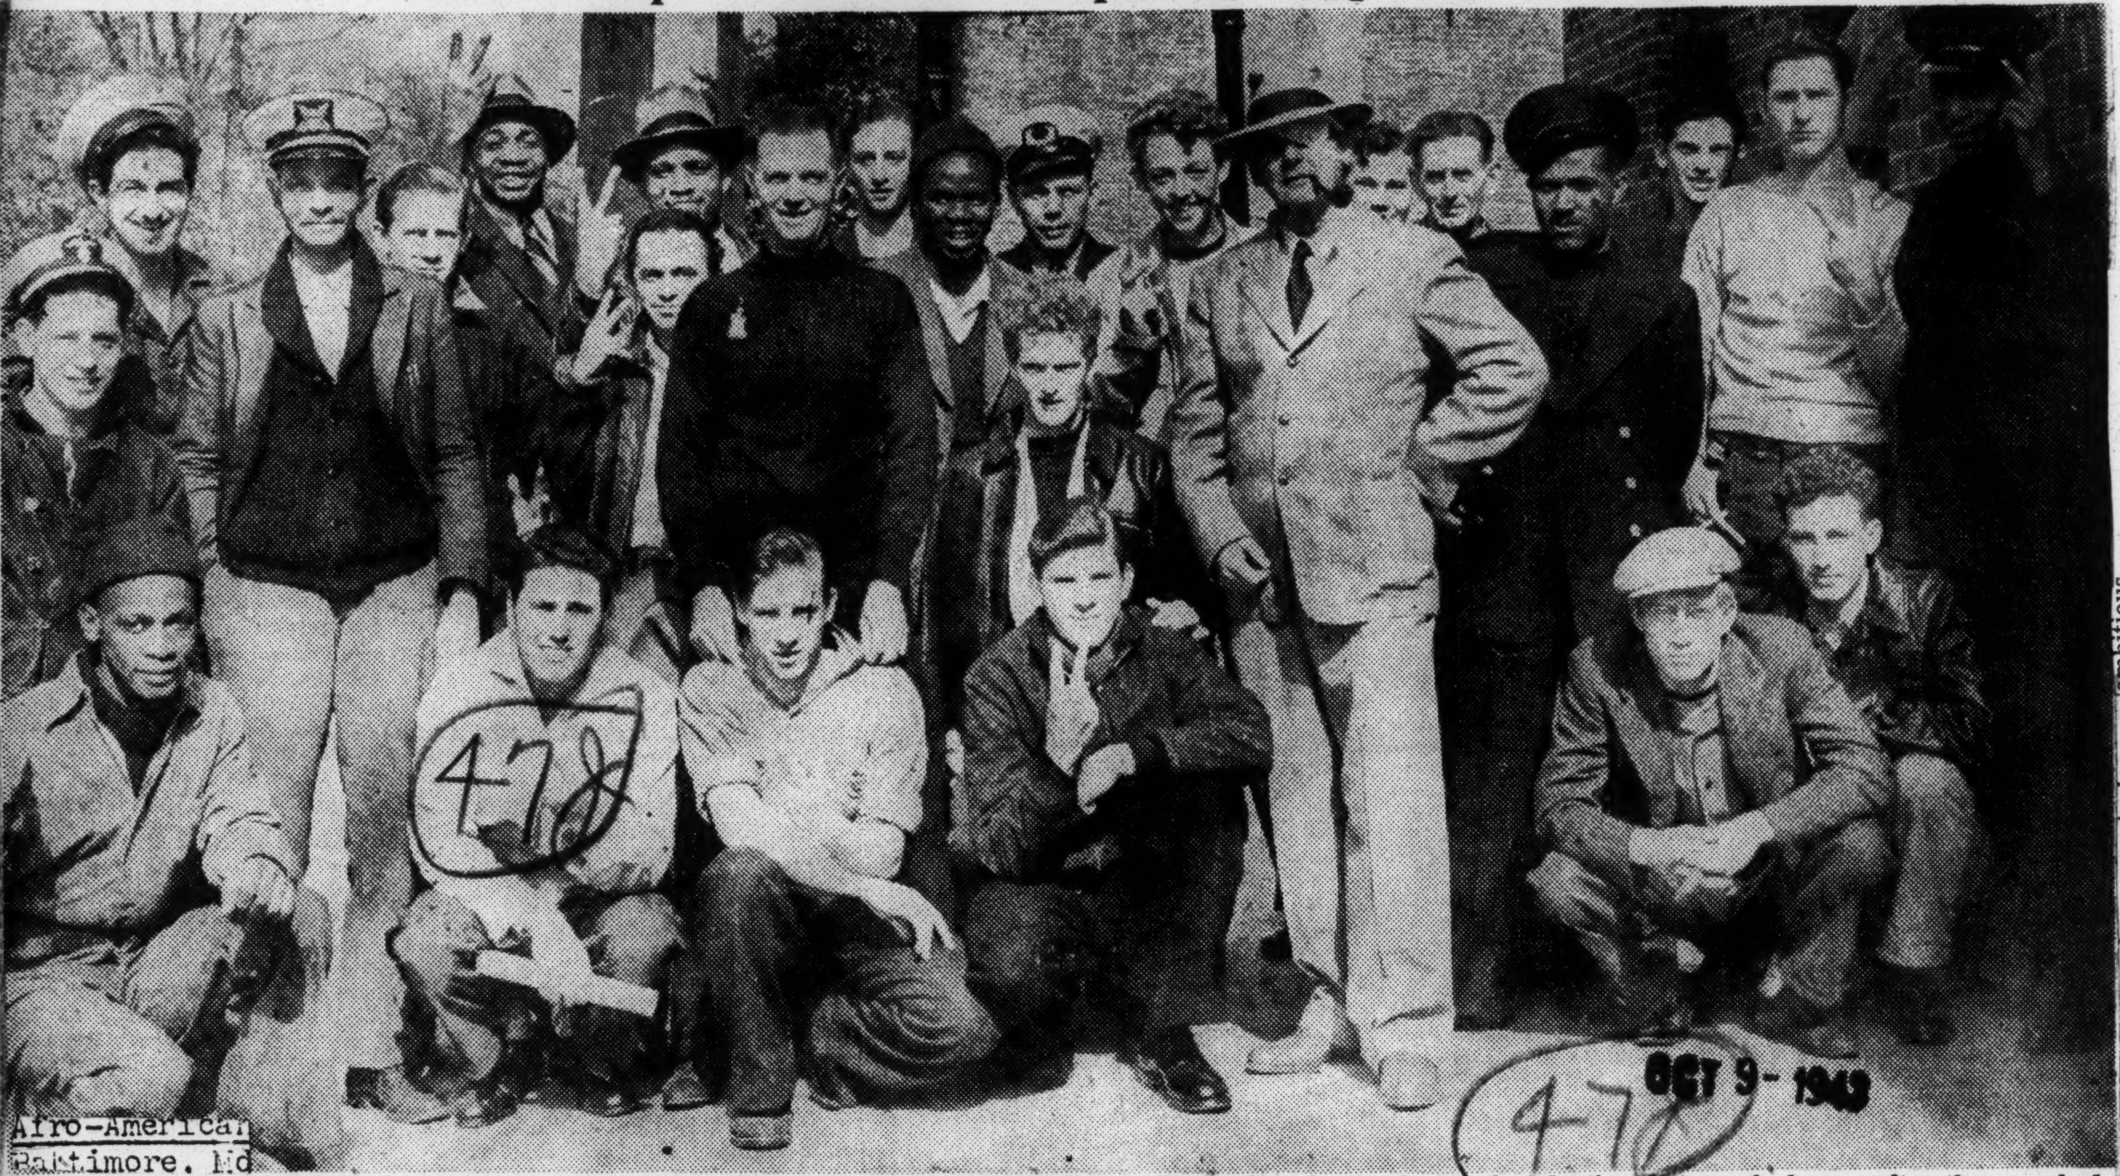
Navy	74,013
Coast Guard	3,115
Marines	8,500

NOV 20 1943

478

47j-1943

Crew of Capt. Richardson's Torpedoed Ship Safe in U.S.



Afro-American
Baltimore, Md

Mixed crew of Captain Adrian Richardson's Liberty ship which was torpedoed and sunk by a Nazi submarine in the North Atlantic, photographed soon after they reached a Canadian port last month. Second from left in second row, standing, is Captain Richardson. Extreme right, standing is Adam Van Landingham of Baltimore, chief steward; Back row left, making V for victory sign is James Gregory, oiler, Baltimore.

OCT 9-1943

Sees Negro Marines in Action in South Pacific

Kansas City, Mo
Kansas City Call

BY FLETCHER P. MARTIN

War Correspondent For Combined Negro Press.

DEC 31 1943

HEADQUARTERS, SOUTH PACIFIC COMMAND — (Via Air mail) — Negro Marines are here and after watching them under fire it is the spoken opinion of commanding officers that they have "proven an important addition to the finest body of fighting men in the world."

Side by side with other American units in the South Pacific, the first contingents of Negro Marines to reach this advance base in the combat zone are helping build it into a key supply and defense front from which the putsch can continue Northward. Stationed at Russell Islands, in the Solomons group, they represent the first Negroes to join the Corps, and the first to see services overseas.

Louisianans In Command

There are two groups, sections of a base depot unit, commanded by Captain Edward C. Apperson, of Monroe. La., and Lieutenant Cade Strickland, of Kentwood, La. The latter recently replaced Captain Jason M. Austin, of Baltimore, as commanding officer of one of the units. These two officers agree that their men are "good Marines" who have proven themselves regardless of hazard or fatigue while subject to almost unrelenting enemy bombing attacks.

Trained as infantrymen, specializing in sea coast and antiaircraft artillery, automatic weapons and tanks, they are nearly all volunteers. The majority, including one whole unit, volunteered for their present assignments.

Former clerks and cooks, teachers and mechanics, carpenters and farmers, and the "kid" who used to play around the corner in Michigan and Mississippi, New York and Alabama, Ohio and Pennsylvania, Illinois and Arkansas, Virginia and California, they now operate as a potent unit and are unanimous in wanting to get to Tokyo first, and fast. Then home and back to civilian pursuits.

In Good Spirit

Retaining marked good humor and spirit under trying conditions imposed by remoteness and tropics, they soldier hard, taking the good with the bad—like Marines.

Humorously they refer to themselves as "material maneuvers."

The baptism of fire came early. Following "boot camp" training at Montford Point, Camp Lejeune, New River, North Carolina, they headed West across the vast Pacific. The ship docked at Guadal Canal enroute to where Admiral William Halsey, United States Navy, rules and reigns.

On arrival at "the 'canal" they witnessed and felt the first thrill of raiding enemy planes while still aboard ship. It was a new experience, deadly and exciting.

Once ashore they became accustomed to the regular nightly rounds of Japanese bombardments. Finding the need of fox holes urgent, each man dug his own or participated in digging a group haven from aerial attacks. They found that this was an essential MUST on the "We hope to stay alive" list.

Enroute to this new defense post, the new Marines first stopped at New Caledonia, a quaint little French island in the South Pacific. Picturesque with its French-flavored buildings, missions, beautiful dull blue-topped mountains, winding streets, and hospitable people who knew how to speak very little English.

The men felt the acute need of learning French. Pocket-size grammars helped eliminate the language problem. It was interesting to watch facial expressions as the French poured forth from these towering husky Marines.

Trade With French

Trade started immediately, once the international language of commerce was used as a basis, the relations between the French and these Americans became more heated at each transaction. Sent home were grass skirts, sea shells, war clubs and canes, and other indiginous curious which fetch for the natives, money (first), cigarettes, tobacco, pipes, soap, jewelry, etc. The visionary brought along ample supplies of the latter from dime stores at home.

Once settled on Russell Islands, promotions came fast and furious as the men kept the standards of the Marine Corps flying high. Fully realizing that they were the first in the service, and would have to set the pace for others who would follow, and the men set out to do the job the hard way.

Several rose quickly to the coveted rank of sergeant in very short time. The sergeants and corporals, in the words of commanding officers "have demonstrated themselves to be competent men."

The camp sight is impressive Clean and well hidden in the bowels of jungular terrain, concealed by towering palms, the tents are expertly put up, having palm plank flooring, built-up sides, etc., have been completed by the extra ambitious.

Heat The Only Complaint

Plain but nourishingly wholesome food keeps them fit. Everyone does his own laundry, cleans his own living quarters and area. Four men usually live in a tent. There is a barber, cobbler and tailor available, themselves Marines too.

The only general complaint is the torrid sun, but once in a while there are kegs of cold beer and soft drinks. (That's more than can be said for many outfits this correspondent has visited in the Southwest Pacific.) Life here is "rugged but righteous" as one New Orleans man expressed it.

One of the str[illegible], and yet not so strange, contributions of Negroes [illegible] this war is music. No matter where the camp, the music closest to our hearts can be heard coming from the strangest places, and at the oddest times. At this camp amidst the palm grove of a former coconut plantation can be heard spirituals such as "Join the Band," and "Father Prepare Me," mingled with livelier tunes of nostalgic melodies.

This comes when work i[illegible] through as do boxing, basketbal[illegible] volleyball, and softball. They hav[illegible] set up their own rings and court just as they built their own cam[illegible] and mess hall, and organized thei[illegible] own teams and musical units.

A Rhythm Quartet

One unit, the Rhythm Kings who double on spirituals an[illegible] swing, is composed of Sergeant James Harper, Philadelphia; Corporal James E. Masters, Crockett Texas; Corporal Earnest H. Lyons Atlanta, former photographer fo[illegible] the Atlanta Daily World; and Corporal Ira L. Blackwell, Vaux Hall N. J.

Birmingham is represented by 17 men, the largest number from any one city. Detroit and Atlanta rank next in number, but hardly a corner of the country is absen[illegible] Little towns in Texas and California, and representatives to rank alongside the "big city" men from Boston, Chicago, Pittsburgh, and New Orleans.

In the social arguments and athletic contests the So[illegible] industrial city representatives usually win out through force of numbers. But never far behind are the Marines from the Mid-West. The 'zoot-suiters' are here, and there is very little that can be done about it. Work dungarees have been zooted, and is legal. Pants must be rolled in such a fashion to keep them clear of mud and dust. The men simply had them pegged, Marine tailor being in the camp. But when they gave a new zip to the campaign hat giving it a "sharp" effect, that definitely was not in the regulations.

New to the Marine corps, but excellently carrying out their duties with the Seabees, on the docks with soldiers and other Marines, doing guard duties and making regular watches, again in the words of a commanding officer they have proved "an important addition to the finest bo[illegible] fighting men in the world".

(The first day this correspondent arrived in the South Pacific, where there are a tremendous number of Negro combat units, after a hurried flight from General MacArthur's Southwest Pacific Command, Naval Public Relations Officer, Commander Bassett gave me the notes of Sergeant John R. Hurley, USMC, Marine Corps Combat Correspondent. Sergeant Hurley, a New Yorker, had gathered these on his trip North, and they have made this story possible. This correspondent is enroute to the Solomons to join the outfit and other known Negro combat units).

Commander Armstrong On Navy Officers

Journal and Guide

A SOUND vote of thanks is in order for Commander Daniel W. Armstrong, the officer in charge of training colored recruits at Great Lakes, (Ill.) Naval Training Station. In a formal address in Chicago he declared:

> I cannot tell you when commissions will be authorized. But this I can say—I am personally on record with the Secretary of the Navy in recommending that Negroes be commissioned as officers in the United States Navy, and I back up my recommendations.

Norfolk, Virginia

Commander Armstrong is an influential man; he was in civilian life and he is still as a key man in the Navy's training program. He comes from a family with a distinguished record of service on behalf of the Negro. His own record of achievement in this field is noteworthy. Among other things, Commander Armstrong is a trustee of Hampton Institute. All Negroes entering the Navy receive their basic training under his supervision. The Navy cannot but give weight to his recommendation that Negroes be commissioned.

Commander Armstrong says further that he wishes to see every man "advance in keeping with his respective abilities." In this connection there is apparently a considerable gap between his own expressed policy and the actual practice of the Navy. Scores of cases have come to this newspaper's attention where men clearly capable of other duties have been assigned to "General Detail" or essentially labor units—men with college degrees and civilian backgrounds of accomplishment and proved ability.

Now, obviously, no screening of men, no selective system will, in a wartime program, precisely put every Navy trainee exactly where he is of greatest service. Moreover, it is fair to point out that a mere scholastic or collegiate certificate or degree is not per se evidence of a man's military usefulness in a specialized category. That calls for qualities of leadership and initiative, and for personality traits that may be missing in otherwise technically qualified persons. But the conclusion is inescapable that too many qualified men are shunted into muscle jobs in the Navy.

Is it that a quota system prevails and is too inelastic to permit all qualified men to go to advanced training schools? This seems a likely cause, since the Navy's total admissions are based on racial and geographical percentages.

COMMANDER Armstrong cites a criticism frequently heard from white Navy and Army men, some of them friendly to the use of Negro officers in either service. It is that "Negroes fail to respect the authority of men of their own race" assigned to lead them as petty and non-commissioned or commissioned officers.

It is difficult to accept this as a generally true condition. Moreover, assuming its limited accuracy, the policy and practices of the armed services themselves, with respect to Negro leadership, contributes to the reported condition in several ways.

There is a widespread attitude of grudging tolerance of Negroes, even as non-commissioned officers. When white officers fail to respect Negro men with leadership responsibility, the men in the ranks have their own respect undermined. The same thing would happen to white officers similarly treated.

The absence of Negro officers at all in the Navy inevitably plants in the minds of Negro enlisted men a doubt of the capacity of Negroes to lead them. To whatever extent the complaint is true, it's a vicious circle of the Navy's own making.

IN ANOTHER connection, but on the subject of Negro commissioned Navy officers, Commander Armstrong points out that the Negro—> had been excluded from general service (in the Navy) for twenty years (until June, 1942) and has thus been deprived of whatever knowledge he might have acquired of the Navy from friends and other associations.

>
> To make it possible for the Negro to take his place beside the white man in the Naval service, ways and means had of necessity to be developed and put into effect so that he might undertake his duties on an equal footing with his white compatriot.
>
> But for him to assume undue responsibilities of rank before he was properly trained would have been a grave injustice to him. And yet there are those who clamoured for this very thing . . . .
>
> My own opinion is that there would have been no surer way for this program to have ended in disaster than by the commissioning of officers before either the prospective officers or men whom they were to command were trained to discharge the duties and responsibility incumbent upon them in a satisfactory manner. It was not like the Army, where there were already well-trained regiments with tradition behind them that could quickly be expended.

COMMANDER Armstrong's thesis here is unassailable. Unprepared and untrained officers are walking death warrants for themselves and their men under combat conditions. We hold, however, that the Navy Department has had eighteen months under its present revised policy to do something tangible—but has not. We hold, further, that it could, two years ago, have begun the pioneering steps in the commissioning of Negroes.

It could, for instance, have done with Negroes exactly what it did with white athletes, coaches, and trained physical education specialists. That is, select them from civilian life, give them a short but adequate indoctrination course, and rate them at least as chief specialists, or as officers, to conduct body-building programs, athletics, and recreation. But it did not.

It could long ago have seen to it that Negroes were accepted into the Naval Academy at Annapolis. If the Navy plans to have any officers from our group during this war, relaxing the Annapolis barriers will create no problem, since even with the speeded up wartime curriculum it takes three years to graduate a cadet as an officer.

Similarly, it could have commissioned Negroes in the dental and medical corps, as chaplains, as morale officers. It could at least have tried the Army's now-proved experiment of an all-Negro aviation squadron.

In these steps neither the Navy nor Negro advocates of commissioning Negroes would have risked the dangers of immaturity alluded to by Commander Armstrong, and which might conceivably apply to some phases of Navy service. We had, and now have, capable men—or men ready for training as officers.

Finally, Commander Armstrong remarked emphatically that "there is far more intergration going on in the Naval service and equality of opportunities than either you believe or have been led to believe." That is a fine argument for the commissioning of Negroes as public relations (news) officers at the major Navy installations and in the Navy Department itself. The light of that good news is certainly being hidden under a bushel at present.

Commander Armstrong suggests strongly that commissioning of Negroes in the Navy will become an actuality, although he cannot say when. His support of such a step will hasten the day. By officially recording that support he has done the Negro a great service and served his country well—since any contribution to national unity and heightened morale is as important to victory as a military success on the field or at sea.

47j-1943

Navy Cook, Single Handed, Mans Gun Against U-Boat

Tribune Philadelphia, Pa.
NOV 20 1943

Dorie Miller, famed Bluejacket hero of the Pearl Harbor attack, had a new rival this week.

He is Christopher Columbu[illegible] Sheppa[illegible] class, USN, and a "one-man gun crew" on the Destroyer Borie. This destroyer was part of a Naval force recently awarded the Presidential Unit Citation for having sunk "more submarines than any team in Naval history."

Sheppard's exploits, and those of another colored member of the Borie crew, Ernest Gardner, steward's mate second class, USNR, were revealed by their commander, Lieut. Charles H. Hutchins of Terre Haute, Ind., during a press conference at the Navy [illegible] last Wednesday.

NOV 20 1943

Washington Tribune
Washington, D. C.

Woman Editor Christens Liberty Ship SS Johnson

One of the most talented of American Negroes was honored recently when the Liberty Ship, S.S. James Weldon Johnson, was launched at the Wilmington (Calif.) yards of the California Shipbuilding Corporation. It was the 301st Calship built for the U. S. Maritime Commission and the seventh of a series that the Commission has named for outstanding Negro Americans.

DEC 18 1943

Mrs. Charlotte A. Bass, editor of The California Eagle, of Los Angeles, christened the vessel, and her secretary, Miss Bernice Cook, served as maid of honor.

James Weldon Johnson was noted as a teacher, song writer, poet, essayist, lawyer and diplomat, but he was best bnown as a publicist and executive secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People for more than a decade.

Born in Jacksonville, Fla., on June 17, 1871, he was killed in an automobile-train collision near his summer home at Dark Harbor, Me., on June 26, 1938. He was a graduate of Atlanta University, Atlanta, Ga., and did graduate work at Columbia University in New York City.

DEC 18 1943

At Soviet Festival

Philadelphia Tribune
Philadelphia, Pa.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Ambassador Gromyko, who represents the Soviet Union in the U. S., is greeting Paul Robeson, curre[illegible] Othello. The occasion is the 26th anniversary of the October Revolution. The affair was held at the Soviet Embassy.

NOV 20 1943

First Anniversary Of Negro Marines Staged

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.
SEP 4

NEW RIVER, N. C., Sept. 2—(ANP) — Appropriate ceremonies were held last week at the training center in Camp Lejeune celebrating the first anniversary of the induction of Howard P. Perry of Charlotte, the first Negro admitted into the Marine corps.

Since their enrollment a year ago the "Leathernecks" have advanced rapidly in the service, reporting today several corporals and sergeants. Many have been assigned to battle areas overseas, while others have demonstrated an uncanny knowledge of amphibious tactics. The marines have also organized athletic clubs, an orchestra and a glee club as extra-curricular activities.

Thousands Of Race Seabees Prepare For Action Abroad

Daily World
Atlanta, Ga.
DEC 24

Work of Men in South Pacific

Is Praised by Base Commander

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(SNS)—It's a long jump from Camp Peary, Va., to the Solomons, Guadacanal, Florida, Tulagi and other South Pacific slands, but thousands of Negro Seabees have made it in recent months. And there are thousands more where they came from.

While Negro members of the Navy's famed Construction Battalions have been building seaplane bases and shore installations in the far Pacific despite enemy air action and adverse weather conditions—fellow recruits at the basic training camp near Williamsburg, Va., are preparing daily to make their contribution to the growing offensive against the enemy on all fronts.

DEC 24

MAKE FINE RECORD

These Negro recruits are following in the footsteps of the charter group of 80 Negro Seabees who reported to Camp Peary on the James river during February, 1943. And they hope to perpetuate the tradition of the first Negro Seabee Battalion, of whose work in the South Pacific the Navy Base Commander said:

"You pursued your duties with perseverance and attention to the objective of doing a fast, workman-like job. Your devotion to duty under adverse weather conditions and enemy air action has the deepest admiration of the Commander, Base X."

The training of Negro Seabees has been stepped up considerably since the 80 original recruits started building "cat walks," fences, and landscapes, and transforming mosquito-infested swamps and forests into a picturesque site among the Virginia pines. By October, 1943 more than 7,000 Negroes had been enrolled in the corps and at least 2,000 were already on active duty in the South Pacific and South Atlantic.

DEC 24

HAUSER DIRECTS WORK

In the intervening period, also, Negroes have been given greater responsibility in the training program of the camp. When recruits arrive at Camp Peary they are interviewed and classified for their Seabee assignments on the basis of previous training and experience.

This work is directed by John W. Hauser, of Winston-Salem, N. C., a graduate of Talladega College and former hear of a divisional office of the United States Employment Service in Winston-Salem.

DEC 24 1943

There are now 28 specially trained Negro instructors who undertake the task of whipping the recruits into military shape, and of teaching them the "Navy- way" of living and acting. Already some of their platoons have won the enviable record of "Top Platoon" in more than one competitive drill contest. The very best platoons, both white and Negro, are jicked for these competitive drills, and the winning platoons must be strictly "on the ball" in every sense.

MANY ACTIVITIES

But not all the time at this "boot camp" is spent in learning to drill. There is a swimming pool and an "orientation assembly" directed every Thursday night by Charles Flax, of Hampton, former soloist with the famous Hampton chorus. Well-planned athletic contests are promoted by the Athletic Department on Sunday afternoons, where everything from softball to horseshoes and sack races are indulged in. There are frequent smokers, with bouts by professional boxers now in the "Seabee hive." The Commando Run includes the performance of difficult feats over muddy pools of water where the slightest mistake will result in a very unpleasant "ducking."

DEC 24 1943

The work of the Seabees includes the building of modern roads through swamps and jungles; construction of airports for heavy bombers and fighters in strategic areas near the fighting fronts. These fighting sailors also build docks all over the globe to facilitate shipment of cargo and weapons of war. Like the Marines, the Seabees are often the first ashore and must be prepared to fight to hold the ground on which they are soon to start construction work.

DEC 24 1943

Capt. James C. Ware is commanding officer of Camp Peary. Until recently, Lt. Com. J. P. Falconer was regimental commander for the Negro units, but he left that station recently with an overseas battalion. Other officers engaged in the training of Negro Seabees include: Lt. (u. g.) Robert E. Gitler, Lt. John A. Volpe, Lt. H. T. Bradstreet and Ensign E. E. Kenney.

800 Negro Sailors Win Training Honors

The Worker
New York. N. Y

CHICAGO.—Eight hundred members of the champion 16th Regiment at the Great Lakes Naval Training Station, Negro graduates of eight weeks "boot" training, were scattering to all parts of the world today on new assignments in United States naval service.

Four honor men of the regiment were singled out for special citations, and the entire 16th Regiment was recognized officially at its graduation exercises Oct. 28 as the champion unit in the station's war bond drive.

The regiment, commanded by Lieut. Commander Edward [illegible] McGinnis of Chicago, recorded the highest percentage of participation ever to be attained at the station by any recruit organization. More than 93 percent of the regiment's members made war bond allotments, Lieut. D. W. Davis announced in extending official congratulations.

Lieut. Commander McGinnis, a reserve officer formerly well known in American Legion activities, sent the members of the regiment off to their new assignments with the statement:

"Your boots are off now. You are no longer recruits but real sailors. You have qualities of capability and leadership which should carry you far in your country's service."

Another honor accorded the 16th Regiment was the presentation of "the rooster," or "E" award flag, by Commander D. W. Armstrong, chief of Negro recruit training at Great Lakes who witnessed the final review of the graduates which was marked by a high standard of military precision.

This award goes each month to the regiment scoring the highest average in military, disciplinary and technical excellence at Camp Lawrence.

NOV 7 1943

Peoples Voice
New York. N. Y.

NAACP Probes Failure To Promote Officers

COLUMBUS, Ga. ([illegible]P)—Names of 11 Negro army officers are scheduled to be filed by the local branch of the NAACP with the War Department as a protest to the War Department's attitude of curtailing thte advancement of Negro officers, it was learned this week.

Negro officers above first and second lieutenants in the fourth corps area are not favored for promotion by tthe War Department, the NAACP charged. A protest will be filed with the department demanding an investigation of such practices along with a prepared list of Negro first and second lieutenants on duty in this vicinity and around the Fort Benning area, NAACP officials said.

DEC 18 1943

Noted Poet And Career Man To Be Given Honor

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

Vessel Slated To Be Launched At Wilmington Yards

WASHINGTON — (SNS) —The seventh Liberty Ship to be named for an outstanding Negro American, the SS JAMES WELDON JOHNSON, will be launched at the Wilmington yards of the California Shipbuilding Corporation in December, the Maritime Commission announced this week.

The vessel will pay tribute to the noted poet, essayist, lawyer and diplomat who was killed in an automobile-train collision near his summer home at Dark Harbor, Me., on June 26, 1938.

Mr. Johnson, who also achieved note as a song-writer and a professor of literature at Fisk and New York universities, was born in Jacksonville, Fla., on June 17, 1871. Completing public school study in his native city he later received B. A. and M. A. degrees from Atlanta University and did graduate study at Columbia University in New York City.

FLORIDA TEACHER

His career began as a teacher in the Jacksonville public school, which was elevated to high school grade during his tenure as principal. During this period he studied law at night and, in 1897, was admitted to the Florida Bar, the first of his race to achieve this honor since tthe Civil War.

In 1901 he went to New York City and with his brother, J. Rosamund Johnson, and Bob Cole, collaborated in the successful writing of popular songs and [illegible] operas. [illegible] he was appointed U. S. Consul first to Venezuela and later to [illegible]aragua.

Returning to New York in 1910, he married Grace Nail and two years later his first book, the fictional "Autobiography of an Ex-Colored Man," appeared ananymously. Its authorship was not acknowledged by Mr. Johnson until 1927.

He edited a book of American Negro poetry and two of Negro Spirituals; and also wrote the English libretto for the opera "Goyescas." which was produced by the Metropolitan Opera Company in 1915. As a New York resident, he became contributing editor for The New York Age, and later executive secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. This organization awarded him the Spingarn Medal in 1925 for his work in behalf of the Negro.

FISK U. PROFESSOR

Finally, without ceasing to write, he returned to teaching in 1930, to become professor of Creative Literature at Fisk University, Nashville, Tennessee, and from 1934 until his death, visiting professor of Literature at New York University.

Among his best known books were: "Fifty Years and Other Poems," "Self-Determining Haiti," "Black Manhattan," "St. Peter Relates an Incident of the Resurrection Day," "Negro America, What Now?" and "Along This Way."

Other Liberty ships that have been named for Negroes are the SS Booker T. Washington, George Washington Carver, Paul Laurence Dunbar, Frederick Dauglass, John Merrick and Robert L. Vann.

The Navy Department has named a naval vessel, the Destroyer Escort Leonard Roy Harmon, in honor of a Negro messman who received the Navy Cross posthumously for heroic conduct at Gaudalcanal.

DEC 5 1943

Pearl Harbor

Norfolk. Va

Hero Lost

Journal & Guide

Was Reported On Aircraft Carrier Lost, In November

WASHINGTON, D. C. — The Navy Department this week confirmed reports that Dorie Miller, first Negro Bluejacket hero in this war, is "missing in action" in the Southwest Pacific. His next of kin, Mr. and Mrs. Corney Miller, Waco, Texas, have been notified.

Miller, a strapping, 200-pound former fullback from Waco's Moore High School, was awarded the Navy Cross by President Roosevelt for "distinguished devotion to duty, extraordinary courage and disregard for his own personal safety during the attack on the Fleet in Pearl Harbor, Territory of Hawaii, by Japanese forces on December 7, 1941."

At the same time, Miller received a letter of commendation from the Secretary of the Navy and was advanced in rating from mess attendant, third class, to mess attendant, first class. In addition, Bluejacket Miller has received the American Defense Service Medal, the Fleet Clasp and the Asiatic-Pacific Campaign Medal.

ADMIRAL NIMITZ DOES HONORS

Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, Commander-in-Chief of the Pacific Fleet, personally presented the Navy Cross to Miller in ceremonies aboard a United States warship in the Pacific on May 27, 1942.

Pinning the bit of ribbon and cross of bronze on the sailor's breast, he described his act of heroism on the U. S. S. Arizona during the Japanese attack on the Pearl Harbor naval base, and complimented Miller on being the first representative of his race to be so honored in this war. He then read the citation which said:

"While at the side of his Captain on the bridge, Miller, despite enemy strafing and bombing and in the face of a serious fire, assisted in moving his Captain, who had been mortally wounded, to a place of greater safety, and later manned and operated a machine gun directed at enemy Japanese attacking aircraft until ordered to leave the bridge."

Later in January, 1943, while visiting the U. S. Naval Training Station at Great Lakes, Ill., Bluejacket Miller explained that the Pearl Harbor incident marked his first experience with a machine gun. Addressing hundreds of Negro Bluejackets who are now being taught at Great Lakes to handle such weapons, Miller said:

TALKS TO FELLOW SAILORS

"It wasn't hard. I just pulled the trigger and she worked fine. I had watched the others with these guns. I guess I fired her for about fifteen minutes at those Jap planes. They were diving pretty close to us."

Miller, who was born October 12, 1919, left his father's small Waco, Texas, farm on September 16, 1939, to enlist in the Navy as a mess attendant, third class, at Dallas, Texas. He was sent to the Naval Training Station at Norfolk, Va., and then was assigned to the U. S. Arizona on which he served until the morning of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor.

THE FATEFUL MORNING

Official reports reveal that he rose at 6 a. m. the morning of December 7, and was collecting laundry when the alarm for General Quarters sounded. He headed for his battle station—the anti-aircraft battery magazine amidship—only to discover that torpedo damage already had rendered it untenable.

So he went on deck where —because of his powerful size he was immediately assigned to the task of carrying wounded to places of greater safety. An officer ordered him to the bridge to aid the mortally wounded captain. Miller helped remove the dying officer and then returned to the machine gun.

Since Pearl Harbor, Miller has been assigned to various other naval vessels. Shortly before he was reported missing in action, he was serving aboard the Aircraft Carrier Liscome Bay which was sung by enemy action in the Southwest Pacific on November 24, 1943.

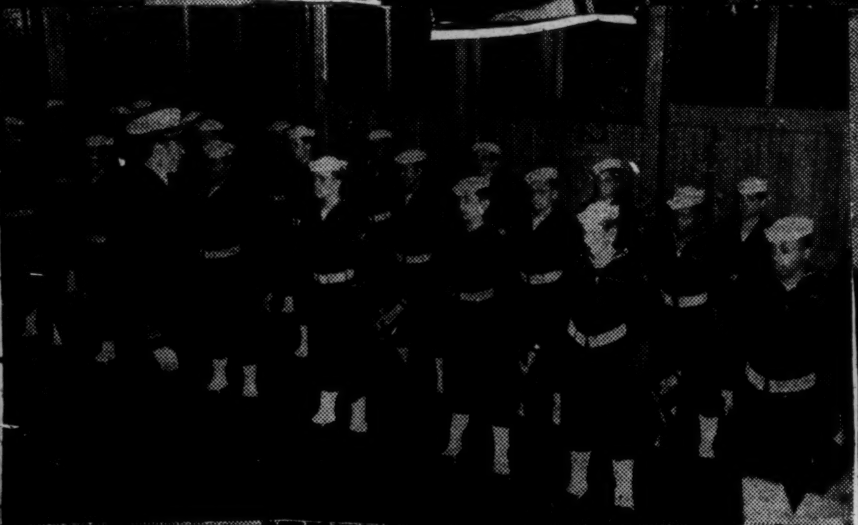
Miller's parents live at Route 1, Box 161, Waco Texas. The missing hero has three brothers, one a private in the U. S. Army.

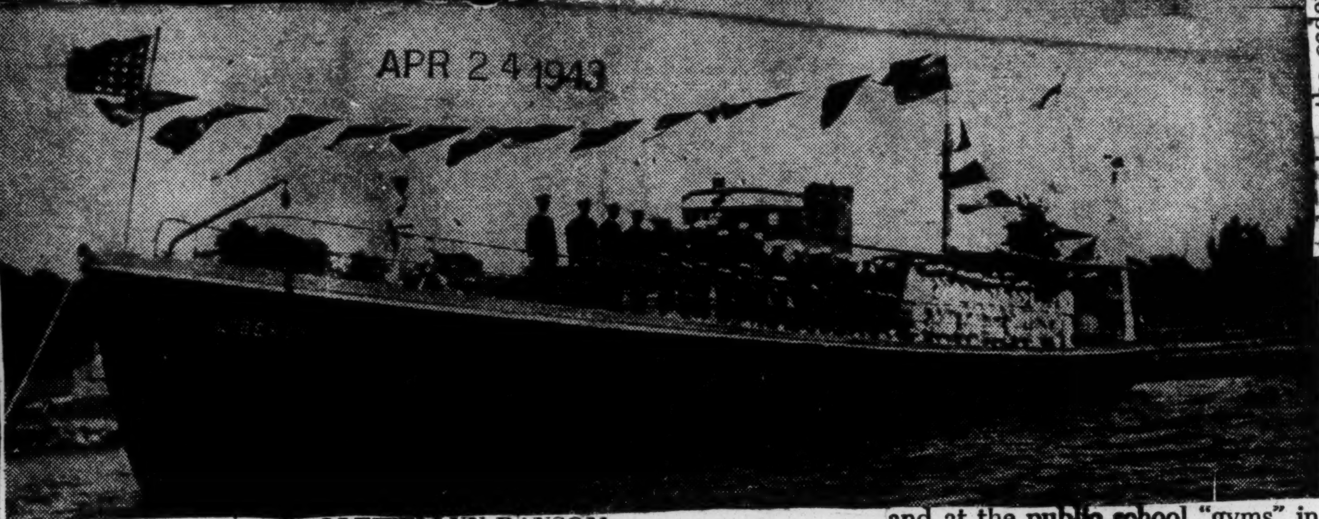
DEC 25 1943

47j-1943

Peoples Voice
New York, N. Y.

APR 2 4 1943





DEMOCRACY IN ACTION!

By LLEWELLYN RANSOM

PV's Crusade for a CRISPUS ATTUCKS BRIGADE of mixed Americans finds an embryonic example in the AMERICAN NAUTICAL CADETS, and the question arises: if these boys from 12 to 18 can train and grow together, why can't they fight together for their country? There is no Boy Scout segregation here at PS 169, as the Washington Heights Battalion learns the latest infantry tactics under expert guidance of former service members.

This non-racial, non-sectarian, non-political, non-profit-making boys' organization, in addition to drill tactics, teachers the cadets the fundamentals of seamanship, navigation, communications, junior aviation, marine engineering, lifeboat drill, first aid, and military physical exercise.

Original and democratic in its ideas, the American Nautical Cadets began April 10, 1909, at 47 University Place in New York City. During the past 32 years it has spread into five states without any publicity. Thousands of boys have been trained in military and nautical procedure. The training ship Liberty is at present in Bishop's Shipyard, Patchogue, LI, for repair and a new engine. The ANC has faith that patriotic friends will help to bring it back.

At headquarters, 225 W 25 st, and at the public school "gyms" in the various district areas, each boy begins his character-building with the following pledge: "I solemnly promise to give true allegiance to the United States of America—to be faithful and loyal to the American Nautical Cadets—to be loyal to my officers and fellow cadets, regardless of their RACE or RELIGION. I promise to do my duty to God and my country—to honor my parents—to respect all civil authorities—to live honestly—to be clean, manly, upright and truthful . . ."

Pictures show:

- Lt. Donald Halbedl takes the cadets through a simulated bayonet drill.
- Liberty submarine chaser used as a training ship for the cadets.
- Washington Heights Battalion going through platoon at close order drill.
- Cadets, Negro and white, eagerly watch during class instruction.
- Evening parade. A Negro cadet proudly bears the colors.—All Morgan Smith photos.

Services of instructors are voluntary. The organization depends upon donations and the bi-annual review and exhibition given each year for equipment and the summer camp up in the Catskills, near Kingston.

Major General William Ottmann of the New York Guard will inspect and review the cadets at their big affair this June 26.

Anne Brown Christens S. S. Douglass with Characteristic Thoroughness

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

MAY 29 1943

BALTIMORE

It took the aid of a crew member for Mrs. Adolph Berle to get the U.S.S. Ashtabula properly launched, Saturday, but when Singer Anne Wiggins Brown tucked the tip, of her silver fox scarves carefully out of the way, handed her immense armful of American beauty roses to her sister standing close by, and swung that champagne bottle, the S. S. Frederick Douglass was rightfully christened.

It was rather significant of the way in which the namesake went about clearing away obstacles in his path and the way in which the singer herself has gone about carving a niche for herself.

Miss Brown looked especially swank in a frock of black crepe, a wide-brimmed malline-edged hat and double fox scarves. Her accessories were patent leather. She brought along her small daughter, who had no end of fun watching the procedings and posing with her famous mother. She is an expert at posing, too.

Ship Model Pleases

Anne accepted with proper enthusiasm the lapel pin, gift from the ship builders. But she glowed with the receipt of a model of the Frederick Douglass which came from one of the welders who had worked on the ship. The donor was Charles Mayfield. His hobby is buliding model airplanes, but he made the ship model in three weeks, after he learned that the sponsor would be Miss Brown.

The sponsor gift was a lapel pin of white and red gold made in the shape of a bow-knot, with two center twos of stones, one diamonds, the other sapphires.

Paul Robeson, also scheduled to be a guest, was absent, having contracted a cold while on the West Coast. By doctor's orders he is resting at his place, The Beeches, at Infield, Conn.

Sings Request Number

Miss Brown, who at first declined to sing, upon persuasion did the spiritual "Walk Together Children," following the ceremonies, and when Rivers Chambers and his musical aggregation swung into "Summer Time" at the luncheon, she heeded the requests of the guests and sang that.

I Christen Thee—

MAY 29 1943

MISS ANNE WIGGINS BROWN christens the S.S. Frederick Douglass at ceremonies at the Bethlehem-Fairfield Shipyards, Baltimore Saturday.

It was probably that everyone welcomed an opportunity to spruce a bit that the women turned out in really gala bibs and tuckers. The wife of the captain wore an off-the face hat with black ensemble, and Mrs. Douglass wore a suit whose black coat topped a gray skirt. He daughter was smart in black with white at the neck and sleeves. Mrs. George McMechen, who presented flowers to th esponsor, was also in an ensemble of black. But Mrs. L. G. Hyman who came over from Washington, topped her cocoa coat with a soft rose hat and wore shoes in a matching shade. The scheme was very colorful.

Luncheon Follows

Luncheon as the York Hotel followed the ceremonies. Some clergyman guests blandly ignored the popping champagne bottles during the hour when cocktails preceded the serving of luncheon, and stayed right through the entire affair. Father Cedric Mills of St. James gave the meal invocation.

Miss Brown left Sunday evening at six for California. Those who wondered whether she is divorcing her N.Y.C. mate, are still wondering. At any rate she is no longer wearing her wedding ring and she is taking her daughter along on this engagement tour.

Luncheon at York

MAY 29 1943

Miss Brown and seventy guests dined at the York Hotel following the christening ceremonies of the ship Frederick Douglass. Seen above are the sponsor, and Melvin G. Hodgkinson, white, personnel manager of the Bethlehem Fairfield Co., who presided at the luncheon.

Tampa, Fla., Tribune
July 8, 1943

Maritime Union Pays Tribute to Negro Shipmaster

NEW YORK, July 7.—(AP)—The National Maritime union today adopted a resolution of tribute to the captain and crew of the Booker T. Washington, a merchant ship operated by Negro and white personnel working together as "a symbol of democracy."

Another resolution demanded that women be permitted to return to sea in United States ships.

Capt. Hugh Mulzac, master of the Booker T. Washington, told the union's 300 delegates at the annual convention that the ship "is giving a demonstration today that the entire world is watching."

The resolution stated that "the Booker T. Washington has become a symbol of democracy the world over. It is proof conclusive that the principle upon which this union is founded—that there shall be no discrimination because of race, creed or color—is a correct one."

New York Age
New York, N. Y.

Mess Attendant Wins Commendation For Heroism On Destroyer

MAY 22 1943

WASHINGTON, D. C.—A commendation has been awarded Charles Jackson French, a Negro mess attendant, for his courage in attempting to save a group of his shipmates on the U.S.S. GREGORY from shelling by Japanese naval forces following the sinking of that ship.

French's citation, from Admiral William. F. Halsey, Jr., U.S.N. Commander South Pacific Area and South Pacific Force, reads:

"For meritorious conduct in action while serving on board a destroyer transport which was badly damaged during the engagement with Japanese forces in the British Solomon Islands on September 5, 1942. After the engagement, a group of about fifteen men were adrift on a raft which was being deliberately shelled by Japaneses naval forces. French tied a line to himself and swam for more than two hours without rest, thus attempting to tow the raft. His conduct was in keeping with the highest traditions of the Naval Service."

French, who carries the rating or Mess Attendant, Second Class, U.S.N., is 23 years old. He makes his home in Foreman, Arkansas, where his sister, Mrs. Viney Harris also lives.

Georgetown, S. C. Times
June 25, 1943

Immediate Need For Young Negroes

The Navy Recruiting headquarter has announced an immediate nee for unlimited numbers of young 1 year old negroes to volunteer for se vice with the United States Nav while unlimited openings prevail, an opportunities are greater than ever

Chief Specialist John F. Potts, ne gro Navy recruiter, asserted tha those who meet the physical an mental qualifications may now b placed in one of three qualification either apprentice seaman, gener service, apprentice seaman in the Navy's SEABEES, or as steward mate third class.

It was pointed out that many negroes have recently taken advantage of this opportunity to get excellent trade training, the valuable experience, the well rounded physical training and the other numerous advantages now offered by the Navy.

Reports indicate that a great many young South Carolina negroes are already making excellent records in the Radio, Metalsmith, Gunnery, Electrician, Motor Machinist, Diesel Engine and Carpenters Service Schools.

Seventeen year old negroes who feel that they might qualify, must make application before they reach their 18th birthday, and they may fill out application papers at their Navy recruiting station in Georgetown on Mondays.

World-Telegram
New York, N. Y.

Warship Honors Negro Sea Hero

By the Associated Press

BOSTON, July [illegible].—The first United States warship named in honor of a Negro, the destroyer escort Harmon, will be launched next Sunday, July 25, at the Fore River yard of the Bethlehem Steel Co., Quincy.

Secretary of the Navy Knox assigned the name to honor the late Roy Harmon, mess attendant, first class, USN, who was awarded the Navy Cross posthumously for "extraordinary heroism" while serving aboard the USS San Francisco.

JUL 21 1943

47j-1943

BOOKER T. ENDS SECOND VOYAGE TOTALS 15,000 MILES OF TRAVEL

Amsterdam Star-News
New York, N. Y.

MAY 8 1943

By PETE RICHARDSON
(Photo on Page 11)

Captain Hugh Mulzac, master of the steamship Booker T. Washington, brought his vessel safely to port on Wednesday after completing 15,000 miles of ocean travel, marking the successful completion of his second trip.

Following his arrival, the mild-mannered skipper, dressed in the official uniform of his rank, and appearing in the pink of condition, visited the offices of the Negro Labor Victory Committee of Greater New York where he was interviewed at a press conference summoned by that organization.

While observing rules of censorship, Capt. Mulzac painted a word picture of scenes he visited in such ports as England, Africa and Ireland. He visited more than two dozen camps in Africa and conversed with a number of the men there. He said they were engaged in various occupations building roads, discharging ships, and making preparations to go to the front for combat duty, and that although they lived in camps separate and apart from white soldiers, he had noticed no dissimilarity in their occupations.

No astonishment was displayed in Africa by the natives because the ship happened to be piloted by a Negro, he said, but interest was displayed in the ship itself.

Speaking of England, he declared that he received a great welcome there, and was entertained at a luncheon by the Lord Mayor of Cardiff, Wales. It was at this place, he said, that a moving picture of the arrival of his ship was shown. The theatre was packed to capacity, and the applause thunderous, he added. The admiral of a British warship sent him felicitations and offered him his services in making his visit a pleasant one.

Captain Mulzac praised his crew, composed of white and Negro seamen, and asserted that they worked harmoniously together. Those of the white crew who are giving a farewell party in his honor, he said, expressing regret at having to leave his command.

In both Africa and England, his ship was visited by hundreds of white as well as Negro persons who, he said, had heard much about it.

His particular reason for visiting the Negro Labor Victory Committee and its officers, he declared, was to give endorsement to its "Negro Freedom Rally" to be held at Madison Square Garden on June 7.

As a parting word, Captain Mulzac said that his ship was an example of democracy at work, and that the Negro people in America should not become disheartened at certain deprivations here, and should do everything to back the men at the Front.

Inspector Praises Navy Program Here

Columbia, S. C. Record
May 27, 1943

The Inspector of Navy recruiting and induction of the Fourth Joint Service Induction area, Commander J. E. Meredith of Atlanta, visited Columbia this week on an official inspection tour of navy recruiting activities in South Carolina, operating under the State Naval headquarters in this city.

Commander Dan Henry's office was complimented on having a most excellent set-up at the new semi-main station in Spartanburg, and the inspector expressed the belief that the lay-out at the Armed Forces Induction Center, Camp Croft, is the best he has seen in the entire Fourth Area, which embodies a number of states. He said that the Armed Forces Induction Center at Fort Jackson, under Captain Grissom, is most efficiently and effectively operated.

Commander Meredith informed local officials, that the main station' in Columbia is still holding the lead in keeping of records and reports by an almost perfect score, also in the recruiting of Negroes. He added, however, that the WAVES-SPARS program was doing very poorly throughout the entire area, and that South Carolina was about average.

The inspector pointed out that in the recruiting of 17 year olds, South Carolina is also around average, but the Fourth Area is doing better than other sections of the country. It was noted that North Carolina in the last three weeks has had a great increase. Formerly, that state could get only an average of half as many as South Carolina, and now today, they are getting five times as many.

Pearl Harbor Victim Back from the Dead

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

By DOUGLASS HALL
(Passed by Censor)

NEW YORK—Navy Messman Lloyd K. Winston of Baltimore, who recently returned to this country from Pearl Harbor, emphatically denied to the AFRO this week that he had been "killed in action."

Shortly after the bombing of Pearl Harbor, Winston was reported dead by the Navy Department.

"Since that time," he stated, "I have spent much of my time trying to convince folk that I am still alive. People meet me on the street and say, 'Hello there, fellow, where did you come from? I thought you were dead.'

Survives 3 Sinkings

"Frankly, I have had some narrow escapes," Winston confessed, "but I am still very much alive. Three ships that I have been attached to have been sunk, but I managed to be saved somehow. Now don't get me wrong. I am no hero. I am just a sailor who is doing his duty."

Visiting the States for the first time in four years, he stated that "being a sailor in these days is hell and a full man-size job. Being a colored messman—well, all I can say is that those Jap bullets don't segregate. No, sir, they don't draw a color line."

Winston has spent more than four years in the navy and has been in the leading ports throughout the world. Since the war began he has been in the midst of the fighting in the South Pacific.

On Pearl Harbor Victim

He was attached to the Cassin, when it was sunk at Pearl Harbor, December 7, and since then has been attached to two other ships.

"I cannot give you any detailed information," he stated, "other than to say that I hope the newspapers keep up the fight to win the war on the home front while we win the one abroad."

Wearing three bars on his chest to denote his actual combat service, and a star for good conduct, the sailor stated that he was leaving for the West Coast early this month, at which time he will take up the rugged life of a seaman.

Talked at Alma Mater

A graduate of Douglass High School, Baltimore, Winston spoke there last week and gave the pupils the benefit of his experiences at sea.

He also visited Washington, where he had a conference with Captain Leeland Lovett, director of public relations, Navy Department. Captain Lovett was his immediate superior when he was at Pearl Harbor.

Winston is living at the YMCA in Baltimore.

Orangeburg S.C. Dem

New Navy Opening For Negro Youths

The Navy Recruiting Headquarters has announced an immediate need for unlimited numbers of young 17 year old negroes to volunteer for service with the United States Navy while unlimited openings prevail and opportunities are greater than ever.

Chief Specialist John F. Potts, negro navy recruiter, asserted that those who meet the physical and mental qualifications may now be placed in one of three qualifications, either Apprentice seaman, general service, Apprentice seaman in the Navy's Seabees, or as Steward's Mate third class.

It was pointed out that many negroes have recently taken advantage of this opportunity to get excellent trade training, the valuable experience, the well rounded physical training, and the other numerous advantages now offered by the Navy.

Reports indicate that a great many young South Carolina negroes are already making excellent records in the Radio, Metalsmith, Gunnery, Electrician, Motor Machinist, Deisel Engine and Carpenters Service Schools.

17 year old negroes who feel that they might qualify, must make application before they reach their 18th birthday, and they may fill out application papers at their nearest navy recruiting station in Columbia, Charleston, Conway, Florence, Greenwood, Greenville, Spartanburg or Rock Hill.

Negro, White Workers Hail 'Douglass' Ship

The Daily Worker
New York, N. Y.

(Special to the Daily Worker)

BALTIMORE, May 26.—The finest traditions of Americanism merged this week end with the stern necessities of a people's war, when the "Frederick Douglass" Liberty ship, slid down the ways of the Bethlehem-Fairfield launching dock and settled into the water ready to take up her duties in the fight against the slavery of fascism. The 140th Liberty ship completed at that yard, the "Frederick Douglass" is the third to be named for famous Negro Americans and the second to be captained by a Negro, Captain Adrian Richardson.

The colorful ceremonies arranged by a committee headed by Thomas Aydlett, Negro organizer for Local 43, International Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers, CIO, which holds a contract with the Bethlehem-Fairfield Shipbuilding Company, were attended by a long list of notables. Among them were newly-elected Mayor T. K. McKeldin, Representatives Thomas D'Alesandro and Daniel Ellison of the third and fourth congressional districts respectively, Dr. Camper, chairman of the Total War Employment Committee, A. J. Allen, secretary of the Baltimore Urban League, Mr. Tyus of the NAACP, and Mrs. Betty Phillips of the Afro-American.

MAY 27 1943

Anne Wiggins Brown, famed concert singer and star of "Porgy and Bess," christened the "Frederick Douglass." She was also presented with a small perfect scale model of the ship made by one of the Negro shipyard workers.

GETS SCROLL

Local 42 presented Captain Richardson with a scroll, which hailed the fact that the "Frederick Douglass" had been built by Negro and white workers, and pointed out that Frederick Douglass himself, in his struggles to free his people so many years ago, stood today as a symbol of that unity between the Negro and white people which was necessary for the defeat of fascism.

An additional speaker was Ferdinand Smith, vice-president of the National Maritime Union. Present also at the ceremonies was a grandson of Frederick Douglass, himself the bearer of that distinguished name. Paul Robeson, great Negro baritone, sent a message of greeting.

President Patterson Wires Greetings Of Foundation

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

MAY 3 1943

WASHINGTON, D.C.—(ANP) Sen. William Langer, of South Dakota, vigorously told the senate Thursday that he could see no reason why Negro women should be barred from the WAVES, and called upon Congress to adopt his bill which would amend the act establishing the women's branch of the navy to permit their enlistment.

Specifically, his bill calls for the insertion of these words in the proper place. "In the selection of persons to be commissioned or enlisted pursuant to this section there shall be no discrimination against any person on account of race of color."

"I feel very strongly about this" Sen. Langer declared on the floor. "Here we are fighting for the freedom of people all over the world and we refuse to permit a part of our people to participate in the fight.

'If congress had intended to keep Negro women out of the WAVES it would have written this provision into the bill. Therefore, if the administration won't see that they are admitted, congress should do it."

MAY 3 1943

Sen. Langer is responsible for the fight to insert a non-discrimination clause in the overtime pay bill the conference report on which is now awaiting adoption by the house. In this fight he has been ably supported by Senator James Mead of New York.

MAY 3 1943

The George Washington Carver Foundation and the Kaiser Shipbuilding Company both paid tribute to the celebrated Negro scientist following the launching of a Liberty Ship named in his honor at the Richmond Yard No. [illegible] Richmond, California, Sunday.

Miss Lena Horne, Singer and actress, served as sponsor.

In a wire made public by the company, Dr. F. D. Patterson, president of Tuskegee Institute, Tus- Alabama, stated:

"Deeply appreciate the great tribute being paid to our late distinguished scientist, Christian and friend, George Washington Carver, in the launching of a Liberty Ship bearing his name. Deeply regret that we were unable to have a representative present on the occasion. I express to you the profound appreciation of the George Washington Carver Foundation and of the students, faculty and trustees of Tuskegee Institute for making this occasion a reality, in making the Tuskegee statement public, Clay Bedford, representing the Kaiser Company, declared:

"A floating, fighting monument to a great American scientist has gone down the way--the SS George Washington Carver. This 10,500--ton Liberty Ship was constructed by skilled Negro workers both men and women, working side by side with their fellow Americans—all doing their best to supply the best in cargo ships for our fighting forces overseas.

"The spirit of George Washington Carver will live on in this modern steel monument whereever it goes to bring to our soldiers just as this great man brought and left with the world of science lasting contributions for all people, races and creeds."

Conway, S. C., Field
April 29, 1943

NEW OPENINGS FOR 17 YEAR OLD NEGROES

Columbia, S. C., April 19.---The navy recruiting headquarters has announced an immediate need for unlimited numbers of young 17 year old negroes to volunteer for service with the United States Navy while unlimited openings prevail, and opprotunities are greater than ever.

Chief Specialist John F. Potts, negro navy recruiter, asserted that those who meet the physical and mental qualifications, may now be placed in one of three qualifications, either Apprentice Seaman, general service, Apprentice Seaman in the Navy's Seabees, or as Steward's Mate third class.

4/19

It was pointed out that many negroes have recently taken advantage of this opportunity to get excellent trade training, the valuable experience, the well rounded physical training, and the other numerous advantages now offered by the Navy.

Reports indicate that a great many young South Carolina negroes are already making excellent records in the radio, metalsmith, gunnery, electrician, motor machinist, Deisel engine and carpenters service schools.

Seventeen year old negroes who feel that they may qualify, must make application before they reach their 18th birthday, and they may fill out application papers at their nearest navy recruiting station in Conway any day; Georgetown on Mondays; Kingstree on Tuesdays; Hemingway on Wednesdays; Marion on Thursdays Dillon on Fridays, and Mullins on Saturdays.

Teachers Seeking Commissions For Negroes In American Navy

Newport News, Va. Press
April 17, 1943

Training programs proposed to Hampton institute by the army and navy have been approved by the Virginia Peninsula Teachers union (local 607), but with certain provisions which, if accepted, would establish precedents regarding the Negro in both branches of the service.

The navy, which is providing living, recreational and training facilities for 550 trainees, sought to expand the existing contract to accommodate 1,500, while the army proposed to give basic college training to 250 soldiers under the army specialized training program beginning on or about May 15, which number shall be increased to 450 by September.

Lists Provisions

The navy plan was sanctioned by the union, provided:

1—That it include Negro commissioned officers in its administrative personnel.

2—That in addition to the vocational training program, a program for training Negro candidates for navy commissions be instituted at Hampton institute.

4/17

3—That expansion of the navy program shall not preclude the establishment of the army specialized training program.

4—That expansion of the navy program in no way contribute toward the abandonment of the regular civil educational program at the institute.

The union recommended that the army proposal to offer specialized training be accepted and initiated at the earliest possible date, provided:

1—That such program be administered by a bi-racial staff of officers.

2—That the character of the program be commensurate with the training offered in other collegiate institutions in the country.

3—That the present college saff be utilized as far as possible in its execution.

Presidents Get Copy

The action taken by the union was compiled in an open letter to the President of the United States, secretaries of war and navy, the board of trustees of the institute, the president of the institute, and the chairmen of congressional committees on army and naval affairs.

Approximately 1,000 persons signed the letter, including R. D. Kidd, president of the union, and other officers.

The signers of the letter "support under protest any statute or regulation of our federal and state governments or any of their several branches which provides for legalized discrimination on the basis of race, religion or national origin."

Opposition in the letter is expressed to the navy policy of excluding Negroes from its commissioned service. It points out further that "we deplore an existing navy administration which completely excludes Negroes from participation as commissioned officers and from training for commissions," and suggests that the statement of Secretary Knox "that friction would result from the commissioning of Negro officers in the naval service should be challenged and refuted at Hampton institute."

Explains Army Policy

"While we do not, under any circumstances, condone the army's policy of segregated service," the letter went on, "under protest we accept as an improvement over the navy the army's policy of integrating Negroes as commissioned officers into its various branches of service."

The letter reviews events from Pearl Harbor to the present, taking "stock of our accomplishments. . . ." It suggested that the fact we found ourselves woefully lacking "was borne out by the rising tide of democratic thinking as evidenced in the outspoken words of people in all walks of life, in the new treatment of Negro problems in the press and periodicals, and in the attempt of government to alleviate some of the conditions attendant to the prewar stagnation of democratic principles in this country."

4/17

The union, an affiliate of the American Federation of Teachers (AFL), said in its letter that it had hoped "for some token representation of commissioned officers in the naval staff administering the program at Hampton institute. . . ." At the time the letter was written, there were three Negro chief petty oficers at the school in an officer complement of 30 or more persons administering the program, it pointed out.

Expressing its desire to serve the nation, the union protests "all bigoted attempts to by-pass the tenets of democracy, and in justice to ourselves as teachers, students, and citizens—all wishful participants of democracy—we have no choice but to insist upon the full and unequivocal role that Negro Americans have to play in the fight for its ultimate attainments."

Letters Reveal Navy Spars Still Have No Place For Race

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

Secretary Knox Scored By Harlem Group of Citizens

June 4, 1943

NEW YORK — (ANP) — Letters between the secretary of the navy and the Citizens Committee on Harlem, showing the failure of Waves and Spars to admit Negroes, were made public last week.

The exchange of letters began last February when the group, interested in anti-racial discrimination steps, wrote to Frank Knox, secretary of the navy, asking for a statement of policy in view of the fact that the Hunter college campus, property of the city, was being used for training purposes although no Negroes were taken on.

NEGROES NOT AT SEA?

Sec. Knox explained that Waves and Spars were being recruited to replace men for active service, and that the navy does not have "any substantial body of Negro men available or qualified for general service at sea."

Another letter to the mayor stated, "We fail to see why Negro women cannot enlist in the council; set up two years ago to combat racial discrimination in war industries.

The governor informed the group that all of the Citizens' committees working under the war council were being examined by the council, and that he expected that an adequate appropriation would be granted the committee, and its work continued.

women's reserve to be trained for duty in the shore estabiishment to release male personnel for duty at sea, irrespective of whether the male personnel is Negro or white.'

In reply Knox stated that "the changes which the Navy has effected in recognition of the Negro's steady progress have been wholly consistent with democratic principles. All theoretically possible steps that are not taken at once cannot reasonably be condemned as undemocratic."

LETTER SENT TO DEWEY

June 4, 1943

The organization also sent a committee to Gov. Thomas E. Dewey last week to insure the continuance and expansion of the committee on discrimination in employment of the state war

47j-1943

The Informer

First Negro Unit Of Marines Lauded By Commanding Officer

Feb. 6, 1943

By ALVIN E. WHITE

Feb. 6, 1943

WASHINGTON.—(ANP)—The 51st Defense battalion, U. S. Marine corps, 1,200 strong, now in training at the 200 square mile reservation at New River, N. C., is winning the praise of the commanding officers and of fellow marines by virtue of its excellent record and conduct.

The 51st is the first Negro unit ever trained in this branch of the armed forces. But it is making such progrescs it will be the basis, it is believed, for a fuller use of Negroes in this hitherto closed branch of the services.

According to officials in the marine corps, a defense battalion is one similar to the unit glorified in recent film, "Wake Island." In other words, it is a unit fitted to hold captured spots, once the landing units have gained a foothold. Many of these units are operating in the West Indies and where the United States has obtained concessions for air bases. There is no difference between the Negro unit and the others in the service.

Starting from scratch, the men receive eight weeks basic training, similar to that received by army men in 13 weeks. From here the training continues, becoming increasingly more difficult and technical.

Because there have been no Negroes in the marine corps previously, all of the training is carried on by white officers and non-coms.

Drill masters in training cadre are toughened through years of experience. As soon as Negroes qualify in the manifold duties of the marine corps they will be promoted to the ratings and ranks they are entitled to.

No Friction in Camp

The commanding general of the area has expressed a desire for the mutual respect by both colored and white marines. No friction has developed in the camp and there has been no more than the usual run of military infractions and violations.

Edeson E. Blackman Jr., private 1st class, has written excellently of the work accomplished. His story follows:

"Since June when Negroes were first accepted for enlistment for the fleet marines force of the U. S. Marine corps, and since the latter part of August, when the first recruits arrived at the marine barracks, New River, N. C., definite progress has been made. Recruits have been arriving here at our Montford Point base at the rate of approximately 200 each month since the latter part of August.

"Recruits are first assigned to Battery "A," the recruit depot, for six weeks basic training in military courtesy and discipline, basic infantry drills, musketry, rifle and hand gernades, small bore firearms, bayonets, ju jitsu and jude. Upon completion of this basic training course, men are assigned to the various batteries of this battalion. Some of the machine gun battery, some to the rifle company (reinforced), communications, heavy artillery, anti-aircraft, tanks, quartermaster, commissary, headquarters and service battery, and others to the pack howitzer battery. Every effort is being made to place the men in the units for which, by aptitude test, they are best suited.

Trained to Action

"It is interesting to note that in the marine corps, both technically and practically speaking, one's basic training never ends. Each and every day you are constantly training to be a first class fighter.

"As you may know, the marine corps is definitely a combat organization and it believes, more or less, in action and not in telling of what it is going to do. We who are here realize this and as a result work hard toward this end. Our days are long, our days are hard, but in the final analysis if, and when we reach the combat zone, our efforts will not have been in vain.

"However, one must not think that all of our time is spent training. Our extra curricular activities are more than interesting and entertaining and provide much recreation and diversification for the men who are stationed here. Movies, dances, smokers, and shows are put on regularly for the men of the 51st Composite Defense battalion, plus the fact that we have our own choir, glee club, band, orchestra, athletics of all kinds, and the 'compositor,' the official news organ of the battalion.

"At present, most of the instructor's personnel is entirely white, but as soon as Negroes are trained and qualified, they will replace the white personnel. Schools for the training of Negroes in the various branches have already begun and are now in progress from which our specialists and technicians will come.

"The 51st will be a highly trained and specialized force, due to the fact that it is a defense battalion. It must be capable of moving to the various combat zones at a moment's notice, which requires thorough training, which we are receiving."

The men in the unit are housed in small houses accomodating 10 men each. One hundred and twenty of these line the military street. They have their own laundry, hospital facilities, although all of the attending doctors are naval men as the marines do not have a medical detachment. Quite a little city houses the first first Negro unit in the marine corps.

While the men in the detachment are preferred with training along technical lines, engineering and such, the lack of this training has been overcome, according to offficers by the men's willingness and that spirit to learn and to do.

After six months of training, this detachment compares as favorably with any similar group that can be found. Officers themselves are very proud of the work they have accomplished.

The Informer

First Bluejackets Finish; Addressed By Doris Miller

Informer Houston Texas

Great Lakes, Ill.—Ninety-seven Negro Bluejackets, the first of their race to complete instructions in various trades offered by the Navy, were graduated recently from the Service School in ceremonies at the United States Naval Training Station, Great Lakes, Ill. 1-30-43

In the presence of two outstanding Negro heroes of the last war and this conflict, the graduates filed to the speaker's platform where they received their Service School certificates—the final step of an intensive training period. 1-30-43

Taking part in the ceremonies were Capt. Frank J. Lowry, commanding officer of the training station; Capt. H. R. Harris, service school officer; Lieut. Cmdr. D. W. Armstrong, commanding officer of the 18th Regiment; Doris Miller and Brigadier General Spencer C. Dickerson, U. S. Army retired.

Add[illegible] made by Capt. Lowry, Capt. Harris, and the young Negro hero of this war, Doris Miller, mess attendant, first class, of Waco, Texas. Immediately after the exercises, friends, and relatives of the graduates witnessed a regimental review by men of the Negro race now in training here.

These graduates completed 16-week courses in one or another of the Navy's service schools for radiomen, quartermaster, signalmen, gunner's mates, yeomen, bakers and c[illegible]. Three of their number were graduated as honor men of their respective branches.

Texan Leads

They were Isaac C. Dugas, Jr., 1025 Braut street, Beaumont, Texas, of gunner's mate school; Aaron A. Bromley, 10850 Pasadena avenue, Cleveland, Ohio, yeoman school; and Bernard B. Young, 118 Hamilton street, East Orange, N. J., who attained the highest marks among the cooks and bakers. 1-30-43

New classes in the Negro service schools are formed each month, with an average of 460 men attending at all times.

In his address to the graduating class, Capt. Lowry spoke briefly of the heroism of Bluejacket Miller, describing him as a credit to the navy, then continued:

"Every one of you men graduating has the opportunity to be singled out for some similar hon[or] or during your life in the navy. All the luck in the world to you, but remember, luck is a thing you make yourself.

"This first service school class must set the standard for all others that will follow. Godspeed to all of you."

His Navy Cross and service ribbons pinned to his uniform, Mess Attendant Miller was then introduced by Lieut. Cmdr. Armstrong. Later, at the regimental review, he took to the microphone to tell his fellow bluejackets:

Have the Stuff

"I'm sure you men have the stuff to make your way in the navy. Take advantage of every opportunity while in training and I'm sure you will accomplish something later on for which you will be proud the rest of your lives,"

Capt. Harris told the graduates that they should feel proud to have been selected for the first Negro service school class at Great Lakes and added:

"Your success or failure prior to the war was your own affair, but now, in time of war, it is of special interest and concern to the country." Jan. 30, 1943

The 23-year-old Miller, now on leave from duty with the Pacific Fleet, was awarded the Navy Cross last May 28 for heroism at Pearl Harbor. The presentation was made by Admiral Chester Nimitz, commander-in-chief of the fleet.

During an attack by Jap bombers and Zeroes, the captain of the ship on which Miller was stationed was critically wounded. The Negro bluejacket carried his skipper to a place of safety and then, for the first time in his life, manned a machine gun and brought down four Jap planes before he was bombed and burned out. When his ship turned on her side, Miller swam to shore and helped in a job at a flying field.

In recognition of his valor he was advanced from mess attendant, third class, to his present rating. Son of a Waco, Texas, farmer, Miller enlisted in the navy three and a half years ago at Little Rock, Arkansas. Most of his service has been at sea.

At the graduation was Brigadier General Dickerson, retired army officer who served as a lieutenant with the Medical Corps detachment of the 370th Infantry, USA, for 18 months in 1917-18.

Toward the close of the war, Gen. Dickerson, a practicing physician in Chicago, Ill., for more than 25 years, was advanced to the rank of captain. He resumed his practice after the Armistice, but remained a member of the 8th Infantry Regiment, Illinois National Guard, until 1935 when he was retired with the rank of Brigadier-General. He had been advanced to major in 1922 and colonel ten years later.

General Dickerson is attached to the eye, ear and nose clinic of Provident Hospital, Chicago.

Negro WAVES Approved.

Bee
Chicago, Ill.

JUL 25 1943

THE APPROVAL of plans for the enlistment of Negro women into the Navy Women's Auxiliary Corps has been confirmed by Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox. This fight for admission into the WAVES has been in progress for quite some time, seemingly without success.

The A.K.A. sorority, principally through the efforts of Tomasina Johnson allied with the NAACP and other pressure groups have led the lobbyists in the fight for inclusion of Negro women into all of the armed forces auxiliary services.

44

The plan, however, for the admission of Negro WAVES is not satisfactory and should not be countenanced as it is now set forth. No provision for Negro officers has been provided. Moreover, a separate training school is to be created.

Merely the mentioning of such a plan is to suggest its utter unwisdom. Why go to added expense, saddling additional debt on the taxpayers to provide separate training quarters? More important, why continue the stupid practice of separatism invoked by the dominant southern congressional members on naval affairs, when through integration and unity alone can we achieve maximum results with an economy of time? Time is a powerful ally of the wise.

JUL 25 1943

Heroic Messman Relates Rescue Of 3 On Flat-Top

APR 10 1943

Chicago Defender
Chicago, Illinois

By ALFRED DUCKETT
(Defender Staff Correspondent)

NEW YORK.—A brave 19-year-old navy messman who defied roaring flame and choking smoke to go down into the depths of a wounded aircraft carrier and save the lives of three white sailors, told me his story this week with a hesitant modesty.

His name is Elvin Bell and his heroism took place during the raging battle of the Coral Sea last May. Serving on the aircraft carrier Lexington, he defied death to offer to his country the greatest sacrifice which a man can give—the risk of his life. His story was first told in the Chicago Defender's Victory Edition by the Chicago Tribune's Stanley Johnston, who witnessed his heroism.

Already Bell has been decorated by the navy for his courage and the newspapers the country over have chronicled the bravery which brought him a citation and the navy and marine corps medals. But this week, for the first time, in his own modest way, he told the story which will go down in the annals of maritime dauntlessness as one of the most thrilling sagas of the sea.

ELVIN BELL

It was on May 7 that the Lexington rose out of the waters struck by the impact of an Axis torpedo. A raid from the air continued for 20 minutes and then the planes winged away beyond the clouds.

The next morning at 12 o'clock the planes and submarines again attacked the wounded ship with a fury that was unabated for two hours.

Through it all, Elvin Bell was at his post.

When the raid began, Elvin was in the ship's print shop, "fooling around" with one of the machines. A flying piece of metal hit his leg and almost paralyzed it. He made his way painfully below to take his post. A terrific explosion rocked the room in which he was posted.

Feeling his way in the shadowy room, Bell came across a gas mask after 15 or 20 minutes during which he tried hard not to breathe. With a white fellow-seaman, he carried the wounded to the sick bay. The sick bay, however, had been rendered useless by the enemy assault and they had no recourse but to carry the wounded men to the top side.

Goes Below Again

The enemy planes and submarines had spent their fury and the fight was over, but for Bell, it had just begun.

Wounded, exhausted, and weary, he made his way to top deck.

He passed a little knot of men. They were being addressed by Commander Mort Seligman. Listen to the story in Elvin's own words:

"The commander was telling the men that three of our buddies were below, seven decks below, trapped in the flames of the ship's interior.

"He was asking for volunteers to get the men to safety. No one seemed willing to make a move, so I said to him:

"'I'd like to try, Sir.'

"He couldn't see my face because I had my mask on, but he said to me:

"'Are you sure you know how to reach them?'

"I said, 'Yes Sir, I know the way.'

"The Commander asked me, 'Do you realize that you might never come back?'

"I told him that I did but that I'd like to try just the same. He agreed and wished me good luck.

"'We'll be waiting for you,' he said.'

Brings Men Back

"I went through some long passageways and down several flights of steel steps. The men lowered me down with a line. Between two decks the line broke and I had to make the rest of the way on my own. I don't know how I did it or how I came back. But I brought those three men back to safety.

"They thought I was dead up above where they were waiting for me. When I came back up I heard the commander talking. One of the men had told him I had been hurt in the leg and he said that if he had know that he wouldn't have let me volunteer to rescue the men. He said that I was probably dead. Just as he said that I tapped him on the shoulder and said:

"'Oh, no I'm not. Here I am and the three men are safe.'

"I really can't remember how I did it, but I just did.

"I don't remember the trip back but I could not have gone back the same way because the ladder was broken, so I must have taken another way. I know I figured it was all over when I heard a third explosion, but I must have kept my head because I found myself coming up out of the ventilator with the three men behind me.

Teamwork Important

"There must be something that makes you think and do the right thing. If you train yourself to keep your head, you have to have faith in yourself. I mean, for instance, everyone of us was frightened, but we knew we had a better chance of winning than those fellows who had come all the way over to attack us. If they thought they could win, our faith in ourselves told us we could win. The navy is all teamwork to a man, and the morale is very high."

Born in Harlem, Bell became an orphan when an infant. At the age of four he was adopted by Mr. and Mrs. George A. Lofton of 139-08 114th avenue, South Ozone Park, where I interviewed him. He attened Jamaica high school and went to CCC camp for one year and a half.

The navy citation says of him "He rescued injured sailors trapped in the blazing interior of the stricken aircraft carrier, Lexington, which was sunk in the battle of the Coral Sea." It cites that the awards were made him for "distinguished heroism in an area fraught by violent explodings and gasoline vapors."

The citation continues:

Honored At Rally

"Bell, although emerging in an exhausted condition, unhesitatingly entered the most dangerous section of the stricken carrier and assisted in removing injured personnel who had been trapped below decks. His courageous initiative and utter disregard for his own safety were in keeping with the highest tradition of the United States Naval Service."

Citizens of Queens honored the young messman at a meeting Sunday at the Allen African Methodist Episcopal church, South Jamaica, where he was presented with a watch and an offering. Commander R. C. Sutliff of the United States Navy said in a letter to the citizens committee and the Lambda Mu Kappa sorority, sponsors of the affair, that they would be glad to grant leave to the heroic messman so that he might appear on Sunday. The navy official added that the navy appreciated the "patriotic motives" of the Jamaica citizens in holding such a celebration and "appreciated the honor tendered Bell."

The youthful hero was to leave on Tuesday to return to the new Lexington to which he is assigned as a first class mess attendant. (He was third class on the old ship.) He is looking forward to more service under the United States flag, but is quite interested in informing a certain young lady—Florence Powers of Cambridge, Mass.—that he's "still thinking about her."

As for his heroism, he doesn't think so much of that, but he's awfully proud of that new watch and he's ready to risk his life again if it will shorten the war against the Axis.

Navy Cites Negro Messman Who Towed Raft to Safety

MAY 21 1943

The Daily Worker
New York, N. Y.

By Eugene Gordon

It was last Oct. 22 when the world first heard of "Frenchy." Over the radio, in every paper in the land came the story:

First a blinding explosion from a Japanese fired torpedo. Then a raging hell of men dying, men drowning, men trying desperately to escape the oil-soaked waters, the sharks of the Pacific, to find a raft, a log, a stick of debris. A half-dead band of American seamen from the sunken destroyer managed to get to a raft—only to find it drifting helplessly out to sea.

A young giant of a Negro called by his shipmates "Frenchy" told the survivors: "I'm strong and I'm a good swimmer. Tie this rope around me and I'll slip overboard and tow this old raft in." And Frenchy did.

FRENCHY 'DISCOVERED'

This week the Navy Department cited Frenchy for his conduct "in keeping with the highest traditions of the naval service."

A young ensign, Robert N. Adrian, of Ontario, Ore., ordinary seamen on the raft told the first new of Frenchy's heroism over a national NBC hookup.

The National Broadcasting Co. and the Negro press led the field among those who tried to identify "Frenchy." On Oct. 31 the NBC announced that he was Charles Jackson French, of Little Rock, Ark. Some days later the episode was dramatized in a radio broadcast. More recently a weekly "comic" picture magazine carried a "true story" account of French's adventure in colored pictures.

Yesterday's citation was issued by Admiral William F. Halsey, Jr., commanding in the South Pacific. He is the officer who stopped the slanders on the National Maritime Union, when union-haters were repeating the tale that NMU members had refused to unload a ship at Guadalcanal. He said it was a lie. Halsey's citation of French was released throught the Navy Department.

The citation, its account of French's exploit differing only slightly from other accounts, reads in part:

"After the engagement a group of about 15 men were adrift on a raft, which had been deliberately shelled by Japanese naval forces French tied a line to himself and swam more than two hours, without rest, thus attempting to tow the raft. His conduct was in keeping with the highest traditions of the naval service."

The citation says that French is from Foreman, Ark., where his sister, Mrs. Viney Harris, lives.

It seems, from latest information, that the incident occurred in the vicinity of the Solomon Islands Sept. 5. French and the other men on the raft were survivors of the destroyer transport Gregory.

The Negro people, through numerous organizations and their press, have been appealing to the Navy Department to award French a medal. They succeeded, after much agitation, in winning that kind of recognition for Dorie Miller. Miller also was a messman.

Thus the list of Negro naval heroes in the anti-fascist war is extended. The latest to be made public is the Negro gun crew of the Coast Guard cutter Campbell, which, last February, battled a German submarine for 12 hours in the North Atlantic, finally sinking it. Commander James A. Hirshfield, of the Campbell, told newspapermen that the cutter depth-bombed five Nazi subs and sank the sixth by ramming.

New York Times
New York, N. Y

JUL 18 1943

West Coast Freighter

In mentioning the other day a few Liberty and Victory ships called George M. Cohan and Billy Sunday and Booker T. Washington, as representative of our total democracy, we said that no doubt many such names have escaped our attention. Thereupon one reader hastens to remind us of the good ship Fremont Older launched the other day at San Francisco.

And a good name this is, too, for a ship destined to brave storm and shell and mine and torpedo in the defense of democracy. The name Fremont Older spells physical and moral oak in our public life. It was borne by a fearless fighting editor and a passionate lover of justice and truth who gave California its most distinguished name in the history of American journalism.

47j-1943

NEGRO SEABEES CHARGE—Negro Seabees charge across a swamp in a Virginia training center. They're taught by U. S. Marines.

—U. S. Navy Photo

Negro Seabees Had a Job to Do

The Worker, New York.

JUL 11 1943

In a driving tropical rainstorm they built a military road. When lumber ran short they logged their own. And they helped the island's defenses by building breastworks in case of attack.

WHEN it comes to getting things done, a battalion of Negro Seabees in the Solomon Islands area takes its hat off to no one.

Recruited from the [illegible] of the AFL and CIO in civilian life, these working-fighting Navy men know their job and they get it done—come what may.

From the South Seas comes the story that this battalion landed on a jungle-covered island and began a few weeks of furious construction work by choosing the site for a prospective airfield, surveying and mapping it, and getting their selection approved—all between sunrise and sunset. Then they were really ready to go to work!

Built Road During Rain

Among other things these same Seabees—who build a wide variety of works, and when necessary defend themselves against attack—built a road despite heavy rainfall and installed essential utilities.

The battalion worked in cooperation with a second Seabee detachment which landed shortly afterward. The members got the airfield well on its way to completion before giving way to another battalion and moving on to a new job where they created more facilities with which to fight the enemy from advanced bases.

Members of the Negro battalion had worked at almost every trade before they joined the [illegible] and they are carving for themselves a real reputation at the same time they hew and hack the jungle into efficient bases.

Logged Lumber On the Spot

The imported stock of lumber allotted them was used up quickly so they logged and milled their own lumber from native trees. Fourteen inches of rain fell the first month and nine the second, but the Negro Seabees went ahead with the construction of a road, moving all sorts of heavy and light motorized equipment over the [illegible]ery clay. [illegible] a time it was a question of whether they were building a road or maintaining one, but they pushed it through to completion.

They installed lights and telephones. They provided a water supply by damming mountain streams, treating the water, piped it as far as possible with available material and then built wood storage reservoirs in which to keep the water. They installed an air raid warning system.

While all this work was in progress the Negro Seabees also dug fox holes and set up defenses throughout the area in order to defend themselves in case of an enemy attack.

The battalion overcame a major obstacle in obtaining sand for use in building a landing strip for fighter planes. Through hard work and American ingenuity they smashed the barrier, got the necessary sand with the help of another battalion which had landed with 500 tons of equipment, completed 50 per cent of the fighter plane strip in two weeks. The men worked in two shifts, from early morning until late at night, under lights after dark.

In addition to its regular construction work the Negro Seabee battalion aided a vessel which was hit in a bombing attack, dispatching pumps and hose to the scene and later caring for some of the casualties of the engagement.

NO OFFICERS

Chicago, Ill. Defender

PLANNED IN NEW SETUP

Women's Groups Protest Plan To Discriminate Against Race Women

JUL 17 1943

(Defender Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON — The Defender has learned from a reliable source that the navy has completed a plan for admitting Negro women into the WAVES.

The plan has received the stamp of approval from Secretary of Navy Frank Knox, but has not yet been made public.

According to the Defender's informant, the plan makes no provision for Negro women to become officers in the WAVES. The official announcement of the plan is being withheld while efforts are being conducted to obtain a Negro college for the training of the new WAVES.

Thomasina Johnson of the AKA Non-Partisan Council on Public Affairs, who has worked continuously since the organization of the WAVES in an effort to open its doors to Negro women, when told of the navy's plan for Negro women, was bitter in her denunciation of it.

"We would rather not have Negro women in the WAVES than have them taken in on such conditions as this plan proposes," she said. "There is no excuse for setting up a separate Negro WAVES unit, nor for planning any separate training facilities for them," she declared.

"Such a plan will do more harm to the morale of Negro women than their exclusion. The charges of discrimination and segregation which fell upon the WAACs when they were first organized were bad enough, but this seems to indicate that the navy learned nothing from the army's experience. The idea of making no provision for officers and seeking a Negro school for the separate training of the Negro women is unwarranted, unsatisfactory, and unwanted," Mrs. Johnson stated.

She urged Negro women as individuals, and Negro organizations, particularly women's organizations, to immediately write their protests against any such plan to Secretary Frank Knox at the Navy Department, Washington, D. C., before the plan is officially announced.

NAVY RECRUITER HERE THIS WEEK

Negroes 17-38 May

Qualify And Receive Rating In Seabees

Rock Hill, S. C. Herald

September 8, 1943

Chief Specialist John F. Potts, U. S. N. R., who has been prominent in negro education in the southeast is recruiting negroes, age 17-50, at the Naval Recruiting Station at the local post office today through Saturday.

Men 17 years of age have the opportunity of attending any one of the Navy's trade schools; those 17-38 who are qualified in a skill or trade may receive a rating in the Seabees; and those 38-50 may enter any branch of the service for which they are qualified by voluntary enlistment.

Any man interested in joining the Navy should get in touch with the recruiting office before receiving induction notice.

NAME LIBERTY SHIP FOR LATE BUSINESS GIANT

Courier Pittsburgh, Pa.

JUL 10 1943

WILMINGTON, N. C., July 8—The U. S. Maritime Commission has assigned the name 'S. S. John Merrick," to its 114th Liberty Ship to be launched at the Wilmington, N. C., shipyard July 11.

In making this announcement officials of the shipyard expressed their pleasure in honor being done another outstanding Negro and in the recognition being accorded its colored workers.

ORGANIZED FOUR OTHER BUSINESSES

JUL 10 1943

Merrick was one of the founders, organizers and first president of the North Carolina Mutual Life Insurance company. At his death in 1919 he was rated as one of the most astute businessmen ever produced by the race.

JUL 10 194

Merrick, born a slave in North Carolina, September 7, 1859, began his career as a bricklayer. Among the Durham businesses which he helped organize were the Bankers Fire Insurance company, Mechanics and Farmers bank, Southern Fidelity and Bonding company, and the Mutual Building and Loan association, all successfully operating today.

Amsterdam Star-News
New York, N. Y.

Coast Guard Names Negro Naval Ensign

By JIM HEWLETT

BOSTON, (ANP)—Ensign Joseph C. Jenkins of Detroit has the distinction of being the first colored naval officer to be assigned to active duty. He is attached to the coast guard shore patrol of the 1st Naval district with headquarters at the former exclusive Hotel Brunswick and has under his command a mixed personnel of white and colored seamen.

JUL 24 1943

He was inducted as a chief petty officer on presenting his qualifications about a year ago and after attending the coast guard academy at New London, Conn., was commissioned an ensign on April 19.

He is a graduate of the University of Michigan with a bachelor of civil engineering degree, class of 1937, and from that time up to the time of his enlistment was connected with the Michigan state highway.

Ensign Jenkins, who is a light-brownskinned chap, stated he has been treated fairly and squarely and believes there is an ever-widening opportunity for colored boys in the coast guard. Incidentally his friends in Detroit ridiculed his move in leaving the Michigan state highway saying, "It couldn't be done."

JUL 24 1943

Ensign "Whit" Robinson, the only other colored naval ensign, is still in inactive status awaiting the completion of his medical studios at Harvard University in 1944.

Pittsburgh Pa.
Courier

COURIER CHARGE DENIED BY NAVY

By SIDNEY WALKER
(Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, Mar. 18—Sharp denial that the program for Negroes in the United States Navy is discriminatory was made Saturday by Lt. Commander P. B. Brannen, director of Public Relations for the chief of naval personnel, Rear Admiral Randall Jacobs, in an interview granted representatives of The Pittsburgh Courier.

MAR 20 1943

"The Navy's program is in some respects experimental, but it is not discriminatory," stated Commander Brannen.

Against Commander Brannen's blunt denial stands the fact that there are no Negro officers in the Navy and that there are no plans for training Negro officers or aviators in the Navy's V-1, V-5 or V-7 programs. Against it also stands the fact that no Negro women have been accepted by the Navy Women's auxiliary, known as the WAVES.

ADMITS BAN IN SOME RATINGS

Commander Brannen insisted that, so far as the Navy proper—as distinguished from the Coast Guard and the Marine corps—is concerned, there are no specific limitations on the acceptance or advancement of Negroes who enlist or are inducted into the Navy through Selective Service. He did admit that Negroes are not enlisted in a few ratings such as hospital corpsmen.

MAR 20 1943

To prove his point, Commander Brannen described the training given Negro recruits at Great Lakes and at Hampton.

"They undergo the same training given white recruits at the same station and for the same period," he stated.

"At the Training station, they are given the opportunity of qualifying for selection to the Navy's service schools.

TWO SCHOOLS GIVE SPECIAL TRAINING

"Qualified applicants undergo specialized training at these schools over a period of 16 to 26 weeks. Attendance at the service schools serves to qualify the men for promotion to higher ratings.

"The Navy has established service schools at Hampton institute for machinist's mates, motor machinist's mates, electrician's mates, shipfitters, metalfitters, metalsmiths and carpenters.

"The instruction, curricula and length of courses are the same as those prescribed for all service schools established by the Navy department."

PRAISE TRAINEES

In his defense of the Navy's training program, Commander Brannen took occasion to emphasize that every report received from Great Lakes and Hampton has attested to the excellence of the Negro trainees.

He also informed The Courier that the Messman rating has been abolished by the Navy and that hereafter messmen are to be known as stewards, first, second and third class.

He branded as untrue the charge made that, during the period, June 1 to December 5, 1942, Negroes had been herded into the messman branch and the construction battalions. He stated that Negroes placed in the messman branch during that period had volunteered for it.

MAR 20 1943

NO PLANS TO TRAIN NEGRO OFFICERS

Commander Brannen could give The Courier no assurance that any Negroes will be given commissions in the Navy. The problem there, he confessed, was not the fitness of Negroes, but the fact that, in line with Navy policy, there were no billets or posts to which to assign Negro officers.

The Navy's policy is to train Negroes separately and not to place Negroes in command of whites. It does place whites in command of Negroes.

Thus there are no plans for Negro officers because there is no way to assign them without putting them over some whites.

Negroes can't be placed in command of ships with all-Negro crews, according to Commander Brannen, because it takes from four to seven years to train a man to boss a ship.

This policy of not placing Negroes in positions to give orders to whites is expected to operate effectually to lock Negroes out of the Navy's V training programs. These are for officers. No Negro schools have been slected for such training. If Negroes attending white schools where the Navy has installed its training programs apply for training, they will be turned down until the Navy policy on the use of Negro officers is changed.

EXPECTATION ON WAVES

A board, consisting of representatives from the Army, Navy and War Manpower commission, selects the schools for training.

When it was suggested that Negro ensigns be commissioned and placed on duty in the Navy department at Washington, Commander Brannen asserted that such a step was not practicable because all officers in the Navy department were required to do a tour of duty on ships.

One bright possibility came out of the interview. Commander Brannen indicated that the line against Negro WAVES had not been drawn as rigidly and as indefinitely as against Negro officers.

He declared that the possibility of enlisting Negro WAVES is being considered and indicated that action may be expected soon.

Birmingham, Ala.

United Seaman Service Heaven To 9000 Negroes

Weekly Review

JUL 24 1943

More than 9,000 Negroes sailed the seas on the ships of the United States Merchant Marine, carrying supplies to the war fronts of the United Nations, it was revealed in a survey made by the War Shipping Administration. This number constituted one-tenth of the entire merchant marine force.

Our merchant seamen are at work on the most grueling front of the war. The ratio of their losses is 400 per cent higher than for our combined armed forces.

They wear no uniforms, march in no parades, take no bows; but they are braving torpedoes, aerial bombs, seas of flaming oil, machine-gun fire and cunningly-placed mines, days and weeks in flimsy life rafts—racked with hunger, cold and maddening thirst.

Realizing that these men, indespensable to victory, must be accorded recognition and benefits equal to those in uniform, the War Shipping Administration took the lead in the launching of the United Seaman's Service in 1942 to administer to the needs and morale of marine workers.

The USS provides for American merchant seaman, both in home and foreign ports, medical service, rest and recuperation centers, and recreation clubs. It is the one agency born of the war which does not countenance discrimination in any form. It is generally conceded that the merchant marine service is one of the most democratic institutions now taking part in the war.

JUL 24 1943

In every seaman's center whereever possible, democracy is practiced and officials go as far as they can in their attempts to see to it that all merchant seaman, regardless of color, enjoy the same benefits of the service. Even in the South where segregation is a part of the constituted law, it is not without reluctance and protest that the USS permits its men to be separated.

The United Seaman's Service is one of the agencies composing the National War Fund, which will soon launch its nation-wide drive in co-operation with local War Fund campaigns. The fund consists of 15 other war relief and service agencies. Among other agencies included in the drive are the USO, War Prisoners Aid, United China Relief, Russian War Relief and others.

JUL 24 1943

The National War Fund was conceived to economize time and overhead expenses in the collection of funds for the various war agencies which have heretofore been conducting their individual fund raising campaigns. Winthrop W. Aldrich is the president of the board of directors and Dr. Channing H. Tobias is a member of the board.

ENSIGN

JUN 12 1943

After carving out a splendid record for himself as a member of the crew of the Liberty ship Booker T. Washington, Ensign William Metcalfe Barker, former Los Angeles middleweight boxing protege of Eddie "Rochester" Anderson, has been transferred to the recently launched SS Frederick Douglass. He joined the Booker T. as a member of the original crew shortly after its much publicized launching.

Argus
St. Louis, Missour

The S.S. Merrick Joins Fleet

WILMINGTON, N. C., July 20—The S. S. JOHN MERRICK, fourth Liberty Ship to be named for an outstanding American Negro, was launched Sunday afternoon, July 11, at the North Carolina Shipbuilding Company of Wilmington, N. C.

The vessel was sponsored by Mrs. Martha Merrick Donnell, of Durham, daughter of John Merrick, who was one of the founders of the North Carolina Mutual Life Insurance Company, one of the countries largest Negro financial institutions. The MERRICK is the first Liberty ship built in North Carolina to be named for a Negro. Mrs. Donnel's attendants were: Mrs. Martha Williams Wheeler, of Durham, matron of honor; Mrs. Hazel Scott of Washington, D. C., matron of honor, and the wives of four shipyard employees, James Gordon, Jerry McGhee, Charles Sparrow and George Judge, all of Wilmington,

JUL 23 1943

Governor J. Melville Broughton of North Carolina and C. C. Spaulding, president of the N. Carolina Mutual Life Insurance Company, were the princpial speakers at the launching. Dr. Spaulding declared that the launching was 'one of the highlights of my life" and lauded the accomplishment of his former coworker in the insurance firm. Mr. Merrick, a bricklayer, started the insurance company in 1898 along with the late Dr. A. M. Moore and Mr. Spaulding. The company now has assests of over six million dollars.

JUL 23 1943

Kansas City Call
Kansas City, Mo.

Secretary Knox Approves WAVES Enlistment Plan

WASHINGTON. — (ANP) — Naval Secretary Knox has approved a plan for the enlistment of Negro women into the Waves, according to Tomasina Johnson, legislative representative of the A. K. A. Non-Partisan Council on Public affairs. However, the plan omits Negro officers and the department is said to be currently looking for a school to train them separately.

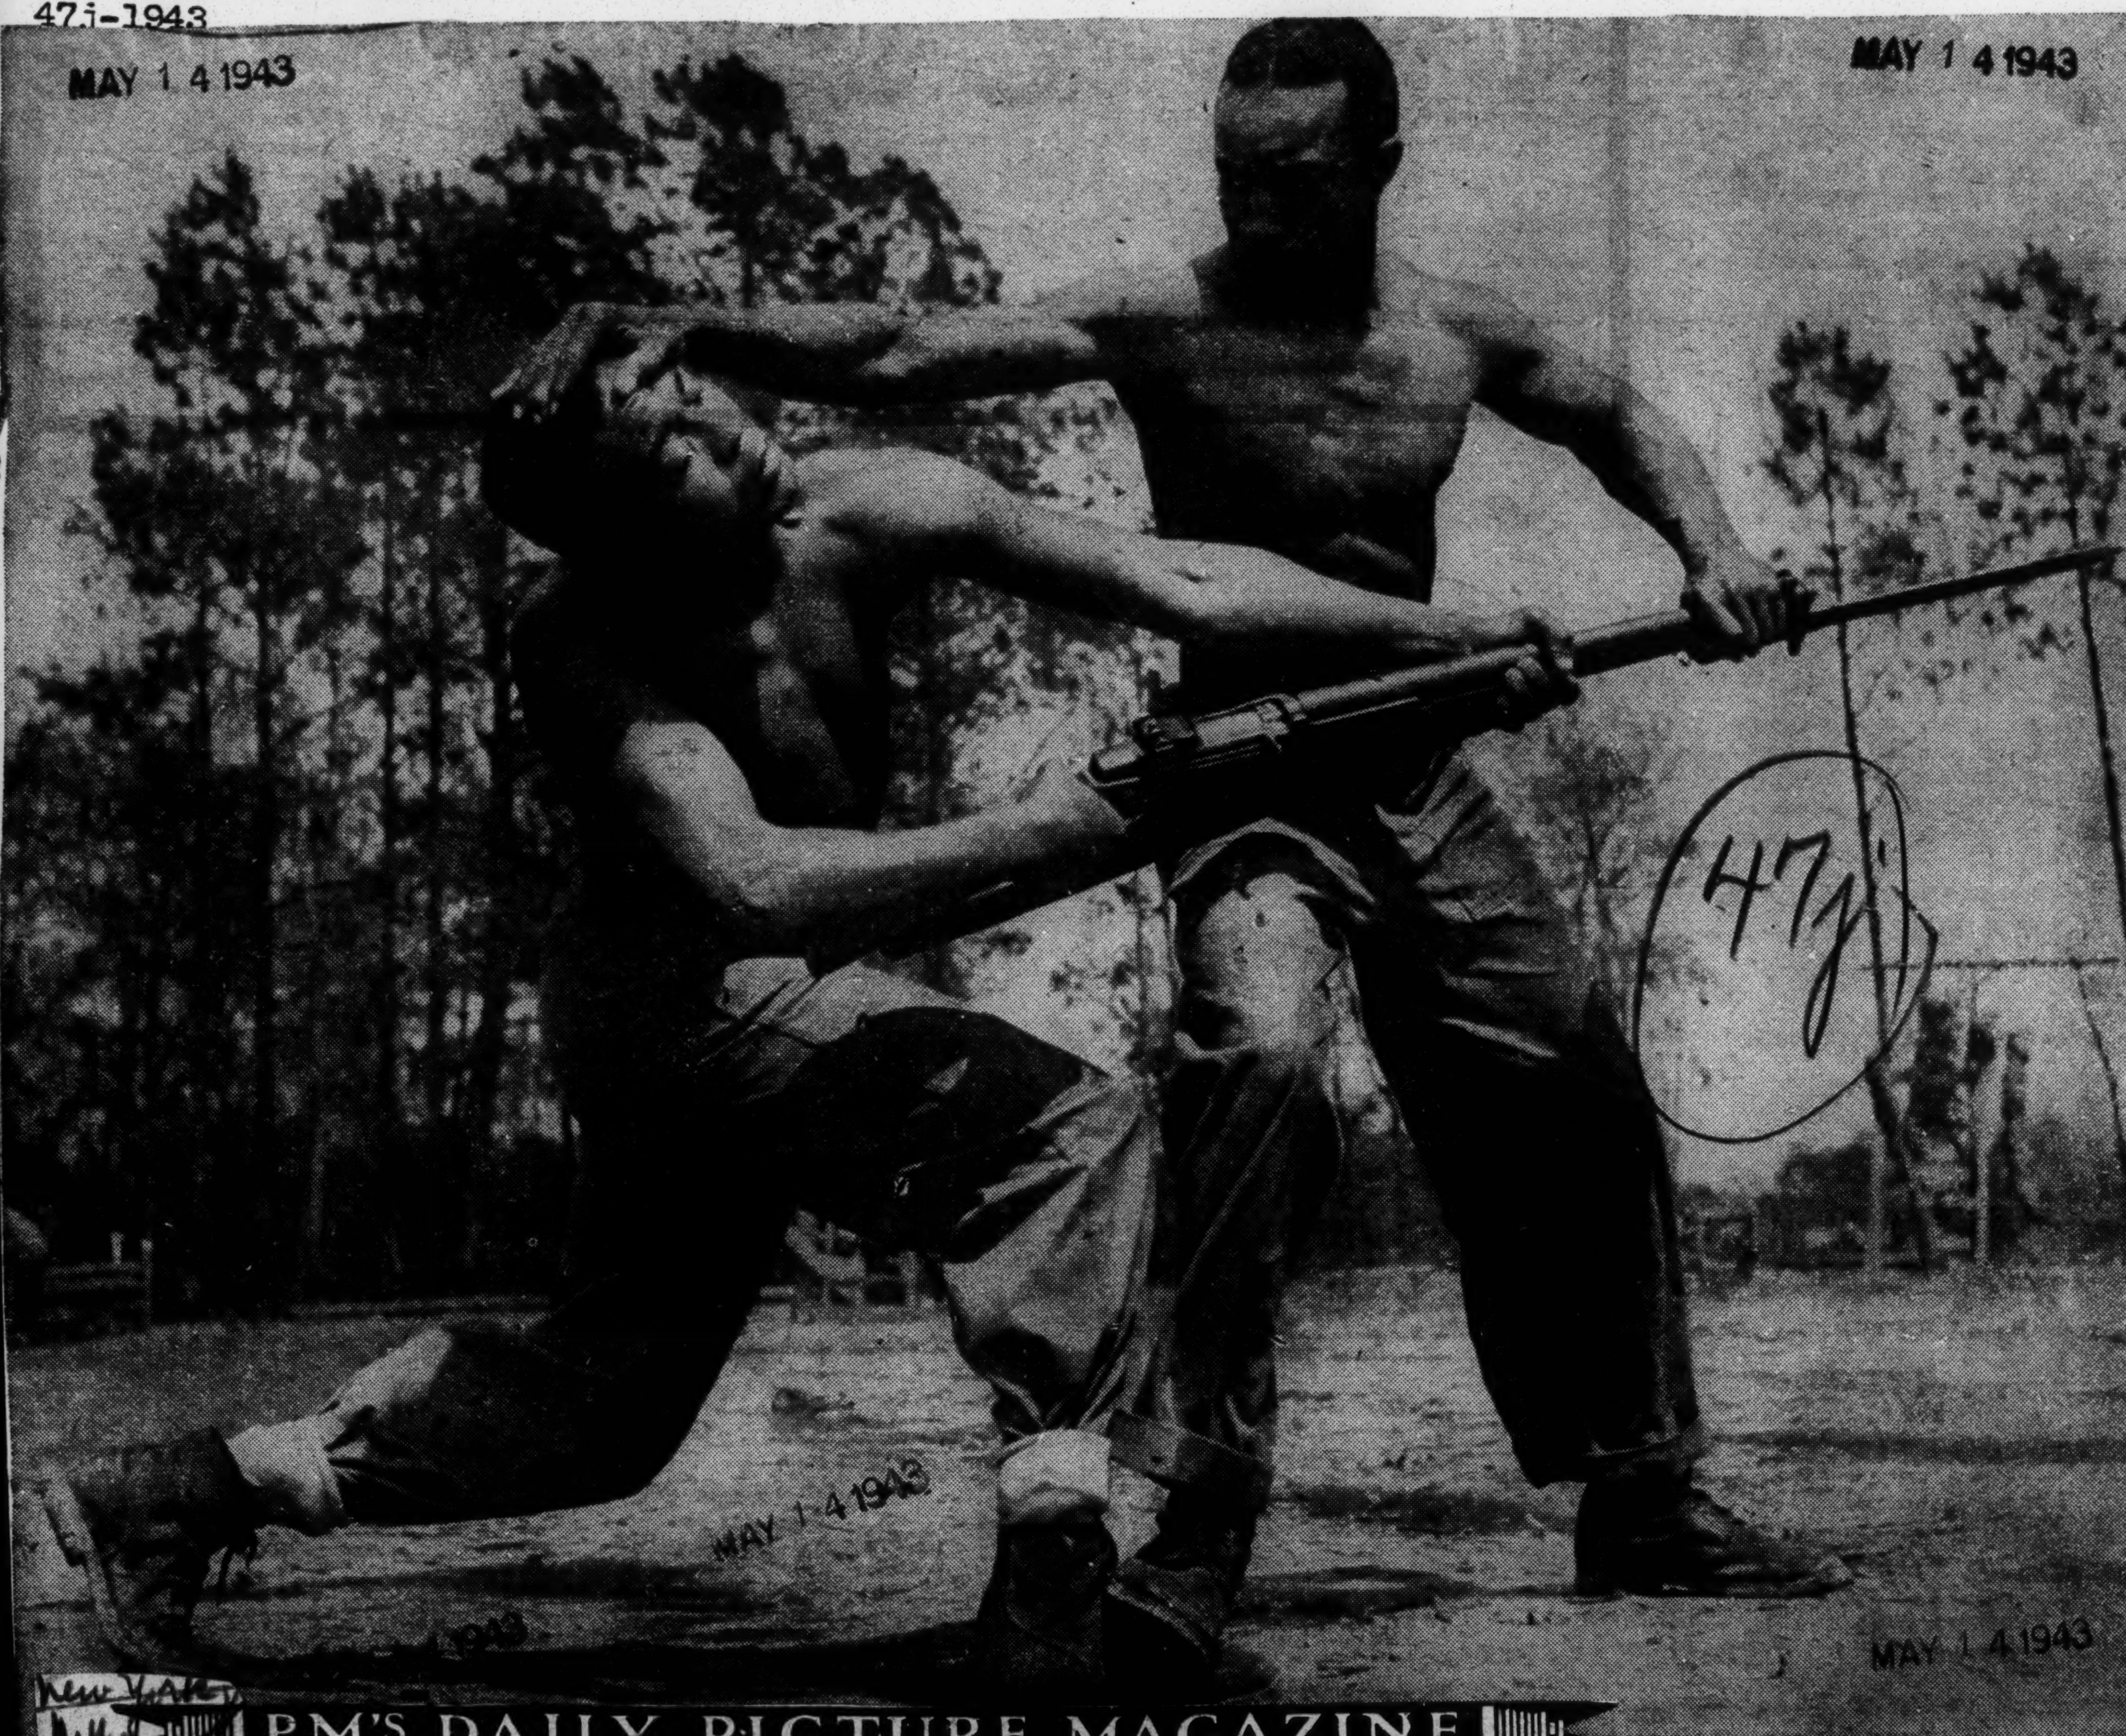
In a letter written Saturday to President Roosevelt, the council stated:

"We are unalterably opposed to Negro women being trained in separate or segregated schools and we are unalterably opposed to any plan that would be different in any way from that now in effert for white women in the Waves, Spars or marine corps auxiliary." The council also asked an immediate conference with President Roosevelt or Secretary Knox in regard to these objections.

JUL 23 1943

47j-1943

MAY 1 4 1943



New York N.Y.

PM'S DAILY PICTURE MAGAZINE

First Photos Of Negro Marines

MAY 1 4 1943

With a fighting pride that upholds the Leatherneck tradition, Negroes now are training → in the U. S. Marine Corps at Camp Lejeune, New River, N. C. One unit has already been assigned to overseas duty. One of the first set of official photos of the Negro Marines, this picture shows a recruit training his eye on the firing line's target.

47j

The art of Judo is the latest addition to the Marines' training. An instructor (right) shows a recruit how to make an enemy's bayonet useless—at the same time giving him a headache and crushing his foot. Marine Corps Photos from Harris & Ewing.

Durham, N. C. Herald
August 18, 1943

Ship To Be Named For North Carolina Negro

Washington, Aug. 17.—(AP)—A liberty ship will be named for the late Robert L. Vann, Negro lawyer who was founder and editor of The Pittsburgh Courier, the Maritime Commission announced today.

The ship, fifth in a series named for outstanding Negro Americans, will be launched in late September or early October in the South Portland, Me., yards of the New England Shipbuilding Corporation.

Vann was born at Ahoskie, N. C., educated at Virginia Union University and the University of Pittsburgh and lived for many years in Pittsburgh, where he died in 1940.

47j

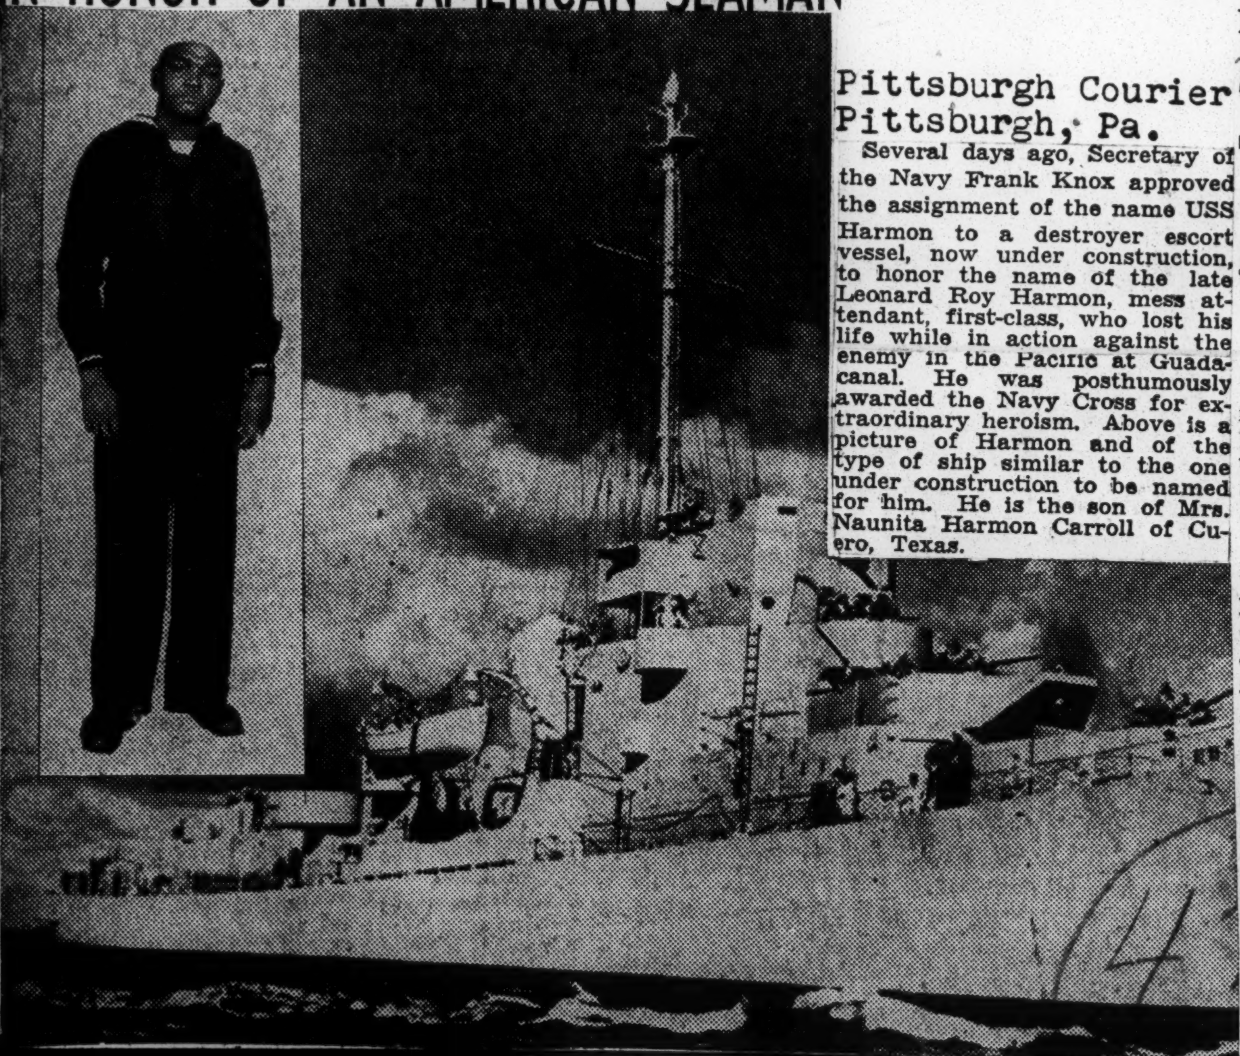
47j

MAY 14 194

Picture Magazine

New York

N HONOR OF AN AMERICAN SEAMAN



Pittsburgh Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

Several days ago, Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox approved the assignment of the name USS Harmon to a destroyer escort vessel, now under construction, to honor the name of the late Leonard Roy Harmon, mess attendant, first-class, who lost his life while in action against the enemy in the Pacific at Guadacanal. He was posthumously awarded the Navy Cross for extraordinary heroism. Above is a picture of Harmon and of the type of ship similar to the one under construction to be named for him. He is the son of Mrs. Naunita Harmon Carroll of Cuero, Texas.

New York Age
New York, N. Y.

4 Marines Promoted To Rank Of Sergeant At Camp Lejuene, N. C.

MAY 22 1943

MAY 22 1943

CAMP LEJEUNE, N. C.—Four Negro Marines have been promoted to sergeants in the Marine Corps at Montford Point, Camp Lejeune, N. C., Col. Samuel A. Woods, jr, commander of the 51st Composite Defense Battalion, announced this week

The first two Negroes to receive this ranking were Corporal Edson E. Blackman, jr., of Charlotte, N. C. and Corporal Charles F. Anderson of Birmingham, Ala. Both are in the Headquarters Company and were among the first 1,200 Negro enlistees in the Marines.

Son of Dr. Edson E. Blackman, Charlotte physician, Sergt. Blackman holds the degree of Master of Arts in Business Administration from the University of Michigan.

Sergeant Anderson, a graduate of Atlanta University, formerly was co-publisher of Pic Magazine He recently represented the Marines in the Negro Newspaper Week radio broadcast which originated at Hampton Institute, Va.

Shortly afterwards, Corporal Gilbert H. Johnson and Corporal John T. Pridgen of the Recruit Depot Battalion were promoted to the rank, of sergeant. Sergeant Johnson came to the Marines after serving a term as a messman in the U. S. Navy. Sergeant Pridgen had served a term of enlistment in the Army. Their commanding officer, Lt. Col. T A Holdal, praised them for exceptional ability and stated that they would be placed in charge of "boot" training—the seven weeks' training program given recruits.

MAY 22 1943

Other promotions announced included Privates First Class Eddie B. Butler, Curtis J. Gilliam, T. Gourdine, Warren N Morton, Ermer L Neil, jr., and Powell E. Woodberry to the rank of Corporal and Privates Hiner Thomas, Charles R. Davenport, Bedford Kincey, William A. Whitney, Harry J. Carson, James Colson, jr., James Givens, Harold E Coombs, Arthur V. Holmes, Richard Jones, Preston M. Gazaway, and Johnnie Bobo to Privates First Class.

Raleigh, N. C. News & Observer
July 1, 1943

SHIP TO BE NAMED FOR NEGRO LEADER

SS John Merrick Will Be Launched at Wilmington; Tribute Paid To Negroes

Wilmington, June 30.—The North Carolina Shipbuilding Company announced today that the United States Maritime Commission has assigned the name SS John Merrick to its 114th Liberty ship, which will be launched within the near future.

John Merrick was the founder of the North Carolina Mutual Life Insurance Company of Durham, which is the largest Negro institution of its kind in the world.

The company stated that it was pleased that one of its vessels had been named for an outstanding North Carolina Negro for it had been anxious to give recognition to its Negro workers who have done their full share in the yard's good production record. Nearly 7,000 of the yard's approximately 20,000 employes are Negroes.

Amsterdam Star-News
New York, N. Y.

Navy Yard Paper Features Negroes

CHARLESTON, S. C. (ANP)—Attention to the great contribution Negro men were making in the war effort was hailed this week in the newspaper, "Ahoy" printed for the Navy and Marine personnel and civilian workers employed at the Charleston Navy yard.

JUN 10 1943

The article entitled, "On Thing In Mind" read as follows:

"The Nazis reported they had sunk a certain American cargo ship. In fact, says Merchant Seaman Makhan Kitchens of Oklahom, 'The Makhan Kitchens of Oklahoma, "The German newspapers and radio said our ship was sunk by torpedoes on three voyages, and that all hands were lost.'

'Dead Man' Alive

"The ship wasn't sunk. Kitchens isn't dead. He was in Charleston this week awaiting sailing orders. He told reporters, however, that he had a close call last time his ship put into port on the African front loaded with 10,000 tons of ammunition. Negro soldiers had started unloading the deadly cargo when Nazi bombers attacked. The ship's gun crews fought them off and the Hitlerites missed their target.

JUN 10 1943

"What impressed Kitchens most, though, was the way the soldiers worked. 'In less than 60 hours,' he said, 'they had unloaded 10,000 tons of ammunition. Many of them worked 24 to 26 hours without stopping. There were a few white men in the crowd, but it made no difference to anyone. They had a job to do and believe me they did it.

"I asked one of those Negro fellows why he worked so hard. He said: "We just got one thing on our minds—win the war so we can go back to America."

JUN 10 1943

"There was no holding those fellows back. The minute the enemy planes left, they burst out of the ship and went back to work, rolling out ammunition. I wish everybody in America could have seen what I saw that day. Maybe there wouldn't be any more race trouble if they did."

47j-1943
Chicago Bee
Chicago, Illinois

NEGRO CAPTAIN TO PILOT SS DOUGLASS, NEW CARGO SHIP

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 27.—A Negro captain and a colored and white crew were awaiting completion of the SS Frederick Douglass at the Bethlehem-Fairfield shipyards in Baltimore, Md., this week, following the launching of the third Liberty ship named for an outstanding Negro on May 22, 1943.

The vessel was christened Saturday afternoon by Anne Wiggins Brown, Baltimore-born concert singer and original star of "Porgy and Bess," as the Negro master, 51-year-old Captain Adrian Richardson, and three members of his crew witnessed the ceremony.

Grandson at Ceremonies.

Also present at the launching was Frederick Douglass III, grandson of the former slave who once worked as a ship caulker in the Baltimore area and who escaped from there in 1938 to become an internationally famous abolitionist, orator and editor. The grandson is now a public school teacher at Dunbar High school in Washington, D. C.

MAY 30 1943

Several thousand shipyard workers, including many of the 7,500 Negroes employed in the yard, witnessed the program which included the presentation of a plaque to Captain Richardson by Ferdinand Smith, national secretary of the National Maritime union. In his presentation, Mr. Smith said:

"It is fitting and proper that in a war for freedom and liberation, the vessel called 'Frederick Douglas' should sail the seas. During another war of the same aims, this good abolitionist, orator and journalist was in the forefront of the fight against slavery. His ideals have lived and this ship delivering vital materials of war production symbolizes the ideals for which Frederick Douglass fought in his lifetime."

Completed in 29 Days.

Miss Brown, who was presented with a sponsor's gift by J. M. Willis, vice-president and general manager of the company, broke the bottle of champagne across the prow of the vessel just 29 days after its keel was laid. Included among the 50 special guests at the ceremony was the sponsor's father, Dr. Harry Brown, and Mayor Theodore R. McKeldin of Baltimore.

The launching program, for which Martin Zech, a shipyard engineer, served as master of ceremonies, began at 11:30 a.m. with a recorded playing of "The Star-Spangled Banner." This was followed by several recordings of songs by Paul Robeson and vocal selections from the "Victory Four," a quartet of Negro shipyard workers, Allen Z. Currin, Charles Jackson, Thomas Turner and and Julius Rayne.

The recording system broadcast "God Bless America," as the ship slid down the way.

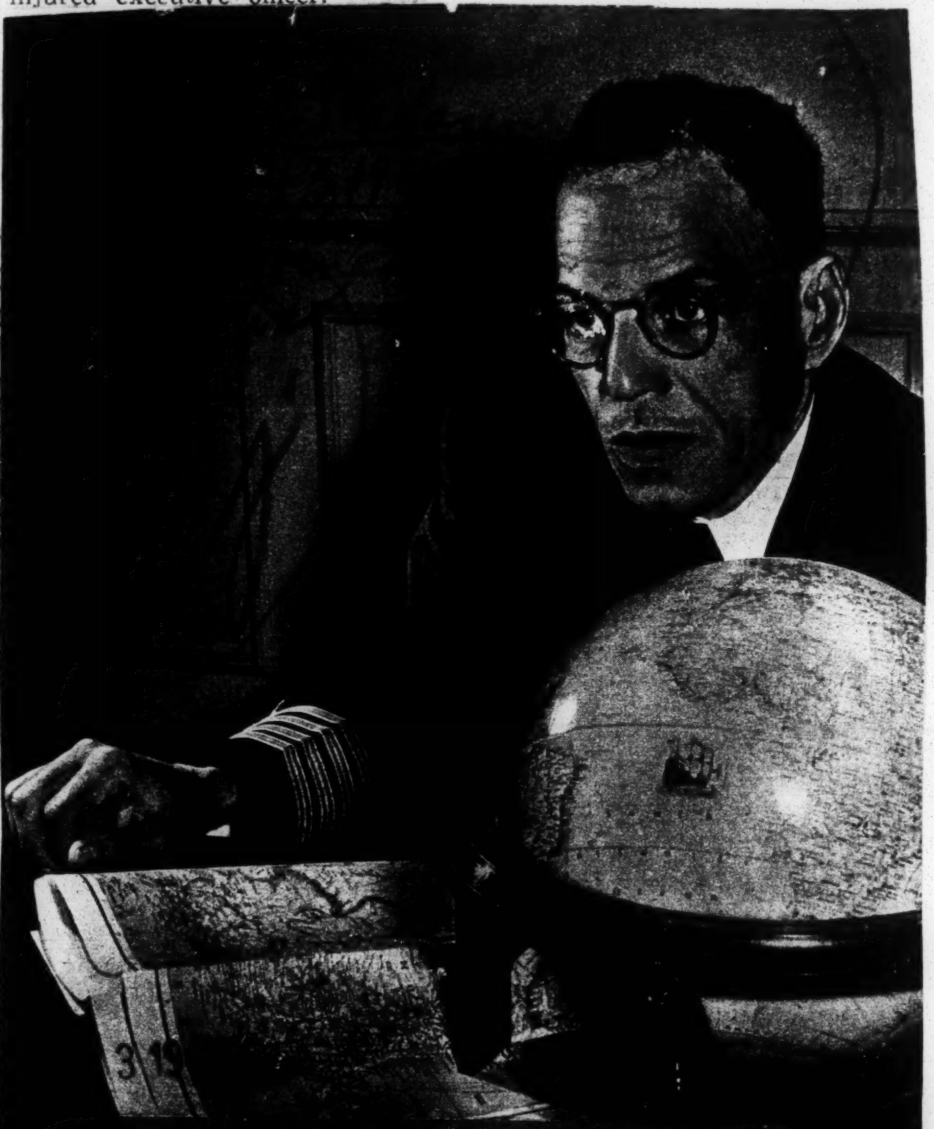
In accepting the plaque at the ceremony, as three of his aides stood by, Captain Richardson expressed gratification at the opportunity of becoming the second Negro master of a Victory ship and pledged himself and his crew to an all-out effort in the delivery of war goods to the battle fronts

Captain Richardson, a native of Phillipsburg, St. Martin, Dutch West Indies, is now a resident of New York City. He received his master's license in 1916 and was captain of an army transport in the last war. Prior to his assignment to the SS Frederick Douglass, he has commanded two vessels on trips to the war zones during this war.

MAY 30 1943

The first Liberty ship named for an outstanding Negro American, the SS Booker T. Washington, is already in active service under a Negro master, Capt. Hugh Mulzac. The second, the SS George Washington Carver, was recently launched at the Kaiser shipyards, in Richmond, Cal.

Twenty-four hours before the Frederick Douglass was launched, Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox announced that he had approved the assignment of the name USS Harmon to a Destroyer Escort vessel now under construction, to honor the name of the late Leonard Roy Harmon, Negro mess attendant, first class who was killed when he deliberately exposed himself to hostile gun fire to protect his shipmates on a naval vessel at Guadalcanal. Harmon was awarded the Navy Cross posthumously for "extraordinary heroism," and "unusual loyalty in behalf of the injured executive officer."



NEGRO SKIPPER

Capt. Hugh Mulzac is the first and only member of his race to command a ship of the U. S. Merchant Marine

Seagoing blood has never been limited to the white race, but it took a global war to put a Negro in charge of a big American merchant vessel.

JUL 13 1943

His name is Hugh N. Mulzac; his title, master of the 10,500-ton Liberty ship Booker T. Washington. Launched in California last fall, the Booker T. has since seen action aplenty carrying supplies for the Allies. She has crossed and recrossed the Atlantic, visited North Africa, survived gales, ice, tropic heat, enemy dive bombers.

Also, she has shattered the theory that a man's worth somehow depends on the color of his skin. Month after month without cargo loss, or trouble among his predominantly white crew, has proved the 57-year-old skipper of the Booker T. a highly capable mariner, a respected leader.

Look Magazine

He Stresses Study

Yet this proof waited 22 years for realization: Hugh Mulzac got his master's ticket back in 1920. Then, because of his race, he had to be content with lesser posts: steward, deck hand, purser, cook.

Until his chance came, he held his peace—and studied. To correspondence courses in navigation and radio operation he credits much of his readiness for command of the Booker T.

Look

Today his crew of 42 (representing 17 nationalities) has the unusual chance to attend regular shipboard classes in navigation, engineering, mathematics. It also puts out a daily one-page newspaper, The General Alarm, holds weekly discussion groups.

To Capt. Mulzac his men's welfare is all-important. He gives them what he rarely got from others: genuine friendship.

The Road Up

He was born on the small British West Indian island of St. Vincent, left home at 21 aboard a Norwegian bark. Soon he learned what it meant to be black: in North Carolina, a white man's church refused to let him in.

"I hated America then," he says. "It was hard for the grandson of a minister to be barred from the church of his own God."

But, through the years, he developed an inner strength. Now he hates no man, accepts life as it comes from day to day.

Ashore, Capt. Mulzac lives with his wife and five children in a Brooklyn, N. Y., apartment. Once a crack cricket player, he now roots hard for the Dodgers.

An American citizen since 1918, he hopes to retire after the war. But first? "I've got a job to do," he says quietly, with an accent that is still faintly British.

That job is fighting Fascism—and the prejudice that holds b... many men like Hugh Mulzac.

JUL 13 1943

GUN CREW HELPS SINK NAZI U-BOAT

Chicago Defender
Chicago, Illinois

Coast Guard Craft Rams, Shells Germans —Unit Scores Several Hits

WASHINGTON. — A crew of 11 Negro enlisted men of the United States Coast Guard participated in the attack on the German submarine which was rammed and sunk by the cutter Campbell.

APR 24 1943

Reports received at Coast Guard headquarters reveal that the Negro gun crew fired several rounds at the U-boat and scored telling hits which aided in the destruction of the submarine.

The crew was in charge of Louis C. Etheridge Jr., Officers' Steward, 1st class, of 327 Putnam avenue, Brooklyn, New York.

Other members of the crew were: Raymond L. Knott, officers' steward, 2nd class, Atlanta, Ga.; Lester E. Carr, mess attendant, 1st class, 3634 South State street, Chicago, Ill.; Johnnie R. Elliott, mess attendant, 1st class, Monroe, La.; Arthur F. Galloway, mess attendant, 1st class, New York N.Y.; Cleveland Powell mess attendant, 1st class, New Orleans, La.; James W. Spence, mess attendant, 1st class, Norfolk, Va.; Coy W. Allen, mess attendant, 2nd class, Miami, Fla.; William F. Fitzpatrick, mess attendant, 2nd class, Detroit, Mich.; Earl W. Phillips, mess attendant, 2nd class, Miami, Fla.; Willie J. Samuel mess attendant, 2nd class, Miami, Fla.

Courier-Journal
Louisville, Ky.

JUL 1 1943

AP Wirephoto.

AN INVITATION FROM THE NATIONAL MARITIME UNION to address its annual convention is declined, with a smile of regret, by President Roosevelt. It was presented by Joseph Curran, union president, fourth from right, and six seamen who have been on torpedoed boats. Two Maritime Commissioners accompanied the group.

JUL 1 1943

Pyle Commends Negroes on Ship

World-Telegram
New York, N. Y.

By ERNIE PYLE,
World-Telegram War Correspondent.

AUG 5 1943

SOMEWHERE IN SICILY (By Wireless).—A few more sketches of men on our ship:

Dick Minogue. He has been in the navy six years and intends to stay. He is a bosun's mate, first class, and may be a chief before long. He comes from White Bear Lake, Minn., and they call him Minny aboard ship.

It is men like Minogue who form the backbone of the present-day navy. He is young and intelligent, yet strong and salty enough for any job. He definitely has the sea about him, but it is modern sea. He wears his bosun's pipe from a cord around his neck, and a white hat cocked 'way down over one eye. He says the worst moment he ever had in the navy was while piping a British admiral over the side. Dick had a chew of tobacco in his mouth, and right in the middle of his refrain the whistle got full of tobacco juice and went gurgly.

Ernie Pyle.

Arch Fulton. He is an electrician's mate, second class, from Cleveland. Before the war he was a lineman for the Cleveland Illuminating Co. He is married and has two children.

Came to U. S. 20 Years Ago.

Fulton is 37—much older than most of the crew. He is a Scotsman. He went to America 20 years ago. His parents are still living at Kilmarnock, Scotland. He has a brother who is a sergeant-major in the British army and a sister who is a British Wren.

AUG 5 1943

Arch has a short pompadour that slants forward, giving him the effect of standing with his back to the wind. He has a dry Scottish humor and he takes the navy in his stride. He used to read this column back in Cleveland, so you can see he's a smart man.

We have 11 Negro boys aboard, all in the stewards' department. They wait table in the officers' mess, and run the wardroom pantry that keeps hot coffee going 24 hours a day. They have a separate compartment of their own for quarters, but otherwise they live just as the white sailors do.

All Quiet Boys.

They are all quiet, nice boys and a credit to the ship. Three of them are exceedingly tall and three exceedingly short. They all have music in their souls. Sometimes I have to laugh; when the wardroom radio happens to be playing a hot tune during meals I've noticed them grinning to themselves and dancing ever so slightly as they go about their serving.

I haven't room to give more than a couple of their names. One is George Edward Mallory of Orange, Va. He is 32, and before the war worked as an unloader at a chain grocery store in Orange. He has been in the navy for a year and has been operated on for appendicitis since coming to the Mediterranean. He got seasick once, but it doesn't bother him any more. He is tall, quiet and serious. He had never waited tables before, but he's an expert now.

AUG 5 1943

Another one is Fred Moore, who is the littlest, meekest and blackest one on ship. He has a tiny mustache that you can't even see, and a perpetually startled look on his good-natured face. He is very quiet and shy.

May Stay in Navy.

His home is South Birmingham, Ala. He is just 21 and has been in the navy only since March. He likes it fine, and thinks he may stay in after the war. Before joining up he did common labor at army camps and fruit farms.

Fred has a gift. He is a wizard at baking delicate and beautiful pastries. He makes all the pastry desserts for the officers' mess. He had never done any cooking before joining the navy, except to fry a few hamburgers at a short-order joint. He can't explain his knack for pastry-baking. It's just like somebody who can play the piano beautifully without taking lessons. The whole ship pays tribute to his little streak of genius.

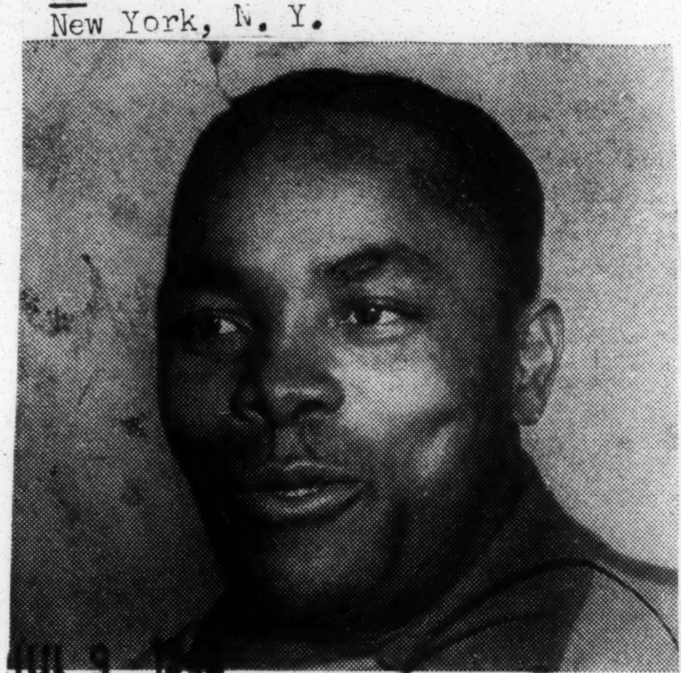
Fred says he has never been seasick nor very homesick, but during some of our close shaves in action he says he sure was scared.

PM
New York, N. Y.



JUL 9 1943

Leonard R. McIntosh, 34, lives in New York, married, one kid. He's a chief cook—"and boy if your shipmates elect a cook to anything, he's a good cook." His ship was smacked by three torpedoes, sunk in three minutes. And then, five days and five nights, tossing on the Caribbean with 49 men in one boat.

War Or No War, Navy Bars Negro Athletic Director

Chicago, Ill. Defender

JUN 12 1943

WASHINGTON—War or no war, the United States navy continues its discrimination against Negroes because of race.

Wendall A. Parris, a Negro with long experience in physical education, applied last fall, for a commission in the physical education specialists corps, where commissions were being given to many football coaches and others with similar experience.

JUN 12 1943

He received the following reply from Rear Adm. Randall Jacobs, chief of naval personnel:

"With the exception of specialists to assist in the recruiting effort, all Negroes who desire to enlist in general service are enlisted as apprentice seamen. The Navy does not enlist Negro specialists in connection with physical education and instruction."

Parris recently appealed his case to Sen. James J. Davis (R., Pa.), pointing out that he had had three years experience in the physical education department of Howard university, the largest Negro college; four years as athletic director and physical education instructor in a big junior high school, and other similar experience.

Sen. Davis wrote:

"My main interest in this situation is that the new Army and Navy physical training schools expanded programs are being conducted which will be used in civilian life after the war, but since the policies of the Army and Navy exclude Negroes from such schools by refusing them commissions, then the Negro race, which has a low physical fitness index and a record of 44 per cent rejection of all selectees examined in the draft, will not be improved because our teachers cannot get this training."

Davis appealed to the Navy and got the following reply from Adm Jacobs:

"At the present time the Navy's policy with respect to the induction or enlistment of Negroes in connection with physical education is unchanged from the time of this bureau's letter dated October 19, 1942, to Mr. Parris."

47j-1943

Sec. Knox Silent On Women In Navy; 2000 Seabees Across; More To Go

Philadelphia Tribune

Philadelphia, Pa.

NOV 20 1943

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Nov., (ANP)—Navy Secretary Frank Knox could give no report of progress being made, if any, with regard to the acceptance of colored women into the WAVES, SPARS or Women's Marine corps, nor did he have any idea when a decision would be made, it was learned through questioning at his Friday press conference.

Only the week before the secretary had been asked by the Associated Negro Press what progress was being made. The answer then was that the subject is under discussion," and that something had been "said or done" about three weeks prior. He then promised he would find out and release the information.

Reminded of this last week, Knox simply said, "There is nothing more to report at the present time." Asked if a decision might be reached by the end of the year, he said, "I don't know when there will be one."

47j

The navy department disclosed on the same day that two Negro battalions of Seabees—construction battalions are ready to move to undisclosed bases overseas. At present they are receiving their final training at the advanced base depot, Gulfport,, Miss. It was revealed also that there are now approximately 2,000 Negro seabees, part of the 7,100 in the navy, who are serving overseas and who comprise the predominant personnel of two construction battalions. One is in the South Pacific and one in the South Atlantic.

Three other battalions of Negro seabee specials — freight handlers and dock-wallopers in ordinary language—are training at the naval construction training center, Camp Peary, Williamsburg, Va., while at the same camp a fifth regular construction battalion is learning to fight preparatory to joining the other four battalions in constructing the naval shore stations which support the offensive.

The navy announcement, recalling its [illegible] review in [illegible] of the work performed, under fire, by the first construction battalion made up of colored personnel, in the Solomon Islands, found occasion to draw attention now to the praise given the men by Commander J. P. MacBean Jr., civil engineer corps, U. S. N. R., the officer in charge of the battalion.

"You pursue your duties with perseverance and attention to the objective of doing a fast, workmanlike [illegible] Commander MacBean. "Your devotion to duty under adverse weather conditions and enemy air action has the deepest admiration of the commander."

Specifically, this unit had built a seaplane base, and so worked it that the base was in operation during the entire time of construction. The battalion constructed large storage facilities for fuel for aircraft and ships. It built storehouses of all kinds, barracks for officers and men, shops of all kinds, two airplane landing strips, camp quarters, [illegible] systems, power plants and electric distribution lines, telephone lines, and a public address system especially useful in warning of the raids.

— A Colored Judge

Navy Falls Short Of 'Negro Quota;' More Time Needed To Meet Need

Amsterdam News New York, N. Y.

OCT 2 1943

WASHINGTON, (ANP) — Unless the navy department makes a substantial increase in its calll for Negroes, it will not reach the level promised during conversations with War Manpower commission officials last spring, in line with the policy worked out with the approval of the White House whereby Negroes would acount for 10 per cent of all branches of the armed forces.

47j

The upward adjustment in total personnel announced two weeks ago by Rear Admiral Randall Jacobs, chief of navy personnel, testifying before the Senate military committee, makes even more unlikely to attainment of the goal.

Waited Another Year

From an unquestioned source it was learned recently that the navy had requested an additional year in which to achieve what it had promised to do by the end of 1943 in the matter of Negro inductions. Questioned shortly after during his press conference, Sec. Knox declared that the navy is adhering to the program agreed to, and that it has been taking all the eligible men selective service had been sending them. He pointed out, however, that rejections were rather high owing to the higher physical requirements for the navy.

There are now about 2,609,581 men in the navy. Adm. Jacobs testified that in an adjustment of figures, the department has estimated that it will need about 400,000 by the year end, thus giving them a total personnel of approximately 3,009,581 men.

Based upon the 10 percent agreement, the navy should have now about 260,958 Negroes. The additional requirements to which Adm. Jacobs referred would mean that some 40,000 more Negroes would be required, giving the department a total Negro personnel of roughly 300,918 men.

80,000 in Service

There are today about 80,000 Negroes in the navy department, which includes the coast guard and the marines. This represents a difference of about 180,958 men which it should have had it observed the 10 per cent formula from the outset. It was to make up this difference that the navy announced following the agreement with WMC that 15 per cent of its calls would be for Negroes. With the changes in personnel estimates advanced by the admiral, this deficiency could amount to 220,958 men unless there is a pick-up in inductions.

In spite of Sec. Knox's denial, this acceleration is not taking place in any appreciable degree. Since April, the navy's calls for Negroes have been greater than 10 per cent, but not nearly approaching the 15 per cent it promised to make. Induction figures, which are invariably less than those for calls, for the first three months of the year were below 10 per cent, and for the next six months, slightly above.

More For Coast Guard and Marines

Calls for the coast guard and the marines have been much higher than for the navy itself, but the actual numbers of men involved are small, and therefore would make no noticeable dent in the overall figures.

It becomes increasingly apparent therefore that if the navy intends to accept Negroes to the extent of 10 per cent of total personnel, the percentage of calls agreed to will have to be made, and if the rate of rejections cut too heavily into the proportion available for induction, then the percentage of calls will have to be increased above the 15 per cent level.

Argus

St. Louis, Missouri

"One-Man" Gun Crew In Rout Of Sub Pack

NOV 19 1943

WASHINGTON, D. C. Nov. 15—Dorie Miller, famed Negro Bluejacket hero of the Pearl Harbor attack, had a new rival this week.

He is Christopher Columbus Sheppard, cook first class, USN, and a "one-man gun crew" on the Destroyer Borie. This destroyer was part of a Naval force recently awarded the Presidential Unit Citation for having sunk "more submarines than any team in Naval history."

47j

Sheppard's exploits, and those of another Negro member of the Borie crew, Ernest Gardner, steward's mate second class, USNR, were revealed by their commander, Lieut. Charles H. Hutchins of Terre Haute, Ind., during a press conference at the Navy Department on November 1[illegible].

Man Guns

According to Lieutenant Hutchins, Sheppard had a battle station as "first loader," on a 4-inch gun, drag-out battle with two U-boats—one of which was described by the Borie's commander as "the biggest one we'd ever seen."

While fighting the latter sub at ranges of 10 to 40 feet, the gun crew at Sheppard's station became blinded by smoke. The "first loader" immediately seized the gun and started firing away at the sub. Gardner rushed from another station and started passing the ammunition. Afer a few minutes, however, Sheppard waved his assistant aside and became a "one-man gun crew," getting his own ammunation, loading the gun and firing continuously at the badly crippled submarine.

The story of the death battle of the Borie against a pack of submarines and her fight for survival while wallowing in heavy seas in a badly damaged condition has been termed by the Navy Department as "an outstanding example of valor and seamanship," typical of "the teamwok of the unsung escort vessels that help make possible the more colorful exploits of the death-dealing, carrier-based planes which are carrying the fight to the U-boats in the mid-Atlantic."

Navy records reveal that Sheppard is a native of Norfolk. Va., and that he enlisted there. Gardner, son of Mrs. Rose E. Gardner lives at 914 Warner street.

Navy Ceramics Laboratory Supervised by Negro

People's Voice New York, N. Y.

AUG 14 1943

HAMPTON, Va.—Models that serve as training aids throughout the schools of the Navy are being produced in the ceramics laboratory at the Naval Training School here, and a Negro is in charge of the laboratory.

He is Joseph W. Gilliard, former Hampton Institute professor of ceramics who is now in Navy uniform.

DEFINITE RESPONSIBILITIES

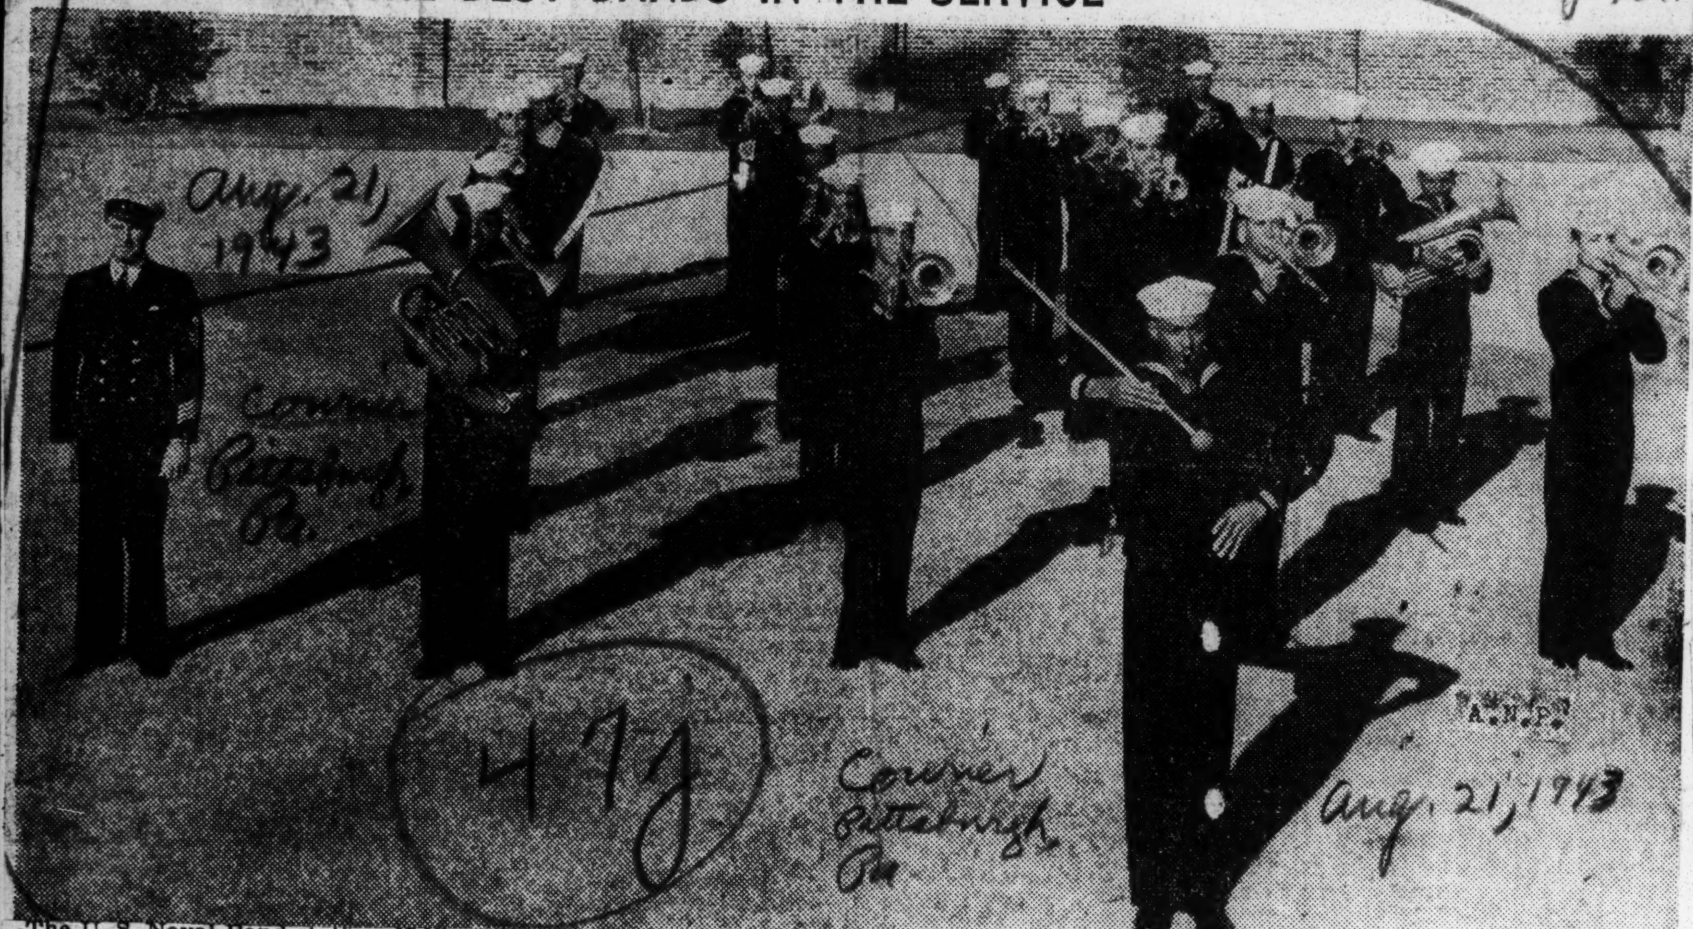
47j

There is no Navy rating for the art of pottery so Gilliard is carried on the rolls as a metalsmith. Under his supervision, pottery models of great tensile strength and beautiful finish have been turned out.

Gilliard, a native of Taylor, S. C., studied at the New York State College of Ceramics, Alfred University, Alfred, N. Y.

RATED ONE OF THE BEST BANDS IN THE SERVICE

Courier Pittsburgh, Pa.



Aug. 21, 1943

Courier Pittsburgh Pa.

The U. S. Naval Band stationed at the U. S. Naval Air station on the shores of Lake Pontchartrain at New Orleans, is rated as one of the best musical organizations in the country. Chief Petty Officer Walter Knight is bandmaster; Clyde Kerr being director of the orchestra formed within the unit.

Other members are, Louis Barbarin, McNeil Breaux, Manuel Causta, Fred Darnes, Wendell Eugene, Raymond Glapion, Wille Humphrey, Earl Joseph, Eli Johnson, Michael Lavigne, Eddie Pierson, Theodore Purnell, James Brown, Robert Johnson, Frabel Brigham and William Drake.—ANP photo.

Aug. 21, 1943

Knox Still Silent On Women In WAVES, SPARS, Marines

Amsterdam Star-News, New York, N. Y.

WASHINGTON (ANP) — Navy Secretary Frank Knox could give no report of progress being made, if any, with regard to the acceptance of Negro women into the WAVES, SPARS or Women's Marine Corps, nor did he have any idea when a decision would be made, it was learned through questioning at his Friday press conference.

'Under Discussion'?

NOV 20 1943

Only the week before the secretary had been asked by the Associated Negro Press what progress was being made. The answer then was that the subject is "under discussion", and that something had been "said or done" about three weeks prior. He then promised he would find out and release the information.

Reminded of this last week, Knox simply said "There is nothing more to report at the present time." Asked if a decision might be reached by the end of the year, he said, "I don't know when there will be one."

Send Seabees Abroad

The Navy Department disclosed on the same day that two Negro battalions of Seabees—construction battalions are ready to move to undisclosed bases overseas. At present they are receiving their final training at the advance base depot, Gulfport, Miss. It was revealed also that there are now approximately 2,000 Negro Seabees, part of the 7,100 in the Navy, who are serving overseas and who comprise the predominant personnel of two construction battalions. One is in the South Pacific and one in the South Atlantic.

In Choppy Waters 4 Hours

Swims To Safety In Sicily Invasion

AUG 28 1943

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa

By AL DUNMORE
(Courier Staff Reporter)

"I can thank the ability to swim, developed here in Pittsburgh rivers, for saving my life during the invasion of Sicily," Albert E. Paul, steward's mate, 2nd class, confessed [illegible]. Visiting his father, Torrence K Paul of 5348 Hillcrest street, Garfield Hills, Paul is ready to return to action after a brief furlough following his awesome experiences as one of 18 survivors from a destroyer sunk on the fifth day of the successful Allied Nations' landing on the shores of Sicily.

"We had seen four days of action serving as a cover for the landing parties, and shelling the enemy from about a half mile off shore," Paul related. "It was about dawn of the fifth day that the end came for our ship. I was one of the loaders on a 20-mm gun on the aft of the ship when the German Focke-Wulf swooped over scoring a direct hit on the starboard side and splitting the ship in two.

CAUGHT IN SUCTION

"It sank so fast that there was little chance to do anything but jump overboard. I was caught in the suction created by the sinking boat and only my ability to swim enabled me to escape the strong undertow.

"I swam about for a while by myself and then began to pick up the other survivors. There were 18 in all. Some of us had life belts which were difficult to expand, so we decided to make a raft of the ones which worked more easily.

"There we were, afloat in the choppy waters of the Mediterranean, with the battle raging, enemy firing and the stormy weather the transports couldn't unload. The enemy kept the water between the convoy and the shoreline plenty hot. Our destroyers and the British battle wagons shelled the beach down. After two days of continuous firing, there was a respite on the third day."

As we talked of the shelling, a flash of pain came over Paul's face as if he recalled the awesome sounds of this continuous pounding.

"Were you frightened throughout all this," he was asked.

"NOTHING ELSE TO DO"

"Well, I'll have to admit I was pretty shaky when I knew the battle was to come off, but after the preliminary firing, I just went about my duties as I was instructed. There was nothing else to do."

He told of how he saw a cruiser scout plane, a "Kingfish Fighter," shot down by two Italian fighters. "The 'Kingfish' put up a good fight, but it was too slow."

He also saw a transport set afire by enemy fire, but this was put under control by the crew. Gunners from his own ship on the 6" anti-aircraft and the 40mm. pom-poms's brought down two of the heavy enemy aircraft. Paul also saw two other big enemy planes brought down.

We asked him if his gun made any hits, but he shook his head. "The smaller guns are used only for planes diving in, and there was very little of that except at night, then they came so fast we couldn't see them. We could only fire at sounds, hoping we hit something."

The sailor was impressed with the speed of the aircraft. "They were just blurs when they swooped over."

Ready to return to action now, Paul spent several days with his wife, a New Yorker, here with his father and younger brother. "It has been like a second honeymoon for us," he said.

As a member of the destroyer crew, he saw little of the Negro units. He said he had heard no eyewitness accounts of the deeds of the 99th Pursuit Squadron, but said that some of the wounded white soldiers he met on his return trip told him that a colored regiment was being used in the front lines in the Sicilian action and was making a remarkable record.

"I only had one opportunity to go ashore in North Africa," Paul revealed. "Then I didn't see any of our boys. I saw some British and French colonials, but I couldn't talk to them. The only English they knew was how to ask for a cigarette.

"The Arabian children loved American tobacco, too. I saw one little three-year-old boy smoking a cigarette. All of them called Americans 'Joe.' They were very friendly."

Thus one of our many heroes told of his experiences. Like so many others, he has seen action, wants more, realizing that there is a job to be done, and doesn't feel that he has done too much about us. We could hear aircraft zooming overhead, but could see little because there was a heavy mist.

"We could feel the repercussions of death charges in the water. They gave you a numbing effect, made you feel as if you were falling asleep.

"After about four hours of this we sighted a seagoing tug breaking through the mist. Some of us saw a big white 'I' on the nose. We thought it stood for Italian, we all let go of the raft and started to swim. We didn't know where, we just started to swim away from the tug. But the crew on board saw us and signalled that she was a friendly craft and pulled us all on board.

THEN I PASSED OUT

"I guess I was in a sort of daze. I remembered being taken to one of our transports and being put in bed. Then I passed out."

Thus, Paul described but part of his experiences in one of the most historic battles of all times. One of the 18 survivors of his destroyer's crew, the 29-year-old sailor made no pretense at having performed any heroic deed.

He told how after a day's rest he was assigned to a battle station on the transport, and then saw three more days of action, before returning to North Africa and then back to this country with the crew of his ship and a cargo of 900 German prisoners and an unrevealed number of wounded Americans.

47j-1943

WAVES Seek Recruits, ---But Not Negroes!

SEP 10 1943

Daily Worker New York, N.Y.

By Eva Lapin

(Daily Worker Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9.—"Take a step you'll be proud of all your life—volunteer for the WAVES or SPARS today!"

Six patriotic young women in Washington decided to respond to that stirring slogan. But the WAVES wouldn't have them although they met all requirements.

The reason—they were Negroes.

And the WAVES have not accepted one single Negro women despite their energetic calls for more and more recruits. And the WAVES is an organization that deserves the wholehearted support of the nation.

47J

The snappy blue and white WAVE recruiting bulletin says nothing about "whites only." The only requirements it lists are that an applicant must be a citizen, between 21 and 36 years of age, no children under 18, two years high school education and in good physical condition.

MEET REQUIREMENTS

And these six Negro girls met every single requirement. But here's the story of what happened when they decided to test the qualifications for admission into the WAVES.

They caused such consternation in the Navy [illegible] here that officials in charge closed the door four and one-half hours ahead of schedule.

This was the first time these officials had to explain away their Jim-Crow policy and admit that it existed. Negro girls haven't applied to the WAVES except in rare cases—they know the Navy's undemocratic policy won't admit them.

It was late afternoon on that hot Friday when Althea Jefferson, Washington, Penna, high school graduate, and Hazel Lee, a qualified dental hygienist and stenographer, entered the WAVE recruiting office in the heart of downtown Washington. Both girls are employed by the government.

STALLED ON APPLICATION

At the recruiting desk sat a snappy little WAVE who greeted them pleasantly in a thick southern accent. But when the girls asked for application blanks, she blithely replied:

"Oh, [illegible] applications [illegible] now, but [illegible] take your names and addresses and telephone numbers. As soon as we begin taking them we'll let you know."

With application blanks scattered all over the place and recruits more than welcome, this was just a nice little stall.

The Kentucky WAVE admitted when pressed that she gave out some applications, but added quite firmly:

"We are making some plans for you'all now."

You-all meant Negroes. It was apparent that the WAVE had decided not to hand out applications on her own initiative from what later happened.

When the next two Negro girls sauntered in—Bernice Jacobs and Velma Hammond, both college graduates, highly trained . . . the Kentucky WAVE was called into another office wanted "by the commanding officer," according to the Navy yeoman who replaced her.

The sailor handed the girls application blanks upon request but while they were engaged in filling them out, a Navy officer walked to the front door, locked it, saying "We're closing up, Smith, it's too hot."

There's a big sign outside which says "[illegible] A. M. to 9 P.M." It was only [illegible].45 P. M. The girls were told the usual hours were from 9 A.M. to 5 P.M. and to finish filling their applications out at home. The yeoman told them to go out through a rear exit —but they insisted on the front door and the front door was opened for them.

Outside, the other two girls waiting to go in, hearing the tale that the office was closing, decided to wait and see. They calmly sauntered around the block to see if the gesture of closing up shop had been a little trick to get rid of them.

And it was! Fifteen minutes later they returned to find the recruiting office doing business as usual.

The same sailor was seated at the desk when Cleomine Lewis, Virginia Union University graduate, and Cora E. Wright, South Carolina State College graduate, entered.

Receiving them politely, the sailor took their names, addresses, and telephone numbers and gave them application blanks.

Quite obviously, it had been decided by now that even Negro girls could be given application blanks. It wasn't committing the WAVES to anything.

But the girls weren't allowed to fill out their ampplications, since none were filled out after five o'clock, according to the very harassed yeoman by now. Pressed as to when [illegible] stated confusely, the closing [illegible] was 9 P.M., but:

"Today there was a heatwave and we decided to close early but a little breeze sprang up so we decided to open again."

And he further went on to explain, very much flustered:

"We have no provisions for accepting colored applicants as yet. But I understand some plans are being made."

Undoubtedly the plans he was referring to are the rumors around town that the Navy is going to set up Jim-Crow training schools and facilities for Negro girls when they accept them into the WAVES.

The WAVE pamphlet is addressed "to every woman who wants a part in winning this war." And certainly Negro women want to do every bit as much as white women. It is up to every American citizen to demand that the WAVES accept Negro women on an equal, non-segregated basis and give them an opportunity to serve their country.

Five Graduate As Shore Patrolmen

Age
New York, N. Y
DEC 18 1943

[illegible] LAKES, Ill.—Five New York men were members of the second class of Negro Shore Patrolmen who graduated here yesterday at the U.S. Naval Training Station's Service School.

The newly graduated Bluejackets, promoted to seamen first class, completed an eight-week course of Naval law and customs, uniform regulations, boxing wrestling, judo, drilling, small arms and first aid.

47J

The Shore Patrolmen, now awaiting active duty orders to a Naval station within their home district, are: Lester Dalbert Cummings, 30, husband of Gwen Cummings, 340 Grand avenue Brooklyn, N.Y.; Charles Mc Clendon, 32, husband of Beatrice Mc Clendon, from 252 Adams street, Buffalo, N.Y.; Charles Mumford Elam, 32, husband of Mrs. Eddie Mae Elam, [illegible]-160—105th street, Corona, N.Y.; Carl Raymond Vincent, 36, husband of Jennett Vincent, 101 West 114th street; and Herbert Augustus Gordon, 23, 305 West 112th street, [illegible] last two men [illegible] from New York City.

Marine Group Wins Praise Of Officers

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

By ALVIN E. WHITE

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4—(ANP)—The 51st Defense battalion, U.S. Marine corps, 1,200 strong, now in training at the 200 square mile reservation at New River, N. C., is winning the praise of the commanding officers and of fellow marines by virtue of its excellent record and conduct.

FEB 6 1943

47J

The 51st is the first Negro unit ever trained in this branch of the armed forces. But it is making such progress it will be the basis, it is believed, for a fuller use of Negroes in this hitherto closed branch of the services.

NO DIFFERENCE IN SERVICE

According to officials in the marine corps, a defense battalion is one similar to the unit glorified in recent film, "Wake Island." In other words, it is a unit fitted to hold captured spots, once the landing units have gained a foothold. Many of these units are operating in the West Indies and where the United States has obtained concessions for air bases. There is no difference between the Negro unit and the others in the service.

Starting from scratch, the men receive eight weeks basic training, similar to that received by army men in 13 weeks. From here the training continues, becoming increasingly more difficult and technical.

PROMOTION POSSIBLE

Because there have been no Negroes in the marine corps previously, all of the training is carried on by white officers and non-coms. Drill masters in the training cadre are toughened through years of experience. As soon as Negroes qualify in the manifold duties of the marine corps they will be promoted to the ratings and ranks they are entitled to.

The commanding general of the area has expressed a desire for the mutual respect by both colored and white marines. No friction has developed in the camp and there has been no more than the usual run of military infractions and violations.

FEB 6 1943

S.S. Robert L. Vann

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.
1943

The United States honored another great American last Sunday when the S.S. ROBERT L. VANN went down the ways at the South Portland, Maine, shipyard.

It paid tribute not only to a man, who, through his career, strengthened the American ideal of opportunity, but to the people whom he so ably championed during his lifetime.

It is eminently fitting that great ships carrying the weapons of war and liberation should be named for men and women, who, in their lives, exemplified those qualities which the whole world has come to identify with the United States.

47J

The United States is far from being a perfect country as everybody with the slightest acquaintance with its history and customs knows full well, but, for all its faults, the fact remains that it is as yet the only country in the world where people of humble origin like Dr. Carver, Frederick Douglass, Booker T. Washington, John Merrick and Robert L. Vann could rise to the heights.

When the happily-named Liberty ships bearing their names brave the submarine-infested seas and reach unfortunate and beleaguered lands laden with the fruits of this civilization, they bring home to those people in the most effective manner the real meaning of America.

And too, it makes all those in this land who appreciate the deeper meaning of this gesture, doubly resolve to break down those barriers which prevent America from reaching its full stature and promise.

WIDOW CHRISTENS NEW LIBERTY SHIP

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

OCT 6 1943

47

[illegible] oh Ship of State,
Sail on, [illegible] strong and great . . .”
—Henry Wadsworth Longfellow (1807-1882)

By WILLIAM G. NUNN, Managing Editor

PORTLAND, Maine—America immortalized a great American here today . . . immortalized him on sea as well as on land. As white sea gulls sailed lazily overhead in a cloud-flecked sky, and a brisk New England breeze unfurled U.S. flags fluttering from the masthead; a slender, charming, cultured woman, with tears in her eyes but with a throb of pride ringing in her voice, echoed the historic words:

“I Christen Thee, ROBERT L. VANN.”

The woman was Mrs. Robert L. Vann, widow of the late Robert L. Vann, statesman, humanitarian, lawyer and editor of The Courier until his passing in 1940.

(Other Pictures, Stories, Pages 4, 5, 11, 20)

The occasion was the launching of the 10,500-ton Liberty Ship, ROBERT L. VANN, first vessel of its kind to be named for a Negro publisher.

SHIP LAUNCHING WAS SYMBOLIC

It seemed highly fitting and proper that the SS ROBERT L. VANN should be launched in the basin of the New England Shipbuilding Corporation. Because the [illegible]ged structure of this Northern [illegible]ilding town, steeped in the traditions of Americanism, symbolizes the things for which the great edito[illegible]ught for so courageously and so fearlessly during his colorful career.

It seemed highly fitting and proper that the town which gave birth to Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, whose POEMS OF SLAVERY in 1842 created widespread comment, should 101 years later, be the scene of the launching of a ship in honor of a great American, of slave background.

HISTORIC EVENT

Today in a setting dramatic and yet highly simple, those people who knew “The Chief” so well, joined with dignitaries of city, county, state and government, to witness the tribute being paid. The huge caravan and the highlights and shadows of the launching combined to produce a never-to-be-forgotten picture.

SPAULDING DELIVERED PRINCIPAL ADDRESS

As the great grey hulk of the ship towered high above the heads of the spectators, Mrs. Vann, Mrs. Mabel Page Johnson, Andrew B. Sides, executive vice president of the company; Rev. C. E. Askew and C. C. Spaulding moved into the bay, a narrow platform extending from the cat-walk to the prow of the ship.

Along the cat-walk, scores of people slipped into advantageous positions, while along the gaping frame-work of another Liberty ship, hundreds of workers gathered.

Mr. Sides, in charge of the launching ceremonies, spoke briefly, followed by P. L. Prattis, executive editor of The Courier, who introduced C. C. Spaulding, the speaker, and Rev. C. E. Askew of Detroit, who blessed the ship.

Then came the christening. As Mrs. Vann's voice rang out . . . “I Christen Thee” . . . an intense hush settled over the assemblage.

With the words, ‘ROBERT L. VANN’ the silence gave way to a cheering refrain, which mounted to a rising crescendo of applause.

Hands reached furtively for handkerchiefs. Mrs. Vann was weeping quietly. Tears were in the eyes of many. But they were tears of joy . . . tears of humble pride . . . tears which recognized this honor which had been bestowed to one of their own.

FEDERAL GOVERNMENT WAS WELL REPRESENTED

It was a great moment . . . a moment which will forever live in the minds of those who witnessed the af[illegible] including the faithful and loyal employees who represented every department of the paper, and who ha[illegible]elled from Pittsburgh to be a p[illegible] of the occasion.

Representing President Roosevelt and the Federal Government was Ward Freeman of the National Maritime Commission. Representing the Congress of the United States was William L. Dawson of Illinois' First Congressional District.

Representing the State of Pennsylvania was the Hon. Homer S. Brown, member of the legislature. Representing the Chamber of Commerce and the Interracial Commission of Allegheny count[illegible]as Edward O. Ta[illegible] Representing the city of Pittsburgh was Hon. Thomas E. Kilgallen, president of City Council and former state senator.

MANY PROMINENT LEADERS ATTEND

Representing Allegheny county was Attorney Wilbur C. Douglass, while Dr. W. Roderick Brown represented the Office of Civilian Defense and the National Tuberculosis League.

Others of national prominence who attended were Bishop W. J. Walls, Chicago; Mr. and Mrs. Hobson Reynolds of Philadelphia (he is a candidate for city magistrate there) Mr. and Mrs. Julian Black, Ferdinand Q. Smith, secretary of the National Maritime Union; A. N. Fields, John R. Williams, Walter C. Ra[illegible] W[illegible]is, compensation [illegible]eree; Dr. Donald Jefferson, Dr. Emmett J. Scott, representing the Sun Shipbuilding Corp., Louis W. Wilgrade of the U. S. Maritime Commission, John W. Davis, Washington; Mr. and Mrs. Francis Dana, Portland.

Also present were Rose Wilder Lane, noted writer and novelist, and Mrs. Marjorie McKenzie Lawson.

MRS. VANN GETS SILVER PLATE

Preceding the launching, the entire party was presented to officials of the company, including Chester Churchill, president; Walter L. Green, vice president, and Mr. Sides.

Following the launching, Mrs. Vann was escorted on a sight-seeing trip to a sister-ship of the ROBERT L. VANN by Mr. Sides and John Baker, assistant to the president.

Presented with an engraved silver plate, gift of the company to her, Mrs. Vann said:

“You must know that this is the happiest moment of my life, except that memorable day when I said ‘I will’ to my beloved husband, who is honored here today.

“Because this gallant ship will roam the ocean highways, the occasion has international significance.

“I don't know what to say to you because I am not a speech maker, except to tell you that this gives me an indescribable thrill.”

Then she added, simply, as her voice lowered on a soft sob:

“I thank you from the bottom of my heart.”

Mr. Churchill told a coterie of reporters:

“This is the most impressive launching we have held here [illegible] the New England Shipbuilding Company.

“Because of its simplicity, the fine spirit of the people and their understanding of what the ceremony means, it has taken on added significance. It is practically prepared to move soon now as another ship to go out in the war effort to strike one more blow for victory.”

He admitted it was the first ship sponsored by a colored person and added: “Mrs. Vann is the most charming sponsor we have ever had.”

SPECIAL CREW TO HANDLE SHIP

Ferdinand Smith, who is actively engaged now with the NMU, revealed in an exclusive statement that a crew of veteran seamen will be especially selected by the union to man the ship.

The ship, although the sixth to be named for a Negro, is the first to be named for a Negro editor. Other ships launched include the Booker T. Washington, the George W. Carver, the Frederick Douglass, the John Merrick and the U.S.S. Harmon, an escort-destroyer.

Two Negro commanders—Captain Hugh Mulzac and Captain Adrian Richardson—have been in command of some of the ships. Mixed crews have operated on all of them.

Captain Richardson's ship was recently sunk in the North Atlantic, but all the members of the crew were saved.

The SS VANN will be completed in less than a week, officials at the shipyards stated, and will be ready for active duty. Name of the commander has not been announced.

Thus [illegible] the name of Robert L. Vann, [illegible] rose from the obscurity of a backwoods North Carolina cabin to become a fearless champion of his people, roam the seven seas to demonstrate once again the things for which he stood . . . equality, opportunity, full democracy.

Highest Rank

DEC 18 1943

Journal & Guide
Norfolk, Va.

47

Lieut. (jg) Clarence Samuels of the United States Coast Guard is now the highest ranking Negro American in the U. S. Navy. A native of Panama, Lieut. Samuels has spent 23 years in the Coast Guard, during which tim[illegible] has served in charge [illegible]utter in Savannah, Ga., harbor; in charge of the Coast Guard unit at Pea Island, near Manteo-Roanoke, N. C., and at the U. S. Coast Guard Training Station, Manhattan Beach, N. Y.

47-J -- 1943

They Watch for Saboteurs and Subs

Afro-American Baltimore, Md.

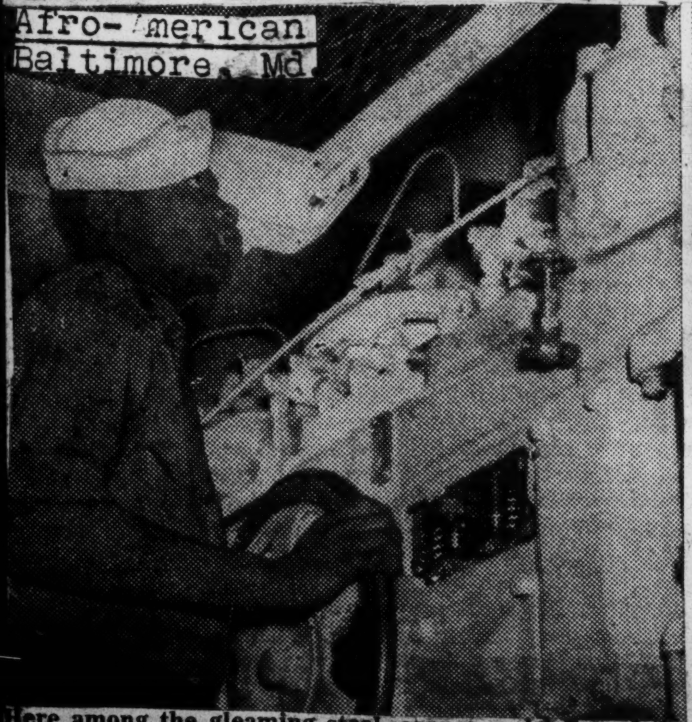
OCT 23 1943

Above are shown members of an all-colored U.S. Coast Guard beach patrol whose duty it is to guard America's shoreline against saboteurs and submarines. At the left and right of the picture are "Fritz" and "Johnny" two particularly useful members of the patrol by virtue of their ability to smell strangers and to hear sounds too slight for the hearing of the patrolmen. Shown in the picture are Chief M. M. Rothall Gardner, formerly of Baltimore commander of the outfit and a veteran of 26 years service in both the Navy and Coast Guard, who has seen service in all parts of the world, and Coxswain Edward Christian, Chicago, second in command to Chief Gardner; Joseph Stenhouse, Los Angeles, Seaman first class; James H. Brown, seaman first class, Jersey City, N.J.; Joseph Noel, seaman second class, Washington; Clarence Whitehurst, seaman second class, Norfolk; Lee Plummer, seaman second class, Washington; Floyd Jackson, seaman second class, New York; Robert Pearson, seaman second class, Cleveland, O.; Anthony Cooke, seaman second class, Norfolk, Va.; Coxswain [illegible] Gadson, [illegible]t, Mich.; Samuel Davenport, seaman second class, Norfolk, Va.; Nathaniel Anderson, seaman first class, Montclair, N.J.; Paul McClendon, seaman second class, Detroit, and Philip McKinnon, Miami, Fla.

OCT 23 1943

They're Doing Important Work With the Coast Guard Harbor Patrol

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

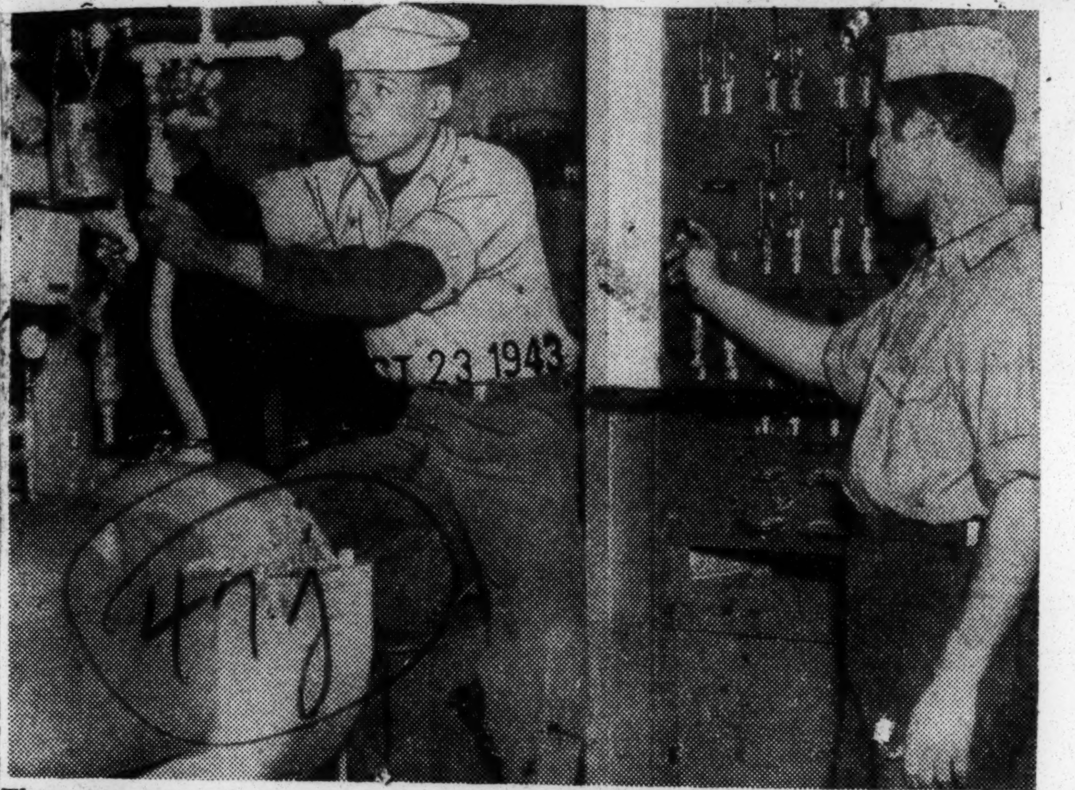


Here among the gleaming steel, copper and brass of the Coast Guard tug Beverly's motors, Motor Mechanic 2/c Clarence L. Arno of Brooklyn, N.Y., does his bit in the U.S. Coast Guard. Arno has served two years in the U.S. [illegible] Marine.

OCT 23 1943

OCT 23 1943

James A. Lopes, b.m.1/c, stands his watch at the helm of the Beverly as the boat makes its [illegible] down Boston Harbor. Lopes, who hails from New Bedford, Mass., has nearly ten years of seamanship under his belt.



OCT 23 1943

477

These two youngsters, one a former musician, the other a former mill worker, are shown in the engine room of the Beverly.—At the left is Harold Cuffe, fireman 1/c, a 22-year-old musician and former resident of Middletown, N.Y. At right is William Goldsby, fireman 2/c, also 22 years old and a former Gary, Indiana, mill worker.—

OCT 23 1943

MEMPHIS GIRLS AT NAVY DANCE

Defender
Chicago, Ill

AUG 14 1943

Portion of a group of more than 50 young Memphis women, members of the Junior and Senior hostess clubs of the Memphis USO lounge, who sparked the entertainment of the colored sailors at the huge U. S. Naval Technical Air Training school, located at Millington, Tenn.—just north of Memphis. The entertainment, consisting of a buffet summer, dancing and a floor show in the large gymnasium and recreation hall of the Training school, marked the first time such an affair was ever held at the establishment for the benefit of the colored trainees. Mrs. Marion Simpkins, head of the USO lounge organization in Memphis, organized the group of young women who attended and accompanied them to the base. Transportation was furnished by the Naval authorities.

Amsterdam News
New York, N. Y.

Wins Highest Honors In Naval Training

AUG 21 1943

GRE[illegible] LAKES, [illegible]L.—Samuel Edward Waters, 23, [illegible] Hamilton Terrace, New York, N. Y., has graduated from recruit training with highest honors in his company at the U. S. Naval Training Station here.

Waters, employed in a Chester, Pa., shipyard, joined the navy in May as an apprentice seaman. Now that he has completed his basic training in Negro boot camp, he will attend a navy school for ye[illegible]men. He qualified for this service school through his high averages on [illegible]titude tests given all recruits to [illegible] intelligence and basic kno[illegible]e.

The honor man, son of Mrs. Sylvia Waters, has returned home for boot leave. He is a graduate of South Bend, Ind., Senior High School and attended Talladega College, Ala.

Courier-Journal
Louisville, Ky.

Negro Cook Who Saved Captain Missing

DEC 24 1943

Washington, Dec. 23 (U.P.)—The Navy said today that Doris Miller, Negro, cook third class, who was awarded the Navy Cross for heroism at Pearl Harbor on December 7, 1941, is missing in action in the Gilbert Islands. He was aboard the escort aircraft carrier [illegible] which was sunk d[illegible] the Gilberts campaign.

Miller, 24, lived near Waco, Texas. He was a mess attendant aboard a warship in Pearl Harbor when the Japanese attacked. Despite enemy strafing, he assiste[illegible] moving his wounded captain from the bridge to a place of greater safety and later manned and operated a machine gun.

Age
New York. N. Y.

Knox Reveals 74,000 Negroes Serving In Navy; 7,100 Seabees

WASHINGTON, D. C.—More than 74,000 Negroes are now serving in the U. S. Navy, Secretary Frank Knox announced at his press conference Friday. Approximately 7,100 of these Negro recruits are members of [illegible] "Seabees," construction batta[illegible] organized within the Bureau of Yards and Docks to build advance bases wherever needed and to fight whenever the occasion requires it.

Secretary Knox also said that 6,000 Negro enlisted men are now serving at 12 Naval Ordnance Stations. These men, he said, have been detailed to duty at Ordnance Stations since August, 1942, and have been organized since May 1943, in Naval ordnance battalions. A special quota of the complements is being ordered to serve at advance bases in combat areas, Mr. Knox added, and these will be replaced at continental stations in the United States by new recruits as they become available.

The type of work being performed by men of the Negro Ordnance Battalions ranges from manual labor to hazardous and skillful work on ammunition, the normal lot of all enlisted men. Specific duties perform[illegible] by these men include preparation of ammunition components prior to loading and filling operations; actual ammunition filling and assembling, handling and stowage of inert and loaded ammunition, handling of stowage of bulk ammunition components, including high explosive elements, yeoman (clerical) work in connection with ammunition records, loading and unloading ammunition from and on board ships and lighters directly servicing the Fleet and directing the work of others engaged in such activities.

As an incentive to performance, the Commanding Officer of each depot has authority to promote personnel showing the necessary qualifications of leadership to any rating up to and including tha[illegible] Chief Petty Office[illegible] Secretary stated. Recreational activities of these battalions have been completely organized.

Secretary Knox explained that ammunition depots where Negro enlisted men are stationed, are located at Fallbrook, Calif.; Hingham, Mass.; Charleston, S. C.; Puget Sound and Indian Island, Wash.; Mare Island, Calif.; Yorktown and St. Juliens Creek, Va.; New Orleans, La.; Hasting, Neb.; and McAlester, Okla.

Birmingham Post
Birmingham. Alabama

NAVY NEGRO HERO WILL SPEAK HERE

A Navy Negro hero of Birmingham, wounded in action in the Battle of the Coral Sea, will speak at the War Bond and Stamps rally and show to be staged at the Auditorium here Saturday, Sept. 4, by Negro members of American Federation of Labor unions, it was announced today. The heroic Magic City Negro is James D. Long, of 1608 Avenue E, Ensley, now at home on leave. He is a shipfitter, second-class.

Some of the [illegible] Negro entertainers of the nation will take part in the show.

Secretary Knox Says 'No Mixed Crews on Warships; Negro Seamen Limited'

NOV 18 1943

Washington (ANP)—The navy department definitely does not intend to mix the crews of its warships. Sec. Frank Knox, in no uncertain terms, told his press conference last Friday afternoon, in answer to the inquiry of the Associated Negro Press, that the policy of the department, is consciously one in jim-crow.

The subject wa[illegible]cipitated when the na[illegible] announced that he ha[illegible]pointed a navy manpower survey board to examine the complements—officer, enlisted and civilian—of all naval shore establishments with an eye to "streamlining" them and achieving maximum efficiency. The initial phase of the navy's expanding shore organization and mobilization work, he said, is nearing completion.

Mr. Knox was then asked whether or not, in view of the stated probability that personnel at shore establishment would be given different assignments since the bulk of those leaving such centers as the Great Lakes Naval Training station had been sent to such establishments.

What Men Can Do

"That will depend upon just what the men can do," he stated, "and whether we have places [illegible] to them."

"Are they not trained to be seamen?" was the next query.

The secretary sat upright in his spring-back chair and looked directly at his questioner and declared: "Well, you know exactly what we are trying to do. We are trying to avoid mixing crews on ships. That puts a limitation on where we can employ Nego seamen. Using them for crews of small shore and harbor craft and things of that sort, and for shore duty. But we are not mixing crews."

Mr. Knox's statement came about 48 hours after Lt. Charles H. Hutchins, commander of the destroyer Borie, describing for newsmen the manner in which his ship had knocked out two enemy submarines in fierce combat., told of the exploit of a Negro cook who became a "one-man gun crew" when both the ammunition unpacker, the loader and the pointer all became blinded, by [illegible] flash of the firing gu[illegible].

All-Negro crews are now manning coast guard cutters, but there has been no announcement of indication that colored seamen are being used on any other ships outside of the rank of mess attendant. There is ground now for some speculation that those few Negroes known to be enrolled in the Navy's V-12 program, if given commissions as has been hinted, will be assigned to those "small sh[illegible]raft" on which they are not presently used and to which the secretary referred.

The only announcements that the department has been in the habit of making about Negroes in the navy have been with regard to those in construction battalions, popularly called "Seabees." Official navy photographs, however, have shown Negro inductees receiving training in radio and other types of specialized training, but nothing has yet been said as to their performance in the posts to which it would be expected they would be assigned.

First Negro Shore Patrolmen Graduate

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa

DEC 4-1943

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Graduation exercises for the first class to complete instruction in the Navy's Service School for Negro Shore Patrolmen were held recently at the U.S. Naval Training Station, Great Lakes, Ill. The 45 members of the class will leave the Training Station within the next few days to take over posts throughout the country where they are most needed, where their special abilities can be best utilized. Seventeen will go on duty in the Ninth Naval Di[illegible] 10 in the Fourth District, 7 [illegible] the Fifth District, 2 in the 12th District a[illegible] in the USS Reina Mercedes, rece[illegible]ng ship at the United States Naval Academy.

MORE CLASSES LOOM

Behind them they leave 150 SP's hard at work in various stages of an eight-week course that includes Naval Law and customs, uniform regulations, boxing, wrestling, judo, drilling, small arms and first aid. Additional classes of 50 men will be enrolled every two weeks, until eventually, every city in the country housing Naval establishments or entertaining large numbers of sailors on liberty will have its own permanent Shore Patrol.

Lt. Abraham Zitenfield presented an honor man certificate to Morris C. Macer, 19, of 817 South Polk avenue, Mason City, Iowa, who was selected as the outstanding member of the class. All the graduates were advanced in rating from seaman, secon[illegible]lass, to seaman, first class.

Eight Negr[illegible] Bluejackets who completed a 16-week [illegible] in the Service School for ra[illegible]men also were graduated. Honor man of the radio class was William D. Williams, 20, of 5046 Just street, N.E., Washington, D. C.

47i-1943

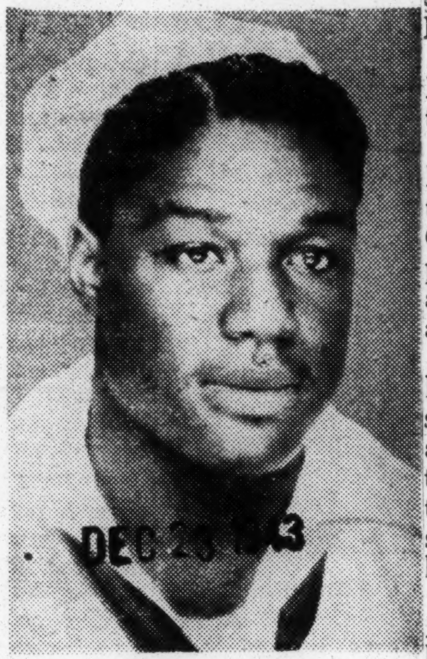
Negro Hero Dies With Officer Hailed by Rankin

PM
New York, N. Y.

DEC 23 1943

By JAMES A. WECHSLER
PM's Bureau

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23.—Rep. John E. Rankin (D., Miss.) is a chain-speaker; almost any time you wander into the House he may be on his feet, roaring his anger, and no newspaper could possibly report all the wild words he recites during a normal work-week. So one of Rankin's briefer orations, delivered on the afternoon of Dec. 14, went unnoticed until a tragic coincidence recalled those remarks today.



Dorie Miller

On that Tuesday Rankin sang a short hymn of hate, a repetitious denunciation of the FEPC (Fair Employment Practice Committee) "that is harassing the white people of the Southern states, if not of the whole country, whose sons are fighting and dying in this war." Then he cited a case history. He said he had just received news "of a young man I appointed to the Naval Academy who went down on the Liscome Bay."

Well, said Rankin with a tear in his throat and a mist in his eyes, he was "tired of a little group of radicals in New York and elsewhere" who were "maligning the white people of the South when they are doing everything they can to help win this war."

He didn't say much more than that, perhaps feeling that the story of the young man who lost his life when the Liscome Bay was sunk was enough to prove his point. And nobody in the House challenged John Rankin that afternoon, because nobody wanted to cast any shadow over the [illegible] of a gallant Naval officer.

Today the Navy Dept. confirmed reports that another young man who had been aboard the Liscome Bay was "missing in action." He wasn't a protege of Rankin's; he never went to the Naval Academy. But his name meant a lot to thousands of Americans who remembered his Pearl Harbor heroism. He was a Negro mess attendant named Dorie Miller.

When Rankin orated last week, he had no way of knowing that Dorie Miller was on the Liscome Bay; no way of knowing that the nameless youth he sent to the Naval Academy had shared the perils of the Pacific and found equality in death with a Negro from Waco, Tex. They had gone down together Nov. 24 — 20 days before Rankin used the fate of the Liscome Bay as the text for his "white supremacy" sermon.

Probably Rankin never heard of Dorie Miller anyway. But the Miller story is one of the rich sagas of this war. A hulking, 24-year-old, 200-pound ex-fullback, Miller left his father's Waco farm to enlist in the Navy as a mess attendant on September, 1939. He was sent to the Naval Training Station at Norfolk, Va., then assigned to the USS Arizona. He was serving on the Arizona when the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor.

Miller was awarded the Navy Cross by President Roosevelt for his conduct during the Japanese attack. The citation told the story:

"While at the side of his Captain on the bridge, Miller, despite enemy strafing and bombing and in the face of a serious fire, assisted in moving his Captain, who had been mortally wounded, to a place of greater safety, and later manned and operated a machine gun directed at enemy Japanese attacking aircraft until ordered to leave the bridge."

Official reports disclosed that Miller was collecting laundry when the alarm for General Quarters sounded. He headed for his battle station—the antiaircraft battery magazine amidships—but discovered that torpedo damage had already rendered it untenable. So he went on deck where the events described in the citation took place. He had never handled a machine gun before.

There isn't a great deal more. The Office of War Information issued full-page poster-pictures of Miller, carrying the inscription: "Above and Beyond the Call of Duty." First Negro to receive the Navy Cross in World War II, he was advanced from mess attendant third class to mess attendant first class. After Pearl Harbor Miller served on several Naval vessels, finally was assigned to the aircraft carrier Liscome Bay.

DEC 23 1943

Then the Japs struck, and a new nightmare was added to the tortured mind of John Rankin: His Mississippi friend and a Texas Negro vanished into the same ocean, victims of the same torpedo, servants of the same cause. The same grim notifications went to a home in Mississippi and to one in Texas. There isn't much that even a Congressman can do about that kind of equality.

Amsterdam News
New York, N. Y.

Liberty Ship Split In Two By Submarine

OCT 9 1943

Only Minor Injuries to Two of Crew Listed; No Fatalities Reported

By CARL D. LAWRENCE

Capt. Adrian Richardson, first skipper to lose a ship named for a famous American Negro, arrived at Grand Central Station with the 67 members of his crew last Saturday following their dramatic rescue in the North Atlantic.

"We are happy to be back," Capt. Richardson said, "but we'll be ready to sail again as soon as we get another Frederick Douglass."

The famed Liberty ship, launched only a few months ago in Baltimore, was sunk on the morning of Sept. 20. Ten other vessels in the convoy went down during the sudden German U-boat attack, which was the first since last June.

Rescues Mascot

One member of the crew, Clyde (Red) Allen, suffered a broken arm while rescuing the ship's mascot, a dog called Jerry Junior. Allen leaped from a life boat, crewmen revealed, and held on to the animal until others pulled him back to safety.

The only other mishap was the lacerated eye wound suffered by a white member of the crew.

Among those on hand to greet the survivors was Capt. John Godfrey, who is scheduled to become head man on the S. S. Robert L. Vann when that vessel is completed.

Happiest of all, though, was Mrs. Octavia Richardson, wife of the veteran skipper. At the sight of her husband, Mrs. Richardson burst into tears. "I knew you were all right," she told him, "but I just wanted to see for myself."

After accompanying her husband and members of the crew to the Wiltshire House, where official reports of the U-boat attack were made, the Richardsons went to their apartment at 1800 Seventh Ave.

Once Piloted Transport

There, Mrs. Richardson revealed that "I knew something had happened, even before I got the official report. 'Cap' has seen several of his boats go down and, for the past fifteen years, I seem to get a certain sort of feeling when something is wrong. In the last war he was in command of a transport but luckily nothing happened with thousands of soldiers aboard."

Among [illegible] survivors was Paul Slade, a slender young man of 22, who appeared quite calm. He refused, however, to pose for pictures. "I'm just an oiler," Slade said, "so I'd rather not get into all this publicity. Just say we'll keep our new Frederick Douglass sailing."

Another was William (Billy Metcalfe) Barker, who was once a promising prizefighter managed by the radio and screen star Rochester. "If there are any doubts about the Negro's ability to handle a boat on the high seas," he said, "the cynics should have seen our crew in action."

Describes U-boat Attack

Adam Van Landingham, chief steward, who has been on three torpedoed ships since the start of this war, took "this little incident," as he described it, in stride. "I believe the Germans fired that one ten miles away, which indicates something new in U-boat warfare. But we'll beat them at their own game before Christmas. The boat just behind us went down in thirty seconds, the quickest sinking I've ever witnessed. I don't believe a man was saved."

Other members of the crew fixed the time of the attack as 5:30 in the morning. "The darned thing hit us in the rear, near the propeller, causing our ship to sink much slower than the one behind us," one of them said. "We had five minutes to launch our boats and shove off in the midst of that mess. Every man was at his station on time, however—and that was our secret weapon."

After three hours in their life boats, the survivors were picked up by a destroyer and landed at a Canadian port. From there they came by train to New York.

Navy Opens School For Uneducated

Tribune
Philadelphia, Pa.

SEP 25 1943

GREAT LAKES, Ill —A school, founded to aid the uneducated in their Navy careers, is one of the most interesting phases of training offered at the U. S. Naval Training Station, Great Lakes.

Combining instruction in Navy fields with that of the rudiments of general education, the school has three branches— one in each of the three camps devoted to the training of Negroes. Termed the Remedial School, it has on its faculty a score of colored Bluejackets, most of whom are college graduates, with experience in education and social work.

With students assigned to class on the basis of literacy tests given them during their first week of training, the sailor-teachers conduct a seven-week course which includes reading, writing, arithmetic, spelling grammar, and the study of the Bluejackets' Manual—the enlisted man's "bible." The pupils attend classes for an hour and a half four nights a week and Saturday and Sunday mornings.

— A Colored Judg

NAVY PROMOTIONS LAG

NOV 19 1942

Argus

St. Louis. Missouri

REVEALS LACK OF OFFICERS

"Open Door" Policy Falling Short

CHICAGO, Ill., Nov. 16 — (Special to the St. Louis Argus)—It was revealed in a letter received by Dr. J. B. Martin, President of the Negro American League, from David Albritton, former high jump champion now stationed at Great Lakes, that Negroes are not being advanced in the U. S. navy as promised in the "opened" door policy announced early in 1942. The letter from Seaman Albritton reads as folsows:

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

Below you will find the pertinent facts on the U. S. Navy and its program concerning Negroes.

NOV 19 1942

Early in 1942. the Navy supposedly "opened" its doors to the Negro in the General Service branch and said in part that Negroes were to be admitted to the Navy and given the same opportunities that were enjoyed by the white sailors. These opportuinites included choice of Service School (the Navy operates 59 of these special school for the training of its men and to date there are 19 open to Negroes). and opportunity to work in the field of the man's own choice and proficiency with the rating and pay commensurate with the man's ability.

NOV 19 1942

Within a period of a year Navy has accepted some very highly qualified men—men who, if they had been of a different texture in skin coloration, would have been commissioned officers right off the bat. But what has been the case? We all know that there are no commissioned officers (there are promises of one or two); to date these are two Negroes in the entire set-up at Great Lakes Illinois who are rated as high as Petty Officer Second Class. All the rest are Petty Officers, third class, or Seaman, Second Seaman, First Class. There are a few chiefs or so (Chief Petty Officers) but their ratings were secured from the outside and those in power at Great Lakes had nothing to do with those men and their ratings.

NOV 19 1942

Let us take an outstanding example of the work. The Negro Selection Office has more college trained and professional men on its staff than any other office on the base. The Negro Selection office presents quite a contrast to the white Selection office doing the same work. The white Selection Office has 16 commissioned officers. The Negro Selection Office has one officer only he is white.

Where is this blame to be placed? Some say with Secretary Knox, others say The Navy Bureau of Personnel but has anyone ever questioned Commander D. W. Armstrong and his attitude toward rating Negro sailors?

NOV 19 1942

Commander Armstrong, whose father was the founder of Hampton Institute, Hampton, Virginia, is Assistant Recruit Training Officer in charge of Negroes at Great Lakes. Every Negro who goes through That station must pass through Cdr. Armstrong's hands. He goes about and preaches what a friend he is to the Negro and show how hard he is working for their advancement—yet his hard efforts have borne no fruit other than two Petty Officers, Second Class. Surely the Commander can do better than that or else keep still!

It might be a good idea to question Cdr. Armstrong and pin him down to some tangible evidence that he is a true friend and is working honesty and sincerely for rapid advancement of Negro Sailors.

Respectfully yours,

David Albritton AIS. Co. 1472

Dorie Miller's Case Proof Of Navy Injustice

DEC 25 1943

Courier

Pittsburgh, Pa

DEC 25 1943

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Dorie Miller, the hero of Pearl Harbor, is missing in action.

This startling fact has been confirmed by the U.S. Navy Department—and the case of Dorie Miller, first of his race to distinguish himself with this jim-crow branch of the armed forces in World War II, vividly accentuates the fact that, not a visible iota since that infamous day of Japanese aggression, has the United States Navy altered its profound policy of racial discrimination.

MESSMAN STI

DEC 25 1943

For Dorie Miller distinguished himself and won his hero's medals while bearing the rating of messman. Now the famous hero of Pearl Harbor is missing in action—and when he was last heard of he still bore the rating of messman!

DEC 25 1943

True, Dorie Miller received the Navy Cross, a slight advancement from Messman Third Class to Messman First Class, and some attendant press notices. But, through his complete rise from obscurity to heroism in the service, he still did not transcend a messman's rating. There, the Navy stopped!

NOT GOOD ENOUGH

No matter how outstanding the service rendered by Negroes for the United States Navy, they have not been allowed to stand in line for commissions. The Department has steadfastly refused Negro women the opportunity to enlist in the WAVES, SPARS and women Marines. Few harbor crafts are being manned by Negroes. Colored seamen, being trained according to accepted standards, are landing at shore establishments at a time when the Department has a manpower commission at work, seeking ways and means of streamlining the shore organizations.

The Navy has accelerated its acceptance of Negroes to the extent that colored men represent about 15 per cent of all calls by the service, but the big question, through it all, is to what use all this manpower will be put once it is trained? The Navy has already indicated boldly that it needs manpower—but that it doesn't particularly care for Negro manpower if it is the type of manpower which will aspire for and work toward commissions with the same zeal as white sailors.

DEC 25 1943

NAVY PLANS TO COMMISSION RACE OFFICERS

Defender

V-12 Graduates Will Get Promotions After Graduation

Chicago. Ill

(Defender Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON—The Navy Department told the Defender last week that the commissioning of Negroes as officers in the Navy is in prospect.

They will come from those Negro cadets who successfully complete the Navy's V-12 college program. Several Negroes are enrolled in the program.

OCT 16 1943

The V-12 program leads to commissions in the Naval reserve, a spokesman for the Navy said. "That is the whole purpose of the course." he declared. It is not possible to predict, however, who will pass the course, he indicated, but those who do pass will be commissioned.

The Negroes now receiving this training entered the program as result of the qualifying tests given last April 2. New tests were announced last week for both the Army and Navy college programs, (A-12 and V-12) to be held November 9 in high schools and colleges throughout the nation.

There will be no limiting quotas on the number of Negroes the Navy said. Those selected for the Navy program may express a preference for colleges on the Navy list of contract institutions and the course of study they would like to pursue. Assignment to college and course of study, however, ultimately will be determined by the needs of the service.

OCT 16 1943

All students in the Navy college program will be on active duty in uniform with pay under military discipline. The Navy pays all expenses, including tuition, housing, food — everything but personal items.

Information on the tests may be obtained from school and college administrative officers, who have been furnished copies of the pamphlet, "Qualifying Test for Civilians," distributed by the U. S. Office of Education.

OCT 16 1943

The tests are open to male high school seniors in their last semester and graduates, who will reach their 17th birthday but not their 22nd birthday by March 1, 1944.

Memphis, Tenn., Review

December 24, 1943

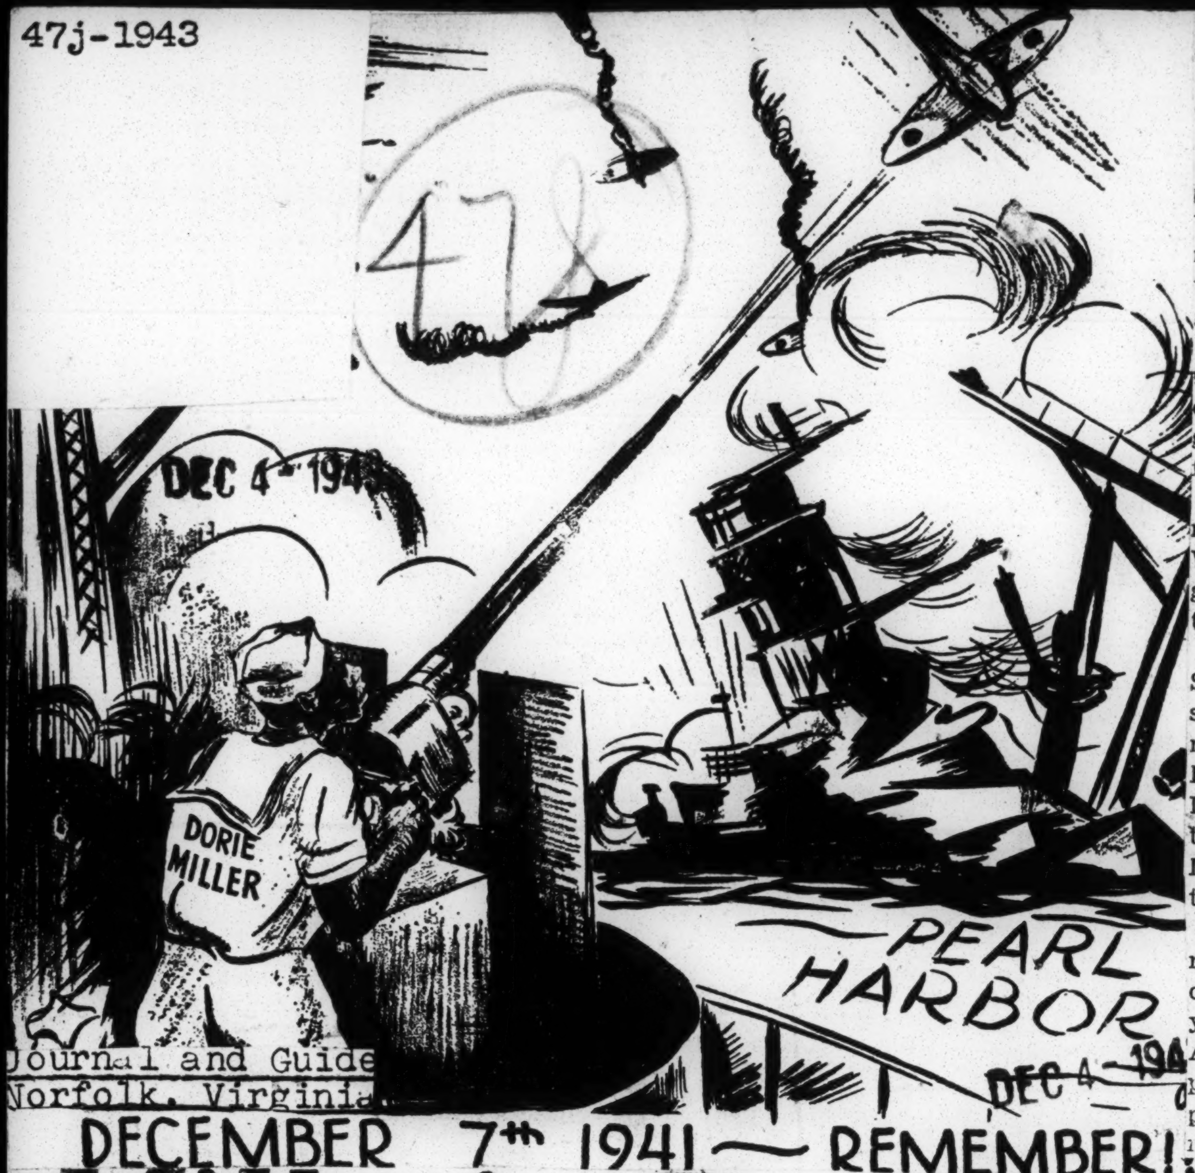
Negro Personnel In Navy Now 74,000 Men

WASHINGTON, D. C. (ILNS)—Negro personnel in the Navy now numbers over 74,000, and of that number almost 10 per cent, or 7,100, are in the famous Seabees, the Navy Department has announced.

Most of those in the Seabees are busy building advanced bases wherever needed, and fight whenever the occasion requires. Of the others, approximately 8,000 Negro enlisted men are serving at 12 Naval Ordnance Stations. They have been detailed to duty at the ordnance stations since August, 1942, and since May, 1943, they have been organized in Naval Ordnance battalions.

The Navy said a specific quota of the ordnance battalion complements is being ordered to serve at advanced bases in combat areas and such personnel is being replaced at continental stations by new recruits as they become available.

47j-1943



478

DEC 4 1943

Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Virginia

SS James Weldon Johnson

Bee (Magazine Section)
Chicago, Ill
DEC 19 1943

SOON a cargo ship will be named after another famous Negro, the late James Weldon Johnson. Few gestures have been more stimulating during the present war than the honoring of distinguished Negroes by naming cargo ships after them.

These gestures have generated a great reservoir of pride and stimulated a great deal of research both by whites and Negroes in learning more about the persons for whom these ships have been named.

Hardly any American of his time was more distinguished than the late James Weldon Johnson. He was above all a great man, serving his nation, race, education and learning, greatly.

Whether at Puerto Cabello, in Venezuela, South America and Nicaragua, where he served with distinction in America's diplomatic service, or lobbying in the House of Representatives, as he did in 1922 for the Dyer anti-lynching bill, or teaching literature at Fisk and New York universities, Dr. Johnson always generated light for those in search of it.

His once stirring inquiry was never more apropos than now: "We (Negroes) can be sinews in your wings or chains about your feet . . . . how will you have us, America?" The SS J. W Johnson is a potent, even if partial answer. We applaud wholeheartedly all who have encouraged this trend.

DEC 19 1943

478

Miller's Death Brings Navy Policy Into Focus

DEC 22 1943

Little Change In Attitude Toward Negroes

Messman Hero Gave His L[illegible] A [illegible]man

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia
DEC 22 1943

By ERNEST E. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON, D. C. — (ANP) Dorie Miller is missing in action!

This terse announcement by the navy department last week that the messman who at Pearl Harbor was the first of his race to distinguish himself, served but to focus more concern among Negroes upon the contention that the navy department's policies of discrimination have not altered much since that infamous day, and even before for that matter.

478

Dorie Miller distinguished himself while wearing the rating of messman.

He died a messman.

Public clamor had demanded that the department find and identify the man who had been referred to in a lone news dispatch telling of the Pearl Harbor attack, and described only as a Negro messman. Having gone this far, the navy then yielded on the point of recognition, and the 200-pound former fullback from Waco, Tex., was awarded the Navy cross by President Roosevelt.

READ CITATION

When Adm. Chester W. Nimitz, commander-in-chief of the Pacific fleet, pinned the medal upon Miller's chest, he read this citation:

"While at the side of his captain on the bridge, Miller, despite enemy strafing and bombing and in the face of a serious fire, assisted in moving his captain, who had been mortally wounded, to a place of greater safety, and later manned and operated a machine gun directed at enemy Japanese attacking aircraft until ordered to leave the bridge."

DEC 22 1943

The navy did a little more. Miller was advanced from mess attendant third class to mess attendant first class. There the matter stopped.

A casual appraisal of the navy department's policies with regard to Negroes will still show that to all intents and purposes, it does not intend to accord to them a chance to fight according to their abilities.

BEING TRAINED

Seamen are being trained and according to the best knowledge are going to shore establishments at a time when the department has a manpower commission at work seeking ways and means of streamlining the shore organizations.

Few harbor craft are being manned with Negroes.

In spite of the one Negro who has seemingly defied navy dictum, commissions are closed.

DEC 22 1943

The department is obdurate in refusing Negro women to enlist in the WAVES, SPARS and women marines.

478

And these elements in the coast guard and the marine corps, under navy jurisdiction, who would improve the lot of Negro enlisted personnel are throttled.

More than one source has pointed to Rear Adm. Randall Jacobs, chief of naval personnel, as the main obstructionist in the department.

PROGRAM ACCELERATED

The navy is now accepting Negroes at the rate of about 15 percent of all calls, which is an acceleration of the earlier program of inductions, This is no doubt but that this trend will continue through 1944. Question being pressed then is to what use is this manpower going to be put after it has been trained.

DEC 22 1943

Speaking of the manner in which he acted in handling the machine gun, Dorie Miller said simply: "It wasn't hard. I just pulled the trigger and she worked fine. I had watched the others with these guns.

Would not training as a gunner have given Miller the desired accuracy which would have permitted him to bring down some of these planes which, he said, 'were diving pretty close to me?"

8,500 Negroes Now In Five Branches Of Marine Corps

Defender Chicago, Ill
NOV 13 1943

WASHINGTON — When the 168th anniversary of the U. S. Marine Corps is observed on November 10, tribute will be paid for the second time to Negro recruits in this branch of service.

478

Although the Marine Corps only began active training of Negro Marines on September 1, 1942, more than 8,500 of these recruits are now enrolled in the service. The first group of 1,200 Negro volunteers began training at Camp LeJeune, New River, N. C., and six months later on March 1, the first Negro Marines were on active duty in the Far Pacific.

Although Negroes were first admitted only 14 months ago, they are serving in five of the seven branches of the service.

Most of the Negro Marines, however, are on either line duty or in the mess service. Line duty is subdivided into specific elements, such as infantry, artillery, anti-aircraft, air ground units, tank units, engineering, chemical warfare and the new Paramarines.

NOV 13 1943

WAR TIME LIVING

unsatisfa

SHIPS Named-after-Negro ships, Booker T. Washington, George W. Carver, Fred Douglass, John Merrick, Robert Vann, Leonard Harmon, will be joined soon by James Weldon Johnson.

Defender
Chicago, Ill.
DEC 18 1943

First Navy Shore Patrolmen To Duty

Kansas City Call
Kansas City, Mo.

GREAT LAKES, Ill. — Graduation exercises for the first class to complete instruction in the Navy's Service School for Negro Shore Patrolmen were held recently at the U. S. Naval Training station here.

Shore Patrolmen Graduated

The 45 members of the class will leave the training station within the next few days to take over posts throughout the country where they are most needed, where their special abilities can be best suited.

Seventeen will go on duty in the Ninth Naval district, 10 in the Fourth district, 7 in the Fifth district, 2 in the 12th district, and 9 on the USS Reina Mercedes, receiving ship at the United States Naval Academy.

Behind them they leave 150 SP's hard at work in various stages of an eight-week course that includes Naval Law and customs, uniform regulations, boxing, judo, wrestling, drilling, small arms and first aid. Additional classes of 50 men will be enrolled every two weeks, until, eventually, every city in the country housing naval establishments or entertaining large numbers of sailors on liberty will have its own permanent shore patrol.

Captain Harris Address

Principal speaker at the graduation exercises was Capt. H. R. Harris, Service School officer who told the new SP's, "You men will have a great deal to do with the formation of public opinion of the navy.

"The people on the home front don't see our navy at sea," he said. "All they know is what they see on the streets or in the theaters and cafes of their cities or towns. The public bases its opinion of the navy on how sailors act ashore.

"It will be up to you men to see that this opinion is a good one. You don't have to be tough and hard-boiled, but be firm and military. Make certain that the sailor ashore lives up to the navy's good name."

Following Captain Harris' address, Lt. Abraham Zitenfield presented an honor man certificate to Morris C. Macer, 19, of 317 S. Polk Ave., Mason City, Iowa, who was selected as the outstanding member of the class. All the graduates were advanced in rating from seaman, second class, to seaman, first class.

Eight Negro Bluejackets who completed a 16-week course in the Service School for radiomen also were graduated. Honor man of the radio class was William D. Williams, 20, of 5046 Just St., N. E., Washington, D. C. He was advanced from seaman, second class. His classmates were advanced to the rating of seaman, first class.

REVEAL RUSE TO BALK NEGRO WOMEN IN WAVEs

Chicago, Illinois Chicago Bee

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—Using every possible means to discourage six Negro women who were determined to join the WAVEs, the Navy finally closed its office last Friday afternoon because "of the heat."

The heat-wave was not occasioned by atmospheric temperature or humidity, but by the appearance of six well-groomed Negro women who sought to apply and become WAVEs.

The first to enter recruiting office were Hazel Lee of Cleveland, graduate of the New York Secretarial school, and of the Howard School of Dentistry as a hygienist, and Althea Jefferson of Washington, Pa., a stenographer and [illegible] student.

As they left Zelma Hammond of San Francisco and Bernice Jacobs of Los Angeles entered the office. Miss Hammond is a graduate of San Francisco State college, with majors in biology and economics. Miss Jacobs received her degree from the University of California, with majors in American history. She has taught school in Texas for two years, and has done work toward her master's degree.

As they were giving their names to a yeoman, an unidentified officer entered the office and told them they were closing because of the terriffic heat.

About a half an hour after this incident, two more young women happened by the recruiting office. They, too, felt the urge to join, but were greeted with "the office is closed." A short time later, they again passed, and found it open. Again they entered. This time they were told that "a little breeze" came along and so the office was opened again for a few minutes. These young women were Cleomine B. Lewis of Tulsa, Okla., and Cora E. Wright, Lancaster, S.C. Both are college graduates.

As they approached the desk the recruiting officer immediately busied himself at the telephone, although he had said nothing into it for five minutes when a superior officer called for him. When he returned, the girls explained, he was cordial and appeared to want to be helpful. He gave them application, paraphernalia and literature, and told them to fill them out at home. The girls were told that it was not permissable to fill applications in the office after five o'clock, when they expressed the desire to fill them there.

The Navy department has given no explanation, official or otherwise. It has refused to say that the incident reflects the status of its consideration of plans to accept Negro women into the WAVEs.

an election to d

Navy Getting 90% Of Negro Draftees

Defender
Chicago, Ill

By HARRY McALPIN
(Defender Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON.—Some 90 per cent of all future Negro draftees will be inducted into the Navy, the Defender learned this week.

Ordered to bring its quota up to ten per cent of its total manpower, the Navy is taking virtually all Negro selectees but still has no program for sea service for any colored sailors.

Some 70,000 Negroes are now in training in the Navy.

Despite the total failure to plan for integration of colored sailors, Secretary of Navy Frank Knox has been boasting approval of his discriminatory policy by Negro groups.

Correspondence over the signature of Secretary Knox has been uncovered by the Defender in which the secretary last spring claimed his Navy policy of discrimination had the approval of Negro organizations and the Negro press.

Tells Limitations

The letters, written to Algernon Black, co-chairman of the City Wide Citizens' Committee on Harlem in New York City, set forth the limitations on the service of Negroes in the Navy, and said no Negro WAVES were accepted because the Congressional law says WAVES "shall be composed of women trained and qualified for duty in the shore establishment of the Navy to release made officers and enlisted men of the Naval Service for duty at sea.

"At this time," declared the Secretary, "the Navy does not have any substantial body of Negro men available or qualified for general service at sea. There is no occasion to replace Negro enlisted personnel by Negro women enlisted in the Women's Reserve."

He did not indicate where in the law there was any statement that only white women could relieve white sailors and officers for service at sea, or where it said that Negro women must relieve only Negro men for such service.

Defends Policy

Knox denied his policy is discriminatory. "This program," he declared, "is necessarily experimental, but it is not discriminatory and it has received the approval of Negro organizations and the Negro press generally."

In another letter to Mr. Black, he said, "In my opinion, it is false and not in the best interests of the Negro race for leaders to charge that the policies of the Navy in this emergency are not consistent with democratic principles and that they do not represent the view of the American people. The Negro people in this country, in their steady gain in recognition and assumption of more and more responsibility, have been widely praised in the present emergency, and justly so, by their fellow citizens of all races.

"The changes which the Navy has effected in recognition of the Negro's steady progress have been wholly consistent with democratic principles. That all theoretically possible steps are not taken at once cannot reasonably be condemned as undemocratic. The American people of all races will be quick to notice unfair criticism."

Leaders Comment

These letters, the Defender learned, were shown to a number of leaders in New York. Channing Tobias of the National YMCA described them as "a classic illustration of subterfuge and evasion." Lester Granger said "the masses of American citizens are far ahead of our military and naval leadership in their attitudes regarding the place of Negroes in this war."

A. Philip Randolph declared: "His (Knox's) statement that this program of accepting Negroes in the Navy in positions other than messmen as being experimental is a disgrace to the Navy. . . It is untrue that the Negro press or organizations approved the program.

Ludlow W. Werner expressed himself: "When there is so much talk of democracy, it is ironic that the Secretary of the Navy should see fit to make such a damnable statement of policy."

In his press conference Friday, Knox declared Negro seamen are manning "a majority of some harbor craft," but just how extensive their use is outside of shore establishments the secretary of the navy would not say.

In the course of his regular press conference he took occasion to deny that the expanded program of Negro recruiting, announced more than a year ago, was ever experimental.

Questions put to the secretary sought to determine just how Negro seamen [illegible] in view of the stepped-up program of inductions. The effort was not entirely successful. "They are being distributed to various training stations wherever they fit in, and are being sent to ships," Knox declared.

He was asked whether any of the harbor craft to which he has previously referred are now being manned by Negroes. "I don't know," he said, "that is, not exclusively. But a majority of some craft are."

Capt. Lovett, chief, bureau of public relations, interrupted there to help the secretary's thinking.

DEC 3 1943
AUG 22 1943
DEC 18 1943
47

47j-1943

NAVY 'FIRES' 15 PETTY OFFICERS: MEN APPEAL

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa

OCT 30 1943

Seabees Discharged From Service for Protesting Segregation Signs at Overseas Base—NAACP to Carry Case for R[illegible] to Washington

NEW YORK—Fifteen former U.S. Navy Petty Officer Seabees Monday sought the aid of the NAACP here to secure their reinstatement in the Navy with full ratings. The young men, most of whom are college graduates, were recently tossed out of the Navy variously discharged for "unfitness," "undesirability" and "ineptitude."

At a conference with Thurgood Marshall, counsel for the NAACP, they told a long and lurid tale of indignities, segregation and discrimination suffered during their naval service and insisted that "We were let out because we lawfully complained to our battalion commander at his request concerning the despicable conditions under which we were being forced to serve our country."

JUST RETURNED TO UNITED STATES

"We were wrongfully discharged from the service for which we all volunteered in the hour of our country's need," a spokesman declared.

The men have just returned to the United States from Island "X."

Marshall told The Courier:

"This is one of the most disgraceful cases I have ever dealt with. We will take this case direct to the Navy department with a request that a complete and impartial investigation be immediately made.

The incidents which led up to the Seabees discharge follow:

COMPLAINED ABOUT SEGREGATION SIGNS

"On October 3, they called in 12 of us for a round table 'off the record' conference to discuss our plight and conditions of service. Four company officers were present. We were told it was their purpose to try to iron out the tension which existed between our white shipmates and ourselves. Each of us was told to speak his piece.

"We complained about the segregation signs which directed our every step in the base. We pointed to whites without our qualifications and service who were promoted to first class ratings over our head while we were forbidden promotions above petty officer 2nd class. We mentioned the separate Liberty buses and the generally indifferent treatment we received. We told them about the Negro Master at Arms not being permitted to place white sailors on report, having to refer them to the white Master at Arms. We told of repeated instances where Negroes were more severely punished for minor infractions of regulations.

"At the conclusion of this meeting it was decided to form an interracial committee, headed by the chaplain, to bring about better relationships between white and colored personnel.

CHARGED WITH MUTINY

"The next day we were brought before the regimental commander, who told us that our previous meeting was in effect a form of mutiny, and said a court martial might order us shot, or convicted to 15 to 20 years imprisonment. He also accused us of forming a secret organization, which we all denied.

"Some days later we were called to headquarters to sign discharge recommendations. We were given a form on which to make a statement, but were told to sign the discharge papers immediately."

The boys seeking to serve their country again are: Orea Meeks, CM 2C, 1064 Kansas avenue, S. E., Huron, S. D.; Joseph B. Hammond, EM 2C, 1326 Cherokee road, Louisville, Ky.; Thirkield Montgomery, OS 1C, 1814 Benning road, N. E., Washington, D. C.; [illegible]ward Woods, S 2C, 3631 H[illegible] street, Detroit, Mich.; Art[illegible] Monroe, Segoins, CC CM 2[illegible]7 Woodland avenue, Toledo, Ohio; Robert L. Mims, COV, [illegible] West 118th street, New York City; J. L. Donaldson, 1123 E. Adams street, Springfield, Ill.; Henry Thomas Christian, CK 2C, 764 Pine Haven, Daytona Beach, Fla.; James S. Thompson, CM 2C, 400 Second South street, Morristown, Tenn.; Wesley A. Logan, MS 2C, 1723 Market avenue, E. St. Louis, Ill.; Theodore W. Lange S 1C, 844 35th street, Oakland Calif.; Clifford F. Smith, EM 2C 1608 Luzon street, Houston, Texas; Paul L. Belcher, MM 2C, 2371 E. 93rd street, Cleveland, Ohio; W. C. Belcher, Cox, 2177 E. 43rd street, Cleveland, Ohio.

Ensign Assigned To Patrol Duty

JUL 10 1943 Courier

Pittsburgh, Pa.

Detroiter Graduates from New London Academy with Commission — History Of West Point and Annapolis Reviewed

By PAUL D. DAVIS
(Howard University Law Student)

NEW LONDON, Conn., July 8—Ensign Joseph C. Jenkins, of Detroit, Mich., first Negro to receive an active commission in the Coast Guard or the Navy, following the Navy's new policy in regards to Negroes, was graduated from the United States Coast Guard academy here two months ago. The academy is an accredited educational institution, authorized to award bachelor of science degrees and is maintained for the professional training of men who are candidates for commissions in the service.

Commissioned as ensign in the Coast Guard with the same rank and rate of pay as ensigns in the Navy, Jenkins is attached to the Coast Guard Shore Patrol of the First Naval district, with headquarters in Boston. Under him is a mixed personnel of white and colored enlisted men.

UNSUNG BRANCH OF SERVICE

By executive order, the Coast Guard is under the Navy for the duration of the emergency. Its history dates back to the commissioning of 10 cutters authorized by the first United States Congress in 1790 for the purpose of securing collection of the revenue. Since that time it has performed valiant duty for the nation, although it has been one of the most unsung branches of the service.

Today the Coast Guard performs many vital services. It maintains all Federal aids to navigation, charts and warns mariners of icebergs and derelicts, destroying these hazards whenever possible. It guards the shores against smuggling and under-cover entrance. It was the Coast Guard that initiated the capture of four of the eight Nazi saboteurs seeking admission to the country by way of deserted beaches.

On the high seas the Coast Guard patrols the sea lanes for submarines; convoy merchant shipping and huge troop ships, and in addition to supplies crews for transports.

DETAILED KNOWLEDGE

In the operation of the abovementioned service, Coast Guard officers, like Ensign Jenkins, must be trained seamen and navigators capable of carrying out their duties at sea, under the most severe conditions, and in addition must have had a detailed knowledge of marine engineering, naval architecture, hydrography, meterology, gunnery, radio and maritime law.

Ensign Jenkins, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Jenkins, of Detroit, Mich., graduated from the Eastern High school in Detroit and attended the University of Ann Arbor, obtaining the bachelor of science degree in civil engineering in 1937. Prior to entering the service he was employed as highway design engineer by the Michigan State Highway department. He volunteered for the Coast Guard on June 15, 1942, when it was evident that the Navy and Coast Guard were changing their policy. He was inducted as a chief specialist and attached to the Detroit Coast Guard recruiting office. After six months he was transferred to the officer training course here in New London.

HAS COMMANDED VESSELS

After taking a four months' course in engineering he was commissioned with two-thirds of the members of his original class in April; one-third had failed to pass the course.

Because this is a very limited branch of the service, Jenkins as an ensign is qualified and has commanded a vessel. On all of the smaller vessels of the Coast Guard an ensign is in command and on the larger vessels, the cutters and tenders, an ensign is usually the executive officer and in battle often becomes the commanding officer.

POLICY DIFFERENT

The policy of the United States Navy has been different from that of the Army and Coast Guard. Although Bernard Whitfield Robinson, of Boston, and class of 1941, Boston college, and now in his third year at the Harvard Medical school, holds a commission as a Navy ensign on inactive status pending graduation from the Harvard Medical school in 1944, no one has been on active duty as a Naval officer. Further, all Naval ensign reserve medical students are to revert to apprentice seamen next term until the completion of their medical work, the same as all Army medical school reserve officers are reverting to basic privates for the same period.

Differing from West Point, the Naval Academy at Annapolis has never graduated a Negro from its courses. Five Negroes have attended Annapolis. John Henry Conyers, of South Carolina, was the first and attended from September 21, 1872, to November 11, 1873, when he resigned because of scholastic deficiency. Alonzo C. McClellan, South Carolina, was admitted on September 27, 1874. Henry E. Baker, Jr., of Mississippi, was admitted on September 27, 1874, and dismissed on November 4, 1875.

ASKED TO RESIGN

Nominated by Congressman Arthur W. Mitchell, of Illinois, James L. Johnson, of Washington, D. C., and former student at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, entered the Academy in June, 1935, and was asked to resign with another large group that was deficient. On March 10, 1937, Congressman Mitchell nominated two other men to the school: James J. Minor and George J. Trivers, of Washington, D. C. Minor did not pass the entrance examination and Trivers resigned after eight days due to ill health.

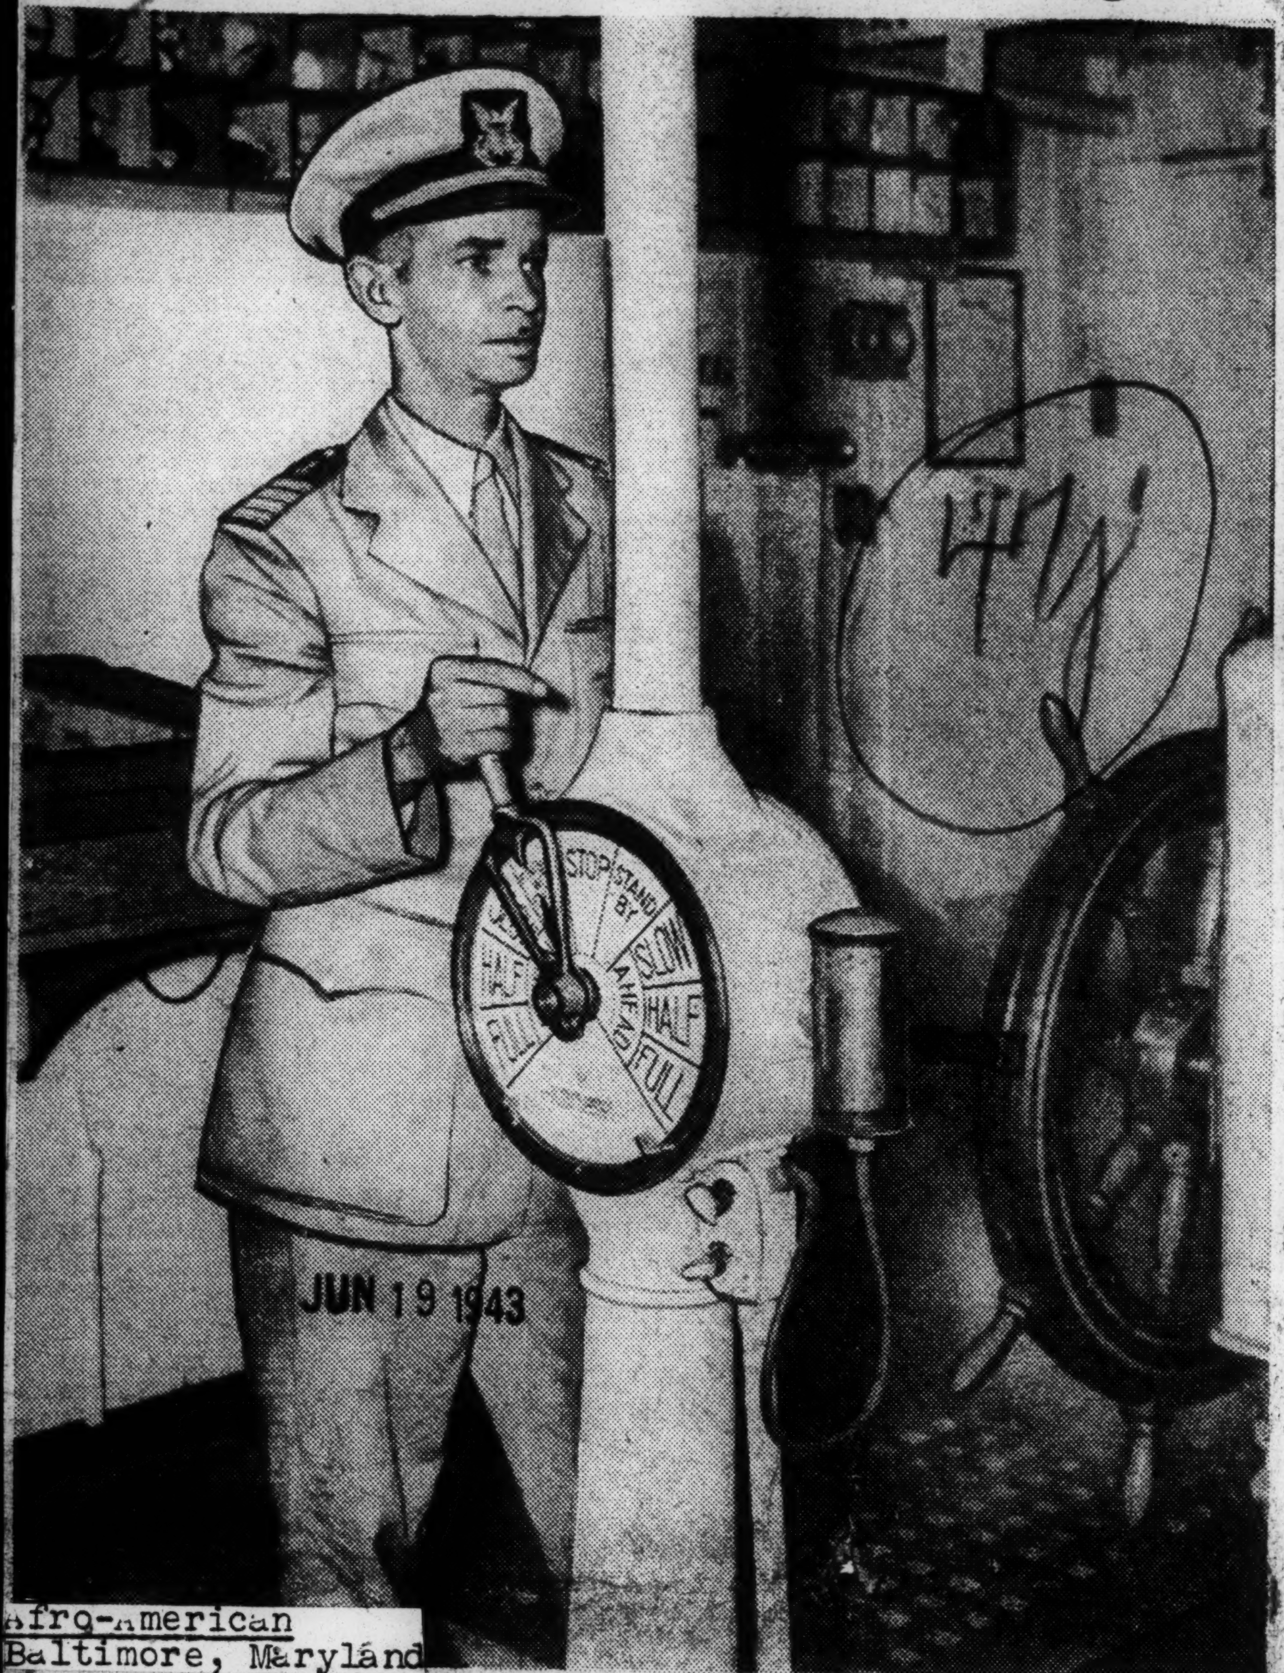
U. S. MILITARY ACADEMY

At the West Point Military Academy, 24 colored students have been admitted and seven graduated since its founding in 1802. Those who have graduated are: Henry O. Flipper, Georgia, class of 1877, who died May, 1940; John H. Alexander, of Ohio, class of 1883, who died in 1894; Charles Young, class of 1889, who became a high ranking colonel in the United States Army; retired in June, 1917, for disability contracted in the line of duty and died January 8, 1922; Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., of Washington, D. C., graduated June 12, 1936, and is now a lieutenant colonel commanding the 99th Pursuit Squadron in North Africa. His father is Brigadier General B. O. Davis, Sr.

James D. Fowler, Washington, D. C., finished June 12, 1941, and is now a first lieutenant and the commanding officer of the Anti-Tank Company of the 366th Infantry at Fort Devens, Mass. In January, 1943, two officers graduated from West Point at the same time: Clarence M. Davenport, of Detroit, Mich., who went to the Coast Artillery (Anti-Aircraft) at Camp Davis, N. C.; and Robert Bernard Tresville II., of Fort Benning, Ga., who was the first to graduate as an officer in the Army Air Force and is now stationed at Selfridge Field, Mich. His father, Chief Warrant Officer Robert B. Tresville, recently returned from over a year in the Pacific war zone, is the leader of the 435th Army Air Force band, at Fort MacDill, Fla.

There are four cadets now at West Point: H. M. Francis, of Washington, D. C.; Mark E. Rivers, Flushing, L. I.; Ernest Davis, Jr., Washington, D. C., and Andrew H. McCoy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew McCoy, Sr., of Pittsburgh, Pa., who last week became the twenty-fourth cadet to enter the academy. A graduate of the University of Pittsburgh and member of the ROTC at that institution, McCoy is the first cadet to be appointed by a Pennsylvania Senator.

Skipper at the Wheel of S.S. Frederick Douglass



477

JUN 19 1943

Afro-American
Baltimore, Maryland

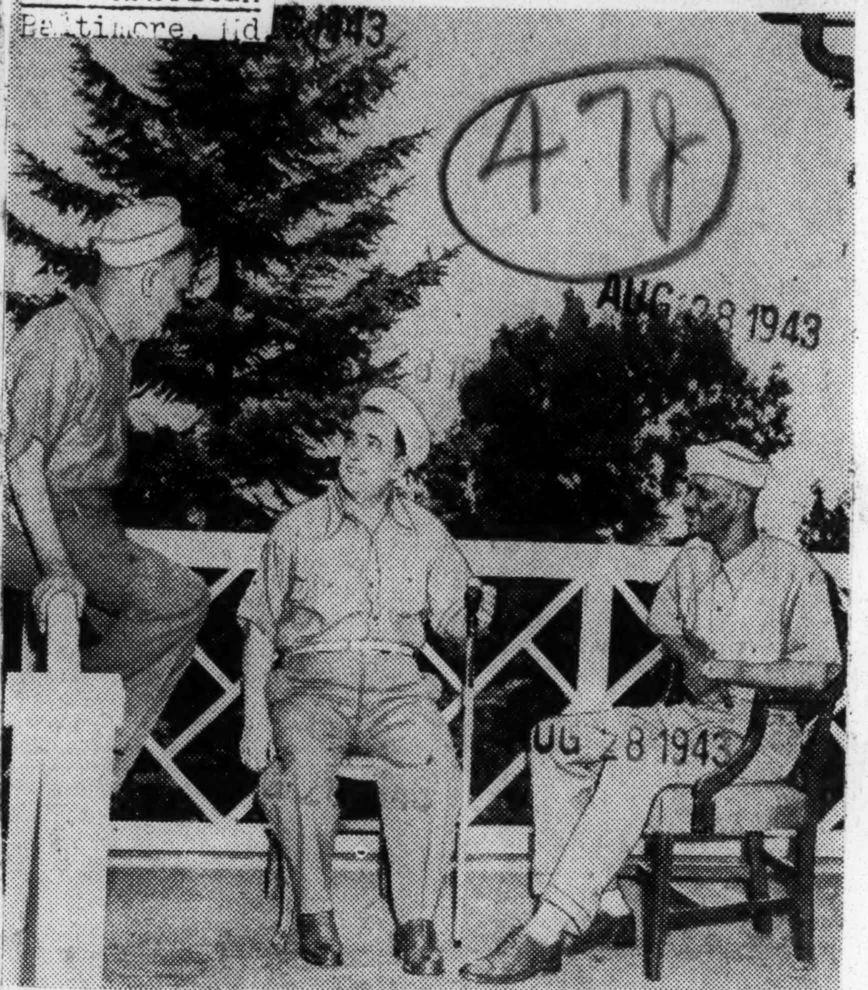
Captain Adrian Richardson, skipper of the newly-launched 10,500-ton Liberty ship, S.S. Frederick Douglass, is shown, above, at the controls of his ship. The new skipper, who has held a master's license since 1916, is the second of his race to command one of the current Liberty ships. Captain Hugh Mulzac chief of the S.S. Booker T. Washington, is the first. Captain Richardson, whose home is in New York City, is a native of Phillipsburg, St. Martin, Dutch West Indies, and made his first trip to sea when he was nine years old. Since then he has traveled to every port in the world. He was captain of an army transport during World War I. The Douglass, as well as other ships that have been under his command, carries a mixed crew.—(Other photos on page 11).

JUN 19 1943

JUN 19 1943

They Sailed, Now Live Together

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md. 1943



478

AUG 28 1943

AUG 28 1943

American merchant seamen, regardless of race or color (above) occupy the former home of Kermit Roosevelt at Oyster Bay, Long Island, as a rest center for rehabilitation. The home is operated by the United Seamen's Service, a member of the National War Fund, which is seeking funds for war-related agencies in co-operation with united community campaigns.

OUR DEMOCRATIC NAVY

Pittsburgh Pa. Courier

PAGE TWO THE MAS

THE MASTHEAD ⚓ ⚓ ⚓ ⚓ ⚓ ⚓

Official Treasure Island publication distributed every Saturday without cost to the officers, enlisted men and employees of Treasure Island. All communications and contributions should be directed to The Editor, Welfare and Recreation Department, Treasure Island, San Francisco, California. Phone: EXbrook 3931, Extension 267.

REAR ADMIRAL HUGO W. OSTERHAUS, USN (Ret.)
Commander Training and Personnel Activities Twelfth Naval District

LIEUT. C. W. EASTERBROOK, USNR
Welfare and Recreation Officer

ENSIGN L. W. LANE, Jr., USNR
Public Relations Officer

COY C. PALMER, CSp., USNR
Editor

E. W. CARLSON, CPrtr. USN
Station Printer

TREASURE ISLAND, S. F., CALIF., JULY 17, 1943

EDITORIAL . . . .

The new Treasure Island Ch [illegible] dedicated Sun- morning July 18th at the ten-th [illegible]

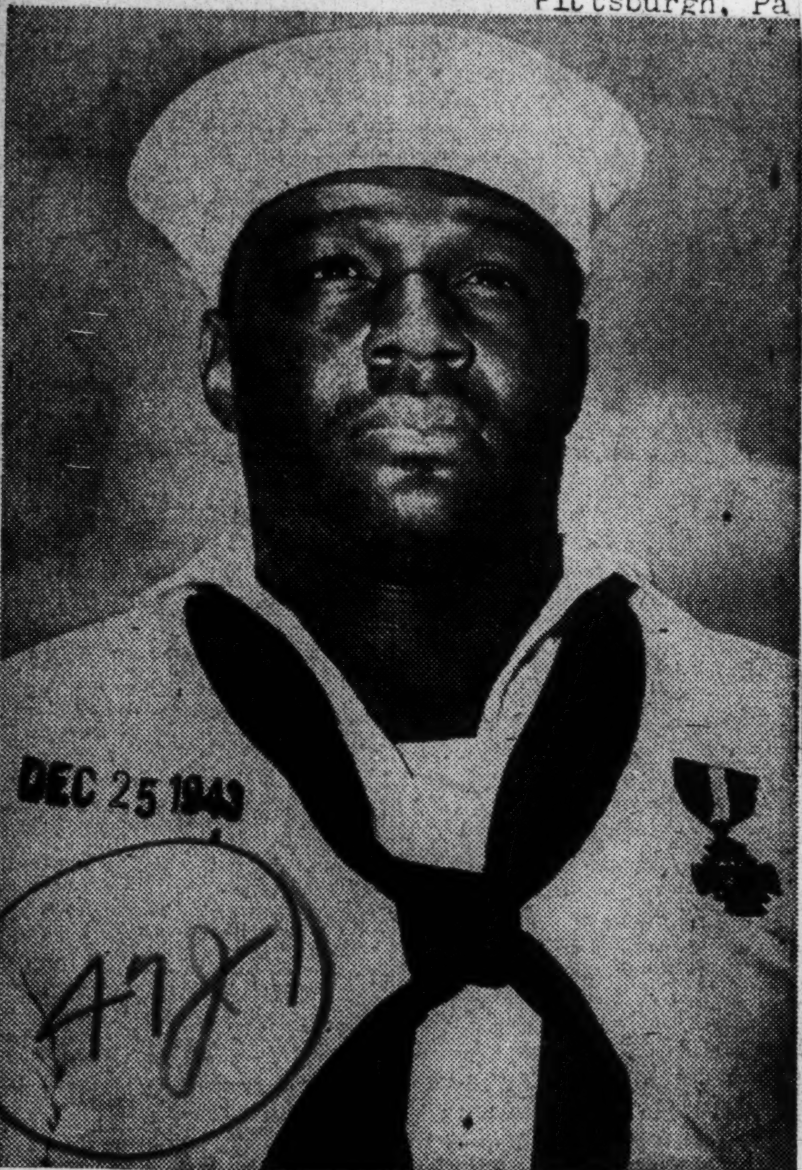
"Niggah, if you don't. scatter yo'self away from here, I'se gwine knock you so cold a glass of ice water will scald you."

The Navy not only sponsors the vilest forms of racial discrimination but it is also guilty of spreading racial antagonism through the columns of its publications. Here is a reproduction from "The Masthead," an official Navy newspaper, published at the Treasure Island, Cal., Naval Base, that is definitely unfavorable to the Negroes. The Courier has lodged a protest with the Secretary of Navy over this publication.

47j-1943

HERO MISSING IN PACIFIC

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa



DEC 25 1943

47j

Dorie Miller, first Negro in the U.S. Navy to win acclaim for his heroic deeds in this war, is "missing in action" in the Southwest Pacific, the Navy Department declared this week. A former football star on the Moore high school team in Waco, Texas, Mess Attendant First Class Miller was awarded the Navy Cross as a result of extraordinary courage during the attack on Pearl Harbor by Japanese forces on December 7, 1941.

Dorie Miller! . . . A Courier 'First'

~~DEC 25 1943~~

The shocking news that Dorie Miller of Texas, "Messman Hero" of Pearl Harbor, has been missing in action, recalls once again that The Pittsburgh Courier scored another "first" in flashing to the world the identity of the unnamed mess attendant who became the first Negro hero of World War II.

The Courier revealed Dorie's name four months after Pearl Harbor . . . and the radio and daily press confirmed the "scoop" story. The story of those four months of work on the part of The Courier organization is a symbol of the spirit which refuses to be denied.

The name now universally attached to the youth, DORIE, shows how the country accepted the story. Miller's correct first name is DORIS.

NAVY DEPARTMENT CONFIRMS REPORT

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The Navy Department this week confirmed reports that Dorie Miller, first Negro Bluejacket hero in this war, is "missing in action" in the Southwest Pacific. His next of kin, Mr. and Mrs. Conery Miller, Waco, Tex., have been notified.

Miller, a strapping 200-pound former fullback from Waco's Moore High school, was awarded the Navy Cross by President Roosevelt for "distinguished devotion to duty, extraordinary courage and disregard for his own personal safety during the attack on the Fleet in Pearl Harbor, Territory of Hawaii, by Japanese forces on December 7, 1941."

DEC 25 1943

GETS MEDAL FROM ADMIRAL NIMITZ

At the same time, Miller received a letter of commendation from the Secretary of the Navy, and was advanced in rating from Mess Attendant, Third Class, to Mess Attendant, First Class. In addition, Bluejacket Miller has received the American Defense Service Medal, the Fleet Clasp, and the Asiatic-Pacific Campaign Medal.

Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, Commander-in-Chief of the Pacific Fleet, personally presented the Navy Cross to Miller in ceremonies aboard a United States warship in the Pacific on May 27, 1942. Pinning the bit of ribbon and cross of bronze on the sailor's breast, he described his act of heroism on the U.S.S. Arizona during the Japanese attack on the Pearl Harbor naval base, and complimented Miller on being the first representative of his race to be so honored in this war. He then read the citation, which said:

"While at the side of his captain on the bridge, Miller, despite enemy strafing and bombing, and in the face of a serious fire, assisted in moving his captain, who had been mortally wounded, to a place of greater safety, and later manned and operated a machine gun directed at enemy Japanese attacking aircraft until ordered to leave the bridge."

DEC 25 1943

AIDED WOUNDED IN "SNEAK ATTACK"

Later, in January, 1943, while visiting the U.S. Naval Training Station at Great Lakes, Ill., Bluejacket Miller explained that the Pearl Harbor incident marked his first experience with a machine gun. Addressing hundreds of Negro Bluejackets who are now being taught at Great Lakes to handle such weapons, Miller said:

"It wasn't hard. I just pulled the trigger and she worked fine. I had watched the others with these guns. I guess I fired her for about 15 minutes at those Japanese planes. They were diving pretty close to us."

DEC 25 1943

Official reports reveal that he arose at 6 o'clock on the morning of December 7, and was collecting laundry when the alarm for General Quarters sounded. He headed for his battle station—the anti-aircraft battery magazine amidships—only to discover that torpedo damage already had rendered it untenable. So he went on deck, where—because of his powerful size—he was immediately assigned to the task of carrying wounded to places of greater safety. An officer ordered him to the bridge to aid the mortally wounded captain. Miller helped remove the dying officer and then returned to the machine gun.

DEC 25 1943

47j

Since Pearl Harbor, Miller has been assigned to various other naval vessels. Shortly before he was reported missing in action, he was serving aboard the Aircraft Carrier Liscome Bay, which was sunk by enemy action in the Southwest Pacific on November 24, 1943.

FATE OF DORIE MILLER FOCUSES ATTENTION ON NAVY JIM-CROWISM

DEC 24 1943

Kansas City Call
Kansas City, Mo.

WASHINGTON. — (ANP) — Dorie Miller is missing in action!

This terse announcement by the navy department last week that the messman who at Pearl Harbor was the first of his race to distinguish himself, served but to focus more concern among Negroes upon the contention that the navy department's policies of discrimination have not altered much since that infamous day, and even before for that matter.

Dorie Miller distinguished himself while wearing the rating of messman. He died a messman.

DEC 24 1943

47

Navy Yields to Pressure

Public clamor had demanded that the department find and identify the man who had been referred to in a lone news dispatch telling of the Pearl Harbor attack, and described only as a Negro messman. Having gone this far, the navy then yielded on the point of recognition, and the 200-pound former fullback from Waco, Texas, was awarded the Navy cross by President Roosevelt.

When Adm. Chester W. Nimitz, commander-in-chief of the Pacific fleet, pinned the medal upon Miller's chest, he read this citation:

"While at the side of his captain on the bride, Miller, despite enemy strafing and bombing and in the face of a serious fire, assisted in moving his captain, who had been mortally wounded, to a place of greater safety, and later manned and operated a machine gun directed at enemy Japanese attacking aircraft until ordered to leave the bridge."

DEC 24 1943

A Mess Attendant Still

The navy did a little more. Miller was advanced from mess attendant third class to mess attendant first class. There the navy stopped.

DEC 24 1943

A casual appraisal of the navy department's policies with regard to Negroes will still show that to all intents and purposes, it does not intend to accord to them a chance to fight according to their abilities.

Seamen are being trained and according to the best knowledge are going to shore establishments at a time when the department has a manpower commission at work seeking ways and means of streamlining the shore organizations.

Few harbor craft are being manned with Negroes.

In spite of the one Negro who has seemingly defied navy dictum, commissions are denied.

No Waves Or Spars

DEC 24 1943

The department is obdurate in refusing Negro women to enlist in the WAVES, SPARS and women marines.

DEC 24 1943

And these elements in the coast guard and the marine corps, under navy jurisdiction, who would improve the lot of Negro enlisted personnel are throttled.

More than one source has pointed to Rear Adm. Randall Jacobs, chief of naval personnel, as the main obstructionist in the department.

DEC 24 1943

The navy is now accepting Negroes at the rate of about 15% of all calls, which is an acceleration of the earlier program of inductions. This is no doubt but that this trend will continue through 1944. Question being pressed then is to what use is this manpower going to be put after it has been trained.

Speaking of the manner in which he acted in handling the machine gun, Dorie Miller said simply: "It wasn't hard. I just pulled the trigger and she worked fine. I had watched the others with these guns."

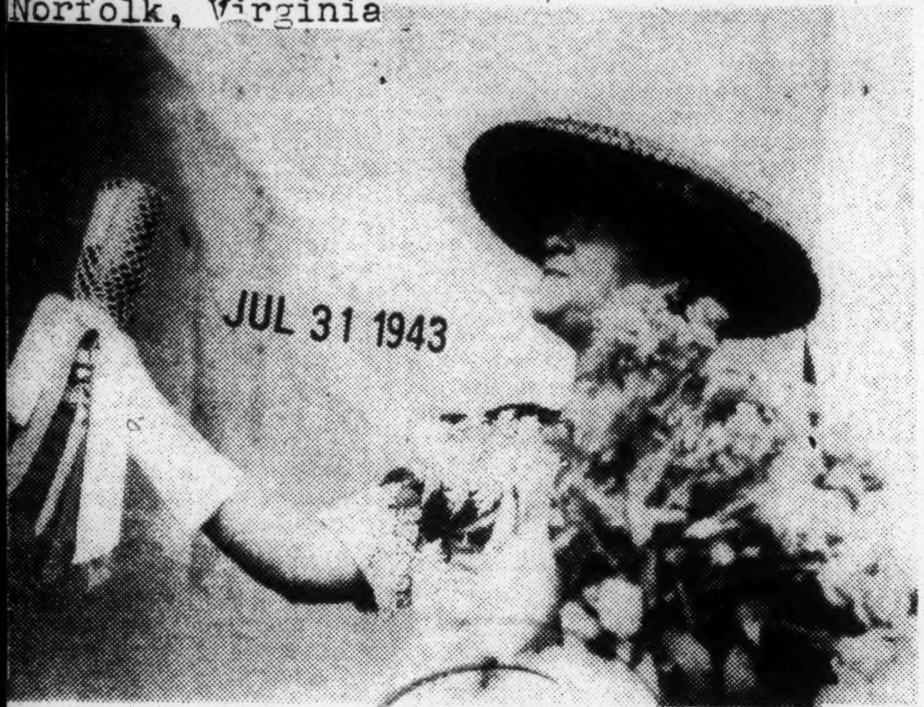
DEC 24 1943

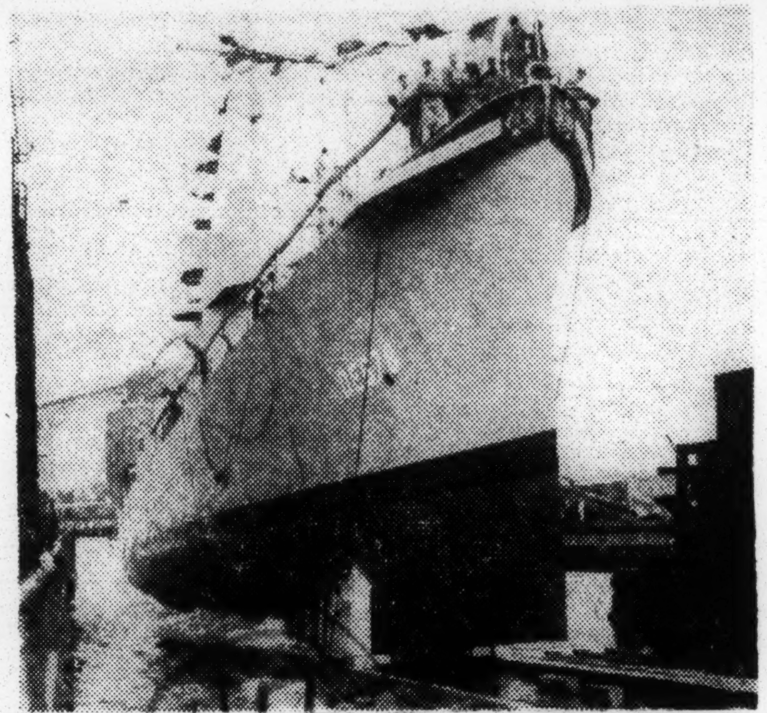
Would not training as a gunner have given Miller the desired accuracy which would have permitted him to bring down some of those planes, which, he said, "were diving pretty close to me?"

Destroyer-Escort Warship Harmon First Named For Negro, Slides Down Ways

Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Virginia

JUL 31 1943



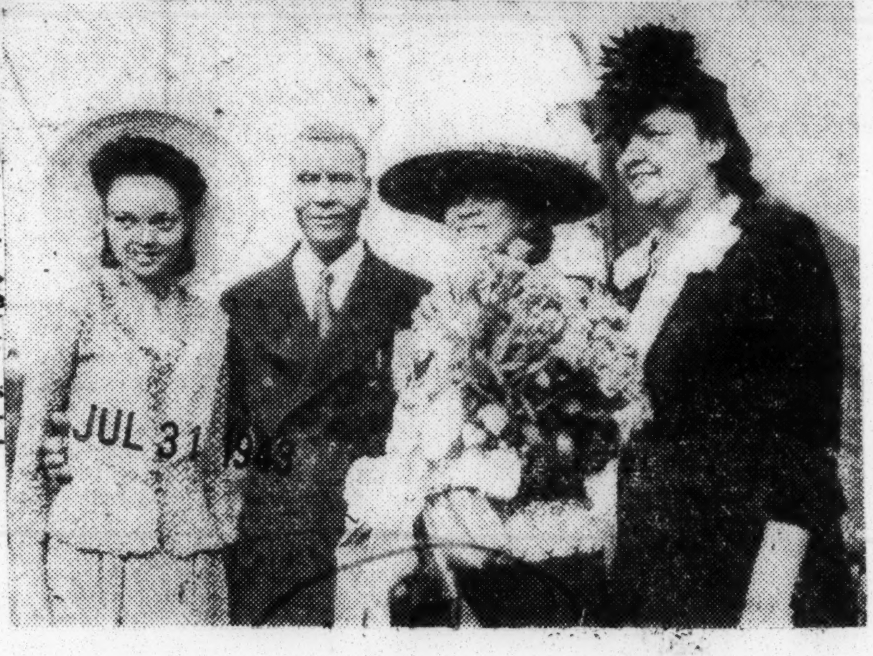


The first warship of the United States Navy bearing the name of a Negro was launched on Sunday in Quincy, Mass. Sponsor of the ship was Mrs. Nuanita Harmon, mother of Leonard Roy Harmon, the first class mess attendant who died aboard the USS San Francisco during a naval battle in the waters off the Solomon Islands—in whose honor the destroyer escort was named "USS Harmon."

No. 1—Mrs. Harmon is caught in the actual launching performance. Her words are: "I Christen Thee—USS Harmon."

No. 2—The trim, fighting craft is shown, sliding down the ways of the Fore River yard of the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Company.

No. 3—Family of the Navy hero include, left to right, Miss Pauline Harmon, a sister; W. B. Carrol, stepfather, Mrs. Harmon Carrol, the mother, and Mrs. Cranston E. Edwards, a second sister.



47k-1943

IOWAN RECEIVING COMMISSION

Bystander
Des Moines, Iowa

Capt. E. B. Lowe, first Negro officer to graduate from Officer Candidate school in the Southwest Pacific area, pins insignia of rank on Second Lt. James B. Morris of Des Moines, Ia., at recent OCS exercises at Camp Columbia, Brisbane, Australia. Lt. Morris, son of Atty. and Mrs. James B. Morris, 955 Seventeenth street, has been in the army over two years.

---

s Commended

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

LT. JAMES A. McLENDON

Recent recipient of an official commendation for his work in connection with the preparation and restatement of Army regulations, whose assignment to the Judge Advocate General's Department on September 9 has been announced by the War Department, Lieutenant McLendon, a graduate of Fisk and Northwestern universities, practiced law in Chicago for several years.

Carlisle Has 7 Graduates

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

CARLISLE BARRACKS, Pa., Sept. 2—The graduation of seven physicians from the Army's Medical Field Service school, Carlisle Barracks, brought to a total of 174 the number of Negro medical, dental and veterinary officers to receive diplomas from this national training center which is the American Army's only military school for training Medical Department officers for field duty.

The seven officers, six of them first lieutenants and one a captain, were part of the 33rd Officers Class graduated Thursday at exercises in Tugo hall, after completing six weeks of rigorous training for duty as medical officers with troops in combat.

All experienced physicians, the seven officers left immediately after graduation for their respective units.

The seven officers are: Capt. Robert S. Wilkinson, 43, New York City; First Lt. Lucius S. Davis, 34, St. Louis, Mo.; First Lt. Neville A. Griffith, [illegible] New York City; First Lt. Clar[illegible] S. Murray, 30, Corona, N. Y.; First Lt. Barnett M. Rhetta, Jr., 27, Baltimore, Md.; First Lt. Alvin V. Thomas, 34, Philadelphia, and First Lt. William T. Yates, 25, Baton Rouge, La.

Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Virginia

ORDNANCE OFFICERS—An unusual team was that of Lt. Charles W. Palmer, 26, left, 511 North Ohio avenue, Atlantic City, N. J., and Lt. Robert F. Zwinak, 24, white, of Cincinnati, Ohio, right, two officers of an ordnance company composed of colored enlisted men.

When this photo was made these officers were on detached service supervising the unloading and storing of ammunition at a port in Sicily.

Single, Lt. Palmer was drafted in August, 1941, and mustered into an ordnance company training at Aberdeen, Md. After training in Mississippi, he returned to officer candidate school at Aberdeen, and was commissioned on September 19, 1942. He came to Africa on the day after Christmas last year and his company began servicing airfields—supplying and delivering ammunition.

A graduate of Atlantic City High School, he attended Westchester State Teachers College, but left for the Army in his sophomore year. For a few days Lts. Palmer and Zwinak bivouaced with the 99th Fighter Squadron and took meals with its officers. (Exclusive photo by Journal and Guide War Correspondent)

Squadron Commander Now In States; Tells of Work Of Flyers in North Africa

Bystander
Des Moines, Iowa

By ERNEST E. JOHNSON

Washington (ANP) — A hero, proudest of the lot, returned home from the war to receive the plaudits of an admiring people, both for himself and for his fighting men.

He is Lt. Col. Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., until recently commander of the famous 99th Pursuit squadron, the first unit of Negro fliers to be trained by the army air forces, and the only one to see action in the fighting in North Africa, Sicily and Italy.

Col. Davis is here to take up a new but undisclosed assignment with the 332nd Fighter group at Selfridge Field, Mich.

Tanned and toughened from exposure to heat, sun and unrelenting enemy, Col. Davis stood beside his equally famous father, Brig. Gen. B. O. Davis, Sr., and told a press conference last Thursday of the war experiences he and the squadron that comprised 27 pilots and 250 enlisted men have had up to his departure from the front.

He had praise for officers who completed their instruction in combat for the comradeship that has been established with white airmen, for the courage and eagerness of his buddies, the fighting ability of the P-40 Warhawks which they piloted, and finally the skill and prowess of British fliers.

Step Dramatic

From the time the squadron left continental United States- on April 15, Col. Davis declared in measured tone, "every step of the way was dramatic." Further, "there has not been a single circumstance or incident which could be regarded as discriminatory by the most rabid race leader." By implication, the experience here at home was not quite so qualified.

The 30-year-old West Pointer was the senior line officer on the transport that carried he and his men across to North Africa although the squadron and their complement of ground crew were only 15% of the total passenger list of 4,000 men.

Everything proceeded smoothly and without incident throughout the eight-day voyage. They landed at Casablanca and were greeted by Col. Allison of the army air force who in turn presented Gen. Campbell. The latter explained to Col. Davis that the 99th would not go into combat until he, Davis, considered that they had been adequately schooled in combat training.

The colonel toll something of the type of "post-graduate" training they were given in several stations in North Africa, and at all of which they met with a friendly reception both by white officers, and enlisted personnel. At one time they were based near the town of Fez, which he described as a "delightful" spot, visited almost nightly for a month, and at no time was there friction with the white soldiers they met. "A considerable bond exists between those who fly," Col. Davis asserted, "regardless of color or race."

"No unit in this war has gone into combat better trained or better equipped than the 99th squadron," the colonel declared. "We were weak in one respect only, and that was the squadron commander and the flight commander. Neither of us had had any combat experience. It is this quality that gives confidence to those who are led that the men in charge of the formation know what they are doing. Frankly, I didn't know."

SEP 16 1943

He judged, however, that this deficiency was adequately counter-balanced by the fact that his pilots ha had an average of 250 hours in the P-40s. There are not a lot of pilots around who can point to such flying time before entering combat.

SEP 16 1943

Went as Wingmen

The fliers went as wingmen over Pantelleria on their first mission, about the first of June, and returned every day until June 7 to dive bomb enemy positions until the island fell. It was during this "show" that six of the squadron had the first real brush with the enemy, while the others merely encountered the flock of anti-aircraft.

47K

About the first of July they began escorting bombers to Sicily, and every day they were attacked by enemy fighter craft, the purpose of the latter apparently being to draw off the escort the better to reach the fortresses.

Soon after this engagement the squadron was visited by Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, commander of all allied forces in the North African Theatre of Operations. Others who visited the unit on various occasions were Air Marshal Cunningham, and Lord Trenchard, both of the Royal Air Force and among the best air tacticians in the world. Gen. Spotts commanding general for the North African Air force, also made calls on the squadron.

SEP 16 1943

July 10 was "D Day" for the Sicilian invasion. The squadron gave cover for mombing attacks, itself dive bombed installations and strafed retreating axis forces that ultimately succeeded in breaking down resistance to the drive. The unit was later based on the southern coast of the island.

Training replacements began to come in about this time, new combat crews, new responsibilities, he said. The new men had to be shown the ropes, and they were. On Sept. 7, Col. Davis was ordered to report for assignment to the 332nd fighter group and so picked up his hat and was homeward bound.

SEP 16 1943

"The men I left behind," he declared, "instead of being the fledglings we were on June 1, are now seasoned veterans of a combat experience of which all of us may well be proud."

Col. Davis' next move will be to Mitchell Field, New York, headquarters for the First Army Air force of which the 332nd fighter group is a part. His stay there will be temporary. He is expected to convey fund of battle experience to the three squadrons that comprise a group. The group has been in training for some time, and there is speculation that Davis will ultimately be their commander with the rank of full colonel.

FORT JACKSON GETS CHAPLAIN

Pittsburgh Pa.

FORT JACKSON, S. C., Sept. 16—(ANP)—For the first time in many months, Negro troops at Fort Jackson will have the services of a chaplain of their own race. Maj. Wiley R. Deal, chief of the Fort Jackson Chaplains' branch, revealed that 1st Lt. Llewellyn T. Thornhill has been assigned to this post for duty with the 274th Quartermaster battalion. A Methodist, Chaplain Thornhill is a native of Charlestotn, W. Va., and held pastorates in that city and in Steubenville, Ohio, Springfield, Ohio, and San Francisco before entering active duty on July

SEP 18 1943

47K

You have a personal stake in the Third War Loan. Every dollar you invest in a bond will return to you in full, with interest.

First Negro Chaplain Named At S. C. Fort

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

SEP 18 1943

FORT JACKSON, S. C.—(ANP)—For the first time in many months, Negro troops at Fort Jackson will have the services of a chaplain of their own race.

Maj. Wiley R. Deal, chief of the Fort Jackson Chaplains branch, revealed that 1st Lt. Llewellyn T. Thornhill has been assigned to this post for duty with the 274th Quartermaster battalion.

47K

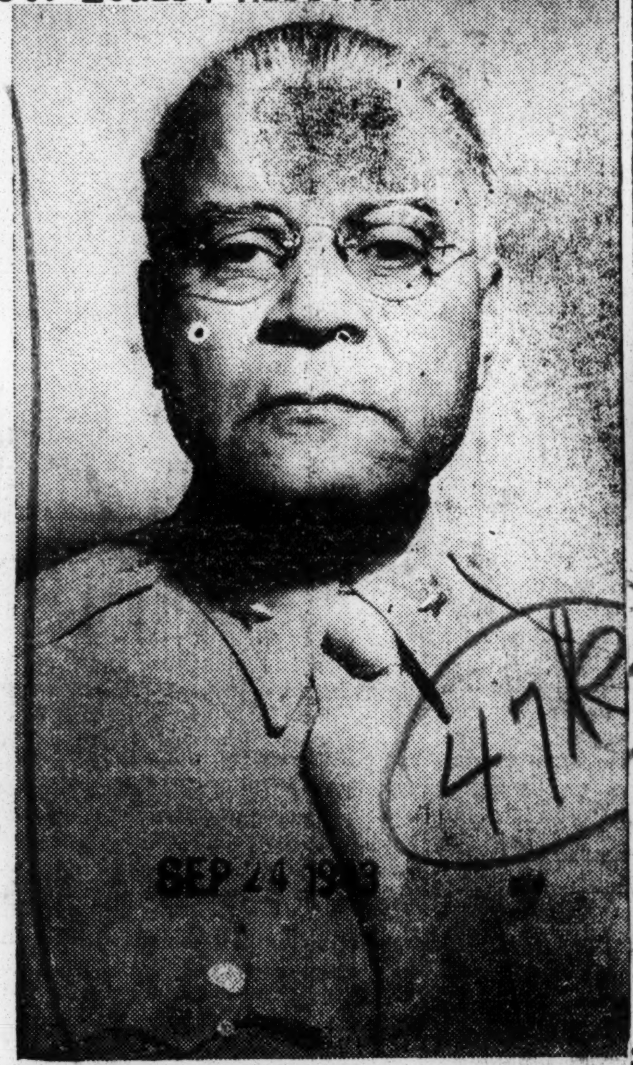
A Methodist, Chaplain Thornhill is a native of Charleston, W. Va., and held pastorates in that city and in Steubenville, O., Springfield, O., and San Francisco before entering active duty on July 30.

Chaplain Thornhill was educated at Wilberforce university and Payne Theological seminary

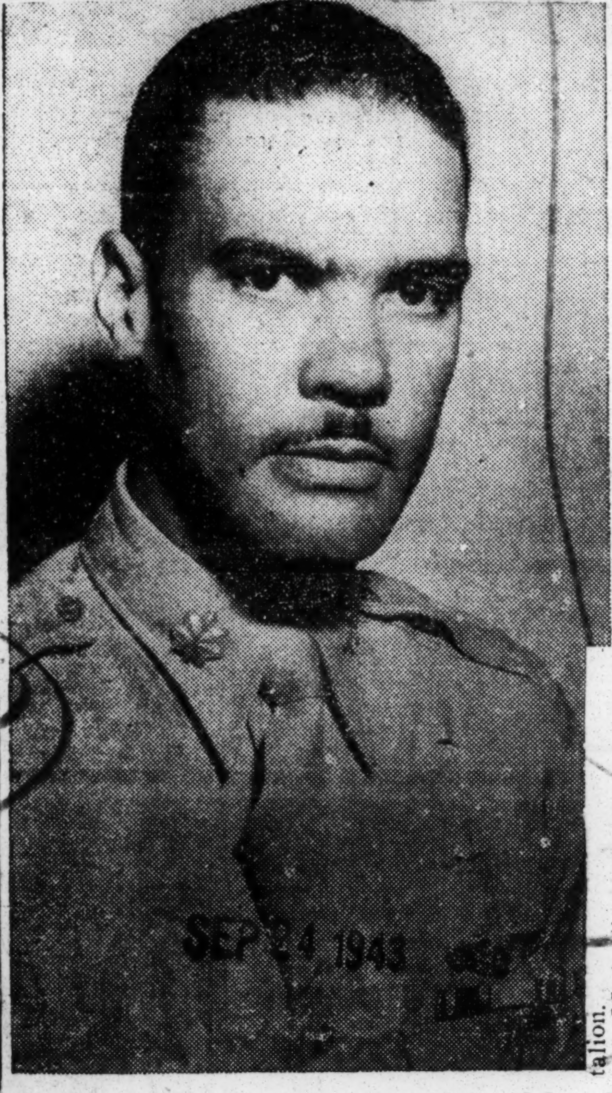
SEP 18 1943

Father And Son Are High Army Officers

Argus
St. Louis, Missouri



SEP 24 1943



SEP 24 1943

47K

One of the most famous family pairs in American military history is that of Brig. Gen. Benjamin O. Davis, and his son, Lt. Col. Davis, Jr. The son recently thrilled the country with a report of the exploits of the 99th Pursuit Air Squadron which he led in the Sicily drive. Lt. Colonel Davis is now in command of 332nd Air group in training at Selfrige field, Mich. Brig. Gen. Davis is the highest ranking army officer of the race.

SEP 24 1943

New Yorker Is Lone Negro Line Officer Of Unit

Courier Pittsburgh

SEP 18 1943

By EDGAR T. ROUZEAU

FROM ALLIED MEDITERRANEAN BASE, Sept. 16—Second Lt Cornelius D. Scott has the distinction of being the lone Negro line officer in a large port battalion outfit. He serves as assistant port operations officer. His home is at 453 West 140th street, New York City.

SEP 18 1943

While visiting Lieutenant Cooper I made the acquaintance of S/Sgt. George W. Winston, Montgomery, Ala.; Sgts. Marion Saunders, Jacksonville, Fla.; John B. Spears, Meridian, Miss., and Maceo Whissendon, Vaughan, Miss.; Cpls. Ben Yearby, Athens, Ga.; John Smith, Mangham, La.; [illegible] Blair, Birmingham, Ala., and Harding Pruett, Tampa, Fla.; Pvts. Rudolph S. Grant, Alexandria, La.; Augusta Wells, Memphis, Tenn., and John Derr, Gastonia, N. C.

SEP 18 1943

47K

Former Howard U Star Is Promoted to Major

SEP 17 1943

TUSKEGEE ARMY AIR FIELD, Ala.—As a result of the recent announcement by the War Department, Captain George W. Webb, provost and fire marshal at the Tuskegee Army Air Field, was promoted to the rank of major.

47K

The Tuskegee provost marshal, who, incidentally, has held the position since the beginning of the flying program at the field, has just completed an intensive course at the Provost Marshal General School, Ft. Custer, Mich. The 38-year-old major is married and the father of three daughters and one son. His family lives at Gettysburg, Pa.

SEP 17 1943

Globe and Independent
Nashville, Tenn.

Negro Troops At Ft. Jackson To Have Chaplain

FORT JACKSON, S. C., Sept. 16—(ANP)—For the first time in many months, Negro troops at Ft. Jackson will have the services of a chaplain of their own race.

SEP 17 1943

Maj. Wiley R. Deal, chief of the Fort Jackson Chaplains branch, revealed that 1st Lt. Llewellyn T. Thornhill has been assigned to this post for duty in the 274th Quartermaster battalion.

A Methodist, Chaplain Thornhill is a native of Charleston, W. Va. and held pastorates in that city and in Steubenville, O.; Springfield, O., and San Francisco before entering active duty on July 30.

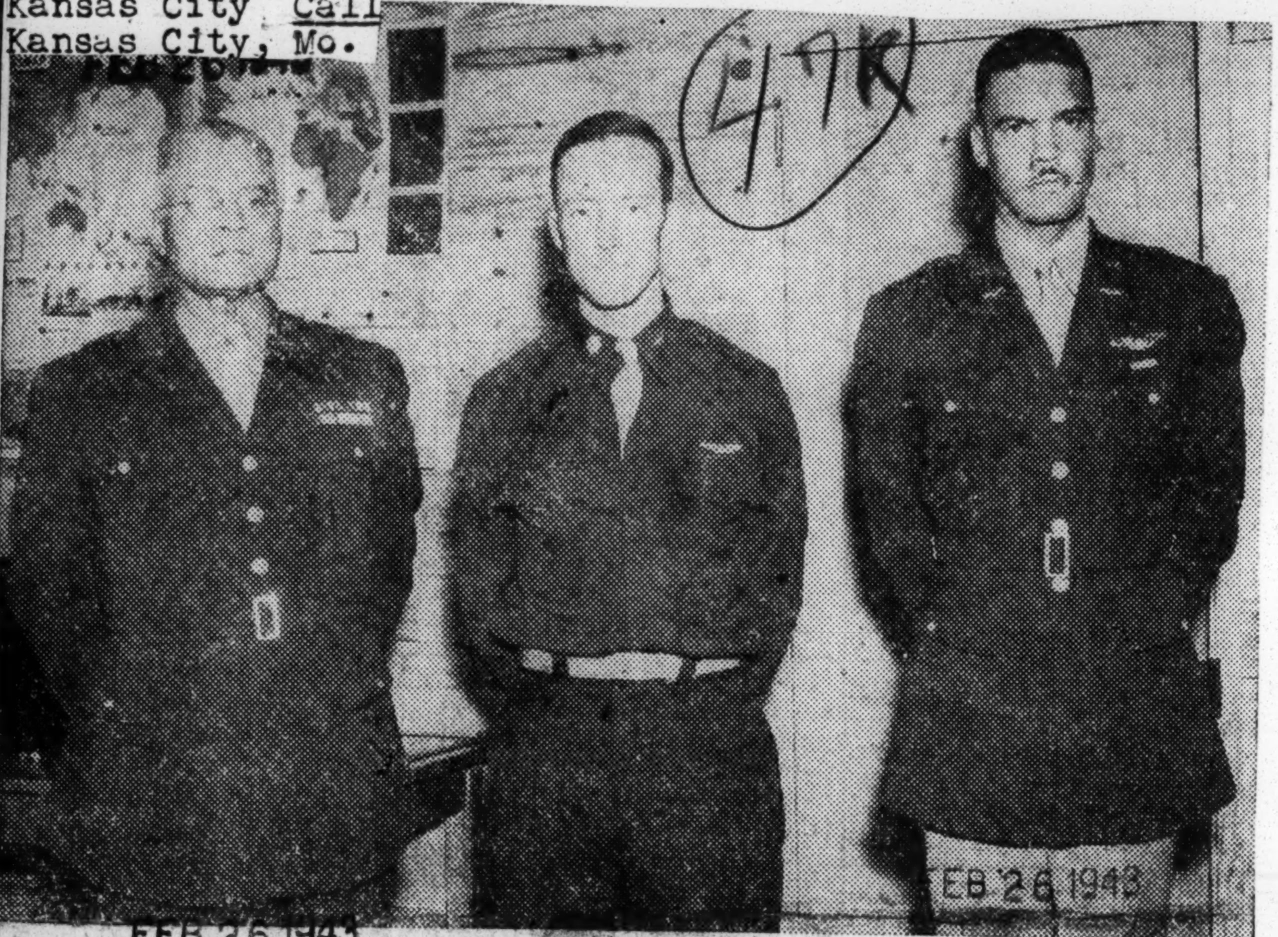
SEP 17 1943

Chaplain Thornhill was educated at Wilberforce University and Payne Theological Seminary.

47K

47k-1943

Kansas City Call
Kansas City, Mo.



FEB 26 1943

FEB 26 1943

GEN. DAVIS INSPECTS ARMY FLYING SCHOOL AND VISITS HIS SON—

When Brig. Gen. Benjamin O. Davis, highest ranking Negro officer in the army, made a tour of inspection of the Tuskegee army flying school recently, his visit had a double meaning as his son, Lt. Col. Benjamin O. Davis Jr. is in command of the 99th pursuit squadron there. The 99th is one of the two squadrons of Negro flyers in training at Tuskegee, the other being the 100th. Pictured left to right, General Davis, Lt. Col. Noel F. Parrish, flying school head, and Lt. Col. Benjamin O. Davis Jr. Lt. Col. Davis is a West Point graduate. His father attained the generalship from the ranks.

Afro-American
Baltimore. Md

Geo. S. Roberts Made Captain in Air Corps

APR 24 1943

TUSKEGEE, Ala.—First Lieut. George S. Roberts, a flight officer at Tuskegee Army Flying School, recently, was promoted to the rank of captain. He received his wings and commission as a second lieutenant in March, 1942. Prior to his enlistment as an aviation cadet in 1941, he was a technician at West Virginia State College, where he had received his B.S. degree in mechanical arts in 1938.

APR 24 1943

Capt. Roberts

Captain Roberts is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Spencer R. Roberts, 317 Quarry Avenue, Fairmont, W.Va. APR 24 1943

Highest Ranking Colored Airman

Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Virginia

MAR 6 1943

Lt. Col. Benjamin O. Davis Jr., holds the highest rank among Negroes in the United States Air Force. The War Department this week announced that a colored air unit will soon be in action on one of the battle fronts.

Afro-American
Baltimore. Md

14 Get Bars at Army School in England

FEB 13 1943

LONDON — Fourteen colored soldiers were among the fifty-seven who received commissions on February 3 as officers of the U.S. Army and won the plaudits of Maj. Gen. Russell P. Hartle, deputy commander of the American Forces in the United Kingdom.

FEB 13 1943

They were the first group of colored men to pass through the U.S. Army Officer Candidate School in this country.

Addressing the colored group, General Hartle said: "You are a credit to that great section of our nation which is making an ever-increasing contribution to the war."

FEB 13 1943

Veteran in Group

Among the men commissioned was William P. Murphy, 45, of Valdosta, Ga., who has been in the army for twenty-five years and was a master sergeant. The others were: FEB 13 1943

Technical Sgt. Samuel L. Coleman, N.Y.C.; Technician 4th Class Richard W. Davis, Washington; 1st Sgt. William A. Dyson, N.Y.C.; 1st Sgt. Lucins Gibson, Americus, Ga.; Technical Sgt. James P. Rux, Bloomsburg, Pa.; Cpl. Richard C. Wells, Washington;

FEB 13 1943

Master Sgt. William H. Cox, Brooklyn, N.Y.; Cpl. William F. Duckery, Phila.; Staff Sgt. Lester W. Gordon, Brooklyn, N.Y.; 1st Sgt. Ernest J. Harris, Neptune, N.J.; 1st Sgt. Carl W. Pope, Columbus, Ohio; Technical Sgt. Robert L. Terrell, Houston, Tex., and Cpl. Kenneth E. Wilson Brooklyn, N.Y. FEB 13 1943

Courier-Journal
Louisville, Ky.

Two Negro Officers Get Army Press Jobs

Washington, Aug. 5 (AP)—Assignment of two Negro officers to the press branch, Bureau of Public Relations, was announcel today by the War Department.

They are Capt. Homer B. Roberts and First Lieut. Daniel E. Day, both of Chicago. Robert has been assistant public relations officer at Fort Huachuca, Ariz., and Day formerly was employed by the Robert S. Abbott Publishing Company, Chicago.

AUG 6 1943

Tribune
Philadelphia. Pa.

Promoted To Captain

MAY 22 1943

MAY 22 1943

Chaplain DOUG[illegible] L. T. ROBINSON, son of Rev. and Mrs. J. G. Robinson, of 235 north Farson street, West Philadelphia, attached to the Tuskegee Army Flying School, has been promoted to Captain.

Why Doesn't Col. Davis Command Flying School

Afro-American
Baltimore. Md.

FEB 20 1943

TUSKEGEE, Ala.— (ANP) — Why is it that Lt. Col. Benjamin Davis, Jr., is not commanding officer of the army air school located here near Tuskegee?

That question is being asked by colored soldiers attached to this base which has recently been receiving considerable unfavorable publicity because of the strict policy of segregation inaugurated by Col. Kimble.

FEB 20 1943

Whites in Top Jobs

These soldiers point out that a squadron consists of 13 to 28 planes, a group from 61 to 121 planes and a wing from 125 to 250 planes. Lt. Col. Davis is in command of only a squadron, the 99th, while Maj. Sam Westbrook, white, has charge of a group and Lt. Col. Noel Parrish, white, of the same rank as Davis, heads the Tuskegee Army Flying school.

"Four years at West Point plus months of training a squadron should be enough to qualify Lt. Col. Davis for the post of commanding officer of the 322d fighter group or post commander of the Tuskegee Army Flying school," these soldiers point out. "Why isn't Davis getting what is due him?"

Capt. Harold D. Martin Heads First All-Colored Army PX at Tuskegee

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md

FEB 13 1943

47K
FEB 13 1943
FEB 13 1943

CAPT. HAROLD D. MARTIN

TUSKEGEE, Ala.—Capt. Harold D. Martin, former CIAA commissioner of football officials and physical education director at Miner Teachers' College, now directs the first all-colored operated Post Exchange in the United States Army.

The Tuskegee Army Flying School Post Exchange, first of its kind, is sure to go down in history as another milestone in the military progress of the colored man.

Captain Martin, as post exchange officer, with seventy-three employees, civilian and army, supplies the thousands on this field with everything in merchandise from soap to officers' uniforms.

Giving dictation to a private secretary and running a $50,000 army business, however, was not the foremost desire of this former all-round athlete, health education director and teacher from Washington, D.C. His life had been a field day, with him the star performer in a host of athletic endeavors; from college football captain to commissioner of athletic officials for both the CIAA and EIAC. For the past eight years, prior to his signing with Uncle Sam, he had been public health director at Miner.

Norwich Grad

Captain Martin was the first colored man to graduate from Norwich University, receiving his B.S. degree in engineering. While there he captained the varsity football team, and earned letters in baseball, track and hockey. Upon graduating, he took on the job of coaching which led him to Virginia Union, Shaw University and Virginia State College.

During these thirteen years, this health education specialist had received his master's degree from New York University. He had played professional football and declined an appointment as a West Point cadet. In 1934, he transferred his activities to college where he remained until 1942. The ex-professor, a member of Washington's Bachelor Benedict Club, spent his vacation as director of summer camps. He was a first lieutenant in the first colored auxiliary police in Washington.

Captain Martin shared 15 years of his busy field life with his charming wife, the former Miss Beatrice C. Boyd of Boston. They are the parents of two handsome sons.

His wife exhibits the same delight in physical education work. She has done professional dancing and, at present, is assisting the physical education director, while taking special courses at Tuskegee Institute. Their home is at 1804 New Hampshire Avenue, Northwest, in Washington.

Hard Tasks

"I don't have a minute to spare." These words, spoken by the perpetually active captain, indicate that his army job is a taxing one. Maintaining a proficient personnel to operate the restaurant, soda fountain and various departments of an army department store is no bench-warming job.

The captain's blood still sings, however, with hope for the chance at body building. When big things in athletics appear on this flying school horizon, they march them to Captain Martin's office. Recently he drew up the plans for the 99th Field Day program presented on this field.

Last week, February 1, he drew closer to the things he loves. After selling the idea of a bowling alley for this field, he saw one of his dreams come true in the opening of a modern alley.

It rates high as a morale builder and recreational center. As general manager of this new bowling alley, the 42-year-old officer has plenty of ideas in store, concerning plans for teams and other recreational facilities for this field.

Nashville, Tenn., Banner
October 26, 1943

Eugene Pierre White Now 1st Lieutenant

First. Lt. Eugene Pierre White Negro, son of Mrs. Jennie White of 1610 Fourteenth Avenue, North was promoted to his present rank recently at Tuskegee Institute, Alabama, where he is an instructor in the Air Forces. He was commissioned about six months ago upon completion of officers training at Miami Beach, Fla.

Upon enlisting while a student at A&I College here in 1940, Lieutenant White received basic training at Fort Bragg, N. C., and was later sent to Tuskegee for a period of training before he went to Florida. Upon being commissioned he was returned to Tuskegee.

47K

AMERICAN OFFICERS VISIT EMPEROR

MAR 6 1943

Pittsburgh Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

MAR 6
MAR 6 1943
47K

Allied with the United Nations in their drive against the Axis is historic Ethiopia, which was overrun by Italy in the infamous invasion of 1937, today Ethiopia's Emperor, Haile Selassie, since his restoration to the throne, is an important figure in military planning in the Middle East.

Above are pictures of the Emperor in conference with American Airmen. At the left of the Emperor is Colonel Bishop. Standing is Colonel Clark. They are looking over official papers.

Afro-American
Baltimore, Maryland

OCT 16 1943

CAPT. CAMPBELL CHEMICAL WARFARE SCHOOL GRAD.

EDGEWOOD ARSENAL, Md.—Capt. Thomas Campbell was the only colored officer among the Chemical Warfare graduates here last week. Assigned to North Camp Hood, Tex., he is now visiting his parents at Tuskegee.

Chicago Defender
Chicago, Illinois

MacArthur Gives Command Of New Unit To Race Officer

MAY 22 1943

SOMEWHERE IN NEW GUINEA (ANP)—Setting up of an all-colored unit by General Douglas MacArthur, with 1st Lt. Edward H. Lowe, of Muskogee, Okla., in command, has established a new precedent in the South Pacific area.

This unit is an independent quartermaster railhead company, charged with the responsibility of handling the vitally important subsistence supplies.

Lt. Lowe has been under Gen. MacArthur's command since November, 1941. In that period he has established an enviable record. Coming to the Southwest Pacific area as a second lieutenant, he was first attached to an all-white signal corps unit at Port Darwin, Australia, acting in the capacity of supply officer.

Later he was transferred to the special service division of the army, where he did remarkable work. He was then promoted to first lieutenant.

Although the outfit he has been assigned to is comparatively a small unit, it still marks advancement for Negro officers in this theatre. Then, too, until the latter part of last year there were only two Negro line officers (both infantry) besides chaplains over here.

Two terms of officer's candidate schools have been held in this area. The first, which was an experimental school, graduated two out of four Negroes in attendance.

47K

Washington Tribune
Washington, D. C.

Campbell Johnson Made A Colonel

WASHINGTON. — (ANP)—Promoted to a full colonelcy, Campbell Johnson, executive assistant to Maj. Gen. Hershey of the selective service system, assumed his new rank last week with no other changes in his duties noted. Col Johnson, long known for his splendid record in civic work and in social work in this city, was appointed to his post early in the war and retained his title of major

47K

47k-1943

Negro Officers To Be Promoted On Ability; Block System Eliminated

April 17, 1943

WASHINGTON.—(ANP) — Almost simultaneonsly with the announcement of Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson that his department will promote Negro officers according to their ability, it was learned in another quarter that the block system of promotions has been eliminated and that colored commissioned personnel will be raised in rank as the individuals qualify.

Announced in Press Conference

The secretary's reply came in answer to a question at his Thursday morning press conference as to whether the policy stated by Under Secretary William Patterson recently in a letter to the Washington Federation of Churches, would be followed throughout the army wherever command of Negro troops is involved. Patterson had said that Negro officers would be advanced according to their ability as they qualify.

"Yes, that is our intention," was the Stimson answer.

The block system is the method whereby Negroes could not be commissioned as lieutenants until an equal number could be elevated to the rank of captaincy, and this latter would not be done until there was an organized unit of sufficient Negro personnel to require the particular number of captains.

It was this limitation on advancement that was lifted out of a speech of Major General Frederick Miller, commanding general for the 93rd Division stationed at Fort Huachuca, a few months ago and highlighted in the Negro press. It was not generally known, however, that even at that time, General Miller had submitted to his superior officers the recommendations for the promotion of several qualified officers at his base.

The probability is that these and possibly other names will be acted upon for promotion at an early date, although no specific promise was available.

Secretary Stimson also declared that "the policy of the war department is to utilize trained Negro troops whenever they can be used to further the war effort." He disclosed that there are now more than 75,000 Negroes in the various overseas theaters of operations. This number includes not only service troops, he said, but combat troops as well, such as coast artillery in infantry.

(Negro tank units are reported to be engaged in action now going on at the Tunisian front where they are credited with having taken an important sector from the axis.)

"Negro troops of all the principal arms are now under training," Stimson said. "Typical of these are the following: two infantry divisions, one cavalry division, and a number of infantry regiments and field artillery battalions.

"The 93rd division is now undergoing maneuvers as a division. This is an advanced stage of training for this unit. I think that these evidences give clearer indication of our policy to utilize the Negro soldier in combat as well as in active theaters of war."

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md

Commissioned in Medical Administration

Call
Kansas City, Mo.

(SPECIAL) — George W. Kimble, 22, Kansas City, youth on June 9 commissioned a second lieutenant at the medical administrative corps officer candidate school graduation here.

An optician before he entered the army, Kimble attended the University of Kansas in 1938 and the University of Nebraska in 1939. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Kimble, 1604 Benton Blvd., Kansas City, Mo.

The medical administrative corps, into whose ranks the graduates have just been officially welcomed, is taking over most of the non-medical jobs in the medical department.

Gen. Davis at Ky. Camp

FEB 13 1943

Brig. Gen. B. O. Davis (rear seat, in cap) of the Inspector General's office. looks over the 370th Combat Team, 92nd Division, at Camp Breckinridge, Ky., during a recent inspection tour of units in training throughout the country.

16th Negro In ETO Wins Commission

Pittsburgh Courier

JUL 10 1943

LONDON, July 8—Henry Wynn, Jr., of 812 Kirkham Street, Oakland, Calif., is the lone colored graduate among 71 officers from "European West Point" last week. He becomes the sixteenth colored second lieutenant receiving his gold bars by way of graduation.

---

nicago Defender
Chicago, Illinois

NEW OFFICERS AT TUSKEGEE AIRFIELD

LIEUT BLAIR · LIEUT. GREEN · LIEUT. WILLIAMS · LIEUT. ROHLSEN

MAY 10 1943

Left to right, Lieut. Omar D. Blair, Albuquerque, N. Mex., recently graduated from the Air Corps Administration Officers Candidate school, Miami Beach, Fla., and assigned to the Tuskegee Army Flying school, Second Lieut. Alpheus M. Green of Philadelphia, recently transferred to the Tuskegee Army Flying school from Langley Field, Va., Lieutenant Green was commissioned at the Signal Corps Officers Candidate school, Fort Monmouth on February 3, 1943, Second Lieut. John H. Williams of Pasadena, Calif., recently graduated from the Air Corps Administration Officers' Candidate school, Miami, Beach, Fla., and was assigned to the Tuskegee Army Flying school. Second Lieut. Henry E. Rohlsen, a native of St. Croix, Virgin Islands, recently graduated from the Air Corps Administration Officers' Candidate school, Miami Beach, Fla., and was assigned to the Tuskegee Army Flying school.—Released by U. S. War Department, Bureau of Information.

FIVE RETURN AS OFFICERS

Pittsburgh, Pa.
Courier

By "SCOOP" JONES

JUN 12 1943

SOMEWHERE IN NEW GUINEA, June 10—(ANP)—Graduating from one of the toughest U. S. Army Officers Candidate schools, five colored officers, who left here as enlisted men, have just returned for their first line of duty since being commissioned and to renew their activities in the campaign against the Japanese. They came from Gen. MacArthur's O. C. School in Australia, which has a reputation of only graduating leaders.

Out of a class of 477 men to enter in January the second officer's training school to be held in this theater, 11 to attend were colored. These five officers who have just reported here were the only ones out of this group to graduate. They are: 2nd Lts. James H. Hopkins, Kan.; Elisha Burno, Hartsville, S. C., Frank J. Corbett, Rocky Mount, N. C.; Hampson H. Fields, Cleveland, and Joe R. Burns, Tulsa, Okla.

Detroiter Is First Colored Navy Officer Put On Duty

Chicago Defender Chicago, Illinois

JUN 19 1943

BOSTON. — (ANP) — Ensign Joseph C. Jenkins of Detroit has the distinction of being the first colored naval officer to be assigned to active duty.

He is attached to the coast guard shore patrol of the First Naval district with headquarters at the former exclusive Hotel Brunswick and has under his command a mixed personnel of white and colored seamen.

He was inducted as a chief petty officer on presenting his qualifications about a year ago and after attending the coast guard academy at New London, Conn., was commissioned an ensign on April 19.

He is a graduate of the University of Michigan with a bachelor of civil engineering degree, class of 1937, and from that time up to the time of his enlistment was connected with the Michigan state highway.

Ensign Jenkins stated that he has been treated fairly and believes there is an ever-widening opportunity for colored boys in the coast guard. Incidentally his friends in Detroit scoffed at his move in leaving the Michigan state highway saying, "It couldn't be done."

Ensign "Whit" Robinson, the only other colored naval ensign, is still on inactive status awaiting the completion of his medical studies at Harvard university in 1944.

Winston Salem N. C. Sentinel
September 5, 1943

N. C. Chaplain Is Promoted

Chaplain John H. Clanton, of Eglin Field, Fla., has been promoted to captaincy, it was announced recently. Captain Clanton is a North Carolinian where he completed his high school, college and seminary work and taught school three years.

He served as principal of an mentary public school for two and as assistant principal of the State School for Deaf, Dumb and Blind Children of North Carolina.

Later he became pastor of the St. James Baptist Church of Rocky Mount. This church has a three-story Sunday school building where the most modern methods of training and teaching are carried on.

From this church the Baptist State Convention (Negro) and the Baptist State Convention (white) jointly secured the full-time services of Captain Clanton as director of religious education and training for the Negro constituency of North Carolina. He held this position for five years prior to receiving his commission in the United States Army as first lieutenant in the chaplain corps. He also pursued further study in religious education at Howard University at Howard University.

Trio Graduated From Medical Service School

Pittsburgh Pa

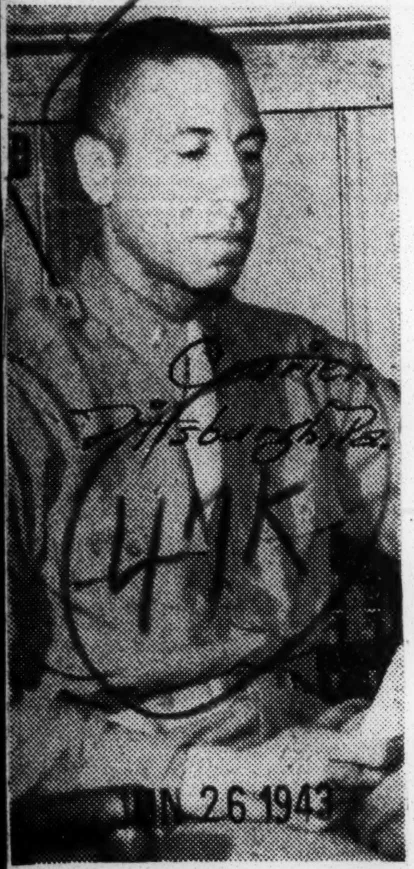
Courier

CARLISLE BARRACKS, Pa., Aug. 5—The graduation Thursday of three physicians from the Army's Medical Service School, Carlisle Barracks, brought to a total of 144 the number of Negro medical, dental and veterinary officers to receive diplomas from this national training center, the only military school for training medical department officers for field duty.

The three officers are Capt. George W. Hill, 38, of 30 State stret, Ossining, New York; Capt. William F. Fonville, 44, of 5623 Indiana avenue, Chicago, Illinois, and First Lieut. Harold L. Edgehill, 37, of 417 West 146th street, New York City, New York. Captain Fonville and Lieutenant Edgehill received their M.D. degrees from Howard university and Captain Hill graduated from Indiana university with an M.D. degree.

AUG 7 1943

TO HARVARD



Courier

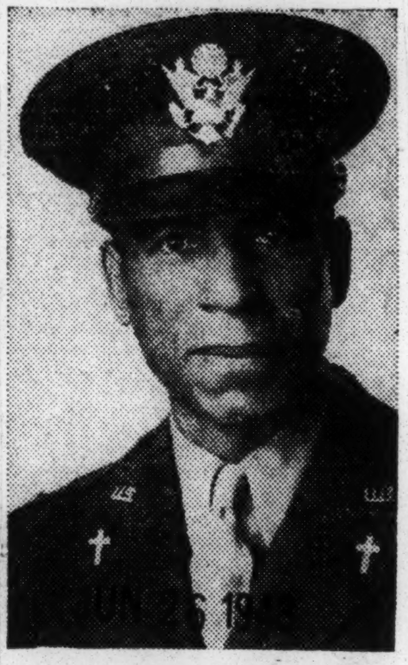
Pittsburgh Pa.

JUN 26 1943

Captain Douglas L. T. Robinson, Post Chaplain at Tuskegee Aair Field, was recently assigned to Harvard University's Chaplain school, Cambridge, Mass. Captain Robinson, who saw service overseas in World War I with the 372nd Infantry, is an experienced soldier and religious leader. He was pastor of the Steward Chapel AME church of Macon, Ga., prior to receiving his commission and being assigned to Fort McClellan, Ala. He was assigned to the Tuskegee Army Air Field on May 20, 1942, where his duties have grown with the field.

JUN 26 1943

At Chaplain's School



JUN 26 1943

...TUSKEGEE ARMY AIR FIELD, Ala., June —Captain Douglas L. T. Robinson, Post Chaplain was recently assigned to Harvard University's Chaplain School, Cambridge, Mass., where he will further his knowledge in Army ministry. Captain Robinson, who saw service over seas in World War 1 with the 372nd Infantry is an experienced soldier and religious leader.

Captain Robinson's father Rev. J. C. Robinson, is a retired General Officer of the A. M. E. Church. He and his wife, Mrs. Robinson, reside at 235 N. Darson St., Philadelphia, Pa.

JUN 26 1943

5 PHYSICIANS RECEIVE ARMY COMMISSIONS

JUN 1943

Chicago, Ill. Defender

CARLISLE BARRACKS, Pa. — Five more Negro physicians were graduated from the Medical Field Service school, Carlisle Barracks, on June 3, making a total of 128 Negro medical, dental, and veterinary officers to receive diplomas from the Army's only school for training medical department officers for field duty.

The five Negro officers, four of them first lieutenants, and one a captain, were members of the 27th Officers' class after completing a six weeks of rigorous training for duty as medical officers with troops in combat.

JUN 12 1943

The five officers are Capt. Webster Sewell, 41, of Norbeck Road, Rockville, Md.; First Lt. Henry C. Irving, 30, of 13 Warner avenue, Jersey City, N.J.; First Lt. Morris S. Young, 29, of Anderson, S.C.; First Lt. William O. Harris, 34, of 32 N. New Jersey avenue, Atlantic City, N.J.; and First Lt. Seaton J. Jackson, 29, of 700 S. Virginia avenue, Terrell, Texas.

Both Captain Sewell and Lieutenant Irving received their M.D. degrees from Howard university. Lieutenant Jackson and Lieutenant Young were graduated from Meharry Medical college, and Lieutenant Harris was awarded his degree from Western Reserve Medical college.

Journal and Guide

Norfolk, Virginia

Captain Martin

JUN 5 1943

This is the most recent photograph of Captain Harold D. Martin, former CIAA and EIAC commissioner of officials and former coach at Shaw, Virginia Union, Virginia State and Miner Teachers College, now director of the ground forces at the Tuskegee Army Flying School. This exclusive shot, which shows the well known official and sports figure to be "in the pink" was taken by Guide Photographer J. Andrew Bowler during the Tuskegee Institute commencement exercises, at which Captain Martin's wife received her bachelor of science degree.

Disappointment has been expressed in some quarters over the fact that Captain Martin's exceptional qualifications have been overlooked in the selection of a director for the athletic and physical education program for soldiers at the base.

JUN 5 1943

NINE RECEIVE COMMISSIONS AT CAMP LEE

Chicago, Ill. Defender

June 12, 1943-

CAMP LEE, Va.—Lt. Bertram C. Bland and Lt. William A. Roberts of Newark, Lt. Joseph E. Hall and Lt. John L. Watkins of Philadelphia, Lt. Robert B. Morrisey of Chattanooga, Lt. Matthew Clifford Newman of Summerville, S. C., Lt. Israel Ishmael Sylvan of Tulsa, Lt. Eugene A. Taylor of Columbus, and Lt. Charles R. Whatley of Atlanta are the colored officers most recently commissioned at Camp Lee's Quartermaster school Friday, May 28.

JUN 12 1943

Lt. Bland and Lt. Roberts are citizens of Newark. Lt. Bland is the son of Mrs. Mary A. Anderson, 315 Halsey street. He attended Harvard university and New Jersey Law school.

Lt. Roberts is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Roberts, 204 Orange street, Newark. He attended St. Paul's school at Lawrenceville, Va.

Lt. Morrisey is the son of H. B. Morrisey of Chattanooga. He attended Livingstone college at Salisbury, N. C. Lt. Newman's home is Summerville, S. C.

Lt. Sylvan lived at 531 E. Reading street, Tulsa, Okla. He is the son of Forris Sylvan of Beggs, Okla. He attended Langston university. Lt. Eugene A. Taylor lives in Columbus.

JUN 12 1943

From Philadelphia are Lt. Joseph E. Hall and Lt. John L. Watkins. Lt Hall lives at 1827 Wharton street. Lt. Watkins is the son of the Rev. and Mrs. B. F. Glasco, 1924 S. College avenue, Philadelphia. He is a graduate of Wilberforce university.

JUN 12 1943

Lt. Whatley is the son of Mr. and Mrs. P. L. Whatley, 942 Ashby Grove S.W., Atlanta. He was graduated from Morehouse college in 1941. While in college he played center for the Morehouse football team.

10 PHYSICIANS GRADUATE AS ARMY OFFICERS

Defender

Chicago Ill.

Commission One Captain At Carlisle, Penn., Medical School

CARLISLE BARRACKS, Pa. — Ten Negro physicians were recently graduated from the Medical Field Service School, Carlisle Barracks, bringing to a total of 123 the number of Negro medical, dental, and veterinary officers to receive diplomas from this "West Point" of the Medical Department.

JUN 5 1943

In addition thirty-one Negroes had been commissioned as Second Lieutenants, here, following their graduation from the Medical Administrative Corps Officer Candidate School which was in operation at this post until two months ago. They with enlisted men who completed a sanitary technicians course increased to 165 the total number of Negro graduates of the medical field service school.

The four Negro officers, all of them first lieutenants, were part of the twenty-sixth Officers' class graduated May 20 at exercises in Tugo hall after completing six weeks of rigorous training for duty as medical officers with troops in combat.

All experienced physicians, the four officers left immediately after graduation for their respective units. The training course in medical field work at this school prepared them to be efficient Medical Department officers, capable of carrying on their professional work under war conditions.

JUN 5 1943

The four officers are First Lieut. Dwight O. W. Holmes, Jr., 34, Newark, N. J.; First Lieut. William A. Burton, 37, New Rochelle, N. Y.; First Lieut. John C. Lorde, Jr., 30, Bronx, N. Y., and First Lieut. Gage C. Moore, 37, Ottumwa, Iowa.

Both Lieutenant Holmes and Lieutenant Burton received their M. D. degrees from Howard university. Lieut Lord was awarded his degree from New York Medical Flower hospital and Lieutenant Moore was graduated from Iowa University Medical school.

Six officers, five of them first lieutenants, and one a captain, were part of the 25th Officers' Class graduated on May 6.

The six officers are Captain James R. Granger, 38, Brooklyn, N. Y.; First Lieut. William E. Crawford, 32, Tucson, Ariz.; First Lieut. Herbert B. Henderson, 31, New York city; First Lieut. Israel E. Elliott, Jr., N. W. Washington, D. C.; First Lieut. Leonard Z. Johnson, 34, St. Louis; and First Lieut. William S. Sims, Frederick, Md.

JUN 5 1943

Captain Granger, Lieut. Crawford, Lieut. Henderson and Lieut. Johnson received their M. D. degrees from Howard university medical school, Washington, and Lieut. Elliott and Lieut. Sims are graduates of Meharry medical college, Nashville.

Argus

St. Louis, Missouri

St. Louis Is Among Army Medical School Graduates

SEP 24 1943

CARLISLE BARRACKS, Pennsylvania—The graduation, last week, of seven physicians from the Army's Medical Field Service School, Carlisle Barracks, brought to a total of 174, the number of Negro medical, dental and veterinary officers to receive diplomas from this national training center, the Army's only military school for training Medical Depatrment officers for field duty.

Thirty-one others have been commissioned as second lieutenants, following their graduation from the Medical Administrative Corps Officer Candidate School, which had functioned at this post until last spring. They, with enlisted men who completed a Sanitary Technician's Course, increased to 216, the total number of Negro graduates of the Medical Field Service School.

The seven officers are: Captain Robert S. Wilkinson, New York City; First Lieutenant Lucius S. Davis, St. Louis, Missouri; First Lieutenant Neville A. Griffith, New York City; First Lieutenant Clarence A. Murray, Corona, N. Y.; First Lieutenant Barnett M. Rhetta ,Jr. Baltimore, Maryland; First Lieutenant Alvin V. Thomas, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and First Lieutenant William T. Yates, Baton Rouge, La.

47k-1943

NINE WARRANT OFFICERS NAMED AT TUSKEGEE

Pittsburgh Courier
Pittsburgh, PA.

FEB 6 - 1943

Nine experienced enlisted men of the Tuskegee Army Flying School personnel succeeded in passing rigid examinations and qualified to become warrant officers, the first to be selected direct from the ranks at this station.

Wearing bronze shoulder bars and addressed as "mister" are, left to right: Tech. Sgt. Edward Edgehill, Brooklyn; Tech. Sgt. Hollis T. Arnold, Muskogee, Okla.; Corp. Glen L. Head, Madison, Ga.; Master Sgt. William Johnson, North Woodbury, N. J.; Staff Sgt. Richard Rutledge, Kingsboro Project, Brooklyn; Staff Sgt. Robert R. Snead, Cleveland, O.; Sgt. Burks Esaw, Detroit, Mich.; Master Sgt. Timothy Calder, Waterville, Maine and Master Sgt. Chalmers P. Smith Bentonia, Miss.

First Time Two Colored Officers Finish Together

JAN 30 1943

Pittsburgh Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

By BILLY ROWE

WEST POINT, N. Y., Jan. 28—Traditionally beafutiful in all seasons, the United States Military Academy here was enhanced last Tuesday by a frost that nipped the ears of those great generals immortalized in bronze on its parade grounds. Under a grim winter sky that cast a warlike mantle over the valley in which this fortress-like school sits, the first speed-up wartime graduation in its 141 years existence was brought nearer to the impending combat that is the lot of men in uniform.

However the new speed-up graduation wasn't the only item for history written as 409 future generals were let out into the world to be added to the battle-front and face to face with the destiny of their chosen profession. Among that impressive number, for the first time, in the same class two colored cadets received from the hands of Under-Secretary of War, Robert P. Patterson, the encased parchments that commissioned them second lieutenants in the United States Army, graduates of West Point.

The cadets were Robert Bernard Tresville Jr., of Texas and Clarence Maude Davenport Jr., of Detroit. Davenport who was the first to receive his commission, was the sixth Negro to come out of West Point and Tresville who was second to him, was the seventh out of twenty-three who have entered the Academy since its addition to the military scene many decades ago.

JAN 30 1943

TRESVILLE A MILITARY SON

Tresville who is the son of Warrant Officer Robert Tresville, now somewhere on the fighting front abroad, is truly a miltary son. With his father he has harried many army camps throughout the country. In graduating from West Point, Tresville Jr. realized a lifelong ambition. He was appointed to the military school by Representative Arthur W. Mitchell of Illinois' First District. Tresville added another distinguished first to his achievement at the Point as he graduated as the only Negro among a corps of 164 who had already completed the air cadet course and received their commissions with shining silver wings directly over their hearts. Now a second lieutenant, he will join the 99th at Tuskegee after a 20 days' leave.

Clarence M. Davenport of Detroit was the first Negro in this class and the sixth graduating from West Point, to receive the ovation of the gathered throngs. His ovation was greater than any of the cadets, excluding the football famous and Tresville. He was appointed to the Academy by Representative George O'Brien of Michigan's 13th District. He will be attached to the Coast Artillery (AA) at Camp Davis, N. C., after a ten-day leave given all newly commissioned second lieutenants with the exception of those who graduated as air force officers. Directly after the ceremonies, Lieut. Davenport left for Detroit where he was married to Yolande E. Bradfield the following night.

THREE CADETS REMAIN

JAN 30 1943

With Lieutenants Davenport and Thesville gone, three colored cadets still remain at the Academy, the largest number ever to attend the military school at one time. Each of them is scheduled to graduate under the new sped-up system in 1944 unless the time is cut further. Members of the fourth class, United States Corps of Cadets are H. M. Francis, Ernest J. Davis Jr., and Mark E. Rivers. Francis was appointed to the Academy by Representative Arthur Mitchell and is from Washington. Davis is also from Washington and also an appointe of Mitchell. Rivers is from Flushing, L. I., N. Y. He was appointed by Representative Gavagan.

Leven C. Weiss of Detroit who was appointed by John Dingell of Michigan was separated from the Academy just before the present graduating class came through. His failure was due to deficiency in mathematics.

FIRST WEST POINTER STARTED IN 1870

JAN 30 1943

James W. Smith of South Carolina was the first Negro to enter West Point. He was appointed from the third district and came to the Academy July 1, 1870. He remained until June 26, 1874, at which time he was dropped for deficiency in Philosophy. Each year from then on from many sections of the country Negores were appointed to West Point. In July 1871 Henry A. Napier came from Tennessee's fifth district. He was separated in June 1872 for deficiency in mathematics and French. Thomas V. R. Gibbs was appointed from Florida in 1872, but failed in mathematics and left in January of 1873.

In 1873, Henry Flipper, entered the Academy from Georgia and in June 1877 became the first Negro to graduate from the historic institution. He died in May 1940. During his life he wrote the only book about the Negro at West Point. It was ten years before another colored cadet successfully completed the course offered by the military academy. Entering the school in July 1883 John A. Alexander was commissioned June 12, 1887. He died in March 1894. Charles Young who entered the Academy during the time of Alexander, was the next to graduate. He entered in June 1884 and was commissioned August 31, 1889. He became a high ranking coolnel in the United States Army, but was retired in June 1917 for disability contracted in the line of duty. He died January 8, 1922.

Following the graduation of Col. Young William T. Andrews was admitted in 1885 but was separated in 1886 for deficiency in mathematics. William A. Hare came in 1885 and left in 1886 because of marks in mathmeatics, English and discipline. Mathematics tricked Henry A. Holloway who entered in 1886 and he was separated in 1887. John B. Alexander left after a stay from June 14, 1918, to December 26 of the same year. It was eleven years before the next Negro, Alonzo S. Parham was appointed to the Academy. Because of difficulty in mathematics he was forced out in 1930.

Two years later, Benjamin O. Davis Jr., a child of the Army, his father at that time being a coolnel in the regular Army, was given the go sign from Illinois' First District. He graduated in 1936 and is now a Lieut.-Colonel commanding the 99th Pursuit Squadron at Tuskegee. His father is General Davis, the highest ranking Negro officer in the United States Army.

After Davis came F. J. Kirkpatrick Jr., in 1035. but because of marks in conduct he was separated from the Academy five months after entering. James D. Fowler entered in July 1937 and sucessfully completed the course in 1941. He's now in the Army and attached to the 366th at Fort Devens, Mass.

JAN 30 1943

His graduation led right into the present cycle which for the first time in the history of West Point found two Negroes graduating at the same time, leaving three behind to come out second lieutenants in '44 just in time to greet two new wouldbe generals who have already been appointed and are set to enter in June.

Bystander

Des Moines, Iowa

16 NEGRO CHAPLAINS AMONG HARVARD CHAPLAIN'S SCHOOL GRADUATES

APR 15 1943

Cambridge, Mass. (ANP)—Sixteen Negro chaplains, commissioned 1st lieutenants and captains, were among the approximately 400 student chaplain graduates of Harvard university on April 3.

It is estimated that more than 235 Negro chaplains will be needed by 1944. Thus it is seen that the army policy for commissioning chaplains is far different from that of the navy where there are no chaplains.

To qualify for admission in the chaplain's corps, the only completely volunteer group connected with the armed forces, one must have a college degree, advanced ministerial training at a college, and have served as a pastor. However, the army has waived certain qualifications for Negro chaplains as the demand is so great.

APR 15 1943

PROMOTED TO CAPTAIN IN ARMY AIR FORCE

4-3-43

Peoples Voice

TUSKEGEE, ALA.-----George Spencer Roberts of Fairmount, West Virginia, has recently been promoted to the rank of Captain in the 99th Fighter Squadron here. He was among the first civilian pilots trained at the West Virginia State College for subsequent transfer to the army training base here.

4-3-43

Captain Roberts is the first Negro, with the exception of Lieut. Col. B. O. Davis, Jr., a West Pointer.

to reach the rank of Captain in the US Army Air Forces.

Advanced In Rank

"Pittsburgh Courier"

TUSKEGEE ARMY AIR FIELD, Ala., May 13—Recently promoted from second lieutenant is First Lieutenant Douglas Jones, mess officer, General Mess Number Two, Tuskegee Army Air Field. Lt. Jones, a former student of Houston college, is a native of Shreveport, La. At Tuskegee, the new silver bar wearer is responsible for the feeding of hundreds of soldiers each day.

MAY 15 1943

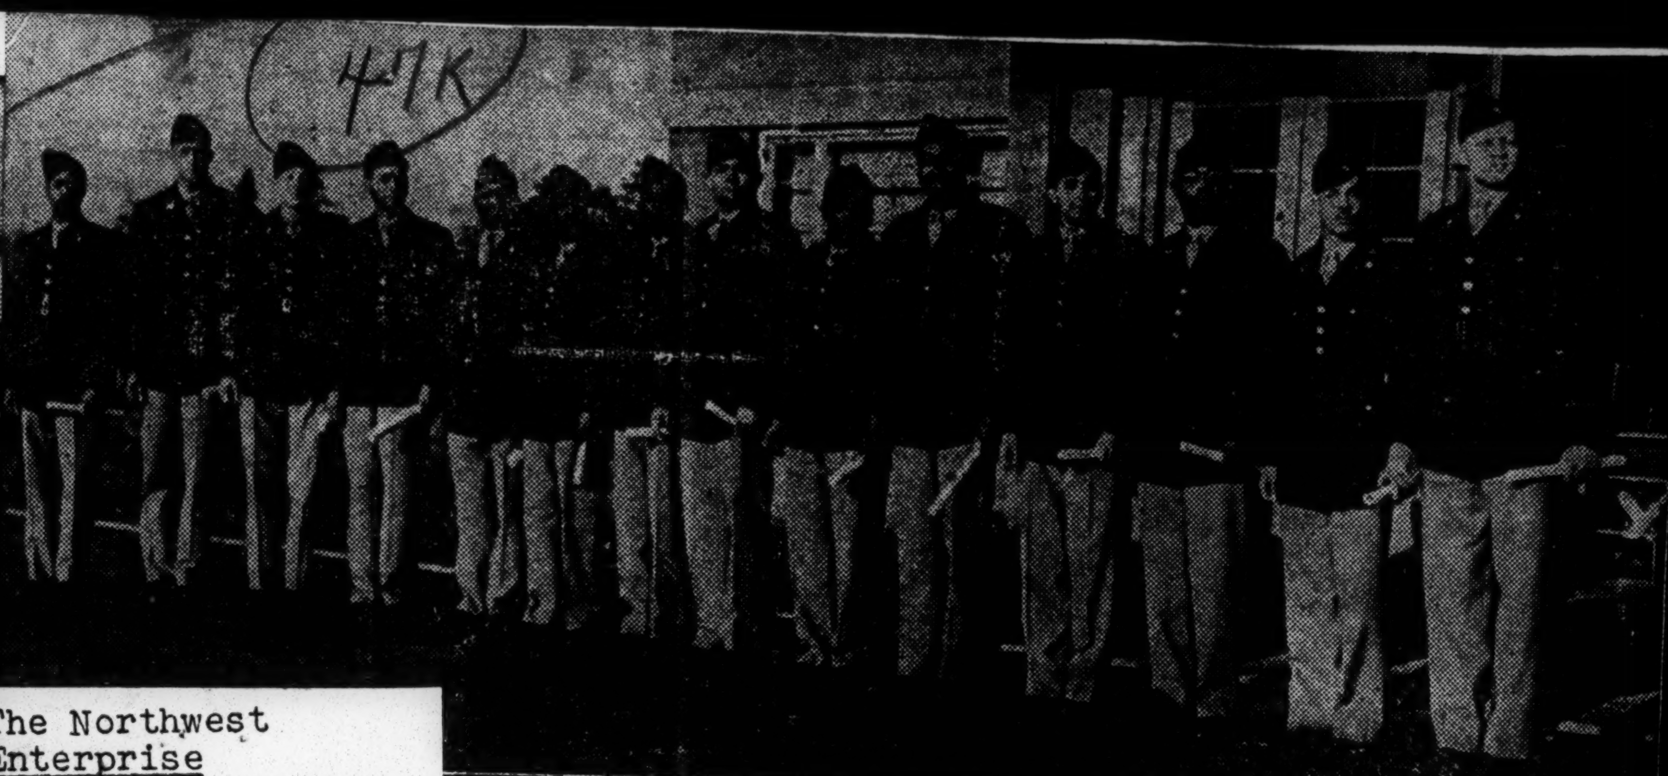
INSPECTS 365TH COMBAT TEAM

Pittsburgh Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

FEB 6 1943

Brigadier General Benjamin O. Davis Sr., (left) is shown with Colonel Walter E. Elliott, commander of the 365th Combat Team, shortly after inspecting the unit. General Davis, the highest ranking Negro officer in the United States Army, had nothing but praise for the unit and especially for its band which has been organized only a short while.

47K



The Northwest
Enterprise
Seattle, Washington

By Bureau of Public Relations. U. S. War Dept., Wash., D. C.

SOMEWHERE IN ENGLAND—Negro graduates of Officer Candidate School in England. (Left to right) Samuel L. Coleman, New York, N. Y.; William H. Cox, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Richard W. Davis, Washington, D. C.; William F. Duckery, Philadelphia, Pa.; William A Dyson, New York, N. Y.; Lestor W. Gordon, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Lucius Gibson, Americus, Ga.; Earnest J. Harris, Neptune, N. J.; William Murphy, Valdosta, Ga.; Carl W. Pope, Columbus, Ohio; James P. Rux, Bloomsburg, Pa.; Robert L. Terrell, Houston, Tex.; Richard C Wells, Washington, D. C.; Kenneth E. Wilson, Brooklyn, N. Y. These Officers have received their commissions as second lieutenants

---

First Race Officers Commissioned Abroad

By RANDY DIXON
(Pittsburgh Courier War Correspondent)

LONDON, Feb. 11 (Censored)—Fourteen Negro graduates of the U. S. Officers' Candidate School "somewhere in England" were monopolized by Great Britain's press, radio, newsreel and photo services and were paid unstinted tribute by officers of America's High Command last week as 55 U. S. soldiers were commissioned second lieutenants at the "European West Point," first American officer school in history outside the states.

Besieged was William E. Murphy, 45, oldest graduate of the class who boasts 25 consecutive years of army service, as well as Ernest J. Harris of Neptune, N. J., who broke all records for the spectacular formal drill known as the "obstacle course."

RECOMMENDED BY GENERAL DAVIS

The graduating fourteen were survivors of seventy colored applicants interviewed for the rigid course by Brigadier-General Benjamin O. Davis. Every colored boy selected passed with flying colors.

Addressing the entire class, Major-General Russell P. Hartle, Deputy Commander of Operations in the European Theatre, said:

"I wish especially, today, to congratulate the fourteen Negro candidates who have successfully completed this course and who are the first of their race to graduate from this school. We look to them as newly acquired leaders who will be a credit not only to our Army but to that great section of our population which is making an ever-increasing contribution to American life. I commend you upon your entrance into the ranks of the commissioned officers of the United States Army—with the profound conviction that we will soon lead our men to victory.

FEB 13 1943

PROUD OF ENTIRE GROUP

Colonel Walter G. Layman, Commandant of the European West Point," said: "I would be glad to have any of you serving in my command."

Coincidentally, Murphy did serve under Colonel Layman 23 years ago at Fort Benning, Georgia. After that, Murphy saw service at St. Mihiel and with the Marines. A native of Valdosta, Ga., he new considers St. Louis, Mo., as his home. He married seven years ago and his wife is in Georgia at the present time.

RECORD-SMASHER

Harris, a perfect specimen of young manhood, reduced the criterion for the obstacle course from one minute, forty-one seconds, to one minute, twenty-eight seconds. He was graduated from Neptune high school but did not compete in sports at the New Jersey prep institution.

47K

Practically all of the fourteen "European West Point" graduates are college men.

Lucius Gibson of Americus, Ga., a student of Georgia State college who married last August, said: "I am proud to represent my state at this graduation. Rest assured that we Negro candidates will let no one down."

ROMANTIC EPISODE

William Cox, alumnus of Bluefield State Teachers college, W. Va., said: "Please tell my wife I wish she could have been here today. I love her so much."

Cox made the statement as the charming Red Cross worker, Miss Henrine Ward, Chicago, bestowed a graduation kiss on him. Amid the "kidding" that followed, she explained that she and Mrs. Cox were lifelong friends.

OVERCOME WITH EMOTION

Richard Davis of Washington, D. C., is a Prairie View (Texas) college graduate. He specialized in Political Science. He said he was too overburdened with emotion to make a statement.

Kenneth Wilson of Brooklyn, a liberal arts student at St. Augustine's college, Raleigh, N. C., was a basketball and track star. He married two hours before embarking for Europe and he considered his lieutenant's bars a belated wedding gift for his wife, the former Doris Frazier of New York City.

FEB 13 1943 Pittsburgh Courier

SCION OF WELL KNOWN FAMILY

William Duckery, member of the well known Philadelphia family of educators, is a former school teacher. Richard Wells of Washington, D. C., was graduated from Howard university, there, and Atlanta university, Atlanta, Ga., specializing in dramatics. Lester Gordon, another Brooklynite, was graduated from Brooklyn college with a science major.

Samuel Coleman of New York City was graduated in Engineering from City College of New York in 1932.

FEB 13 19

GAVE UP MEDICAL CAREER

Robert Terrell of Houston, Tex., was graduated from Houston Junior college and Prairie View State. He was taking up medicine at Meharry Medical college, Nashville, Tenn., when he entered the armed services. He said he was anxious to get back to Prairie View where a senior Reserve Officers Training Corps (ROTC) has just started.

James Rux of Broomsburg, Pa., who finished high school just last August, commented: "And to think that I am a commissioned officer within one year!"

The "European West oPint" was first opened last September. The first graduation took place December 9, 1942, when 43 enlisted soldiers, none of which was Negroes, were commissioned. Only one Negro will be in the next class. He is Wilfred Jones of New York City.

Soldiers are selected on the basis of meritorious, exceptional or conspicuous service and must be recommended by a U. S. Army general officer. In the three months' training period the candidates are instructed in practically all of the modern military tactics, in which they participate as instructors as well as students to master the difficult techniques of signal communications, field fortifications, fire-fighting, military sketching, map and aerial photograph reading and mine-laying. They study the fundamentals of physical training, military history, current events, arms and services, administration command and leadership. Emphasis is out in the field, where candidates engage in rigorous field work, including bayonet drills, cross-country marches, incendiary fire control demonstrations, map reading and tactical problems at night.

The school is ideally situated in a region which offers a wide variety of terrain and much attention is given to attack and defense of river lines, village fighting and commando operations. All graduates are assigned to United States Army Forces in the European Theatre of Operations, where their schooling is of great assistance in helping them to instruct others in military tactics.

47k-1943

As One Captain To Another

Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Virginia

Pictured from left to right are Captains Vance H. Marchbanks Sr., and Vance H. Marchbanks Jr., both of Los Angeles. Captain Marchbanks was the guest of his son recently, who is the medical examiner at the primary detachment of the Tuskegee Army Flying School. A veteran of many wars ,the father has seen 43 years of service with the United States Army.

Father, Son, Both U. S. Army Captains, Meet At Tuskegee

MAR 20 1943

MAR 20 1943

TUSKEGEE, Ala.—It was a case of Captain Marchbanks meeting Captain Marchbanks when father visited son here for four days recently.

MAR 20 1943

Captain Vance H. Marchbanks of Los Angeles, United States Army, retired, and now adjutant of the 7th Regiment in the California State Guard, surprised his son, Captain Vance H. Marchbanks Jr., when he arrived in Tuskegee for a short stay.

Although Captain Marchbanks Jr., also of Los Angeles, who is medical examiner at the Tuskegee Army Flying School primary training detachment, has a very militaristic bearing himself, few men in the armed services can look upon their fathers as such an excellent model of the army veteran.

MAR 20 1943

Captain Marchbanks Sr., who is 66 years old, can remember back on forty-three years and ten months of active duty with the United States Army, dating from August 2, 1895, his first enlistment, to his retirement, December 31, 1939. During that period, he was awarded four service ribbons for serving in the Spanish-American War, the Philippine Insurrection, the Mexican border incident of 1916-17, and the World War. Three campaign medals adorn his World War ribbon. He also wears the Verdun medal.

MAR 20 1943

SERVED IN ENLISTED RANKS

Until the entrance of the United States into the first World War, Captain Marchbanks Sr., served in the enlisted ranks in every position from private to first sergeant. During the war he was awarded a temporary commission as a captain and commanded D Company of the 368th Infantry. After the war, he reverted to the rank of first sergeant until he was appointed as a warrant officer on December 31, 1920.

During the next twelve years he worked in the Quartermaster Corps. In 1932 he went to Washington, D. C., and served as an instructor in the Reserve Officers Training Corps system in the city's high schools until his retirement.

MAR 20 1943

Captain Marchbanks' present regiment in the California State Guard is doing guard duty on vital defense installations from the Nevada state line to the Mexican border.

Given Commission

MAR 21 1943

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

TUSKEGEE, Ala.—Second Lieutenant Sheppard D. O'Neal recently received his commission at the Air Corps Administration Officers' Candidate School, Miami Beach. He has been assigned to the Tuskegee Army Flying School.

MAR 21 1943

Lt. O'Neal, a resident of Atlanta, Ga., enlisted in the army on March 22, 1941, and was assigned to Chanute Field, Rantoul, Ill., to attend the Air Corps Technical School. He was then sent to the Tuskegee Army Flying School, where he received his appointment to the Officers' Candidate School.

First Lieutenants Cowan, Ward With Engineering Units

MAY 15 1943

MAY 15 1943

Pittsburg Curier

MAY 15 1943

By "SCOOP" JONES

SOMEWHERE IN NEW GUINEA, May 13—(ANP)—Increasing the number of Negro officers in this vicinity, two more chaplains have recently arrived. They are: First Lts. Jason M. Cowan, Edwards, Miss., and Henry W. B. Ward Lynchburg, Va. Both are assigned to engineer units.

MAY 15 1943

The two chaplains come to New Guinea with a wealth of religious experience and training and seem to understand the problems that confront them in the army. Lt. Cowan is formerly dean of Southern Christian institute, Edwards, Miss. He received his theological training at Butler university, Indianapolis, graduating with the degrees of A.B. and M.S. A Disciples of Christ minister he took an active part in both national and international youth religious council movements and was a principal figure in the Interracial Council of College Students, which meets in Jackson, Miss. Although he was born in Strawplanes, Tenn., he has spent most of his life in Mississippi where he is known in religious and educational circles. He entered the armed services in May, 1941 and foreign service, September, 1942, arriving in Australia.

MAY 15 1943

Lt. Ward holds an A.B. and B.D. degree from Virginia Theological seminary and college, Lynchburg. Has pastored several churches throughout Virginia namely Piedmont Baptist, Yancey Mills, Va.; Mt. Zion Baptist, Appomattox, Va.; Brookville Baptist, Lynchburg, Va., and Blue Ridge Baptist, Blue Ridge, Va. Entered foreign service, December 1942. Prior to coming overseas Chaplain Ward was formerly with the famed 93rd division, Fort Hauchuca, Ariz.

COL. PITTS GIVEN KEY ARMY POST

Chicago Defender
Chicago, Illinois

Former 184th Commander Becomes Inspector In 2nd Army

MAR 24 1943

47K

In probably the most important post to which he could be assigned, Col. Anderson Pitts, former regimental commander of the 184th Field Artillery, has been ordered to duty with the Inspector General's Department, Second Army, Memphis, Tenn., it was announced this week.

In an interview with the Chicago Defender, prior to leaving for Fort McClellan, Ala., he said, "I realize the importance of this new assignment. It is the most important one I could receive. Of course I would have liked to be assigned to combat troops, but as it relates to the welfare of Negro troops, this work is more important."

Col. Pitts will have the same position in the Second Army as Gen. Davis has in the War Department in Washington. His job will be to inspect Negro troops under direction of the Second Army Command and report on their morale and their fitness for overseas duty.

Col. Pitts was an officer in the Illinois National Guard for 25 years, after participation in World War I.

He was considered a machine gun expert during the time he served with infantry regiments. He was an officer with a machine gun company during the first World War and commanded this same type of unit for years with the old 8th.

FEB 27 1943

He was plans and training officer with the grade of major at the time the 8th was transformed into an artillery regiment. At that time he was promoted to a lieutenant colonel.

Col. Pitts was promoted to his present grade and placed in command of the 184th on April 3, 1941. He served with this unit until it was broken up by an army reorganization order on January 20, 1943.

Most of the officers of the former 184th Field Artillery were Chicagoans, and it was recalled that under the reorganization order two battalions were formed—one under command of Lt. Marcus Ray, the other headed by Lt. Col. Wendell Derricks—both Chicagoans.

At the time of the reorganization Col. Pitts and seven other officers, including Lt. Col. Benote Lee and Major Orion Page, were affected. These men became known as surplus officers until they were reassigned.

FEB 27 1943

The announcement concerning Col. Pitts is the first assignment affecting these men. In view of this order the others no doubt will shortly get new posts.

Journal and Guide
Norfolk. Virginia

Graduate From Army Medical Field

MAY 29 1943

47K

CARLISLE BARRACKS, Pa. — Four Negro physicians were graduated Thursday, May 20, from the Medical Field Service School, Carlisle Barracks, bringing to a total of 123 the number of Negro medical, dental, and veterinary officers to receive diplomas from this "West Point" of the Medical Department.

The four officers are First Lieutenant Dwight O. H. Holmes Jr., 34, of 109 Sherman avenue, Newark, N. J.; First Lieutenant William A. Burton, 37, of 37 Morin street, New Rochelle, N. Y.; First Lieutenant John C. Lord Jr., 30, of 301 East 158th street, Bronx, N. Y.; and First Lieutenant Gage C. Moore, 37, of 114 South Jefferson street, Ottumwa, Iowa.

Christian Index
Jackson, Tennessee

NEGRO CHAPLAIN INVADES TOWN

MAY 20 1943

Which Up to One Year Ago Prohibited Negroes from Entering Its Confines

MAY 20 1943

Chaplain Lorenzo Q. Brown of the 374th Engineer Battalion (SEP) (-Co. B) Camp Hood, Texas, scored another smashing victory over "Old Man Race Prejudice." Chaplain Brown will be remembered for quelling the members of the 374th Engineer Batallion (SEP) (-Co. B) in a near riot at Augusta, Georgia, last July 11th. The War Department, through its military channels, commended Chaplain Brown in his heroic stand, in preventing needless bloodshed, and division of purpose and sabotage to the unity of purpose and spirit needed to win the war.

CHAPLAIN LORENZO Q. BROWN of the 374th Engineer Battalion (SEP) (-Co. B) Camp Hood, Texas.

MAY 20 1943

Since coming to Camp Hood, Texas, last August, the town of Killeen has been "off limits" to colored troops. This is the nearest town to Camp Hood and colored soldiers must travel to Belton, Texas and Temple, Texas which are quite a distance from the camp for outside recreational activities. With a large number of colored troops already stationed at Camp Hood the facilities of these towns will be inadequate. Chaplain Brown has always thought in terms of the morale and problems of not only his men but of all the men on the post. It is doubtful whether there has been in the history of the army a chaplain who has so completely captivated his men by his personality and leadership as Chaplain Brown. The men look upon him as father, mother, sweetheart, wife, brother, and sister in the light of the principles and teachings of Jesus. No matter what the problems, the men feel that Chaplain Brown will solve them. Chaplain Brown met to some degree these problems of wholesome recreation by organizing a Glee Club. The effects of his eloquence as a prophetic preacher and the sweetness of the music of his Glee Club have opened the way for invitations from the white and colored churches. His Glee Club, with him as announcer broadcasted for three months over Station KTEM in Temple, Texas. The appearance of Chaplain Brown with his famed Glee Club in many of the white churches is unprecedented.

Last week Chaplain Brown received a request for his Glee Club to sing in Killeen, Texas at the First Methodist Church white. He graciously accepted this invitation without hesitation. Some of the men thought he was doing wrong to accept the invitation since the town was "off limits" to colored soldiers. Chaplain Brown said, "This is the time to break down the barrier" and hence we will fill the engagement.

MAY 20 1943

At 8:15 p. m. Sunday night, April 18, 1943 the story and history began. The minister of the church, the Reverend C. Ellis, opened with a beautiful prayer and intoned, "God bless all of us regardless of race, color or creed." A noticeable feature in this audience was the seating of the colored citizens with the whites. In all the other white churches the colored citizens were seated in the balcony. The Glee Club rendered a number of selections and then Chaplain Brown who had charge of the program delivered the address.

MAY 20 1943

The high points of the address were: "To win this war we need racial co-operation and co-ordination to speed up a vital unity of purpose. This can be secured through the method of tolerance. This was the method Jesus used as he met the opposition of his day. It is necessary for us to remember that we come from different sections of the country where the traditions, mores, and customs are different. It is expedient that all should have respect for these concepts. Do not expect us to adapt ourselves over night to your traditions, mores and customs any more than we would expect you to do this in our section. We have a war to win and this is paramount. Racial prejudice and discrimination have no place in the Four Freedoms for which we are fighting. Without the shedding of blood there can be no sacrifice. These men will shed their blood for your safety and the safety of your children and your children's children. If the shedding of blood will to a large measure guarantee the recognition of and the sacredness of human personality regardless of race, color or creed then we can gladly say with Jesus, not our will but thine be done."

MAY 20 1943

At the conclusion of the address, a male parishioner, having been deeply touched, by the eloquence and appeal of Chaplain Brown, jumped to his feet and shouted, let us join in singing the "Old Time Religion." The minister in his comment said to the colored citizens, you are welcome to worship with us at any time and if any one of the white people do not want to sit by you I will have you to come to the pulpit and sit by me. Would that we had more Americans with the courage and conviction of the Reverend C. Ellis.

MAY 20 1943

Amsterdam Star-News
New York. N. Y.

LIMIT NEGRO ADVANCES TO 1st LIEUTENANT

Jan. 27, 1943

Consternation Thrown In Soldiers' Ranks By Arizona Announcement

FORT HUACHUCA, Ariz.—(ANP)—If the word of the commanding officer of 93rd Division stationed here is authentic. The War Department is determined to choke off advancement for Negro officers to ranks higher than of first lieutenant.

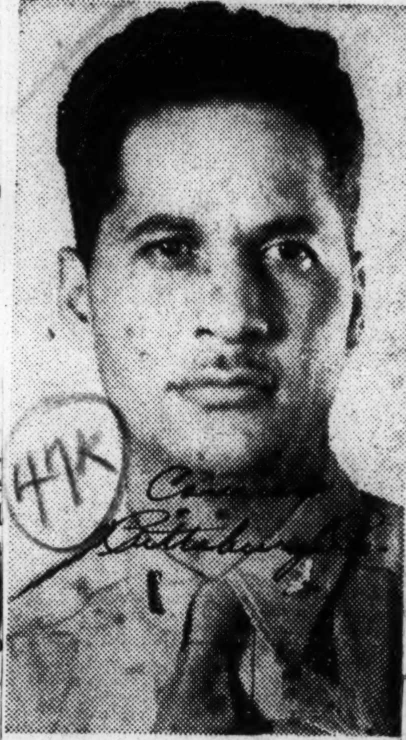
For most part that policy has already obtained here. Outside the Medical Corps with its hospital manned by Negro staff, only one in the army, and where rank had to be given the commanding officers, Negro commissioner officers here have been held down to barest minimum in rank.

Every line officer above the rank of first lieutenant in this division is white, except one colored major and one captain, both special service officers.

Many of these white officers are young chaps just out of school whom older and more experienced colored officers, commissioned and non-commissioned, could give cards and spades and still excell. The order has thrown consternation in the ranks of Negro soldiers here.

Major General Miller, commanding officer of 93rd, called his Negro officers together here Saturday and told them flatly that War Department orders had come limiting promotion of Negro officers to first lieutenants and that in 93rd, no Negro officer would be promoted beyond that rank.

TRANSFERRED



Warrant Officer, (Jr. Grade) Victor A. Nickerson, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Nickerson of Los Angeles, Calif., was recently transferred from Langley Field, Virginia, to Tuskegee Army Air Base at Alabama.

JUN 26 1943

Journal and Guide
Norfolk. Virginia

Tuskegee Chaplain Promoted To Captain

FEB 20 1943

TUSKEGEE, Ala.—It was announced at headquarters here last week that the Tuskegee Army Flying School's base chaplain Lt. Douglas L. T. Robinson has been promoted to captain.

FEB 20 1943

Capt. Robinson is a veteran of World War I. He served overseas with the 372nd Infantry of the 93rd Division as a second lieutenant in Co. K at the age of 20. He attended both Howard University and Wilberforce University before taking up his life work as a minister during which he served as pastor of various churches in New England.

FEB 20 1943

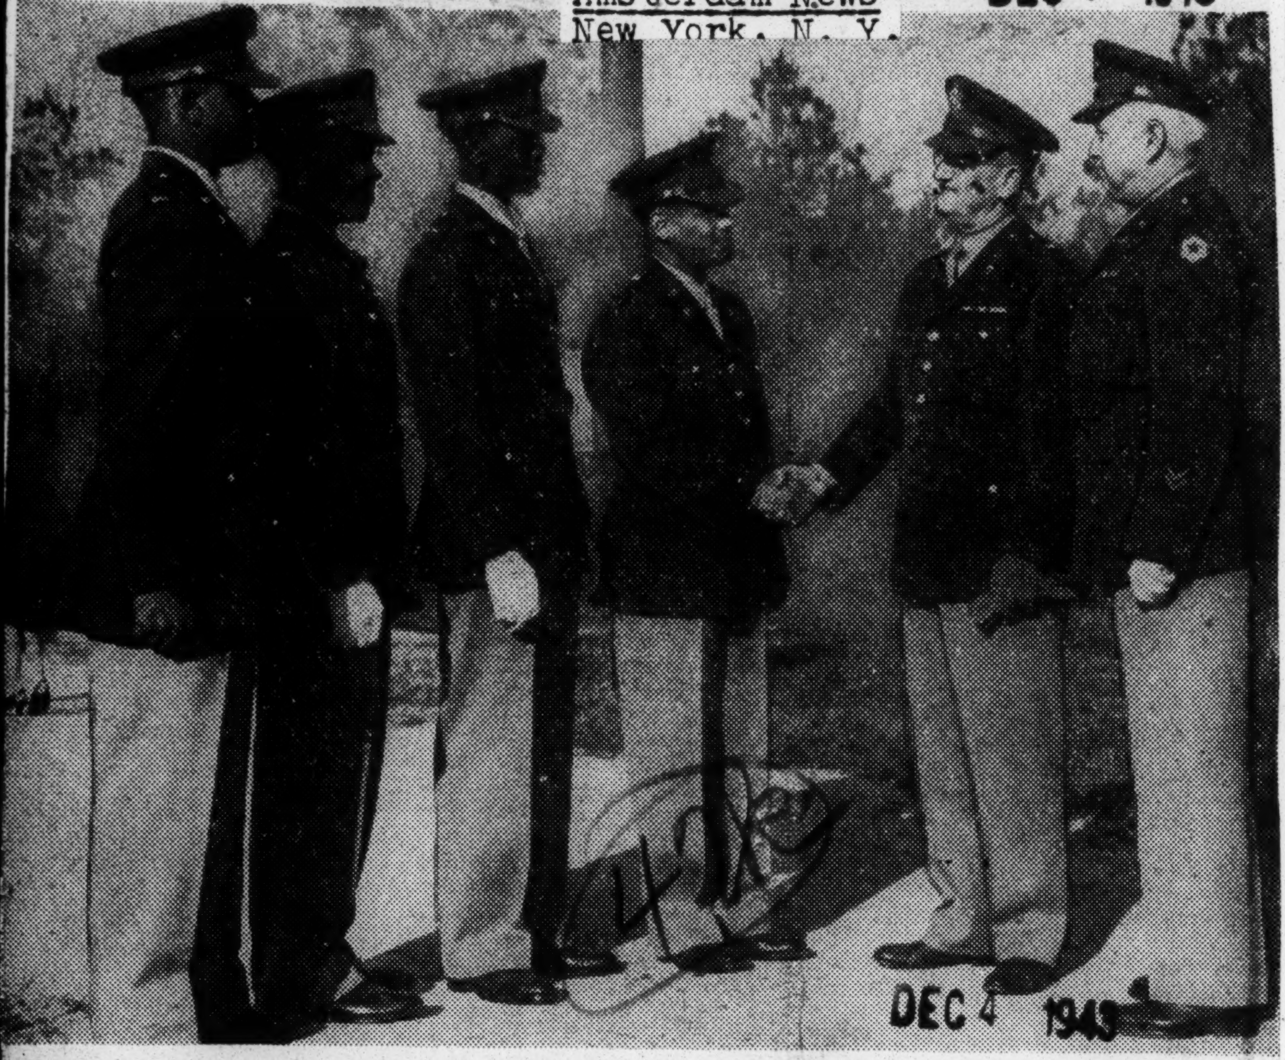
In 1937, he moved to Macon, Ga., where he served as pastor of Steward Chapel AME Church until he returned to service in the Army on April 27, 1942 at Fort McClellan, Ala. He was transferred to the Tuskegee Army Flying School on May 20, 1942.

47k-1943

Newly Commissioned Officers

Amsterdam News
New York, N. Y.

DEC 4 1943



NEWLY COMMISSIONED OFFICERS graduating from The Quartermaster School at Camp Lee, Va., recently, are seen being congratulated by Brigadier General Harold A. Barnes, Deputy Quartermaster General, and Brigadier General George A. Horkan, Commandant of The Quartermaster School. The officers are, right to left: General Horkan, General Barnes, 2nd Lieutenants Harrison G. Smalley, 108-23 172nd St., Jamaica, N. Y.; Harr [illegible] Cross, Jr., 202 Church St., Camden, Arkansas; Timothy D. Weston, 871 Home St., Bronx, N. Y., and William Knox, 5131 Call Place, SE, Washington, D. C. These newly commissioned officers of The Quartermaster Corps left immediately to assume new duties wherever the Quartermaster fights.

Even Most Liberal Resent 'Agitation'

'White Officers Fairer Than They Receive Credit For Being'-Rouzeau

SEP 18 1943

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

By EDGAR T. ROUZEAU

FROM ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, N. A., Sept. 16—Looking back over 16 months of first-hand observation as a war correspondent, I can honestly say that no white officer of my acquaintance has ever objected to exposure of military racial policies which run counter to the expressed policies of our government and the War Department.

I concede at the outset, that one or [illegible] made wholesale concessions in argument but could not bring themselves in practice to change their hereditary ways.

OBJECTIONABLE STORIES

Even those who were friendliest and most liberal, however, objected strenuously to publication of Negro stories which were viciously antagonistic without seldom, if ever being justified by a rational citation of facts.

I can truthfully say that about 95 per cent of the grievances of Negro soldiers can be put in the same class with the everyday grouches of white soldiers. Conditions which are really ugly may not truthfully be characterized as general.

SCOTT SATISFIED

Sometimes, I find a lone Negro officer serving with white officers who feels unhappy about his situation. And sometimes I find a lone Negro officer serving with white officers who is perfectly happy with his lot. One such officer is Second Lt. Cornelius J. Scott, of New York City.

Sometimes there are too many court-martials in some Negro outfits over trifling misdemeanors for which the penalty in other outfits, colored as well as white, would not exceed so-called company punishment or confinement to quarters.

PUNISHMENT TOO SEVERE

Many of these court-martials are accompanied by heavy fines for periods which are unnecessarily long. This, of course, is unjust, but the policy does not prevail in all commands. In one instance that I know about, a Negro chaplain brought about the elimination of these petty court-martials by going through military channels over the heads of individual commanders to higher-ups.

I honestly feel that the Army is becoming increasingly democratic, although the progress may be annoyingly slow for us. I have seen Negro officers, serving under a Southern general, sleeping and eating with white officers. I have seen Negro soldiers messing together many times and enjoying entertainment side by side on government premises.

There are countless Negro officers in North Africa, but so far I have found only three (they were of warrant officer grade) who ate by themselves.

BOYS GET THEIR RIGHTS

I can assure every mother of a Negro soldier that her son is not discriminated against in his basic soldier rights.

In military hospitals, many of which I have visited, I have seen no sign of discriminatioin.

SOME ATTITUDES BAD

There are a few complaints of white physicians and dentists with colored outfits. They allegedly give scant regard to soldier indispositions until a serious case develops. The attitude of one or two of them was highly disappointing to Negro soldiers of the same command. What's more, I heard the same gripe against white doctors from a white enlistee who occupied the same ward in which I was hospitalized for my fifth attack of malaria.

MAKING FRIENDS, RACE'S WAY OUT

I am not so starry-eyed as to believe that the world will, someday, be perfect for everyone. But I believe, from the depths of my soul, that the American Negro will make continued progress only in proportion to the number of friends he is able to redeem in the majority American Race.

This must continue to be true as long as we remain beyond the pale of policy-making for the American organic structure, incapable of exercising control over the great channels for moulding public opinion — channels such as the radio, motion pictures, and universally read literature.

School Reorganized; Colored In Present Class

Courier Pittsburgh Pa.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Sept. 16 — (ANP)—In line with other officer candidate and officer schools having their schedules extended, with the beginning of the present courses of the army chaplain school at Harvard university last Monday, in which over 12 colored chaplains are enrolled, Chaplain (Col.) William D. Cleary, commandant, announced a complete reorganization of the school's program and the extension of the training period. Over 200 colored chaplains attended the school since it was moved to Harvard in August, 1942.

According to orders from the war department, the school term has been extended from four to five weeks with the next graduation scheduled for September 25. Other schedule changes, directed by the department of training headed by Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Ralph C. Deibert includes the extension of the school week from five and a half to six days and lengthening of the daily period scheduled activities from 4 to 5 o'clock.

Four Graduate From Medical Field School

SEP 18 1943

Courier
Pittsburgh. Pa.

CARLISLE BARRACKS, Pa., Sept. 16—Four Negro physicians were graduated here last week from the Army's Medical Field Service School, bringing to a total of 179 the number of Negro medical, dental and veterinary officers to receive diplomas from this national training center which is the Army's only military school for training medical department officers for field duty.

All experienced physicians, the four officers left immediately after graduation for their respective units.

The four officers are Capt. Lorenzo R. Berry, 34, Washington, D. C.; First Lieutenant James E. Hines, Jr., 26, Alexandria, La.; First Lieutenant Arthur H. Wilson, 27, Hartford, Conn., and First Lieutenant Robert E. Lee, 28, Washington, D. C.

ELEVEN COLORED MINISTERS FINISH CHAPLAINS SCHOOL

Globe and Independent
Nashville, Tenn.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., July 29 (ANP)—In the 10th graduating class of the Harvard University Army Chaplain's school the past week were 11 Negro chaplains, bringing the total in the first 19 classes up to 186 Negro chaplains to graduate.

The 11 chaplains are as follows, with home cities and denominations: David C. Blue, Warsaw, N. C., Methodist; Jackson B. Dove, Mayfield, Ky., A. M. E.; James T. Heggie Yakima, Wash., Baptist; George W. Jefferson, Waco, Tex., A. M. E.; Douglas M. Ray, Anniston, Ala, Methodist; Hughes L. T. Robinson, Macon, Ga., A. M. E.; George D. Robinson, Washington, D. C. A. M. E.; Hughes A. Robinson, Gettysburg, Va., Congregational; Paul G. Ross, Barbourville, Ky., A. M. E.; Robert J. Saunders, Los Angeles, Baptist; Otis J. Wynne North Fork, Va. Baptist.

AUG 5 1943

Command Assignment Remains 'Unsolved'

Amsterdam News
New York, N. Y.

OCT 16 1943

WASHINGTON, (Special) — Speculation was rife here this week over the prospects of Lt. Col. Benjamin O. Davis being elevated to the rank of full colonel and put in command of the 332 Fighter Group at Selfridge Field, Mich. Shortly after his return from North Africa where he commanded the 99th Fighter Squadron. Colonel Davis announced that his new assignment was to the Michigan post. He was asked at the time if he would be promoted. His reply was that the table of organization called for a full colonel to head a group, which in the Air Corps is made up of three squadrons. The colonel didn't say at the time what his position would be at Selfridge Field

Named Commander

Up to the time it was announced that Davis had taken up his duties at the field, it was believed he would be put in command. In fact initial releases sent out by the War Department referred to him as being in command, but these were subsequently corrected to list him as the executive officer.

Meanwhile, the movement continues to have Colonel Davis' father, Brigadier General B. O. Davis, advanced to the rank of major general and assigned to command the 93rd Division, now stationed at Fort Huachuca, Ariz.

SPECIAL TRAINEE

SEP 18 1943

Courier Pittsburgh Pa

Pausing at Tuskegee institute for a few hours with his family, Capt. Thomas M. Campbell, M. C., 705th Tank Destroyer Battalion, [illegible] Hood, Texas, was en route [illegible] Edgewood Arsenal when this photo was snapped to take special training in chemical warfare. He was recently promoted to the rank of captain.

SEP 18 1943

Journal and Guide

Advocates Women Army Chaplains

Norfolk, Virginia

BROOKLYN, N. Y. — Mrs. Henrietta M. Davis, of St. Louis, Mo., of the AME Zion Home and Foreign Missionary Society, in addressing the quadrennial convention of the organization here recently, advocated uniformed women chaplains for the women's auxiliaries of the armed forces.

"Even if the world is still ruled by men, give women a chance to serve as chaplains to all female units," she pleaded.

AUG 21 1943

CAMP LEE OCS GRADUATES

Courier

Pittsburgh, Pa.

More and more race soldiers are taking advantage of officers' candidate training and coming through with flying colors. Among the recent graduates from Camp Lee, Virginia, were (top row going down) left to right: Lieut. Samuel O'Tanner Cohen, Miami, Fla.; Lieut. James M. Cobb, Haverford, Pa.; Lieut. [illegible]ck S. Harvey, West Philadelphia, Pa.; Lieut. LaFayette Parker, Richlands, N. C., and Lieut. Eddie Diamond, Jacksonville, Fla.

SEP 18 1943

SETS RECORD

Courier

Pittsburgh, Pa.

Mark Edmond Rivers, Jr., 21-year-old New Yorker, is the first colored youth in history to achieve the rank of corporal at West Point Military academy. Son of Dr. and Mrs. Mark Rivers and nephew of Judge Francis Rivers, the young West Pointer prefers mathematics [illegible] other subjects. He entered the academy in [illegible], 1942.

DEC 4 1943

FIVE ATLANTANS JOIN ARMY MEDICAL STAFF

Daily World

Atlanta, Ga.

AUG 14 1943

-- CARLISLE BARRACKS, Pa. — (SNS) — Twenty-three physicians have been graduated from the Army's Medical Field Service School, Carlisle Barracks, in the largest class of colored officers ever to receive diplomas from this Army post. This brings to a total of one hundred and sixty-seven, the number of Negro medical, dental and veterinary officers to receive diplomas from this national training center, the only military school for training Medical Department officers for field duty.

In addition, thirty-one Negroes had been commissioned as second lieutenants, following their gradution from the Medical Administrative Corps Officer Candidate School which had functioned at this post until five months ago. They, with enlisted men who completed a Sanitary Technicians Course, increased to 209, the total number of Negro graduates of the Medical Field Service School.

The twenty-three Negro officers, all of them first lieutenants, were part of the thirty-second Officers' Class graduated at exercises in Tugo Hall after completing six weeks of rigorous training for duty as medical officers with troops in combat.

All experiences physicians, the twenty-three Negro officers left immediately after the graduation for their respective units. The training course in medical field work at this school prepared them to be efficient Medical Department officers, capable of carrying on their professional work under war conditions.

AUG 14 1943

The twenty-three officers are:

1st Lt. William L. Anderson, 87 W. 16th St., Bayonne, N. J.; 1st Lt. George C. Corbin, 34 William St., Roxbury, Mass.; 1st Lt. Earland Cyrus, 25 W. 127th St., New York City; 1st Lt. Albert M. Davis, 969 Fair St., S. W., Atlanta, Ga.; 1st Lt. Eugene C. Dempsey, 156 Sayswar St., Mullins, S. C.; 1st Lt. Washington E. Garner, 621 W. 2nd St., Paris, Ky.; ~~1st Lt.~~ John T. Gill, Jr., 956 Palmetto Avenue, S. W., Atlanta, Ga.; 1st Lt. Clarke [illegible] Smith, Orange, N. [illegible]; 1st Lt. [illegible] Gleason, 803 Greensferry Avenue, S. W., Atlanta, Ga.; 1st Lt. Donarell R. Green, 1193 Hunter Rd., Atlanta, Ga.; 1st Lt. Clarence D. Hinton, 5318 S. Parkway, Chicago, Ill.; 1st Lt. Leonidas F. Livisay, 456 W. 148th St., New York City; 1st Lt. James L. Lowry, Jr., 1500 4th St., Gulfport, Miss.; 1st Lt. Waldense C. Nixon, Jr., 621 S. Kendrick Ave., Orlando, Fla.; 1st Lt. Richard L. Perkins, Wilmat, [illegible]; 1st Lt. Samuel [illegible] Rodgers, [illegible] Hooper Avenue, Ann[illegible], Ala.; 1st Lt. Henry F. Shorter, 1329 Mozley Drive, Atlanta, Ga.; 1st Lt. Hallye B. Taylor, Jr., 1715 First St., N. W., Washington, D. C.; 1st Lt. George W. Thompson, 2100 West Eighth St., Texarkana, Texas; 1st Lt. Andre R. Tweed, 970 Prospect Avenue, New York City; 1st Lt. Herbert H. Whigham, 192 Amherst St., East Orange, N. J.; 1st Lt. George M. Sealey, Jr., 629 Third Avenue, Columbus, Ga.; 1st Lt. Cecil C. Gloster, 1 Vernon Place, Brooklyn, N. Y.

AUG 14 1943

Lieutenants Corbin, Cyrus, Davis, Taylor, Gill, Hinton, L[illegible], Roggers, Smith, Tweed and Sealy received their M. D. degrees from Howard Medical School, while Lts. Dempsey, Garner, Lowry, Perkins, Thompson, Anderson, Whigham, Shorter, Gleason and Green graduated from Meharry Medical Col-Taylor, Gill, Hinton, Livisay, Rodlege. Lieutenant Gloster reecived his M. D. degree from New York University.

AUG 14 1943

47k-1943

REV. WILLIAMS OF "ICE SHOWS" FAME, BECAME A CHAPLAIN JUST THE SAME, NOW THE NEWS SEEMS BAD, HIS FRIENDS ARE BLUE, AND ARE HOPING, PRAYING, IT IS NOT TRUE.

The Union
Cincinnati, Ohio
2 1943

Rev. Arthur D. Williams, who was pastor of Mt. Zion M. E. Church here, is said to be the one who became Chaplain in the Army and is now under fire, for violation of military regulations. If it is the same Williams he was famous while here for giving "Ice Shows" and preaching of the heat of hell.

The following article is from the Afro-American of Baltimore, "The Carl Murphy Column":

1943

CHAPLAIN ARTHUR D. WILLIAMS OF A S. W. PACIFIC COAST ARTILLERY OUTFIT, LIKE CHAPLAIN FULLER, WILL UNDERGO A TRIAL TO DETERMINE WHETHER HE IS TO BE RECLASSIFIED.

THE TWO MEN WERE NOT BUDDIES ALTHOUGH THEY SERVED IN THE SAME OUTFIT. WILLIAMS WASN'T PARTICULARLY HELPFUL [illegible] THE FU[illegible] CASE. NOW HE IS IN THE SAME MESS.

SERIOUS CHARGE AGAINST CHAPLAIN WILLIAMS IS VIOLATION OF ARMY REGULATIONS BY HAVING IN HIS POSSESSION NEARLY $4,000. THE ARMY HAS RULES AGAINST CHAPLAINS' HOLDING SOLDIERS' FUNDS."

Afro-American
Baltimore, Maryla

7 More Medics Finish Army Course at Carlisle

OCT 2

CARLISLE BARRACKS, Pa.—Seven physicians were graduated Thursday from the Army's Medical Field Service School here, making a total of 186 colored medical, dental and veterinary officers to receive diplomas from this center after completing six weeks' training fo[illegible]y with troops in combat.

They are:

Capt. Lawrence W. Greene, Annapolis, Md.; First Lieuts. Lloyd T. Barnes, Norristown, Pa;. Richard H. Hunt, 1607 W. Mulberry Street, Baltimore; William H. Kearney, Bridgeport, Conn.; John C. Starling, Charlestown, W.Va.; Huerta C. Neals, Jacksonville, Fla., and Philip C. Williams, Chicago.

2 Are Howard U. Grads

Captain Greene and Lieutenant Kearney received their M.D. degrees from Howard U[illegible]sity and Lieutenants Hunt and Starling are graduates of Meharry Medical School.

Lieutenant Barnes is a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania, Lieutenant Neals graduated from Harvard Medical School and Lieutenant Williams from the University of Illinois.

Two Are Elevated To Rank Of Major At Tuskegee Field

AUG 30 1943

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

TUSKEGEE ARMY AIR FIELD — (SNS) — Captain Fleetwood M. McCoy, formerly an outstanding member of the legal profession in Chicago, removed the silver captain's bars from his collar and pinned on the gold leaf of a major as result of a recent promotion at the Tuskegee Air Field.

As a result of the recent announcement by the War Department, Captain George W. Webb, provost and fire marshal at the Tuskegee Army Air Field, was promoted to the rank of major.

Major Webb, a graduate of Dunbar High School, received his B. S degree at Howard University, Class of 1928. Upon being awarded his degree, he was commissioned second lieutenant in the Reserve, having completed the ROTC course at Howard.

Prior to entering his tour of active duty in the present war, the new Tuskegee Major, who is a native Washingtonia, served as company commander in the CCC at Gettysburg, Pa., for five years. Before that time, he was boys' supervisor at the Industrial Home School of Blue Plains, D. C.

The Tuskegee provost marshal General School, Ft. Custer, Mich. The course, of six weeks duration, lasted from July 3 until August 13th

ARDENT SPORTS FAN

An aedent sports fan, Maj. Webb played on Howard University's baseball and basketball teams between 1923 and 1928. He was also captain of the Phi Beta Sigma fraternity basketball team. Among his athletic achievements was the championship servicemen's basketball team which he coached at Tuskegee last winter.

AUG 30 1943

The 38-year-old major is married and the father of three daughters and one son. His family lives at Gettysburg, Pa.

Major McCoy serves as post trial judge advocate at Tuskegee, and since reporting to this position in January, 1942, he had the pleasure of seeing the delinquency rate among enlisted men reduced to the point where it compares favorably with that of any air base in the country.

The new major, a native of Richmond, Va., while still a young man, left home to acquire an education and make his way in the world, and like many other ambitious young men he decided to get his start in New York City. While in New York, young McCoy attended City College, Columbia University and the New York Law School. It is of interest to note that at the same time the Tuskegee trial judge advocate was attending college and law school, he was also carrying a full time schedule as clerg in the Post Office Department in New York .

LEGAL DEGREE IN 1927

Receiving his legal degree in 1927 Attorney McCoy began practice in Chicago, where he became one of the foremost men in his profession in the Mid-west. For fourteen years the unassuming though thoroughly competent lawyer worked at his profession until called to active duty with the 184th Field Artillery at Ft. Custer, Mich.

a,s -v

AUG 30 1943

Major McCoy has a[illegible]pressive military background dating back to the last war when he served as a cabin steward in the United States Navy for fourteen months during the years of 1917-18. His service also includes three years in the New York National Guard and several years with the National Guard of Illinois. While serving in the latter, he received his commission on May 19, 1936 and remained on an inactive status until the present war when he was called to active duty in January, 1941.

AUG 30 1943

Major McCoy, whose home address is 10844 Glenroy Avenue, Chicago, is 46 years old, married and has one son, Fleetwood Jr., who is a Quartermaster 2nd Class in the Navy.

Grid Star Gets Wings

Afro-American
Baltimore, Maryland

47k

SEP 11 1943

Ex-Northwestern grid star Bernard Jefferson became a full-fledged single engine fighter pilot at the Tuskegee Army Air Field last Monday, when he was awarded his wings and commission at the graduation exercises. Lt. Jefferson was one of the greatest halfbacks to perform in the Big Ten while playing for Northwestern between 1936-'38

SEP 11 1943

Guardian
Boston. Mass.

MORE DOCTORS NEEDED

SEP 11 1943

The United States armed forces are in need of 6,000 more doctors. In explanation of the demand for more doctors the American Medical Journal says: "As the war continues and intensifies, new needs for the services of the medical profession become apparent. An army in motion and one engaged in the kind of aggressive combat that now concerns our armed forces needs physicians in even greater numbers than have heretofore been demanded. Many thousands of interned aliens and prisoners are now the burden of the United States and must be given medical care."

47k

SEP 11 1943

Despite the pressing need for more doctors for the Army, Navy and Air Corps, the old policy of segregation and color discrimination remains in force. It seems that the Government would rather let men die than enlist the services of colored physicians. The Navy is known to have rejected medical applicants solely on the ground of color. The attitude of the Government toward colored medical men is difficult to defend in view of the widely known fact that in civilian life many colored physicians have a large percentage of white patients.

Patriotic colored men continue to join the army medical force although they are well aware of the Government's pattern of segregation. This week four graduated from the Army's Medical Field Service School at Carlisle Barracks, Pennsylvania, thus bringing to a total of 179 the number of colored medical, dental and veterinary officers to receive diplomas from this training center which is the Army's only military school for training medical department officers for field duty. Thirty-one others have been commissioned as Second Lieutenants after graduating from the Medical Administrative Corps Officer Candidate School which functioned at Carlisle Barracks until last spring. With the enlisted men who completed a Sanitary Technicians course, they increased to 221 the total number of colored graduates of the Medical Field Service School.

---

13 Chaplains Complete Harvard Univ. Courses

Baltimore, Maryland
OCT 2 1943
Afro-American

47k

CAMBRIDGE, Mass.—Thirteen colored chaplain were included in the group of 375 students of the seventeenth class which was graduated after six weeks from the Army Chaplain School last week at Harvard University.

It was the thirteenth graduation since the school has been located at Harvard, where it moved in August, 1942, from Fort Benjamin Harrison, Indiana. During this period approximately 215 colored chaplains have been graduated.

The subjects taught included: practical duties of the chaplain, army administration, army organization, military customs and courtesies, chemical defens[illegible]ave registration, [illegible]ale, counseling, military discipline and law.

OCT 2 1943

List of Graduates

The thirteen graduates, most of whom left immediately on assignment, included: 5 Methodists, 5 Baptists, 2 Presbyterians and 1 Congregationalist. They are:

Theodore R. Albert, New Orleans, La., Methodist; Robert S. Anderson, Richmond, Va., Baptist; Joseph R. Cole, Water Valley, Miss., AME; Booker T. Davis, Bristol, Tenn., Presbyterian; Carranza A. Holliday, Marshall, Texas, Baptist; Matthew A. Lowe, Kokomo, Ind., AME; Philip R. M[illegible]dy, Monroe, N.C., AMEZ.

OCT 2 1943

Ernest N. Mattison, Mount Holly, N.C., Methodist; Joseph D. Pruden, Norfolk, Va., Baptist; Spencer L. Scott, Jr., Portsmouth, Va., Baptist; James H. Stokes, Harrisburg, N.C., Presbyterian; Albert J. Tibbs, East Orange, N.J., Baptist; Arthur Washington, Lake Charles, La., Congregational. The next session of the new five-week chaplain school will begin on Monday, October 4.

Promoted to Lieut. Colonel

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md

47k

NOV 6 1943

Major George McDonald

MAJOR GEORGE McDONALD, chief of medical service at the station hospital, Tuskegee Army Flying School, Tuskegee, Ala., whose promotion to lieutenant colonel was announced by the War Department this week. Lieut. Col. McDonald, a former Baltimore health officer has been on duty with the U.S. Army Medical Corps at Tuskegee since February, 1942. He was formerly stationed at Camp Livingston, La. At Tuskegee he is venereal disease control officer. The new lieutenant colonel is a graduate of Virginia Union University and Howard University Medical School. He was commissioned a lieutenant in February, 1931, became a captain four years later and was made major in 1941. His wife, Mrs. Xavier F. McDonald, resides at 844 N. Carey Street, and is a Baltimore teacher.

47K-1943

400 CHAPLAINS GRADUATE FROM HARVARD; 16 ARE NEGROES

APR 17 1943

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., April 15—Approximately 400 student chaplains were graduated from the Harvard Chaplain's school here April 3, with the seventh graduating class. Chaplain (Colonel) William D. Cleary, commandant of the school, addressed the graduates and delivered the diplomas. After a review on the historic Cambridge Common, the student body, including sixteen Negro chaplains (first lieutenants and captains) marched to the Sanders theatre for the remainder of the ceremony.

STIFF COURSE

The Army chaplains had completed a rigorous four-week program, which prepared them for their varied duties with the troops. All the men who qualify for admission in the Chaplain's Corps, which is the only completely volunteer group connected with the armed forces, must have obtained a college degree, advanced ministerial training at a college, and served as a pastor. For Negro chaplains, however, certain waivers have been allowed because of the great demand for them. It is estimated that over 235 Negro chaplains will be needed by 1944. Thus it can be seen that the Army policy for commissioning chaplains is far different from the Navy, which has no Negro chaplains so far. Each of the graduating classes at the Harvard Chaplain's school has averaged ten Negro chaplains.

SILVER ANNIVERSARY

The group of 421 student chaplains in the March 3, 1943, class marked the 25th anniversary of the Chaplain's school, which was begun in February, 1918. Originally started as a school for chaplain candidates on February 9, 1918, at Fort Monroe, Va., it was moved two months later to Camp Taylor, Kentucky, where it functioned until the end of World War I.

In 1929 it was re-activated as a school for occasional chaplains at Camp Grant, Illinois, from where it was transferred to Fort Knox, Kentucky, then to Fort Wayne, Michigan, and finally, in 1934, to Fort Leavenworth, Kansas. On February 2, 1942, within two months of America's entry into World War II, the Chaplain school was re-activated at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Indiana, as a school for commissioned chaplains of the Army. Its removal to Harvard university, Cambridge, Mass., took place early in August, 1942, and the first classes were held on August 10 of that year.

SPECIALLY HOUSED

The eighth class commenced on Wednesday, April 7, 1943. The chaplains are housed in Conant and Perkins Halls, formerly dormitories for Harvard university graduate students.

MORE SERVICE SCHOOLS AT HARVARD

Eight additional service schools have been scheduled to open at Harvard by July, swelling the total number of service schools at the university to well over twenty and the number of men in these schools to well over 6,000. The new schools will probably include one more Navy group and seven additional military detachments. One Negro (Emmett J. Rice, of New York City and City college; Lt. Rice is now stationed with the Tuskegee Flying school.) has graduated from the famed Harvard Air Corps Statistical school, which has as a prerequisite high achievement at the Air Corps Administrative Officer Candidate school, at Miami Beach, Fla. Negro college students, who have left Harvard and other schools may be among those fortunate in being selected to return to Harvard for additional training.

The Harvard Commencement ceremonies are scheduled for May 27 with members of the armed forces at Harvard participating. President James B. Conant will be the principal speaker at the military ceremonies, much on the Oxford style.

NEGRO STUDENTS IN HARVARD

Of the original Negro members of the Class of 1943, which will graduate on May 27, John Daniel Cotman Jr., of Cambridge, Mass., brilliant chemistry student, is the only one left. Other members of the class of 1943 are: Ray W. Guild II, of Cambridge, Mass., brilliant romance language student and varsity football player, now private at the 366th Infantry, Fort Devens, Massachusetts, as of March 1943; Drue King Jr., a bio-chemistry major, of Tuskegee, Ala., and Boston, Mass., private with the medical detachment of a quartermaster unit in California, as of October, 1942, and Rev. Marcus G. James, sociology major of Jamaica, B.W.I., who accelerated his program and graduated in August, 1942, and is now the assistant rector at a New York Episcopal church.

As to other Harvard college students the following is pertinent. Class of 1946, George Prescott Guild and Edward Randall of Cambridge, Mass., are pre-medical majors. Class of 1945: John Hamilton Hewitt, a pre-medical student of New York City; Samuel A. Stuart, a pre-medical student of Fort Wayne, Indiana, and Samuel Perry, a language major, of Boston, Mass., now a private in an air base unit in Ohio, as of February, 1943. Class of 1944: Montgomery Gregory, a chemical major of Atlantic City, N. J.; Alexander Jackson III, a sociology major of Chicago, Ill.; Hallowell Bowser, English major of Brooklyn, N. Y., now a private in the 366th Infantry, Fort Devens, Massachusetts, as of March, 1943; William Ellis, a science major of Boston, Mass., now a private in the 372nd Infantry, New York City, as of February, 1943; William Kydd, a physics major of New Bedford, Mass., now a private with a quartermaster unit in Texas, as of October, 1942. Class of 1942: Lucien V. Alexis, gradauted in June, 1942, of New Orleans, La., is now a student in the Harvard Business school, and will be a private as of June, 1943; Blair T. Hunt Jr., of Boston, Mass., and Memphis, Tenn., is a first year student in the Howard Medical school, Washington, D. C., and a lieutenant in the Army Medical Corps Reserve (until July 1 when all medical reservists in school revert to seventh grade soldiers—privates—and then receive commissions as officers upon entrance into the service). Class of 1941: Thomas Watkins Jr. of Charlotte, N. C., a second year student at the University of Pennsylvania Dental school. Received a commission in the Dental Corps upon graduation.

FEW REMARKS

Thus it can be noted that of the present classes now in Harvard college, 1943-1946, there are seven men left out of the original fourteen. It is also interesting to note that none of the seven men in the armed services (Army) went in with commissions or into special training leading to the same, as many of their classmates have. They are all privates hoping for a chance at officer candidate schools or reurning to colleges for additional training. At the latter their chances are much better than at the former, since all officer candidate school quotas have been reduced. The other students still in college, either pre-medical or scientific students, hope to serve their country as additions to the greatly undertsaffed medical and dental corps, where they will be officers, or as much needed scientists or technicians in indusrial plants.

The ranks of the students in the many graduate schools have been just as completely decimated by the draft, leaving only two in the law school, seven in the Graduate School of Arts and Sciences (two of whom are now in the Signal Corps' civilian program), and two in the business school. The medical school has two students (one an ensign in the Naval Medical Corps Reserve, the only Negro officer in the Navy), and the Divinity school has two students. Thus making a total of twenty students for 1943 as compared to 33 in 1942.

47k-1943

VISITS CAMP ATTERBURY

Chicago Defender
Chicago, Illinois

47k

DING
CER
CER
S-1
2
3
4

FEB 6 1943

Brigadier General Benjamin O. Davis Sr. (left) meets the 365th Combat Team Commander, Colonel Walter E. Elliott. General Davis, the highest ranking Negro officer in the United States Army, inspected the 365th Combat Team at Camp Atterbury, Ind., observing their training and work. After completing his inspection, the general said "The 365th Band amazes me by his marvelous progress in lieu of the fact that they have been organized such a short time. It pleases me to meet such a large number of promising young officers who, with attention to duty, no doubt will handle any task assigned to them. The appearance of the entire Combat Team is most gratifying."

MacArthur Gives Command Of New Unit To Race Officer

Chicago Illinois Defender

MAY 22 1943

47k

SOMEWHERE IN NEW GUINEA (ANP)—Setting up of an all-colored unit by General Douglas MacArthur, with 1st Lt. Edward H. Lowe, of Muskogee, Okla., in command, has established a new precedent in the South Pacific area.

"This unit is an independent quartermaster railhead company, charged with the responsibility of handling the vitally important subsistence supplies.

Lt. Lowe has been under Gen. MacArthur's command since November, 1941. In that period he has established an enviable record. Coming to the Southwest Pacific area as a second lieutenant, he was first attached to an all-white signal corps unit at Port Darwin, Australia, acting in the capacity of supply officer.

Later he was transferred to the special service division of the army, where he did remarkable work. He was then promoted to first lieutenant.

MAY 22 1943

Although the outfit he has been assigned to is comparatively a small unit, it still marks advancement for Negro officers in this theatre. Then, too, until the latter part of last year there were only two Negro line officers (both infantry) besides chaplains over here.

Two terms of officer's candidate schools have been held in this area. The first, which was an experimental school, graduated two out of four Negroes in attendance.

New Guinea Gets Its First Colored Unit Commander

Afro-American

Baltimore, Md.

By SCOOP JONES

JUN 12 1943

47k

SOMEWHERE IN NEW GUINEA—(ANP) — The recent assignment of 1st Lieut. Edmund H. Lowe, commanding officer of a quartermaster railhead company, which "established" the organization as an all-colored outfit, the first in this area, may mean the assignment of more colored officers to smaller units.

Such units are being used mainly to maintain supply depots. The eventual assignment of colored commanders to larger organizations might follow.

If such a policy should be adopted, it would undoubtedly lead to an increase in the quota of colored soldiers that enter officer candidate schools over here.

Tough But Welcome

From a series of interviews it was ascertained that Lieut. Loew was wholeheartedly and jubilantly received by his organization, despite the fact that, within a few hours after assuming command, many changes took place in the set-up of the outfit.

One soldier told of how men "fell into a pay formation with mixed uniforms. They were ordered to "fall out" and return in a more soldierly fashion and all uniformly attired.

JUN 12 1943

This and numerous other little incidents took place under the new C.O.'s orders for absolute military procedure and discipline, but as a whole the soldiers seem very pleased and proud of having a colored officer in command. Another remarked: "He's tough, but a square shooter."

Outfit Has Competent Men

Afro-American

First sergeant of the outfit is Kenneth C. McNeil, former New York salesman. He is well supported by competent non-commissioned officers, among whom are Staff Sgt. Edwin W. Stokes, Ubana, O., and Ernest V. Gregware, Chicago; and Sgt. A. T. Black, Atlantic City, N.J.

JUN 12 1943

Among others in the company are T. 3rd Richard Scott, Chicago; Cpl. Robert G. Branson, Jersey City, N.J.; T. 5th Edward M. Lewis, Indianapolis; Pvts. Albrecht Ingram, Detroit; John A. Smith, Newark; James M. Richardson, New York City; Irvin Gray, Brooklyn; Alton Reed, Little Rock, and Ernest C. Toomer. Atlanta.

Lt. Colonel B.O. Davis Honored At Reception

Tribune Washington, D.C.

47k

SELFRIDGE FIELD, Mich.—Lieutenant Colonel Benjamin O. David, Jr., the first colored officer ever to command an air force combat unit, was honored at a reception which was held in the Post Officer's Club here, last Tuesday.

Colonel Davis, former commander of the 99th Fighter Squadron now in Italy, has assumed command of the 332nd Fighter Group stationed here the War Department announced.

He is a graduate of the United States Military Academy at West Point.

Among high ranking Army officers at the reception were Brigadier General Benjamin O. Davis, father of the new group commander; and Major J. P. Ramsey, of Philadelphia, flight surgeon, who was chairman of the program committee.

Lt. Col. Queen Made Full Colonel in 366th

Regiment's Acting Commander

Become Corporal 30 Years Ago

FORT DEVENS, Mass.—Lieut. Col. Howard D. Queen, since January 30 acting commanding officer of the 366th Infantry Regiment here, was promoted to full colonelcy Saturday.

JUL 31 1943

The promotion came thirty years to the day after he was made a corporal while stationed with the Tenth Cavalry in Winchester, Va., in 1913.

Lieut. Col. Queen assumed command of the 366th in January when Col. Joseph S. Leonard, white, was transferred to Washington. He had served previously as executive officer since March, 1942.

JUL 31 1943

Made Captain at 22

The new colonel is a native of Washington and is 48 years old. He enlisted in the D.C. National Guard in 1910, served in the Cavalry from 1911 to 1917, attaining the rank of captain during World War I, at the age of 22.

He was made major in 1929 and promoted to lieutenant colonel in 1935, after graduation from the U.S. Command and General Staff Extension School.

Lieut. Col. Queen is also a graduate of the First Corps School at Gondrecourt, France, where he finished in 1918, and the Fort Benning (Ga.) Infantry School, which he finished in 1941.

In 5 Major Battles

The colonel has participated in the following battles:

El Carrozal, Mexico, June 21, 1916; Punitive Expedition into Mexico with the Tenth Cavalry, March, 1916, to April, 1917;

Vosges Sector (France) with the 368th Infantry; Meuse-Argonne Offensive and the Metz Sector in France, 1918 to 1919.

Army in His System

Asked to what he attributed his rise in the army, Lieut. Col. Queen said, "It is in my system." He comes from three generations of sailors and soldiers.

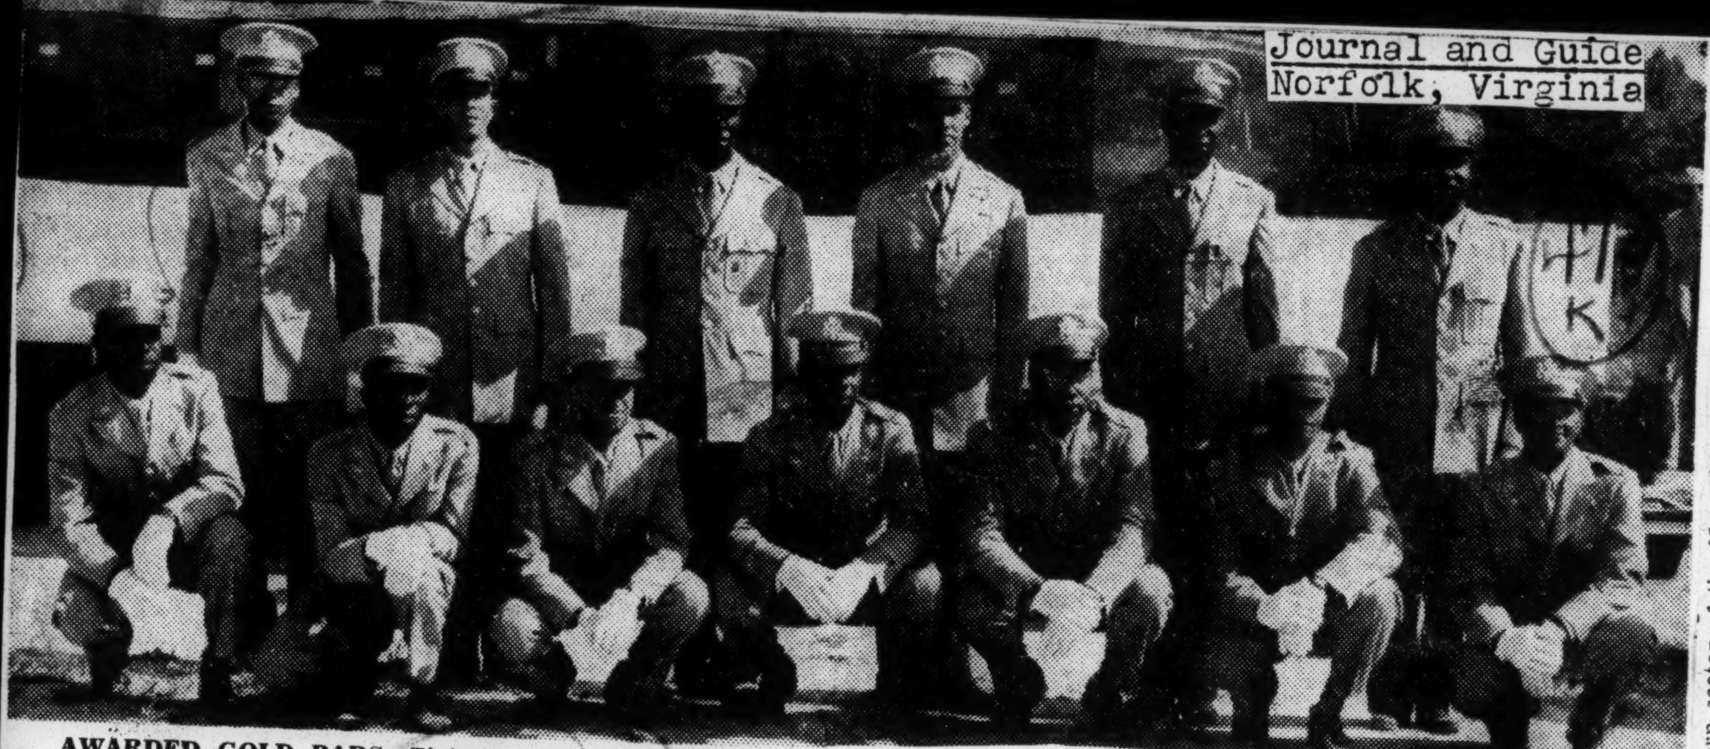
JUL 31 1943

His great-grandfather participated in the battle of Boston Common, a grandfather and three uncles fought with the Union Army during the Civil War, and his father served fifteen years in the Twenty-fourth Infantry and the Tenth Cavalry.

A cousin lost his life aboard the USS Maine in Havana Harbor, prior to the Spanish-American War, and a brother, Richard R. Queen, served as lieutenant with the 368th Infantry in the Argonne Offensive.

LIEUTENANT COLONEL HOWARD D. QUEEN

Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Virginia



47K

AWARDED GOLD BARS—Pictured above immediately after graduating from the Officer Candidate School, Camp Lee, Va., are [illegible] second lieutenants who hail from many sections of the country. Left to right, front row: Lts. Alvin W. Scott, Boston, Mass.; Shular A. Barksdale, Omaha, Neb.; Isaac R. Bryant, Lawnside, N. J.; Louis T. Evans, Richmond, Va.; James P. Cornett, Indianapolis, Ind.; Harrison P. Rochon, Ryne, La.; James R. Dorry, Bryn Mawr, Pa. Back row: Walter R. Johnson, Anderson, S. C.; John R. Powell, Cincinnati, Ohio; Alfred C. Darby, Los Angeles, Calif.; Roger A. Clay, Baxter Spring, Kan.; Owen H. Cameron, Alexander, Va., and Douglas L. Bascome.

JUL 10 1943

Alcan Highway Chaplain Back In D.C.

Chicago Defender

Tells Of Work In Wilds Of Frozen North

Chicago, Illinois

WASHINGTON.—Capt. Edward G. Carroll, popular chaplain of one of the Negro regiments of the U. S. Army Engineer corps, who since last May has been with his troops in the frozen wastes of the Yukon and Alaska, during construction of the now famous, 1,800 mile Alcan highway, has returned to Washington to enjoy his first leave of absence with his wife and his four-year-old son.

It's a far cry from the torrid temperature of tropical India, where Capt. Carroll was in 1935, to the long and frigid nights of the Arctic, but the chaplain "took it in stride." Speaking of the colored soldiers assigned to construction of the Alcan highway, and of his efforts to relieve the monotony and loneliness of the men in the barren wastes of the far North, Chaplain Carroll said:

"My idea was to develop recreational programs and show the men how to be good in their every day life, not just preach a lot of sermons and hold church services on Sunday.

"When I first arrived, there was little to work with. Regimental headquarters had a recreation hall but no furniture, no recreation facilities and worst of all, no writing paper. The men had to use birchbark for letter paper. I got things as well as I could from people and organizations I knew about and that knew me back home.

"It takes about one month to receive 2nd class mail up there and so deliveries were slow and far between. When I arrived I had one film with me, a religious film called the "Power of God," which had been lent to me by the Lutheran Missouri Synod. With this film I travelled over 800 miles, showing it sometimes twice a day. It was the first movie to be seen up there and in the case of one Canadian civilian, it was the first movie he'd ever seen.

"Now the entertainment problem is much improved. Special Services has sent out their recreation kits of games, amateur theatrical equipment, records, and short wave radio programs. The recreation hall—a double tent—now has furniture and writing facilities and a library of 500 volumes collected by me. And so with games to keep the men occupied when they have leisure time, and with more records and movies the long winter nights will pass."

The chaplain also organized a 20 piece band from which a smaller swing band has been formed. He bought a sound system with two speakers which he hung up in the trees at camp clearings on his tours and with his generator and a phonograph, he gave camp concerts. At first he had only swing records but soon he got recordings of one opera—"Carmen," besides other classical pieces. He read the story of the opera to the men, explained it and then played the score. It was extremely popular.

FEB 6 1943

BACK FROM FAR NORTH

FEB 6 1943

CAPTAIN EDWARD G. CARROLL

Chaplain for Negro troops in Alaska, who has just returned from a long stay in the Far North ministering to the troops building the Alcan highway.

Chaplain Carroll make a regular circuit with six stops and it took him about one week to complete the rounds. He and his assistant traveled in a half--ton pick up trailer truck which carried all his recreational and religious equipment besides his musical support—"The Brass Quintet." He usually arrived during duty hours and set up his equipment for the evening's entertainment. If it was a week-day, he held a brief religious service, after which he brought news from other parts of the regiment and interpreted news from the outside world for the eager men. On Sunday, he brought out his Brass Quintet whose singing and playing augmented the music from the field organ and he held church services in the thick of the woods. Usually the entire personnel attended

At the present time his assistant, Cpl. Womack, from Americus, Ga., a graduate of Morris Brown college, Atlanta, Ga., is pinch hitting for Chaplain Carroll until his return.

The chaplain has two specially prized possessions, one is a piece of the ceremonial ribbon which was cut by representatives of the U.S and Canada at the opening ceremonies of the Alcan highway.

The others is a letter of commendation, for the chaplain's weekly sermonettes currently printed in the camp paper, and which circulate more rapidly than can the chaplain himself.

FEB 6 1943

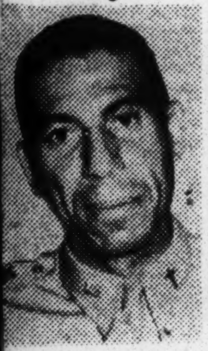
The letter was written by the commanding officer of the Southern sector of the Northwest service command and in it the officer said "Therein is expressed that which I would like to say to all the troops in the sector every day. If all the officers and soldiers had the spirit of Chaplain Carroll, nothing could stop us."

A native of Wheeling, W. Va., Chaplain Carroll completed his primary and secondary education in Washington, his college training at Morgan State college, Baltimore. He took his theological course at Yale University Divinity school, subsequently held pastorates in Salem, Va., and Grafton, W. Va. In 1935, he was one of four chosen to visit the college and university centers of India, Burma and Ceylon, spending nearly five months in those countries.

47k-1943
Afro-American
Baltimore, Maryland

144 Colored Chaplains Are Now in U.S. Army

Every Tenth Man in Army Is Colored; Only Every Twentieth Chaplain Is



Lieut. Douglas Robinson

Capt. Robert Smith

Lieut. H. A. Robinson

Chap. John Bowman

JAN 2 - 1943

WASHINGTON

One soldier in every ten is colored, but only one chaplain in every twenty is colored, or 144 of more than 3,000, according to figures released by the Office of War Information last week.

Of this number, only one, Chaplain John W. Bowman, formerly of Washington, now stationed at Fort McClellan, Ala., is of the Roman Catholic Faith.

The story of army chaplains goes back to Revolutionary War, when ministers were called to the Colors by General Washington. During the last World War, there were 2,364 chaplains, of which 57 were colored.

JAN 2 - 1943

Requirements

Chaplains must be citizens of the United States, be between 24 and 50 years old, have endorsement from their church bodies, and be graduates of an accredited college and seminary. When appointed, they study army procedures at a chaplains' school at Harvard University for one month.

Forbidden to carry arms, chaplains carry only gas masks. They go along with their unit, distributing magazines and testaments, holding services and conferences. They sleep on the bedroll with the soldiers they serve, and must take the same physical examination as their men.

Two War I Chaplains

Two soldiers who served in World War I, Lieut. Douglas Robinson and Lieut. Skelton. are serving as chaplains at Tuskegee and Fort Knox respectively.

Chaplain S. F. Guilbeau of Camp Wolters is usually accompanied on church visits by the camp choir, the Guardians of American. Another famous singing group is the Quin Knights at Camp Knight, Calif.

JAN 2 - 1943

Fourteen at Huachuca

At Fort Huachuca, the staff of fourteen chaplains is headed by Major John A. DeVeaux of Jacksonville, Fla. Others are Chaplains E. A. Freeman of Atlanta, Ga., now with the 25th Infantry; David Moore of College Hill, O.; E. B. Hicks of Duluth, Minn.; Robert J. Smith of Chicago, one of the youngest in the army; and Nimrod Calhoun of the 368th Infantry, who distributed 3.000 Mother's Day letters last May.

Chaplain J. C. Calvin is with the Fourth Service Command at Fort McClellan. Others with the 92nd division are F. N. Marshburn, Edward W. Jones and J. E. Foster, serfing with the 365th Combat unit at Camp Robinson.

Watts at Custer

JAN 2 - 1943

Now with the 184th Field Artillery at Fort Custer is Chaplain A. A. Watts, formerly of the Illinois National Guard. Chaplain William O. Jones is stationed at Fort Benning.

At Fort Bragg, one of four chaplains is H. Y. Sideboard of Cordele, Ga., of the 384th Battalion of Engineers. Lieut. H. A. Robinson, who has written a series of articles for the AFRO, is stationed with the 24th Infantry in San Francisco, Calif.

To Be Continued

Washington Tribune
Washington, D. C.

D. C. Youth, One of 5 West Point Graduates

JAN 9 - 1943

By PVT. BILL DORMAN

Of the five Negroes ever to graduate from the United States Military Academy at West Point two are living. One is a lieutenant colonel; the other, handsome, genial, First Lieutenant James Daniel Fowler of the 366th Infantry, stationed at Fort Devens.

At 26 he holds four vital positions in the 366th which to him mark the real beginning of a military career that began as a cadet lieutenant in Junior High School.

Following his graduation from West Point he spent three months at the Infantry School, Fort Benning, Ga., where he brushed up on heavy weapons. Last October he reported for duty with the 366th and in quick succession became Executive Officer of the 366th Anti-Tank Co., Commanding Officer of the Regimental Training Center (training recruits), Assistant Plans and Training Officer and Officer in Charge of the N.C.O. School.

Instructs Non-Coms

Today behind his desk at Regimental Headquarters he applies with unconscious assurance the exact training he received at West Point. To the enlisted man it has been a boon. For it is under Fowler that the non-commisisoned officers of the regiment receive their instruction, and to them he imparts the firm discipline he believes so essential to a soldier's training.

"Most men want discipline," he declared. "They realize it is discipline that will later preserve their lives under fire."

Of West Point he said proudly, 'It is an education you can't get in any six colleges in the country. The Academy qualifies you for any job there is. It is the best example of discipline you will find in the Army itself."

JAN 9 - 1943

Based on the idea that the non-commissioned officer is the backbone of the Army, Col. J. S. Leonard, Commanding Officer of the 366th, and Lt. Fowler, only two regular Army officers in the regiment, worked out plans for an N.C.O. School of which the lieutenant is in charge. A comprehensive program comparable to a regular officer candidate school was organized.

A multitude of subjects were crowded into the course which lasts a month. Fowler, who spends considerable time helping the students outside of school, insisted that the lectures be slanted so that the N.C.O. candidates would be able to command and teach as well. Few organizations have such schools.

Born in Atlanta, Ga., Fowler lived there but a few years before he moved to Washington, D.C. At the age of nine, while attending Junior High School, he had two ambitions, to become a great surgeon or a great general. Appointment to cadet lieutenant in a junior ROTC unit started him thinking of West Point. He decided to enter if he could.

In high school he was a cadet major, president of the National Honor Society, manager of the him with a four-year scholarship swimming team and graduated to Howard University.

His record at Howard was a distinguished one. He was appointed a major and commanding officer of a senior ROTC battalion, was vice president of the Kappa Mu, National Honor Society; president of the student council and member of the Kappa Alpha Psi Fraternity. He also found time to play left halfback on the varsity. Before college ended in June of '37, he had been appointed to West Point, an honor that took his breath away. In something of an anti-climax, he was graduated Magna Cum Laude with a bachelor of arts degree.

JAN 9 - 1943

In July he reported to the Academy. His college grades had been so high he didn't have to take the usual entrance examination. For four years he devoted himself to discipline, mathematics and won the Academy Monogram in intra-mural track and, in his own words, received average grades. June, 1941, he graduated with an Engineering Degree and was commisisoned a second lieutenant. Three days later he was married.

That he was destined to be a scholar was a certainty. His father graduated from Atlanta University, his sister from a teachers' college and Mrs. Fowler, a classmate of his sister's, also from a teachers' college.

Beneath his genial countenance is the firmness of a well-rounded soldier. Outside the Army his great interest is his three-weeks-old daughter, Dianne. And his hope, the ambition of every West Point man, to some day be a general.

Washington Tribune
Washington, D. C.

4 Promoted To Captain At Devens

FORT DEVENS, Mass.—Four first lieutenants of the 366th Infantry were promoted to the rank of captain, it was announced by Regimental Headquarters this week.

JAN 9 - 1943

The four new captains include Harold J. Barnett, Clarence Buchanan Wheat, Osceola T. Thornton and William A. Pierce.

Captain Barnett is a native of Washington, D. C., where he attended public schools. After graduation from high school he enrolled in Wilberforce University, where he earned the degree of B. S. in education. He was a member of the University's R. O. T. C. unit and was commissioned a second lieutenant in 1933. He was ordered to active duty in May, 1941, and promoted to first lieutenant. He is a member of Alpha Phi Alpha College fraternity.

Captain Barnett married the former Miss Hazel A. Murray, of Cleveland. They have an 18-months-old daughter, Carolyn Elise. In civilian life he lived in Cleveland where he was employed by the city in the Division of Relief.

JAN 9 - 1943

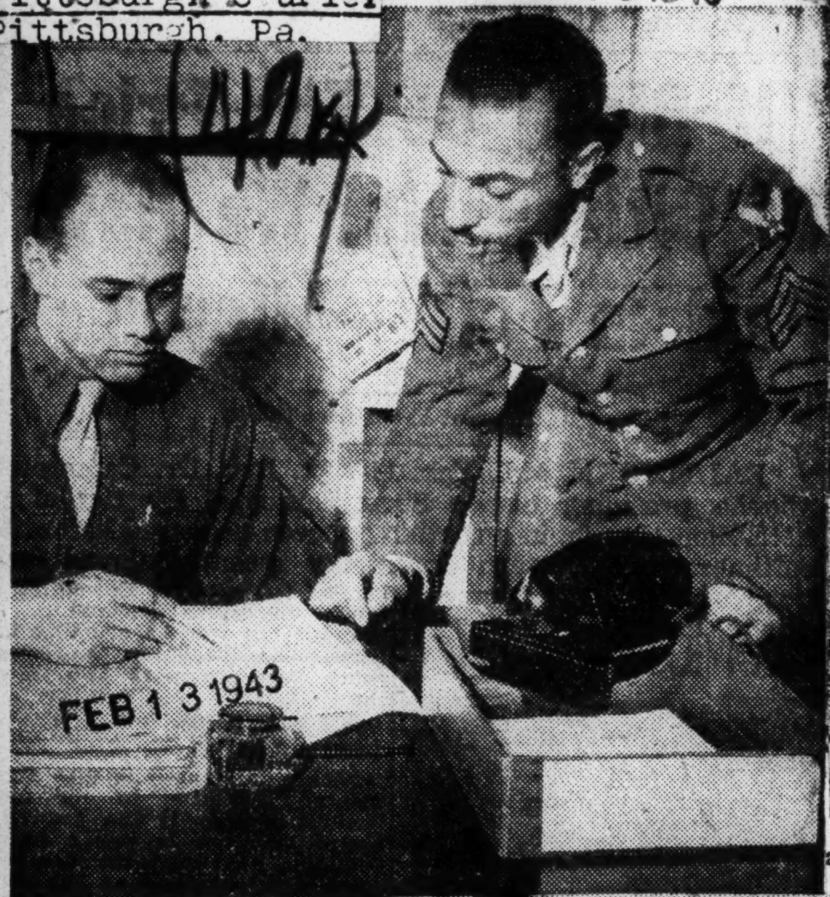
Captain Wheat was born in Montgomery, Ala., and attended public schools in Ohio. He was graduated from Howard University, Washington, D. C., in 1932, with a degree of B. S. in Architecture. He was an R. O. T. C. graduate and was commissioned second lieutenant in

47k-1943

ONE OF THE YOUNGEST

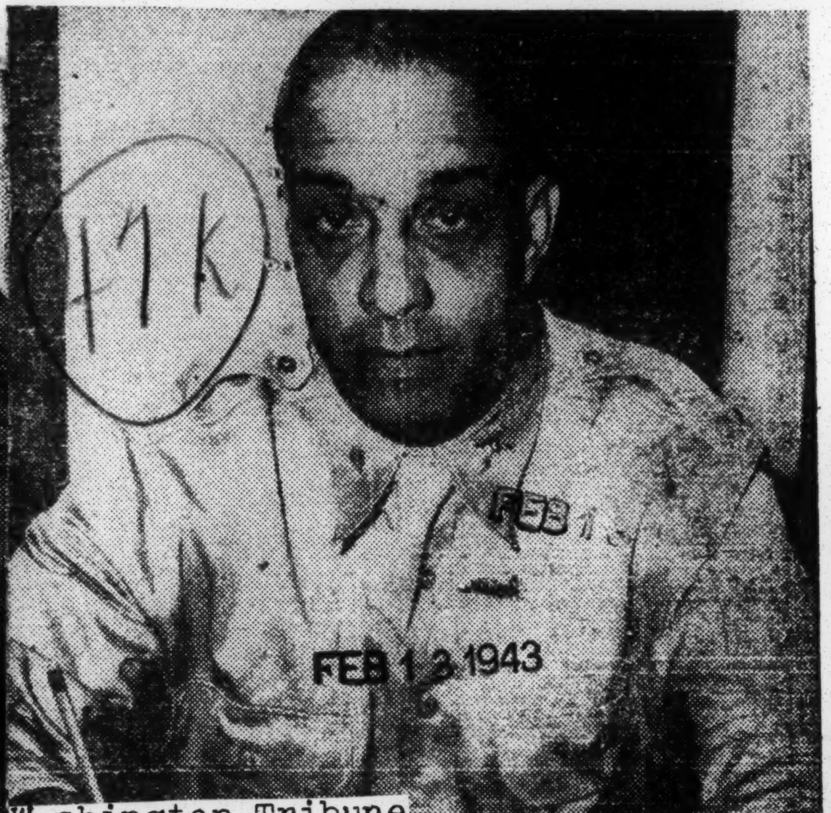
FEB 1 3 1943

Pittsburgh Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.



FEB 1 3 1943

A pioneer at the Tuskegee Army Flying School is a modest, tan-faced, captain only 24 years of age. His attachment to machines, electricity and radio was evident in his boyhood days. At the age of 21, Capt. Elmer D. Jones Jr. owned and operated his own amateur radio station in Washington, D. C. At that time, a recent graduate of Howard university, where he was awarded the honor of Magna Cum Laude of his class, his major study had been engineering. Recently promoted to the rank of captain, he is commanding officer of the Army Air Force Service Detachment No. 99, attached to the 99th Pursuit Squadron.



47k

FEB 1 3 1943

Washington Tribune
Washington, D. C.

Col. Chauncey M. Hooper, commanding officer of all-Negro anti-aircraft regiment now on duty in the Hawaiian Islands.

Photo by Signal Corps, U. S. Army

Chaplain Robinson Upped To Captaincy At Tuskegee

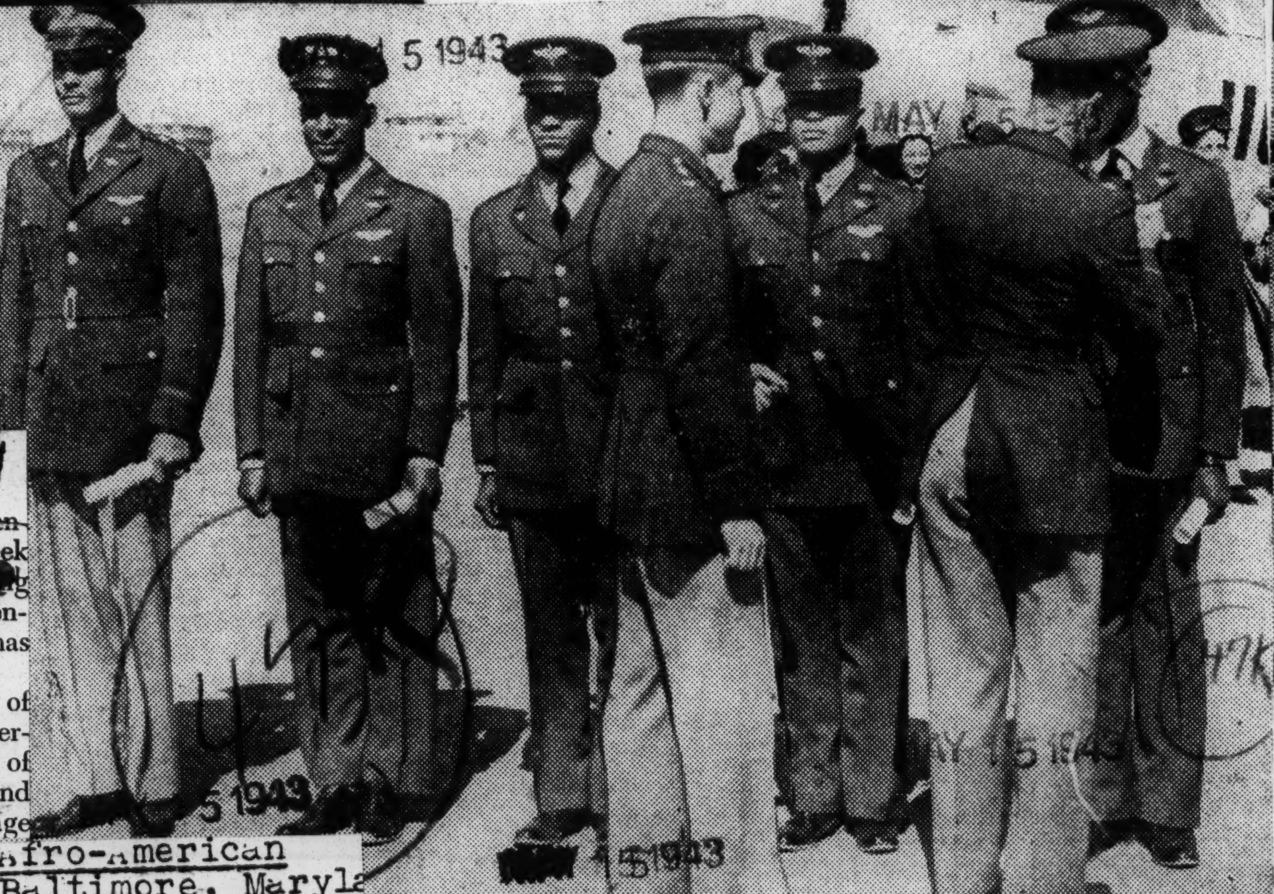
Peoples Voice N.Y. N.Y.

TUSKEGEE, Ala.—It was announced at Headquarters this week that the Tuskegee Army Flying School's base chaplain, Lieutenant Douglas L. T. Robinson, has been promoted to captain.

Capt. Robinson is a veteran of World War I. He served overseas with the 372nd Infantry of the 93rd Division as a second lieutenant in Co. K at the age of 20.

47K

FEB 20 1943

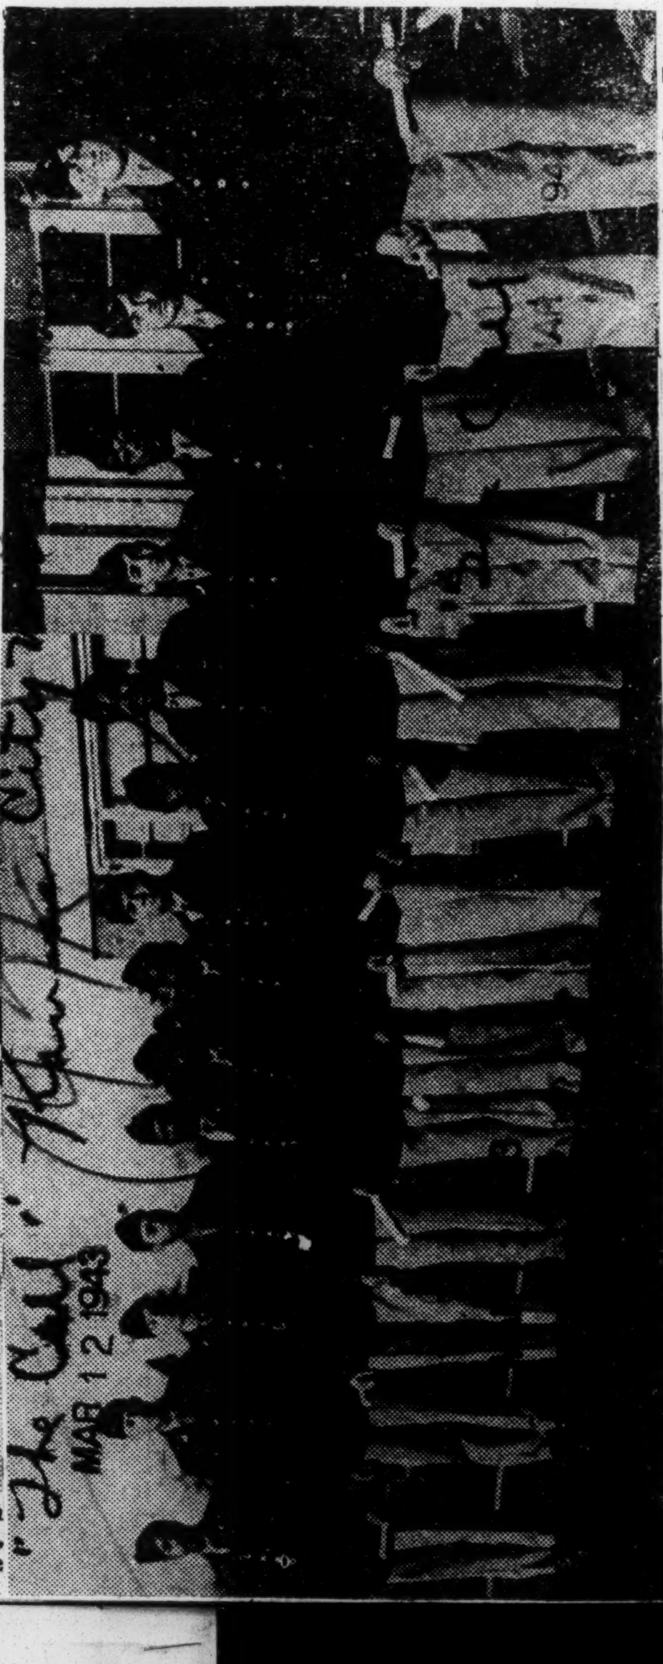


47K

MAY 1 5 1943

Afro-American
Baltimore, Maryla

Photo taken when Col. Frederick V. H. Kimble presented wings to (left to right) then Capt. Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., Washington, D.C.; Second Lieuts. Lemuel R. Custis, Hartford, Conn.; Charles H. DeBow, Indianapolis, Ind.; George S. Roberts, Fairmont, W.Va., and Mac Ross of Dayton, Ohio. Col. Kimble was assisted by Major N. F. Parrish, director of flight training.



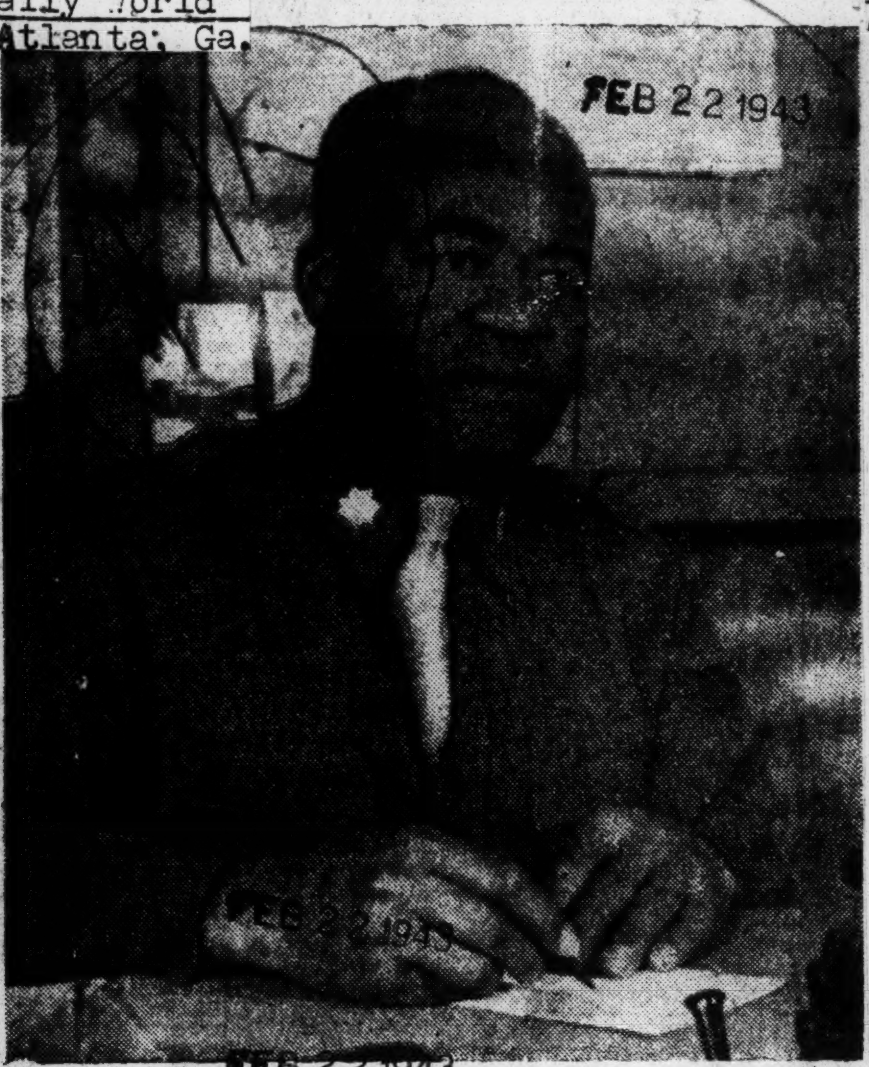
"The Call" Kansas City Mo.

MAR 1 2 1943

OFFICERS IN ENGLAND.—Negro graduates of Officer Candidate School in England. (Left to right) Samuel L. Coleman, New York, N. Y.; William H. Cox, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Richard W. Davis, Washington, D. C.; William F. Duckery, Philadelphia, Pa.; William A. Dyson, New York, N. Y.; Lestor W. Gordon, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Lucius Gibson, Americus, Ga.; Earnest J. Harris, Neptune, N. J.; William Murphy, Valdosta, Ga.; Carl W. Pope, Columbus, Ohio; James P. Rux, Bloomsburg, Pa.; Robert L. Terrell, Houston, Texas; Richard C. Wells, Washington, D. C.; Kenneth E. Wilson, Brooklyn, N. Y. These officers have received their commissions as second lieutenants.

In Charge Of Special Service

Daily World
Atlanta, Ga.



FEB 22 1943

FEB 22 1943

FEB 22 1943

FORT HUACHUCA, Ariz.—Important indeed is the announcement that Major Charles J. Blackwood, highest ranking Negro Line Officer in the 93rd Division, has been put in charge of the Special Service of his Division. Major Blackwood who succeeds Major Homer F. Browning, who has been assigned to special duty with the G-3 Section of the 93d Division, is an officer with a great military background extending back to his days with the 365th Infantry (92d Infantry Division) on the battlefields of France. He was a First Lieutenant in those days of terrific struggle in the Muese Argonne-Forest and the St. Die Sector.

FEB 22 1943

Gen'l Davis Inspects Artillery Kitchen

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

MAR 28 1943

CAMP J. T. ROBINSON, Ark.—Brigadier General B. O. Davis of the Inspector General's staff, Washington, is pictured as he paid a visit to kitchen of Battery C, 599th Field Artillery Battalion of the 92nd Division which is in training here. L to r, T-4th Dudley McEwen of Chicago displays his culinary art in preparing savory food which is common with the men of his outfit, while General Davis and Major W. R. Gunby, commander of the 599th look on.

MAR 28 1943

Fourteen Graduated From Harvard 'Chaplains' School

MAY 15 1943

MAY 15 1943 Pittsburg Courier

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., May ~~13~~—Approximately 300 officers said goodbye to the Harvard Chaplain School May 5, at graduation exercises which included a review by Chaplaing (Colonel) William D. Cleary, commandant of the school, and his staff. Following the review on Andover Field, Harvard university, the student chaplains paraded to Sanders theatre for the remainder of the graduation exercises. In this group to receive diplomas were 14 Negro chaplains.

These Army chaplains had a rigorous four-week program, which prepared them for duty with troops. A chaplain is assigned to every 1200 men in the Army. The Army Chaplain school was originally started Fefruary 9, 1918; it was again reactivated and moved to Harvard university, Cambridge, Mass., from Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind., in August, 1942.

SMALEST CLASS

The class was the eighth and also the smallest. The chaplains are housed in Conant and Perkins Hall, formerly dormitories for Harvard university graduate students.

The colored chaplains in the eighth graduating class, their home state, and religion are:

Roosevelt A. Baker, Illinois, Baptist

Frank A. Blackwell, Mississippi Methodist.

Emanuel L. Briggs, Illinois Methodist.

Sylvester R. Bright, Florida, Missionary Baptist.

Herman B. Chapman, West Virginia, Baptist.

Harold E. Charles, Rhode Island AME.

Warren J. Jenkins, Georgia AME.

Elisha B. McNair, Georgia Methodist.

Walter A. Miller, Tennessee CME.

St. Julian A. Simpkins Jr., New York, Episcopal.

James H. Smith, Pennsylvania Baptist.

George R. Yancey, New York, Baptist.

Robert B. Powell, West Virginia, Baptist.

MAY 15 1943

MAY 15 1943

MAY 15 1943

MAY 15 1943

About half of the chaplains were sent to the Chaplain's school from duty with troops, while the other half were getting their first taste of Army life and left with the other officers for their first military assignment on Wednesday afternoon. The largest class so far, the ninth, commences on Monday, May 10, 1943. Each of the graduating classes at the Harvard Chaplain's school has averaged ten Negro chaplains.

May 6, 1943

PROMOTIONS GIVEN TUSKEGEE AIRMEN

TUSKEGEE ARMY AIR FIELD, Ala., May 5—As a result of recent promotions at the Tuskegee Army Air Field, there are two new majors, two more men to wear the double bars of captains, and two new first lieutenants.

Capt. John G. Cooke, Jr., and Capt. Warren Crump were advanced to the rank of major. Maj. Cooke, a native of Gainesville, Ala., is commandant of aviation cadets at the Tuskegee Army Air Field, while Maj. Crump, whose home is Richmond, Va., is post quartermaster. Maj. Crump, a veteran in the service, has been in the Army for 16 years.

New wearers of the double bars are Capt. James L. Wrathall, advanced flight instructor from Grantsville, Utah, and Capt. Philip L. Tate, finance officer. Both were promoted from first lieutenant to captain. Capt. Tate, a native of Fairfield, Ala., was employed as branch manager of the Mack Motor Truck Corporation of Birmingham, Ala., prior to entering the service.

Second Lts. Douglas Jones, mess officer, general mess No. 2, and Weldon O. Yeager, personnel officer, were advanced to first lieutenants. Lt. Yeager comes from Greenville, Ala., and Lt. Jones comes from Shreveport, La.

Pittsburgh Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

Officers Measure Up To Standard, Says Pitts

June 5, 1943

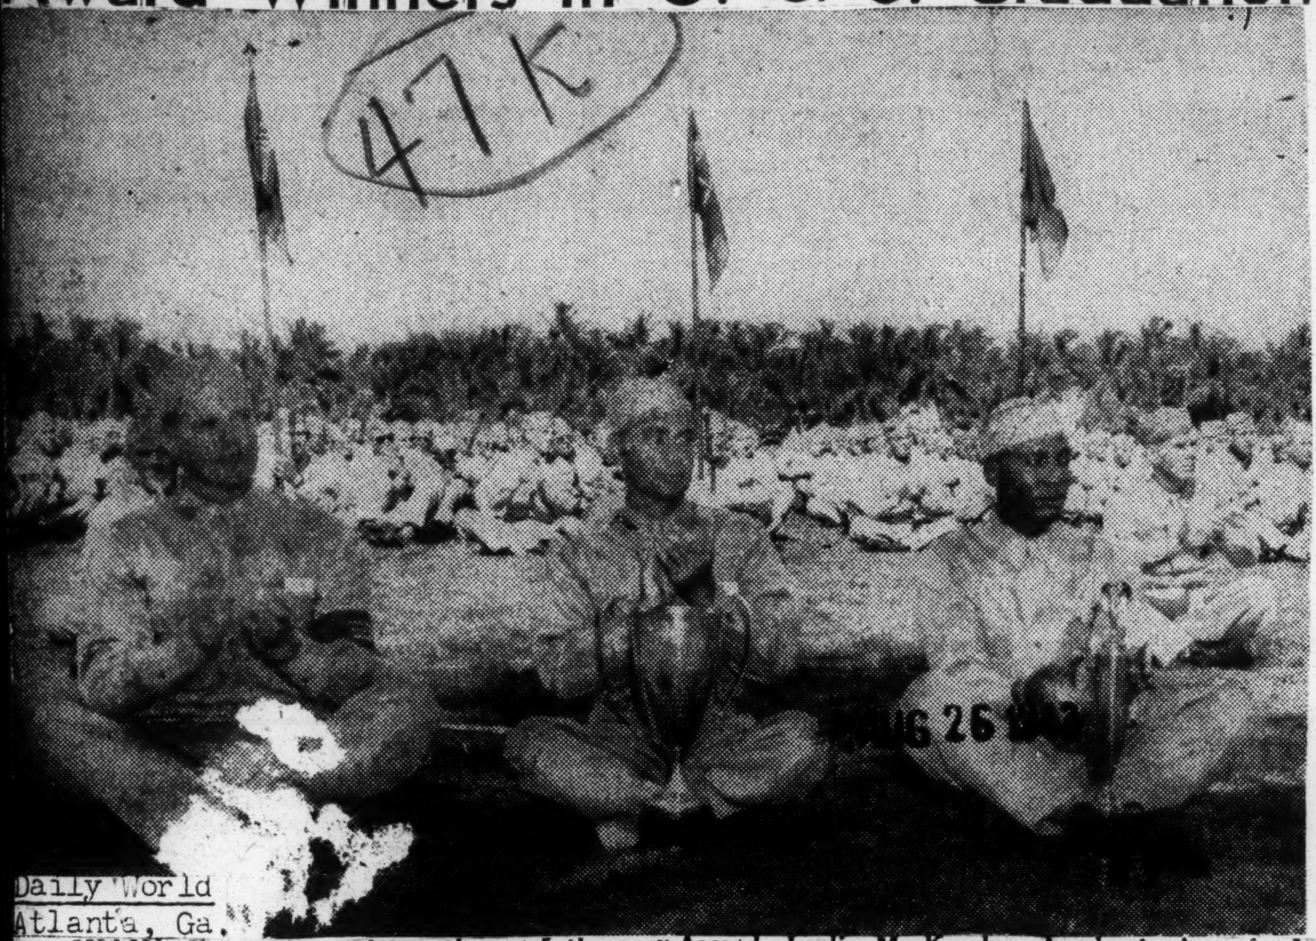
CAMP McCLELLAN, Ala., July 3—(ANP)—Negro officers are measuring up to the standard to everyone's satisfaction, reports Col. Anderson F. Pitts, now on an inspection tour through the Carolinas, Florida, Georgia and Virginia.

Colonel Pitts reports his recent assignment to the Inspector General's department most interesting, that he is being well received wherever he goes, and that he has had no unpleasant experiences thus far.

"It is interesting to see the great progress being made by our troops," he said. "Our officers are measuring up to the standard to everyone's satisfaction."

47k-1943

Award Winners In O. C. S. Graduation



47K

AUG 26 1943

Daily World
Atlanta, Ga.

MIAMI, Fla. [illegible]ed are three of the men who won awards upon their graduation from the Army Air Forces Officer Candidate School in Miami Beach. L. to R., Ralph D. Young, Military Award; Leslie M. Kessler, Academic Award; Joseph G. Echols, Athletic Award. Supreme Court Justice Hugo Black addressed the graduating class—(International News Photo.)

AUG 26 1943

Eleven Graduated as Officers from U.S. Army Pacific School

Afro-American
Baltimore, Maryland

OCT 2 1943

New Quartermaster Lieutenants Include a Graduate Physician; Outfit to Have Colonel

By VINCENT TUBBS

AFRO War Correspondent with U.S. Troops in S.W. Pacific

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

AUSTRALIA—(By Cable, Censored)—The U.S. Army Officer Candidate School on Tuesday graduated 636 successful candidates for commissions as second lieutenants, eleven of whom are former members of crack colored quartermaster and port battalion units.

Lieut. [illegible] Freeman, 2109 Masters Street, Phila., former instructor at Sultzberger Junior High School, was graduated from the school's administration section. He is the first colored candidate to complete this course.

Lieuts. Howard Williams and Walter B. Seagrave, both of Los Angeles, completed transportation corps courses. Williams was attending Los Angeles City College when inducted. Seagraves was at Wiley when he decided to volunteer.

8 Quartermasters

Members of the class graduated from the Quartermaster section are:

Lieuts. Eugene Love, St. Louis, a former hotel headwaiter; John L. Turner, Dallas, Tex., who had just set up medical practice when inducted; Edward H. Henderson, Emporia, Kans., former salesman; James R. Grimm[illegible], Keokuk, Iowa, former chauffeur and night school student;

Lieuts. Melvin M. Hatcher, Seattle, Wash., who was attending U. of Washington when inducted; Welton Biggs, Suffolk, Va.; Frank Marshall, Butte, Mont., and Maurice Burke, Baltimore.

Battle Veterans Included

The latter two this correspondent has never seen. They vamoosed so quickly after the ceremony and their names had to be obtained from official sources.

Many of the class have seen service in some forward area as enlisted men. Three members of the class, white, were decorated prior to graduation.

Most speculation on where our new officers will be assigned points to a port battalion on duty in New Guinea. This outfit will reportedly soon have all colored officers. Its table of organization calls for a lieutenant colonel.

Brothers Meet

Among the hundreds of persons attending the graduation exercises was Officer's Steward 2C George W. Seagrave, whose brother was among the graduates. They had not seen each other since they both decided to become charges of their Uncle Sam three years ago.

Steward Seagrave's ship docked in Australia the day before graduation. When they met in a service club recognition took several minutes. The sea-going Seagrave has grown a beard.

Warrant Officer Appointed

Another of our boys recently added to the officers' ranks is Lovar P[illegible], 763 W. 31st Street, NYC, who was appointed warrant officer in the special services branch last week. He will serve in a forward area.

Recently arrived from the States is 1st Lieut. William S. Brinkley, Chicago, chaplain of an aviation engineer outfit.

Easterners Seen

Two Washingtonains in the outfit are T/Sgt. Theodore Lacy, 1840 Biltmore Street, who attended Howard University and Miner Teachers' College, and Sgt. Elias Howard, 1046 Forty-eighth Street, Northeast, a graduate of Dunbar High School; Master Sergeant in the unit is Robert N. Smith of Philadelphia.

Another officer recently arrived from the States is 1st Lieut. J. T. Brown, chaplain, whose father heads Nashville's Baptist publishing house. His job is a very interesting one.

OCT 2 1943

List Other Promotions

Other promotions were:

James E. Smith, Phoebus, Va., to corporal; Andrew S. Byrd, Freedricksburg, Va., to staff sergeant; John Neil, Houston, Texas, to technician fifth grade; Lorenzo Mendie, Baltimore, to technician fourth grade;

Charles E. Hopkins, Sandy Springs, Md., to technician fifth grade; Charles F. Williams, Los Angeles, to staff sergeant; Robert E. Newsome, Norfolk, Va., to first sergeant and Adler J. Houston, Los Angeles, to sergeant.

Afro-American
Baltimore, Maryland

2 Colored Officers in Trinidad BWI

DEC 4 1943

By ARTHUR RYAN

PORT-OF-SPAIN, Trinidad, BWI. — Highest ranking officer of the colored troops here is Captain Arthur R. Howard of Minneapolis, senior chaplain.

When I reached Captain Howard I found a dozen persons waiting. Captain Howard said that there were many difficult problems which usually arose between the soldiers and members of the public, particularly women. Chaplain Howard, who has been here seventeen months, was formerly pastor of the Methodist Church in Minneapolis. He has been in the army four years.

He is a graduate of Boston University. Mrs. Howard, his wife, is now residing with her parents in Mississippi.

Lieutenant from Newark

Another colored officer is Lieutenant Leo J. Guy of Newark, N.J. He joined the army as a private three years ago. After four months, he was made a corporal and one month later was raised to sergeant. At the end of fifteen months' service he went to the Adjutant General School in Washington where he was graduated and commissioned a second lieutenant.

Lieutenant Guy, who arrived in the colony a year ago, was a postal clerk in Newark before he went into the service. He has a sister, Lieut. Dorothy Guy of the WAC, at Fort Bragg, N.C. His mother and father are residing in Newark, N.J.

Promoted To Major

DEC 8 1943

Daily World
Atlanta, Ga.

Major William E. Allen, Jr., who is situated at Fort Huachuca, Arizona. He was recently promoted from captain.

PM
New York, N. Y.

Leader of Negro Air Squad Back

PM's Bureau

SEP 12 1943

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11.—Lt. Col. Benjamin O. Davis Jr., 30, who led the first Negro air force unit to see combat action, is back home from the Mediterranean to take on a bigger job of preparing a larger Negro unit for battle.

Davis, one of the Army's youngest colonels, led the 99th Fighter Squadron in daily dive-bombing missions over Pantelleria and Sicily. For its activities the squadron officers, including Davis, were awarded a number of distinctions.

At a press conference, Davis disclosed [illegible] he has been assigned to the [illegible] Fighter Group, consisting of three squadrons, now stationed at Selfridge Field, Mich.

47K

---

4 Graduated from Army Med. Schol

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

CARLISLE BARRACKS, Pa. — Four officers, two of them captains, were part of the thirty-eighth officers' class graduated Thursday from the Medical Field Service School after completing six weeks' training for duty as medical officers with troops in combat.

They are: Capts. Clifton B. Cooper, dental corps, of Roxbury, Mass., and Emanuel R. Ferguson, medical corps, of Philadelphia; Carl S. Jenkins of Wilberforce, Ohio, and Stephen B. Stanford of Norristo[illegible], medical corps.

Capt. Cooper received his D.D.S. from Harvard dental school; Capt. Ferguson and Lieut. Jenkins are Meharry medical grads, and Lieut. Standford is a Howard medical grad.

Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

TWO NEGRO PRESS OFFICERS NAMED

WASHINGTON. Aug. 12—The [illegible] of Captain Homer B. Roberts, Signal Corps, and First Lieut. Daniel E. Day, Field Artillery, [illegible] the press branch, War Department [illegible] Bureau of Public Relations, [illegible] announced by the War Department. They are the first Negro officers [illegible] assigned to the bureau.

Gets Commission

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

DEC 16 [illegible]

Mildred Turk of Atlanta was commissioned a second lieutenant in the Women's Army Corps on Dec. 11 upon completion of the eight weeks officer training course at the Third WAC Training C[illegible] Fort Oglethorpe, G[illegible] She is the daughter of Mrs. A[illegible] Janie Turk, of 86 Pratt Street, Atlanta.

DEC 16 [illegible]

4 15

'Top' in U. S. Navy

THE HIGHEST RANKING Negro in the U. S. Navy is Lieut. (jg) Clarence Samuels of the U. S. Coast Guard. A native of Panama, Lieut. Samuels has spent 23 years in the Coast Guard, during which time he has served in charge of a cutter in Savannah, Ga. harbor, in charge of the CG unit at Pea Island, near Manteo-Roanoke, N. C., and at the CG Training Station, Manhattan Beach, N. Y. He is known throughout the service for his excellence as a signalman and marksman. His ribbons indicate p[illegible]rl Harbor Service, Pea[illegible] action, Amer[illegible] Theatre of War action, [illegible]ean mid-eastern campaign, expert pistol shot and his good conduct ribbon has four bars.—U. S. Navy Photo via OWI.

DEC 16 [illegible]

47k

OCT 6 [illegible]

Journal & Guide
Norfolk, Va.

SELECTIVE SERVICE ASSISTANT MADE COLONEL—Colonel Campbell C. Johnson, executive assistant to Major General Lewis P. Hershey, head of Selective Service, was recently promoted from lieutenant colonel, to his present rank. Col. Johnson is shown with his aide, Captain Benson D. Mitchell. (War Department Photo from OWI)

Selective Service Aide Now Colonel

Journal and Guide

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Back at his desk in the headquarters of the Selective Service System after 32 days abs[illegible] Colonel Campbe[illegible] Johns[illegible] executive assistant to Selective Service Director Major General Lewis B. Hershey, had completed a 3,400-mile tour of Army induction stations from North Carolina to Louisiana, and had been promoted from lieutenant-colonel to colonel.

OCT 6 [illegible]

4

On his tour of induction stations, Colonel Johnson sought answers to these questions: Why the high rate of Negro rejections for failure to pass the Army's minimum intelligence standards and the low percentage of those meeting the Army's physical requirement standards?

"I concluded my tour with the conviction that the root of the trouble lies in the inadequate educational facilities available to Negro youth, which result not only in lower intelligence but also in lower standards of health as a direct consequence," he said in an interview.

MUST HAVE CHANCE

"Negro youth must be given a chance. Because they have not been given equal opportunities for learning, the Army is paying the penalty. However, the Selective Service has managed, despite these handi[illegible] to recruit eligible youths to [illegible] extent that today Negroes comprise above 10 per cent of the men inducted into the armed forces through the Selective Service System.

OCT 6 [illegible]

Colonel Johnson, a graduate of Howard University, is a member of the board of parole on the District of Columbia and of the bar of the District of Columbia and of North Carolina.

Norfolk, Virginia

His rise in rank began in 1917 when he was promoted to first lieutenant of Infant[illegible] October, 1918, he had risen to the rank of captain, becoming a major in September, 1929. Promoted to lieutenant-colonel in 1942, he received his latest elevation on September 21.

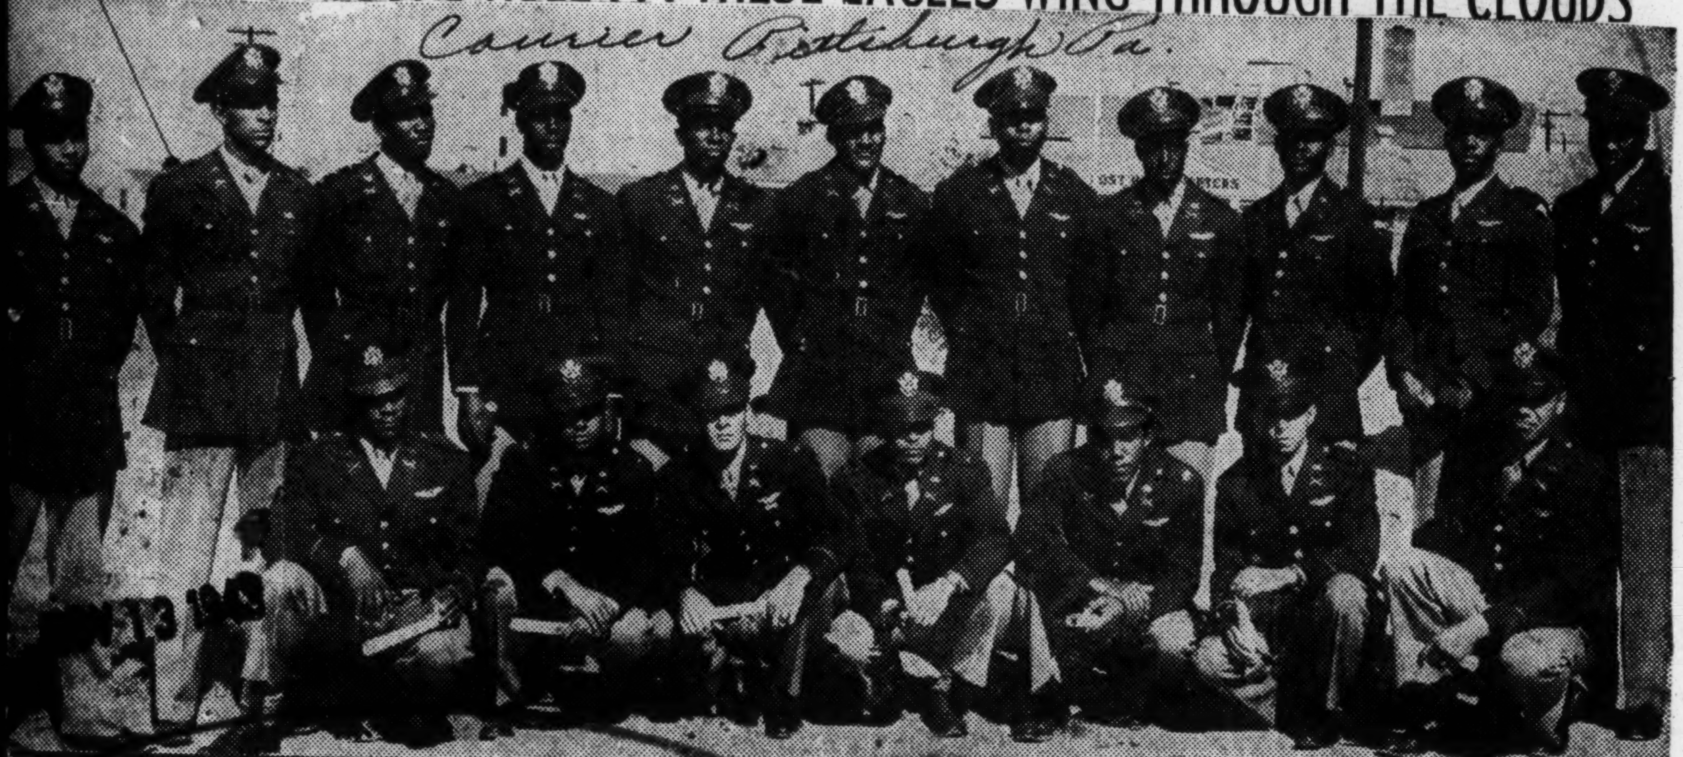
OCT 6 [illegible]

Captain Benson D. Mitchell is assistant to Colonel Johnson. He is a graduate of Howard University and was assigned to the Selective Service System in June, 1942.

47k-1943

WHILE THE CAISSONS ROLL . . . THESE EAGLES WING THROUGH THE CLOUDS

Courier Pittsburgh Pa.



NOV 13 1943

Pictured above is the most recent class of liaison pilots from the Field Artillery to complete their training at the Tuskegee Army Air Field.

Shown from left to right (kneeling) are: 2nd Lieut. John [illegible] Code, Houston, Texas; 1st Lieut. John B. L[illegible]dey, B[illegible]lyn, N. Y.; 2nd Lieut. George F. Bizzell, Lancaster, Ohio; 2nd Lieut. John O. Cunningham, Kokomo, Ind.; 2nd Lieut. William J. Cleveland, Warren, Ohio; 1st Lieut. R[illegible] L. Wr[illegible], Cincinnati, Ohio; [illegible] 2nd Lieut. John [illegible], Toledo, Ohio.

Standing: 2nd Lieut. Louis K. [illegible]nks, Toledo, Ohio; 1st Lieut. [illegible]ines C. Farley, Paducah, Ky.; 1st Lieut. Terry H. Brooks, Houston, Texas; 2nd Lieut. Richard C. Chatman, Chicago, Ill.; 2nd Lieut. Henry Bennett, New Orleans, La.; 1st Lt. Fred E. [illegible]ward, Chicago, Ill.; 1st Lieut. Leroy Stephens, Jr., Chicago, Ill.; 2nd Lieut. Daniel C. Thomas, Akron, Ohio; 2nd Lieut. Thurston Mason, Chicago, Ill.; 2nd Lieut. Paul Weathersby, Chicago, and 2nd Lieut. William M. Jordan of Chicago, Ill.—Photo by TAAF.

TWO NAMED TO PRESS SECTION IN WAR DEPT.

Defender
Chicago, Ill.

Chicagoans Assigned To D. C. Posts In Public Relations Office

44K

WASHINGTON — The assignment of Captain Homer B. Roberts, signal corps, and First Lt. Daniel E. Day, field artillery, to the Press Branch, War Department Bureau of Public Relations here was announced last week by the War Department.

Numerous requests for such assignments have been made, the latest of which was voiced by the National Negro Publishers Association to Assistant Secretary of War McCloy a few weeks ago.

They are the first Negro officers assigned to the bureau. Both have had considerable experience in public relations work. Captain Roberts has been assistant public relations officer at Fort Huachuca, Ariz., since assignment to that post in 1942, and Lieutenant Day was associated with the Chicago Defender for four years as picture editor.

Captain Roberts is a resident of Chicago, and has seen service in the last war with the 325th Field Signal Battalion, having enlisted as a private in 1917. He received his commission as a first lieutenant in 1918, being the first Negro to receive an appointment in signal corps. Just before the Armistice he was recommended for captaincy but was discharged before it could be put into effect.

Advertising Man

His present service began in 1942 when he was commissioned a captain and assigned as commanding officer of the military police detachment at Fort Huachuca. Captain Roberts studied engineering at Kansas State Agriculture College, after which he entered advertising field.

Lieutenant Day, also a resident of Chicago, Ill., entered the United States army in 1941 when the 8th Infantry Regiment of Illinois National Guard was federalized and became the 184th Field Artillery. He had been a member of the National Guard since 1928, and was commissioned a second lieutenant, Field Artillery in 1941 and in 1942 was promoted to first lieutenant.

His present assignment is with the 931st Field Artillery Battalion at Camp Forrest, Tenn., as battery executive officer. Lieutenant Day attended Crane Junior college, the Lewis Institute and the Chicago Art Institute.

Both officers have been on temporay duty in Washington for three days and will proceed back to their statons after which they will report to the bureau for permanent duty.

It is reported Capt. Roberts will be in charge of the Negro Press branch of the bureau.

'NOT INACTIVE', SAYS FULLER

NOV 13 1943

Courier Pittsburgh Pa.

PHILADELPHIA — In a statement from the Tilton General hospital, Fort Dix, N. J., Chaplain Luther M. Fuller denied a claim made by the Rev. W. H. Jernagin, in a letter to Secretary of War Henry Stimson, that he (Fuller) had been placed on the inactive list.

"That is just one hundred per cent untrue," declared Chaplain Fuller. "I received my monthly check today and I certainly would not have received it if I had lost my active status."

Chaplain Fuller also informed The Courier that he had telephoned Dr. Jernagin, informing him of the error.

NOV 13 1943

Afro-American
Baltimore. Maryland

Lieutenant Promoted at Tuskegee Field

DEC 4 - 1943

Lieut. White

TUSKEGEE, Ala. — Second Lt. Frederick E. White, Jr., of Jamaica, N.Y., was recently promoted to first lieutenant at the army air field. Lt. White, who is the communication officer at this station, is married to the former Miss Bertha Oden of Beaufort, N.C. He attended City College, NYC, from 1930 to 1934.

Ben Johnson, ex-Sprint Ace, Now Officer

OCT 16 1943

NEWARK, N.J. — Benjamin Johnson, former track star at Columbia University and co-holder of world sprint marks, entered the army as a private December 5, 1942, and advanced to second lieutenant by September, 1943.

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md

LT. BENJAMIN JOHNSON

Ben graduated from Columbia and was captain of the track team. He toured Europe in 1937-38 with an American team.

During this time he was national champion, inter-collegiate champion and national collegiate champion, and also undefeated in European competition.

OCT 6 1943

He was a teacher at Bordentown before entering the army. He graduated from an anti-aircraft artillery school with the rank of second lieutenant, and is now stationed at Camp Stewart, Ga., as instructor in target recognition.

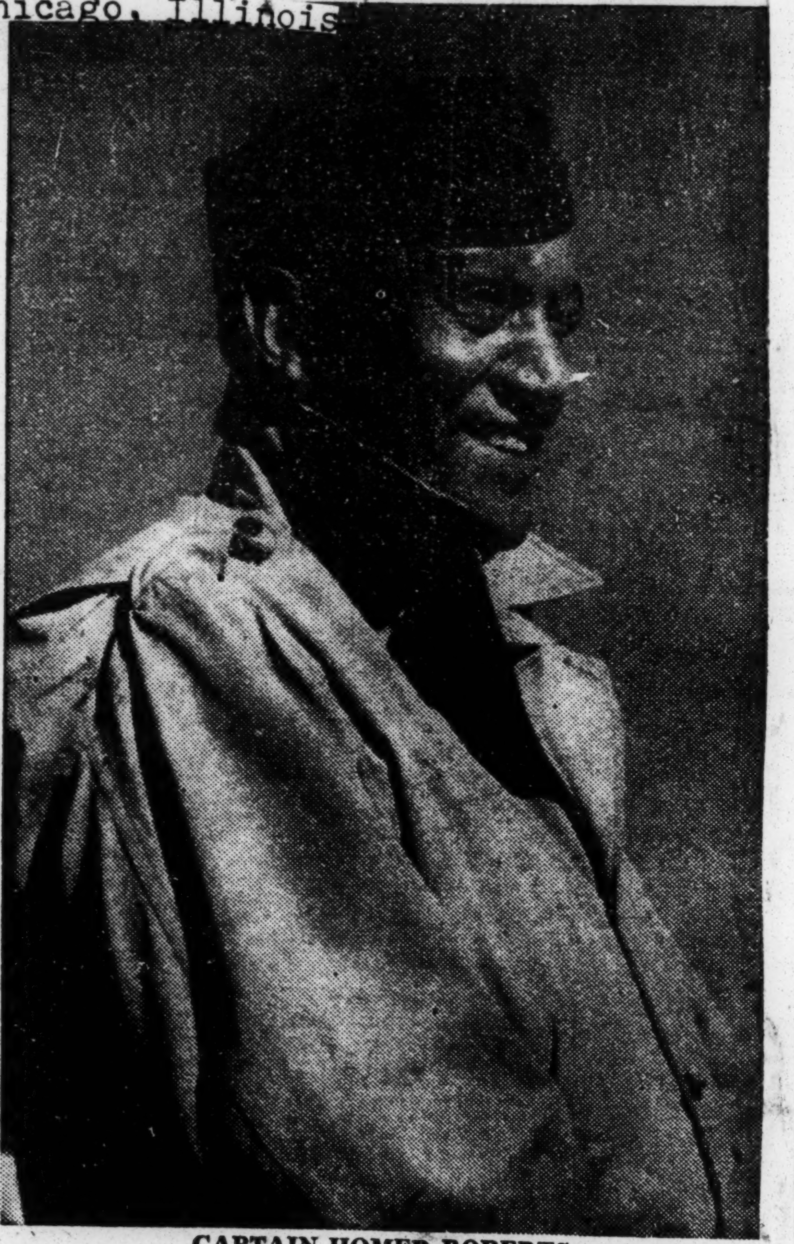
Gets Bars at Yale

Afro-American
Baltimore, Maryland

LT. EVERETT JOHNSON, JR., son of Mr. and Mrs. Everett Johnson, Sr., of Master Street, Philadelphia, who was commissioned last month after taking a special course in bombardment and armament at Yale University. Lieutenant Johnson, home on a ten-day leave to visit his mother, is stationed at Selfridge Field, Mich., as a gunner in the Air Corps. He holds a B.S. degree in physical education from Xavier College, New Orleans. His father is a Red Cross field director at Fort Huachuca, Ariz.

CAPT. HOMER ROBERTS GETS POST WITH PUBLIC RELATIONS

Chicago Bee
Chicago, Illinois



CAPTAIN HOMER ROBERTS

FORT HUACHUCA, Ariz., Aug 19—The assignment which Capt. Homer B. Roberts, commanding officer of the Military Police Detachment at Fort Huachuca, will soon take over in Washington, D. C., is another milestone in the career of a man who knows no course of action except to succeed, according to those who know him best and have followed his colorful life, both as a civilian and as a soldier in World Wars I and II.

41

It has been announced from the War Department Bureau of Public Relations that Capt. Roberts is assigned to a section of the Public Relations Office in Washington.

Trite but true is the fact that Washington's gain will be Fort Hachuca's loss. During the past nine months that Capt. Roberts has been in command of the Corps of Military Police he has made it second to none in efficiency and law enforcement on the Post. Moreover, action in the capacity of press relations laison officer he has made marked progress in the Post's relations with the press throughout the United States. This has been done through weekly releases prepared under his supervision and often pers[illegible] prepared and [illegible]buted to the Negro press.

Capt. Roberts' experience in World War I began in December 12, 1917, when he enlisted as a private. He was promoted to sergeant in February, 1918 and commissioned a first lieutenant in the Signal Corps April 1, 1918. He was recommended for promotion to captain September 27, 1918. Last October 3, he was recommissioned captain and served as assistant Provost Marshal until February 13, when he became commanding officer of the Corps of Military Police.

45

The success of Captain Roberts in military life is faithfully paralleled by his record as a civilian in the years between 1919 and 1942. Energetic and actful, he can be best described as a "go-getter," from the point of view of his civilian career. As an early day automobile salesman in Kansas City, he placed second in a national sales contest, and was actually declared the winner on the basis of money volume.

The Roberts Building, an imposing structure at 1826 Vine street was built by Capt. Roberts in 1923 at a cost of some $70,000—a feat even in those predepression days for a Negro motorcar dealer. At the height of his business career in Middlewest Capt. Roberts' company handled ten lines of cars and employed 54 workers, all Negroes. He was engaged in a similar capacity in Chicago, where he went into business after leaving Kansas City, Mo.

Being called back to the army ended for "the duration" his long and successful career in the automobile business; and being in the Army seems to have started Capt. Roberts off on another equally as successful career—that of public relations.

He tak[illegible]tion not only years of experience in dealing with personalities but an excellent point of view as to what is needed to give credit where credit is due for the job that the Negro is doing in World War II. His superiors at Fort Huachuca have found him helpful, loyal and faithful to duty and they agree unanimously that he deserves his new post as well as "commendation for excellent performance of duty beyond that which he has been normally expected to perform."

AUG 22 1943

First Colored Doctors Arrive in Australia

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md

D.C. Physician Heads Station Hospital Unit Which Includes 15 Nurses and 100 Enlisted Men

By VINCENT TUBBS

AFRO War Correspondent with U.S. Troops in the S.W. Pacific

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

SOMEWHERE IN AUSTRALIA (By Cable) — Major Arthur Simmons of Washington and a station hospital unit formerly at Fort Huachuca, have arrived in the Southwest Pacific area. They are the first colored doctors and nurses in this theatre of war.

The unit is made up of fifteen nurses, thirteen doctors, and nearly 100 enlisted men who serve as surgical, laboratory, or X-ray technicians, cooks, supply men, orderlies, and ambulance drivers.

47

Heading the nurses is six-foot, 200-pound soldierly First Lieut. Birdie Brown of New York City. Her assistant is Second Lieut. Louise Miller, Atlantan, who studied at the Medical College of Virginia in Richmond.

Morale High

The unit is now split up with nurses in one city and doctors and enlisted men in another. The morale among the nurses is high, although all except two say they were seasick coming over.

Lieut. Elena Townsend, baby of the outfit, is the only member of the contingent who is married.

Paper Misquotes Nurse

Australian papers heralding their arrival quoted one member of the group as saying, "I'm gonna get me a husband."

The nurse to whom the statement is attributed says it's a lie—most of the group have wind in their jaws and insist they "came over here to do a job: the sooner we get to it the better, and when it's finished we are going home."

Members of the Nurses' Detail, beside those mentioned, are: Second Lieuts. Marjorie Mayers, NYC; Prudence Burns, Mounds, Ill;, Claudia Matthews, Dallas, Tex.; Thelma Fisher, Boston; Beulah Baldwin, Cleveland; Dorothy Branker, Nashville, Tenn.; Joan Hamilton, Kansas City, Mo.; Bessie Parkr Evans, St. Louis, Albert L. Smith, Kansas City, Mo.; Elnora Jones, Rahway, N.J.; Inez Holmes, Norfolk, and Geneva Culpepper.

Lieut. Townsend comes from Glen Cove, La., is married to Lieut. James Gleason, and hopes to see him over here soon.

Doctors in Group

Medics in the unit include Capts. Arthur Thomas, Philadelphia; Joseph Mitchell, Kenneth Fletcher, and Rotan Lee, Philadelphia; First Lieuts. Robert Randolph, Charles Joseph, John Skinner, William Rogers, Jacob Frye, William Hendrix; Second Lieuts. Edward Booker and Lowell Burrell.

DEC 11 1943

Enlisted Men

The enlisted men are:

First Sgt. Watt Sanders, T-Sgt. Willie Yeldell, S-Sgt. Ernest Rose, T-3rd Wilbert Chatfield, Lucius Thomas; Sgts. John Meade, John Winslow, T-4th Arthur Blackstone;

Sgts. Eugene Champion, Richard Coates, Thomas Davison, Robert Falson, Billie Gavins, Chatham Horton, Warren Humphrey, Tommie McNorris, Andrew Minor, Charles Moss;

Cpls. Harry Anderson, Farris Barnes, James Bazemore, Thurman Gross, David Rogers, William Savage, James Smith, T-5th Eddie Bradford, Louie Brown, Charles Bullitt, George Burnett, Gilbert Chestnut;

Cpls. Rafael Fortier, Waldo Gaffney, Londus Garrott, Jessie Glass, Lewis Graham, George Groves, Eugene Harden, Wallace Johnson, Thurman Mathes, Harold McClain, Lawrence McKever, Lewis Merchant, Jesse Wright;

Pfcs. Saui Anderson, Jesse Brinesfield, George Edmonds, Guston McLaughlin, Swindel Pemberton, Joseph Poweil, Roscoe Rectar, Perry Simpson, Daniel Smith, Milton Smith, Ralph Turner;

Pvts. David Barnes, Orlean Berry, Willie Bledsoe, Neil Blue, Perry Boone, Marvey Boulton, Leroy Boykin, Paul Brooks, Noble Buchanan, Granville Carter, General W. Clark, Jr., Edward Culler;

Pvts. LaMorris Davis, Willie Davis, Claude Dragten, Lewis Estus, Welton Foster, Charles Frue, James Gravley, Ike Green, Walter Handy, Willie Hill, Richard Jackson, Frederick Jacobucci;

Pvts. Delbert Jones, Charles Jules, Ray Kemp, Edward Littlejohn, Ed Lang, Alonzo Malone, Howard McEachern, Henry McNeil, William Moore, Robert Montgomery;

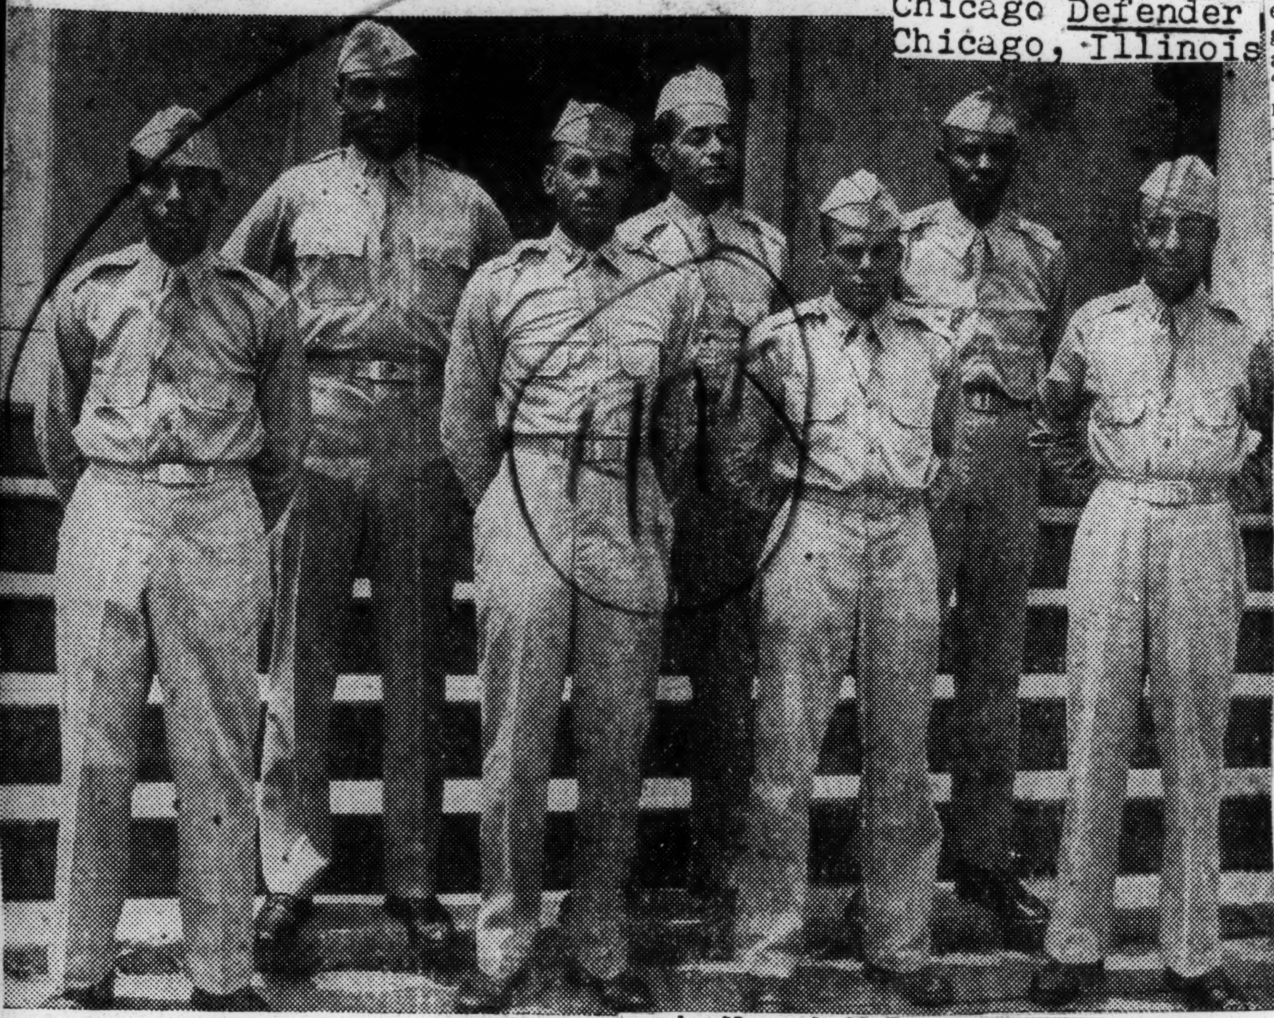
Pvts. Daniel Owens, David Pitts, Nathoniel Purifoy, Willie Simm[illegible]rry Simpson, Cleveland Ware, Eug[illegible]ls, and Jeff Wright.

Also recently arrived here are many quartermaster replacements, quartermaster truck companies, more anti-aircraft artillery troops, and aviation engineers.

47k-1943

NEW CHEMICAL WARFARE OFFICERS

Chicago Defender
Chicago, Illinois



Among those who were commissioned second lieutenants in the Chemical Warfare school, Edgewood Arsenal, Md., at the graduation exercises of the Officer Candidate school, are these seven men. In front, reading from left to right, are Second Lieutenants Jesse L. Johnson, 1409 West Dallas street, Houston, Texas; James T. Ellerbe, 511 Pine street, Hamlet, N. C.; Siroucho Howard, 85 Benefit street, Providence, R. I., and George A. Straight, 123 Howell street, Providence, R. I. Back row, left to right, are: Second Lieutenants Harry M. Hodges, 808 Fondulac street, Muskogee, Okla.; William A. Williams, 5328 North Capitol avenue, Indianapolis; Modesto Luzanaris, 31 Pomarrosa street, Santurce, Puerto Rico.

---

3 Physicians Graduate From Carlisle Barracks

AUG 7 1943

Chicago Defender
Chicago, Illinois

CARLISLE BARRACKS, Pa.—The graduation of three Negro physicians from the Army's Medical Field Service school, Carlisle Barracks, brought to a total of 144 the number of Negro medical, dental and veterinary officers to receive diplomas from this national training center, the only military school for training Medical Department officers for field duty.

In addition 31 Negroes had been commissioned as second lieutenants here, following their graduation from the Medical Administrative Corps Officer Candidate school which had functioned at this post until four months ago. They, with enlisted men who completed a Sanitary Technicians Course, increased to 186 the total number of Negro graduates of the Medical Field Service school.

The three Negro officers, two of them captains and one a first lieutenant, were part of the 31st officers' class graduated recently at exercises in Tugo Hall after completing six weeks of rigorous training for duty as medical officers with troops in combat.

All experienced physicians, the three Negro officers left immediately after the graduation for their respective units. The training course in medical field work at this school prepared them to be efficient Medical Department officers, capable of carrying on their professional work under war conditions.

The three officers are Capt. George W. Hill, 38, of 30 State street, Ossinning, N. Y.; Capt. William B. Fonvielle, 44, of [illegible] Indiana avenue, Chicago, Ill.; and First Lieut. Harold L. Edgehill, 37, of 417 W. 146th street, New York City, N. Y. Capt. Fonvielle and Lieut. Edgehill received their M.D. degrees from Howard university and Capt. Hill graduated from Indiana university with an M.D. degree.

AUG 7 1943

Constitution
Atlanta, Ga.

Augusta Negro Newsman Volunteers as Chaplain

DEC 21 1943

AUGUSTA, Ga., Dec. 20.—(AP)—Douglass Hall, former associate editor of the Augusta Herald's Negro news service, has volunteered as a chaplain in the Army because "I believe t[illegible] need my service[illegible] the folks back [illegible]."

Hall has been sworn in the chaplaincy and will report at Harvard University for training January 2.

He asserted that so many people had asked why he, with his 4-D (minister's) draft classification, should give up a good job and the number of pastorless churches who are bidding for his services to become an Army chaplain.

Hall says: "Frankly, I think the American colored minister has failed in his duty to the soldier. Many are draft dodgers in every sense of the word. They are afraid to join the Army—afraid that it will cut down on their 'easy living.'

"I made my choice not because I now believe in war. I hate war. I know that it will mean weary days on m[illegible]ers, in[illegible]n foxholes, field [illegible] and long hikes. . . . But i[illegible] ever a man needed a 'sky pilot' it is on a lonely island in the Pacific, on the desert of North Africa. . . ."

DEC 21 1943

Only 2 Colored Officers in Vet QM Unit in N. Africa

Afro-American Baltimore. Md

DEC 25 1943

Lieut. Simms Says Stewart "Went Through Hell With Us"; Fulcher Misses Newspapers

By ART CARTER

AFRO War Correspondent with U.S. Troops in North Africa

[Copyright. Reproduction in whole or in part expressly forbidden.]

ALLIED FORCE HEADQUARTERS—(By Cable)—Recently promoted from the rank of second lieutenant, First Lt. Robert H. Simms is one of only two colored officers in his veteran quartermaster regiment.

The other is Chaplain William Muldrow, formerly pastor at Warrenton, N.C., and professor at Kittrell College. He is assisted by Cpl. Richard M. Marshall, Newport News, Va.

DEC 25 1943

Praises Stewart

Simms, who is from Indianapolis, Ind., was with the outfit in the thick of the North African campaign last winter serving troops under fire, but currently has a behind-the-lines assignment. He has unstinting praise for Ollie Stewart who, he says, went through "hell up there with us."

He is 28 and a Lane College graduate.

DEC 25 1943

Chaplain Muldrow, a n[illegible] of Sumter, S.C., is a graduate of Morris College and Gammon Theological Seminary. Both have been overseas over a year, having come to North Africa with the invasion forces from England.

Duke Woods Has Band

Another interesting personality I met recently was Sgt. Duke Woods of Berkley, Calif., whose 14-piece band plays regularly for the Red Cross Club dances in Oran. Significantly, he bears a striking resemblance to Duke Ellington.

Workers at the club include Millard T. Woods, Lincoln, Neb., director; Raymond E. Miller, Philadelphia, and Geneva Howard of Washington, D.C.

Willie M. Moore of Washington, D.C., also is employed by the Red Cross in Oran but at another club.

Sees Donald Wyatt

Donald W. Wyatt, Red Cross field director, of Baltimore, visited the club the same day I did. He is mapping an extension of facilities for soldiers in Italy.

Duke's music was a source of joy to the soldiers who had put in long hours of work. Many of them did jitterbug steps with French, Arab, and Spanish girls who were guests. Others just sat on the balcony and soothed their souls with the old home songs, humming them to themselves.

Fulcher Misses Papers

Sgt. Malcolm Fulcher, ex-AFRO writer, barged in to complain about the lack of newspaper delivery over here. He is with a QM outfit that came over here one year ago and has been through many bombings.

DEC 25 1943

Others I met were four members of a crack coast artillery unit which has the important task of guarding the coastal region. They are Cpl. Isaac Swanson, Yonkers, N.Y.; Pvt. Woodward Miller, Philadelphia; Cpl. Ernest Johnson, Red Bank, N.J., and Sgt. Ansley Lamar, Newark, N.J.

W. S. M. Banks Is 1st Negro Captain For 92nd Division

Defender Chicago. Ill

By SAM LACY

(Defender Staff Correspondent)

OCT 30 1943

FT. H[illegible]ACHUC[illegible], Ariz. — The 92nd Division was given its first Negro infantry captain here last week.

He is Capt. William S. M. Banks, 27-year-old graduate of Dillard university and a native of New Orleans, La. Capt. Banks is a product of the Officers' Candidate school, Ft. Benning, Ga., and his promotion to captaincy last week was his second elevation in little more than a year.

Commissioned a second lieutenant on October 10, 1942, Capt. Banks received his first promotion, to the rank of first lieutenant, on January 28, 1943. On last Wednesday, he received notice from the War Department of his promotion to captaincy.

An unassuming youth with a pleasant manner of approach, the new company commander is regarded by his superiors as "a splendid soldier." Following his graduation from Dillard, Capt. Banks had his master's degree in agricultural economics conferred on him at Fisk university. Post-graduate work was also taken at the University of Iowa.

Asked how he felt about the

OCT 30 1943

honor bestowed upon him. Capt. Banks told the Defender he felt his success was due to the cooperation he had gotten from his men.

"I feel that for anything I have achieved I am indebted to the officers and men in my company. Every man gave me, and is giving me, all that he has in him. There is no doubt in my mind that each man realizes he has a just claim to a share in the honor that has come to me and my command," the new captain declared.

Although there are high-ranking Negro officers in other branches of the 92nd, Capt. Banks is the first colored man to hold rank higher than first lieutenant in infantry in that command. Eleven others are now serving as company commanders and, according to Maj. Gen. E. M. Almond, will be promoted to captaincies upon satisfactory completion of their periods of probation.

These men are: First Lts. Ezekiel C. Smith, New Orleans, La.; Maxwell W. Vails, Tuscaloosa, Ala.; Clarence H. Brown, Philadelphia, Pa.; Augustus W. Hamilton, Indianapolis, Ind.; Julian E. Miles, New York City; Charles F Gandy, Washington, D. C.; James D. McLish, Ft. Smith, Ark.; Andrew W. Walker, Tuskegee, Ala.; William E. Cooke, Cambridge, Mass.; Robert N. Hough, Washington, D. C., and Raymond F. Coles, Bronx, N. Y.

Gen. Almond told the Defender he was highly pleased with the efforts of these men and assured the writer that Negro officers will be promoted to commands "as fast as they show capacity for leadership."

OCT 30 1943

---

27 Chaplains Commissioned at Harvard U.

Afro-American

Baltimore, Md.

12 Methodists, 12 Baptists, 1 Holiness and 2 Presbyterian

3 OF 12 SECTION LEADERS COLORED

DEC 25 1943

Class of 260, One of Smallest, Had Largest Non-White Enrollment

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. — Twenty-seven of the 260 men in the nineteenth class of the U.S. Army Chaplains' School at Harvard University here Tuesday at formal exercises held in Sanders Theatre were colored.

47K

Token diplomas were delivered to the twelve section leaders, three of them colored, by Chaplain (Colonel) William D. Cleary, commandant of the school. Although the class was one of the smallest, it had the largest colored enrollment of any previous class.

DEC 25 1943

All of the chaplains commissioned directly from civilian life assume their assignments as first lieutenants. The next class, the training period lengthened by one week, will open January 6 and continue for five weeks.

12 Methodists, 12 Baptists

Among the 27 graduates were 12 Methodists, 12 Baptists, 2 Presbyterians, and 1 of the Church of God. Their names, place last served as civilian clergyman and denominations are as follows:

Lorenzo D Bennett, Tampa, Fla., AME; Charles C. Blake, Dalton, Ga., AME; Charles W. Blalock, Mumford, N.Y., Baptist; William M. Conyers, Rock Hill, S.C., Methodist; William J. Colvin, Gadsden, Ala., CME; Rufus A. Cooper, Oakland, Cal., AMEZ;

Lee A. Cousin, Tampa, Fla., AMEZ; Robert Crawford, Jr., Nashville, Tenn., Baptist; Alfred G. Dunston, Jr., Atlantic City, N.J., AMEZ; Lewis Z. Eichelberger, Irmo, S.C., Baptist; Edward W. Gantt, Pittsburgh, Pa., Methodist; Chalmers F. Gaithers, Los Angeles, Cal., Baptist;

DEC 25 1943

Rufus L. [illegible], Toronto, Ontario, Canada, Baptist; John J. Jenkins, Milton, Pa., AME; Nathaniel S. Jones, Stillwater, Okla., Baptist; William L. Jones, Macon, Ga., Baptist; Clifton M. Morgan, Tampa, Fla., Church of God; Sanford N. Peak, Kimball, W.Va., Baptist;

James R. C. Pinn, Pittsburgh, Pa., Baptist; King D. S. Pogue, Anderson, S.C., Presbyterian; William A. Scott, Kansas City, Mo., Baptist; Albert L. Smith, Louisville, Ky., Presbyterian;

James F. W. Stewart, Amherst, Mass., AMEZ; Melvin C. Swann, Coffeyville, Kan., AME; Marion P. Swisher, Flagstaff, Ariz., Baptist; William T. Watts, Palestine, Texas, Baptist; Arthur D. Williams, Columbus, Ohio, Methodist.

New Haven Minister Now Army Chaplain

Afro-American

DEC 18 1943

NEW HAVEN, Conn. — The Rev. John H. Edwards, rector of St. Luke Episcopal Church and a State Guard officer, was recently granted a leave from his parish to enter the chaplains' school at Harvard University, Boston.

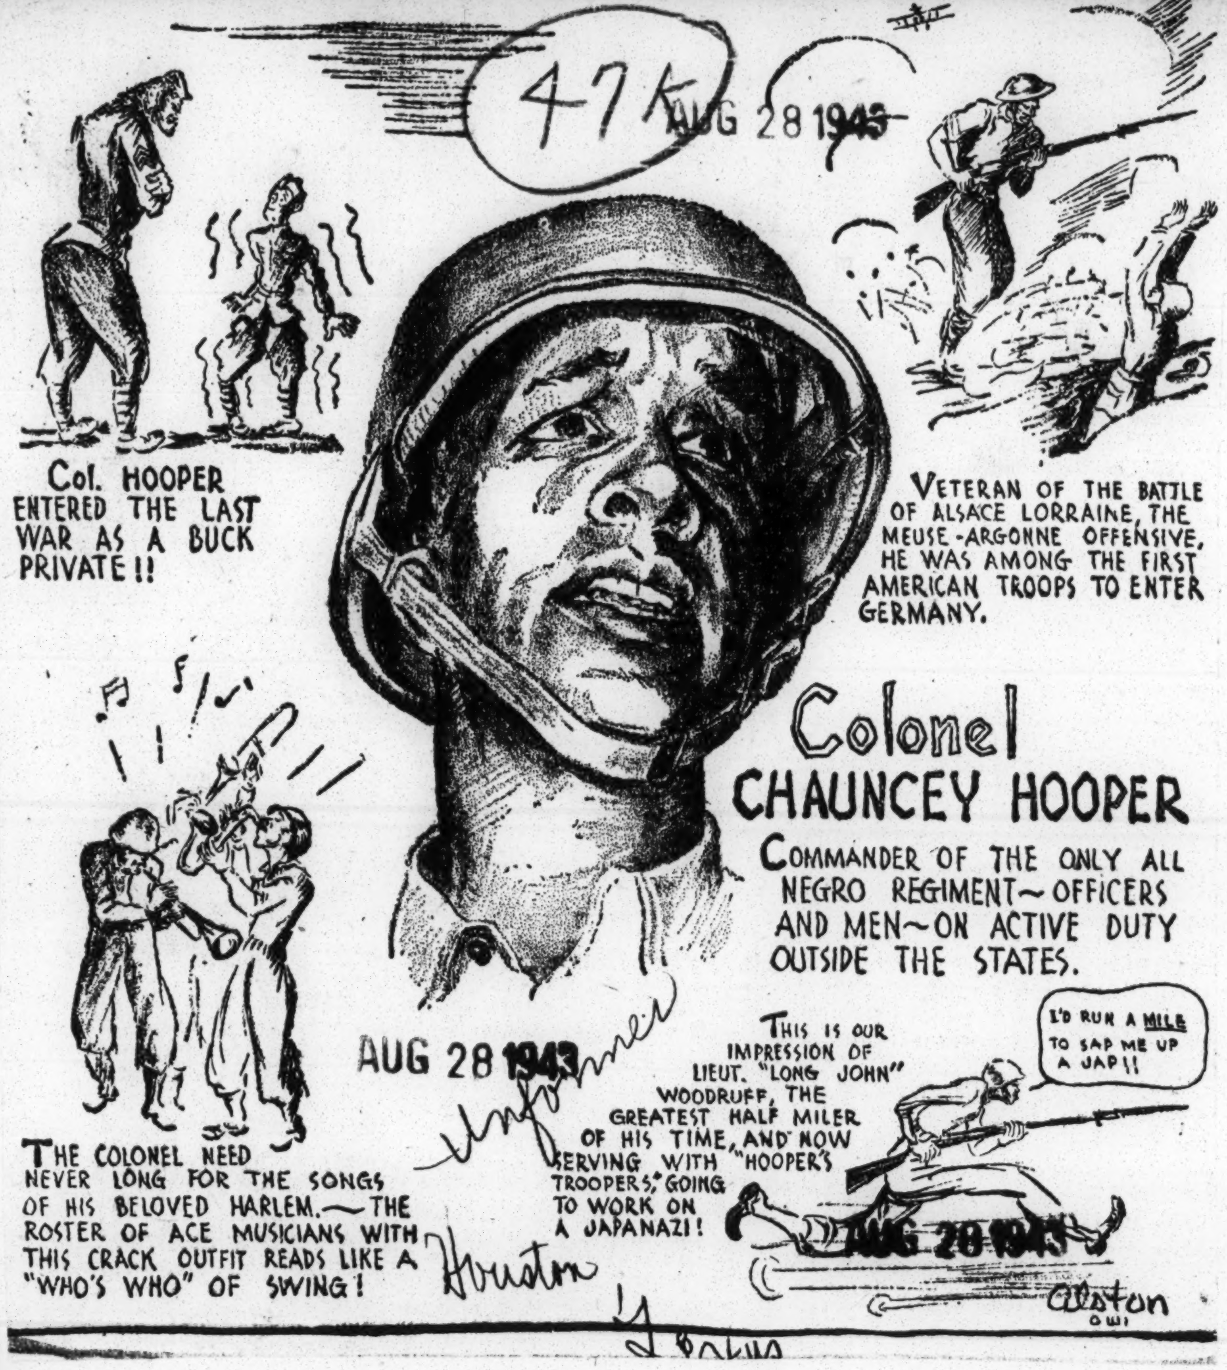
Rev. Edwards

47K

Baltimore, Md.

The Rev. Mr. Edwards, who was appointed second lieutenant of infantry by Former Governor [illegible], is camouflage officer of the Second Battalion (white) of the Second Military District of Connecticut.

DEC 18 1943



Col. HOOPER ENTERED THE LAST WAR AS A BUCK PRIVATE!!
VETERAN OF THE BATTLE OF ALSACE LORRAINE, THE MEUSE-ARGONNE OFFENSIVE, HE WAS AMONG THE FIRST AMERICAN TROOPS TO ENTER GERMANY.
Colonel CHAUNCEY HOOPER
COMMANDER OF THE ONLY ALL NEGRO REGIMENT ~ OFFICERS AND MEN ~ ON ACTIVE DUTY OUTSIDE THE STATES.
THE COLONEL NEED NEVER LONG FOR THE SONGS OF HIS BELOVED HARLEM.—THE ROSTER OF ACE MUSICIANS WITH THIS CRACK OUTFIT READS LIKE A "WHO'S WHO" OF SWING!
THIS IS OUR IMPRESSION OF LIEUT. "LONG JOHN" WOODRUFF, THE GREATEST HALF MILER OF HIS TIME, AND NOW SERVING WITH "HOOPER'S TROOPERS," GOING TO WORK ON A JAPANAZI!
I'D RUN A MILE TO SAP ME UP A JAP!!
Alston OWI

47K

AUG 28 1943

AUG 28 1943

AUG 28 1943

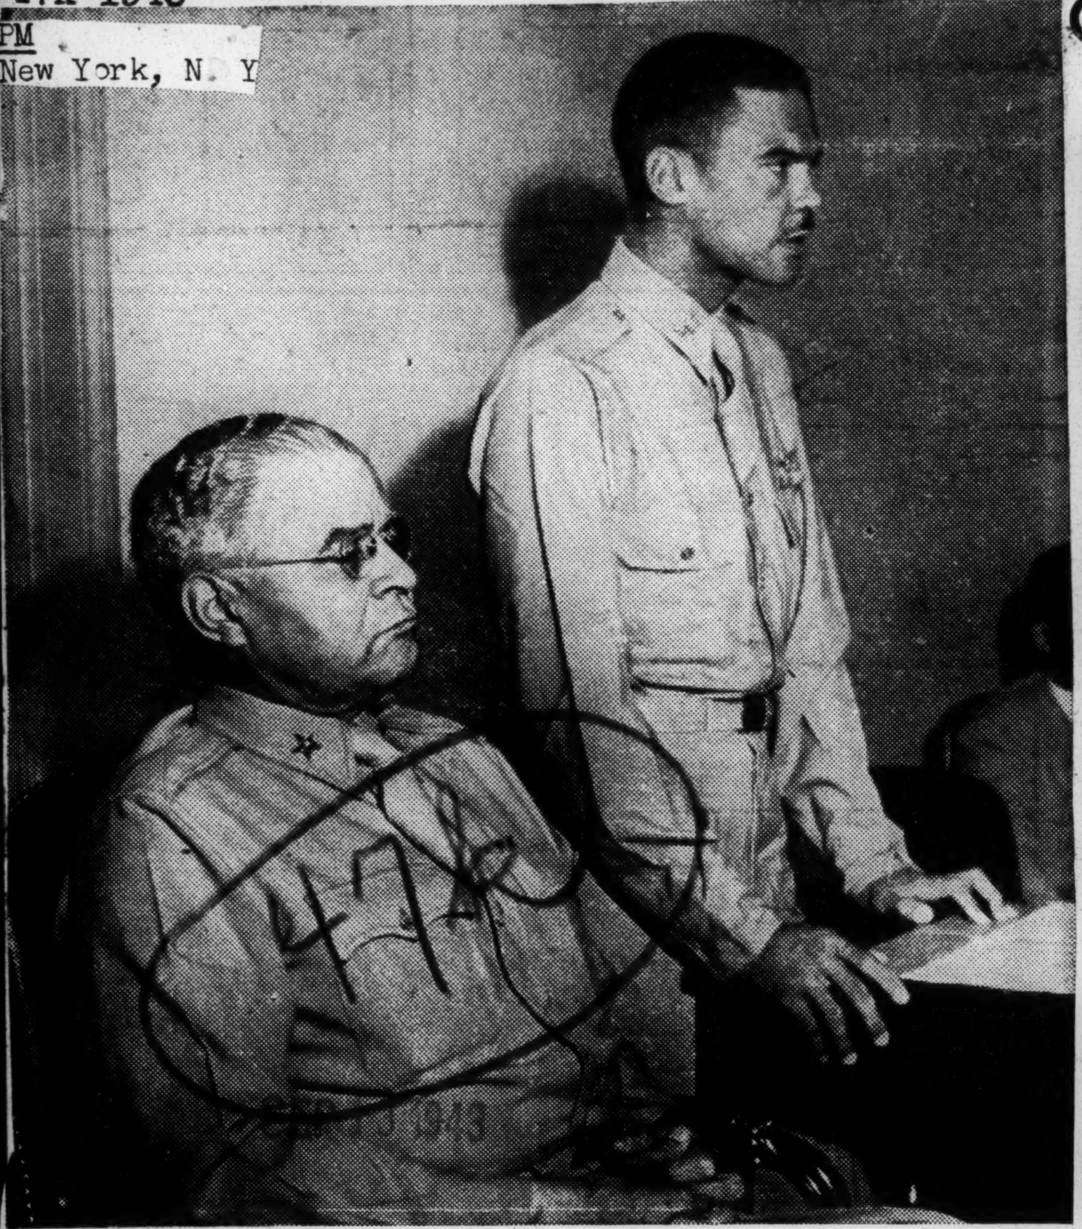
Informer

Houston

Texas

47k-1943

PM
New York, N. Y



SEP 3 1943

Negro Hero Home From Sicily

Lt. Col. Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., just back from Sicily, where he commanded an all-Negro fighter squadron, stands beside his father, Brig. Gen. Benjamin O. Davis, Sr., of the Inspector General's Office, at a War Dept. press conference in Washington. Lt. Col. Davis now goes to Selfridge Field, Mich., to train three more all-Negro squadrons for the 33d Fighter Group. U. S. Army Photo

---

23 Chaplains End Course at Harvard's Army School

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md

12 Methodists, 7 Baptists and 4 Presbyterians, Included; 2 Marylanders in List

NOV 13 1943

CAMBRIDGE, Mass.—Twenty-three of the 329 chaplains who left Cambridge Friday for fighting fronts and base camps all over the world after the eighteenth commencement at the U.S. Army Chaplain School at Harvard were colored.

The graduation was held in Sanders Theatre and a graduation review on the Washington Elm Common, with music by the 241st Coast Artillery Band. Chaplain Edmond J. Griffin of the Air Service Command, Patterson Field, Ohio, delivered the graduation address. [illegible] diplomas were delivered to the twelve section leaders, two of whom were colored, by Col. William D. Cleary, commandant of the school.

240 Have Finished

Since August, 1942, approximately 240 colored chaplains have attended the Harvard Chaplain School with the present class having one of the largest colored enrollments. To the chaplains, their assignments will be their first taste of army life, as they were civilian clergymen six weeks ago.

Graduates

Among the twenty-three colored graduates were 12 Methodists, 7 Baptists, and 4 Presbyterians. They are:

Lorenzo A. Alexander, Knoxville, Tenn., Baptist; George E. Allen, Philadelphia, Pa., Baptist; William C. Bouchelion, Frierson, La., Presbyterian; James Clement, Cambridge, Mass., AME Zio[illegible] William [illegible] Dandridge, Greenwoo[illegible] AME; M[illegible] L. Darnell, Dallas, Tex., AME; Nelson H. Dixon, San Antonio, Tex., AME; Clarence Guthrie, Paris, Tenn., Methodist; William R. Gray, Charleston, Miss., Baptist;

John W. Handy, Oriole, Md., Methodist; Thomas J. B. Harris, New York City and New Jersey, Presbyterian; Gerald L. Hayden, South Bend, Ind., AME; Marlin J. Hendrieth, Jefferson, Ind., AME; William H. Hightower, Canton, Miss., Methodist; Van J. Malone, Chambers, Ga., Baptist; Carlos M. May, Atlanta, Ga., AME;

Edmund J. O'Neal, Ramer, Ala., AME Zion; Clarence H. Richmond, Savannah, Ga., Presbyterian; King D. Reddick, Bradenton, Fla. (Washington, D.C.), Baptist; Levi L. Stanmore, Washington, D[illegible] Baptist; Charles L. Tarter, Paterso[illegible] [Mary[illegible] Presbyterian; Henry E. Thornton, [illegible]lanta, Ga., AME; Frank L. White, Manassas, Va. (Washington, D.C.), Baptist.

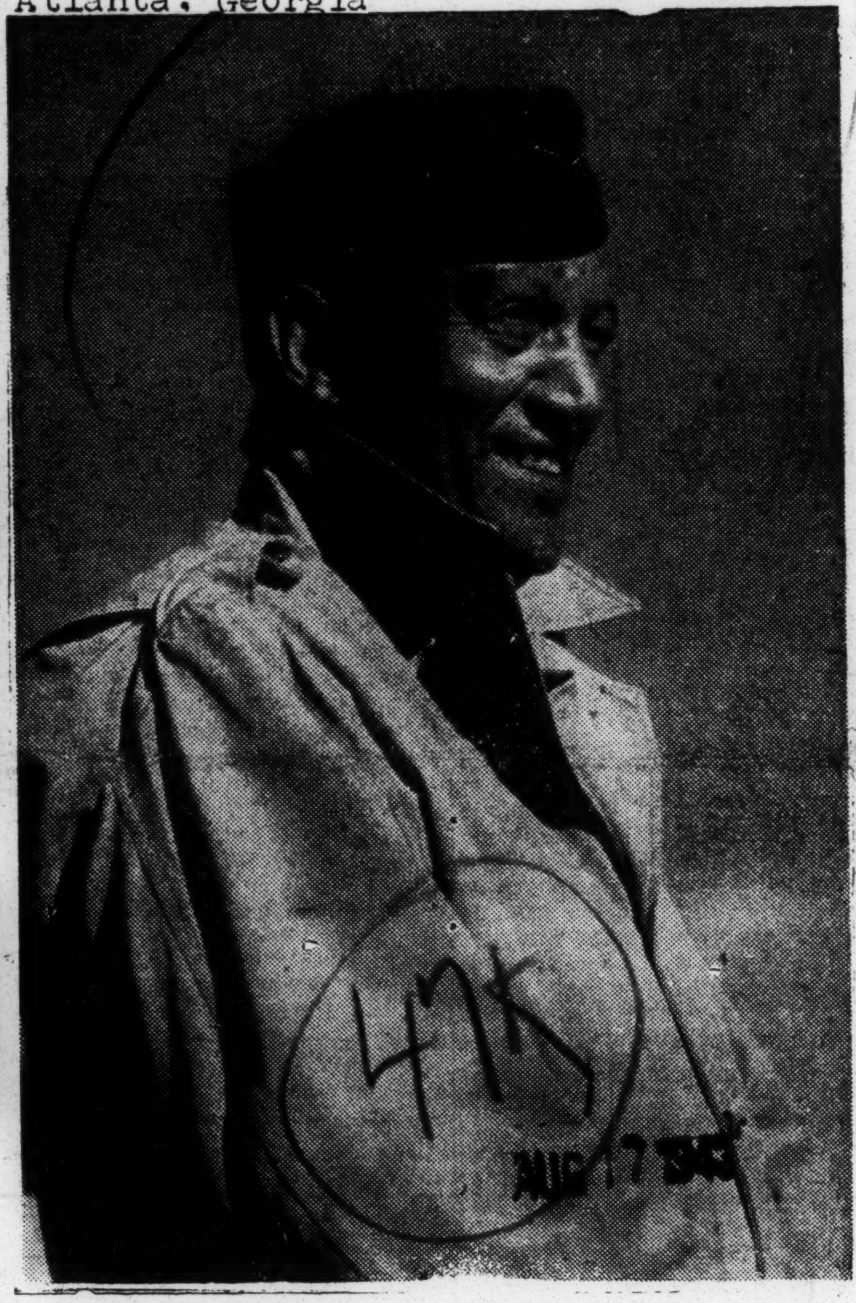
Course Extended

The school term has been extended f[illegible] weeks, the school week from five days to six days, and the daily period lengthened from 4 to 5 o'clock. The academic subjects are divided into three groups. The new sequences are "Practical Duties of the Chaplain and Army Administration"; "Army Organization, Customs and Courtesies of the Services," "Defense against Chemicals, and Graves Registration," "Army Morale, Counselling, Military Discipline and Military Law."

The new class for the five-week chaplain school began October 10.

Going To Public Relations

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia



AUG 17 1943

CAPTAIN HOMER ROBERTS

—Commanding Officer of the Fort Huachuca Military Police Detachment, who will soon take over a new assignment with a section of the War Department Public Relations [illegible]ce in Washington. He began his military career in [illegible]mber, 1917, was commissioned a first lieutenant April, 1918 and was promoted to a captain on September 27, 1918. He was recommissioned a captain last October 3. Before returning to th army, he was an automobile dealer in Chicago.

AUG 17 1943

CAMP HOOD OFFICERS RECEIVE PROMOTIONS

Daily World
Atlanta, Ga

AUG 2 1943

CAMP HOOD, Texas — (ANP)— While the pioneer platoon of the reconnaissance company broke a post record for putting a three-quarter ton jeep across an unfordable stream, it was disclosed that three enlisted men attached to the 795th Tank Destroyer battalion had been promoted.

The soldiers winning promotions are:

First Lieutenant Thomas Monroe Campbell, assigned to the medical corps, who was made a captain.

First Lieut. Rudolph Raymond Billups, assigned to the dental corps who also won a captaincy.

Second Lieut. Walker Mifflin Blake, who was promoted to the rank of first lieutenant.

Capt. Campbell, whose home is in Tuskegee, Alabama, is a graduate of the Meharry Medical School and Carlisle Barracks, where he pursued military field medicine. He is married to Mrs. Helen Campbell.

Capt. Billups is from San Antonio, Tex., where his wife, Priscilla, resides. He was graduated from Meharry's dental school.

First Lieut. Blake of Danby, Pa., is an alumnus of Wilberforce University. He has a mother, Mrs. Margaret Blake.

The new jeep-moving record of nine minutes, 19 seconds abolished the old-time of 10 minutes, 30 seconds. Capt. George Rose of Chicago commands the title holding company.

Capt. Roberts New Commander Of 99th

Defender
Chicago, Ill

(Defender Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON — Capt. George S. Roberts, of Fairmont, W. Va., was named last week as the new commanding officer of the 99th Pursuit Squadron, succeeding Lt. Col. Benjamin O. Davis Jr., who a few days after the announcement of Roberts' promotion was back in the United States.

CAPT. GEORGE S. ROBERTS

Lt. Col Davis is believed to have been recalled to this country for the purpose of heading up the 332nd Fighter Group, soon to be graduated from training at Selfridge Field, Mich., air base. The 332nd, it is assumed, will soon be ready for overseas duty.

Captain Roberts was formerly operations officer and second in command of the 99th. He is regarded as one of the most capable airmen in the North African theatre and is considered a wise choice for the job of leading the unit in the coming stages of the fast-developing action on the continent

Almost simultaneous with the announcement of the change in command came word that Gen. Dwight Eisenhower has approved decorations for 26 pilots of the 99th, all of whom are slated to receive the air medal, coveted army award for meritorious achievement against the enemy. Cited were:

Davis Among Group

Lt. Col. Davis and Capts. Lemuel Custis, Hartford, Conn.; Charles B. Hall, Brazil, Ind.; and George S. Roberts, the new commander.

First Lts. Willie Ashley Jr., Sumter, S. C.; George R. Bolling, Phoebus, Va.; Sidney P. Brooks, Cleveland, Ohio; Samuel R. Bruce, Seattle, Wash.; William A. Campbell, Tuskegee, Ala.; Herbert E. Carter, Amory, Miss.; Herbert Clark, Cleveland, Ohio; Charles W. Dryden, New York City; Willie H. Fuller, Tarboro, N. C.; Clarence C. Jamison, Cleveland, Ohio.

First Lts. James B. Knighten, Tulsa, Okla.; Allen G. Lane, Demopolis, Ala.; Walter I. Lawson, Newton, Va.; Erwin B. Lawrence, Cleveland, Ohio; Paul G. Mitchell, Washington, D. C. (reported killed in action); Lewis R. Purnell, Germantown, Pa.; Lee Rayford, Washington, D. C.; Graham Smith, Ahoskie, N. C., and James T. Wiley, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Bids Flyers Farewell

Second Lts. Leon C. Roberts, Pritchard, Ala.; John W. Rogers, Cincinnati, Ohio, and Spann Watson, Hackensack, N. J.

Summoned on September 1 to North African Air Force headquarters in Sicily, Lt. Col. Davis flew his own plane there and received the orders which sent him back to Washington. Returning to his own headquarters, he told the men of the transfer and shook each of them by hand. In simple words he expressed regret at having to leave and assured them, 'It has been a great honor to have commanded such a unit."

A week before Lt. Col. Davis' switch, eight replacements arrived at the 99th base, having been flown there across the Atlantic. It was the first time in history that Negro army pilots have flown the Atlantic. While it is not generally known how they came, it is assumed the men ferried across by the Army Transport Command.

New Men Number 12

The new men to join the 99th are all second lieutenants. They are: Robert W. Deiz, 24, Portland, Ore.; Edward Driver, 21, Trenton, N. J.; Herman A. Lawson, 25, Marysville, Cal.; George T. McCrumby, 25, Fort Worth, Texas; Clarence B. Mills, 23, Durham, N. C.; Henry B. Perry, 23, Thomasville, Ga.; Price D. Rice, 22, Montclair, N. J., and William H. Walker, 28, Carbondale, Ill.

The eight new arrivals bring the total of replacements to 12 for the outfit. Previously, four additions had been made, but these had arrived by water. They were: 2nd Lts. John A. Gibson, 23, of 3105 S. Parkway, Chicago; Howard L. Baugh, 23, Petersburg, Va.; Edward Toppins, 28, San Francisco, Cal., and John S. Morgan, Cartersville, Ga.

Official War Department announcement of the death in action of Lt. Paul G. Mitchell, of Washington, D. C., was couched in a terse communication, addressed to Mrs. Pauline G. Mitchell, his mother, at her home, 908 Howard Road, Southeast. The statement said that Lt. Mitchell died on August 11.

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

Gets Army Promotion

KENNETH L. HARDY, of the 93rd Division, who was promoted to First Lt. this week. Lieut. Hardy, a native of Washington, is now stationed with special Army Training School at Howard University.

Chicago Tribune
Chicago, Illinois

47K

SEP 26 1943

International photo

FATHER AND SON—Brig. Gen. Benjamin O. Davis of the Inspector General's department, U. S. army, and Lt. Col. Benjamin O. Davis Jr., back from command of an all-Negro air fighter squadron in Sicily.

332nd Flight Surgeon Called Man of Action

NOV 27 1943

Afro-American
Baltimore. Md

Major James Ramsey Flies With Men, Is Doctor, Psychologist. and Father Confessor

By DOUGLASS HALL
Staff Correspondent

SELFRIDGE FIELD, Mich.—Major James P. Ramsey, group flight surgeon for the 332nd Fighter Group, watches over the physical and mental condition of his aircrew with the solicitude of a

The duties of Major Ramsey, a graduate of Howard cine include a whole catalogue of functions. He is a man of action. He goes with the troops

Major Ramsey and flies on an an occasional mission.

There is little doubt that the role of flight surgeon is different and new. Such a person must be skilled in surgery. He must be a psychologist and father confessor, too.

He must have the intuition to know the airmen's problems and what to do about them. Medicine bottles will do nothing for a pilot whose nerves are jittery from the strain of too much flying. No surgery will help flyers whose temperaments explode.

Well Qualified for Job

He must know when to encourage, when to be blunt, when to joke and when to advise. He has to understand his men and what each one can take. He has the obligation to forbid any man to fly if he is not fit.

NOV 27 1943

Major Ramsey has made himself fit for the important task of group flight surgeon by graduating from the following American Air Force courses:

Field medicine, at Carlisle Barracks, Pa., December, 1941; aviation medicine, Randolph Field, Texas, September, 1942, and altitude physiology, McDill Field, Fla., March, 1943.

NOV 27 1943

Five Assistants

He is assisted in his duties by the following staff: Capt. Vance Matchbanks, Capt. H. B. Anderson, Lt. Bascom S. Waugh, Lt. Frank Jordan, all of the medical corps, and Capt. Franklin Beck of the dental corps. All are flight surgeons except Captain Beck.

Formerly commanding officer of the 701st Sanitary Company, Fort Bragg, N.C., Major Ramsey was assigned to Tuskegee Army Flying School in August, 1941, where he was assistant to the surgeon officer in charge of the flight examining unit and commanding officer of the Medical Detachment. He was assigned to the 332nd in January, 1943.

NOV 27 1943

A graduate of the University of Pennsylvania, Major Ramsey interned at Mercy Hospital at Philadelphia and was later a resident surgeon under Dr. Frederick D. Stubbs at the Douglass Hospital of that city.

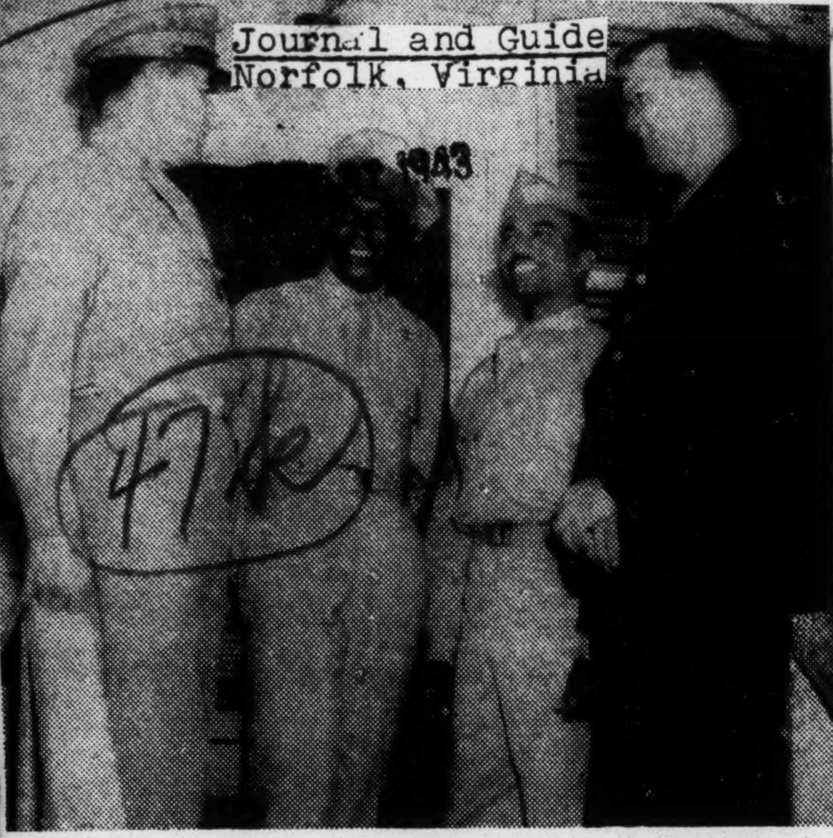
His wife, the former Miss Ruth Lovett, of Augusta, Ga., is with him, living in nearby Detroit.

47k-1943

Journal and Guide
Norfolk, Virginia

OCT 29 1943

47k



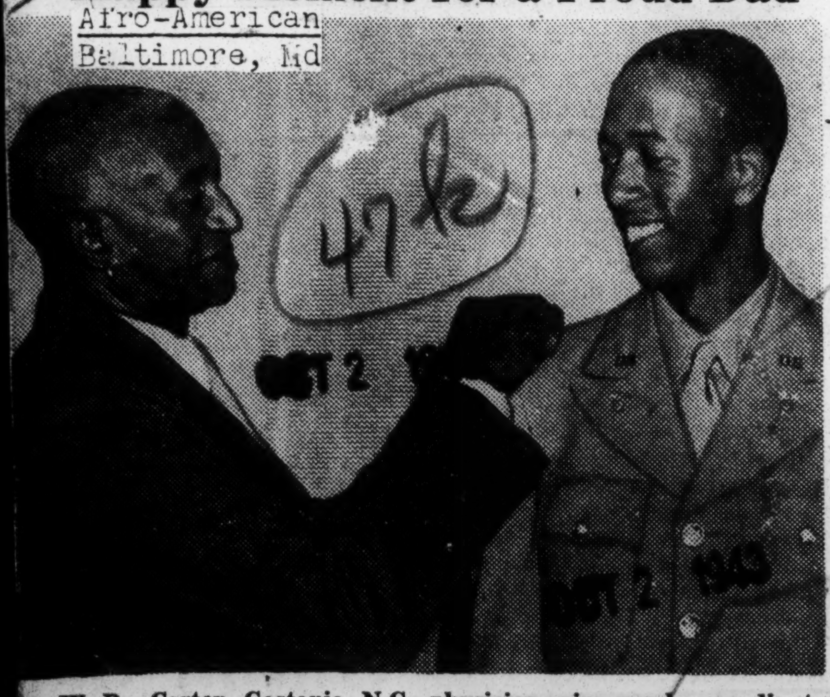
MAYBE IT WAS A GOOD JOKE—Whatever Lt. Col. Paul Giegerich, at left, chief of chaplains of the Army Air Forces Eastern Flying Training Command, from Maxwell Field, Alabama, had to say must have been in a humorous vein judging from the expressions on the faces of Lt. Stanley J. Williams, assistant post chaplain of the Tuskegee Army Air Field, second from left; Staff Sgt. Allen W. Walton, second from right; and Lt. Col. Charles I. Carpenter, right, chaplain of the Army Air Forces, of Washington, D. C. The group was snapped on the steps of the Special Service building at TAAF during one of the stops made by the visiting chaplains on a tour of the post. Photo by TAAF

Happy Moment for a Proud Dad

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md

OCT 2 1943

47k



Dr. W. P. Carter, Gastonia, N.C., physician, pins newly won lieutenant's bars on the shoulders of his son, William P., Jr. Lieutenant Carter's sister, Miss Wilmuth Carter, was also present. He graduated last week at the quartermaster school. The Carters live at 218 W. Walnut Street, Gastonia.

---

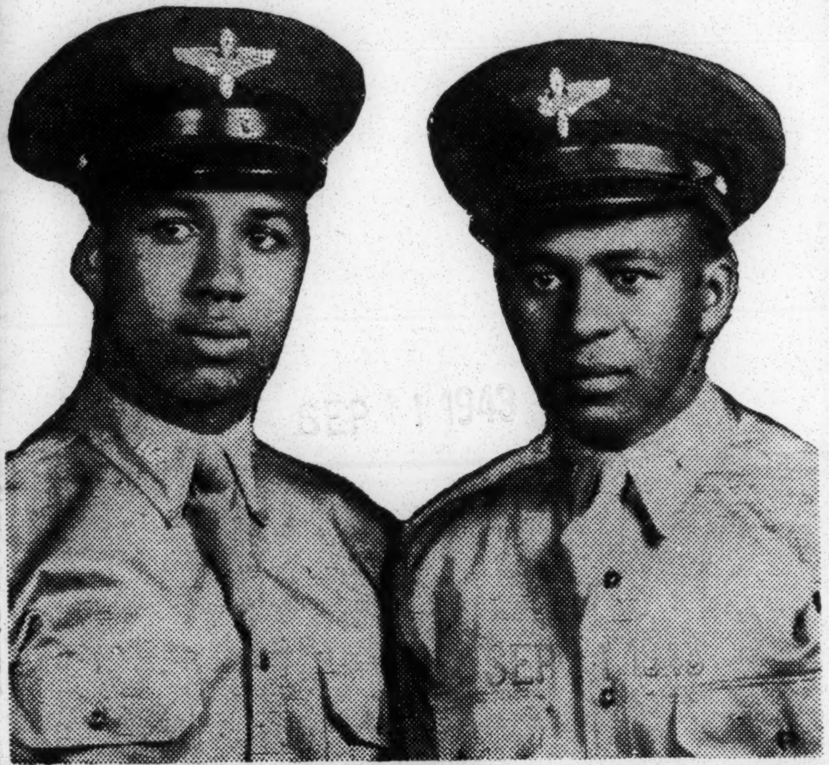
2 Finish MIT Army Unit as Weather Men

Afro-American
Baltimore, Maryland

SEP 11 1943

End of 11 Months' Course Brings Air Corps Commissions

47k



2nd Lieutenants John T. Willis of Riverton, N.J., and Robert M. Preer of Atlanta, who were commissioned in Army Air Corps Monday as weather forecasters.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. — On Labor Day in this city, while Harvard University was conferring an honorary degree upon Prime Minister Winston Churchill, two colored aviation cadets were graduated from the United States Army Air Corps Meteorology School, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and were commissioned lieutenants in the army air corps as weather forecasters.

They are John Thomas Willis of Riverton, N.J., and Robert Maurice Preer of St. Louis, Mo., and Atlanta, Ga. For the past eleven months they have been taking the difficult meteorology courses at MIT in Cambridge, and now as finished products will be stationed in strategic positions to aid in air combat by their ability to predict and chart weather conditions accurately.

Willis's Record

Lieutenant Willis, son of Mrs. Eleanor J. Young of Riverton, attended the Palmyra, N.J., High School and was graduated in 1942 from the Trenton, N.J., Highers' College, where he was on the track and soccer teams and in the glee club.

At the meteorology school he was a member of the Weatherman's Chorus, which broadcast frequently over Boston stations.

He was also a member of Kappa Delta Pi, national honor society for teachers, and treasurer of his college's chapter. Willis has also studied photogrammetry at Princeton University and worked in the geological survey division of the Department of the Interior for six months while continuing his studies at Howard University.

He became a member of the Enlisted Reserve on August 24, 1942, and reported to MIT as a cadet on November 7, 1942.

Preer a Chemist

Lieutenant Preer, the son of Mrs. Rose Preer Brown of Atlanta, was graduated from the Booker T. Washington High School in Atlanta and from Morehouse College, with the class of 1941, obtaining a B.S. in chemistry.

He was a member of the Science and Math Club, the M Club, and one of the national directors of Delta Phi Delta, journalistic society. He later worked as postmaster at Atlanta University, and in the registrar's office there.

He volunteered in June, 1942, for meteorology training, and was called to active duty last November 9. In September, 1942, Preer married Miss Bette Banner of Boston, and on June 10, became the father of a son.

Others in Training

At present five universities — MIT, New York University, the University of Chicago, California Institute of Technology at Pasedena and the University of California at Los Angeles—are offering this highly technical training in co-operation with the army.

Five men are now in the advanced phases of meteorology in the air corps. One of the other two commissioned officers besides Willis and Preer is Lieut. Benjamin Bullock, stationed at the Tuskegee Army Air Field, and one aviation cadet is now in training in California.

Outline of the Work

Although under strict military discipline, the weatherman cadets are accorded the greatest privileges and comforts. They live in the dormitory suites once occupied by the undergraduate students at MIT, which overlooks the Charles River.

They also have the privilege of keeping up to date their highly personal "201 file," which is ordinarily kept under lock and key in personnel offices. Although they are free from Saturday at 6 p.m. until Sunday at 11 p.m., they have a full schedule throughout the week from 6:15 a.m. to 11 p.m.

Reveille at 6:15 a.m., breakfast at 6:40, police barracks, classes from 8 a.m. until 1 p.m., dinner from 1 p.m. until 2 p.m., classes and laboratory periods in the afternoon and also one hour of supervised calisthenics. The essential studying is done between 6 p.m. and 11 p.m. when the lights are put out.

Get Broad Training

SEP 11 1943

Under highly trained army and civilian instructors, they study many subjects, over three semesters of eleven weeks each, that are broken by an eight-day furlough period, and with the original eight weeks' basic training, an eleven-month period is completed.

Recently the new pre-meteorology course was extended to twenty-one months. Courses covered are on the college and graduate level and include dynamic, synoptic and descriptive meteorology; climatology, oceanography, physics of the air, thermodynamics, long-range forecasting, station operation and instrumentation.

Costs $600 Per Semester

Because of the $600 per semester that the government pays MIT for the training that these men receive and the graduate level of the courses taught, MIT has agreed to grant master's degrees in meteorology to all the aviation cadets who return after the war and meet certain basic prescribed requirements.

Immediately following the graduation exercises on Monday morning, Lieutenants Preer and Willis left for their new stations.

Public Relations Men Take Posts in War Department

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md

WASHINGTON

Faced with the task of assisting in gathering news about colored troops at home and abroad, Capt. Homer Roberts, Press Section, War Department, is already on the job with Lt. Daniel Day as his assistant.

1943

The first colored officers to be given official status in the Public Relations Branch, the men

SEP 4 1943

SEP 4 1943

Capt. Homer Roberts (left) and Lt. Daniel Day are shown on the job in the Public Relations Branch, War Department. They are the first colored officers to be included in the department.

lost no time in making contacts, submitting suggestions, and going about the job of getting scripts out of the department to the press.

No "Colored Section"

Strictly speaking, there is no special colored section. All reporters have the run of the department and access to unrestricted files, libraries, maps, and contact with hundreds of officers, enlisted men and civilians. However, the new officers will handle colored news exclusively.

The Pentegon Building, the War Department's city, with more than 30,000 workers, where their offices are located, is in the heart of the nervous system of the world and "hot" stories are as plentiful as feathers on a bird's back. But it will be years before many of them can be published.

"You may rest assured that we will do all we can to get all we can," Capt. Roberts told the AFRO, Monday.

Let us take a general view at the job these men are expected to put over.

General View of Job

In every theatre of war, thou- they are usually there.

They write letters back home about their activities and colored war correspondents vividly tell of their exploits, but the War Department is very often mum.

If the stories do leak out, it has often been history when it reaches the waiting friends and relatives of the fighting men. So the first task that they face is getting out more news items about colored troops abroad.

Second Part of Task

The second is to get colored troops included in War Department's pictures, specifically, those taken by the signal corps. It's like looking for a needle in a haystack trying to find pictures of colored troops even when one knows they are in a certain area. There are white pictures, but no colored included.

The writer has put this question to a number of photographers returning to this country and here is the answer that one gave:

"We have no objection to taking pictures of colored troops, but we just don't think about them. Not that they are not doing a good job, but our biggest circulation is among white papers and many of them don't use the pictures so we just don't bother.

"Perhaps we should get a few more of them, and if I return to the front, I will."

From all indications officials in the Public Relations Department are anxious to see the new officers succeed. And they will.

47k

SEP 4 1943

Father, Son Meet The Press

Daily World
Atlanta, Georgia

47k

WASHINGTON, D. C. — This father and son are pictured at a War Department press conference in Washington, D. C., reunited after the son, Lt. Col. Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., returned from Sicily, where he commanded an all-Negro air fighter squadron. The father, Brig. Gen. Benjamin O. Davis, Sr., seated, is of the Inspector General's department. The Lieutenant Colonel will go to Selfridge Field, Mich., to train the 332nd fighter group, another all-Negro outfit.

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md

World Record Holder Now Weather Officer at TAAF

TUSKEGEE, Ala.—Archie Williams, former star 440 man at the University of California and a member of the 1936 Olympic track team, was recently assigned to the Tuskegee Army Air Field, where he will serve as a weather officer.

Lieutenant Williams received his commession upon the completion of his aviation cadet training in meteorology at the University of California at Los Angeles, on September 6.

While a cadet at [illegible]CLA, the erstwhile Californ[illegible]ddle distance sen[illegible] was awarded the coveted [illegible]sical Fitness Award for outstanding excellence in physical training activities.

A graduate of the University of California with a bachelor of science degree, Lieutenant Williams is widely known for his exploits on the cinderpath. He holds the world's record for the 400-meter dash, 46.1 seconds, made on June 19, 1936, in Chicago.

LT. ARCHIE WILLIAMS

Olympic Champion

At the Berlin Olympic Games the same year, the University of California speed merchant slowed down a bit as he copped the 400-meter Olympics crown in 46.5 seconds. Following his success at the Olympics Williams toured Norway, Sweden and Finland for exhibitions.

The former West Coast speedster was a civilian flight instructor at the 66th AAFFTD Primary Field at Tuskegee prior to his appointment as aviation cadet.

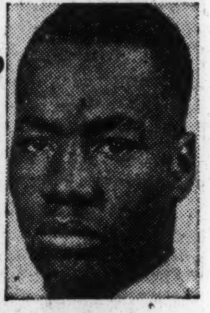
Lieutenant Williams is married to the former Miss Vesta A. Young, a University of Illinois graduate from Cairo, Ill. Lieutenant and Mrs. Williams reside at Tuskegee.

OCT 2

Chicago Tribune
Chicago, Ill.

With AMERICA'S FIGHTERS

Now on duty at the Tuskegee army air field, Tuskegee, Ala., are Lt. William M. Jordan, son of Robert Jordan, 6230 Rhodes avenue, and Lt. Thurston Mason, son of Mrs. Effie Mason of 4730 Langley avenue.



Lt. Jordan.

Lt. Mason.

Lt. Jordan, a former Northwestern railroad employe, entered the army on Jan. 6, 1941, and was commissioned at Fort Sill, Okla., Jan. 7, 1943. Lt. Mason, who formerly worked for the Atlantic and Pacific Tea company, enlisted in the army Dec. 12, 1940, and also was commissioned at Fort Sill last Jan. 7.

SEP 6 1943

47k

47k-1943

SEP 11 1943

Philadelphia Tribune
Philadelphia, Pa.

CAMP LEE, Va.—Among the recent graduates of Class 28, Officer Candidate School, here were (top row going down), left to right: Lts. Samuel O'Tanner Cohen, Miami, Fla.; James Maurice Cobb, Haverford, Pa.; JACK SHELTON HARVEY, West Philadelphia, Pa.; Lafayette Parker, Richlands, N. C.; and Eddie Diamond, Jacksonville, Fla.

I WRITE AS I SEE

Philadelphia Tribune

OCT 9 1943

By ARTHUR HUFF FAUSET

SWORD OF DAMOCLES

Philadelphia, Pa.

TWO months have passed since the trial of Chaplain Luther M. Fuller and still no decision has been reached. The case is shrouded in mystery and secrecy. The facts, however, are as clear as the sunlight. The Army simply has no case against the Chaplain for his brave action in exposing brutalities and atrocities to colored soldiers in the southwest Pacific.

FAUSET

The trial, for all its secret trappings and trimmings, vindicated Chaplain Fuller and condemned the Army officials involved, including the Chief of Chaplains of the U. S. Army. While the officials hesitate and delay, hoping on the one hand to hold this case over the Chaplain's head like the sword of Damocles and on the other hand to save its own face, citizens all over the United States are praising the intrepid chaplain and demanding that the Army clear his name and restore him to duty.

AN ATTACK ON ALL NEGRO SOLDIERS

It is my considered judgment, after surveying such evidence as has been permitted to trickle out from the chaplain's trial, that an attempt is being made to crucify a man because he tried to make Americans practice democracy as well as preach it. But it is more than that. The action against Chaplain Fuller has as its prime motive the further suppression of the Negro people in the armed forces. God knows Negro soldiers have difficulties enough both inside and out of the Army barracks. Witness, for example, the recent indignities poured on Captain Hugh Mulzac in a railroad waiting room in Richmond, Virginia.

But certain forces in our country are determined that not only will Negroes be tormented, persecuted and short-changed even when they are giving their blood and lives in order that all people may be free, but that if they raise a voice against indignity and brutality they are to be made to pay double. The slogan for Negroes is to be, "Theirs not to reason why, theirs but to do and die."

Here is the crux of the case against Chaplain Fuller. Much as we are anxious to see the personal vindication of this brave hero, it is even more important for the hundreds of thousands of Negro boys and girls in the armed forces that the Army be compelled to establish the only fair verdict in this case, namely, the innocence of Chaplain Fuller.

ACT NOW!

If Chaplain Fuller can be wrongly convicted and cheated out of a just verdict, the future of our boys and girls in the Armed Forces is hardly worth more than the whim of any commanding officer. Under any circumstances, we will fight against Fascism; but it hardly can be claimed that fighting for the right of southern demagogues to persecute us in the Armed Forces is included in the bargain.

The Baptist Convention, under the leadership of Dr. W. H. Jernagin and his Ecclesiastical Indorsement Committee, is to be congratulated for refusing to withdraw its indorsement of Chaplain Fuller. The major church denominations would do well to follow up with setting aside a Sunday to be known as Chaplain Fuller Day on which protests from all over the nation might be forwarded to the President of the United States, Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson, and the Chief of Chaplains, William R. Arnold. Meantime each reader can aid the cause by sending his individual protest to these sources as well as urging other citizens to do likewise.

CHAPLAIN FULLER MUST BE COMPLETELY CLEARED!

Captain Harriet M. West Promoted To WAC Major

Age New York, N. Y.

WASHINGTON, D. C. — The War Department announced the promotion of 18 officers in the Women's Army Corps to the grade of Field Director (corresponding to the grade of Major in the Army).

Among those promoted is Harriet M. West, 924 M street, N.W., Washington, D.C. A member of the first class of officer candidates, she was commisioned a third officer (second lieutenant) last August and promoted to first officer (captain) in December. She was in the first group of officers to be assigned to WAC Headquarters in Washington, D. C.

SEP 4 1943

She attended Kansas State College and was formerly employed by Provident Hospital, Chicago, Illinois, as private secretary to Admiral Blackwood, executive director.

First Colored Officers at Camp Sutton

AUG 28 1943

Afro-American

WACs Also Arrive; Duties Have Not Yet Been Assigned

LIMITED SERVICE MEN RECLASSIFIED

Baltimore, Maryland

200 Men Applaud Miss Anderson's Singing

AUG 28 1943

CAMP SUTTON, N.C.—Some two hundred soldiers opened their eyes Sunday afternoon as Gertrude Anderson, Charlotte, N.C., appeared on the stage of service club, number 3, here and sang two selections, accompanied by Miss Louis E. Brooks.

Mrs. Anderson sang "The Lord's Prayer" and "Somebody's Knocking at Your Door." One soldier remarked "She's not pretty, she's glamorous."

Engineer Group Arrives

The 1315th and 1316th Regiments of Engineers have arrived here bringing with them the first colored commissioned officers this post has seen. The group will be stationed here for basic field training.

AUG 28 1943

Sgt. John W. Summerford, from N.C.O., in charge of recreation for colored troops and formerly of the Special Service Staff, gave up his office last week to be personel sergeant major with a regiment of engineers recently attached here.

AUG 28 1943

WAC's Arrive

Reclassification of all limited service men began here recently. According to reports such men must be placed in general service or discharged from the army.

Members of the WAC's arrived here Friday evening. No information as to their duties or purpose have been released as yet. However, it was officially reported that the shipment does include a number of colored WAC's.

Discharge For Chaplain Fuller Recommended By U.S. Army Board

Tribune
Philadelphia, Pa.

NOV 20 1943

Chaplain Luther M. Fuller is believed to have lost his fight for acquittal with the Reclassification Board, which heard charges against him last July.

The TRIBUNE was informed this week that the Board had recommended his discharge from the Army. A letter of inquiry directed to the War Department as to whether the Board's recommendation had been approved was unanswered as we went to press.

Whether the discharge is to be a "dishonorable" one, or whether the Chaplain will be put on inactive st[illegible] Army authorities technical co trol over him, was not clear.

However, the Board conclud

NOV 20 1943

Lieut. Luther M. Fuller

ed, among other things.

"That Chaplain, Luther M. Fuller surreptitiously persuaded enlisted men of the 76th CA (AA) Regiment to sign complaints alleging that bad conditions existed in the regiment and aided and abetted the writing of the exaggerated or unjustified complaints which formed the basis of this investigation.

"That Chaplain Fuller has abused his position as a chaplain and further continuation of his service as a chaplain of troops would be detrimental to the service."

"The board unanimously concluded that Chaplain Fuller's overall performance of duty was unsatisfactory, that he was lacking in cooperation and leadership, exercised poor judgment, has distorted viewpoints concerning the unfairness of his associates and the continual discrimination against colored soldiers, personal integrity is questionable as demonstrated by apparent untruths and contradictory statements made before the board."

47K

Second To Gain Rank

NOV 13 1942

Argus

St. Louis, Missouri

TUSKEGEE ARMY AIR FIELD, Ala., Nov. —In recognition of his splendid record in the control and suppression of venereal diseases among Negro troops throughout the United States, Lt. Col. George McDonald, Medical Corps, Tuskegee Army Air Field venereal disease control officer, was recently promoted to his present rank from that of major. Lt. Col. McDonald, formerly a well known Baltimore physician, has, since entering the Army, been instrumental in the development of the present system of venereal disease control in the Army throughout the country today.

NOV 9 1942

47K

New Chemical Warfare Lieutenants

47K

AUG 14 1943

Amsterdam News

New York, N. Y.

AMONG THOSE WHO were commissioned 2nd Lts. in the Chemical Warfare School at the graduation exercises of the Officer Candidate School, are the seven men pictured above: In front, reading left to right, are 2nd Lts. Jesse L. Johnson, [illegible] Dallas St., Houston, Texas; James T. Ellerbe, 511 Pine St., Hamlet, N. C.; Sirroucho Howard, 85 Benefit St., Providence, R. I. Standing in the rear, left to right are 2nd Lt. Harry M. Hodges, 808 Fondulac St., Muskogee, Okla.; William A. Williams, 2358 N. Capitol Ave., Indianapolis, Ind., and Modesto Luzunaris, 31 Pomarrosa St., Santurce, Puerto Rico. The graduation exercises were held this morning at Eldgewood Arsenal, Md., the center of Chemical Warfare Service.